It May Not Be.

JOHN G. WHITTIER It may not be our lot to yield The sickle in the ripened field:

Nor ours to hear, on sunny eves, The reaper's song among the sheaves. Yet where our duty's task is wrought In unison with God's great thought: The near and future blend in one,

And whatsoe'er is willed is done. And ours the grateful service whence, Comes, day by day, the recompense; The hope, the trust, the purpose stayed,

The fountsin and the noonday shade. And were this life the utmost span, The only end and aim of man, Better the toil of fields like these Than waking dreams and slothful ease.

But life though falling like our grain, Like that, revives and springs again; And early, called, how blest are they Who wait in Heaven their harvest day!

Canada therefore, I must admit, determined to regain her West Indian trade, and she is successfully pursuing, and must attain, her object. From the foregoing remarks you can perceive the state of matters which it was lesigned to change by the increase of Customs duties, and that the course pursued by the United States was really the controlling element. Let me now briefly state

THE WODE ADOPTED BY THE LEGISLATURE of Canada to remedy the evils complained of. They imposed high duties, varying from 30 to 40 per cent., on all manufactures peculiarly American. They also placed manufactures already established in Canada,

THE IRRITATION WHICH IT HAS CAUSED is to my mind a much more satisfactory feature than had it been received within lifference. According to the doctrine of many extreme free traders, the course of Canada in imposing retaliatory or protective duties is only hurtful to herself, and should have called forth expressions of compassion rather than resentment; but the feeling evok-ed is widely different, and while I trust to see it wholly removed by frank explanations, yet it forms the strongest evidence that the people of this country still look to their own National Policy, is nevertheless com-
