National Prohibition.

The effects and desecrated countries of the world are exposed to many dangers, internal and external, to labor and land troubles, civil war, socialist and nihilist conspiracies and uprisings, and to wars their outbreak for the future may be said to be black enough. But this continent is free from most, if not all, of these dangers, and its prospects seem bright enough. Positively at this time the most difficult question awaiting us is the liquor question, and it threatens to be the prominent question for the rest of the century. In the United States greater prominence than ever is now given to the question of prohibition; it threatens to become a question which will decide the fate of parties and governments. A number of enthusiasts, disinterested by the ill-effects of partial prohibition, have conceived the idea of incorporating the principle of prohibition into the constitution. They held a convention at Chicago lately, and took steps to organize a "third party," the chief plank of whose platform shall be national prohibition. They put forth the declaration in the following manner: "In the following national principles and measures to be incorporated in the national constitution and endorsed by Congress and Government. 1. The prohibition, as public crimes, of the importation, manufacture, sale, and supply and taxation of all alcoholic beverages; 2. The prohibition of the license, or legal sanction, in any form of them, as any other public crimes. The enthusiasts of this third party are certainly thorough, and "root and branch." The way they propose would be decidedly the most effective method of putting down the sale and use of liquor. If prohibition to the extent they aim at were made national, it might probably be enforced better than the partial acts, or even acts as stringent, but only affecting here and there a State. Nothing is impossible; prohibition may become a national act, and the manufacture and use of liquor be made constitutionally plain, but those who have undertaken the task have a stupendous hard fight before them. And they have not made it easier by allying themselves with politicians. It is hinted, and the suspicion is reasonable enough, that the prohibition enthusiasts have been made the catspaws of wire-pullers, who are working up a third party, in opposition to the Republicans and Democrats, which are now much split up, and who imagine that prohibition would be a good plank to stand on. But there can be no denying the fact that the prohibitionists have been made the catspaws of wire-pullers, who are working up a third party, in opposition to the Republicans and Democrats, which are now much split up, and who imagine that prohibition would be a good plank to stand on. The Incursion of the "Lumber Lords" into the city, last week, created a stir, which has been repeated. One or two of the solid men have grumbled a little at the new regulations, and are being dragged to the further end of the street to attend the sale, but most of them were very recent to the business. It is easy to say, as one of our daily papers does, that there is great dissatisfaction among the lumber operators, on account of the regulations, and that the Government is committed to the full extent of the act. But it often happens that one objection is made to duty as a general condemnation.

The Fight at Kassin Lock.

The fight at Kassin Lock, on Monday evening, 28th ult., was a very hot affair. General Graham held the post, which is about four miles from Metcham Station, and twenty-four from Ismailia, and was attacked by a large force of Egyptians. The enemy commenced a cannonade in the morning; the British troops were kept under a burning sun, in anticipation of an attack. There occurred a halt towards evening, but the 7th Dragoons had only unseated their weary horses, and proceeded to refresh themselves, when the roar of the cannon commenced again with such fury as showed that the enemy were at length in earnest. The following description of the fight which occurred, differs somewhat from the account given by the London Telegraph, but is fully as graphic:—

The Overflow of the Nile.

The London Daily News says:— Perhaps the most striking idea of the effect of the Egyptian war is obtained from a point of view on the summit of the Great Pyramid of Gizeh. The pyramid stands on the desert, but the Nile is so high that the water has reached the color of green vegetation; where it has not touched is desert. A distinct line of green is visible on the cultivated and uncultivated lands of the Nile valley. The water has reached the color of green vegetation; where it has not touched is desert. The Chicago Grand Jury refused to indict the proprietors of a local wholesale grocery firm for fraud on the part of General F. Butler.

The Chicago Grand Jury refused to indict the proprietors of a local wholesale grocery firm for fraud on the part of General F. Butler. The firm advertised a baking powder, and had out a large number of placards representing General Butler as a baker in the act of preparing dough. A silver spoon was passing from his pocket. This latter is supposed to be the ground on which the indictment was asked.
