THE LOSS OF THE SALDANHA

BY THOMAS SHERIDAN, ESQ.

The Saldanha, frigate, of thirty-eight guns, sail-rom Loch Swilly, in the north of treland, on a se, November 30, 1811, and encountering a dful gale, was four days after driven ashore. ming gate, was not carried another received in the buy th, which she had recently left, when, of three depersons on board, not one escaped the relements. The following poem, remarkable shold spirit and imagery, is reprinted from a non-place book.]

"Britannia rules the waves:"—
Heard'st thou that dreadful roar !
Hark! 'tis hollowed from the caves,
Where Loch Swilly's billow raves—
And three hundred British graves
Taint :he shore.

No voice of life was there—
'Fis the dead that raise the cry!
The dead—who hear ao prayer,
As they sank in wild despair—Chaunt in scorn that boastful air,
Where they lie.

"Rule Britannia!" sang the crew, When the stout Saldanha sailed, And her colours, as they flew, Flang the warrior-cross to view, Which in battle to subdue, Ne'er had failed-

Bright rose the laughing moon, That morn that sealed her doom: Dark and sad is her return, And the storm-lights faintly burn .As they toss upon her stern, 'Mid the gloom.

From the lonely beacon height As the watchman gaz'd around. They saw that flashing light Drive swift athwart the night, Yet the wind was fair and right For the son at no mortal power shall now hat crew and vessel save; hey are shrouded as they go a hurricane of snow, ad the track beneath her prow Was their grave.

sere are spirits of the deep,
he when the warrant's given,
se raging from their sleep,
a rock or mountain steep,
'mid thunder-clouds that sweep
Through the heaven

illent as the grave; rick was first, and last, a death-sob drunk the blast, Neath the wave

MATCH-BREAKING

A TALE OF AN ENGLISH COUNTRY TOWN

Married people are very fond of match-Martied people are very ions or maxing, and wicked wits say, that they act on the principle of the man who, when irretrievably stuck in the mire, called to a friend to come and assist him, with the view of getting him into a similar situation. Old maids are remarkably fond of match-breaking, and the reason is the same that for his third way. remarkably fond of match-breeking, and the reason is the same; taey feel hat they are doomed to perpetual banishment from the temple of Hyaren, and therefore are desirous of securing as many companions as possible in their exile. I do not disike the old maid who is fairly turned of sixty; by that time she gives up all matrimonial speculations for herself, and is not rendered miscrable by the success of them in others; she betakes herself to cards, lap-dogs, and paroquets, accepts the flattery of a toad-eater if rich, of becomes the success of them in others, and the success of them in others, and the success of the mind who is fairly to be a toad-eater if rich, of the success of them in others, and the success of the mind who is fairly to be a toad-eater if rich, of the success of them in others, and the success of the mind who is fairly to be a toad-eater if rich, of the success of the mind who is fairly to be a toad-eater if rich, of the success of the mind who is fairly to be a toad-eater if rich, of the success of the mind who is fairly to be a toad-eater if the toad-eater if the toad-eater if she has not yet taken leave of the air, dress-and manners of juvenitity; she has a lingering hope that she may be able to rival girls, which, nevertheless, a dways terminates in the sad certainty of being rivalled by them; and next to the apparently inaccessible felicity of being married herself, she learns to rank the pleasure of spoiling the marriages of her young female friends. My businers, however, is not to write a treatise upon old maids; but to relate the history of two of the class who were no contemptible and mean professors of the art of contemptible and mean professors of the art of the history of two of the class who were no contemptible and mean professors of the art of match-irreasing.

Miss Ogleby was five-and-forty; she had been han isome when young, and might still have appeared to advantage had she condend to wear dark sitis, blonde apps, and tolerably-sized bonneis, to walk a moderate pace, and to speak in a moderate lone. Miss Ogleby, however, was bent on playing the light-hearted, gay, fearless, juvenile beauty; the hair of her wig was drawn back so as compeletely to display the marks of time on her forehead, her thin arms fully displayed, not their whiteness and synametry, but their want of them, through gauze or book-muslis aleeves; she adopted a tripping, playful walk, which ill-assorted with her frequent attacks of rheumatism; and her voice, which even in youth was more remarkable for loudness than for melodly, had acquired that sort of sharp, dogmatical quickness, which is more fit for cross-examining a witness than for any office to which a lady's voice ought to be applied; her eyes, which were black, and remarkably large and bright, lost all attraction from the bold stare which characterized them; her teeth were in tolerable preservation, and if two of the from ones were of a more brilliant schitness than the rest, it is nothing wonderful that inconsistencies should sometimes exist in the human mouth, when we consider how many are continually coming out of it.

Miss Ogleby had tried unremittingly to gain a husband from the age of sixteen, but her large share of forwardness completely neutralized the effect of her small share of heauty; she had, besides, no fortune in her youth; and when the death of an anut put her in posses-large share of forwardness completely neutra-lized the effect of her small share of heauty; she had, besides, no fortune in her youth; and when the death of an anni put her in posses-sion of a few hundreds a year, her faded person and unfeminine manners prevented her from receiving proposals, except from decided ad-venturers, whose motives she had sufficient she wholes to detert, and whose overtures she had sufficient wrin-ss and self-denial to reject. Miss Ogleby took, the round of all the watering-places, and then pursued the plan of Lady Dainty in the comedy, who when she had gone through all the complaints of the day-book, went all through them again; at length, she was induced to take a house in the pr-tty, cheap, cheerful country town of Allington: a country town is a delightful lo-cality for an old maid. Gossip is as avowedly the great stuly and pursuit there, as the clas-sies at Oxford, or the mathematics at Cam-bridge: and Miss Ogleby soon qualified her-self to take a first degree in the science: wh-ther she took honors or rot I will not pretend to say; I do not myself consider that the censure their frivolities, and repailse their civilities; but she eagerly sought their society, joined in their nausements, and rallied them about their admirers; she constantly avoided about their admirers; she constantly avoided at parties the sofa where sat the matrons—she never upproached the tard-table either as player or specialor, but took her seat by the plane, or stood by the bagatelle-board, generally indicating her position by her loud laugh and ready jest. Notwithstanding all tiese juvenitities, people did not believe Miss Ogleby to be young, but they said that she was remarkably fond of young people; now in this conclusion they were wrong, Miss Ogleby was not fond of young people, but she knew that her machinations against them would work much better if she appeared as their friend than as their foe, and took her measures accordingly. If a young man appeared dismuch better if she appeared as their frien-than as their foe, and took her measure-accordingly. If a young man appeared dis-posed to admire a diffident girl, Miss Ogleby would immediately attach berself to her si e-take the conversation completely out of her hands, answer every observation of the inam-orato herself, and, under the veil of great pro-tection and foundess, contrive to make the retiring fair one appear as a child and a cipher retiring fair one appear as a child and a cipher; if, on the contrary, the lover was timid, Miss Oglaby would, in the very first budding of his inclination, tell him that every body said that his wedding-day was fixed, ask where the honeymoon excursion was to be taken, and petition for bridecake. If a man of wealth seemed smitten with a penniless beauty, she would tell him that she caderstood he had offered laystiff, for the except density was here. would tell time that she caderstood he had offered to settle ten thousand pounds upon her, but that the lady's friends stood out for twenty, and that she be zged to give her humble advice that they would split the difference and make it fifteen; if a prudent, careful man of small income formed an attachment, she would, with the utmost simplicity, eulogize to him the liberal ideas and public spits of his charment. with the stands simplicity, enlogize to him the liberal ideas and noble spirit of his chosen fair one; and as all these observations were made with the most smiling hilaity, and she was always on excellent terms with the girls whom she depreciated, it was impossible to prove, or even to believe her guilty of wilful asper-sion.

s Ogelby had formed an intimacy at Bath with Miss Malford, another old maid: she be-gan to feel a great want of a confidente and coadjutor, and therefore wrote to her friend, gain to freit a great want of a constitute and configure, and therefore wrote to her friend, extolling the advantages and recommendations of Allingham, and pressing her to come and settle there: a pretty and cheap house near her own was to be disposed of, and Miss Malford was three years younger than Miss Ogleby, but she had not, like her, the advantage of having ever been handsome; she was decidely deformed, and her countenance had that ellish, shrewd expression, which frequently exists in persons so afflicted; and although not more ill-natured than her friend in reality, she had the character of being so, because, being much eleverer, she had a great ability of saying sareastic things. Her property was enough to keep her in independence, but not sufficient to be an indemnification for the unlow-tiness of her person and disposition.

One "poor gentleman," however, who was rapidly advancing to the end of the London season and his own finances, wrought himself up to the desperate resolution of making a proposal to Miss Malford. Feeling that this daring measure required the protection of numbers, he determined to make known his passion in some public place. He accompanied Miss Malford to the Exhibition at Somerset House: but, alsa! the heautiful productions of innumerable delightful pottrait-painters smiled Miss Malford to the Exhibition at Somerset House: but, alsa! the heautiful productions of innumerable delightful pottrait-painters smiled felt he could not profance the atmosphere of such forms and loveliness, by applying any expressions of admiration to the little, sallow, frown in capinst r, hanging on his arm.

The next attempt was at the Adelaide Gallery, and he was actually on the point of makxtolling the advantages and recommendation

The hesitating suitor had accompanied Miss Malford and two of her friends thither in the evening; the grand room was splendidly lighted up, and a band was playing "Love in the Heart;" but olas! love was not in the heart of the unfo, tunate young man, he did not "own the soft impeachment." Presently, however, he entered with his party into the "room of horrors;" a faint lamp burned dimly; he looked at Miss Malford, she had ed dianly; he looked at Miss manning, her com-never appeared to so such advantage, her com-plexion was actually only a faint shade of prim-plexion was actually only a faint shade of primpeason was actuarly only a tank shade of prim-rose when compared to the yellow waxen effi-gy in the centre of the 'com; and although her head was very ungracefully set upon her shoulders, it boasted at least one great sup-rio-rity to the glastly head's around her, from the circumstance of its being on her shoulders at all ! all !

circumstance of its being on her shoulders at all?

The lady and gentleman of the party quitted the room, and the rash suitor was on the point of pouring forth his passionate protestations, when Miss Malford stopped him by beginning to speak herself. A lady is proverbally anxious for the last word, it would be well sometimes if she were not equally anxious for the first. Miss Malford poured forth such a torrent of spiteful sarcastic vituperation, against the lady who had just left the room—and whose only fault was that her prettiness and aministity seemed likely to make a conquest of the gentleman who was her escorting the first of the gentleman who was her escorting the the feelings of the poor suitor underwent as sudden revulsion; he looked around the room, the quietude and repose of the yellow figure were quite refreshing after the display of very disagreeable vivacity which he had witnersed; and although, the heads were divorced from their shoulders, those little unruly members, the tongues, had become silent and innoxions in the process. The gentleman led Miss Malford from the room of horrors, still likely to remain Miss Malford, and returned to his peaceable, though humble lodgings, not a "sadder," but certainly a "wiser man," than when he contemplates the desprete expedient of enriching and enlivening them by the introduction of a shrewdish wife.

Miss Malford was deeply but by his secession; she now began to despair of making conquests, and formed her character on the model of Bonnel Thornton's "mighty good sort of woman;" she interfered in the affairs of families—made husbands discontented with their wives—put variance between parents and their children—got gay nephews and saucy nieces scratched out of the wills of rich uncles and aunts-domineered over servantsed poor people.

aunts—domineered over servants—and lectured poor people.

After her intimacy with Miss Ogleby, however, she became convinced that although there may be much pleasure in mischievous actions in the aggregate, that peculiar branch, which consists in match-breaking, seems most decidedly cut out for the vocation of the old maid; and when she was once settled at Allingham, she devoted all her energies to that one single great point. I will not relate the number of proposed matches which these well assorted friends nipped in the bud or the blossom, during the first year of their residence at Allingham, but will hasten to introduce to my aders to a very pretty young ledy, who had the missortune of falling under their especial han.—Allingham was a town which, on ascount of its fine air, reasonable provisions, and frequent gair-ties, was considered a very desirable residence by persons of genteel habits and small fortunes; and Mrs. Stapleton, the handsome widow of an officer, deemed it an advrtageous pot for herself and her only daugh Rose, to settle in.

UMBRELLA HONESTY IN ENGLAND, Latter article, (an umbrella) in England de-serves attention, since umbrel-s, which are unfortunately so indispensable, are stolen in the most shameless manner, be it where it may, if you do not take particular care of them. This fact is so notorious, that I must them. This fact is so notorious, that I must translate for your amusement a passage from a newspaper relating to some society for the encouragement of rittee, which was to award a prize for the most homourable action, "The choice," continues the author, "was become extremely difficult; and it was nearly deterextremely diment; and it was nearly determined to give the prize to an individual who had paid his tailor's bill punctually for s-veral years, when another was puncted out, who had twice sent home an umbrella left at his house. At this unheard of act," adds the journalist, "the company first fell into mutewonder that so much virtue was still found in Israel; but at length loud and enthusiastic applause left the choice no longer doubtful.— Tour of a German Prince.

WAIT FOR THE APPLAUSE .-- At a county What for the Apptause.—At a county festival, where the Messids was performed, the gentleman to whom the aria "O thou that tellest" had been assigned, anticipating a favourable appreciation of his telents, wrote at the end of the song (the choras following immediately, the words "want for the applause." This he endorsed not only in the leader's copy, but in every one of the orchestra. At the conclusion of the song the leader transit and there was a dead ston. "Why stopped, and there was a dead stop. "Why do you not go on?" said the signer, in an agony of disappointed vanity. "I am wait do you not go on ?" said the signer, in an agony of dis spointed vanity. "I am waiting for the applause," was the calm reply of the sacastic conductor. This story reminds us of an anecdote which Robert Hall, of Brisus of an anecdote which Ropert Hall, of Bris-tol, was accustomed to relate. "I remem-ber," says his biographer, "at the distance of many years, with what a vivid feeling of the Indicrous he related an anecdote of a peech-er of some account in his day and connexion. In his sermons there sometimes as it seemed. In his sermons there is written here and there in the margin, 'cry here;' now I verily believe the doctor sometimes mistook the piace, and that was the cause of what appeared so unaccounjable.

A FAT GHOST .- We inserted, a few weeks ago, an amusing anecdote from the pen of Theodore Hook, of the part of the ghost in Hamlet having once been played by an actor, whose name he gave, in spectrales. Since then the Livespool play-goess have had an op-portunity of seeing the ghost played at our theatre by Mr. Stuart, with his arm in a sling. We have not room to set down all the prohibited puns extant; but we have just shown that the things which one hears, when one dines in the city (where men eat peas with a two-pronged fork, and bet mars with each other,) and novelties, and the perfection of good fun, are all flat, stale and unprofitable to those who have lived a little. profitable to these who have lived a little longer and seen a little more of the world, and who have heard puns when it was the fashion to commit them at the west end of the town. These hints are thrown out for the particular use of some sprightly persons, with whose factiousness we have been of tate extremely d-we apologize to our rational readers insertion of such stuff, even by way of surfeit to our quibbling patients.

CHRISTIANITY .- Pure and genuine Christianity never was, nor ever can be, the national religion of any country upon earth. It is a gold too refined to be worked up in any human stitution, without a large portion of alloy or no sooner is this small grain of mustard-seed watered with the fertile showers of civil watered with the fertile showers of civil moluments, than it grows up into a barge and spreading tree, under the shelter of whose branches the birds of prey and plunder will not fail to make for themselves comfortable habitations, and thence deface its beauty and destroy its fruits.

LATEST DATES From London, Oct 27 From New York, Nov From Laterpool, Oct 27 From Haldax, Nov From Patis, Oct 25 From Totonto, Nov No American mail was received in town

Her Majesty's steamer Medea arrived yes terday evening from Schediae with the bark Sophia in tow, having the 65th regiment on board. We believe that Quebec will be Head Quarters for this Resiment during the winter.

The American brigands who were taken prisoners at Prescott have been safely lodged in Fort Henry. Among them are two deser-ters from the 83rd Regiment, who were fighting in the ranks of the enemy against their old companions in arms.

Among the passengers that arrived last night in the steamer Canada was Mr. Wylie, Ad-jutant of the Quebec Light Infantry.

Mr. Solicitor General Stuart left town for Montreal on Wednesday evening to attend the Court Martiil. As the prisoners are en-titled to ten days to prepare themselves for trial, nothing of importance can take place before the 1st December.

Thomas Leigh Goldie, Esq., has been ap-pointed Civil Secretary to His Excellency the Administrator of the Government.

The police have been engaged yesterday and to-day in taking possession of fire-arms in St. Rochs and the Upper Town of Quebec.

The . fontreal Gazette says that the mov The Journal Gazette says that the move-ments of a 2roops from that city to the other side of the St. Lawrence, are unconnected with any actual or apprehended rising at Boucherville, or elsewhere, and that there is no truth in the report that the rebels had risen at Belleville in the Upper Province.

Yesterday, a woman named Ann Turnbull, residing in Griffintown, died from the effects of intemperance.—1b.

The Kingston Chronicle gives some further particulars of the engagement with the rebels at Prescott, from which we extract the following

Ten barrels of powder and several stands of Ten barrels of powder and several stands of arms, and ten thousand rounds of ball cartridge were found in the mill. Three pieces of arti-lery, which had been placed in front of the door of the mill, on a battery constructed of loose stones, were also captured. All the houses in the possession of the brigands were t on fire, except the mill.

It is with extreme regret that we learn that

Captain Drummond, of the Glengarry Militia, was shot—having gone into one of the houses on fire, and appearing at one of the windows, on hire, and appearing at one of the windows, it was supposed that he was a rebel—the volunteers fired, and he fell dead.

The body of Lieut. Johnson, of the 83rd Regiment, has been brought up. He will be interred on Monday, at two o'clock. We would suggest to our townmen, as a mark respect for the gallant dead, that their shops closed during the ceremony of the funeral. would suggest to our gentlemen who have arrived from Upper Canada, report having met the prisoners taken a Prescott, on their march to Kingston. Ther Two deserters from the 83rd regiment an among the number. About 30 of the enemy, and about 18 of the volunteers and regulars, e reported killed.

are reported Kiled.

"One passenger says, that the prisoners had reached Kingston; and that the steamer St George had arrived from Toronto with the intelligence, that martial law had been proclaimtelligence, that martial law had been proclaimed by Sir George Arthur.

"In the course of the day the remainder of the Royals, two companies of the 71st, and three field pieces were embarked on board the Bistamia steamer for Beucherville. The object of this expedition is not exactly known. It is said that it is owing to information received by the Government, that large depots of arms and ammunition are concealed in that part of the country. Another travers makes it part of the country. Another report makes it appear that the achels have been congregating in large numbers in the country in rear of that TH Ma Bul By Min

NOTICE.

THE Subscribers, general agents for Mo-rison's Pills, have appointed William Whittaker, Sub-Agent for the Upper Town, No. 27, St. John Street. LEGGE & CO.

LEGGE & CO.

That the public may be able to form some idea of Morison's Pills by their great censumption, the following calculation was made by Mr. Wing, Clerk to the Stamo Office, Somerst House, in a period of six years, part only of the time that Morison's Pills have been before the public, the number of stamps delivered for that medicine amounted to three million, nine hundred and one thou

The object in placing the foregoing powerful argument in favour of Mr. Morison's sys.em, and to which the public attention is directed, namely, that it was only by trying an innocuous purg tive medicine to such an extend that the truth of the Hyegian system could possibly have been established. It is clear that all the medical men in England, or the world, put together, have not tried a system of vegetable purertion to the extend and in manner prescribed by the Hyegists. How, therefore, can they (much Issindividually) know any thing about the extent of its properties, The object in placing the foregoin d )ts properties.

BALDNESS.

BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR is the A grandest onament belonging to the hu-man frame. How strangely the loss of it changes the countenance, and prematurely brings on the appearance of old age, which auses many to recoil at being un overed, and ometimes even shun society to avoid the jests senatures even sum society to avoid the jists and sneers of their acquaintances; the remainder of their lives consequently spent in retirement. In short, not even the loss of property fills the generous thinking youth, with that heavy sinking gloom as does the loss of his hair.—To avert all these unpleasant circumstances, OLDRIDGE'S BALM OF COLUMstances, OLDRIDGE'S BALM OF COLUM-BIA stops the hair from falling off on the first application and a few bottles restores it again. It likewise produces eyebrows and whiskers prevents the hair from turning gray, makes it curl beautifully, and frees it from scurf.
