Present Day of Thought.

(Rev. Bart. A. Hartwell in Truth)

"Altruism is a disease of the soul before it becomes an error of the understanding."—(Plato.)

"There is no people so wild and savage as not to have believed in God, though they have been acquainted with His nature."—(Cicero.)

"Teach your children the three R's and leave out the great R of religion, and you will only produce a fourth R, rascaldom, and a generation of clever devils."—(The Duke of Wellington)

Addressing his remarks to the socialistic element within the organization of the Knights of Labor who are striving to capture that body, Mr. Samuel Gompers declared: "I have studied your philosophy; read your economics, and not the meanness of them; studied your standard works; both in English and German; have not only read them but studied them. I have heard your orators, and watched the work of your movement on the world over. I have kept close watch on your doctrines for thirty years; have been closely associated with many of you, and know how you think and what you propose. I know what you have up your sleeve. And I want to say to you that I am entirely at variance with your philosophy. Economically you are un sound, socially you are wrong, industrially you are impossible."

Last month the Grand Jury of the City of New York met and witnessed a performance of a certain very objectionable play that is about to tour the country. As is usual with the promoters of such theatrical productions, the managers profess to have as a prime motive the inculcation of a "moral lesson." In answer to this pretension Mr. Frank W. Smith, president of the New York County Federation of Catholic Societies, made the following statement: "The object of each play is not to teach a moral lesson, but to make money. New York theatrical managers are going wild in their search for sensations. They would put naked women on the stage next if they thought they could escape the law. We believe that a vast majority of the people do not wish broiled pornography on the stage; that they do not wish the filth of the secrete to be dug up and splattered in the faces of respectable and clean-thinking people. We believe the law prevents such disgusting degradation of the stage in an effort to coin into dollars the lowest passions of the degenerate humanity. We do not believe those of dull moral sense should be permitted to produce such shows in public theatres. We are leaving no stone unturned in this fight. New York ought to be ashamed."

"A Few Memories" by Mary Anderson (Mrs. Navarre). Our Mary, as she was affectionately called by her fellow-Americans, is a more than interesting account of the wonderful career of that famous actress who retired from the stage at the pinnacle of her success in 1889. Kings and queens, princes and presidents, men of letters and leaders of science, all the world's illustrious personalities of the nineteenth century, pass before us in this volume, a dazzling galaxy, paying tribute and honor to her genius and art. One of the great sorrows of her life, narrows the author's, was the opposition to her stage career of her uncle, who was a priest—Peter Anton—"Nicky," as she called him. But never the breath of scandal touched Mary Anderson. Her purity of life was as much prized and admired as her ability as an artist. In her present memoirs the comments especially upon the loose tendencies of our stage. "To-day," she declares, "so many plays leave a painful, often a harmful effect. I am aware that to say this is to run counter to the latest developments of the drama; but I fortify my opinion by recalling what Joseph Jefferson once said to me. He was very severe upon plays that drag one through the mire of immorality, even when they show a good lesson at the end. 'What I could not invite my friends to see and hear in my own parlor,' he said, 'I would not feel at liberty to put before my friends in the theatre.'" Further on she tells us: "I remember that at a luncheon party years after the above conversation, 'The Tosts' was discussed, and Mr. James Russell Lowell said he thought of the thought of the play. 'I have not seen it he answered. I refuse to have my mind dragged in the gutter. If Madame Bernhardt will appear in such plays, I for one will forgo the pleasure of seeing her act. I have also heard Lord Penrynon declaim against 'his realism, this degradation of the drama,' he called it."

"The Live Line" prints a letter appearing in the leading American Socialist publication written by a Portuguese Socialist who seemingly does not entertain a very high opinion of the efficiency of the present regime in that country. He writes: "Portugal is once more the scene of anarchistic assaults and conspiracies. Never before has it been so near the brink of ruin. Not one of the five Cabinets that have been in power has done anything of constructive importance for the country. The politicians who conduct the business of the country are ambitious office-seekers, who use the valuable time in arranging festivities, or in persecuting the workmen or the royalists. Although the Republic has the working men to thank for its erection, the Republic, it misrepresents the Portuguese proletariat as it has never been a day by the Modarby. The number of unemployed is constantly increasing. National workshops have been opened, to afford employment for the workers. Since the public treasury is a moly, however, these people have worked only on three days a week. The increase in taxes has caused an intolerable increase in rent also. Since the Republic, by its folly and its persecutions has forfeited the good will of all the classes, the danger of the restoration of the Monarchy can be met only by the adoption of at least a few measures of political and social reform. Since the establishment of the Republic there have been no communal elections; the debate in Parliament on popular elections has been postponed time and time again, because the Republican leaders refuse to give up their spoils. Coming from a Socialist we may say in the language of the newspapers: 'This is important if true.' And in view of such a state of affairs the generally friendly attitude of the socialist press of our own country towards the revolutionary element in Portugal is all the more reprehensible."

Since the death of Professor James O. Heward, Henri Bergson and Rudolf Eucken are foremost among the thinkers who have the public ear. Both are noted for their candid criticism of modern thought and culture, and in this negative sense the Christian apologist will find them valuable aids in pointing out the defects and limitations of what is known as "modern intellectual and material progress." As for constructive work, we venture to say of their solutions of the problem of human life they but substitute new difficulties for old. "Our age," declares Professor Eucken, "is an age afflicted with an immense contradiction. It is wonderfully great in its mastery of and achievement within the enclosing world; but, on the other hand, it is deplorably poor and insecure in regard to the problems of the inner life and the inner world." (The Truth of Religion.) Again he declares: "A paralyzing doubt saps the vitality of our age. We see a clear proof of this in the fact that with all our astounding achievements we are not really happy. There is no prevailing sense of confidence and security, but rather a tendency to emphasize man's insignificance, and to think meanly of his position in the universe. A closer scrutiny reveals the presence of a genuine endeavor to unify life; but even so the processes adapted are so widely divergent as to be directly antagonistic. * * * Over against a lavish output of departmental work we have to see a painful incapacity to deal with life as a whole, and a growing uncertainty as to the goal aimed at and the nature of the path to be followed." (The Meaning and The Value of Life; p. 2.) In his "Life's Basis and Life's Ideal," we read, pp. 93-94: "Sharp contrasts have always been found in human experience; and in transitional periods in history they have been felt with painful acuteness. But never did they extend so far over the whole of the life and so deeply affect fundamental; never was there a much uncertainty with regard to what should be the main direction and endeavor and the meaning of all human existence and man's relation, as in the present." Says Professor Sheldon of Boston University: "If it is the office of a prophet not to a few smooth things, but to lay bare the faults in the contemporary generation, it is Eucken who may be regarded as fulfilling somewhat of a prophetic function in his unparalytic criticism of the present age. Over against the self-complacency and self-sufficiency in which the age is prone to indulge, his message is on its essential poverty as respects the deeper things of life may well provoke to serious reflection."

Italy's Great Poet.

This great poet of Italy was born in Florence on the 14th day of March, 1265, and came from an old and distinguished family. He is best known in the popular literature as the author of "Dante's Inferno," which stands almost alone in its field as a daring imagery. He was a most gifted artist and scholar. Boccaccio relates that before his birth his mother dreamed that she lay under a very lofty laurel, growing in a green meadow, by a very clear fountain, when she felt the pang of a child-birth; that her child, feeding on the berries which fell from the laurel and on the waters of the fountain, in a very short time became a shepherd and attempted to reach the leaves of the laurel, whose fruit he desired; that, trying to obtain them, he fell, and rose up, no longer a man, but in the guise of a peacock. Dante's career was indeed, most strange and odd. We have space only for the most pertinent. He became involved in the civil strife which agitated Florence and spent many years of his life in exile. The fame of his learning and philosophy caused those who had banished him to offer to permit his return on payment of a nominal fine, but he refused the offer. When but a boy he met at her father's house a young girl, Beatrice Portinari, only nine years old, and the story of his love for her forms

"Androcles and the Lion" is an offensive mixing of Christianity and buffoonery. Mr. Shaw was not at all flattered by the reception tendered his last production. The audience showed its disapproval by what Mr. Shaw termed "Senseless, incontinent, indecent, irritating, ill-mannered guffawing and bawling." He says that they "almost ruined the production," and he registered "The Fall of Malacca" to "convey my sentiments to the brawlers in the most offensive terms your pen can compass." This is Shaw's old complaint that spoils his work; but this time he declares that he is really angry, and says he would like to finish the run of "Androcles and the Lion" by "throwing the audience to a lion." So for once the imper or b's Bernard Shaw is perturbed.

Tragic Marine Disaster.

The destruction, by fire, of the Steamer Volturmo referred to in our last issue, was one of the most tragic of marine disasters. One hundred and thirty-six lives were lost and over five hundred were saved; but, had not the wireless been brought into action, most likely all would have been lost and the world would have no knowledge of what happened to the steamer and her human freight. This is but one more tribute to the inestimable benefit conferred on the human race by that marvelous invention, wireless telegraphy.

The Volturmo, a steamship of the Uranium Line, was on her voyage from Hamburg to Halifax with a ship's company, passengers and crew, of about 700. Fire was discovered breaking from the hold about 7 o'clock Friday morning. This was followed by several explosions, and it soon became evident the fire could not be subdued. A tremendous gale was raging and the seas were running very high.

The captain gave the order to send out the call for aid. Out over the trackless ocean went the call of distress from the operator's ticking instrument. The message was first picked up by the Carmania of the Cunard Line, and she at once reversed her course and proceeded full speed towards the point indicated. Her answering message was evidently not caught by the Volturmo, at least for some time; perhaps the latter's apparatus by this time had been destroyed by the explosions. In any event the uncertainty of receiving aid seems to have been the cause of the greatest loss of life among those on the Volturmo; as no less than six life boats were launched before the Carmania arrive, and all of them with their human freight were lost. Three of them were dashed to pieces against the side of the steamer and their occupants killed or drowned. Three others got clear only to be swamped in the dreadful seas and their crews drowned.

Towards noon the Carmania reached the vicinity of the doomed vessel and sent out a life boat in charge of her first officer. They found it impossible, in such a sea, to come close to the burning steamer, and only regained their own ship with the greatest difficulty. Rafts were also sent over but they passed by. The Carmania had repeated the call for aid and their call and the original signal was picked up by many steamers. The consequence was that by night fall no less than eleven great liners formed a ring about the burning vessel; but could do scarcely anything by way of rescue, owing to the dreadful sea conditions. The Carmania, meantime, sent out a call for an oil ship and was answered by the tank-steamer Narragansett.

The fire, all this time, was rapidly gaining ground and all on board the steamer were huddled on the afterdeck. This deck itself became so hot from the fire below that the soles of their boots were burning. This condition of things continued during the night with little change till coming on morning. By this time the storm had somewhat abated and the sea went down a little. The oil steamer had also arrived and poured tons of oil on the waves. The work of rescue commenced about 4 o'clock Friday morning and proceeded rapidly. Boats from the different ships came fairly close to the Volturmo and by means of ropes the passengers were transferred to them and then taken to the ships waiting for them. Some jumped into the sea and were picked up by the boats; but others who jumped were lost. In all something over 500 were saved and about 136 were lost.

Throughout all this ordeal, the brave and youthful Captain Inch of the Volturmo stood at his post and directed operations. He was the last to be taken off the doomed vessel, preserving and carrying with him the ship's papers. It is satisfactory to learn that his bravery is appreciated by his employers, as is evident from this intelligence received from New York:

The unwritten but almost inexorable law of the seas which bars a captain who loses his ship from being given another command, will not be applied to Captain Francis Inch, of the Volturmo. The officials of the Uranium line made it known today that the heroism of the young captain, his desperate though losing fight to save his vessel, and the brave part he played in the battle which resulted in the saving of such a large proportion of the Volturmo's passengers and crew will preserve him from the fate of many a master whose ship the sea has claimed. "The line needs men like Inch," said Manager Thomas. "He will be given another boat to command and we will be glad to keep him in our employ."

"They remind me," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, at Ormskirk, "of the astronomer who looked so much at the stars that he fell down a well and took his last look at the stars as he went beneath the waters." If it was the stripes as well as the stars he was looking at we should guess the accident happened on September 21, 1911. Many of Sir Wilfrid's hearers would suspect that the reference was autobiographical. — Mail and Empire.

At present the salaries to rural postmasters are $35 per year. Hon. Mr. Pelletier has decided to increase this to $50 per year. Repeated representations were made to the old government on behalf of the rural postmasters, but were ignored. Since assuming office Mr. Pelletier has done much to improve the postal service, and at the same time has also improved the conditions of the employees in this work by increasing the salaries of the letter carriers and the railway mail clerks. He has now granted this increase to rural postmasters, which was continually refused by the Liberal government.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Governor General of Canada, accompanied by the Duchess and Princess Patricia, left Liverpool for Canada on board the Empress of Ireland on Friday last. On their departure from London for Liverpool the Vice-Regal party were given a hearty send off by their Royal kindred, by Lord Starbuck, Canada's High Commissioner, and other distinguished Canadians and Londoners. They will arrive at Quebec tomorrow on board the Empress, and will be greeted with full vice regal honors. Premier Borden and several members of his Cabinet, will be present to officially meet and welcome their Highnesses. The Premier comes to Quebec tonight to attend a banquet tendered him by the citizens of the ancient capital.

About the happiest man in the world today should be Marconi. To make a wonderful epoch-creating scientific discovery is one thing, to behold it put into practical operation is another, but to live to see the almost weekly savings of lives by it, with the totals running into the thousands—that must make a man feel singularly favored by fortune. —New York Evening Post.

A youthful British nobleman who has been in this country for a year says he has been in every city from Halifax to Vancouver and has paid only two railway fares. He is going to write a book about Canada. One of the most interesting chapters in it should be that in which he describes his method of avoiding the conductor. —Montreal Herald.

It cannot be said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has led his party wisely since its defeat two years ago. His chief object has been to embarrass the government. In forcing the senate to reject the naval aid bill he made a profound mistake. If he had frankly agreed to the contribution of Dreadnoughts and put forward a Canadian navy as the sounder permanent policy, he would occupy a far stronger position. There was contempt for ministers in the arrogant notion that they could force a general election. The country grew angry at the long and senseless obstruction of public business which disgraced the last session of parliament. —Toronto News.

Governor Sulzer Impeached

At Albany, N. Y., the Capital of New York State, on Thursday last, Governor William Sulzer was found guilty by the high court, of impeachment on three of the articles preferred against him. They were one, two and four. He was declared innocent on the charges contained in article three.

Next day he was removed from office but not disqualified from holding office in that state in the future unless this is a substantial change in the informal vote reported to have been taken by the court on these questions in secret session.

For the same reason it is expected that he will be found guilty on the other four articles still remaining to be voted upon when the court adjourns.

Lieut. Governor Martin H. Glynn, who has been acting governor since the impeachment of Sulzer, becomes chief executive of the state. He is an Albany newspaper owner, Robert F. Wagner, a New York attorney becomes lieutenant governor. He is the majority leader in the senate.

The vote on articles one and two was 39 to 18, a bare two-thirds majority. The former article charges that the governor falsified his statements of campaign contributions; the latter that he committed perjury in so doing.

The vote on article three, which charges that the Governor bribed witnesses to withhold testimony from the Frawley investigating committee, was unanimous in favor of the Governor.

The vote on article four was 43 to 14, six members changing their votes on articles one and two from "not guilty" to "guilty" and from "guilty" to "not guilty." This article charges that the Governor suppressed evidence by means of threats to keep witnesses from testifying before the Frawley committee. Among these the Dan. W. Peck, state superintendent of public works, who testified at the trial that the Governor had asked him to commit perjury.

The secret formal vote to remove the governor was said to be 43 to 14, the same as on article four, and the vote not to disqualify him was said to be unanimous.

Article six, which charges that the governor committed larceny in speculating with his campaign contributions was said not to have been sustained in the secret session by a vote of fifty declaring the Governor was not guilty, to seven against him.

Article five, which charges that he prevented a particular witness, Frederick L. Colwell, from attending the sessions of the Frawley committee; article seven, that he threatened to use his office and influence to effect the vote or political action of certain assemblymen men, and article eight, that he had corruptly used his influence to effect the prices of securities on the Stock Exchange, were reported to have also been decided in favor of the Governor in the secret session by a practically unanimous vote.

President Judge Edward Cullen, Democrat, who will shortly retire from the bench, voted not guilty in every article and rendered a long opinion in explaining his votes. The other eight judges of the court of appeal were divided. On articles one and two Judges Willard Bartlett, Democrat, and Emory A. Chase and William E. Werner, Republicans, voted for the Governor, and against him voted Judges Frederick Collin, William H. Cuddeback, and John W. Hogan, Democrats, and Frank H. Hiscock and Nathan H. Miller, Republicans, making a division among them of five to four against the governor.

On article four, Judges Bartlett, Chase and Warner changed their votes from "not guilty" to "guilty" and Judges Hiscock and Miller changed from "guilty" to "not guilty," making against him a division from six to three. On charges one and two, 23 Democratic Senators and eleven Republicans voted against the Governor while those voting in his favor numbered seven Democrats, five Republicans, one Independent League Democrat and one Progressive Republican.

The vote on article four was the same except that Judges Bartlett, Chase and Warner, and Senators Emmerson, Herrick and Palmer changed their votes from "not guilty" to "guilty," and Judges Hiscock and Miller changed from "guilty" to "not guilty." Total guilty 43, not guilty 14. Presiding Judge Cullen held that the offenses charged in articles one and two were not impeachable and that the Governor neither falsified his statement under the provisions of the election law nor committed "legal perjury."

Practically every member of the court explained his vote when the roll called on article one, although those who voted in favor of the governor did not enter at length into a discussion of the merits of the case or of the matters of law, and precedent involved as did the others, including all the judges. The latter filed with the court lengthy opinions in support of their votes.

One of the judges, Nathan L. Miller, who was designated to the court of appeals bench by Sulzer, denounced him as "totally unfit for office."

Gold Reserve Working Well.

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—The central gold reserve established by the government at Montreal under the provisions of the Bank Act of the last session, has entered upon its work, and, according to advices received here, is fulfilling the object for which it was created, namely, to increase the note circulation. Deposits of about four million dollars are reported. For every dollar deposited in gold in this reserve the banks making deposit may issue an equivalent in note circulation. This is in addition to the ordinary powers and those exercised under the provisions governing emergency circulation. The institution is designed as a factor in increasing the circulation at periods, such as those of the crop movement, when it is most needed, the gold reserve is directed by a board of trustees upon which the government is represented by the Royal Trust Company. The star trustees are the Montreal, Royal, and Commerce Banks.

Wild Women Sentenced.

Glasgow, Oct. 15.—Two militant suffragettes, Margaret Morrison, an artist, and Mrs. Smith, a well known woman doctor, were sentenced today at the court of sessions to eight months imprisonment each for attempting on July 24 to set fire to a large mansion in a Glasgow suburb, which was at one time the residence of the late Sir John Muir, a former Lord Mayor of Glasgow.

Cattle Calore.

A Toronto despatch of the 18th says: With the free entrance of cattle to the United States, the railroads are trying the effect of the Wilson tariff bill, and the officials are happy. 'I don't know where all the cattle is coming from,' said a Grand Trunk traffic man today. 'All the farmers are hauling their live stock over the border. Business has nearly doubled. The farmers are shipping anything with skin on, even if there is hardly any beef on them. 'We have handled 420 cars of cattle through Toronto since Sunday and they were all headed for the border. Sunday 210 cars were handled. Monday 85 cars were shipped and yesterday we took care of 125.'

Man Lost From Vessel.

The British schooner Adonis came into Charlottetown last Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock with her flag at half mast, having lost one of her crew overboard in Egmont Bay on the night of Oct. 15th. The schooner, which hails from Winsor, N. S., came into this port in quest of a man to complete her crew. She was bound from Bathurst, N. B., for New York with lumber and sailed into Egmont Bay on Wednesday night for shelter. She was lying at anchor and had a lead line overboard to indicate whether or not she was drifting. The deceased, Philip Guelton, was alone on anchor watch between 10 and 11 o'clock. When the captain, who had seen him only half an hour before, came on deck to speak to him the man was missing. The ship was searched but no trace of him could be found. It is supposed that while handling the lead line he in some way dropped overboard. As the sea was running heavy it was not considered safe to lower a boat and nothing was seen or heard of the unfortunate man.

Imperator's Boilers Unfit For Service.

Hamburg, Oct. 15.—The Hamburg American Line today admits in spite of earlier denials that the boilers of the Imperator have proved unsatisfactory and that complete rebuilding is necessary in order to reduce the excessive coal consumption and to increase the speed of the vessel.

The builders by their contract were required to compensate the company for the compulsory retirement of the vessel from service and will have to pay approximately $1,500 for every day she is laid off.

Hare had been suffering mentally in his seat during Mass, when, without warning, he suddenly jumped up drew a revolver and began to shoot. Several powerful fishermen seated near him clutched his arm and took the weapon from him. Afterwards he was placed under arrest. After a physician had bled his head the Bishop continued the Mass, as if nothing had happened.

At New Westminster B. C. about Oct. 1st, death claimed as its victim Leo McDonald, son of Mr. Rodrick C. McDonald formerly of East Point in this Province. In a letter to his brother L. McDonald, Esq. East Point, the bereaved father thus refers to the sad occurrence: "He was sick for about two and a half years and although for the past six or eight months he had no hope of his recovery still it was at the sad hour he passed away. He was about six feet tall and a good looking young man, I will send you his picture as soon as I can get some taken. He had a most happy death and was ready to die. He had just having received all the consolations Holy Mother Church could give him, and completed his jubilee about two weeks before his death. Father Book our parish priest was with him nearly all his last night. A few minutes before his death he was in the presence of Father Bok, priest in a dear strong voice the Lord's prayer, Hall Mary, Apostles Creed, Confiteor, the Act of Faith, Hope and Charity and Confession and Jesus Mary and Joseph may I dig in your heart in your hand company. He called each of his brothers and sisters and kissed them good bye and requested each of them to continue to be good and he did the same to Joe's four children who were in the room at the time. Johnny came in about this time and he said to me Johnny and I dig in your hand to leave good by with him. He selected his own pallbearers and gave directions how he should be dressed after death. It was wonderful to see how cool and composed he was to the very last. May Almighty God have mercy on his soul."

Mamma said, 'Little one, go and see if grandmother's ready to come to tea.'

The Last Redoubt.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

found he had lost his way, and the noise of fighting grew fainter and fainter as he struggled through the bushes, getting more and more entangled in their bewildering mass.

Very well. Good by, Michael and God be with you.

He stood and watched his brother as long as he was in sight. Once Michael turned and waved his hand, and in another moment he had vanished.

HAD A TERRIBLE ATTACK OF DIARRHŒA. Became Very Weak.

Diarrhœa, especially if allowed to run any length of time, causes great weakness, and the only thing to do is to check it on its first appearance.
