Lord Cecil's Dilemma

The Picnic Woodall Forest

CHAPTER XLVI.

"No, no! He ain't one of that sort. He just wants us all to feel at home, and know that he's in tune with us. We shan't see no people here, but the parson, maybe, and such likes, as never have sixpence in their pockets to give away."

The news spread that Sir Charles was making merry at the Hall, and for the first time in upward of twenty years, the walls were standing in a blaze of light before the great hall entrance, singing lustily those quaint old carols so dear to the season.

They drank to the master's health, and the mistress' joy in tankards of home-brewed ale, and returned showers of blessings for the coles that were given to them, while from afar came the joyous sounds of the Christmas bells!

The butler was right when he said the parson would be there; both he and the curate came to remind the Hastingses that the holy Christmas season was at hand. Moreover, they were accompanied by their wives, determined to enjoy the hospitality of Sir Charles.

The baronet never objected to anything that pleased his mother, but he did not forget that the parson had neglected them completely in the days of adversity.

The walls were singing one more carol ere they made way for another party, when the butler announced that there was a gentleman waiting to see Sir Charles.

"I will come to the library in a few minutes. Who is it, Malcolm? Some one looking for a Christmas box?"

"No, Sir Charles," Malcolm's eyes were bright, and his manner nervous. "No, Sir Charles; he asked for my lady. But it would kill her to see him, and you—"

"Good Heaven, man! what are you talking about?"

"Well, Sir Charles, I wouldn't hesitate, only you aren't strong enough yet," he said, hysterically. "But oh, sir, it's Mr. Edgar come back."

He added this in a whisper, and the young baronet gave a gasp of joy, although his face turned as pale as ashes.

"My Uncle Edgar, who was supposed to be murdered! Are you sure you have made no mistake, Malcolm?"

Sir Charles muttered, hoarsely.

"No sir; I know him too well. I knew him in an instant. Oh, sir, the old master's name is cleared at last!"

"Take him to the library, Malcolm. I will be there in a few minutes."

The young baronet was almost too overcome to speak, but he managed to convey the news to Herbert Gardner. He was almost delirious with joy! This meant salvation for the Earl of Swinford—for Gladys!

"Break the news to my mother," he said to Herbert. "In half an hour I will be here with my uncle. I will not hurry you—the sight of him unannounced might be too much for her."

He went away with trembling steps. His recent illness told upon him severely, so great was the excitement he was striving to keep under control.

He walked into the library, and a tall, gray-bearded man advanced to greet him, saying:

"Charlie, my boy, have you a welcome for me? Malcolm told me that you were coming, but I think that I should have known you anywhere."

"Uncle, this is a great surprise—a joyful surprise."

He could say no more, his emotion was so great, but he looked hard at Edgar Emden. How he must have suffered! His hair and beard were white—his face lined and drawn.

"One touch of Nature," they say, Lady Iris, makes the whole world akin. I was just the same when I was young. I enjoyed dancing and parties. I like to see all young creatures do the same. I often tell my Marie there that youth is the best time for enjoyment, but she is too quiet."

Lady Iris looked kindly at the girl who was too brave to be ashamed of her mother's want of education.

"I am sure," she said, "that Miss Barton looks very cheerful, and as though she could enjoy a dance."

There was a gentle, almost patient smile on the girl's pleasant face as she answered—

"I do like dancing very much, Lady Iris. My dear mother is so animated herself that I must always seem quiet in her presence."

Lady Iris looked at her with admiration. She understood by instinct the simple, noble character of Marie Barton. She had evidently set herself one duty in life, and it was to show all possible respect and affection for her parents. A great struggle had taken place in the girl's heart. She was well educated and refined—a lady by instinct—and the mother's vulgarity at times was torture to her; but she never betrayed it—indeed the respect paid to the millionaire and his wife was simply the result of their daughter's good example.

Mrs. Barton grew more confident. Lady Iris liked dancing, and she had it in her power to gratify her taste.

"We have a very fine ball-room at Hyne Court," she remarked. "I forget the measurement, but it is one of the finest in England I believe. I said to Mr. B., 'Let us have a good room where the young people can enjoy themselves and swing about!'"

"Certainly," said Lady Iris, the idea of "swing about" being quite novel to her.

"Now, as your ladyship is really fond of dancing," continued Mrs. Barton, "and as we have such a fine ball-room, I should be glad if you would honor us. I can soon arrange for a ball!"

Of course the invitation was ill-timed, and Marie knew it. In that moment Lady Iris did homage to the noble character of the girl whose eyes met hers with a calm, steady gaze. If there was the faintest gleam of amusement in Lady Iris's face, it died before that steady look.

"My mother means kindly," said Marie Barton. "Her only thought is to give you pleasure."

"I am sure of it," answered Lady Iris, cordially, her heart warming to the loyal girl. "And I quite appreciate the intention. I regret that it cannot be carried out—at least so far as I am concerned. We go up to London in three weeks, and I cannot make any more engagements."

"Well, you will perhaps honor us at some other time, Lady Iris!" said Mrs. Barton. "I shall not go up to town—country life suits me and my husband best—but my son and daughters will be enjoying themselves there. I hope they will meet you sometimes, and I hope that, when your ladyship returns to Chandos, we shall see plenty of you. I always say there is nothing like bringing young people together."

"Again came a faint gleam of amusement into the brilliant violet eyes, and again the calm gaze of the dark eyes seemed to check it.

"Work is Grand Cure For all Maladies."

It is impossible to achieve by doing less than one's best.

It matters not whether one's job be to stoke a furnace, pound a typewriter, handle tools, tend looms, dig coal, run an engine, answer correspondence, teach children, sweep the streets, preach, plow, sell goods or edit a publication, the work can be done in a way that enables character or in a way that degrades it.

Not the nature of the work, but the nature of the spirit in which the work is done, counts.

No man or woman who is doing superior work ever tests superior to that work.

It is he who is doing work in a way that is not worth doing who feels that the work is not worth doing.

Were Carlyle alive today he could not write a truer or more timely word than this: "Work is the grand cure for all the maladies and miseries that ever beset mankind—honest work which you intend getting done."—Forbes Magazine.

Largest Wireless Station

MESSAGES CAN BE HEARD ALL OVER THE WORLD.

The biggest wireless station in the world—at St. Asiel, near Melun, 27 miles S.E. of Paris—was opened for traffic this week. It has 17 masts, each 300 feet high. At present only one transmitting plant out of four is in operation. The others will be available in a few weeks, and St. Asiel will then be nearly four times as powerful as the biggest wireless station in the world, and thirty-five times as powerful as the Eiffel Tower.

It will be able to send out five or six messages simultaneously and to transmit at the rate of 600 to 800 words a minute—messages which will be heard all over the world. Messages sent out experimentally have already been received in China and the Argentine. The first official message was one of greeting from M. Miller, and President of the French Republic, to President Harding.

"Frolic and fun!" The lovely face of Lady Iris grew slightly flushed—then a smile rippled over her lips. It was not worth while to be serious about it. Mrs. Barton, seeing the smile, fancied she was making a wonderful impression, and continued the subject boldly.

THE CRELTY OF THE BOSS.

Aug. 4th 1922.—What evil dreams the Boss been having, or what he had the ordering of his mind, it is hard to say. When with a diabolical grin he enters our cabin shouting "I say you fellows, I am taking you to the Whale Factory, to get into your bathing suits, I want you to get out and below and get out the Starboard propeller and get so that we can fix them." Poor fellow, I shall never forget the expression on his face, one of acute horror as he dragged himself out of his bunk bed, and behaved like a sheep dragged to the slaughter. With a sneer on the Boss's early morning I leaped out of bed, and in an endeavour to appear brightly, I went on deck to be thrown back with a severe blow on the head as it was the sliding roof of the companion way which someone had half closed. This trouble was caused by the Boss running upon an uncharted reef. At least that is what the Boss said. It sounds so convincing, I must remember that for future use should be of service to the Boss. On reaching the Whale Factory the comely started an audience, consisting of lumbermen, waiting for the motor boats to take them to their locations, stood on the wharf with sad looks on their faces, while three shivering fishermen clad in costumes ranging in color from Palm Beach to Devauville, looked a strong determined man in the eye. "Oh, what a sight to see these countrymen," but many had dead pale unnoticed or less so, as they were dead. The dead were done and we dragged ourselves out of the boat on the solemn faced lumbermen and away with a sigh, and carefully we took to their boats. R. B., the leader of the party, later known as the "Boss" on account of his genius with a fish, remembering the reputation of the professor that he had to follow, produced something resembling to the inner man, and so we went from comers.

THE RALEIGH ARRIVES.

After the rest of the day trying to fix the propeller shaft, and without success. That evening we went down to our anchorage of the night before on one engine. Lead by the Senior Member, "Peppy" and I went to the East River, determined to catch salmon, in the pool below the falls. We touched some fish but did not catch any, our bad luck was amply compensated by the view of the falls. Great tumbling mass of water, falling over rugged rocks into a swirling pool, with an occasional fish leaping to its journey to the spawning grounds above. I often wonder why it is that the music of tumbling water, should arouse a spirit of elation in one. If I were a pessimist and wanted to convert myself into an optimist, I should build a log cabin below the falls of East River, and so support myself. We are spaced out on the salmon pool, seriously concerned with the immediate business of the evening, when our guide gives a signal, and looking down stream we see the graceful form of a light cruiser coming to anchor. We soon recognized her as the Raleigh, the flagship of the fleet.

Corns Go

of the North American and West Indies Squadron, and we have friends on board. What a place of surprises is Hawke Bay. No sooner are the anchors dropped than boats are launched from davits manned by bluejackets, and as they touch the water they rush up the Bay for a prescribed distance, and then race back to the ship. It is the usual race that is held when the ship comes to anchor, and is greatly appreciated by the men, and contested for with great keenness. With the arrival of the Raleigh our fishing for the night finishes, and we hasten back to the Hawke.

WE HAVE A MAYOR.

The captain, who is gifted with a sense of humor, sends an official request to the "ferry young man," (mentioned earlier in my diary) addressing him as the Mayor of Hawke Bay, asking permission to fish. The sudden elevation to such an important civic position, of one of our party, gives us a feeling of importance, and henceforth we carry the Mayor with the dignity that belongs to his office. A "snotty" comes alongside with an invitation from the Captain, and after conversation we gratefully accepted. Then the thought of clothes occurs to us. What are we to do? The ladies of the party rise to the occasion and go ashore and change, trust a woman not to be caught out. The rest of the party have clothes of a kind, but have left my only collar at the Whale Factory. After a mad panic, we are all managed to raise sufficient to cover ourselves with, but it is a sheepish party that later crawls up the gangway to a respectable officer dressed in mess kit. We all managed to raise lounge suits of a kind. But what does it matter. We had forgotten that the sailor is one of the most accommodating and free and easy type of man in the world. Our feelings of discomfort soon vanished and we were made at home on the Raleigh. After listening to the music of the ship's band, whose fame is already too well known to need further remarks, we retired to the Ward Room. There we enjoyed the ship's hospitality to our full, and while sitting in a comfortable armchair talking to a friend who I knew when I was in Bermuda, I saw the Senior Member of our party, leaning back in the best armchair in the Ward Room, surrounded by an eager crowd of officers, discussing on fishing. For simple luxury and enjoyment I could not imagine a better picture. With the gleam of the chain in his eye, an excellent cigar between his lips, and a glass of port in his hand, he fired the Ward Room with such keeness for the art of old Isaac, that next morning the Torment and East River were covered with eager sailors beating the waters, and the river warden nearly tore himself asunder in trying to decide which river to patrol.

WE DINE ON THE SHIP.

Aug. 6th 1922.—Through the courtesy of the Engineer-Commander of the Raleigh our propeller and shaft were taken on board to be repaired. It is my fervent hope that they will offer to re-install it when they finish the job. Seeing all the fishermen on the East River, I could not resist the call, so fitting up my light, fly rod, I went ashore and fished in the mouth of the river. The tide went in and good humors. Then to dinner with our friends in the Ward Room. And what a dinner. You can hunt the world over, and you will not find a better host than the British naval officer. After dinner we had a sing-song, which we carried on into the late hours of the night, singing every known and unknown version of the songs in the Naval Song Book. After most cheery evening we were rowed back to our boat, guided by the kindly beam of one of the Raleigh's searchlights.

DISCOURSE ON STAMP LICKING.

Aug. 8th 1922.—Went alongside the Raleigh to collect the ship's mail, the ship had run out of stamps, so we offered to obtain these at Port Saunders and fix them ourselves. We made that offer in ignorance of the task before us. Peppy, the Chief, and I sat down and licked stamps for about an hour. I have heard that in west countries people that are fond of drinking sometimes eat salted potato chips to give them a "kick." I can recommend them stamp licking. One could not help but notice, as one stuck on the stamps, that Montreal, the last port of call of the Raleigh, must be rich in attractions. After our stamp licking the whole of our party went on board the Raleigh to take lunch with the Captain, and the necessary tone was lent for such an important occasion, by the inclusion in the number of the Mayor. After a most excellent lunch we were shown over the ship, wandering from the heights of the control top to the depths of the engine room. Not an inch of space is wasted on a ship of the Raleigh's class. If the Goddess of Science wanted to show the supreme inventiveness of mankind, she could not do better than select the Raleigh as her model. In the evening we were able to entertain some of the ship's officers on shore through the courtesy of Mr. Henry, the owner of the "Firs" referred to earlier in my diary.

A CHILLY TASK.

Aug. 8th 1922.—To the unholy delight of the "Boss," the engineers of the Raleigh fixed up our propeller and shaft, and we repeated our performance of the morning of the 4th, this time we were reinforced by Bob, famous in dancing. We fixed the job alright, and I am now wondering what else the Boss can find for us to do out of the usual routine followed by some men. The Captain came to lunch, with the intention of going fishing afterwards. As soon as he came on board we got under way and made for Otter Pond Cove, having lunch en route. After experiencing the Captain's hospitality, and seeing his official and unofficial sides of life, one can appreciate why he was chosen to command such a fine ship as the Raleigh. His tact and keen sense of humor made him a fitting ambassador for promoting friendship and goodwill between Great Britain and the States, and these high qualities were reflected in his officers. On arrival at Otter Pond Cove we set off in the yacht's dingy and a dory. Pushing the boats across the shallow waters at the mouth of the stream, we came to a beaver dam, after carrying the boats over, and then for about 100 yards across country, we arrived at Otter Pond. Here we took to the boats, and after crossing the pond, we picked up a guide, who took us to a small stream which ran through a marsh having deep pools. The whole party started in fishing and we were soon pulling out mud trout as fast as we could get them. The mud trout, known as the brook trout in England, is the gamest fish I know, seldom running above one pound, he fights every inch of the way. We finished up with three buckets full of fish. It was most amusing to watch the different styles of fishing. One would carefully place each fish, bringing him to the net in the approved manner, a few feet away from the senior member who would take them out over his shoulder, shouting "here's another." We could not help catching fish, they rose so well that I actually had a rise at the knot on my line where the line was tied to the gut. I think that the Captain enjoyed his day, as he returned to his ship with a bucket full of trout.

GOOD-BYE TO THE RALEIGH.

Aug. 9th 1922.—A nasty, rainy day. Unfortunately the Raleigh leaves us to-day to go to Labrador to pick up the Admiral. We went on board to say good-bye. As she steamed out of the Bay we ran up a signal of farewell, and good luck, which she acknowledged, returning the compliment. After that I retired to my bunk, and ceased to take an interest in life for a few days, having eaten something that did not agree with me.

MEN AT C.P. SHOP WERE AMAZED SAYS JONES.

"After I began taking Tanlac and got to looking so much better I was kept busy for a long time telling the boys at the shop and others I met what had brought it all about," was the statement made, a few days ago, by Abner Jones, 142 High street, Moncton, N.B., a veteran railroad man, employed in the Canadian National shops at Moncton.

"For over two years I had suffered from indigestion and kept getting worse in spite of all I could do. Every bite I would eat seemed to ferment in my stomach, and I would bloat up with gas until I felt like I would burst. I had no appetite, couldn't sleep, and got up mornings all tired out and couldn't force down a morsel of breakfast. I had no energy, felt played out all day, and just poked around like someone half dead."

"Finally I saw a Tanlac testimonial that described my condition so well that I bought a bottle of Tanlac and had not taken half of it until I was eating a good breakfast every morning and have been at it ever since. Soon my troubles disappeared and none of them have returned to this good day. I eat and sleep like a child and feel fine."

St. Leger To-Day.

LAST OF CLASSICS IN FLAT RACING SEASON.

London, Sept. 13th.—With the running of the St. Leger Stakes at Doncaster to-day, the last of the five classics for three-year-olds that feature the flat racing season in England will have passed into turf history, and another milestone in the oldest of the races that are run over the flat in this country will have been passed. Not only is the St. Leger the oldest of these great races that have played such a prominent part in the development of the English thoroughbred, but sitting as it does in September, the "mares' month," it is considered a better test of the three-year-olds than either the Derby or the Two Thousand Guineas. The course at Doncaster is admittedly superior to that at Epsom, and in September the fillies are presumably at their best. In the earlier classics they are very frequently out of sorts, more or less uncertain in their performance, but sitting as it does in September, the Derby and Two Thousand, but they usually do much better in the St. Leger.

AN OPEN AFFAIR.

This year the St. Leger has the appearance of being a most open affair. Lord Woolvington's colt, Captain Cuttle, the winner of the Derby, and by many considered the best colt of the year, will not make his appearance on Wednesday as it was found impossible to give him the work necessary to prepare him and his entry was struck out. Captain Cuttle was succeeded in public fancy by Lord Astor's colt Tamar, who ran second to the Captain in the Derby. Tamar, in turn, at the beginning of this month suffered an injury to one of his legs and it is now doubtful whether he will go to the post. Attention then centered on Lord Queensborough's colt St. Louis, the winner of the Two Thousand Guineas at Newmarket early in May. The great question is whether St. Louis, who won the Two Thousand Guineas, with Tamar no nearer than eighth, can stay the St. Leger course—398 yards short of two miles—and whether, if he cannot, his owner's colt, Welsh Spear, has anything like sufficient speed. The latter, in June, won the mile and a half Hardwicks Stakes at Ascot, which has been carried off by some of the most famous horses in turf history—by Ormond on two occasions. St. Louis did little work for weeks following his Newmarket victory, but at the middle of last month was undergoing preparation for the Doncaster classic. On hard ground St. Louis has to be tenderly treated, but of late conditions have been much to his liking and in his trials has been going well. Welsh Spear early this month met with a minor mishap, so that with the withdrawal of Captain Cuttle, Tamar a doubtful starter, and St. Louis' ability to go the distance a matter of conjecture, the winner may appear from an unexpected quarter. The St. Leger may produce a great horse for winner, but it is more likely the Leger this year will not be an important factor in deciding the off-asked question, "Which is the best three-year-old of the season?"

A FRENCH ENTRY.

There is a possibility that Ramus, the winner of the French Derby, this year may be seen in Wednesday's classic. The French horse is a proved stayer, and should be put in an appearance at Doncaster, he must be seriously considered. It is well over two centuries since horse racing was first introduced at Doncaster, the corporation in 1803 voting four guineas a year towards a plate. A few years later—1716—the Town Plate was established by the same authority. Half a century later a very important period in the history of the English thoroughbred was ushered in, when the first of the great three-year-old races was instituted in 1776 by Colonel St. Leger, who resided at Parkhill, near Doncaster. On September 24 of that year, during the Doncaster Races, which took place annually in the autumn, at his suggestion a sweepstake of 25 guineas each for three-year-old colts and fillies was run over a two mile course. For the first St. Leger there were only six competitors and in the following year there were ten subscribers and ten starters. In 1778, in compliment to the founder, and at the suggestion of the Marquis of Rockingham, the race was named the St. Leger Stakes. The stakes were increased in 1822 to 50 sovereigns each, and the weights have been raised from time to time to keep pace with the modern requirements. When the nominations for this year's race were closed in November of 1920, 227 colts and fillies had been entered.

BIG STAKES.

In addition to the stakes of fifty sovereigns each—or five sovereigns only if declared by the last Tuesday in March of last year, four thousand sovereigns are added to the purse St. Leger last year, which was won by Lord Londonderry's chestnut colt Folemarck, he was valued at approximately 452,000. If there are ten starters in Wednesday's race, the gross value of the prize will be approximately 355,000, of which the owner of the second horse will receive 23,000, and the third 11,000. Assuming the horse winning is bred by his owner, the latter will receive 231,000, but if the present owner is not the breeder, the latter is to receive 23,500.

There are 30 runners in the Derby and in all probability there will be more than ten in the St. Leger. Owners of horses engaged may well take courage from the result of recent contests and give the opportunity to those that have half a chance, ignoring, as the Doncaster people do, the

TO-MORROW.

To-morrow's standing on the hill, Watching field and shop and mill, Looking over me and you, And the sort of work we do, Searching for the ones she needs Who shall do her bigger deeds.

To-morrow's looking for a man, Best designed to serve her plan, And she overlooks the earth Seeking him who's proved his worth. And perhaps when his day's through She may send a call for you.

To-morrow's hunting eager youth, Brave who will serve the truth, Strong men who will carry on, When the faintest hope seems gone. And she'll call him his way, From the forces of to-day.

To-morrow's watching, Never fear, She is standing very near, And her heart will be set to see Merit where'er it be. She'll be quick to summon you, When you've proved what you can do.

Many Uses for Tobacco Stems.

Economies in the tobacco business are carried to its fine point as in other big and successful industries. Take the matter of the stem or rib of the leaf in the big cigar factories. There was a time when no use could be found for them. Then, some genius hit on the idea of grinding the stems to rust for use as an insecticide, and that opened up a useful field for what had been factory waste. Another genius got the idea of boiling the stems and using the infusion to saturate and flavor cigars and other things that were not tobacco, so that they had the taste and effect of tobacco, and were probably sold as tobacco, or as adulterants of tobacco.

The commercial value of tobacco stems is well established to-day. One of the large cigar making plants, and probably all the large factories, hate the stems, there being a ready market for them. In some places, which is not under the necessity of maintaining a reputation for high-grade product, the stems are softened by steaming and are then rolled out so that each piece of leaf stem is as flat and thin as a piece of leaf tobacco. Then they are cut up after the fashion of "cut pipes" for smoking tobacco. These pressed and chopped stems are not sold out right for cut pipe smoking tobacco, but are used as a filler, or an adulterant, of the cheapest pipe tobacco.

The stem is really tobacco and produces the same sensation in the smoker as any other part of the leaf, and there is no reason why it should not be used and sold cheap. All the "floor waste" of a cigar factory, the dust and extremely fine bits of "filler" and "leaf" that fall away from the cigarettes, is swept up, and it is this material which largely enters into the making of tobacco insecticides. All the bits of "filler" and "binder" and "wrapper" that do not find their way to the factory floor are collected and used in low grade smoking material, either as pipe tobacco or as "short filler" in the cheapest cigars.—Kansas City Star.

Motor Boats and the Fishery

Within the past decade the use of motor boats in the prosecution of the fishery has become universal amongst our people, but despite the advantages of speed and less labour which the use of gas engines has brought, there seem to be even greater disadvantages. Before the introduction of motor boats, the average catch was certainly no smaller, often larger than it has been since the fishery was modernized, while costs were less and profits more than they are to-day. In fact, if the cost of the oil now used in the prosecution of the fishery could have been saved, fishermen would not have nearly so much to complain of, and poverty among them would to a great extent be non-existent. There is another disadvantage which has resulted from the use of motor boats. It is that the energy and physical strength of our fishermen is declining, and it is a safe conclusion to arrive at, that if they continue to use engines, the present generation will be much inferior physically, to those which have gone before. We firmly believe, and we think those of our readers who have given any thought to the question will agree, that the abandonment by our fishermen of motor propelled boats would result in a general improvement in present conditions.

Our Dumb Animals.

The weekly reports of the Chief Agent of the S.P.C.A., which appears in this paper, must convince the most sceptical of the useful work that the Society is accomplishing, and the beneficial influence that its crusade against cruelty to animals is having on the community. One of the most important results of this crusade is that the trader in worn out horses has found his business so unprofitable that he has been compelled to abandon it. Lame horses are seldom, if ever seen plying for hire, and drivers who are prone to use the lash have become more careful. Less brutality in the handling of cattle is another result of the Society's endeavours. No longer are cattle subjected to inhuman treatment when being landed from steamers or when being driven through the streets. Shortening the agonies of injured animals, and the employment in slaughter houses of the humane killer are other examples of the fruit which the Society's activities are bearing. The work of the S.P.C.A. is indeed, deserving of the hearty support of the whole community.

The Last Holiday.

With this afternoon's holiday we see the passing of another summer, and those, who unlike the favored few, are unable to have a vacation when they wish, will take full advantage of their last opportunity this year for a day's outing. The weather man ministered kindly on to us this summer and the holidays helped many of our citizens to derive benefit from the country air, and for this reason, more than for any other will their passing be regretted. It only remains for to-day to be fine, so that the last holiday may prove even more pleasant and enjoyable than those which preceded it.

Manuels' Enquiry.

We understand that the enquiry into the drowning tragedy which occurred at Manuels a few weeks ago has not been concluded, and the public is awaiting with considerable interest, the finding of the court. While a magisterial Court of Enquiry can do no more than to decide whether negligence on the part of others was partly the cause of the victims of the tragedy losing their lives, a service will have been done to the community when the blame is placed on the right shoulders. Failure to do this would be an act of injustice to the relatives of the deceased, and while no punishment can be inflicted upon those, if any, who are found to have been derelict in their duty towards their fellow men, the sufferings of their own conscience, and their public indictment, will be sufficient to remind them for many years to come of their indifference to every manly instinct.

Portia Sails.

S.S. Portia, Capt. Connors, resuming the Western Coastal Service sailed at ten o'clock to-day taking a full general cargo, and the following passengers:—Rev. B. T. Holden, C. Pippy, Dr. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Fitzgerald, Miss Williams, Miss Fleming, T. Murphy, Miss Bishop and 12 in steerage. The Portia, it is understood, will make only a couple of trips on the Western route, after which she will be going to the Labrador to bring up the fishing crews.

Linesman Electrocuted.

TRAGEDY AT SPANLARD'S BAY. Yesterday afternoon at Spanlard's Bay, a young man named James Holmes employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company, was electrocuted by contact with a power line belonging to the United Towns Electric Company. The unfortunate man, who is a resident of Shearstown was a member of a party engaged in putting up new lines and poles between Spanlard's Bay and Bay Roberts. In charge of foreman Bartlett, they had erected a pole near the premises of Mr. Jesse Gosse and at a point where the United Towns Company's wires cross the roadway. It was necessary to have the telegraph wires passed over these, and Holmes, in order to get the lines across, although cautioned against the procedure, climbed one of the Electric Company's poles. Reaching the cross arm, which held a 110 volt wire, he stood up, when his head came in contact with the 66000 volt line. Death must have been instantaneous as no outcry was made and his workmates were not aware that anything was amiss until they saw him fall to the ground. Immediate examination showed that life was extinct. The occurrence was reported to Inspector General Hutchings, Superintendent Saunders of the Anglo, and Hon. J.J. Murphy, and an enquiry will be held. Holmes, who was only 22 years of age, is unmarried, and it is understood his parents are living in Shearstown.

Dainty Star Makes Initial Appearance.

MAY COLLINS AT THE NICKEL TO-DAY. DO MEN WANT TO BE "VAMPED"? Many girls think so. The impetuous little girl in the new Goldwyn picture, "All's Fair in Love" thought so, and as a consequence spent many sleepless nights and despairing days worrying about a husband who adored her and who, she fancied, had been torn from her side by the wiles of a vampire.

This sprightly comedy from the pen of Thompson Buchanan, which first appeared on the stage under the title of "The Bridal Path," will be shown at the Nickel Theatre. It serves to introduce dainty May Collins as a Goldwyn leading lady. Playing the role of the innocent young husband is Richard Dix, who has appeared in several former Goldwyn productions.

Cecil B. DeMille's big Paramount picture, "The Affairs of Anatol," in which an all-star cast comprising Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, El-Hott Dexter, Bebe Daniels, Monte Blue, Wanda Hawley and others of equal note, are even in coming to the Nickel Theatre soon. This is said to be the greatest DeMille production to date and well worth seeing.

HIS DIARY.

September 12th.—To the office of the Aerial Survey Company where I met Major Cotton, he coming from Botwood by train, being that his air coach did meet with a slight accident. Major Hemming, that was my companion on my journey to Hawke Harbor, there also, and we did have pleasant discourse of our trip. The Telegram sheet did to-day issue a Journal of a trip to Hawke Bay, and while I think it to be very good, it is not near so fine as my own, nor could it be seeing how I inherit the ability of the great Samuel, my ancestor. Mischievous Boys Caught.

During early morning last week, three youths located some tools which workmen were using repairing a hydrant on Garrison Hill and succeeded in turning on the water. They however, could not shut it off, and considerable damage was done. The police have rounded up the lads and they will be brought before the Juvenile Court to answer for their pranks.

C.L.B. Cadets.

OFFICERS MEET. There was a fairly large attendance at last night's parade of the C. L. B. Cadets. Lt.-Col. Goodridge, officer commanding, was on duty, with Major Williams, Captains Joseph Snow, Miles House; Lieuts. W. R. Motley, A. B. Perlin, Harold Hayward, G. Hunt, and R. Reid. The battalion proceeded for route march headed by the drum and bugle band, returning at 9 o'clock. The officer's mess held their regular monthly meeting at 9.15, with Capt. House, Vice President, in the Chair, and Lt. A. B. Perlin as Secretary. The usual routine reports were presented and several resolutions passed. Lt.-Col. Goodridge extended a hearty welcome to Dr. Burden, who has accepted a commission as Chief Medical Officer of the Battalion. Dr. Burden replied briefly. A resolution was also passed expressing the Brigade's appreciation of the services of Lt. L. C. Hayward, who has been promoted from the local branch of the Royal Bank, to Charlottetown, P. E. I. A Church Parade, the first since 1864, will be held next Sunday at St. Michael's.

Business Extension.

That portion of the store adjoining Smyth building and formerly occupied by the Suez Shipping Co. has been acquired by Mr. George Kearney, who is having it extensively altered preparatory to opening an up-to-date ready-made clothing department as part of his general furnishing establishment.

Boys Take Joy Ride.

Last evening Mrs. Patrick Roche of Torbay telephoned the police that two boys, Dillon and Peters, had during the morning stolen her pony and buggy from vicinity of Fever's Lane, and being unable to locate her outfit she was obliged to go home without it. Up to this morning neither pony nor boys have been located.

ENQUIRY CONTINUES.—The further enquiry into the drowning at Manuels of Messrs. Leslie Southgate and Thomas Anderson will be continued to-morrow afternoon before his Honor Judge Morris.

Takes Governorship Of Newfoundland

FINDING TASMANIA TOO COSTLY.

SIR WILLIAM ALLARDYCE IS FREED FROM FINANCIAL WORRIES BY ARRANGEMENTS BETWEEN COLONY AND HOME GOVERNMENT.

Sir William Allardyce, who recently resigned the Governorship of Tasmania, because its salary was less than $15,000 a year, has accepted the Governorship of Newfoundland, which his life is far less expensive than at Hobart. Moreover, certain financial arrangements have been made, alike by the oldest colony of Great Britain and by the Home Government, which will release him from the necessity of dipping any further into his private resources. Sir William is a familiar figure in America, which he often visited when administering the Government of the Bahamas Islands. He found his second wife two years ago in San Francisco, in the person of the former Elsie Farquharson Stuart, widow of Adam A. G. Goodfellow, of Buenos Aires. Sir William is the eldest son of the late Colonel Allardyce of Culquois in Aberdeenshire, and was Governor of the Falkland Islands, where A.E. Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee won his naval victory there over the German fleet under the command of the late Admiral Count von Spee. Sir William is known to possess a more extensive acquaintance with Fiji and the South Sea Islands than any other member of the British colonial service. In deed, he spent more than a quarter of a century at Fiji in various posts, including those of acting Governor and High Commissioner of the Western and Southern Pacific, and his fund of knowledge of native lore and legends about the South Sea Islands is absolutely unique.

Sir William represents a very ancient house in Aberdeenshire, which claims royal descent, as well as the long descent of historic Scottish Baron of Monteth, and descent in the twentieth generation from Robert II., the first Stuart King of Scotland. —Philadelphia Bulletin.

Newfoundland Bonds.

WAR LOAN RECOMMENDED IN N.S.

The following question and answer which appeared on the financial page of the New York Tribune on Sept. 12, speak for themselves:

NEWFOUNDLAND 6 1/2%. Question—I am considering the purchase of a small block of Government of Newfoundland 6 1/2 per cent. bonds, due June 30, 1935, at 107 1/2. Do you think this a safe and conservative investment?—P.W.M.

Answer—We consider Government of Newfoundland 6 1/2 per cent. bonds of the issue due 1935 a good investment. The total per capita debt of Newfoundland is $189, as compared with $275 per capita debt of Canada, exclusive of Canadian provincial and municipal funded obligations. The Dominion of Newfoundland is the oldest colony in the British Empire. It has a population estimated at 260,000, and with its dependency, Labrador, covers an area of approximately 1,627,750 square miles.

Indian Relic, 500 Years Old is Found.

An Indian treaty bowl weighting 600 pounds and said to be the largest in existence was found at Nimkish, 100 miles North of Vancouver, B.C.

The relic, said to be more than 500 years old, is 15 feet long and, according to archaeologists, was made by Indians using stone tools and axes. The bowl, which was the centre of an interesting Indian ceremony, was called by the aborigines "the mother of five tribes."

These tribes would meet to discuss hunting laws and tribal boundaries, and on such occasions the bowl was filled with some kind of liquor. After the conference the chiefs would take a smaller bowl, and filling it with the liquor, take it back to their councillors. If the terms agreed on for the treaty were approved by the councillors the liquor was accepted, but if the terms the liquor was returned and the vessel was laid beneath the neck of the idol, this constituting an ultimatum.

The bowl was found by a party engaged in removing a totem pole attached to the side of an old house. The relic will be placed in the Vancouver museum.

OVERPROOF BEEHIVE—Summonses have been issued against the Newfoundland and Bennett Brewing Companies charging them with selling beer over the percentage allowed by law. A number of samples have been taken from stores retailing the drinks during the past week, and as a consequence of analysis the charges are preferred.

Fire in Hay Barn.

Spontaneous combustion was thought to be the cause of a fire which destroyed a quantity of hay stored in a barn on the Topsail Road and owned by Mr. James O'Brien. Yesterday evening a number of men working in a nearby field saw smoke issuing from a window in O'Brien's barn and forming a bucket brigade they fought the fire and succeeded in putting it out. Considerable damage was done and no insurance was carried either on the barn or its contents.

Cruel Robber Gave Antwerp its Name.

The city of Antwerp received its name in a curious fashion. The first habitation was a castle of three towers on the River Scheldt, ruled by a great robber named Antigonous. Legend gives him a height of 40 feet and strength in proportion.

As the main road ran by his castle gates he formed the habit of halting travelers and demanding heavy toll. ere he would allow them to proceed. In case they refused, or had not the money, he seized them and cut off their hands, holding that the sight of such unfortunate wretches wandering about the country would be excellent propaganda to the effect that he meant business.

The hands he threw or tossed into the river, and in time the spot became known as "Hantwerpul," or "hand-tossing."

A giant wooden figure of Antigonous is in existence, and on great parades it is dragged through the streets with a man inside, who, by means of a lever, works the head back and forth in a somewhat life-like manner. The figure is 40 feet in height.—Tit-Bits.

Wedding Bells.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Mrs. Churchill of 50 Flower Hill yesterday morning, the contracting parties being Beatrice, their daughter and Wilfred Hawkins, of Wiseman, Hawkins. Rev. James Wilson was officiating minister. The bride wore a beautiful navy blue costume with hat to match, was given away by her father, Miss Elsie Wilson her attendant. The duties of best man were ably carried out by Mr. Alton Wilson. Miss Parry rendered the Wedding March in a most delicate manner. At the conclusion light refreshments were served and the toasts were proposed. The wedding party then motored to Bowling Green, the happy couple continuing on to Holyrood, where the honeymoon will be spent. The presents received in conformity to the custom in the West was held, and those present at the Station that he has not returned. It is presumed that she decided it was better to wait until the end of the troutling season before reporting the matter.

Here and There.

AN ERRANT SPOUSE.—From Walsh of Mullock Street, left his home on June 8th to go troutling and yesterday his wife reported at the Police Station that he has not returned. It is presumed that she decided it was better to wait until the end of the troutling season before reporting the matter.

ENQUIRY HELD.—A magisterial enquiry into the fire which recently took place at the workshop of Joseph Nosworthy, Cabinet Maker, was held yesterday afternoon before Judge McCarthy. Two witnesses were called and examined, after which the hearing was adjourned until the latter part of the week when other witnesses will be called.

GEMS OF SONG.

To James the blacksmith I repair, to have him shoe my old blind mare, since she is going lame; and when his useful toil is done, and I am handing out the mon, he says, "I'm glad you came; I have an ode I wrote last year; I wish you'd read it while you're here, and tell me what you think; is it too grand and soaring song? Is it too short? Is it too long? Or is it on the blink?" The tinsmith, ere he mends my boat, pulls out a bundle from his coat, a bale of manuscript; "Sit down," he says, "and read this lay, while I repair your ancient dray, that is so badly hipped." The tailor, as he piles his tape, remarks, "I wish I could escape from this depressing trade; the odes and madrigals I write would be acknowledged out of sight, if by good critics weighed." The barber, as he dyes my beard, quotes passages from poems weird, that he composed yest'ere; "with all my being I aspire," he sadly says, "to punch a lyre, but ah, the fates are mean!" The waiter brings me ham and eggs, and, as I eat, he mildly begs five minutes of my time; he'd have one read a little book he wrote conjointly with the cook, and which he thinks sublime. Oh, poets sell me oil and gas, and poets mow my stretch of grass, and poets shine my shoes; and each one thinks his noble dope would rank with that of Burns or Pope; if he but had his dues.

How a Fish Flies.

Some highly interesting observations on flying fishes have been made by Dr. E. H. Hankin, in the Arabian sea. In still weather the length of a glide was about a meter, with considerable lateral instability; in a light wind this was increased to from 200 to 400 meters. A resemblance between the wind action of soaring waterfowl and the fin action of the fishes was marked. In both, the wing or fin is inclined upward, the outer part at a higher level than the base, in slow-speed flights, while both show a downward inclination in flight at high speed.

Methodist College.

SCHOOL RE-OPENED YESTERDAY AFTER SUMMER HOLIDAYS.

The College Hall was completely filled yesterday morning when the Methodist College re-opened after the summer holidays. There was a great muster of pupils as well as of parents who take in this function every year. The college class-rooms were overcrowded last year, and this year will give the staff great difficulty in providing for many new pupils.

On the platform were the Principal, S. T. Harrington, Esq., M.A., and his staff: C. P. Ayre, Esq., Chairman, and the Board of Governors of the College, Rev. T. B. Darby, M.A., Chaplain to the College and head of the Residence, Rev. Dr. Curtis, Superintendent of Education, and many Methodist clergymen.

The proceedings opened in the usual form, the Scripture being read by Rev. Mr. Darby, Prayer offered by Rev. Hammond Johnson, followed by the Lord's Prayer chanted by the whole school. The Principal then welcomed the scholars back after their ten weeks of holidays, and spoke of the great pleasure it gave him to announce that the year's work had proved to be perhaps the most successful in the history of the College.

Let's Pretend. Sometimes when I have to endure some tedious wait or tiresome trip where I cannot read I amuse myself in this way. I pretend that all except my favorite gown and my beloved fur have been burned up by a well heaved fire that knew just where to stop and I allot myself a fair share of the insurance and mentally buy myself a new wardrobe.

Childish? I suppose so. But isn't that a recommendation? Of course we leave to children all the happiness that can be gotten out of let's pretend. Should we not be happier if we didn't forget how to find the path that leads to the land of make-believe?

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

THE AUTHORMAN IS SHOCKED.

When ever I have occasion to renew our household insurance, the question of values is raised again in the family council and I take stock of clothes and try to figure what it would cost to replace them when I lay down my pencil at the end of it I always say: "Oh, wouldn't it be a shame if there should be a fire that would burn up all my clothes but my household furniture—unhappily I'd just like to save a couple of dollars and let the rest of my money go."

The Insurance Wouldn't Count. The authorman has heard that several times but he is always shocked never fails to remind me that with the liberal insurance we have I had to replace all my large small belongings in the way of the insurance would not come anywhere near covering my loss.

Do Brides Get Mixed? Think of the joy of planning a new wardrobe just like a man—of having underwear in and gowns and hats and coats and shoes and stockings and night with an eye to being worn later, and all in the latest mode.

The Taking of Quebec.

In the year 1759, Pitt, then Prime Minister of England, resolved to overthrow the French power in Canada, and for this purpose he sent three armies with definite instructions what to do. One was commanded by General Wolfe, whose orders were to take Quebec.

On June 26, Wolfe's fleet, with 7,000 troops on board, came up the St. Lawrence River, and anchored opposite Quebec. He found the French General Montcalm, with an army twice the size of his own, encamped along a line of inaccessible cliffs. Wolfe could not get at him and for months the English army wasted away, and Wolfe himself was ill with sickness and despair. Winter was rapidly coming on and it was necessary to do something or go home.

The proceedings opened in the usual form, the Scripture being read by Rev. Mr. Darby, Prayer offered by Rev. Hammond Johnson, followed by the Lord's Prayer chanted by the whole school. The Principal then welcomed the scholars back after their ten weeks of holidays, and spoke of the great pleasure it gave him to announce that the year's work had proved to be perhaps the most successful in the history of the College.

After the stinging of the Newfoundland Ode, the scholars fled out to their class rooms, while parents and friends congratulated warmly the Principal and staff upon such a record year.

France notified the British Government to-day that she was in accord with Britain regarding the freedom of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus and was ready to discuss anything tending to settle the difficulty there, providing the legitimate aspiration of the Turks was safeguarded.

Obituary. MRS. ROBERT SULLIVAN. The community was thrown into deep mourning on Wednesday, September 6th, over the death of one of its most estimable ladies, Mrs. Robert Sullivan, who passed to her eternal reward at the age of 78. Deceased, who was most prominent in church and social circles, was possessed of a genial, unselfish disposition, always the same in the joys and the vicissitudes of life alike, and her unparalleled generosity and amiable qualities will leave her memory ever green in our hearts. She had been ailing some months past, but, despite her age, being so youthful and active in manner no one suspected the end so suddenly. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Fred J. Costello, two sons, Joseph and Patrick, several grandchildren and a vast circle of friends to mourn their sad loss. Funeral took place on Friday morning, from the Church of the Immaculate Conception, after High Mass of Requiem, sung by our good Pastor, Rev. Fr. Maher, who in eloquent terms paid a fitting tribute to the memory of the departed lady. Her life had been an exemplary one, her good deeds have gone before her, her good example remains.—R.I.P.

FRIEND. MISS M. WADDLETON. At Trepassay on Thursday morning, Sept. 7th, there passed peacefully away at the residence of her parents, May, youngest daughter of John and Annie Waddleton. The deceased had been suffering the past few months from an incurable malady, but had battled bravely against it, striving by every possible means to cure the disease, but alas it had taken too strong a hold to be easily routed, and she was forced to submit, and remained confined to her room for the past few weeks. Deceased who was in her 33rd year, has been in charge of the school at Portage Cove for the past 6 years. It may with truth be said that throughout her short life she was kind, good, patient and unselfish, bearing all the trials and troubles of life with perfect resignation to the will of God. As she lived so she died, perfectly reconciled to the Divine Will and sanctified by the rights of her Holy Church, she calmly awaited the hour when it would please God to call her. She will be greatly missed by all who know her, as being of a quiet, and amiable disposition, she won the respect and love of pupil and people alike. She leaves a father, mother and one sister, to mourn their sad loss. Funeral took place after Requiem Mass Saturday morning, and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Large

In the Realms of Sport. TOO TRUE! If you wait your chance and are very allie There will come a time when it will may be. You can get away with a dirty trick Which never an eye of them all can see; But the trouble is yourself will know, And you're bound to feel like a many pup. It doesn't pay to be mean or low— Just play the game on the up and up. CHAMPIONSHIP GAME TONIGHT. The largest number that ever clicked the turnstiles at St. George's Field is expected to be present tonight to witness the play-off between the Cadets and B.I.S. for the 1922 Championship. It has been decided to announce the game for 6.45, so that the Referee Hunt may be able to get them away promptly at six o'clock. There will be no changes in the personnel of either team since their last clash, though the Cadet forward line is being repositioned with the hopes of making it more effective. RETORISTS, ATTENTION. It has been decided by the League that the big main gate at St. George's Field shall be opened tonight. Motorists desiring to bring their cars into the field must use the opening on Merrymeeting Road and park their cars as on National Sports Day, where a traffic officer will attend to them. It is to be understood that under no circumstances whatever will cars be allowed on other parts of the field owing to the danger that might be present to spectators. Owners of cars will therefore govern themselves accordingly, please. BELL ISLAND FIVES. It is likely that a Star Five will go across to the Island this afternoon to compete for the cup which has been presented in connection with the C. of E. Garden Party there. Owing to the short notice given it was impossible for the League to arrange representation from other teams. JUNIOR FOOTBALL LEAGUE. Editor Realms of Sport. Dear Sir—Now that football has become so popular with the public, each succeeding game seems to create more interest, and that baseball is undoubtedly on the wane, I think it is about time for something "real" to be done in the matter of forming a junior football league. It may seem that it is late to discuss this matter as the season is so far advanced, but we have another year coming and one which promises to be the biggest yet in football circles and everything should be well circled before the season opens. In my opinion one of the big faults with our football league is that they do not look far enough ahead, they allow the whole winter to pass without holding a business meeting, and when the summer season is just about opening they hold a few rush meetings to do whatever they see to be done in a week or two, because they have not time for anything else, and many things which they could do, and which they know are needed to better the game, must be left over because there is not time before the season opens. With the exception of those who are fortunate enough to be able to attend one of our colleges the majority of boys in this town do not get a chance in any line of sport. There are many young men in the city to day who had to be satisfied with a school education and who would have made better players than many now appearing before the public but because they had friends managers the various teams they got no chance unless they were able to prove themselves practically stars. There are a goodly number of the best players in the league to-day who never would have been playing had they not proved their worth as footballers in the Newfoundland Regiment. And what is true of the past will continue in the future unless we do something to train the boys of to-day to carry on, make them interested now and they will continue to improve year after year until the time comes when they are of age to enter the senior league when they can take their places as trained footballers and the result will be that the brand of football handed out will be much superior to that which we are witnessing to-day. I hope to see the Newfoundland Football League take up this matter while they have plenty of time to get everything in shape next year, and if they fall, well, it is a chance for the Newfoundland Amateur Athletic Association to become popular with the Junior formation of this league would be so difficult as some imagine. We formed up and playing matches seasonally I know of four teams which had a regular series of games during the past summer months. Gower Street Boy Scouts, Holy Cross Rovers and Cadets. They have played several games against other and some of the matches have proved much better value than many of the league games played this year. As I witnessed several of these games and know the captain of each team I shall, with your permission, give you an account of the results. I have played this year, with the hope that it may interest some of your readers who, like myself, are anxious to see the youngsters of their rights. Cadets vs. Holy Cross. Won by Holy Cross, 7-0. Those are interested, all that remain is someone to take up the matter, keep them so and the result will be vast improvement all round. I take up this matter and those interested get down to real work. Yours truly, "RANGER" Sept. 9th, 1922.

A TOAST FOR TONIGHT. Here's to the Phelans—Harry Fred, and likewise the brothers, John Ed, Young Raymond Halley and good Con, and "let-er-come" Power and Elmer John; Fred Brien and Fox and the wafful Burke. For three long years have done work, and they it was well done. Not forgetting of course their good Jim, who for twenty long years has been up the vim. Of the team whose motto is "Say Die"—and they it was well done, sweet by-and-by.

Power Stump Cutter Does Work Rapidly. Tree stumps can be cut out of ground level, or as much as 20 inches below, very rapidly by a machine described and illustrated in the Popular Mechanics Magazine, that is the cutting with a sort of circular head and circular saw. For cutting in fact like a hand saw, it is 1/2 inch thick, and "rapidly" its circular blade. The saw is rotated rapidly by a small gasoline engine, and the cutting head ground, it is at some distance from the stump, it is sloped and fed downward so it descends into the ground, and strikes the stump at the depth. After cutting through the stump the slope of the saw is reversed, and it proceeds to cut upward, ending by having cut out a saucer-shaped section of the ground containing the tree stump.

During Dr. Jones' absence surgery at Avondale will be attended every Wednesday. Parties desiring the visiting Doctor to call at their homes will please have their calls in before noon on that day. —sept13,14,15

LEAGUE MATCH—C.E.I. vs. C. I. RESULT: C.E.I. 5 GOALS; C. I. 1 GOAL. PLAYED ON WELLY GROUNDS JULY 1888.

There is a fair gathering of paying spectators and the usual proportion of "climbers" and ticket-holders. This match, the first of the round of fixtures, came off on the Welly Grounds last evening. Following were the teams:—

C.E.I.—Goal, Woodley; backs, Haynes and Adams; halves, Godden and Cooke; forwards, R. Wood, R. Omond, A. Carnell and J. Omond.

C.I.—Goal, Squires; backs, Evans and Adams; halves, Cullen, Donnelly, Murphy; forwards, Brophy, Power, Ryan and Rowd.

The Institute defended the western side the first half, and at once, beating Squires for the first time in three minutes after the kick-off. Omond doing the needful. Then Omond had a look in at the other end where Brophy just missed a shot by shooting past. The C. E. I. tried to press and were eventually successful scoring, for in quick time, the score stood 2-0. This made the C. E. I. a walk-over, but the appearance of the Cadet backs, kept the result well left to the practice and that in league matches shouting instructions to players should be tapered off a little in future. The players alluded to are not "novices" at the game, and know, or should know, at any rate, just what to do, and when to do it without these instructions (all kindly meant).

footed by Ayré. Time was called soon after showing another C.E.I. victory by 5-1.

Referee—F. Maynard. Linesmen—J. L. Noonan (C.E.I.) and J. Vinticombe (Star).

NOTES ON THE GAME. This match last season was a win for the C.E.I. by 11 to 0, a result which considerably augmented their goal record on the 1897 table. The losers may therefore console themselves with the fact that they show an improvement of fully 50 per cent.

The game last night was not as one-sided as the score implies, and although the Cadets made a very good showing, in the front rank Brophy, Rowd, Donnelly and Power worked hard and put in some good play. The back divisions were up to their average, and Squires in goal was very effective.

The winners, collectively played a fairly good game, but there was a lack of that dash all round which characterized their last two matches. Adams a recent acquisition, played instead of Pihl last night, and impressed us as being a good man. We expect to see him shine before the end of this season.

Just a word about these instructive commands issued during the course of play which were so very prominent last night. We would suggest that this sort of thing be left to the practice and that in league matches shouting instructions to players should be tapered off a little in future. The players alluded to are not "novices" at the game, and know, or should know, at any rate, just what to do, and when to do it without these instructions (all kindly meant).

Monday night B.I.B. vs. Terra Nova.

Strategy.

They were starting a new railway in one of our distant colonies, and after the first had been turned by the Governor there was a cold luncheon at which all the local grandees were present.

A young official, innocent of carriage, was seated much to his consternation, opposite a couple of ducks. For some time no one wanted duck and then, to his horror, a Bishop said: "Might I trouble you, Mr. —, for a little duck?"

The official was equal to the occasion. He held his fingers tightly to his nose to indicate that the ducks were "high." The ruse was successful. The Bishop had cold beef instead.

Chasing the Shilling.

A successful chase of the elusive shilling was instituted by the Orphanaid Club at Silverlock's a Calhoun's garage last night. It continued along New Gower Street, up Theatre Hill, around Rawlin's Cross and along Military and Harvey Roads to the C. L.B. Armoury. There figured in the great chase the G.L.B. Band, which attracted and held the attention of thousands of citizens of all ages and degrees; the Orphanaid Club, which was admitted—almost coveted by all beholders, and a guard of honor of the cars of members of the Club in which sat gentlemen responsible for this movement, every one of 'em armed with tons of determination and looks of virtue.

To attractions of the Car, the Band and the Hunters of the shilling, took thousands from the streets into the spacious armory. Bandmaster Morris with shining countenance and skilled players, led him to the stage and straightway discoursed such sweet strains as simply compelled hesitant auditors on the steps and the street outside to come in.

And what scenes there were, my countrymen, round these fascinating wheels of fortune. The shy shillings simply leaped forth from vest pockets and pants pockets and pocket books and purses and all sorts of receptacles as over the magic words of appeal, advice and exhortation were spoken, yea shouted, by such a pastmaster at his art of extracting coin as Councilor Dowden, and by Mr. Baxter Parsons who capably substituted for Mr. Andrew Carnell, as bellhop for the wheel on the east side of the armory.

Councilor Dowden's team simply mopped things up in the selling line. Not a shilling escaped them. They busted the wheel half a dozen times and equally as often Mr. Ken baby had to apply first aid. Doc. Mosell, Freddie Davey, Sam Thompson, Dick Silverlock, and Jack Steammill hustled a lot and then some to keep pace with the steady, insistent and unceasing demands for tickets. And the demand was always met by the supply. Oh, what a scene was there, my countrymen! The superhuman efforts of the Councilor and his crew simply kept that wheel a-buzzing.

On the other side Baxter Parsons just yelled himself hoarse. But the sales of his little aggregation provided ample balm for his sore throat. The sheriff buzzed around and beamed as if haughty belonged to another sphere altogether. Ben Stafford for a short space of time forgot his Big Stude for Boosting Sales of tickets. Ned Lawrence held him tighter and yon as if he knew not the art of standing a rattling still. Fred Baid executed more quick marches in two hours of the sale than in two weeks of Brigade camping. And as for skipped Ned Snow, well his very presence and appearance simply kept spectators hustling along to that wheel for tickets and then for more.

Taking it by and large, the shilling had a chance of escaping. It is believed that one or two got away from the armory, but most of the members of the Orphanaid Club are sceptical of these reports, though they are on a still hunt to-day for such deserters of a good cause.

The honors of the evening go to the Councilor and his team. They were simply irresistible. They are delighted. So are the operators of Wheel No. 2. In fact, the latter are reported to be so charmed over the evening's work, particularly that part of it performed by the operators of Wheel No. 2, that they intend standing the Councilor and his bunch a dinner at Brenock's next week.

The Orphanaid Club have asked the Telegram to express their sincere appreciation of the numerous friends who so kindly and so practically patronized them last evening. They are particularly grateful to Colonel Goodridge who placed the C.L.B. Armoury and Band at their disposal, to Bro. Emma of Mount Cashel and to Mr. Ken Ruby, who provided the "Wheels of Fortune" for the evening's operations and to many others who worked unceasingly and unselfishly to make the event such a tremendous success.

The Orphanaid Club have arranged to have a public drawing for the prize car in the C.L.B. Armoury on Monday night, commencing at eight o'clock. Those who still hold cash or stubs on account of tickets sold are requested to have them returned to any member of the Club by the end of the present week.

Lady Gold Miner to Wed

The announcement is made of the engagement of Lady Sybil Grey to Mr. Lambert William Middleton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry N. Middleton, of Lowood, Melrose. The wedding will take place in September in the country. Lady Sybil is the daughter of the late Earl Grey and of Alice, Countess Grey. In 1900 she accompanied her father, then Governor-General of Canada, on a trip to the Canadian Arctic gold fields. Near Dawson City, the capital of the Klondyke, she pegged out a claim for herself and christened it "Sybil."

Her first panning-out produced 20 dollars ($4) worth of gold. During the war Lady Sybil arrived with the Anglo-Russian ambulance column in Russia, and in 1916 was wounded

What One of the Best Known Travellers in Canada Says:

"Now I am going to give you an unqualified testimonial as they say in the patent medicine advertisements. Heretofore I have had a profound contempt for patent medicines, particularly so-called liniments. Perhaps this is due to the reason that I have been blessed with a sturdy constitution, and have never been ill a day in my life. One day last fall after a hard day's tramp in the bush of Montreal, I developed a severe cold in my head and of course like a man who has never had anything wrong with him physically, I complained rather boisterously. A good little wife says, 'I will rub them with some liniment I have.' 'Go ahead,' I said, just to humor her. 'Well, in the course with a bottle of MINA'S Liniment and gold appeared a few minutes after, and you can tell the world 'I said so.' (Signed) FRANK B. JOHNS, Montreal.

Making Mines Safe.

Casualties in Collieries are Very Heavy—This Lamp will help to reduce them.

Statistics tell us that on an average three men are killed and three hundred others more or less injured every day by accidents in the world's coalfields. Among the causes of these accidents fire-damp stands in a prominent position.

All beds of coal are more or less porous, while "booklets" may occur here and there in which gas may collect until it has obtained a considerable pressure. A stroke of a pick or a drill, or the falling of a block of coal will suddenly release this gas, when it can distinctly be heard escaping.

It only requires fire and a half of fire-damp in one hundred parts of air to create a highly sensitive explosive. Experience has proved that the presence of condenser renders even smaller quantities of this gas extremely dangerous.

Sir Humphry Davy was the first man with his famous safety-lamp, to attempt to fight this gas. That was a hundred years ago. No step so great as his has been made since, so that there is still ample room for a contrivance which will enable workers to discover the presence of dangerous gases.

When the Bell Blows. Two brothers, Messrs. Alfred and Leo Williams, claim to have made an invention which will minimize the risk of explosion in a mine. They have called their invention the methanometer.

Most of the accidents which occur are due to defective lighting. Although nearly a million lamps are used regularly underground, not more than one fourth of these are electric. The new invention will increase the proportion of electric lamps employed. The methanometer is an attachment for use with the present electric lamp, which will enable the miner to ascertain the actual amount of fire-damp around him. Then, by adjusting ventilation, he can admit fresh air to reduce the proportion of fire-damp to safety.

The Sixth Sense.

Everyone has heard the old saying about rats leaving a sinking ship. Of course it is quite wrongly expressed. Any fool would leave a sinking ship; but rats have been known to board a doomed ship at her last port of call before she sank.

There is a possible explanation of this curious proceeding, for it is quite on the cards that such a ship might already be unseaworthy and leaky, and, therefore, no longer a comfortable abode for her rats.

But there is no such explanation possible for the extraordinary forecast knowledge shown in the first week in June last by the red squirrels that were witnessed leaving a wood in the Aldershot district. Scores of them were seen hurrying away, and holes, as squirrels almost always go in a northerly direction. Yet why they were was a mystery until next day. Then a grass fire caught the wood and burnt it out.

Anticipating Ants.

This, mind you, is not the only case on record of such prescience on the part of squirrels, for a similar incident was recorded during the great drought of last year.

Talking of droughts, there are several creatures which have been known in advance, whether a year will be wet or dry. Two of these are the British birds, the little grebe, commonly called the "dabchick" and moorhen.

These birds both build by the river's edge, and in case of heavy floods during the breeding season their nests and eggs would, of course, be washed away. Especially in the Kennet valley, the old country folk all prophesy the weather according to the position in which these birds build their nests. If low, there will be no big rain, at any rate, before the end of June.

That there is the common wood ant, a little yellow-brown insect, which builds rather large nests in the woods. You can find plenty of such nests in Epping Forest. When the summer is going to be hot and dry the nest of the wood ant is built lower and flatter than if the season is to be wet and cold.

This ant likes a regular temperature, and knows how to provide for it. By the size of the nest of the wood ant quite a definite forecast can be given of the weather during the coming summer.

These are not the only members of the ant tribe which are gifted with the art of forecasting the weather. There is in the Southern States of America a small black ant which always builds partly under and partly above the ground. If you see these ants carrying their eggs up from the collars of their dwellings to the surface, you may be definitely certain of heavy rain within twenty-four hours. I have watched them myself and have never known them to be wrong.

Certain kinds of fish have the same peculiar gift. If you go out trouting on a nice day, and find that the trout absolutely refuse to rise, the chances are that rain is coming soon. The fish scorn your fly because they know that within a few hours they will be brought down by the rising flood. When an earthquake is coming, fish and horses are all uneasy. Cats mew and are restless, dogs howl, and horses will frequently stampede.

Strange Bat Traps.

It is, of course, possible that their senses are more delicate than ours, and that they feel tremour before man does. But this explanation will not account for trout or ants knowing of rain so far in advance; and most certainly it is of no use in the case already mentioned of the squirrels, leaving a wood twenty-four hours before a fire started.

These, mind you, are only instances of the exhibition of animals of senses which man not only does not possess, but cannot even understand. How is it that young birds migrating find their way across broad seas where there is no possible landmark? How do cats, carried by train many miles, find their way back to their old homes? Nature is full of such problems, and it will do us no harm and diminish our self-conceit to give them a little thought.
