Sometimes a little by-flay amuses the audience at the Grand quite as much as the play itself. An instance of this occurred on Saturday night when the Kendal's were playing "The Queen's Shilling." City Solicitor Biggar (who has attended most of the Kendal performances) came in a little late to his seat near the front row of the orchestra chairs, and about the middle of the first scene stood up to take off his ulster overcoat, Now there are several ways of taking off an overcoat, but the "toniest," way is to slip it off by extending your arms backward and "letting it slide." Mr. Biggas tried this with good success. Not only did the overcoat slide, but his sliklined dress coat slid with it, and for a moment Toronto's City Solicitor stood in full view of the assembled beauty and fashion of the town in his shirts sleeves. The prompt way in which the new Q.C. robed himself again in that dresscoat and sat down with heightened color was something to remember, and delighted the audience almost as much as Mrs. Kendal's perfect presentation of the part of Kate Greville.

Changes of Climate affecting Palitical Opinion:

What new nonsense is this, you will say—about changes of climate affecting public political opinion? Softly, my friend, just give your attention for a little to what the record of experience has to put before use in this matter; and pariange you will see more sense in it than you have as yet imagined. You are sewer that within recent time we have had two rather cool summers in Canada, those of 1897 and 1888. So great was the falling off of the sun's power, that over a considerable portion of Outario there was a partial failure of the grass crop, while the grain crop was in general below the average.

Good scientific authorities tell us that these rears—1887 and 1889, were part of a low or minimum sunspot cycle in which 1899 may liso be, inclinded within the same period—during which both cool summers and remarkably mild winters are apt to occur in these latitudes of ours. Now we may set it down as a thing conceded that, within recent years we to bring it to the attention of the Secretary little business of the control of the sun's power, that over a considerable portion of Outario there was specially such as the probably mild winters are apt to occur in these latitudes of ours. EDITOR WORLD: Science proves that the air wafted by winds which we breathe contains minute particles of living insect matter too minute for vision but which affect the human system. The main thing to study then is, "breathing"—naturally!

During my travels in the far off Northern Australia, the Leichardt district, where the celebrated German, Dr. Leichardt, lost his life in exploration, I noticed some natives with me who knew a little Egglish, so I asked him what those two little sticks tied to the mouth of a little native lying "asleep meant. TWAS ON SUNDAY NIGHT. Big Haul Made in a Victoria-Lane Di orderly House. No. 72 Victoria-lane has had the reputation for the past few weeks of being the toughes ranch in the ward of St. James'. Yesterday tranch in the ward of St. James'. Yesterday the fun became fast and furious and so disgraceful became the scenes enacted in the place that at 11 o'clock last night Inspector. Ward and a posse of seven constables swooped down upon it and arrested all the inmates on charges of keeping and being inmates of a disorderly house.

As Inspector Ward pushed his way in one of the men in the house got behind him and attempted to stab him in the back. A constable saw the gleam of the knife, and with a quick hlow jerked the weapon out of his hand. The name of the man who tried to kill the inspector is Joseph Fenista. There were seven men (all Italians) and five women captured in the raid. Among the males was Frank Murray, a netorious burglar, Giovanni Bennilli, Marco Rocco, Dio Genisto and Joseph Fenista, the man with the dirk. The women are all well known to the police. Their names are: Kate Fuller, (keeper), Martha Young, Minnie O'Brien, Minnie Hillman and Lizzie Murray. With the prisoners the police carried to the station and left in the cells a little nine-year-old girl, the daughter of the woman Murray.

CONTEST. The people cannot be wrong in making choice of the best Ald. Peter Macdonald man for the position of mayor. The circumstances of Toronta are such that she requires the very best exponent of her in-terests and intelligence. A man who is calm, clear-headed and judicial, one who can hold the balance between contending classes and interests with an equal poise, is just the man Toronto wants to be mayor. That she had such a man during the past two years cannot be doubted. He has proved a greater success than his most sanguine friends predicted. To retain him in office is certainly the part of wisdom in the electorate. Toronto cannot have too much of the services of a mayor that has proven himself as competent and efficient as Mayor Clarke. The clamour for change and rotation of the honor is a shallow caprice, with which citizens alive to the true concerns of the city can have no sympathy.

On every occasion when Mayor Clarke has appeared in publicin his official capacity his fellow citizens could not but feel proud of him. His efforts of thought and speech are a happy reflection upon the intelligence of his supporters. He is a most suitable person to be the chief custodian of civic honor and dignity. Toronto could not pos-sibly make a better choice than Clarke for mayor. Russell's Sale
