

The Reason Why.
 The reason why the magnificent Retail Grocery Establishments in the Alma Block and on Lower Wyndham Street, belonging to John A. Wood, are so very popular with the intelligent public:—
 Because the Goods are all of the best quality.
 Because the Prices are invariably the lowest.
 Because the Clerks are courteous and obliging.
 Because the Stock is the largest to select from.
 Because the goods are always clean.
 Because the Weights and Measures are always correct.
 Because, in fact, the proprietor understands his business, desires to please his customers, makes good use of his capital, and buys for cash in the best markets, and always deals liberally with those who honor his stores with their custom.—
 These and many other weighty reasons have contributed very largely to make the name of John A. Wood, as connected with the Grocery trade of Guelph, so well known, and his stores so very popular.

Guelph Evening Mercury

MONDAY EVEN'G, OCT. 13, 1873.

Political Items.

Hon. Mr. Langevin has returned to the capital. It is understood that he has not yet found a colleague. This evidence of unpopularity and weakness is regarded as likely to prove damaging to the Administration. It is well understood that no respectable man will accept a portfolio from the Minister of Public Works in the face of an impending adverse vote of Parliament.

A person named Macaulay, who was at Ottawa a few days ago in company with certain ministerial members of the House, is understood to have gone to Manitoba to run for Provencher in the interest of the Government. Macaulay formerly belonged to Trenton, Ontario, and is now a saw-mill owner in Manitoba. The writ for Provencher is understood to have been delayed a long time in consequence of the unpreparedness of the Government, and the cause of the delay will be a subject of Parliamentary enquiry when the House meets.

The Toronto correspondent of the Hamilton Times says:—
 "By degrees the Conservatives here are beginning to admit their belief that John A. & Co. will not survive the meeting of Parliament. This is doubtless resulting from the rumoured unsuccessful efforts made by members of the Cabinet to induce the fourteen Ministerialists to retreat from the position taken on the question of prorogation."

The Reform association of Ottawa proposes giving a grand banquet, on the 23rd inst., to the leader of the Opposition.

The nomination for Provencher, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Sir George Cartier, will take place to-day and the polling next Monday.

The Pacific Scandal in England.
 (By special cablegram to the Globe.)
 LONDON Oct. 11, 1873.

The Pall Mall Gazette says that it is very discouraging to note the tone of the Canadian press on the Pacific Scandal. It had hoped to see some general expression of disapproval of the conduct of Ministers, which must be held to be suspicious if not criminal. It is plain that party loyalty has been stretched too far in excusing Sir John A. Macdonald, and that the discreditable attempts made to divert public attention from Ministers' acts to petty questions as to the publication of private documents, and condemning such publications affecting the character of public men, show the astounding blindness of party spirit.

Sir John is described by a prominent friend and supporter of his, who has been at Ottawa the past week, as very much disheartened by the adverse criticisms of the English press.

The Montreal Gazette learns, from an authentic source, that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has come to an understanding with the Government to surrender the contract, and that the arrangement for its surrender will probably be completed in a few days.

It is no secret in Ottawa that Sir John had no intention of having Parliament called before February next. Lord Dufferin, however, quickened his ideas somewhat, and the shifty Premier was compelled to face the music at a much earlier date.

Evidence in the Flour Inspectors' mandamus is being given. Mr. Esdaille was examined yesterday and deposed that Hutchison made 28 mistakes, equal to one-third of the number of questions asked, while Hon. Mr. Young made far less. This evidence was corroborated by Mr. McDougall.

"REHEARSING FOR THE 23RD INSTANT" is the subject for Grip's "scandalous" pencil this week. There are two cartoons. One represents Mr. Mackenzie as Hamlet, striking a spread-eagle attitude and saying "I will fight him upon this theme until my eyelids will no longer wag." The other has Sir John, as Richard III—the "foul, crook-back'd Gloucester"—clothed in complete armour, and saying compositely "What do I fear?"

HONEST MEN.—At a very large meeting held recently in the township of Tuckersmith, Mr. George Jackson, a wholesale merchant, and a life-long Conservative, of which party he is in Huron a leading member, repeated several times that he could not defend Sir John A. Macdonald's conduct. He held that every candid man must admit Sir John A. Macdonald got the money from Sir Hugh Allan as a bribe, and that Sir John A. Macdonald had used it for the most corrupt purposes. Mr. Jackson further declared that he had not a word to say in defence of the Ottawa Government, and that their corruption was openly admitted by the Premier himself. Dr. Vercoe, of Seaforth, another Conservative, years even further, and in the strongest

An accident occurred at a thrashing machine on Thursday to a young man named David Currie, son of Mr. Hugh Currie, merchant, of Camilla. It appears that the young man was assisting at the thrashing of his father's farm, when he was caught in the gearing of the machine and seriously injured, but no serious results are anticipated.

The Rival Clansmen:

A Scottish Vendetta. CHAPTER III.

THE M'KENZIES BAFLED—AN UNFORTUNATE GIRL—LOCK MAREE—DANGER AGAIN—THURTEEN THE LOWLANDS

"Now, lass, stand ye there," exclaimed Gordon, when they had crossed; "and you, M'Leod, bear a hand here."

As he spoke Ned bent down, and, seizing the ends of the planks which formed the narrow bridge, he gave them a violent wrench.

"No, the gither, an' we're safe."

Hector, too, bent down and seized a plank. A strong pull, and they tore the wood from its fastenings.

"Hurray!" shouted Ned, as, with another effort, he succeeded in unfastening the other side. "Come awa', noo, ye ugly devils, wha daur o' ye."

As he spoke he dropped the planks, which were seized by the tearing, raging flood, and carried away, just as the pursuers arrived at the other side of the stream and discovered that they were foiled, beaten, without having the opportunity of striking a blow.

Our friends did not, however, stay to listen to the wild shouts and imprecations which were uttered against them by the infuriated and now balled clansmen, but at once started along the path leading to the inn at Kinloch-Ewe, from which, Gordon assured them, they were now distant only about a mile and a half.

Flora and Hector were profuse in their expressions of thankfulness and gratitude to Gordon for this second great service he had rendered them; but the Lowlander only laughed, and said that he looked upon the tricking of the pursuers as a good joke, and one out of which he would make great capital when he got to the Lowlands by telling it to his friends and companions.

For a considerable time they continued to advance—latterly in silence—when suddenly Gordon halted, and, peering forward into the darkness, Hector could see a building of some kind outlined before them.

"Noo," said the former, "I think ye'll hae nae farther to gang the night. I'll roose up Gregor! the noo."

As he spoke he advanced to the door and gave a succession of loud knocks.

They stood for a considerable time, but no answer was made to the summons, save by a dog within the house, which had commenced to bark furiously when Gordon first approached the door.

He was just on the point of knocking again when a creaking sound was heard above them; then a window was opened and a voice cried out—

"Oo! haurie cho ammach!" ("Who knocks at this hour?")

"Stay, stay, Gregor," exclaimed Gordon; "nae o' yer ootlandish gibberish tae me. Speak decently, as ony ither Christian body wude dae, an' I'll crack wi' ye, but there's neither head nor tail tae be made o' ye when ye juist open yer mouth an' let yer tongue wallop about without hand or cheek upon't. But—"

"Pless a, it'll pe Mr Gordon!" exclaimed the voice, the owner of which had apparently recognised Ned.

"Ay, deed, it's me, Gregor; but I'm no alone. There's twa freen's wi' me, wha want tae pit up wi' ye the night; an' as they're baith geyan fatiguit, an' as aye o' them's a lady, maybe ye'll get doon as quick's ye can an' open the door."

"A lady wi' yer name! Mr Gordon! Ooh, an' lat will ye pe doin' wi' a leddy thereoot at this oor?"

"It's no juist convenient tae say i' the noo, Gregor, but if me or ony ither body's oot wi' her the next oor it'll be because ye haena opened yer door tae lat us in."

"Och, she'll lat us in, Mr Gordon! Ooh, an' lat will ye pe doin' wi' a leddy thereoot at this oor?"

"I haena speird that at her yet, Gregor. But, lord, man, my neck's growin' sair wi' lookin' up there at ye. Canna ye come awa' doon an' lat us intae the hoose? Ye surely hae a wee for us?"

"Yes, she'll hae room for ye; pit—Lagh than a bhruit!" (to the dog, who was still barking furiously at intervals)—"pet ye was sayin' ye hadna speird at the leddy—cu ay—she'll open the door."

The window was again shut, and after a delay of nearly another quarter of an hour, the sound of a footstep was heard slowly descending the stair. Then the bolt was shot back, and the door opened.

A sick gambler said, "Doctor, I suffer the pains of the damned." "You may think so," responded the physician, "but wait a bit, and you'll know better."

"See Naples and die," says an Italian proverb. "I saw it," says an American traveller, "and survived it; but it was a narrow squeak, for the stench of it nearly killed me."

At the examination of a school not far from London, a young tyro in declamation, who had been told by the teacher that he must gesticulate according to the sense, in commencing a piece with "the comet lifts its fiery ball," lifted the tail of his coat to a horizontal position, causing roars of laughter.

A young Parisian lately thought to frighten a lady into accepting him. He invited her to take a sail on the lake of Geneva with him, and when some distance from shore he threatened to jump overboard if she refused his suit. But she didn't get frightened, and offered to bet him one hundred francs that he daren't dive in—and he didn't.

CATCHING A LITTLE TARTAR.—"So you don't care about donkey riding, Missy. And why?"—"O, I've got a pony, and one doesn't care about donkeys after that, you know?"—"Has a pony got more legs than a donkey then?"—"Missy (who does not like to be chaffed).—Yes; exactly twice as many as some donkeys that I know of!"

"I have come," said a Scotch farmer to a neighbor laird who was just dying; "I have come to settle about that bit of land." "Settle!" cried the old wrangler. "how will you settle? Your father couldna settle, and your grand-father couldna settle, and how will you settle?"—"Oh," said the rival claimant, "I'll let you have it altogether."

"But I'll ne tak' it!" cried the stout old litigant, and turned his face resolutely to the wall.

As we Make It. We must not hope to be movers, and so gather the ripe gold ears, until we have first been sowers, and watered the furrows with tears.

It is not just as we take it— This mystical world of ours: Life's bolt will vibrate as we make it, & harvest of thorns or flowers.

Forty years' experience have tested the virtues of Dr. Winter's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and it is now generally acknowledged to be the best remedy extant for pulmonary and lung diseases, embracing the whole range from a slight cold to a settled consumption. Were it not for its merits, it would long since have died, and made no sign.
