MONA.

FROM THE BRETON. At even-tide sits Mona, still In reverie, by the spring; Her little head is thinking not

Of any happy thing.

For, like a broken string of pearls, And in the clear pool absently Play her bare feet and brown.

And singing, thus doth say : "O maiden, with uneasy feet Stir not the water, pray;

"For when you the water trouble With restless feet so small, I can not my likeness see therein. Nor the little stars at all."

The maiden says: "Oh, fear you not, Nor, little bird, complain; The troubled water will soon be pure And mirror-like again.

"But, ah! when oft I wandered here, Happy at twilight dim, Why saidst thou not to hin

"Oh, Januik! Jannik! trouble not The maiden's heart so clear, Lest heaven be mirrored there no more Lest there no stars appear ?"

Poor Dafford blossom! what's that to thee Thou hast no part in its golden glow -Thou hast no share in its silver dew-It will not wake thee to life anew. What sidder fate can the Autumn bring Than Summer does to a flower of Spring

It is midsummer, my life's midsummer-My sorrowing Heart ! what's that to thee ! Its joys are things that I can not share Tis not for me that its days are fair; For Love for me was an April flower, Whose beauty went with the passing hour. What sadder fate can the Autumn bring Than Summer does to a flower of Spring ?

Lamentable Apathy and Neglect. They who desire the rejection of the Fishery eccived for the excess of privilege granted the wick has spoken out strongly on the subject by operation of the Treaty, into the United States or Dominion, unless it be the produce of the waters of that country. Our reading of the text of the Treaty, does not justify such an assumption. At all events it is to be hoped that the meaning of that portion of the Treaty bearing on the Fisheries should be clearly defined, and well understood, that the Dominion Parliament may know postively, what the Dominion Parliament may know postively. The Prince Edward Island Government is believed to be favorable to the ratification of the Treaty but has, it is said, consented to allow it at once to go into operation. It is not only the Local Government and the prince of the services of J. Meagher having secured the services go into operation. It is not only the Local Gov-ernments of British North America that have been strangely indifferent to the progress of this affair, but the British North American people have been equally negligent of their duty in relation to it.
