She "Toad-in" Sued Doctor

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 8.—Miss Florence Ben-Oliel, a lineal descendant of the house of King David and daughter of a missionary in Jerusalem, who is suing on an allegation of malpractice Dr. Crenus Darling, of the University of Michigan, for $1,800, charges that he set her fractured limb, her "pride and comfort," as she told the court, leaving her "toad-in."

Dr. Darling then, she said, refused to repair the damage, a Harper Hospital physician finally doing this.

Miss Ben-Oliel, who is living in Ann Arbor, is a cultured English Christian Jewess and is an exponent of psychology, hypnotism and Emmanuelism. She brought photographs to show the jury how she "toad-in."

The defence denies negligence and will call several witnesses.

An Ardent Ringer

(From the Ojibw Courier)

George saw Nellie home—right to the very door.

Told her he loved her best of all—

Said he would die for her, and Nellie believed him, too.

It was a night in June, the skies were azure blue.

His back was against the door with Nellie by his side.

Nellie answered "Yes," as he asked her to be his bride:

The world looked bright to them, for they were in love's sweet spell—

Till dad opened his chamber window and said, "Well, Nell,

Tell that yep to take his back from our electric bell.

For he's rung it for an hour, and rung it all too well."

The Good Workman

I hired a toiler whose name was John, to come with his weapons and mow my lawn, for long green whiskers were growing there, it badly needed some tender care. And John arrived at the break of day and whittled grass in a cheerful way; the job was fierce, for the weeds had grown, and the dog had scattered some chunks of bone, but John, he labored to beat the band and shaved that lawn with a master hand. He named his price when his work was over, and I gladly coughed up a quarter more. And whenever I find that my lawn is due for a good clean shave or a dry shampoo, I'll hunt up John if I have to trot from the court house clear to the dumping spot, for he does his work as a workman should, and doesn't quit till he finds it good. The streets are haunted by shiftless men, who seek employment and seek again they say that jobs are as hard to find as pearls of price in a melon rind; their hopes are lazy, their chances gone—for most employers are hunting John!

—Walt Mason.

Ancient Royal Tower

A tomb containing the embalmed body of a woman wearing a crown and rich ornaments was discovered recently by a man named Meza at Barta while digging on his land at Gaza, in Palestine. The following translation of the account of the discovery has been sent from Jerusalem by Prof. R. A. S. Macalister to the Palestine Exploration Fund:

"When Meza went to his land and was working and digging in it he found a little door. He entered by it into a cave divided into two chambers, and entering through the second door he found a coffin of hardwood. And he opened it, and in the coffin was another of crystal.

"And he broke this, and inside he found one of the old queens embalmed, and on her head a crown adorned with precious stones and on her neck a necklace of pearls and three chains besides on her breast, and above her head was a candlestick of gold and another at her foot."

Another account from Mr. Knesovich of Gaza, says that the sarcophagus was of pure white marble and was strongly projected by a sort of vault of huge stones built over it. The lid of the sarcophagus was artistically carved in the exact form of the mummy, which was in excellent preservation.

The hair was loose and the head bound with a flet, the form of which suggested that the mummy was Roman, but the shoes were Egyptian. No inscription was on the sarcophagus, but a book is said to have been found in it.

Ambidexterous

(New York Times)

"Here is a funny thing about the relative value of a man's right and left leg," said the lawyer. "Not long ago I was called upon to conduct the case of a man who had lost his left leg in a railroad accident. He was laid up in the hospital for several weeks. While there the utter uselessness of his right hand caused much comment among the doctors and nurses. Other left-handed patients they had met were able at least to fight flies, but my client's right hand wasn't even fit for that.

"The case came to trial, and the jury awarded him damages $500 in excess of what he had asked for because, said the foreman, 'he is left-handed.'

"The next day I stumbled on a man in a restaurant and found him stoking up with his right hand.

"That is all right," said he. "It isn't a new accomplishment, I could do it all the time. Can see one hand as well as the other, always could, but after I lost my left leg I concluded to let my right hand take a vacation. You see, I know the ways of juries. I cannot follow their reasoning, but I have studied their verdicts, and I have observed that while the right leg is considered of more value to the average man than his left leg, the left leg fetches a boom price if it belongs to a left-handed man. I cannot see the connection, but juries can. You heard what that jury of mine said? Well, they always reason that way."

Worth Knowing

When baking cakes place a layer of salt under the mold. This prevents burning.

Salt sprinkled in any substance that is burning on a stove will stop the smoke and smell.

When machining hard materials, such as serge or holland, oil the thread. This will prevent it constantly snapping.

Old incandescence gas mantels make a splendid polish for silverware. Crush a little on a soft duster and rub on the silver.

Fruit stains in table linen are easily removed by plunging the articles in pure boiling water. The addition of soap or soda would have the effect of fixing the stain.

A wooden hand to be used in place of one's own in cleaning gloves is a boon to the woman who must practice this little economy. Naphtha and gasoline, as everybody knows, are apt to leave the human hand that has been inserted in a glove irritated and sore. To cleanse several pairs, one right after the other, is a sure way to court red, sore hands. The wooden hand is adjustable to either right or left hand and three of the fingers are movable.

Fortunes in Carousing

The excesses of the Persians gradually affected Greece. The Romans imitated the Greeks, and carried over-imbalance to an extreme never equalled. Gluttony and intemperance reigned, and huge fortunes were spent in single repasts. Of the many feasts given by Vitellius not one cost less than $1,500, and his reign was almost a continuous debauch. Commodus was a notorious drunkard, and Septimius Severus was not much better.

When Heliogabalus ascended the throne he had a man whose special task was to record the orgies. Forty courses a day were served at his feasts, each one of which cost not less than $10,000. He gave fortunes to inventors of new drinks and dishes. He went over his books one day and found that he had but $300,000 left. Rather than live on such a pittance he stepped out into the backyard and killed himself.

Many of the famous drunkards drank $500,000 worth of wine at a single meal. At a luncheon given to Cicero a Pompey by Lucullus $5,000 worth of wine was consumed by the three.

"Bill" Took Precautions

In a Scottish village a farm laborer named "Bill" Brown lost his wife. While on her deathbed she implored him to never marry again after she was gone, furthermore should he do so she would scratch through the ground and come back to punish him. The threat apparently had due effect for some months, the widower rejecting many tempting offers. After a time, however, the village got to whispering about "Bill" being seen walking with a certain lass. Met one day by a relative of the wife, she asked if there was any truth in the rumor that was about the village, to which he replied in the affirmative.

"Are ye no afraid of poor Mary's threat?" queried the relative.

"Nae fear o' that, my lad. I took good care to hve her harric face door wards, so the mair she scratches the farther she'll gang doon."—Tit-bits.

A Famous Opal.

The most famous opal in history was that which was worn in a ring by the Roman senator Nonius in the day of the triumvirate. Its size equaled that of a medium sized h zelnut, yet its beauty and brilliancy rendered it a marvel among the dilettanti of Rome, especially when it was known that the goldsmiths and money changers had set its value at $1,000,000. Mark Antony made overtures to Nonius for its purchase, intending, it is thought, to present it to Cleopatra, but the Senator refused to go part with it and for fear that it would be taken from him by sheer force sought safety in flight. Here history loses all trace of this famous gem, there being no record of its transference from Nonius to any of his family.

The Winter Diet.

The proper kind of diet is necessary if one is to enjoy the cold weather. It is not without reason that the Esquimaux dine on fat walrus and seal oil. Fat foods, as most people know serve to keep up the heat of the body. Oatmeal is an excellent winter breakfast food. The business woman who is obliged to go forth on a cold morning will find herself fortified by a breakfast of oatmeal with cream, toast or roll with plenty of butter, and a piece of bacon. Sugar contains plenty of carbon or the heat-producing element, and sweet deserts take the place in winter of the acid fruit helpful in summer. Puddings made with suet can take to some extent the place of fat meat when that is not liked. Starch is the third form of heat-producing food available in potatoes, rice, bread, certain vegetables. The diet, of course, must not be confined to this class of food, but it should form a considerable proportion of the whole. The increased richness is counterbalanced by the greater expenditure of energy in the cold weather.

Olive oil is an excellent winter food tonic. Quite a quantity can be taken in salad dressing, but it is not very trying to take the oil clear, a dessert spoonful two or three times a day. A few drops of orange juice or lemon juice in the spoon neutralizes the oiliness to the taste. Hot milk sipped slowly is better than either tea or coffee when one comes in feeling stiff from exposure to the cold.

Russia.

Russia did not break into European history until comparatively recent times. Ruric, a Varangian chief, seems to have been the first to establish a government about 862. Ruric's descendants ruled amid many ups and downs till 1598, at which time the real history of the country may be said to begin. With the solitary exception of the United States of America, the progress of Russia under Peter the Great and Catherine II, is unequalled for rapidity in the history of the world.

The British National Debt.

British "consols" were first named in 1751, when nine different Government loans were consolidated into a single loan amounting to £9,137,821, and bearing 3 per cent. interest. The Government increases the amount of consols from time to time when large amounts of money are required to be borrowed. In 1781 the total amount of consols outstanding was £71,000,000. At later dates the outstanding amounts were: £101,000,000 in 1783, £278,000,000 in 1801, £334,000,000 in 1811, and £400,000,000 in 1838. At the present they amount to £608,162,000.

The British national debt does not only consist of consols. The total floating debt of the Government at the present time amounts to more than £755,000,000. About £52,000,000 of this amount are liabilities of a current nature. The true public debt consists of the funded debt, amounting to over £6,000,000; terminable annuities amounting to £38,000,000 and about £43,000,000 of unfunded debt. The funded debt, or consols, is one that the Government is not under obligations to pay off at any specified time. Terminable annuities form a species of sinking fund used in reducing the national debt consists of treasury notes and other short-term paper issued by the Government for temporary purposes.

Remarkable Religious Movement in Europe.

A very important movement is taking place in Eastern Europe where a remarkable evangelical revival is seen under the ministry of the Baptist churches. The peculiarity of the movement lies in the fact that outside of the Greek or orthodox church the revival is spreading among all classes and at the same time cannot but be regarded as one of the most remarkable movements of modern times. Hitherto the Baptists there were divided according to their races, but a union has been established among the German speaking Baptists in Russia comprising 147 churches, 468 preaching stations and 26,000 membership which represents an increase of nearly two thousand during the year. The Russian Baptist union, a separate organization comprises 149 churches, 10,000 members and an addition of 2,000 during the year. In South Russia the churches are springing up by scores as a result of bringing eight unions into three organizations. An edict of toleration issued in 1905 has had a remarkable effect in Poland which naturally would not be very friendly to the orthodox church and during the past six years 39 Baptist churches have come into existence in that province, one with a membership of 1559 and another with 848. The Baptists of Eastern Europe are now second in number only to those of United States. The same movement is sweeping over eastern European countries. Hungary last year showed an increase of twelve churches, 100 preaching stations and 4,000 members. One church, not a year old in a small town named Homodol is supplying 20 preaching stations. In Romania the same movement is manifest and one evangelist there last August baptized 283 converts and during the past twenty years has baptized over six thousand persons. At Prague and Brunn and among the Carpathian mountaineers there is an active movement. The revival is one of the most remarkable in recent years and certainly without any modern parallel in the countries of Eastern Europe.—Ex.

It is not merely the Maine hunter who kills or maims his fellowman in the name of sport, but football, as it is practised, can claim a record which rivals that of the Maine hunter. In the United States in playing football, the following is the death record for three years:—13 in 1908; 23 in 1909; 14 in 1910. The totals for those badly injured were 134 in 1908; 64 in 1909; 40 in 1910. It would seem that the improvement in figures shows a large decrease in the list of badly injured, but an increase in deaths. There is evidently room for further reform in the rules governing football.—Ex.

A Bolt From the Blue.

Some old sea captains were talking of a schooner which had been struck by lightning, and adding their contributions to nautical fiction. "How about Emma S. Captain Jones?" asked one of the party. "Wasn't she struck once?" "She was, sir," answered Captain Jones. "I'd like to hear the particulars," said the questioner. "Tisn't much to tell only what might happen to any vessel under similar circumstances," said the narrator. "A bolt struck the deck amidships and bored a hole right down through the bottom of the schooner big as a man's leg. The ship would have foundered if a second bolt hadn't come and struck my fore-to-galla-mast, cut it off near the top, turned it end for end and drove it right in to the hole, plugging it up and making it watertight. 'Twas a clear case o' the ravages an repairs o' nature!" said the captain.

Japan's Troubles to Come.

The Japanese people are clever and persistent imitators. If they see what they consider a good thing they at once try to annex it in their own interest. Believing that a fiscal and economic policy which has so much vogue as protectionism has in Europe must have some virtue in it, they have arranged to bring a protectionist tariff into operation next July. The matter appeared simple enough; all that was necessary was to enact a tariff law and enforce it, which would at once produce a revenue and protect home manufacturers. Believing the shallow protectionist platitudes, they made up their minds to try the policy.

But those who carried the law in Parliament and would be responsible for its enforcement soon began to find out that other people, even the foreigners, have something to say about tariff legislation. Great Britain is an ally of Japan and the British people, who throw their trade open freely to the whole world, object to being injured by an ally's factitious restrictions. The immediate result is the precipitation of a Ministerial crisis at Tokio with the probability of a modification of the tariff in the interest of British trade. It is reported that the Japanese Minister in London will soon become Minister of Foreign Affairs in Japan. For this position his diplomatic experience has eminently qualified him.—Tor. Globe.

What Science is Doing For the Farm

It is astonishing how full recent farm history has been of discovery. We have just found out that soil need never be exhausted or worn out; but may be kept fat, and made to grow fatter by the use of legumes. These legumes, including our cloves, peas, beans—and, in the South, soy beans and beggarweed—are found to have been endowed by nature with bacterial attachments, enabling them to take nitrogen directly from the air. It is almost impossible to measure the value of alfalfa in the North and of the velvet beans in the South. Twenty years ago they were unknown to our farmers; to-day they are the most marvellous of all plants for hay, for forage, for subsiders, for winter cover crops, and to add to the humus of the soil after being ploughed under.

Weeds are no longer weeds, but they are the material which nature provides, made of the elements of the air for the most part, and offered us freely to increase the soil. Fifteen years ago beggarweed was the pest of the cotton fields; to-day it is the grandest hay producer in the Southern States. Cactus was a synonym for the most abstruse and troublesome plants; to-day the word stands for one of the most remarkable forage plants in the world. We are just learning that the word weed covers a vast mass of material provided by nature to feed and fatten the soil, a wonderful store to be studied rather than despised.

A LITTLE PLAIN TALK.

In starting I will make an assertion for the people of this section of the county, to bring their grey matter to bear on and think it over, viz.--a newspaper well conducted is of more benefit "Ten times over," to the place, than to the owner; no matter how large an amount he should make out of it.

In starting here three months ago, I made an appeal for the support of the paper which has been very much ignored and I have come up against more of the "Stick-in-the-Mud" than the "Progressives."

During those three months my whole attention morning, noon and night has been given to the putting in order of a scandalously run-down and abused plant, in order to give this section of the county a paper in a decent mechanical shape, and with this issue I print a paper that in a mechanical way, will compare favorably with many of the papers issued in the larger towns, and hope to continue doing so.

I have added a new Job Press, a good assortment of Job Type and general office fittings, that puts us in a position to look after all orders placed with us to advantage. Just here I will make a remark that I do not wish the people to take as a threat and get cross over, but merely as a business proposition of the Give and Take principle. There are many places that would be glad to have such a printing plant as I now have here, established in their town, and if done so would give it a hearty support, and fortunately for myself, I am in such a position that I can box it up and take out to some such place if forced to do so. And it is now up to the people of the section of Charlotte County bounded by Musquoddy, Lepreau, Dyer and Campobello Island, to give it such a support as will prevent such a move.

I am prepared to give the section a clean, decent paper in proportion to the support given it, and will say that with all its faults at present it is 50 per cent above the support now given it by the community.

Fortunately I have started at a season of the year when it is impossible for me to visit the out-lying districts and will ask all interested to send in their orders for Subscriptions, Printing or Advertising as their needs demand. During the next season I hope to be able to get around and meet the people in their own door yards.

Disaster on the Intercolony

A special west bound freight train from Moncton was wrecked half a mile west of Rothesay at four o'clock Saturday morning. By good fortune nobody was injured but half the train was derailed several cars went over the embankment to the ice in the river below and the track for a distance of several hundred yards was torn to pieces. Owing to the location of the accident there was no way of getting around the wreckage and traffic was blocked until the line could be cleared and the track reconstructed.

The disaster occurred at the west station, half a mile this side of Rothesay, at the same place that a cattle train was wrecked two years ago. At this point there is a culvert and a fill-in and the road makes a sharp curve. The waters of the Kennebecasis come right up to the track, and although the spot is an extremely awkward one for a train wreck.

A feature of the blockade which seemed to inconvenience the largest number of people was the fact that the Sussex train, with a large portion of the city's milk supply, was on the wrong side of the tie up. The work of transferring the cans took some time and it was afternoon before the supply reached the city on No. 2 train, which was sent back to Rothesay for this and other traffic. The milk dealers of the city were in a panic and deluged the station office with anxious inquiries as to when their milk would get in.

The four cars which went over the bank contained Quaker oats, whiskey, coal and lumber, and the contents were more or less scattered over the ice.

Temporary repairs to the track were completed by twelve o'clock and the right of way was cleared for business. The Sussex train, which was the first to get through, reached the city at one o'clock.

An investigation made after the wreck occurred seemed to show that the trouble had been caused by a broken truck on the twelfth freight car which had given away under the strain when it struck the curve.--St. John Globe.

A Beautiful Woman

The Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury of Friday, November 25, contained a three column review of the Memoirs of Sir William Forwood, published that day. Sir William was a prominent citizen and former Lord Mayor of Liverpool who had met many prominent and interesting people. He recalls many of these in his memoirs and mentions a St. John lady as the most beautiful woman in Liverpool. She was Mrs. Prioleau, wife of M. C. K. Prioleau, the representative in England of the Confederate government and the builder of the famous privateer Alabama. Mrs. Prioleau, was a daughter of the late Mr. Richard Wright, a well known ship-builder of St. John, and was a cousin of Mr. Charles Nevins of this city. The volume of Sir William's memoirs is apparently a most interesting one.--St. J. Globe.

Says God Ordered him to Jilt Girl

New York, Dec. 13.--The angel of death of the Rev. Joseph M. Blakeney of Ossining in regard to his wish to marry Miss Anna Reitzel, a member of his congregation, is due, the minister says, to the direct intervention of Providence. "First God told me to marry her," and then He told me not to marry her," said he yesterday. "I cannot question His will, and obeyed the Divine instructions."

In Ossining this reason for jilting a girl is not accepted as a valid, convincing or orthodox. The clergyman's plea that the Almighty changed his mind for him does not sound any too Christianlike to the members of his church, and they lay the blame upon the fickleness of the ministerial mind, and some suggest he be ridden out of town on a rail.

Asked yesterday if his reason for suddenly deciding not to marry the young woman was not due to the fact that she is the daughter of a milkman and has until recently been a cashier in a grocery and that reflection had caused him to regard the union as socially unequal, he said: "It might be so. But I refuse to talk upon this phase of the question." While the minister who has jilted the girl refuses to talk, Ossining does not seem so sympathetic that it had its name changed that it might not be constantly reminded that a State prison was within its borders, has done nothing but talk, and Miss Reitzel lacks not champions to plead her case, defend her honor, or aid her in any action that she might take against the man of the cloth. "I am only a milkman, but it's an honest calling," said Charles Reitzel, the rugged father of the young woman yesterday. "This man has said he would take my daughter as his wife,

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medicinal roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy or known composition. Ask your neighbors. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

The engagement was announced; the furniture was placed in the cottage.

"True, he said God had told him to marry Anna, but I smiled. All of us smiled, happy smiles, for we have been taught to know that true marriages are made in Heaven. We thought he said this because he was very happy.

"Now it is that God tells him not to wed my daughter. Bosh! I know what it is. It is that he feels he can make a catch of some woman of means. He is young and this town is small. He will marry money and go to a larger place and get a bigger income. He better go quick, though, for there is a rail fence near here."

The clergyman arrived in Ossining one year ago from Newbury, and gained his introductions to the trustees of the Union Chapel through Leslie Smith, a New York broker. He said he was once a Methodist, but because of his ideas on baptisms his bishop had willingly allowed him to leave that faith.

The trustees in Ossining were much impressed with his apparently sincere talk and placed him in charge of the chapel. He generally preaches on faith and on the beauty of idealistic life.

Lemon Tree Sprouts From His Cut Thumb.

Washington, D. C. Dec. 22.--Surpassing Luther Burbank's wildest flight of horticultural fancy and leaving at the post the whole confraternity of "back to the soil" enthusiasts, Wilfrid Barron of Washington, has produced a lemon which he can boast as literally his own handiwork. He grew it from a seed embedded in a cut in his thumb.

Barron was prying lemons six weeks ago in a cafe where he was practicing his profession as a blender of beverages and juggler of sleep producing juices when the knife slipped and made an exploratory incision in the Barroonial thumb. Doing a little quiet slipping on its account, a lemon seed quiescently concealed itself in the cut.

After the surface of the wound had healed, Barron's thumb burgeoned like a bud in springtime and three sprouts appeared. Then the animated experiment station called in Dr. C. A. Snow who cut back the luxuriant foliage. This pruning resulted naturally, in a sturdier growth which was cut out, rootlets and all, and transferred to a flower pot. To confound the incredulous and amaze the arboricultural, Barron has the cut thumb and thriving plant as evidence.

Advice That Might Save a Man From Entangling Himself

(Chicago Post)

When you are in the parlor with a beautiful young creature, and the electric lights suddenly go out while you are seated beside her on the divan, collect your wits. Tell her not to be alarmed, and search through your pockets until you find a match. Strike it and ask her if she can find a candle.

When riding in the rear seat of an auto going sixty mile an hour and it skids toward the edge of a precipice, if there is a young woman beside you bid her not to become frightened. Step lightly out of the auto and telephone the repair man.

A Court in Exile

(Westminster Gazette.)

Wood Norton, the Worcester-shire home of the Duc d'Orleans, where King Manuel has been celebrating his twenty-first birthday, is in external appearance little more than the average. English manor house, but the stamp of royalty is over it all. And the fleur-de-lys is no mere ornamental symbol, for at Wood Norton "Philippe VIII." of France keeps royal state and holds his court. He has his retinue of "gentlemen of honor," representatives of some of the oldest families of the French noblesse, under the direction of the Duc de Lannes and his Duchess has her dames d'honneur of equally proud lineage. And in this environment of state and courtly ceremonial "King Philippe" exacts and receives the homage due to a sovereign.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney troubles are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

W. M. Ferguson, of Indian Head, Sask., says:

"I was compelled six months ago to quit work on account of a lame back, which had become so weak that I could scarcely get around. My limbs and feet were very much swollen, and I also had severe headaches occasionally. On learning of Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement I procured a box and found them a fine remedy. I have used three boxes and they have given me great relief. The pains and aches have left my back, and it has been greatly strengthened. The swelling in my limbs and feet had also disappeared, and I have not had a headache since. I am very much pleased to recommend this remedy." For sale in St. George by J. Sutton Clark. OLD TOURNAIE IS HISTORIC

Marvels of Nature and Beauty Drew Many of Noble Family to the District.

Tournaie is as rich in historic interest as it is in its natural beauties, declares Frederic Lees, in Architectural Record. The house of Valois had a special liking for the banks of the Loire, and the great nobles of their court built near the royal residences their own chateaux—marvels of architectural grace, strength and beauty, but of which there is not a stone that is not encrusted with blood. For the Valois lived in an atmosphere of intrigue, fraud and violence. They were always being conspired against, and they met plot with counter plot; treason could not be met with force, a sudden surprise or stab in the back, or the malignant skill of some Italian chemist, laid to rest forever suspicions which might have been unfounded. It is but fair to state, however, that this was no often the case, for the nobles were turbulent and ambitious, and when not engaged in waging war openly or covertly with their sovereign, quarreled among themselves, and led to their retainers to surprise or besiege a neighboring castle.

On the battlement of every donjon there was a watchman, day and night, ever on the lookout for the glint of arms in the valley below, and ready to his hand was a huge horn, one blast of which would alarm the garrison and bring them to the walls. A few feet below the watchman there dangled from a jutting beam the corpse of some poor wretch, and in the lofty towers beneath the most others were chained to the reeking walls, for every castellan had the right of administering "greater and lesser justice," and could dispose of the lives and liberties of his vassals as he deemed fit. He had other privileges also, some of which make us wonder why the revolution did not come earlier.

And Slant Right. One great trouble in life is that the paths for going wrong are planted so prettily with flowers at the beginning.—N. Y. Times.

The Young Papa. "Poppy's baby is beginning to talk now."
"Has he been boring you with some stories about it?"
"No, but I sat next to him at the livery counter today and I heard him say sassy-mindedly to the waiter: 'Give me a jink o' water, please.'"—Philadelphia Press.

A servant girl in an Anxherst resident was so badly burned on Wednesday, while starting the kitchen fire with kero oil that she died that afternoon, her master and mistress were also very badly burned while trying to smother the flames with rugs.

Cement Concrete Vats and Tanks

By Albert Moyer, Assoc. A. M. Soc. C. E.

Impervious, odorless, tasteless, and sanitary vats and tanks for buttermilk, wine, oil, pickles, sauerkraut, etc., can be constructed of reinforced concrete, the reinforcing to be designed by a competent engineer, provided the interior surfaces are treated as follows:

After the forms are removed, grind off with a carborundum stone any projections due to the concrete seeping through the joints between the boards. Keep the surface damp for two weeks from the placing of the concrete. Wash the surface thoroughly and allow to dry. Mix up a solution of 1 part water-glass (sodium silicate) 40 deg. Baume, with 4 to 6 parts water, total 5 to 7 parts, according to the density of the concrete surface tumbled. The denser the surface, the weaker should be the solution.

Apply the water-glass solution with a brush. After four hours and within twenty-four hours, wash off the surface with clear water. Again allow the surface to dry. When dry apply another coat of the water-glass solution. After four hours and within twenty-four hours again wash off the surface with clear water and allow to dry. Repeat this process for three or four coats, which should be sufficient to close up all the pores.

The water-glass (sodium silicate) which has penetrated the pores has come in contact with the alkalies in the cement and concrete and formed into an insoluble hard material, causing the surface to become very hard to a depth of 1-8 to 1 1/2 inch, according to the density of the concrete. The excess sodium silicate which has remained on the surface, not having come in contact with the alkalies, is soluble, therefore easily washed off with water. The reason for washing off the surface between each coat, and allowing the surface to dry, is to obtain a more thorough penetration of the sodium silicate.

It is obvious that concrete surfaces so tumbled, if hard, impervious, tasteless, odorless, and sanitary.—Stfc. Amen.

No Offices for Bachelors

San Antonio, Texas, Dec. 10.—Texas does not want bachelors to manage its institutions. The fact that there is a law requiring that heads of insane asylums shall be married men has come to light in the action of Governor-elect Colquitt in pigeonholing applications from single men for positions. This requirement applies to insane asylums, but not to the Blind Asylum, Deaf and Dumb Asylum, Confederate Home, Orphans' Home, and similar institutions.

It is the purpose of the incoming administration, as it has been during Governor Campbell's regime, to appoint only men of families. It is held that the married man is not only more responsible but is more humane, gentle and charitable in the administration of affairs, seeming to have a better, broader understanding of the afflicted and unfortunate. It is a peculiar fact in this connection that in the great flood of applications for office the majority have been from bachelors.

A serious accident occurred on board the Allan Liner Hesperian in St. John West, on Wednesday afternoon by which one of the workmen was hurled down a hatchway a distance of 18 feet, receiving injuries that will likely prove fatal. This is the fourth accident on this vessel while in port this trip.

GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Practical Demonstration

The merchants of a certain town in the United States decided that it would be a good idea to give the people of their community a practical demonstration of how the mail order business will finally affect local conditions. They were perfectly sure that they were giving better value for the money of the residents of their town than could be obtained from the Chicago catalogue houses, particularly when the cost of freight and postage was included in the cost; but the number of express parcels constantly arriving had proved that the mail order houses were getting considerable business from people who would not take the trouble to thoroughly investigate the matter.

They took steps to learn the names of the patrons of the catalogue houses and planned accordingly. Mrs. Blank who had purchased a sewing machine from one of the mail order firms, had a daughter about to be married. As her husband was a little short of ready cash, she went to one of the local stores to purchase linen and other goods for her daughter's trousseau, expecting to obtain the usual credit. The dealer politely declined to part with the goods except for spot cash, stating that E. & Co. from whom she had purchased her machine, would undoubtedly be glad to extend the desired credit. She tried another store and was met with the same polite suggestion.

Mrs. Dash, the farmer's wife drove in with butter and eggs. The grocer admitted that the butter was fine and the eggs fresh, but stated that he did not require any; that probably M & Co. of Chicago, would be delighted to send her another box full of groceries in exchange for her produce. The other grocers had exactly the same story to tell.

When Farmer Dash brought in a load of oats he was offered five cents less than the market price. He protested but was informed that S. & Co. of Chicago, from whom he had bought his harness and blankets, might be willing to take his oats. The clothing firm and the hardware man refused credit. He took home his oats, and did not take home some clothing, wire fencing and nails that he required.

It was not very long before people found how much depended upon the business men of the town, and how every individual suffered when anything was done to injure local enterprise. It is understood that the express parcels arriving at that station have appreciably diminished.

If the mail order houses really gave better value than the local merchants a man might claim he was entitled to buy in the cheapest and sell in the dearest market, but experience has demonstrated over and over again that such is not the case. If you buy in small quantities and expect credit from our local merchants, do you expect to get the same prices that you would by buying in large quantities cash in advance from some city firm?

Give our town merchants a chance to figure on your requirements on the same basis and see if you cannot do as well here. In one case you will find that you buy from a picture and pay in advance and then wait a week for your prize package. In the other case, you buy from the people you know; you see the goods before you accept them and before you pay one cent. In one case you hurt your town, and in another you help your town, its schools, its churches, and its institutions. Give the matter a little thought.—Exchange.

Our friends, the Chinamen, have been it would appear, "working" Uncle Sam for some months. When many of them want to return to the "Old Country" they are smuggled into the United States, whence, through the unenlightened charity of generous organization, they are deported to China free of charge. And yet, there are people who say the Chinese are not a civilized nation!—Ex.

THE BARRIER

By Rex F. A.

Copyright 1908, by Rex F. A.

The mercantile strain. Therefore the thought of this girl's ignominious parentage was so repugnant to him that the more he pondered it the more pitiful it seemed, the more monstrous. Lying awake and thinking of her in the stillness of his quarters, it had seemed a very unfortunate and a very terrible thing. During his morning duties the vision of her had been fresh before him again, and his constant contemplation of the matter had wrought a change in his attitude toward the girl, of which he was unconsciously conscious and which he was glad to see she did not perceive.

The men were pouring off the boat now, and through the crowd came the tall Frenchman, bearing in the hollow of each arm a child who nestled a mantle to his breast. His eyes grew brighter at sight of Neola, and he broke into a flood of words. They fairly bombarded each other with quick questions and fragmentary answers till she remembered her commission.

"Oh, I forgot my manners! Lieutenant Burrell, this is Napoleon Doret—our Poitou!" she added, with proud emphasis.

Doret checked his volubility and stared at the soldier, whom he appeared to see for the first time. The little brown people in his arms stared likewise, and it seemed to Burrell that a certain distrust was in each of the three pairs of eyes, only in those of the man there was no shyness. In effect, the Canadian looked him over gravely from head to foot, seeming to note each point of the unfamiliar attire; then he inquired without removing his gloves:

"Were you in the city, eh?"

"I live at the post yonder," said the lieutenant.

"What business you work at?"

"The lieutenant has been stationed here, foolish," said Neola. "Come up to the store quick and tell me what his life is like."

In spite of the man's unfriendliness, Burrell watched him with admiration. There were no holes in his uniform, and yet he stood a good six feet two, as straight as a pine sapling, and it seemed to Burrell that a roll of what most he was made. His spirit showed in his whole body, in the set of his head and, above all, in his dark, warm face, which glowed with experience when he talked, and that was ever when he was not singing.

"I never see so many people since I left Quebec," he was saying. "She's just like my city—must be free, four thousand people. Every day some more come, and all night they dance and sing and drink whiskey. Ha, gosh, dat's fine place!"

"Are there lots of white women?" asked the girl.

"Yes, two, three hundred. Most of dem is work in dance halls. Dere's one fine gal I see, name Marie Four-gette. I tell you bout her by an' by."

"Oh, Poitou, you're in love!" cried Neola.

"No, siree," he denied. "Dere's none of dem look half so merry as you. He would have said more, but seeing the trader at the entrance of the store, he went to him, straightway launching into the details of their commercial enterprise, which, happily, had been most successful.

Among the merchandise of the post there were for sale a scanty assortment of firearms, cheap shotguns and a Winchester or two, displayed in a rack behind the counter in a manner to attract the eye of such native hunters as might need them, and with the rest hung a pair of Colt's revolvers. One of the new arrivals, who had separated from the others at the front, now called to Gale.

"Are those Colts for sale? Mine was stolen the other day." Evidently he was accustomed to Yukon prices, for he showed no surprise at the figure the trader named, but took the guns and tested each of them, whereupon the old man knew that there was no "cheese" as tenderfeet are known in the north, although the man's garb had deceived him at first glance. The stranger balanced the weapons, one in either hand; then he did the "double roll" neatly, following which he executed a move that Gale had not witnessed for many years. He extended one of the guns, butt foremost, as if surrendering it, the action being free and open, save for the fact that his forefinger was hooked and thrust through the trigger guard; then, with the slightest jerk of the wrist, the gun spun about, the handle jumped into his palm, and instantly there was a click as his thumb slipped the hammer. It was the old "road agent spin," which Gale as a boy had practiced hours at a time. But that this man was in earnest he showed by glancing upward sharply when the trader glanced at him.

"This one hangs all right," he said; "give me a box of cartridges." He emptied his gold sack in payment for the gun and ammunition, then remarked:

"That pretty nearly cleans me. If I had the price I'd take them both."

Gale wondered what need induced this fellow to spend his last few dollars on a firearm. Then he inquired:

"Bound for the outside?"

"No, I'm locating here."

The trader darted a quick glance at him. He did not like this man.

"There ain't much doing in this camp. It's a pretty poor place," he said grimly.

"I'll put in with you, from its looks," agreed the other. "It's got too many" soldiers to be worth a damn. He snarled at this bitterly, with a peculiar jerking of his lip as if his words tasted bad.

"Napoleon Doret—our Poitou!"

"Most of the boys are going up river," said Gale.

"Well, those hills look as if they had gold in them," said the stranger, pointing vaguely. "I'm going to prospect."

Gale knew instinctively that the fellow was lying, for his hands were not those of a soldier, but there was nothing to be said. His judgment was verified, however, when Doret drew him aside later and said:

"He's had nut."

"How do you know?"

"She's leave Hanson d-n quick. Dese mounted police (two 'em on de boat just before we left). Then he told a story that he had heard. The man, it seemed, had left Shingway between two suns, upon the disruption of Swamp Smith's band of desperadoes, and had made for the interior, but had been intercepted at the pass by two members of the citizens' committee, who came upon him suddenly. Pretending to yield, he had executed some unexpected coup as he delivered his gun, for both men fell, shot through the body. No one knew just what it was he did, nor cared to question him overmuch. The next heard of him was at Lake Bennett, over the line, where the mounted police recognized him and sent him on. They marked him well, however, and passed him on from post to post as they had driven others whose records were known, but he had lost himself in the confusion at Dawson for a few weeks until the secret routed riders searched him out, disarmed him and forced him suitably aboard this steamer."

Old Man Gale cared little for this, for he had spent his life among such men, but as he watched the fellow a scheme outlined itself in his mind. Evidently the man dared not go farther down the river, for there was nothing save Indian camps and a mission or two this side of St. Michael's, and at that point there were a covey and many soldiers, where one was liable to meet the penalty of just misdeeds; hence he was probably resolved to stop here, and, judging by his record, he was a man of unsettled convictions.

The trader stepped to the door and, seeing Burrell on the deck of the steamer, went down toward him. It was a long chance, but the stakes were big and worth the risk. He had thought much during the night previous—in fact, for many hours—and the morning had found him still undecided, wherefore he took this course.

"Neola tells me that you aim to keep law and order here," he began abruptly, having drawn the young man aside behind a bulkhead.

"Those are my instructions," said Burrell, "but they are so vague."

"Well, this camp is bigger than it was an hour ago, and it ain't improved any in the growth. Yonder goes the new citizen." He pointed to the stranger, who had returned to the steamer for his baggage and was descending the gangplank beneath them a valise in each hand. "He's a thief and a murderer, and we don't want him here. Now, it's up to you."

"I don't understand," said the lieutenant, whereupon the trader told him Doret's tale. "You and your men were sent here to keep things peaceable," he concluded, "and I reckon when a man is too tough for you to tackle, there ain't a lock and key in the camp, and we ain't had a killing or a stealing in ten years. We'd like to keep it that way."

"Well, you see, I know nothing of that shooting affray, so I doubt if my authority would permit me to interfere," the soldier nudged, half to himself.

CANADA AND BRAZIL.

The people of Canada cannot view indifference the mutinous behavior of the military and naval forces of Brazil. The relations between the two countries are already very intimate and must become increasingly so as both add to their population and their wealth. From Brazil Canada must get year after year large quantities of coffee, of rubber and probably ere long of iron ore, for there are very remarkable iron deposits in the valley of the Panama that would mix admirably with Canadian and Newfoundland ores in the production of high grade steel. To Brazil we send already a considerable quantity of fish and wood products, and as the population grows the market will become very great.

Our most intimate relationship with Brazil at the present moment is that of creditor to debtor. The Canadian capitalists who have exploited the transportation services and the light and power franchises in the cities of Rio Janeiro and Sao Paulo, two of South America's greatest cities have had great success in enlisting Canadian capital in their ventures. Rio and Sao Paulo are active stocks on Canadian Exchanges, and a thousand of Canadian investors had a very real interest in the news that the crews of some of the Brazilian ships had turned their guns for a second time on the capital. Were there to be frequent outbreaks of the same sort as those of the past two months in Mexico and Brazil it would be difficult to secure capital from abroad for the development of the industries and public services of the two countries and probably of Argentina also. It may be taken for granted therefore that the Governments of the chief Republics of Central and South America will do everything humanly possible to restore and maintain peace within their borders. Canadian investors may be sure that their interests will be safeguarded. Neglected to do so would result in the diversion of the streams of gold and of immigration that are causing the present marvellous developments of Latin America.

Brazil has but twenty million people, many of whom were born and lived to manhood as slaves. In the north the climate of the Amazon Valley is such as to prevent the possibility of the colonization by white men, who cannot work in the field or forest. But in the south there are great States that could absorb ten times the present population of Brazil and provide them with all the comforts of modern civilization. As Brazil is filled up with Italians, Portuguese, Germans, Russians, and colonists of other European nations, public order will be more easily maintained and the army and navy now necessary to overawe the semi-barbarous population of Indian ancestry will be less a necessity. At the moment the army any navy seem to be a greater peril to the Republic than to its enemies, but without the power to crush political disturbances conferred by the army and navy there would be no Republic. Brazil will find a way out of her troubles. She has too much national pride and too much faith in her future to sink into anarchy.—For. Globe.

The Way of the Swiss

A foreign resident in Switzerland was fined 10 francs because his little girl had plucked three buttercups growing on a piece of land on which she and some half dozen Swiss children had for years been accustomed to play. The land had recently changed hands, and its new owner had put up a notice forbidding the plucking of flowers. A passing gendarme had found the children flagrante delicto and had forthwith instituted proceedings against the little foreigner, while letting the little natives go scot free. The child's father appealed against the sentence and by dint of hard fighting, which entailed, of course, expense, forced the higher court to reduce the fine from 10 francs to 3—i. e., 1 franc for each buttercup.

When I tried to learn the ways and wherefores of this case I was told by a Swiss that one-half of every fine levied goes to the gendarme who reports the offense for which it is levied, and also that Swiss gendarmes cannot fairly be expected to be quite so alert in taking proceedings against their own country people as against foreigners.

Further, I was told by an American that in Switzerland all foreigners rank as Egyptians and that the one Scriptural injunction that is faithfully obeyed there is that which ordains that Egyptians shall be spoiled.—From "The Latter Day Swiss" in Cornhill Magazine.

"SICK MAN'S FRIEND."

That's the Name Given by Thousands to the Old Family Stand-by, "Nerviline." 1,000,000 Bottles Used Annually.

No better known or more popular family remedy has ever been compounded than 'Nerviline.' During the past half century its success has been phenomenal—due to the fact that it always cures.

"No one could get me to go to bed at night unless I was sure we had Nerviline in the house," writes Mrs. R. K. Weightman of Bolton P. O. "Six years ago my husband was taken badly with rheumatism, which affected his right arm and shoulder. It was so sore and stiff as to be almost helpless for four years. I read of the cure of James E. Everett, and felt sure that when Nerviline cured a case like this, it would cure my husband. I got 4 BOTTLES of Nerviline, and am CURED. It is worth a dollar's worth of Rheumatism five bottles, in Buffalo, and am pleased to write you that the fourth bottle cured. We have since used Nerviline for Lumbago, Neuralgia, Colds, Chest Tightness and other minor ailments in the family and found 'Nerviline' to be the 'Sick man's friend.'

No other remedy is so useful in the home, so universally employed to alleviate pain and curing the sick. Refuse anything offered you instead of Nerviline, which is sold by all dealers, or the Catarhazone Company, Kingston, Ont. In two sizes 50c. and 25c.

The Milkman.

Hark! a milkman's cart is built with a squeak,
I can hear it a block away;
And his milk cans rattle recklessly round
As he calls at my house each day.
The milk that he sets has a watery look,
But I care not a whit for that,
For the milkman's a most enticing chap
When he gallantly doffs his hat.
He gives such good measure that some spills out
In a chalky stream on the floor;
Instead of chiding, I pass maple fudge
As his pay, through the open door.
Then, the milkman tenders a sticky kiss,
Sweet miniature man of five;
With his roguish face lit by starry eyes,
He's the dearest thing alive!
As he moves away with his rusty cans,
'And his much prized, though battered, cart,
I feel what a blank my future would be
Should milkman and I drift apart!

Boy Broker Davie Wood Rich Banker's Daughter.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Robt. E. Davie, the Boston boy broker charged with having absconded with a half million dollars, has come to the heart of Miss Esther M. Stuart, daughter of Thos. B. Stuart, president of the First National Bank of Aurora, and won her pledge to marry him. The fact that he never was legally divorced from the daughter of James J. Cotter, of Boston, whom he married two years ago, was not known to Miss Stewart.

She was a student of Wellesley. She left college immediately after Davie's troubles became known. Davie left behind a bundle of letters written to him by the banker's daughter. It was said that Davie had spent as high as $75 a week on flowers for Miss Stewart.

A New Court.

(London Truth).

It is generally reported in court and diplomatic circles, both at home and abroad, that Queen Alexandra is anxious for King George to sanction a new code of precedence which would place her on an official equality with the Queen consort. This is an unheard-of arrangement in Western Europe; but it exists in Russia, where the Empress Mother is legally the most powerful member of the Imperial family, after the Czar himself. It may be hoped that no such change will be carried out in this country, as the Russian system has worked very badly indeed, leading to considerable complications. The report has been circulated all over Europe, and it has caused much gossip at foreign courts.

Queen Alexandra has throughout her long life generally shown much good common sense but evidently old age, and continuance social and other influence is evidently breaking up her balance if such a request has been made by her, as there is now too much formality in the English court, which should be curtailed rather than enlarged.

Candida is also following rather loosely along the same lines and it is about time a halt was called with us also.

Roosevelt's Card-Index Brain.

His brain is a huge perfectly-kept card index of all the things and persons in the world. Nothing once filed there ever gets away. Dozens of times we saw him remember the names of men and women he had never met but once, and that a long time ago. With the name and the face up comes some bubbling incident connected therewith. We tested the efficiency of his automatic card index memory by showing up to him a red photograph he had met fifteen years ago and who has since grown a shaggy beard. Roosevelt looked at him hard for a moment, and then called him by name and asked why he had never sent on that copy of a certain picture which he had promised.—Walter Wellman in the Metropolitan Magazine.

The Will of a Miser.

The question as to the legality of a miser's will was raised before Sir Samuel Evans in the probate division. The document was made by Charles Phillips, aged 73 who lived at Rowton House, Vauxhall. Mr. Bayford appearing on the next of kin, said the question was whether the will, which was found in the man's bedroom, was revoked or not.

Phillips had a varied existence. He had served through the Crimes, and lived in a cubicle at Rowton House, paying 15 cents a week rent. His death occurred suddenly last February, and inside his locker was found a will, and it was ascertained that he was the owner of $13,965. This occasioned great surprise, because the old man lived in a most frugal way, and was thought to be very poor.

The Judge, He was a miser?—Yes. Council said the will had been tampered with by the old man, because the signature at the end of the document was erased, together with an address and a part of the signature of one of the attesting witnesses. Therefore the will was revoked, and the estate should go to the next of kin. It was, however, stated at the inquest by a man named Frampton that the day before he died Phillips made another will on a sheet of notepaper as follows:

"Any other will I may have made is void. Whatever money I may possess at the time of my death I will leave to Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children."

The document had not been found, and counsel contended that the man who gave the information about it was altogether unreliable. He could not now be found.

One of the attendants at Rowton House said that Phillips rarely spent more than 8c. a day on food, and usually ate bread and butter and drank tea. Occasionally he was invited to share another inhabitant's dinner and then he got a little meat.

Mr. Spokes, for the defendant's, "Thompson and others" (the executors of the will) contended that the will was not revoked, and there was an intestacy.

Black Frocks in Paris.

Paris, Dec.—The recent period of mourning in England seems to have affected Paris fashions, for never has so much black been worn here as at the present time, while the combination of black and white has become a craze in a country where wonderful color schemes are the special province of the dressmaker.

Now smartly cut black velvet coats and skirts much trimmed with braid and buttons or with dark fur are the proper wear for outdoors, while clinging chiffons and minims in the same sombre hue are worn in the afternoons and evenings.

Even the Palais de Glace, which last winter was like a kaleidoscope of gay colors as fashionable women circled round on their skates, is but a study in shadows just now, for almost every woman is in black or grey relieved by bunches of violets and orchids, and the woman in rich red or deep blue is so rare that one has to search for her among the crowd of sadly garbed skaters.—Ex.

"So you and Meyer have set up a marriage agency? What capital have you?" "I got two hundred dollars in the business and Meyer has six unmarried daughters."—Megeendorfer Blätter.

Robbers Gun at Head as he Wires for Help

(New York World.)

While the West Shore Railroad station at Highland, of which he was in charge, was being robbed early on Friday, Thomas Nolan was sending telegraph calls for help to the train despatcher at the Weehawken terminal.

As the robber entered the office where Nolan was at work he put a revolver to the operator's head and said: "Now keep right on with your work. If you stop I will shoot."

"Nolan did not stop work at the telephone key, but began sending as follows:

"This is Nolan, Operator Highland. Robber here in station after safe. Has gun. Orders me to keep at work. Send help."

J. Gleisner, the operator at Weehawken terminal, wired Nolan to keep on sending, and then sent a message to Cornwall telling of Nolan's danger. Poughkeepsie was also notified, and while the robber was still at work two squads of policemen started for the Highland station.

The robber, who is described by Nolan as being a young man, smooth shaven and wearing a light colored overcoat, took $170 from the safe, which was unlocked, and a bundle of unstamped railroad tickets. After he had taken the money he told Nolan that if he moved for five minutes he would be killed.

The moment the robber closed the door Nolan sprang up to watch which way he went, but it was too dark for him to see. Five minutes later the posse from Cornwall reached the station and found Nolan near collapse. Two other stations on the West Shore have been reported robbed in the last ten days.

Classified Americans

(From the Circle.)

The population of the United States may be classified thus: Natives of unmixed descent, 1-10; negroes, 1-10; natives of foreign parentage, 6-10; aliens, 1-10.

The original American stock was English, with a scattering of Scotch and Irish, more of Dutch and a little French and Scandinavian. The proportion of any of these strains in the American of to-day in unbroken descent from before the war of the revolution will determine his approximation to a purely blood standard of American nativity. The preponderance of population is of whites having one or more of these strains in their blood, the majority of such being able to trace descent by one and the other to original settlers.

Since 1820 over 28,000,000 aliens have immigrated to this country, the vast majority of whom never returned to their native land. But the intermixture of immigrants with natives and their descendants was negligible as a factor in census figures until after the war of the Rebellion. Until that time the population was counted as natives, colored and foreign born. In the ninth census, (1870), the classification of native whites gave place to native whites of native parentage and included the descendants of all white persons born in the United States indiscriminately.

Of the 28,000,000 aliens who have migrated to this country one-fourth came prior to the war of 1861-63. And of the 21,000,000 who have landed since that period over one-half arrived during the last 15 years. Up then to 1895 the major part of the immigration was from the British Isles, Ireland principally, Germany and Scandinavia, with a small but steady stream from France and Switzerland and scattering groups from most other European countries.

Since that year the arrivals from those countries excepting Scandinavia have greatly decreased and the bulk of immigration has been from Italy, Australia, Hungary and Russia, and chiefly from the least advanced portions of those domains—the Russian Jew, the southern Italian, Lithuanian, Magyar, Pole and Slovak, with many Greeks and Japanese and even Mexicans.

EVERY good grocer is willing and anxious to please his customers. Sometimes if he happens to be out of the goods you ask for, he may recommend a different brand rather than keep you waiting. But when it comes to flour, he knows that Ogilvie's is one of the things for which there is no substitute. No other flour is "just as good." Ogilvie's "Royal Household" is in a class distinctly by itself. To offer a substitute for "Royal Household" would be like offering oleomargarine to a customer who wanted prime dairy butter. No good grocer would do it. Baseball Mathematics

Baseballs have been caught when dropped from the top of the Washington Monument, by at least two well-known league players. The distance dropped is 542 feet, and by the time the ball reached the catcher's hands its velocity was calculated to have been about 180 feet per second, or over 120 miles an hour. Suppose that the pitcher were to throw a 9-ounce ball to the top of the Washington Monument. How much energy would be required for that purpose. The American Machinist answers that question in a recent issue. According to that journal, if the pitcher could throw such a ball with such strength that it would reach the top of the monument, assuming that his hand is propelling the ball through a distance of 5 feet before letting go, he would have to exert a constant pressure of about 60 pounds upon the ball until it left his hand. If the catcher, in receiving the dropped ball, allowed his hands to move down a distance of 2 feet, the average stopping force which he exerted must have been nearly 150 pounds. The probabilities are that his hands stung somewhat after the performance.—St. C. Amen.

The Natural Order

(Milwaukee Journal)
"Look at that trunk," exclaimed the lady in the baggage-room, examining her damaged possessions.
"Yes, I'm looking at it," said the baggage smasher.
"Well, what are you going to do about it?"
"I'll report it to the baggage master, he will report it to the agent here, he will take it up with the division superintendent, he will take it up with the general manager, who will refer it to the damage department, who will send an agent around and see you in a couple of years to ask you why you didn't buy a decent trunk in the first place."

Sinking a Well, Find Coal

Shenandoah, Va., Dec. 10.—A force of men, employed by the Girard estate of Philadelphia, engaged for some time drilling for water on Locust mountain to replenish the estate's reservoir's southwest of town, have instead just struck a ten foot vein of the finest mammoth coal at a depth of 500 feet, to the surprise of the officials and many others, as it was not thought coal deposits amounted to much in that neighborhood.
It is now proposed to abandon sinking for water and to fully determine the extent of the coal, which, it is semi-officially announced, is there not only in one vein but in a number, such as have been worked here for fifty years. This means new life and great prosperity for this city and Ringtown, on the opposite side of the mountain.
The coal area discovered extends from Shenandoah to Girardville, six miles long, and an average of two miles wide.

The International Bridge

A meeting of the International Bridge Commission, with Mr. S. J. Chapleau, district engineer of the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, Canada, and Mr. Paul D. Sargent, State Commissioner of Highways, was held Tuesday, Dec. 13, at the Maine Highway Department for the purpose of considering an offer made by some of the citizens of Van Buren of enough funds to strengthen the bridge sufficiently to carry railroad traffic. The matter was thrashed out very thoroughly and laid before Attorney General Philbrook. Judge Philbrook gave it as his opinion that the Legislature had expressly directed that the State appropriation in connection with any other funds, even though they be entirely subscribed by outside parties, for use in the construction of a bridge to carry joint railroad and highway traffic, would be contrary to the expressed intention of the Legislature and a diversion of the funds from their proper use.

The Middlemen.

One of the reasons why the city dweller pays so much more for his foodstuffs than the farmer is set forth very clearly by Frank Andrews in the Year Book of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Andrews shows that the very great difference between the amount paid by the consumer and the amount received by the producer is absorbed by the middleman or middlemen.
Sometimes there is only one. Sometimes there are three or four. In New York, Philadelphia and Washington the retailer of milk often buys direct from the producer and their is only one profit to be taken. In Boston milk is distributed largely through two consecutive middlemen, the wholesale and the retail dealer, each of whom must have his profit. Three middlemen are commonly involved in getting apples from the farmer's orchard to the consumer, the country buyer, the commission merchant and the retailer. Sometimes an auctioneer sells to the jobber the apples consigned by the country buyer to the commission dealer, and the jobber sells to the retailer, and thus five middlemen are concerned and five profits are taken before the apple gets into the pie. To all those profits must be added the cost of transportation.
As for milk, the farmer or dairyman gets just half as much as the retailer; at least that is the proportion in 73 cities and towns visited by agents of the U. S. agricultural department.
Doubtless a commercial genius will some day appear and tell us how to eliminate the present important factor of the middleman, who is neither producer or retailer, but who adds greatly to the cost of living. Perhaps legislation may be necessary.

Platinum in Lamps

Before Edison produced a practical carbon filament and thus made the incandescent lamp a commercial article, many experimental lamps had been built with the filament made of a single loop of platinum, sealed into the bulb so that its two ends projected and made the terminals of the lamp. As platinum is fully as costly as gold, its price alone would have made its use prohibitive. With the coming of carbon as a practical filament material, the use of platinum was restricted to the short lengths needed for passing through the glass of the bulb. Even this length has gradually been reduced, but so tremendous is the annual consumption of incandescent lamps that the cost of platinum used for this purpose is estimated at $500,000. Efforts to replace the platinum with inexpensive metals or alloys have not been very successful as yet, but in view of the large saving that might be effected a good deal of experimenting is being done along this line.

An Old Fashioned Farm

Somebody has to wind the clocks,
And mend the locks,
And tend the flocks,
Somebody has to do the chores
That come by scores,
Somebody has to spade and plow,
And milk the cow,
(Do you know how?)
Somebody has to shear the sheep,
And plant and reap,
With little sleep--
That's father.
Somebody has to mend the socks,
And starch the frocks,
And clean the crocks,
Somebody has to wash the floors
And dust the doors,
Somebody has to boil and bake,
And make the cake,
And fry the steak,
Somebody has to buy things cheap,
And wash and weep,
With little sleep--
That's mother.
Somebody has to mow and toil
And freeze or broil,
Somebody has to look ahead,
Sometimes with dread,
Somebody has to do the work
(No chance to shirk),
And by and by,
With one more sigh,
Somebody'll just lie down and die--
That's both of them.

Photograph the Voice

Paris, Dec. 10--Voice photography is the invention of a French physicist, Dr. Marage. He says it will be of enormous value to orators, actors, singers, and, indirectly, to musical critics. The sounds strike a small disk of India rubber, the vibrations of which are minutely and exactly reproduced on a small mirror. A ray of light is thrown on the mirror, which reflects the vibrations at various angles. A sensitive film surrounded by clockwork receives the impression of these reflections. The picture, according to the inventor, will indicate whether the singer's voice be true, whether his tempo be correct, and what her his method of breathing be right.

A true note is shown by a series of parallel and equal bands, while a wrong note produces a rough, irregular impression. It is suggested that pocket voice cameras will be of great use to persons of a critical turn of mind who are fond of going to the opera.--Exchange.

The Sailor's Consolation

(By William Pitt, 1708-1778.)
One night came on a hurricane,
The sea was mountains rolling,
When Barney Buntline turned his quilt,
And said to Billy Bowling:
"A strong nor'wester's blowing, Bill;
Hark! don't you hear it roar now?
Lord help 'em, how I pities all,
Unhappy folks on shore now!"

"Foolhardy chaps who live in town,
What danger they are all in,
And now are quaking in their beds,
For fear the roof should fall in.
Poor creatures, how they envious us,
And wishes, I've a notion,
For our good luck, in such a storm,
To be upon the ocean."

"But as for them who're out all day,
On business from their houses,
And late at night are coming home,
To cheer the babes and spouses;
While you and I, Bill, on the deck,
Are comfortably lying,
My eyes! what tides and chimney-pots
About their heads are flying!"
"And very often have we heard
How men are killed and undone,
By overtax of carriages,
By thieves, and fires in London.
We know what risks all landmen run,
From noblemen to tailors;
Then, Bill, let us thank Providence,
That you and I are sailors!"

LEONARDVILLE

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Johnson on Dec. 12th when their eldest daughter Lucy M. was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur C. Munro by the Rev. T. M. Munro, father of the groom. The bride was daintily dressed in cream nuns-velvet with chiffon trimmings. The happy couple left for Pennfield where they took the train for St. John on a short trip. The bride's travelling dress was of blue chiffon broadcloth with satin hat. Their many friends wish them every success in life.

After a marriage recently the bridal party partook of a sumptuous breakfast, towards the end of which a younger brother of the bride got up and said solemnly, raising his glass:
"Ladies and gentlemen, I have to propose a toast, which, however, must be drunk standing. Please take your glasses and rise up."
The guests, although somewhat bewildered, did so.
"Now," said the young scapegrace, "if you will remain standing for a few minutes I'll find out who has been sitting on my new hat."--London Tit-Bits.

Instinct or Reason?

An Edinburgh gentleman having a holiday at Kilmartin, in Perthshire, had his curiosity aroused by seeing a group of Highland cattle in a circle, with their heads all centred on one object. Wondering what they were looking at and knowing by experience that the animals were inoffensive, he joined the spectators, and saw a sheep lying on its back, with its feet in the air. As those acquainted with the habits of the sheep know, the animal is unable to rise from such position. Just as the gentleman arrived and saw the predicament, a bull went forward, and inserting his horns under the sheep's hips, raised it to its feet. The sheep was giddy for a while, but was soon able to join its companions.

Demasking the Great Seal

When a fresh Great Seal is made, either at the accession of a new Sovereign it is brought into use and the old one discarded with quite an interesting ceremony. A meeting of the Privy Council is called, and attended by the King in person. The two Seals, the new and the old, are laid on the table. Then the King, in the presence of his councillors places his hand on the new Seal, thereby constituting in the Great Seal of England, and acknowledging that any document to which an impression of it is attached is his act and deed, after which His Majesty commits it to the keeping of the Lord Chancellor. The old Seal next undergoes a process known as "demasking." At one time it was the practice to cut it into four quarters and deposit the pieces in the Tower; but for many years it has been defaced simply by the Sovereign making a few small punctures over its two sides with a pointed hammer. These marks are regarded as sufficiently indicating that the Seal can never again be used as a state instrument.

"Poor Mother Eddy is gone! She was a clever woman, and she proved a better business manager than Alex. Dowie. Apart from the consideration of her personal merits, we may remark that she succeeded in dazzling quite a number of dupes. We often hear it said that England and the United States are the most civilized countries in the world; but may we ask where, in the name of goodness, can foolish religious thrive, not better than, but only as well as, in those two countries. If "higher civilization" means what we are witnessing in the United States, then the less we have of it the more civilized we shall remain! Madame Eddy is a wonder of many learned philosophers who reject the Gospel. Goldwin Smith, Prof. MacPhail, and the others of their class, may herald forth the first fool's vagaries; for they know that if they do half the sham-editions and squib-renewers of two hemispheres will land them to the skies. Why do the circles not exhibit three-quarters of the world's alleged intellectuals?"--Podraird in Governor.
