CHAPTER VII.

Sir George departed briskly, and neither Locksley nor Lady Clare begged him to remain.

"This is sudden," said Clare. "Surely, you are not flying from the wrath that you fear must be inevitable?"

For reply, he laid Doris's telegram before her, and while her eyes flamed, her red lips curled scornfully.

"Rather an unsophisticated maid!" she smiled. "What on earth are you to do with her?"

"Can you not help me, Clare?"

"I?" She laughed almost harshly. "I am afraid I cannot—at present. You have placed her and yourself in a very awkward predicament. I see only one course open, and though it is a terrible thing for me to advise, I do not think that you can do anything else."

"And that?"

"You must marry Doris Deane, Edmund. You must remember that her fair fame is in your keeping, unless you insist that she return home again at once."

Locksley flushed crimson. It was so sudden. What would Doris say to this?

"And you must leave me to explain to your father, and the others," she went on. "I will pretend that I do not care, and in time I may forget you, and perhaps fall in love with little Ensign Tomkins."

Again that harsh laugh that was new to Lady Clare.

"Bless you," he said, taking her hand and kissing it. "Clare, I shall bless you forever!"

"She snatched it away with a sudden movement, and whispered:

"Go, Edmund Locksley, to the woman who is waiting for you, and keep me alive to your movements. I may learn to like her yet."

"I will write to you to-night, he replied. "I will trust you in all things, Clare."

"Good-by."

He looked at her, but her face was turned to the window. She would not meet his gaze, lest he see the madness in her eyes.

"Good-by, Clare," he said again, they turned, and was gone. He sprang into the dogcart that was waiting at the door, looked at his watch, and told the groom to drive fast.

"Thus go my hopes and my love," muttered Lady Clare. "And now I live but for vengeance upon her and upon him. Ah, just Heaven. I hate them both!"

CHAPTER VIII.

The same morning Viscount Melville's face wore an expression of extreme satisfaction. He had spent the part of the night with Norman Locksley, and he knew he had never before employed his time so profitably.

"My long and bitter struggle with poverty is now at an end," he thought, "and I have proved beyond doubt that scheming is better than hard work!" Then he gave utterance to a half-regretful sigh. "There is only one thing I covet, the heart of my peerless cousin, Lady Clare! Pshaw! Am I a fool? Have I not made her a stepping-stone to fortune?"

He was standing at the window of a reception-room that looked out upon the drive, and presently saw Lady Clare returning from her morning gallop, attended only by her father.

A wild passion blazed in his eyes for a moment, and he stepped behind the curtains, muttering hoarsely:

"She is lost to me! I have schemed to my own undoing, but have secured five thousand pounds per annum!"

He laughed a hollow, mocking laugh, and turned a minute later to greet Sir George Moncrieff.

"So you are down, eh?" said the baronet. "What time did you get to bed? In the small hours? Clare and I have had a capital spin. Nothing like these September mornings for bracing air—We've been found to Ulwich and Peckham Rye, and I never or saw Clare so reckless and high spirited."

"Relieved and pleased that Locksley has at last come to the point," smiled Melville. "By the way, where have you left the happy lovers?"

"Edmund has not been with us," replied Sir George. "He left early this morning, though where he was going I have not the slightest notion. Ask Clare."

"You astonish me," exclaimed Melville, a thrill of fear shooting into his heart.

"This is one of the most important days of his life, and he knows it. But perhaps he will be back in a few hours?"

"No; Clare says he will be absent for a day or two. He received a telegram from a friend—a doctor, who asked his assistance of something of the kind."

Melville bit his under lip savagely, and paced the floor, while Sir George regarded him in surprise.

"I am annoyed with him," the viscount explained, "because he knows now his conduct will shock his father. For his sake we have labored through the night; for his sake an ugly past has been unearthed, and secrets laid bare which have harrowed poor Locksley's heart. He expects to meet his son—to hand to him the document that reveals all—to see him read it. His disappointment will be bitter, and he will never be able to face the ordeal again. It may be fatal to him. You know how he suffers from the consumption that is surely sapping his life. You know that a shock is liable to bring a fatal hemorrhage. The doctors have warned him of this again and again!"

Sir George looked perplexed.

"Perhaps I could help you if I weren't kept so much in the dark," he said, "I only know sufficient to satisfy me that Edmund Locksley will make a son-in-law after my own heart, and the rest I have left to you. Melville, and to Clare's good sense. Aren't you making a bundle of trouble out of a quart measure?"

The viscount did not reply, for in his heart he despised his selfish and easygoing uncle.

"I am going out for half-an-hour," he observed, presently. "Will you ask Lady Clare to see me upon my return?"

"Certainly, Arthur."

"Melville left the room, and was soon on his way to the post-office. Arrived there, he asked to see the original of the telegram received that morning by Mr. Edmund Locksley. He explained that Mr. Locksley had authorized him to see it, and the postmaster violated the rules by permitting him to do so because he was a viscount and the friend and mentor of young Mr. Locksley.

"You will not mention this, sir," the postmaster said, "because it would mean dismissal, or next to it, for me."

But Melville only waved his hand impatiently, and the man saw that his face had paled even to his lips.

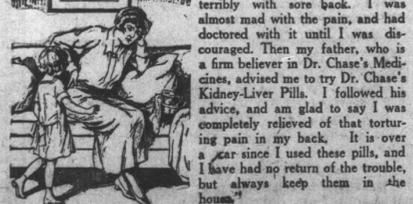

"Thank you!" he gulped out, and walked quickly into the sunshine. He felt that he would choke in the dark and stuffy little office.

"Am I mad or dreaming?" he muttered "Dora Deane! The child living when I was satisfied that she was dead. How much does that headstrong fellow know, and what attraction is she to him? What Satanic plot is this to rob me of the toil of years? I have all—all, but the old man's signature, and that he will not give until Edmund and Clare are man and wife. He knows how tenaciously we Melvilles and Moncrieffs cling to honor. This is the bond that silences my tongue forever. More pecuniary considerations are not enough!"

He laughed softly, but there was a wicked glitter in his eyes, and he finished with a contemptuous shrug.

"I Suffered Terribly With Sore, Aching Back"

Mrs. Roland Ferguson, 194 Lake St., Peterboro, Ont., writes:

For over two years I suffered terribly with sore back. I was almost mad with the pain, and had doctored with it until I was discouraged. Then my father, who is a firm believer in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I followed his advice, and am glad to say I was completely relieved of that torturing pain in my back. It is over a year since I used these pills, and I have had no return of the trouble, but always keep them in the house.

"After taking Two Bottles my wife made rapid progress back to health"

Carnol is one of the finest remedies ever discovered for use by the expectant mother. There is no time in a woman's life when it is so socially necessary to safeguard her health. Not only should she protect her own health, at a most trying period, but she must consider also the health of the unborn child. Read what Carnol did for Mrs. Perry.

"My wife, about two years ago, just before our baby was born, was suffering from anemia and indigestion. She could keep nothing on her stomach. We tried a great many so-called remedies, phosphates and even beef, iron and wine tonics, but to no effect. One day I went into one of our local drug stores, Crawford's by name, and asked him to give me a reliable tonic for my wife. He handed me a bottle of Carnol, recommending it highly, and told me to give it a fair trial. After taking two bottles my wife made rapid progress back to health. The colour came back to her cheeks and her appetite was completely restored. We find Carnol almost invaluable for our baby."

It is a useful medicine, especially at teething time, and we are never without a bottle in the house. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to recommend the merits of Carnol. As a body-builder, nerve remedy and a wonderful restorative in all run-down conditions, I don't think there is any medicine anywhere equal to Carnol.

Strike Strangling Industrial Life of the Province

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT HAS NO IMMEDIATE SOLUTION OF DIFFICULTY.

Not a single patch of silver shows through the lining of the strike cloud that has enveloped Cape Breton for more than three weeks, and a careful canvass of the situation reveals, at the moment, no immediate means for relief.

Premier Armstrong has informed the Press he has no advice regarding possible negotiations looking toward a settlement and can make no forecast as to eventualities. However, he intimates to a correspondent that the situation here was not being neglected.

The most serious aspect of the prolonged dispute between the British Empire Steel Corporation and the miners is that the majority of merchants doing business in the mining districts are rapidly being forced into that position where if a break does not soon come in this deadlock, many mercantile houses will tremble on the brink of financial crisis and not a few be eventually forced into bankruptcy.

In Glace Bay, Sydney Mines, New Waterford and other of the larger communities whose existence is entirely dependent upon the coal mines as a producing institution, there are plenty of business men who frankly say they have reached the limit of their endurance—some, that they are ready to give up, while of the others, none will deny that their position is a serious one.

The present dispute is merely a climax to a process of several years with conditions becoming more acute from month to month, from week to week, and now, from day to day.

These years have been marked by repeated disturbances at the mines, and strikes and interrupted operation of the great steel mills, culminating in but part time working of the mines throughout last year, with consequent curtailment of the earning power of the large population affected, a result, and destruction of their buying power, and, now, complete cessation of work and conditions of destitution such as never before existed.

Resumption of operations at the steel mills two weeks ago brought a measure of relief so far as this city is concerned.

TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS

Letter From Mrs. Ayars Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

"Spring Valley, Sask.—I took the Vegetable Compound before my last confinement, when I got to feeling so badly that I could not sleep nights my back ached so across my hips, and I could hardly do my work during the day. I never had such an easy confinement and this is my sixth baby. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the 'Farmer's Telegram' and wrote you for one of your books. We have no druggists in our town, but I saw your medicine in T. Eaton's catalogue. I am a farmer's wife, so have all kinds of work to do inside and outside the house. My baby is a nice healthy girl, who weighed nine pounds at birth. I am feeling fine after putting in a large garden since baby came. (She is as good as she can be.) Yours is the best medicine for women, and I have told about it and even written to my friends about it."—Mrs. ANNIE E. AYARS, Spring Valley, Sask.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system so that it may work in every respect as nature intended. All druggists sell dependable medicine. Give it a trial.

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES NEURALGIA.

Liberals Uneasy.

Considerable opinion here in the ranks of the government supporters reflects an uneasiness arising out of the present situation. Not before, they say, in the forty-two years of liberal supremacy in Nova Scotia has the party been faced by a more stirring appeal against a liberal regime than that which has been given on such province-wide and country-wide scope as in the current crisis; the appeal of vividly-pictured human suffering and seeming indifference to it on the part of the government.

"Whether there has or has not been exaggeration of conditions in the coal fields will be the issue," said a prominent liberal to-day.

There is a growing feeling here that further government action will be forthcoming soon with a view to ending the wage dispute. All sides are agreed that the matter now rests with the government.

Feeding the Hungry.

Relief stations continue their work of feeding the immense population in the mines areas, the good weather of the last few days having served to improve conditions somewhat, especially in sections where early in the week sickness threatened to become widespread owing to the inclemency of the weather.

The possibility exists, according to reliable authority that the provincial government may approach the matter in the sense of affording to the men some compensatory guarantees pending the report of an investigating commission.

Some such guarantees are in the view of the men, the most important consideration, for they point to the partial operation of the mines during the past two years as the basis cause of their present destitute condition. The corporation declines to afford any guarantee of minimum work.

It is intimated that if some provincial guarantees of the nature described should be offered, the men would be willing to accept less than the 1924 wage scale and that should such proposal be forthcoming rapid agreement, enabling immediate resumption of operation of the mines would follow in short order.—Sydney Post, Mar. 28.

THE ROSE.

The rose no question makes of creed Or place, or pomp, or worldly fame; The good, the bad, The poor, the sad, The beauty of a rose may claim, And great and low Its charms may know— A rose cares nothing for a name.

It never gives a scornful look Nor holds the fragrance it can shed. Whoever goes To greet a rose, With beauty will be comforted; Whoever nears In smiles or tears Will find the red rose always red.

A rose is always fair to see, 'Tis man who speaks the bitter thing; 'Tis man who spurns His kind and turns To envy's cruel gossip; 'Tis man alone Who hurts his own By words and deeds which leave a sting.

Man is not always fair to see, Some find him good; some never can, He'll flatter here Then frown or sneer Or sport with hate his nobler plan, Always the rose Its beauty shows, But man not always is a man!

D downfall of Herriot's Cabinet Seems Inevitable

Unionists Have Majority in Ulster Elections.—Canada Uses the Axe in Her Civil Service.—France Proposes to Tax Capital.

DOWNFALL OF HERRIOT PREDICTED.
PARIS, April 6. The French Cabinet crisis cannot be avoided more than a week longer, political observers predicted to-night because of the conflict raging within the Herriot Cabinet over methods for a general overhauling of French finances.

UNIONISTS IN CONTROL.
BELFAST, April 5. With red flags flying, a triumphal procession which until recently would have caused a riot swept through the heart of the city to-day, celebrating the victory of three Socialist candidates for the Ulster Parliament. Only three Unionists were put forward out of all were elected. Premier James Craig, however, maintains control in the Ulster Government, despite unexpected losses from Unionist ranks. With only one to be heard from the new Ulster house will consist of 32 Unionists, 19 Nationalists, 2 Republicans, 4 Independents, 3 Labor and one member from the Tenant party.

16 COMMUNISTS ARRESTED AT JAFFA.
LONDON, April 6. Sixteen Communists were arrested at Jaffa on the night of Earl Balfour's arrival there recently, it was reported in the House of Commons to-day. Inflammatory attacks on Balfour of the most insulting nature were distributed through the town and only prompt action by the Palestine authorities prevented serious trouble on Balfour's visit to Palestine to open the new Jewish University on Mount Scopus.

REDUCING CANADA'S CIVIL SERVICE.
OTTAWA, April 6. The Journal this afternoon says some 1200 civil servants are in process of being eliminated from the Federal Government payroll as the result of the absorption of the income tax branch of the debt finance by the Customs Dept. The annual salaries involved aggregate some $1,500,000.

SLASHED WIFE AND SUICIDED.
HALIFAX, N.S., April 6. Edward Parker, aged 50, a prosperous farmer at Hillvale, Haat's Co., about 30 miles from here, slashed his wife's throat with a penknife this morning severing the external jugular vein and then committed suicide.

PRINCE AT FREETOWN.
FREETOWN, Sierra Leone, West Africa, April 6.—The Prince of Wales arrived here to-day. H.M.S. Repulse, the battle cruiser on which he is making the tour to Africa and South America, anchored in the early hours of a sultry morning. Main street of the town was elaborately beflagged and patient crowds waited in serried ranks along the waterfront for weary hours in wondering expectation at the cruiser with all her colors flying. The Prince awaited an opportunity to stay ashore one night as the guest of the Governor. His landing at 10 o'clock was the signal for "similar" ovations as greeted him at Bathurst.

DIAMOND ROBBERY.
NEW YORK, April 6. James Ross, a diamond merchant, was robbed of fifty thousand dollars worth of unset diamonds as he ascended the steps of a building near Times Square. He was waylaid by highwaymen.

SOWING WHEAT.
LETHEBRIDGE, April 6. Seeding operations started full blast throughout Southern Alberta, this morning. Actual seeding of wheat is reported from Bardette. Soil moisture conditions were described as the best since 1915, but the wheat acreage in southeast Alberta will be the smallest in ten years.

PARIS, April 6. Bills providing for an increase in the bank note circulation amounting to four billion francs and for voluntary ten per cent. contribution by capital, were presented to the Cabinet this morning by M. LONDON, April 6. When the Independent Labor Party's convention meets in Gloucester on Easter Monday, a report will be submitted by a committee which has been considering how that ancient formula, nationalization of means of production, distribution and exchange, can be practically set out.

BIGGER SALARIES FOR ONTARIO LEGISLATORS.
TORONTO, April 6. The Ontario Legislature this afternoon gave a second reading to a Bill providing $600 increase in salary for its members and $2,000 increase in salary of Cabinet Ministers. There was some opposition from the Progressives, but they did not divide the House on the question.

Using That Old Vario-Coupler
EDITED BY JOHN M. CLAYTON.

If you have an out-of-date variocoupler and a .00025 or .0005 MFD variable condenser sitting on the shelf you can rework them for use in a very good one-tube regenerative set with very little trouble. The secondary (or rotor) of the variocoupler will be used as the tickler. It should be rewound so that it has a total of some 25 turns of wire. The size does not matter particularly so long as it is not smaller than No. 28 B. & S. gauge. If you have more than 25 turns on the present rotor strip it down until there are only this number left. The stator (the primary of the variocoupler) will be used as the secondary. If this coil has a diameter of 4 inches it should have 40 turns of wire on it if the .0005 MFD. (23 plate) condenser is used, or 70 turns if you have a .00025 MFD. (17 plate) condenser. This will give a tuning range of 200 to about 600 meters. If the coil has a diameter of only 3 inches you will need 55 turns for the .0005 MFD. condenser and 75 turns for the .00025 MFD condenser. The primary or antenna coil should consist of 15 turns of No. 22 to No. 26 B. & S. gauge wire which is wound on a form a little smaller than the stationary coil form of the coupler. These turns can be "scramble wound." After the 15 turns have been put on, slip the coil off the form, tie it together in several places with twine and slip it down in the bottom end of the stationary coil. This primary will act as the so-called untuned or fixed tuned affair and will give sufficient coupling between the antenna and secondary on all broadcast wavelengths. The complete wiring diagram is given above. Either the headset can be used—connect it to the posts marked "output"—or an audio-frequency amplifier can be used. This will make a very cheap set which will get good "fix."

THE COACH as Buick Builds It

BUICK now presents the Coach. And "coach" ideas have been revised, for the type of coach that Buick presents changes the standards that previously have governed coach construction. Here finally is a car of the coach type that is a real closed car, one in which closed car quality, comfort, equipment and durability have not been sacrificed to price.

This Buick Coach embodying these new principles of coach design, is available on either of the two dependable Buick chassis. There is a Master Six Coach and a Standard Six Coach—the quality is identical. Besides being built on the Buick chassis, Buick Coaches show further advantages over the ordinary coach type. Buick Coach bodies are built by Fisher and present the same smart sweeping contours as other Buick closed cars. They are finished in the new indestructible "Ducor" of most pleasing color combinations. Buick Coaches are fitted with refinements as only found on cars that are much more costly. The improved new Fisher V.V. one-piece windshield that is lifted automatically is a feature of comfort and value. And for safety Buick has its mechanical and reliable four-wheel brakes endorsed last year by over 200,000 Buick owners. These are the first coaches to be offered with this modern brake equipment.

Poole's Golden Age.

When Newfoundland Trade Flourished

A few days ago an old friend of mine, sent me a paper of recent date, giving an account of a lecture delivered by Mr. H. P. Smith, the local historian and antiquarian, before the Poole (England) Rotary Club. This, of course, immediately attracted my attention, as not alone has my friend, the late Rev. Canon Lockyer, of Trinity, written much upon this subject, but I have also contributed a considerable amount of information about the "good old days, when the trade of Newfoundland was in a most flourishing condition—with the British markets, of which, Poole, in those days, was the great centre. Not alone had but also with Exeter, Plymouth and other ports of England, and all this was continued up to my early days. We had also a very considerable trade with Ireland, and many cargoes of codfish and herrings were shipped year after year to Waterford, Cork, and Wexford. Nor would these be small cargoes. Some of the vessels, such as the Marion, Ridley, Willow Crest and others, were vessels of over 150 tons. With regard to Scotland, the records of the great and time-honoured firm of Messrs. Baine, Johnston & Co., would show, that cargo after cargo of fish and herring has been shipped to Greenock and other ports during the past century. Then the question presents itself to my mind—"Why have we lost or abandoned these markets?" There must be a cause. We had also a most profitable market in Belgium, notably Antwerp for our herring, and also in Germany. All this happened in my early days, and I can give the names of some score of vessels which brought our products to these markets. In the hotels of Belgium, in all the cafes and restaurants, the herrings are cut up in small blocks, like sugar, and partaken of as (to use our own expression) as a "grog bit." It used to be the same in Germany and Russia. I have these facts from my brother, who was for over two years a student in Louvain, Belgium, and certainly studied these matters more carefully than I have.

Now the point I must arrive at is—since the War, have been what they were previous to that great upheaval. Then why not our merchants endeavor to once more capture, not alone the markets of England, Ireland and Scotland, but also Belgium, Germany (more particularly the Rhine portion), and extend their operations to Russia, which, I understand, they are endeavoring to do with regard to the latter country.

But let us look at what Mr. H. P. Smith has to say regarding the great trade carried on between Poole and Newfoundland in the early days of the past century, and (to my knowledge), upto the seventies. Mr. Smith said that the most brilliant and stirring of all the varied phases of Poole's storied past, the days when it was almost possible to pass from quay to quay across the decks of Newfoundland trading vessels.

In the glorious epic of Poole's lengthy connection with Newfoundland, Britain's oldest colony, there was much over which Poole men might enthuse. Poole at that period might have been described as the "Venice of the West Country." Despite the great disparity of size and populace between the two places, the metaphor was not altogether ill-chosen. The geographical likeness was marked, the lagooned-encircled dwellings of Harnsworth and Poole having reminded more than one traveller of the Adriatic seaport.

MAKING HARDY SEAMEN.

Just as the rich argosies of Venice brought home their precious cargoes from the East, so, in the hey-day of Poole's Newfoundland trade, did five score Poole vessels return annually from the West, laden with the rich harvests of the Great Bank and the Arctic waters. The amphibian existence produced both in the Venetians and the Poole men of old, a race as hardy, expert and fearless sailors.

PIONEERS FROM POOLE.

Referring to some of the more famous ships that regularly sailed between Poole and Newfoundland, Mr. Smith remarked that on Aug. 10th, 1497, King Henry VII. paid to John Cabot—"hym that found the new isle"—the reward of £10. In the town's records there were entries showing that within a century of this date quite a dozen Poole ships were engaged in the Newfoundland codfisheries. During the early days of the industries the actual fishing was carried out by the Poole fisherfolk themselves, but in time the island became peopled with a race of sturdy colonists, many of them of Poole extraction, who devoted their energies to the seal and codfisheries.

In 1581 twenty-one vessels belonged to the port of Poole, and perhaps two-thirds of these were engaged in the new trade. The largest was the "Castell of Comforte," (70 tons), and the smallest the "Peter," (14 tons). What cockshells compared with the modern Leviathans! What expert seamen the crews must have been! These Newfoundland fisheries, in the establishment of which Poole seamen took so prominent a part, were the finest training grounds in the world for the Navy. One honored the great Admirals, but was apt to forget the contemporary, though nameless, Poole seamen, who braved the terrors of wind and wave, fog and icebergs.

Gradually the Poole merchants established on both sides of the Atlantic and carried on a successful barter; seal, fish and oil in exchange for provisions and clothing. In the face of the perils, not only of the weather, but of the sea rovers and privateers, the trade was captured, and at least one—"The General Wolfe"—recaptured. During the last 60 years or so of the trade, Poole ships enjoyed immunity from the attacks of marauding vessels, but still had the fiercest of gates to contend with.

A MEMORY.

The Newfoundland trade is nought but a memory to-day. Now it has gone, never to return. The period of 1788-89 marked the crest of the wave, with the astounding total of 300 vessels belonging to Poole. Those "Good old days" had a tale to tell of noble endeavor which could not fail to inspire. They should fill Poole men with renewed zeal and a keen determination to support enthusiastically every movement to revive the Maritime trade.

Let us hope the renaissance is at hand, and that such full and wise use will be made of the undoubted natural advantages which Poole and district possess, that a fair measure of Poole's pre-war commercial splendor will be restored.

I wish the readers of the Telegram to pay particular attention to Mr. Smith's reference to the ship "General Wolfe," wherein he states that she was captured and "recaptured." Fortunately I am in a position to give the learned gentleman some information about that vessel; and if my friend, who so kindly gave me the newspaper, containing a synopsis of Mr. Smith's lecture in Poole, will send him a copy of the Telegram, it may be of interest to him, and show the heroism of the crew of the "General Wolfe" in the stormy days past and gone, on the coast of Newfoundland.

In the early days of the past century, the splendid ship "General Wolfe," owned by the firm of George, and James Kemp, of Poole, England, and Carbonear, Newfoundland, left the latter port (Carbonear) bound to some Mediterranean market with a full cargo of shore fish. Everything went along well with a favorable breeze, until nearly half passage, when she was captured by a French privateer, her captain, who was named Tullock, was transferred to the frigate with his crew, except the mate, one seaman, and a young Newfoundland boy. Incredible as it may seem, the mate formed the daring idea of taking possession of the ship from the privateer crew of ten men, commanded by an officer. The mate of the "General Wolfe," made all his plans and carried them out successfully in the following manner. He secured a gimlet and bored holes in the companionway, fore and aft, procured nails to fill the holes, and when the ship was nearing the French coast, in broad daylight, the seaman was given the signal to close the fore-scuttle, place the nails in the holes and secure the crew when at dinner, which he did satisfactorily, and the boy was employed to secure and throw upon deck the French officer's pistols, which he was in the habit of taking off when at meals. The boy was a native of Carbonear and was about fifteen years of age. At a given signal, after attending to the Captain's requirements in the cabin, the boy seized the belt and pistols, ran for the companionway and threw them on deck. The mate of the "General Wolfe" caught the belt and pistols and immediately covered the man at the wheel, determined to shoot should the occasion require it. The brave boy was seized by the French officer by the legs, as he endeavored to gain the deck, and the mate, stooping down, seized the youngster by the arm, and then came the tug-of-war for possession of the boy; the French man endeavoring to pull him back to the cabin, and the mate exercising all his powerful strength to draw him through the companionway to the deck. After some time the great strength of the mate succeeded in wrenching the boy from the hands of the Frenchman; but, such was his grim determination to hold on to the boy, that when the mate succeeded in his efforts to secure him, his boots were left in the hands of the Frenchman, having been hauled off his feet. The ship was now once more in the hands of the Newfoundland crew, of two men and a boy, and she was headed for the English coast and in due time arrived safely in Poole.

The Newfoundland trade, following the return of the "Newfoundlanders," moored four and five abreast, their masts and canvas showing signs of the storms encountered. The ships had gone out early in the year with supplies for the Newfoundland fisherfolk, and left laden with salt fish, seal pelts and furs, some of which was bartered away on the way home, in Naples, Oporto and other places, for the wines of sunny Mediterranean. Here, preparing their vessels for the winter rest, were the pilotaged sailors of Poole, representatives of a hardy race that had done business on deep waters for seven centuries. Apart from the bustle in connection with the Newfoundland trade, were other activities on the quay, prominent among them being the building of the ships at Hamworthy.

LIFE AND BUSTLE.

Mr. Smith described the scene on Poole Quay, 150 years ago, the life and bustle, following the return of the "Newfoundlanders," moored four and five abreast, their masts and canvas showing signs of the storms encountered. provisions (the Americans refusing to sell foodstuffs to the loyal colonists) purchased by George and James Kemp from the Agents of the above port, and was chased by an American privateer. The "General Wolfe," being an exceptionally smart vessel, outstripped the American ship and arrived safely in Carbonear with a full supply of provisions, which saved the people from threatened starvation. This adventure occurred in the month of November. Somewhere about the year 1810 the Kemps made a wonderful speculation—one that left them rich men and brought them into prominence in the Old Country. It was during the Peninsula War, when Napoleon was endeavoring to keep the Crown of Spain on the head of his brother Joseph, that the English fleet blockaded the Spanish ports, and more particularly the port of Cadiz. The south of Spain was overrun by one of Napoleon's generals—Marechal Suchet—and every precaution was taken to guard the seaports, so that no supplies could be taken to the coast, which might possibly fall into the hands of the French. However, two of Kemp's vessels managed to run the blockaded waters with Newfoundland codfish, and it is needless to say they carried a fancy price for their cargoes. After discharging they loaded with wine, which was selling very cheap, owing to the great depression in trade, and sailed away for London, where they arrived after a quick passage. At that time wine was selling at fabulous prices in England, and Kemp went down from Poole to London, gave orders to have the hatches battened down, and when all arrangements were made he retailed the wine out by the bottle and the glass, making a rapid fortune out of the venture. It is estimated that he made thousands of pounds and then, having no fear for the future, so far as monetary requirements were concerned, he retired from the Newfoundland trade, purchased a large property in Poole, and was elected a member of the British House of Commons. In fact, it was said that at one time Kemp owned nearly one-half of the property in the City of Poole. I have often thought how interesting it would be if we could get at the records in the Customs Houses of Poole, Exeter, Plymouth, Waterford, Cork, Greenock and other ports of Great Britain. For over a century we did a tremendous business with these cities, and our ancestors came to this country from one or the other of these ports.

A formal frock for afternoon has a tunic of eyelet embroidery on batiste.

Mannish topcoats are worn

The inverted pleat is a darling of the fashion at present. Many of the new ensembles are fashioned entirely of silk. For afternoon the circular skirt or slight flare is well liked. The popularity of the frock-cape ensembles is increasing. Elaboration in front and flatness back is a rule of the mode. For the one-piece sports frock the shirtwaist front is smart. One notes that most of the crepe de chine frocks are two-piece. If one chooses, the chiffon dress frock may be of a vivid print. Printed crepe frocks button in long line straight down the front.

When I asked for the results of his stay in the department did not show until he left the department.

When I first visited the Post Office my first intention was to find out where the Customs money was—what they were doing with the money, and who kept the books.

and if he tries to build up the country, and straighten out the finances of the different Departments, he is vilified in every way. Now take H. Minard, where there is a shortage of $3,700.00 on the part of a woman official. That began in 1919, and it ran on until now. She admits a shortage of $3,600.00. Was there ever an attempt to hold an audit in that office until the Monroe party came into power? No, sir. No effort whatever was made in that direction. If we did not have an auditor travelling and myself make an inspection trip, the shortage would still be unknown. Again at Bay Roberts the same kind of thing has been going on for four or five years, and the Postmaster there has a shortage of three or four thousand dollars. Nothing had been done to fix that matter up by our predecessors, but in a few short months we are expected to perform miracles. If that place had been cleaned up when the trouble started a few years ago, the money would not be gone as it is now. I was informed by a man in the Post Office that when the Sulphite Company was started at Terra Nova a girl got into trouble at the office there, and your attention was called to it. There is the same kind of a shortage at Exploits. Now let us look at the General Post Office. It will be found that there will be little difference in the report of Colonel Ross, and that signed by the Auditor General, the Minister of Posts and myself. As has been stated certain offices are over-stuffed there, and I may say the same applies to some in my own Department. But we cannot turn innocent men on the street, and have their wives and sisters or brothers come crying to us the next day, and saying it was not fair to turn out father or Joe or Jack. This matter has got to take time, and cannot be all done in a minute.

When I undertook to go through the Post Office, after being asked to do so by the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, what I saw would make one's blood boil, in view of all the money that was spent on it. It was dirty from top to bottom. While going around the Department in Company with the Minister and the Auditor General trying to rearrange matters I asked the clerk of the Customs office if he had any back parcels belonging to the Custom House and he produced six or eight parcels. I said "Is that all you have after three or four years?" and the clerk said "Yes." We took a tour around and we found in a heap ten bags of parcels belonging to the Customs House. The most peculiar thing about it was that we came across a strayway article in the shape of $17.75 and I remarked that that must have been a red hot stove. Now some of those bags of parcels were lying there since 1919 and nobody cared where they went. But the greatest surprise that I got since I have been in the Government was in January last when Mr. Milley telephoned me and told me that the Money Order account in the Bank of Montreal was in credit, the first time for five years. Now does that show that the little attention given by us in a short time made certain people step up and that the Colony's money was safeguarded in a way that it had not been for some years.

I next want to refer to the Stock Room where I was invited to have a look around. I found everything topsy turvy there. We could find no head or tail to the place and I do not think anybody else could either. The whole thing was in a chaotic state. We made an attempt by the time Auditor Crummeys through with his work that a further story of shortages will be told. My only reason for speaking at all is to defend my position in connection with the Post Office. My help was given at the request of the Government. Mr. Woodford asked me to go there. Perhaps it would have been better had I stayed out. Mr. Hickman has asked me if Hickman's firm was fixed up. Through the assistance I gave to him within thirty hours, the whole thing was cleaned up and audited by Crummeys.

MR. HICKMAN—What did the man say?
HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—He told me to see the Auditor General and I did so. The Auditor General told me that he reported the matter and it was no use reporting it. Nobody noticed it. Take the Auditor General's Report now on the table of the House. How many hon. members have taken the trouble to read it through? Now, Mr. Chairman, the only thing I am sorry for to-day is for the unfortunate people who were connected with the Post Office and who started in to take money, were never checked, and who gradually went on incurring shortages until the large amounts that we have discovered were reached, and a conviction was given by the time Auditor Crummeys through with his work that a further story of shortages will be told. any more than I can help. It is material to me who printed them, they were printed during the last four years and even if it had been the "Daily News" or "Evening Telegram" that printed them, I would condemn the parties who gave the orders for printing to be done just the same. The point is that there is stock enough in some cases to last twenty years and even a hundred years. We next went around and found rolls of cloth of which Uniforms were made. I asked Bradbury about the cloth, which I might say was moth eaten, and he said he knew nothing whatever about it but somebody must have known about it. It was a very much overstock. Now I would like to ask the question. Am I looking across at the Liberal Party, Mr. Chairman, that was led by Mr. Hickman? Can anyone tell me if the same people and that nobody seems to recognize. These were messages sent out by the Liberal Party during last election. Whoever the party is they started pretty liberal alright and helped themselves pretty liberally to the courtesy of the Telegraph Department. Still I am asked by members of the Opposition if the Monroe Government doing anything to change things that existed in the past. Yes they are, but you cannot expect them to make golden roads in this country within the short time of nine or ten months. Mr. Monroe has been left legacies that no previous Prime Minister was ever left in this country, in view of recent disclosures when he goes to sleep to-night he does not know what he will have to face in the morning as a result of the misrule and mismanagement of this country's affairs for the years 1920, 1921, 1922 and 1923. Now another matter I would like to refer to is that there are bills in the Post Office to-day for $88,000.00 that the Monroe Government has to face. Bills for repairs, etc., to old steamers that were given to us, we thought, as a gift. There are coal bills that came in from Fortuna Bay for the years 1922-23. Why were all these bills left over? I would certainly like to know. I would also like to take this opportunity of saying that if the Auditor General had been given the slightest backing from the Finance Minister of the late administration things would have been different than what they are. I was speaking to a certain man in connection with a certain office in the Post Office and in answer to a question I put to him he said that his accounts had not been audited for five years. I asked him why?

Office Orders in a day and when he forgot to enter in the books of the department. The Member for Trinity was not man enough to acknowledge that $15,000 had been spent in his district. An expenditure of $400 to clear away boulders from a school in Knight's Cove had been criticized. This work had been promised to be done for the past fifteen years, and was in every way justifiable. The Minister took occasion to answer some criticism as the Prospero calling at ports in Bonavista Bay to the neglect of Trinity Bay, and remarked that some people are so thick skinned that they can't be made to keep quiet. He declared that the Government was doing all possible for the best interests of Trinity Bay, and the people would find out that Mr. Halfyard was talking more in self-interest than in that of his constituents.

MR. HICKMAN again brought up the matter of the Auditor General's Department, and cited several sections of the Audit Act to show the scope of the Auditor General. He believed that the irregularities reported should never have occurred and he quoted from the Audit Act to show that the Auditor's work could cover every system in the Government, and further he had nothing to fear in carrying out the law as he could not be dismissed except on the authority of the House. He did not think the Act could be improved on. Though the Auditor General's Department was responsible for all the irregularities of the past few years. He thought that Howley and Crummeys and other auditors should be put under the Auditor General.

After some short discussion the vote for the department passed and the committee was given leave to sit again to-morrow. The remainder of the order paper was deferred and the House adjourned at 11.30 until this afternoon at 3 p.m.

MR. HICKMAN again brought up the matter of the Auditor General's Department, and cited several sections of the Audit Act to show the scope of the Auditor General. He believed that the irregularities reported should never have occurred and he quoted from the Audit Act to show that the Auditor's work could cover every system in the Government, and further he had nothing to fear in carrying out the law as he could not be dismissed except on the authority of the House. He did not think the Act could be improved on. Though the Auditor General's Department was responsible for all the irregularities of the past few years. A Tragedy of Errors

If the story told yesterday in the House of Assembly of our Postal Telegraph Service were reproduced on a music hall stage, it would prove the hit of the season, but it would be an impossibility to convince the audience that the farce they had witnessed was in fact no comedy, but a grim tragedy which had taken place in real life, in the twentieth century, in a British Colony, and under the eyes of the men who had been entrusted with its affairs by the voice of the people.

We are told of two outpost postmasters (one of whom by the way had never been officially appointed), who had handled between them a sum of money considerably over half a million dollars, practically without supervision, without any recognized system of keeping accounts, and without even a safe in which to keep the cash. Here were two officers, if the shacks provided can be described as such, which were handling relatively far more business than Headquarters, where officials were tumbling over one another for lack of something to occupy them, and when one of these men applies for 'a relief' in order to take a holiday, he is sent a letter carrier, whose knowledge of the money order business could easily be written on the space of a postage stamp.

of dollars, to have occurred in the General Post Office. No one as yet has been found guilty of the offences. In other departments of the Public Service huge deficits have been discovered for which no one can be held responsible. Now, because the Government are taking steps to bring the guilty to justice, or to free the service of those who have proved themselves incapable, or undeserving of a position of trust; because an attempt is being made to close the leaks and save the public funds, their actions are criticised in some quarters or a political motive is suggested.

Last year the people elected the Monroe Party for the special purpose of cleaning up the mess which was shown by Mr. T. Hollis Walker to exist. The speech of the Hon. Sir John Crosbie proves that the work has been undertaken seriously, but unfortunately it also reveals other gossypol, the existence of which were not previously suspected. These too have to be drained off however unpleasant the task, and however greatly it adds to the responsibilities of the Government. In this work they will have the full support of the people who at last realize that it is their money which has been stolen just as truly as if the thieves had picked their pockets.

In a community such as this where the great mass of the people are industrious, honest and upright, and not by any means over-endowed with wealth, it is intolerable that those who were in charge of public affairs had such little regard for their sacred responsibilities as to allow these practices to continue unchecked, and particularly during those trying years when the country as a whole was fighting gallantly to keep its head above water. We have cause to voice a prayer of thankfulness to Providence alone that we survived.

Exhibition of Sea Trout

On exhibition in the grocery store window of Messrs. Bowring Bros., are four large sea trout, averaging from 5 1/2 to 10 pounds. These were caught by Messrs. R. H. Simms and E. V. Spry, at a place called "Knock Out Gut," Conception Bay. The display is one of the finest of the local species ever seen here, and has been the attraction for many citizens who pass in that direction.

Malakoff on Dock at Harbor Grace

The steamer Malakoff, in charge of Capt. M. G. Dalton, left port yesterday morning and proceeded to Harbor Grace, where she will go on dock today to have her rudder post replaced. Eight mechanics went by the ship to work on the job. The Malakoff, it will be remembered, met with damage to her rudder last fall, while on the Bonavista Bay route.

The Viking in the Gulf reports the weather fine and clear with Cape Ray abeam. The Viking is evidently bound home and her arrival will be expected on Thursday. Obituary

MISS AGATHA McDONALD. The springtime, when the warm sunshine is calling forth from the earth the first green shoots of returning life and sending new vigor through even the sluggish veins of age, is, above all, the season of youth. Yet it sometimes happens that at this very time a young life suddenly goes out and the earth takes to its bosom a worn out letter of the soil. Thus it was when on Tuesday morning, after Requiem mass the mortal remains of Agatha, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. McDonald, Newbridge, were returned to Mother Earth.

"Youth and the opening rose may look like things too glorious for decay," yet a few pale flowers that had survived the frosts of winter went down with her into the grave, round which the Children of Mary gathered to pay their last respects to one who though only thirteen, had been a faithful member of the Sodality for more than two years, and the first of their number too, to look behind the veil.

Although living at some distance, Agatha was a familiar figure in the church, to which her frequent visits ceased only a month ago, when a severe cold developed into meningitis which proved fatal. In the family circle she will be greatly missed by her eight brothers and the one sister, Anna, who was her constant companion. Her schoolmates, too will miss her bright presence from the examination class; but God, whose ways are not our ways, has called her to the great Examination for which her innocent life was the most perfect preparation.—COM.

Here and There.

LAST NIGHT'S MERCURY.—The thermometer at the Valley Nurseries last night, registered eight degrees of frost.

DIGBY REPORTS.—Last midnight a message was received from the Digby to the Furness Withy Co., stating that the ship was then 52 miles east of St. John's.

Important Fishery Matters Discussed

At the invitation of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries a number of merchants met the Fishery Board at the Grenfell Hall this forenoon when matters in relation to the industry were discussed. Capt. Winsor occupied the chair. Mr. J. C. Hepburn delivered a very instructive address on the unsatisfactory conditions of all the markets due to the sending over steamer load after steamer load of fish without any consideration being given to the state of the market. The speaker's address was replete with statistics and contained many valuable suggestions. Speaking on standardization and cull of fish he urged that the fal gal system should be abolished. The general feeling of the meeting was in favor of the idea. Other speakers were Sir Michael Cashin, L. E. Outerbridge, Hon. P. Templeman, J. Swalgrave and W. A. Munn. It was regretted that so few people attended. All the merchants had been invited, yet seven of the largest exporting firms did not even send a representative. Quite a number of the Fishery Board were also absent. The Grenfell hall had been hired under the impression that the gathering would be large, but the Fishery Board could easily seat those who turned up.

Forty-Six Years in the Service of the Public—The Evening Telegram

S. Neptune
First Arrival From Seal Fishery

HAILS FOR 19,100 SEALS.

The sealing steamer Neptune, under command of Captain George Barbour, first of the fleet to arrive from the seal fishery, entered port at 4.30 yesterday, having for 19,100 old seals, equivalent to the weight of 27,000. Yesterday afternoon a large number of citizens lined the waterfront to witness the arrival, as the ship passed inside Chinmen from the North Battery and several volleys of musketry were fired, mostly as a welcome to the harbour and his hardy crew. Captain Barbour looked very deep, particularly after she steamed towards the quarantine grounds. The medical officer proceeded on board and gave the ship a clean bill of health, while she moored at Job's side. After the ship had been checked safely, Messrs. R. B. and H. E. Brooks, Directors of Job's side, with Mr. Maurice Taylor, proceeded on board and extended a very welcome home to the Captain and crew.

Capt. Barbour looked quite well after a trip of four weeks at the foot of the North, and reported that the entire crew was in excellent health, with the exception of one man, named Aubrey, who suffered from the influenza which he contracted at Pool's Island on the way south.

Speaking of the voyage, Captain Barbour said it was about the worst for the sea and dirty weather in the history of his experience. Fog, rain and wind with seals wandering all over the ocean, were the prevailing conditions. "Do you know," he said "I did not see a seal for nine successive days." It was really fortunate for the ship that the seals were struck at all, because it was impossible to see them and to place the men on the water to kill or pick up seals, was no easy matter. Despite the heavy drizzle the men suffered no ill effects. Not one single accident occurred, and every man returned safely on board ship. Had it not been for the fog, Captain Barbour believed that all the ships would have been in the southern patch that the Neptune struck, he stated. The seals averaged from 55 to 59 pounds. The Neptune could make good for another thousand seals, but owing to the heavy rolling of the ship and the heavy swell which prevailed during the spring, the seals were soft and started to run, and on another evening when the storm came on again broke up the ice it was used to bear up for home.

Capt. Barbour is anxious to make another trip to the icefields to reach the million mark for that ship. He believes that good work can yet be done with the old ones as long as the holds together. The unloading of the ship will take about three days, and he hopes to get away from here on Saturday.

THE VOYAGE.
The Neptune, with the others of the fleet, sailed from St. John's for the seal fishery on the morning of the 14th of March. Good progress was made down the shore in open water and the following night, when the ice was met, the ship was then directed in a N.E. direction, with the ice, Thetis and Terra Nova in company. After steaming for a few hours rough closely packed ice the ship became jammed and burnt down for the night. On Wednesday morning the ship was started, and shaping a course for the open water, made good headway until open water was reached, when the ship's course was again changed to N.E. The Eagle, Thetis and Terra Nova were steaming side by side at that day and at 9.30 on the following morning the S.O.S. call of the Stella Maris was picked up and relayed to the Prospero. The position of the distressed steamer or even the Prospero could not be ascertained, although the message stated the Stella Maris was miles S.W. of the Prospero.

TO THE RESCUE.
The Neptune with the other three ships then turned about and steamed course S. by W. all day without seeing a sign of the disabled steamer. During the night bad weather came and all four ships were obliged to lie down until daylight. Later word was received from the Prospero that the Stella Maris's crew had been rescued at 6 o'clock on the morning of the 12th. The ice then became loose and broken with the heavy swell and the Neptune got free and headed N.W. and W. a distance of 20 miles when she ran into a small pack of hoofs. The ship became jammed that night and did not get free until three days later. During this time the crew were on the ice and killed and skinned 3,000, with the Terra Nova, but she was not quite near enough to do anything with the seals. All pans had been hauled on and the ship went to the eastward and struck the eastern part of the seal pack, about 70 miles N.E. of the Punks. The ship again became jammed but the crew went on the ice and cleaned up the balance of the pack.

STRUCK FIRST WHITECOATS.
Late in the afternoon the ship again made good headway and before night-fall on the 20th of March the first whitecoats were struck. The crew lost no time and killed and skinned 1,000, and on the next day, the 21st, 2,500 were accounted for. Thick foggy weather then set in, the ice loosened and the seals got scattered. However, despite the prevailing conditions the men did a good day's work on the 22nd when they killed and skinned 5,000. On the 23rd several hundred more seals were killed and the men were engaged picking up pans and hauling on board. During these days the men worked very hard and at times they lost sight of their ship. The master watches kept the men in bunches and by the use of pocket compasses their ship was located. By the 28th of March the pack had been cleaned up and the seals skinned down. On several occasions many of the pans were lost sight of, only to be recovered again by a brief lifting of the fog. The Neptune then proceeded north a distance of 30 miles and saw the Terra Nova for the first time in a week. The Neptune followed the line of seals through dense fog, picking up a scattered few here and there. On one day in particular 700 were secured and on the day following an additional 600 were taken. During the nine day period in which the ship was in the fat net once did the sun appear. Had conditions been more suitable the ship would have greatly augmented her catch. For the next two or three days the Neptune steamed about in all directions in quest of the young seals but they had taken to the water. On Wednesday last the ship steamed into the whelping ice, but all the seals had gone, and the only course left open then was to cruise about in search of the old ones. During the next few days good work was done, but the ice was too bad to send the men on. On Thursday last the ship ran into some old seals when 1,500 sealers were shot and panned, while an additional fifty were batted by the men the following day. On Friday and Saturday the crew were out and picked up the balance of old ones, and despite the bad condition of the ice all the seals were recovered and placed aboard. Saturday a storm came on with heavy swell and broke up the ice. The ship was then 20 miles N.E. of the Punks, and late that evening Capt. Barbour decided to bear up for home.

The Neptune's catch consists of 11,000 young hares, 5,200 young hocks and 2,400 bedlamers, making a total of 18,600. She is pretty full below decks with a few hundred in pounds on the after deck. Eighty tons of coal are still left in the bunkers.

Fifteen sealers of the ill-fated Stella Maris were captured by the Neptune.

From what Capt. Barbour could gather from some of the men, it appears that the Stella Maris received a hard buffeting on the night after leaving port as the result of a storm and began to leak badly. Early Wednesday morning the water gained so rapidly that the captain ordered the S. O. S. call to be sent out, and made for the only pan of ice which was a few hundred yards to starboard. The ship reached this pan in the nick of time, and about fifteen minutes later she split in two and went down by the head. Only a few of the men saved their belongings and a rather anxious time was spent by the men all that day, until 5 o'clock in the evening when the Prospero hove in sight and took the men off. Full particulars of the Stella Maris's accident will be given in publicity after the arrival of Capt. George Whiteley, who is at present on the Prospero.

The work of discharging commenced at eleven o'clock this morning, the men having agreed to last year's price with the probability of a slight increase.

Won't buy cigars or cigarettes; won't pay street car fare; not enough for the daily papers; won't pay for a shave or a sheshine; you wouldn't offer it to a crossing-sweeper; you can't use it for the church collection; it won't pay for a registered letter and won't be accepted for a phone call. U.S. FIDELITY & GUARANTY CO.
J. J. LACEY, Nfld. General Agent.

Following the hopeless hunch that he would get a match with Jack Dempsey, the big colored boy would not consider an offer to meet Gibbons. Indirectly he let it be known that he would listen if any promoter would talk in terms of $50,000, and that put the silence on all promoters.

Instead of getting a good shot this summer, Willis will now have to go back to the Bartley Maddens and the second-rates that he has been using for years. The only match in sight for him now is one with Joe Stoesell, a big former amateur, who is to take less than a fortune for the chance.

Officially, the Gibbons-Tunney match will be made this afternoon when the boys will gather for the cameramen and other publicity. The match was really made yesterday, Eddie Kane, Gibbons' manager, was given his money, and William Gibbons, Tunney's manager, will get his end when he arrives to-day from Chicago.

There seems to be a tradition that the making of an important match is a ceremony that has to be photographed with all the principals staring at a slip of paper. Otherwise it would have been announced officially last night that the fight was really on.

Tunney is the American light-heavyweight champion, but his title will not be at stake. The two can come in as heavy as they desire.

Gibbons announced after he had knocked out Kid Nortolk that he did not care to return to the cruiser class and Tunney has taken on so much weight that he does not care about the title.

Willis is practically out in the cold now. Jimmy D. Forest, matchmaker for the Polo Grounds Athletic Club, said to-day that he was figuring on matching the winner with Paul Berlenbacher, the former amateur wrestler, or with Mike McGigue, the world's light-heavyweight champion. He said he had not made any plans to use Willis for any show during the summer.

Eddie Kane said that Gibbons would finish his training in New York, and Tunney, who is now working at Hot Springs, will do his training here also.

When it became known that the match was on several big bets were made. Gibbons is now 8 to 5 favourite to win.

VIC MAULAY WILL COMPETE IN BOSTON MARATHON, APRIL 30.

HALIFAX, N.S., March 30.—Victor McAulay, member of Canada's 1924 Olympic team, and Maratime Province long distance champion, will compete in the Boston Marathon to be held on April 30, running under the colors of the Amateur Athletic Club of Shubencadie, N.S. This will be McAulay's fourth attempt in the Boston classic, he having captured sixth position last year and fourth in 1922.

In 1923 he was forced to retire.

BOUTS AT PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—Danny Kramer, Philadelphia, featherweight, easily won the judges' decision last night over Tommy Noble, of England, at the end of their 10-round bout. Kramer, leading from the start, was given nearly every round. Noble weighed 131 and Kramer 124 1-2.

In the 8-round semi-windup Bobby Wolgast, Atlantic City, defeated Joey Schwartz, Detroit.

Terrence O'Moore, who claims the featherweight championship of Ireland, was given the judges' decision over Steve Delaney, Philadelphia, after six rounds. O'Moore scored two knockdowns.

NEW FEATHER CHAMPION.

LONDON, March 31.—George McKenzie, of Leigh, Scotland, lost his title of featherweight champion of Great Britain last night, when he was outpointed by Johnny Curley, of Lambeth, in a 20-round contest at the National Sporting Club here. It was a strenuous fight throughout, with the Scotsman carrying the fight to his opponent. Curley made splendid use of his right hand, landing effectively with hooks, swings and uppercuts, and he soon took a commanding lead.

The titleholder improved after the first six rounds and scored with a variety of blows. At the way it looked as if he would have no trouble in retaining the championship, as he appeared to be the fresher of the two—but Curley went ahead with a rush in the last few rounds, and won a fine fight by a small margin. The verdict proved a popular one—the new champion being loudly cheered by the big crowd.

FITZ WINS IN A ROUND.

NEWARK, N.J., March 31.—Bob Fitzsimmons, son of the former heavyweight champion, scored a one-round knockout victory here last night over Eddie Civil, of Ashland, Ky. Fitzsimmons felled his opponent twice with left hooks before he was counted out. Civil weighed 211, Fitzsimmons 183.

RATNER KNOCKED OUT.

BOSTON, March 30.—Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo middleweight, scored a technical knockout over Augie Ratner, of New York early in the second round of their scheduled ten-round bout here to-night.

After forcing Ratner to cover throughout the first round, although boxing cautiously, Slattery opened an attack in the second which drove Ratner into the Buffalo boxer's corner. There, without a return, he hammered Ratner's head with a score of blows before he went down. Ratner, with his hands at his sides, was unable to cover up.

When he went down his seconds immediately tossed a towel into the ring. Slattery picked him up and carried him to his corner, where he was revived. Slattery weighed 164 1-2; Ratner 162.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR THE GRIPPE.

This ought to be a good year for Potatoes and other Vegetables. They say: "we shall have great growing weather." Growing crops want plenty of food. Fertilizers feed your crops—provided that you use the right kind of Fertilizers.

Farmers' Favourite Fertilizers

The kind we are selling are guaranteed, well balanced, finely divided, plant foods, containing the essential fertilizing elements in available form.

Special Potato Fertilizer in 125 lb. Bags.	Turnip & Cabbage Fertilizer in 125 lb. Bags.	Extra Quality Bonemeal in 125 lb. Bags.	Refined Nitrate of Soda in 125 lb. Bags.

NOTICE! Fertilizer, properly used, should increase your crops at least 40 per cent. Where you get 10 barrels of potatoes without fertilizer, you should get 14 to 16 barrels with fertilizer. For every dollar spent on fertilizer you should get back two or four dollars profit, through increased crop yield.

Get your ground ready (when it is dry) as soon as you can. Plow it deep and harrow it well. If yours is a small garden, dig it to a depth of twelve inches, then rake it thoroughly.

A few days before you put in your seed, spread Fertilizer over the surface and rake it in. For potatoes, put Fertilizer in the bottom of drills and mix it with the earth.

A 125 pound bag of Fertilizer will do a quarter of an acre if you are using it with stable manure. Double this quantity if you are not using stable manure.

USE FARMERS FAVOURITE FERTILIZERS FOR BEST RESULTS.

"SAFETY FIRST"

"Safety First" will be staged by St. Mary's Dramatic Troupe for the first time on April 13th in St. Mary's Hall and will be repeated on successive nights.

This new and sparkling farce has a story of sustained interest, abounding in mirth-provoking situations. Its leading role is that of an innocent and inoffensive young husband, Jack Montgomery, who is plunged into the abyss of the law after trying to rescue a Turkish maiden from the hands of the police. Jack and his chum Jerry visit Zuleika to aid the interests of Jack's cousin, Elmer Flannel, a shirking young man. Jack, Jerry and Zuleika are arrested and sentenced to thirty days in jail.

In order to keep the disgrace from Jack's wife, Mabel, tell them that they are going to a convention of Shriners by boat. The scheme works and Mabel and Virginia bid them a tearful farewell. In the second act the ladies have received word from the steamboat company that Jack and Jerry are not to be found on board and have probably been washed overboard and drowned. They are heart-broken and don't deep mourning for the loved ones they never expect to see again.

Jack and Jerry, in jail, know nothing of this, and when their thirty days expire they return to the ladies full of joy and explanations of their wonderful trip to Florida. It takes some tall explaining to show why they were not drowned, and when Mrs. Bridger, the mother of the girls, learns that Zuleika has been missing for thirty days, she naturally thinks that she accompanied the boys to Florida. Mabel decides to return to her mother's roof and never see Jack again.

The third act straightens out the tangle after a series of laughable events culminating in an elopement down a ladder in which Jack, who thinks he is eloping with Mabel, his wife, finds that the lady he is running away with is the Irish cook, Mary O'Finerty.

The play moves briskly along with culminating effect, incident succeeds incident, and the act endings are quick and snappy with plenty of movement for everybody. The characters are equally balanced, as everyone in the play has a great opportunity to impress the audience and add to the laughable situations. This play will prove a success even in the hands of the youngest or most inexperienced actors, and will please any kind of an audience, however finicky.

Sugar or Molasses. A gallon of Molasses which retails for about 90 cents to one dollar, contains from 6 to 7 pounds of Sugar, and at one dollar per gallon, the sugar content costs over 12 cents per pound; therefore molasses as a sweetening agent is more expensive than sugar. A good quality of soft sugar will be found much better and cheaper than molasses for use in cakes, puddings, sweet bread, etc. Twelve ounces of soft sugar equals one pint of molasses. It must be borne in mind that all soft sugars are not equally good. One of the best is Lantic Brown Sugar. This excellent sugar is sold out of bulk, at 8 cents per pound, and at this price it equals molasses at about 50 cents per gallon. If you like coffee try it this way:—Use a tablespoon measure of any high grade coffee to each cup of water, bring to boiling point, then strain (use same quantities in your percolator) Your coffee liquor is now ready to use. Now take a half cup of the coffee liquor fill up with hot milk, sweeten with Lantic Brown Sugar and drink a beverage fit for the gods. Lantic Brown Sugar dissolved in hot water makes a delicious syrup for pan cakes, puddings, etc. It is wholesome and tasty. Children like it on bread. Don't forget, sugar is a real food. Lantic Brown Sugar is practically good molasses refined and solidified. The water and impurities are removed in refining.—mar10, tu, th, f

A Word for the Expert Cooper

Dear Sir—It is both hopeful and refreshing to note that our Legislators as expressed in their speeches, are about to take active and intelligent steps to speed up the development of our varied and valuable resources, it must be admitted that in the past the public have been so surfeited with an overdose of projects more or less visionary, that their faith as to any material benefit to accrue has been unmistakably shaken.

But we have reason to hope that now an honest and determined effort is about to be made. The orations in both Chambers of our Legislature at the present session are of a high order, and remind us agreeably of the masterful efforts of the intellectual giants of a past generation, and although we haven't had the pleasure of reading or listening to the views of some of our representatives as yet we are looking forward to having that pleasure before the session ends. As the motto of the present Government is a Square Deal to all, and the course which they are steering is Honesty of Purpose, let us hope that there will be no lagging behind, and no matter what sacrifices or personal inconveniences they may be called upon to make in the uplift of the country and its people they will be given cheerfully, so that with an eye single to the advancement and prosperity of the Colony, there can be no doubt but in a short time the gloom and uncertainty which have hitherto pervaded the atmosphere, will soon be brushed aside by the rays of bright prosperity.

We have in this country to-day Black Coal, White Coal and Petroleum, the driving power of the world's industries, all waiting to be hatched up. The Island is a vast bed of minerals that the world needs, and the time must come, perhaps sooner than we think when an intense development of our resources will be entered on, with all that that means behind it. The hope and success of this country lies in the development of its minerals, its timber industries and its agriculture. The development of the fisheries has been advocated time after time, and tried out to a certain extent, but are we any further ahead to-day, are we as far ahead as we were say twenty-five years ago? I don't think so. We imported experts here and paid them fat fees for the knowledge which they were supposed to impart. They then wished us a courteous adieu, left our shores and we are still waiting for the improvement which was to result from their respective and well paid visits. I have read an article recently in which fishermen are advised to be used by our fishermen in order to test the temperature of the water, so that the fishermen would know the proper place to set his trap or throw out his gannet to be assured of a catch of cod. We know by reading what Science and scientists have done throughout the world, that some of their attainments and discoveries are to say the least, amazing and perhaps their advocacy of thermometers may be alright in the prosecution of the fishery, but it comes as a sort of a jolt when reading the speech of Capt. W. Winsor, a seal and fish killer of high repute and second to none, in which he says that he fished in Ryan's Bay on Northern Labrador, when the cod-fish were poking their noses through the slab ice.

There is a feeling all around that the appointment of Capt. Winsor to the office of Minister of Fisheries means the right man in the right place, and there is no doubt but time will show the accuracy of this feeling. That he can be relied upon to apply his matured experience to the most important of our resources at present. The world-famed fisheries of Newfoundland are an inexhaustible mine of gold, which has been giving freely of its treasures before ever thermometers were thought of or conceived and will continue to do so.

We are told by those who profess to know, and whom we have no reason to doubt, that the quality of our fish has no equal in the world. That being an admitted fact it goes to show that mother Nature has performed her work well and has been prolific in her gifts to us, but unfortunately it is after her creation is taken from its natural home the ocean and comes into our hands the trouble commences. Naturally the question is asked what is wrong and what is the remedy? To such a man as our present Minister I must leave the solution of this problem, and if perfection handling of the containers to be used in this industry, and which plays a very important part in the successful conduct of a fishery which should be a good second to that of our great staple the codfishery. It is well known that in the past, inferior packages were to a large extent the cause of our herring being in bad condition, when arriving in the different markets. Any old package was considered to be good enough for the purpose, some were packed even in used molasses barrels. One would think it was guana instead of food by the appearance of the packages. Now that we are to have a standardised package, perfect in every particular as to manufacture and size, I am positive that the making of those containers should be placed exclusively in the hands of those qualified to make them. I mean the cooper who has had practical experience at this work, as there is certain detail work in the making of packages in order that they keep the contents in good condition, which is unknown by the merry-mander but which is essential in every respect. Like other Coopers in the city the writer has handled a share of packages both in the making as well as in the handling of them in preparation for market.

cannot be attained in a year, at least we feel confident that the handling and cure will show a satisfactory improvement in the near distant future. I notice that an important Proclamation with regard to the conduct of our Herring fishery has appeared in that bright and breezy little weekly, The Searchlight. Without any idea of disparaging that Journal in the least, I would strongly suggest that the Proclamation be given to the daily papers also in order to have it circulated largely.

The writer of these lines does not feel competent nor has he the presumption to make any remarks on the packing or curing of the herring, as he well knows before expressing views on any subject he must know what he is talking about, and be in a position to give reasons if called upon to do so. But, Sir, there is one phase of the matter I feel I can express my views without fear of successful contradiction, and that is the making and of the containers to be used in this industry, and which plays a very important part in the successful conduct of a fishery which should be a good second to that of our great staple the codfishery. It is well known that in the past, inferior packages were to a large extent the cause of our herring being in bad condition, when arriving in the different markets. Any old package was considered to be good enough for the purpose, some were packed even in used molasses barrels. One would think it was guana instead of food by the appearance of the packages. Now that we are to have a standardised package, perfect in every particular as to manufacture and size, I am positive that the making of those containers should be placed exclusively in the hands of those qualified to make them. I mean the cooper who has had practical experience at this work, as there is certain detail work in the making of packages in order that they keep the contents in good condition, which is unknown by the merry-mander but which is essential in every respect. Like other Coopers in the city the writer has handled a share of packages both in the making as well as in the handling of them in preparation for market.

The writer of these lines does not feel competent nor has he the presumption to make any remarks on the packing or curing of the herring, as he well knows before expressing views on any subject he must know what he is talking about, and be in a position to give reasons if called upon to do so. But, Sir, there is one phase of the matter I feel I can express my views without fear of successful contradiction, and that is the making and Start out by filling in the words of which you feel reasonably sure. These will give you a clue to other words crossing them, and they in turn will clue others. A letter belongs in each white space, words starting at the numbered squares and running either horizontally or vertically or both.

The chief of those is to have none but competent mechanics engaged in the manufacture. Let the Department see that all barrels are of a standard size, convex or round quarter. ON KNOWING WHEN TO BE SLACK.

It is a fine thing to strive for personal efficiency. It is an excellent thing to be systematic. It is a wonderful thing to have so much self-command that you can make yourself do all the things you ought to do.

Where there is altogether too much of these qualities in the world, the world is the poorer.

I think that there are some people who have too much of them, and get into a state of mind in which they are systematic, so efficient, so thoroughly in command of their nerves that they really do them harm.

Where To Break Training.

It is a good thing to keep oneself alert in order to be able to successfully run the race of life.

It is also a good thing to know when to break training.

Do not be too hard on yourself—you are that strange tendency to see the average person's instincts as an yourself once in awhile, yourself go slack.

It is in the New England vocabulary the epitome of all the most desirable qualities. But do not forget that in its literal meaning it is a state of mind, and too much of it is a bad thing.

Why don't you sometimes?

She looked at me in horror!

Just the same I think it might do her soul so much good to actually go to bed without brushing her teeth.

William Milligan on "A Common Cold"

William Milligan lectured to a group of people in Preston Town on "A Common Cold, what it is, and how to prevent it."

"Much lowering of vitality and predisposition to infection is engendered by faulty habits of clothing. Over-clothing is almost as much a danger as under-clothing. Civilization demands that we should be clothed, but it does not demand that we should be encased from head to foot with heavy non-absorbent materials, nor that we should neglect suitable covering over the more vulnerable parts of our bodies."

"The maintenance of the normal contractile power of the skin is essential to health, and this is obtained neither by too much clothing nor by too little; in fact, a certain amount of cold should always be allowed to reach the skin of young people. It stimulates them and invites them to take exercise. Clothing, especially that worn next the skin, should be of an absorbent material, capable of taking up moisture from the skin."

"Flannel or wool which is usually worn is a non-conductor of heat, but it is non-absorbent, whereas cotton, linen, and silk, from the fact that they contain no air spaces, are not warm materials, but are highly absorbent. It is, however, possible to-day to manufacture flannel so as to make it an absorbent material, and cotton, linen, and silk in such a way as to contain air spaces, and therefore warm."

"Ha, ha," cried Mr. Sharp-tooth, on seeing Sammy Skunk creeping under the Big Red Barn. "I suppose he thinks he will clear out all the rats and mice from this building. Dear me, he looks mighty thin. He must be hungry," and the old rat hastened away to hide. Just then Old Sic'em, the King Farmer's Dog, walked out of his little kennel house. The chain was not fastened to his collar, and he smelled the scent from Sammy's fur overcoat, the old dog barked and started to follow, his nose close to Sammy's.

"Bow, wow, wow. I smell a skunk. He must have come out of his winter bunk."

barked Old Sic'em, who by this time had reached the Big Red Barn.

"Wonder what Old Sic'em is barking at?" thought the Kind Farmer, laying down the Almanac and getting up from his easy chair. "Guess I'll go out and see."

"Dear me, everybody is awake," sighed Sammy Skunk. "Sorry I'm so far from home, and he ran over to the Old Stone Fence.

"Sic'em, Sic'em," shouted the Kind Farmer, "What's the matter?" But the old dog was now out of hearing, having followed the trail of Sammy Skunk along the Old Stone Fence and down to the Pleasant Pasture, so the Kind Farmer went back into the house to read by the evening lamp.

Poor Old Sic'em never caught Sammy Skunk, for on finding an empty burrow, that wise fellow crept in to hide, and the ground being still frozen, Old Sic'em at last gave up digging and trotted off home.

Meantime Little Jack Rabbit, whom we left in the last story on his way to the Big Brown Bear's Cozy Cave, hopped along under the stars that peeped down through the leafless branches of the Shady Forest. By and by he came to Mr. Bear's front door, under which ting lights twinkled into the darkness.

"Maybe the Big Brown Bear is reading a Little Jack Rabbit book," thought the bunnny boy, and for a minute he hesitated before knocking on the door.

"Tip, tap, tipperly tap! He rapped with his candy cane. "Who's there?" asked a low, deep growly voice.

"Before he could knock again. "It's me," answered the little rabbit, although he should have said "It's L' Little Reader.

"Come in, come in," he kindly cried. "I've something to make you wonder-eyed."

"What is it?" asked the little rabbit, taking off his khaki cap as he wiped his feet on the doormat.

And in the next story, Little boys and girls, you shall hear what was in the Cozy Cave to surprise the bunnny boy.

Cambridge Wins Annual Boat Race From Oxford Crew

Light Blues Finish Course Alone When Oxford Boat Becomes Waterlogged.

LONDON, March 28.—With the Oxford boat hopelessly waterlogged and unable to continue, Cambridge Saturday afternoon finished the course alone and won the 77th annual boat race, over the historic 4-mile course from Putney to Mortlake.

Yesterday's victory for the Light Blues brings their total number of victories up to 36, four less than that of their rivals, while one of the series, that of 1877, resulted in a tie.

Cambridge probably would have won in any event, for the light blue crew manifestly was the better eight, but what happened to their opponents might have happened to them but for the luck of the toss.

This gave Cambridge the sheltered side of the river, where on the first bend into the wind they could escape the worst of the toosing water.

Oxford began shipping water soon after completing the first mile and the dark blues rowing gradually became slower and more labored as the boat filled and began to sink at the bow.

Every pint that shipped into the shell made it easier for another quart to come splashing in. Oxford was an obvious distress as their boat, about a dozen lengths or more behind the Cambridge eight, passed under the Hammersmith Bridge. A few seconds as the dark blue-tips labored past the two mile mark, it was obvious that they were doomed to a disastrous drenching.

The coaches began calling to the crew to quit, a thing no crew has ever done in this race, until its boat had sunk or crossed the finish line. So naturally, or perhaps they did not hear the megaphoned voice of their master, the Oxonians were pulling away laboriously for a quarter of a mile more before they gave up and pulled in toward the banks.

Cambridge by then a quarter of a mile or so in front and slackening their pace paddled on easily to the finish.

PUTNEY, Eng., March 28.—The Oxford and Cambridge crews took the water this afternoon for their 77th annual boat race on the Putney-to-Mortlake course along the Thames.

Cambridge won the toss and chose to row on the Middlesex or north shore, which furnished protection from the biting north wind which roughened the water.

The experts said this gave the advantage to Cambridge, which even before the toss was a general favorite.

The crews got away at 3.45 p.m. The water was very rough, especially

MORE BRIEF.

I walked with my aunt by the sea. I sat with my aunt on the shore; I said to my aunt, "Hilly chee, my troubles are making me sore. I toil at my wearisome task, I work like a blithering slave, and seldom can put in a cask the coin I am anxious to save. Whenever a kopeck is earned, ground out by my pibtry mills, behold it must straightway be burned, or spent in the payment of bills. There's always a bill that is due, there's always a statement unpaid; I have to dig up for a shoe or put down the rocks for a spade. It is so expensive to live my life is a frost and a bore; the money, like milk through a sieve, is gone, and I see it no more. It goes to the grocer for prunes, it goes to the butcher for bones; and are you surprised if my times have solemn and heartrending tones?" "The habit of saving," said she, "is good to a certain extent, but it is a sad thing to be distressed when you plow in a cent. You've saved till your bundie is great, compared with the wad of the poor; and now you are bent nearth a weight of age you can scarcely endure. Full soon you'll be quitting the grind and going where old relics go, and leaving your bundle behind for lawyers and others to blow. So have a good time while you last, your dotage to pleasure devote, and do not be standing aghast whenever you blow in a groat."

As Utterly Different in Results Now As a Year Ago

To the best of our knowledge there had never been a 3-inch motor capable of producing 68 horse-power, a speed of 70 miles an hour, with gasoline economy safely over 20 miles to the gallon, until the Chrysler Six arrived on the market last year. There is no other to-day.

That is what scientific engineering in the way of perfected mass distribution, special combustion chambers and heat distribution does for the Chrysler Six.

There has never before been a motor in which all sense of vibration has been so completely eliminated, never before a car in which side-way and road-weaving are absent, never before a car with an overall length of 160 inches that afforded so much usable space—generously roomy for five large adults.

Examples might be cited by the score. But you can see for yourself how utterly different the Chrysler Six is, and why the eager public bought more than 25,000 Chrysler cars the first year, if you drive the car but a few minutes. We are anxious to give you a Chrysler ride, to prove it the best-built car you ever saw.
