Stella Mordant.

—OR—
The Cruise of the "Kingfisher."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The girl, confused and delighted by the kiss, ran out of the room half laughing, half crying, and Stella locked the door and completed her preparations; and they were few and simple. She had only to put on her hat and jacket, and wait until the Lisles went in to dinner, and, so to speak, the coast was clear.

The dressing-bell had gone some time ago, and presently she heard the dinner-bell. She waited for five or ten minutes, then she opened the door softly and stole out on to the corridor, like, as she told herself, somewhat bitterly, a thief in the night. And was she not innocent? Had she not stolen, though all theoretically the heart of the man who had saved her from death and offered to share his rank and fortune with her, to make her his wife?

She watched the servants cross and enter the dining-room, then she cautiously descended to the landing below the corridor. From here a passage and stairs led to the small hall which opened on to the garden. It was only used by the servants, and they were all, as she knew, engaged in the kitchen or the dining-room. Quite unobserved she gained the small hall and let herself into the garden, closing the door softly after her.

It was dark now, but she kept in the shadow of the shrubbery, and avoiding the avenue and the main lodge, where she might have been seen by the lodge-keeper, she crossed the park and got on to the road through one of the smaller gates. Instinctively she took the direction opposite to Market Raton, and she walked on quickly and with a throbbing heart. The darkness, the loneliness of the road began to tell upon her in a few minutes, and once she paused and stretched out her hands, murmuring:

"Oh, Rath! Rath! If I could only go to you!" Then she set her teeth hard and fought against the sudden weakness. "I must not give way!" she said to herself, resolutely. "I must prove myself worthy of Rath's teaching. He used to laugh at me and call me a girl when I cried because I failed in something he did so easily. Oh! if he were only here now to laugh at me! But he would not laugh," she thought, as she remembered how tenderly he had taken her to his breast, when she was overwhelmed by her mother's death, how gentle and patient he was with her when she was ill or in pain.

So she strove to keep up her heart,

Days of Rheumatism Now Over! Wonderful Miracles Worked by "Nerviline"

Its Strange Power is the Marvel of Thousands it Has Cured.

You will welcome the good news that "Nerviline" rapidly relieves the most excruciating pains.

Nerviline penetrates deeply into the tissue, and possesses pain-subduing power at least five times greater than anything heretofore discovered. Its curative influence upon rheumatic pains is really wonderful.

Nerviline is offered to the people of this community under a positive guarantee of its reliability.

As a curative agent of nervous pain, every rheumatic should test this great remedy.

and tried to form some plan for the immediate future. Lady Cecilia had insisted upon giving her a quarter's salary in advance, and this money Stella had reluctantly brought with her; it should be repaid when she reached Rath. With this money she would pay her train-fare to London, and live until she found some employment.

She tried to think of what she could do, tried to think of anything but Lord Lisle and Cecilia; but they haunted her. Presently she became conscious of a strange pain in her ankle, and discovered that she was walking slowly and with difficulty. She stopped and leant against a stile for a few minutes; but when she began to walk again the pain had increased, and she felt that the foot was swelling. Another girl would have given in at once; but Stella had been well trained by Rath. She realized that she should not be able to reach the next station down the line, as she had intended doing, and that she must perforce make for the one at Market Raton. She turned up one of the lanes from the high road, and she was not as old as she had at first thought, and guessed that privation or grief had given the face its expression of premature age.

"It is as I thought," said the woman. "You have sprained your ankle. How did you do it?"

"I met with an accident," said Stella.

"An accident? How long ago?"

"How long?" said Stella, putting her hand to her head confusedly. "I don't remember—yes, this afternoon evening—some hours ago."

The woman looked at her with a kind of dull surprise and pity.

"You must have suffered agonies," she remarked.

"No," said Stella, "only the last few minutes. I—I did not know that there was anything the matter."

The woman looked at her steadily.

"You are a woman," she said. "A man would have fainted with the pain; but, as it was, you were nearly fainting. Drink that."

She gave her a glass of water, and Stella drank it eagerly.

"I am better now," she said. "I can't tell you how grateful I am to you for your kindness! I will go my way now; my foot is much easier."

The woman smiled in a sadly wise way.

"You could not walk across this room," she said; "put your foot down and try."

Stella proved the truth of the assertion, and sank down again, looking up with dismay at the Good Samaritan.

"Oh! what shall I do?" she exclaimed. "I must go."

"Where are you going?"

"To London," said Stella, in too much pain and distress to hesitate.

"I want to go by the night train."

The woman shook her head.

"Is it so important?" she asked.

"Will your friends expect you? It is too late to telegraph."

Stella coloured.

"I have no friends to expect—there is no one to meet me," she said.

Then, after a pause, she went on: "I'm going in search of a situation. I—I have just left one. I'm afraid I can't tell you."

The woman made a significant gesture with her thin but well-formed hand.

"I don't want to know, don't intend to ask any questions," she said quietly. "I can see you are young and inexperienced, and in trouble. I'm not too old to feel for you—I'm younger than I look—and I've been in trouble; worse trouble than yours, I'll be bound. If you like to stay here until you are quite well, you are welcome. But perhaps you have somewhere else to go?"

Stella tried to express her gratitude.

"No, I've nowhere else to go, and I will stay thankfully," she said, fighting with her tears. "But—but I do not wish anyone to know where I am," she added, colouring painfully.

staggered as she gratefully caught at the proffered arm.

The woman knocked at the door, and when it was opened by a maid-servant of the lodging-house type, she said:

"Give me some matches, and send us up the supper; I've got a friend with me."

The girl nodded apathetically, and the woman having helped Stella up the narrow stairs, took her into a small sitting-room and led her to a sofa.

"Don't move till I light the lamp," she said.

Stella obeyed helplessly; and when the lamp was lit, her benefactor knelt down and, with a table knife, cut the lace.

"I shall have to cut the boot away, your foot is swollen so," she said. "It will give you some pain, I'm afraid."

"No, no; I don't mind!" said Stella, trying to smile.

"As the operation was performed with calm but gentle deftness, Stella notwithstanding her pain, regarded the operator curiously.

She was a tall and well-made woman, with well-formed features belonging to a face which had been beautiful and was still handsome. It was as pale as Stella's own, but with a different pallor, and the contrast afforded by the dark eyes and hair made the whiteness of her face all the more striking.

As she looked up, Stella saw that she was not as old as she had at first thought, and guessed that privation or grief had given the face its expression of premature age.

"It is as I thought," said the woman. "You have sprained your ankle. How did you do it?"

"I met with an accident," said Stella.

"An accident? How long ago?"

"How long?" said Stella, putting her hand to her head confusedly. "I don't remember—yes, this afternoon evening—some hours ago."

TIZ PUTS JOY IN SORE, ACHING FEET

Use "TIZ" for tired, tender, swollen, sweaty, calloused feet and corns—It's grand!

"TIZ" makes sore, burning, tired feet fairly dance with delight. Away go the aches and pains, the corns, callouses, blisters, bunions and chilblains.

"TIZ" draws out the acids and poisons that puff up your feet. No matter how hard you work, how long you dance, how far you walk, or how long you remain on your feet, "TIZ" brings restful foot comfort. "TIZ" is magical, grand, wonderful for tired, aching, swollen, smarting feet. Ah! how comfortable, how happy you feel. Your feet just tingle for joy; shoes never hurt or seem tight.

Get a 25 cent box of "TIZ" now from any druggist or department store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet and happy. Just think! A whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.

The woman nodded.

"I understand—at least I understand you want to keep quiet; and I don't want to know the reason."

"I—I have done nothing wrong," said poor Stella, shamefacedly.

The woman smiled with a mixture of sadness and bitterness.

"I don't know that it would make any difference to me if you had," she said, with real or affected indifference. "My experience is that the ones who do wrong are the ones that don't suffer. Take off your hat and acket and lie down and rest; I'll bring you something. Tell the landlady I shall want that other bedroom," she said to the servant-girl. "Now, here's some tea and an egg. Oh, I don't suppose you're hungry, you're in too much pain; but you'd better try and eat something, if it's ever so little."

When she had brought the things Stella she took off her own hat and jacket, and Stella saw that the woman was indeed quite young.

"You are very good to me," she said. "I want to tell you my name; it is Stella Mordant—but I hope you will not—I beg you not to tell anyone."

The woman laughed a short, weary kind of laugh.

"My dear girl, I'm not in the least curious, and I'll promise you to keep my mouth shut. My name's Nita—but"

Stella proved the truth of the assertion, and sank down again, looking up with dismay at the Good Samaritan.

"Oh! what shall I do?" she exclaimed. "I must go."

"Where are you going?"

"To London," said Stella, in too much pain and distress to hesitate.

"I want to go by the night train."

The woman shook her head.

"Is it so important?" she asked.

"Will your friends expect you? It is too late to telegraph."

Stella coloured.

"I have no friends to expect—there is no one to meet me," she said.

Then, after a pause, she went on: "I'm going in search of a situation. I—I have just left one. I'm afraid I can't tell you."

The woman made a significant gesture with her thin but well-formed hand.

"I don't want to know, don't intend to ask any questions," she said quietly. "I can see you are young and inexperienced, and in trouble. I'm not too old to feel for you—I'm younger than I look—and I've been in trouble; worse trouble than yours, I'll be bound. If you like to stay here until you are quite well, you are welcome. But perhaps you have somewhere else to go?"

Stella tried to express her gratitude.

"No, I've nowhere else to go, and I will stay thankfully," she said, fighting with her tears. "But—but I do not wish anyone to know where I am," she added, colouring painfully.

I daresay you've heard it; it's well—I was going to say too well known."

"No, I've not heard it before," said Stella.

"No? Oh, well, you'll see it on the posters large enough—or you would have done if you'd got as far as the station. I am the great Nita, the serio-comic artist; I've come down here with a music-hall company; they've gone to the hotel, but I always take lodgings; I like to be alone. It's a queer fancy, but I can afford it. There, you needn't look so unhappy; when I said 'alone' I meant away from the rest of the crew. I'm glad enough of your company."

CHAPTER XXIX.

Nita waited until Stella had, with difficulty, managed to eat some food, then she cut away the stocking from the injured foot and applied a wet compress.

"I'm afraid I hurt you, but I can't very well help it," she remarked.

"I was marvelling at the skilful and gentle way you have done it," said Stella, who had grown white under the operation, but had succeeded in repressing any other sign of pain.

"Were you ever a hospital nurse?" Nita laughed shortly and shook her head.

"No," she replied. "I've been a great many things, but not that; but I'm used to accidents of this sort. Some of us are always slipping on the stage or getting a strain through overacting, and we learn what to do; for a doctor isn't always at hand, and if he is there isn't always time to wait for him."

Stella, while looking on, had noticed a wedding-ring on Nita's thin hand, and she looked down anxiously and gratefully into the face which wore that saddest of all expressions, the hopeless resignation which is next door to callousness. One sees it in the eyes of those who have lost the hope of living, who have suffered from the hope deferred which makes the heart sick.

"You will feel easier in the morning; and if the sprain is all that's the matter with you, you'll soon be all right," said Nita. "But—and she glanced at Stella with a mixture of shrewdness and pity—"you look as if you had had some trouble."

Stella's eyes grew moist; physical pain had made her weak and very susceptible to sympathy.

"Yes," she said, trying to speak quite steadily; "I—I have had some trouble, a very great trouble. I—I have lost, been parted from, a friend, the best friend in the world."

"Then it must be a woman," said Nita, as she rose and took up a stage dress, and began to mend or alter it.

Stella shook her head.

"No; it was a man," she said in a low voice.

Nita raised her handsome, careworn face for a moment.

THE THOUGHTS
CLEAN-UP DAY.
We have heard nothing of Clean-Up Day yet, but doubtless the weather has had something to do with the delay. The time is now, however, as one day of real clean-up weather is going to make us look very shabby and dirty.
There is still a lot of paper that remains ungathered on many streets. It would not take much time for the men gathered it up as they swept along and made sure that the streets looked better "because they had seen that way." And speaking of streets, some of the principal streets are far from clean looking in the morning when the row of cans, basins and other receptacles containing ashes are not removed till perhaps 11 a.m. It makes it hard on the householders' feet because they are left with nothing to put their morning ashes in. Perhaps the work of the Sanitary Supt. will see to it and he will try to remedy the situation.

ARBOR DAY.
We do not observe any Arbor Day as other countries and in one way there is not a great deal of room in our streets or public places for trees. Unfortunately there are many streets which are wide enough to plant along these I think some of the fine trees in the Colonial Road and grounds that were hewn down many years ago, unnecessarily. I think it will be many, many years before the saplings put in will reach the height, and the old trees might have been kept there until the new ones had begun to reach out their branches. We have not the fine feelings of the Japanese, whose children plant out on a suitable date to see the cherry trees in blossom, but I think it would be infinitely better that the same and a love of nature should be taught in the schools than some of the subjects the children have to learn. I remember that of all the lessons at school, the week of the year's annations was the best because the regular lessons would be dispensed with and the Headmaster would have an interesting subject like Botany and explain the nature and life of plants. It was pleasant, too, that the Master would drop his schoolmaster's

"I suffered for about 15 years with my kidneys. I could get nothing to relieve me. The pain went all through my back and shoulders and down the calves of my legs. When I would sit down for a while, I could not get up again until I would walk a mile or more. The pain was so terrible. I was advised to take GIN PILLS. I did so and in a few days the pain was all gone and I was as well as ever. It is about two and a half years since I quit taking them. My back is all right, my pain and my nervous headache. ### The Closing of the Legislature.

This afternoon His Excellency the Governor closes the Legislature. The session commenced far too late for the convenience of the general body of members, and owing to the importance of the measures before it, it has been protracted somewhat more than usual. With the experience of last session before them, the new members of the House have kept themselves more closely to the issues to be discussed and their speeches have been briefer, more to the point and more effective. Considerable attention was necessarily directed to the labor situation, arising largely out of the war, and in other respects from the large expenditures, the heavy obligations incurred by the Government, since they were returned to power, and the mistakes made in the Budget of 1913. The general effect of all of these factors has been in spite of the additional taxation put on in March, 1914, September, 1914, and May, 1915, that the Reserve Fund of half a million has disappeared and a Loan has been arranged with the Bank of Montreal to cover an anticipated deficit at the end of this month of half a million dollars. It is to be hoped that this will prove sufficient to enable the Finance Minister to start with a clean sheet for the current accounts of next year, commencing on the first of next month. Outside of the financial proposals the measures which have excited most controversy have been the Products Bill, the Licensing of the Export of Pulpwood from the Labrador, the Sealing Bill, the Laborer Current Price Bill and the Loggers Bill. The Products Bill was considerably amended and many of the most objectionable features were removed, but not all of them. The Labrador Pulp Bill is a reversal of the policy of both parties in the past and was strenuously opposed. The Laborer Current Price Bill split on the rock of the Council's refusal to permit the fishermen to be represented on the Board proposed through their Union. The Sealing Bill was defeated by the Council's refusal to accept the clauses recommended by the Commission of the three Judges for compensation to be paid by the owners of sealing vessels if sealers lost their lives or became permanently injured through the default of the masters in having men out on the ice at night. A Commission will be appointed to work out of session with the object of bridging the difficulties which at present exist, and with a view to the introduction of a new Bill next session. There is still one outstanding difficulty in the Loggers' Bill, which it is hoped will be surmounted before the Legislature closes at three o'clock.

The Governor's Speech in Closing Legislature.

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council; Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly.

In relieving you from your seasonal duties, received unusually arduous by the lateness of the season, and the consequent interference with your personal affairs, I desire to thank you, in the first place, for the spirit in which you have responded to the call to perform your legislative functions at a necessarily inconvenient period, and, in the second place, for the unanimity that has marked your deliberations in all matters of Imperial interest.

I also warmly thank you for the measures you have taken to ensure the Colony's participation with the rest of the Empire in the great War which is calling forth all the resources of the British race for the maintenance of the world's freedom and the advancement of civilization. I earnestly trust that the Colony's contingents towards the naval and military strength of the Empire, will prove effective in proportion to the numbers engaged, as they will serve to make manifest the desire of the whole people of Newfoundland to ensure an early and successful termination of this great struggle through an honourable and lasting peace dictated by the allied nations.

The provision you have made for pensions and allowances for those of our men on active service by sea or land who may suffer disablement, and for the dependents of those who may fall in defence of the flag, is highly creditable to you and testifies to the praiseworthy spirit in which every aspect of this overpowering problem is dealt with by the Legislature and people of this Colony.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

I thank you for the appropriations you have made for carrying on the Public Service and for meeting the obligations which the War has brought upon the Colony. The money so provided will be expended with special regard to economy in view of the trying circumstances which confront us and the world at large.

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council; Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

The Bill which you have passed providing for the establishment on the West Coast and on the Labrador of industrial enterprises of exceptional magnitude will, I trust, result in the early initiation of those undertakings and the providing of further means whereby great numbers of our people may secure permanent and remunerative employment and the Colony a further addition to an enhanced and lasting prosperity.

In bidding you farewell I earnestly pray that the appalling conflict now raging in the Old World may be brought to a speedy and honourable issue, and that our country, with the blessings of Peace, may then renew the conditions of material well-being which were its portion for many years past.

McMartin Case.

Board of Trade Building, St. John's, Nfld., June 4th, 1915.

Dear Sir,—My attention has been called to an article which appeared in a recent issue of your paper purporting to be an account of a settlement of the Reid-McMartin litigation, in which it was stated that John McMartin acknowledged having signed the one hundred thousand dollar promissory note, upon which he was sued in our Courts last year by Messrs. Job Bros. & Co., Ltd. If this were true it would mean that Mr. McMartin had acknowledged that he was guilty of a deliberate perjury at the trial here. I wish you would publicly announce that Mr. McMartin did not admit signing the note; that Mr. McMartin denies having signed the note, and that the Montreal Star, the paper which published the statement which you copied, has in its issue of the 1st instant retracted the statements made with regard to Mr. McMartin.

Thanking you in advance, Yours very truly,
WM. R. HOWLEY.

[It will be seen by the statement of Mr. Howley that Mr. McMartin did not admit signing the note, and that Mr. McMartin denies having signed the note. We publish below the retraction of the Montreal Star, of June 1st. We copied the article from an issue of an earlier date.—Ed.]

Retraction.

The following was published in the Montreal Star in its issue of June 1st: "McMartin-Reid Wrong Report is Corrected.—McMartin Never Acknowledged Guiltiness of His Signature."

Judge St. Cyr on Thursday last posed of the litigation between Robert H. Reid and John McMartin which had been occupying the attention of the Court for five months. A report of the case as printed in the Star on that day stated erroneously that Mr. McMartin had acknowledged the genuineness of the signature on a note for $100,000 which was in dispute. We regret exceedingly this voluntary error. Mr. McMartin never at any time acknowledged his signature to the note. Mr. Reid was brought to Court on a complaint laid by Mr. McMartin charging him with obtaining 7,500 shares of The Labrador Pulp and Lumber Company by false pretences. As the trial proceeded a charge of perjury was laid against Mr. McMartin by Daniel Ford, when Mr. McMartin swore that the signature on the note for $100,000 was a forgery. The note was signed by Messrs. Reid and Ford and purported to have been signed by Messrs. John and Duncan McMartin and the Supreme Court of Newfoundland by a unanimous judgment of its members had already held that John McMartin had not signed the note. No appeal has been entered against this judgment. One of the leading witnesses in the perjury charge was G. A. Massey, and before Judge St. Cyr on Friday, A. R. McMaster, K.C., for the prosecutor stated that he felt he could not in fairness rely on the evidence of this witness and had no additional evidence to offer. He expressed his willingness to have the accusation of perjury dismissed. Judge St. Cyr, upon this declaration, as to the evidence of Massey by the prosecutor made in the presence and with the approval of Messrs. Ford and Reid at once dismissed the charge.

and woman could be employed at the necessary work. If every Trade Unionist, Lloyd George told the workmen, was brought back from the front
if they worked to the utmost limits
of human endurance, there would not be enough labor to produce what the Government is asking for during the next few months.

GREAT DESTRUCTION AT POLA.

GENEVA, To-day.
Reports received here from Pola,
Italy, state that the Austro-German fleet to-day destroyed a check of $100,000 from Huntley R. Drummond, Montreal, to be used for the purpose of providing a hundred and
twenty-five maxim guns (more or less), it being understood that these
guns are to be an addition to those
to be provided by the Militia Department for use in the Canadian Expedi-
tionary forces.

the Austrian naval base on the Adriatic, confirm the previous assertions
that a large part of the town, docks
and naphtha reservoir which were set on fire during the recent Italian aerial attack, are destroyed.

TOBACCO SAVED MANY LIVES.

LONDON, To-day.
That tobacco literally saved lives
at the front, is a statement made in a letter from a Corporal of the Canadian artillery to a Suffolk clergyman.
What hurt us most, he writes, was poisonous gas, which made the air
green and yellow, choking and poisoning men where they stood. Tobacco saved many lives in that battle.
We began to feel chokey but put big cigars in our mouths. This caused us to expirate gas. Now, whenever we notice gas we chew tobacco
which greatly helps.

A GENEROUS CONTRIBUTION.

OTTAWA, To-day.
Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, to-day received a check of $100,000 from Huntley R. Drum-
mond, Montreal, to be used for the
purpose of providing a hundred and
twenty-five maxim guns (more or
less), it being understood that these
guns are to be an addition to those
to be provided by the Militia Department for use in the Canadian Expedi-
tionary forces.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

FALMOUTH, To-day.
The British steamer, Inkum, from
New York to London, was torpedoed
this morning, forty-three miles southwest of the Lizard Head. The crew landed here.

TRAWLER SUNK.

LOWESTOFT, To-day.
The crew of a Lowestoft trawler landed here to-day. They say the vessel was stopped in the North Sea
on Thursday evening by a German submarine. The crew were ordered into boats, after which the trawler
was sunk by bombs.

WILSON NOTE IS FIRM AND UN- YIELDING.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
President Wilson read to the Cabinet to-day the draft of the note to be sent to Germany, demanding in effect the adherence by that nation
of the humane principles of international law in the conduct of maritime warfare as affecting neutrals. Conparatively brief but described as insistent and emphatic, the communication will be cabled later than Monday and presented by Ambassador Gerard to the German Foreign Minister, Dr. Von Jagow. The Cabinet approved of the note as a whole.
The principle is fixed and unalterable
that the States must know definitely

and very promptly whether Germany
intends to ignore the visit and search rights, and continue her practice of torpedoing vessels without warning,
placing the lives of non-combatants
in jeopardy, or whether the rules of maritime warfare which have governed for centuries will be followed.
The alternative of the course is not stated, but now generally it is known that the States in the event of an unfavorable reply will discontinue diplomatic relations with Germany.
It was stated that the sending to Emperor William by Count Von Bernstorff, German ambassador, of Meyer Gerhard, Attache of the German Colonial Office to convey and carry messages from the Embassy and outlining the American attitude toward the Government of Berlin, would not delay the despatch of the American note.

THE LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-day.
With the fall of Przemysl, although
this does not appear to be the limit
of their efforts against the Russians
in Galicia, the Germans have turned attention to the Western front. Simultaneously in Flanders and the Province of Artois, France, come official reports of attacks on positions
recently captured by the British and French. They have succeeded in recovering some trenches taken by the British northeast of Givenchy. Have stormed the Chateau village of Hoegapart, which of the British hold. Although for a time the British were compelled to evacuate the building
which they had captured on Monday night. The Germans also claim to be in possession of the sugar refinery at Souchez, the loss which they have not previously acknowledged. While these themselves are considered small matters in military circles here, they are believed to be forerunners of the resumption of fighting on a large scale. For some time it has been reported the French were slowly driving out the Germans from strong positions north of Arras. Punching a hole in the German line to stop this movement and also to relieve their troops who, according to British accounts, are suffering very severely
from British attacks and their own counter-attacks. The Germans despatched a lot of new troops to the Arras-Ypres line, apparently making an effort to take the initiative. All accounts indicate that the Austrians and Germans are still vigorously attacking the Russians, who are falling back to positions north of Wisnia and Dniester rivers, where there are strong natural positions
which are covered partly by the great rivers of the Dniester and Dnieper.
The Russians claim successes. These,
however, are denied by the Austrians.
There has been no change in the Austro-Italian frontier, where the Italians in minor engagements
captured a number of positions but have not as yet come into contact with the main Austrian forces.

ITALIANS DEMOLISH FIVE AUSTRIAN FORTS.

LONDON, To-day.
A correspondent of the Chronicle
in Chiasso reports that in the recent fighting in Tyrol, the Italian artillery
demolished five Austrian forts, which cost millions of dollars to construct
and were thought to be invulnerable
by Austrian engineers.

AIRSHIP RAID.

LONDON, To-day.
Hostile airships dropped bombs on the East and South East coast of England last night. Light damage was done and the casualties were apparently very few. The bombs were thrown down at a number of different places, which have not as yet been enumerated. This information is contained in official statement given in London to-day.

HEAVY FIGHTING BETWEEN ITALIANS AND AUSTRIANS.

ROME, To-day.
The hardest fighting of the Austro-
Italian war is in progress around Monte Nido, north of the Isarco River, between Dolme and Caporetto Karrel. Although the summit is in the possession of the Italians, the Austrians are still holding strong positions, and Lieut. General Count Cadorina, Chief of the Italian General Staff, is pouring fresh troops and artillery into the battle. Artillery duels
are raging on the Alpine front,
frontier, in spite of thick fog, which
makes accurate shooting very difficult.
One of the extraordinary features of the war has proved the superiority of the Austrians over the Austrians artillery. The Austrian forts of Luserna
and Spitzverle have both been silenced.

THE FIGHT AT THE SUGAR REFINERY.

PARIS, To-day.
The French War Office this afternoon issued the following statement:
The enemy delivered last night three violent counter attacks against the sugar refinery at Souchez. North and south of this position they were repulsed, and in their first efforts they suffered very heavy losses. We remain masters of every one of the positions captured by us. Last night we took the German position to the northwest of the Roadside Inn, known as Cabaret Rouge.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Mud stains should be soaked in kerosene.
Rub grass stains with molasses and wash.
Black currant jam is an unusual
and agreeable preserve.
Fruit for canning should be fresh
and not overripe.
Cherries may be canned either with
or without the pits in.
There is nothing better than wood
ashes for the flower pots.
Small wool powder-puffs should be cleaned by dipping in alcohol.
Dabbles are like other little animals—they should not be handled.
Baskets to gather flowers or vegetables in are always welcome gifts.
New mattresses should be turned
often, else they will wear unevenly.
How many people know that wild
strawberries make a delicious jelly?
Both pepper and salt should be added
to the fruit in huckleberry pies.
A cut lemon will remove the mark
made by striking matches on white paint.

STEAMERS SEIZED.

LONDON, To-day.
The American steamer, Llana,
from New York for Copenhagen with gasoline and oil, and the Norwegian
steamer, Elmar Jara, bound from Port Arthur for Norwegian ports with cotton seed oil have been taken into Kirkwall.

A GRAVE INCIDENT.

The Paris papers regard the fall of Przemysl as a grave incident of the war, because of the inspiring effect
it will have in Germany and Austria,
but consider that it is of little military importance, and will have no
important bearing on the Galicia
campaign.

AMERICANS WARNED.

LONDON, To-day.
A despatch from Amsterdam says:
A message was received here from

Berlin which states that the American Colonies in Berlin has been warned officially that the diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States
may be broken off in 48 hours and that the people should hold themselves in readiness to leave Germany.

CARRANZA WILLING.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
Unofficial advice which have been received here from Vera Cruz, saying that Carranza would reply favorably
to President Wilson's statement calling upon the heads of warring factions in Mexico to restore peace of Southern Republic, gave renewed
hope to the Administration Officials
to-day of the ultimate solution of the problem.

FRENCH STEAMER SUNK.

BREST, To-day.
The French steamer Peñfeld from Nantes to Cardiff, was sunk in the English Channel by a German submarine. Crew saved.

CONSTANTINE WORSE.

ATHENS, To-day.
King Constantine has had a change
for the worse. Another operation will have to be performed.

LOYD GEORGE PLEASED.

LONDON, To-day.
The Daily Mail says Lloyd George
is enthusiastic over the news that Chester and is convinced that the response to his appeal will be magni-
cent. Col. Sir Percy Girouard, chosen Chief Organizer of the Department of Munitions, told the committee that Lloyd George aimed to secure an output of a quarter of a million shells
monthly. The reply was a promise of a million shells monthly soon.

2.30 P. M.

TRAWLERS SUNK.

NORWICH, To-day.
The trawler Labbery, from Lon-
on, has arrived at that port with the crews of the trawlers Horace and Ro-nomy on board, the two ships having been sunk by the Germans, following the Norwich steam drifter. The Ena
May, of Peterhead, the trawler Strathbrann, the sailing ship George, which was sunk by the Germans, following by German submarines. The remains of all three ships have been saved.

Grand Opportunity For Farmers and Horse Owners.

Owing to the wastages of war,
scarcity in the horse supply is in prospect for years to come. Every farmer was never presented with a better chance for turning his mares to good account, alike to himself and to the country.

There is little outlet until the foal is weaned. The mare can continue to do her allotted share on the land, and
for many years the demand for an animal serviceable either for draught
or carriage purposes will be greater than ever.

The Catfish.

By GEORGE FITCH. Author of "At Good Old St. John's." The catfish is so named because he looks about as much like a cat as he does like a fish.

He is one of the commonest citizens in American waters and if his disposition was as bad as his looks he would be more unpopular than a crocodile. He consists of a very comprehensive mouth with a special constructed head, built to accommodate it. After a catfish's head is finished there isn't enough left of him to make a very impressive body. He is therefore mostly head. However, it is a flat head with a slanting brow. The catfish is not noted for his intelligence. He can be caught with a common hook and any old bait as easily as a confidence man can be hooked by a smooth oil well promoter.

The catfish is liberally decorated with spines and wears two horns on his face which look like the whiskers of a Chinese mandarin. He is much respected on account of his spite for any other reason. No one who has caressed a kicking catfish will carelessly moment can bring him to very soon. A hornet's tail hurts worse than a catfish's spine, but not for so long.

The catfish lives in a humble and orderly manner in the muddy bottom of any old stream and is the backbone of the school boy and the Mississippi river fisherman. Some catfish are content to weigh half a pound while some of them lie in the channels of the great alluvial rivers and let the food-laden water flow through the croton tunnel faces until they attain a weight of 150 pounds and have been hauled out with a windlass. When the Mississippi fisherman feels a fish pulling on his line he gives a cheer and hauls away until he has hauled into the cavernous grin of a catfish. Then he loads him on a wagon wraps wet leaves around him and travels through the country with a lot of catfish steaks until nothing of the grin is left. The catfish is a talented gastronomically as a speckled trout, but he is a superior article of food when skinned and served as a fish. The catfish is not a horned and should not be scorned on account of his looks.

Catfish are said to be able to see the water in dry spells and pull themselves along with their fins. It was this talent which inspired the early American steamboat men to build craft which could waddle through sand bars when necessary and...

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, June 4. The Governor, Newfoundland:

The India Office report the defeat of the Turks in Mesopotamia with the capture of 250 prisoners. In pursuit along the river a Turkish steamer was sunk and lighters captured, containing field guns, ammunition, etc. About 300 further prisoners were taken.

The French Government report that the Crown Prince's Headquarters were bombarded by twenty-five French airmen, also a violent infantry action near Notre Dame de Lorette.

The Russian Government report the abandonment of Przemyśl, as owing to the state of the artillery, and the works being destroyed by the Austrians before capitulation, the town could not be defended. On the Lower San the Russians captured 4,000 prisoners, guns and numerous machine guns.

PROGRESS AT SOUCHEZ.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, June 4. To the east of the sugar refinery of Souchez, our troops progressed towards the village of Souchez and captured an isolated inn that the enemy had fortified taking fifty odd prisoners and three quick-firers. We have also realized further advance in Labyrinth. On the remainder of the front, artillery duels.

SIR JOHN FRENCH'S REPORT.

LONDON, June 4. Field Marshal French's communication was made public this evening. He reports that during the last few days fighting on the western line has been confined to artillery engagements. On the night of May 30th, the report says: We seized some out-buildings on the ground of the ruined Chateau at Hooge. Since then our trenches have been subjected to heavy bombardment. Fighting on a small scale has been continuous. At one time we were forced to evacuate the buildings taken by us, but last night we recaptured them. Northeast of Givenchy, last night, we expelled the enemy from his trenches on a front of 600 yards, taking 48 prisoners. Our infantry, however, were unable to remain in occupation of these trenches after daylight, owing to the enemy's fire.

FRENCH PROGRESS.

PARIS, June 4. Further progress has been made by the French in the furious battles north of Arras officially reported today.

NEARING METZ.

PARIS, June 4.—(Official.) North of the sugar refinery works at Souchez, we have taken a trench from the enemy and captured thirty prisoners. We have bombarded the southern front of the entrenched camp at Metz.

PREPARING TO EVACUATE.

ZURICH, June 4. The Russians are preparing to evacuate Lemberg and Galicia, according to advices received here.

RUSSIANS DEFENDING.

LONDON, June 4. The Austro-Hungary headquarters reporting the capture of Przemyśl says, attack is now in progress against the forts still held by the Russians. These positions are being defended, apparently, with the object of covering the retirement of the Russians.

GERMANS WIN MORAL VICTORY.

PETROGRAD, June 4. News of the fall of Przemyśl has awakened no apprehension here. It is conceded that the Germans have won a moral victory, but the strategic importance of the fortress, ac-

LINER TORPEDOED.

MONTREAL, June 4. The Thomson liner Iona, bound to Montreal with freight from Middlesborough, England, but carrying no passengers, was torpedoed and sunk off the north coast of England at noon yesterday, according to a report received at Montreal this evening. The captain and crew landed safely at Kirkwall, Scotland.

FIRED ON SUBMARINE.

LISBON, June 4. Newspapers state that the steamer Demarara from Lisbon for Liverpool, fired on the periscope of a submarine following her. It is said that the submarine disappeared, and soon after large quantities of oil was seen floating on the surface of the sea.

DANISH STEAMER SUNK.

STAVANGER, Norway, June 4. The Danish steamer Cyrus, with a cargo of coal from Scotland for Copenhagen, was torpedoed yesterday afternoon. The crew were landed by a Norwegian steamer. The men state they were torpedoed without warning.

RESIDENT OF LONG ISLAND ARRESTED.

NEW YORK, June 4. Detectives arrested Fredk. A. Stillwagon, a resident of Long Island, and charged him with sending fourteen threatening letters to officials of the Cunard Line, demanding sums of twenty to twenty-five thousand dollars. In several letters Stillwagon is alleged to have threatened to blow up vessels of the Cunard Line unless his demands were complied with.

Three Fires Yesterday.

With a strong westerly wind raging at full blast, three fires occurred yesterday afternoon, two on the higher levels and one in the suburbs, and while they lasted caused much anxiety. A curious coincidence is that two of yesterday's blazes were in the immediate vicinity of where the big fire of '92 started. At 3.45 a telephone message was received at the Central Fire Station from Baird's cottage on the Freshwater Road intimating that a house in that neighborhood was on fire. With all possible despatch Supt. Dunn and two assistants set out to go countrywards with the steam engine, which was the most necessary apparatus to do fire fighting effectively in the country section. They had gone about three miles in the direction of Freshwater when they observed the school house a mass of flames. One end of the school house was occupied by a family named Coish, who used to look after it. The school house and contents were razed to the ground and the Coish family lost all their belongings, not having a cent of insurance carried. The origin of the fire was caused by sparks from a forest fire raging nearby and which was well under way. Other adjoining property was endangered but the splendid efforts of the firemen who worked the steam engine from a stream of water a few yards distant extinguished the blaze before any further damage was done. The forest fire is supposed to have originated on account of trouble which was in Freshwater way on Thursday, the holiday, and it should be a warning in future not to be too careless with fires in the woods.

At 4.30 an alarm was pulled in from box 262, at the corner of Pennywell and Lemarchant Roads, bringing the Central, Western and Eastern companies to Rocky Lane where the double houses occupied by the families of Messrs. Thomas Davis and Wm. Aitken were ablaze. The wind was blowing with great violence at the time making food for the flames and surrounding property was threatened. When the firemen arrived the fire had reached serious dimensions, and they put three streams of water on the buildings and ere long had the blaze under control, but not before both houses were gutted and all the furniture in them went up in smoke, except that saved by volunteers who worked well under Capt. Montgomerie, and also rendered yeoman service in fighting the fire and preventing it from spreading. The cause of the outbreak was sparks from Davis' house igniting the roof of the other. Very little insurance was carried by either family.

Just as the fire brigades were returning to their respective halls, an alarm came in from box 228, bringing them back to the house occupied by Patrick Parrell and family on Bondslody Street, where a slight fire was caused by Mr. Parrell's son lighting a match and igniting some curtains. Inside of a quarter of an hour the danger was past but the walls of the house were badly charred and the furniture much damaged by smoke and water.

The Catfish.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sivanash."

The catfish is so named because he looks about as much like a fish as he does like a cat.

He is one of the commonest citizens in American waters and if his disposition was as bad as his looks he would be more unpopular than a coon. He consists of a vast, comprehensive mouth with a specially constructed head, built to accommodate it. After a catfish's head is washed there isn't enough left of him to make a very impressive body. He is therefore mostly head. However, it is a flat head with a slanting fin. The catfish is not noted for his intelligence. He can be caught with a common hook and any old bait as easily as a confidence man can be hooked by a smooth oil well promoter.

The catfish is liberally decorated with spines and wears two horns over his face which look like the whiskers of a Chinese mandarin. He is more respected on account of his spines than for any other reason. No man who has creased a kicking catfish in a careless moment can bring himself to be familiar with him again very soon. A hornet's tail hurts more than a catfish's spine, but not for so long.

The catfish lives in a humble and orderly manner in the muddy bottom of any old stream and is the boon of the school boy and the Mississippi river fisherman. Some catfish are content to weigh half a pound while some of them lie in the channel of the great alluvial rivers and let the food-laden water flow through their croton tunnel faces until they attain a weight of 150 pounds and have to be hauled out with a windlass. When the Mississippi fisherman feels a tug about pulling on his line he gives three cheers and hauls away until he peers into the cavernous grin of a channel cat. Then he loads him on a wagon, wraps wet leaves around him and travels through the country sawing off catfish steaks until nothing but the grin is left. The catfish is not as talented gastronomically as the speckled trout, but he is a superior article of food when skinned and deboned and should not be scorned on account of his looks.

Catfish are said to be able to leave the water in dry spells and travel long distances on land, pushing themselves along with their spines. It was this talent which inspired the early American steamboat men to build craft which could waddle over land bars when necessary and navigate long distances on the damp remains of a river which had evaporated two days before.

TAN AND FRECKLES.

The season is about with us when every woman who has a tendency to freckle, must look carefully after her complexion. Freckles and tan are the two great enemies of the summer girl that she must guard against if she would have her fair skin without a blemish for the coming winter. Tan looks well in a bathing suit, but even the summer dance frock will make you appear unsightly, so we can well imagine its disgusting qualities in winter when the gown is cut low, and soft and beautiful materials bring into sharp relief the skin of the wearer.

When freckles and tan have made headway, a very simple remedy for them is a bleach of half peroxide of hydrogen and half water. The disappearance of the tan and freckles will necessarily be gradual, and you must not stop at one or two applications. Wash the face in soap and water before retiring and then apply the solution allowing it to stay on until morning. Then again wash the face in soap and warm water, applying a dash of cold water at the last as an astringent.

Especially before bathing in the surf should a coating of cold cream and powder be put on the face, neck and arms. First apply a good cold cream and then a layer of the powder. An automobile veil is one of the best protections against sun and wind. Either a corn colored or green veil should be worn. This veiling should be of heavy chiffon, as a net veil is not sufficiently close for proper protection.

Brown bread, instead of white, when making bread pudding, gives a most unusual and delicious taste.

At the City Hall.

The Chairman, Messrs. Ayre, McNamara, Bradshaw, Mullaly, Morris, McGrath, Anderson and Withers attended last night's meeting of the Civic Commission.

J. P. Blackwood, on behalf of Mrs. E. Knight, wrote in reference to property near Leslie Street. The Engineer will report.

J. S. Ayre complained of the condition of Shaw's Lane. The matter will be attended to.

G. Rowe, E. M. White and G. Dixon, of Mundy Pond Road, made application for material to repair defective bridges, and offered to furnish labor themselves. The Engineer will report.

J. Murphy, Pennywell Road, again complained of the unfenced property near his home. The owner will be ordered to attend to the matter.

A. W. O'Reilly complained of the condition of the sidewalk near the Sudbury tannery. The matter was referred to the Engineer.

J. T. Doody applied for permission to remove a shed from Golf Avenue to LeMarchant Road. Further particulars will have to be forwarded before the matter can be considered.

Permission was granted to F. Nangle to erect a scaffold to repair house and to W. Bulger to repair roof of house on Holloway Street.

Mary T. Kitchen applied for permission to repair house at the corner of Job Street and Plank Road. The Engineer will report.

With the adoption of the various reports, and passing of pay rolls the meeting adjourned at 10:15 p.m.

Avoid Harsh Pills, Doctors Condemn Them

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, so mild, so certain to quickly cure as a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

In Memoriam.

There passed away at Topsail, on Thursday morning, June 3rd, a promising young life in the person of Frank Moyes, son of Mrs. and the late Mr. Joseph Moyes, at the early age of nineteen years. Frank was of a kindly and gentle disposition, always quiet and retiring, and leaves many friends to mourn him both at home and at Mantel, where, for the past two and a half years, he filled the post of operator and postmaster, his sole aim in that capacity being to please and oblige. In babyhood Frank lost the use of his right arm, but with a sturdy pluck, undaunted by the tremendous odds, he fitted himself as a telegraph operator, manipulating key and pencil with his left hand, and succeeded in making it do the work of two. It may be truly said of him that he died at duty's post, as he worked until Saturday evening, May 29th, with quiet heroism, trying to finish the month's work. But the task proved too great. The last message was sent, the last O.K. given, and Frank was brought home, where in four days the quiet story was finished, and promotion he awaited him on the Great Aurora Line—was his. The funeral takes place on Saturday, when he will be laid to rest with the honors of the L. O. A., of which he was an ardent member. Beside many friends, he leaves to mourn him a mother, one sister and four brothers—the eldest of whom, Allan, is with the First Newfoundland Regiment in Scotland—to all of whom deepest sympathy will go out in their hour of bereavement.

DOING ONE'S BEST.

One sweetly solemn thought comes to me every night; I at my task have wrought, and tried to do it right. No doubt my work is punk, my efforts are a jest; however poor my junk, it represents my best. If you, at close of day, when sounds the quitting bell, that truthfully can say, you're doing pretty well. Some beat you galley west, and bear away the prize, but you have done your best—in that the honor lies. And, having done your best, your conscience doesn't hurt; serene you go to rest, in your long muslin shirt. And at the close of life, when you have said good by to cousin, aunt and wife, and all the children nigh, you'll face the river cold that flows to islands blest, with courage high and bold, if you have done your best. No craven fears you'll know, no terrors fierce and sharp. So, then, whatever the field in which you do your stunt, whatever tool you wield to earn your share of blunt, toil on with eager zest, nor falter in that plant the one who does his best is God's blue ribbon man.

How Canadians Faced German Gas.

Capt. Hutton Crowley Writes of Horrible Effect of Poison Vapors—Had a Narrow Escape—“Coal Box” Dropped Within Five Yards of Him—Montreal Men Badly Shelled During Ypres Battle.

German attacks by gas, with the effects of bombardments of Ypres and night sniping of British soldiers are described in an interesting letter sent to Mr. George J. Crowley, of 432 Roslyn avenue, from his son, Captain Hutton Crowley, who is now at the front with the 13th Highlanders, Capt. Crowley, after spending some time in England, was sent to the front with his regiment and has been appointed second in command of Captain Clark Kennedy's company, getting through a lot of severe fighting around Ypres without harm.

Writing from “France,” Captain Crowley says:—“At present we are in billets about six miles from the firing line. We expect to be here about a week and then go back into the trenches at Armentieres, which is about in front of here. Everyone of us is glad to get away from Ypres. We were at the latter place for about a week in the support trenches, and we lost about 18 men during that time.

“It is wonderful how used one gets to shelling. I prefer high explosives to shrapnel. I saw one shell hole at Ypres city big enough to hide our house in. It is hard to imagine a shell big enough to do that.

“Ives and I and six men had a narrow escape at St. Jean from a ‘coal box’ (6 inch shell). It landed about five yards from us when we were out on a tour collecting equipment for the men. It is all chance, and it is no good dodging.

“I have the luck to have the job of second in command to Clark-Kennedy (at one time erroneously reported killed). I hope I keep it, he is a fine man to work under. The four platoon commanders are Clarence Mc Cuaig, Allan Worthington, Dug Ives and McTier (son of Mr. A. D. McTier). We all kept on pretty well together, and are kept pretty busy.

“I have received several letters already, also cigarettes from the Newfoundland Society. We had an awful night march from Ypres to here; it is about 18 miles, nearly all over cobble stones. The men's feet were in very bad condition, but the rest is doing them good.

“At Ypres we were out on a very bad salient, and consequently we got shelled from two or three directions. The English have since dropped back about one and one-half miles in order to straighten the line out.

“Last Sunday the Germans made a very large attack about one-half mile on our right flank. They used that awful gas. The whole front attacked was a solid wall of green yellow vapor. The Essex Regiment were in the front trenches at the time. They had to evacuate at once. The firing lasted about two hours. In the end the English went back the two trenches they had to leave and in addition took one German trench.

“We thought that we would get into that fight, but we were not needed. All we got was shelled, which is not nice. The weather has been beautiful, and we are getting much sunburnt.

“The condition at Ypres is simply indescribable. You can get no idea of the chaos from pictures or descriptions. It is a needless waste. The Cathedral is utterly ruined, and they have also finished the celebrated Cloth Hall.

“There is an awful lot of shelling, even from behind our own lines, and one has to be careful at night.”

[Capt. Hutton Crowley] referred to above is a nephew of Mr. W. H. Crowley, Manager of the Royal Bank, this city and a son of Mr. Geo. J. Crowley, who was for many years in the Commercial Bank of this city.—Ed. E. T.]

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS.
It always does my heart good to talk to a certain little mother, who hovers over her brood of five boys as watchfully as a mother possibly can. She knows the likes and dislikes of each one, and appreciates the contrasting personalities, and tries to become more acquainted with her children's individual natures each day.

She knows that Horace dislikes apple sauce and that Alfred loves it. She knows that Arthur's favorite color is red and that Herman prefers green. She has watched her little family with the trained eye of a professional and has analyzed their natures thoroughly. She knows her children, and she alone, can account for their shortcomings, and their failures, better than anyone else. Remember that every child has a different nature and that you cannot treat them all alike.

At the House.

FRIDAY, June 4th.
The amendments of the Council to the Exportation of Timber Bill were concurred in.

The Speaker announced that the Council had appointed a select committee to confer with the Assembly out of session on the amendments made by the Council to the Sealing Bill.

Mr. Kent pointed out the committee would automatically go out of existence when the Legislature was prorogued and suggested that the committee named should be appointed as a Commission by the Governor in Council. Thereupon the Minister of Fisheries, Messrs. Coaker, Moulton, Young and Winsor were appointed to act on the committee.

On motion of Mr. Kent the report of the Select Committee on conditions at the Penitentiary was read by the Clerk. The report recommended that better methods of sanitation be provided; that greater care be taken in the cooking of food the supply of which was found to be good; that the Surgeon visit the Institution weekly and inspect it monthly, that no long service prisoner be clothed in rags, that better accommodation be provided for female prisoners, and that material for mending be supplied; that warmer bed clothing be provided for the winter season; that correspondence of prisoners on remand be private and not read by the Superintendent. It also dealt with the matter of separating the juvenile from the adult prisoners, and the remand prisoners from the convicted. It recommended more healthful quarters for the madron, and also suggested that she be given a holiday annually. The report was adopted.

Mr. Morine called the attention of the House to the custom in vogue with regard to prisoners who come out from the Institution to work. He thought that prisoners ought not to be paraded through the streets in prison garb as is customary. The prisoners who are allowed out at this work are “trusties” and he contended should not be so degraded.

Mr. Hayward presented a petition from the F. P. U. Council of his district asking for an amendment of the law for the protection of rabbits.

Mr. Clapp called the attention of the House to the fact that several of his constituents from Bonne Bay and adjacent settlements who were brought here as witnesses in the recent Snowden trial, had lost half their lobster voyage. He held that the case should have been settled earlier so that the fishermen who were witnesses in the case might not have lost so much time at the principal part of the season. He felt sure that the House would realize his grievance and would readily understand why he had brought the matter to their notice.

The House then went into Committee on the Council's amendments to the Logging Bill. Several amendments clauses were rejected and others were amended.

The Committee arose at 6 p.m. and the House adjourned till 2 p.m. to-day.

Wounded Soldier Improving.
Private Harry Grant, son of Mr. John Grant, this city, who was wounded while fighting in France with the first Canadian Contingent, is now rapidly improving, according to a letter recently received from him by his father. Harry writes from the hospital at Southampton and speaks in glowing terms of the kind treatment received. He says that he lay wounded for several hours on the field, but does not mention at which battle he was wounded. The injuries were confined to the right arm and side and are not considered of a serious nature. It is hoped that news of his complete recovery will be received at an early date.

The schr. Steinfeld, arrived from St. John's on Sunday with supplies to Mr. E. Simmonds. She will now go to Labrador with freighters. Mr. James takes charge this season.

A baby boy was born on Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. William Batt.

Constable Cronhey took the German war prisoner for a walk through the town to-day. They were very much interested in all they saw.

There is now on exhibition in Mr. M. P. Stapleton's window a well executed model of the naval battle in which the British ‘Lion’ shattered the ‘Blucher’ of the German fleet. The work is the handwork of Mr. Richard Hayden. The ‘Blucher’ is shown to be sinking, while the sailors are in the water many of them clinging to pieces of wreckage. The British are endeavoring to do their customary work of rescue, while the German ships are hovering over and sending death even to their own men. Mr. Hayden is to be congratulated on the excellence of his work. The German war prisoners looked at this work with much interest to-day.

A small quantity of fresh codfish of a small quality, were in the market this morning, and sold readily. Herring were plentiful, but were compelled to stand aside while the stock of codfish lasted.

Mrs. Henry Garland was hastily summoned to St. John's on Monday by the death of her father, Mr. Murphy. Mr. Murphy was well known here and his many friends heard with regret of his death. Mrs. Garland and the rest of the family has the sympathy of all their friends.

Mrs. James Kent, of Placentia, is in town on a visit to her sisters, Mrs. Scanlan and Mrs. Griffin. Mrs. Kent's friends are many and are all pleased to see her. She leaves for home to-morrow.

In Which Jack Hollands Jensen

2nd Southern General Hospital, New Southmead Infirmary, Bristol, May 1st, 1915.
Dear Frank and Arthur,—The boys, doubtless ere this, you have heard of the awful losses of the Canadians, but I don't doubt that the facts will be given out to the public for months. Last time I wrote, I was with the transport, on ammunition wagon, but my officer got me into a Company, and dear old Jack Hollands and I marched side by side and nearly died together.

I will tell you, I have been through a battle that Neve Chapelle was up to, one of the greatest of modern wars. Dear old Jack Hollands, killed like a hero, on the morning of the 23rd. Strange, a few nights before we went into the last battle, we were sleeping side by side; he said, “Phil, here is my uncle's London address, take it for I have a feeling, I am not coming out of the trenches this time.” I told him not to say such nonsense, but he told me to give his uncle so as he could write him, if he, the Rev. C. W. Hollands, of London, I have done this. Now you know you are just waiting to hear about myself. Well, I had a narrow shave, struck by a ‘Johnston,’ I have six shrapnel wounds in my back, but I am fine, not in any vital spot.

We went into the trenches on the 21st, just above Ypres in Belgium, and on our left were the French and Zouaves. The first day it was great, but although we did not know it, a great attack was being prepared by the Germans, and on the 22nd, they started shelling us, hundreds of shells pitching around in the trenches, with poisonous fumes. Well, on the evening of the 23rd, we were shelled from their trenches, leaving the company, the 5th Highlanders, 200 men, in almost a death trap. To illustrate this I will draw you the shape of the attack, and the position of the trenches.

Now when the French ran the Hun came on in thousands, and took their trenches, but they were two ours. Now we were between two fires, in this way: Our front trenches were low, so they began shooting us in the back. Now we could have retired by our own trenches, but, no, Sir. Two hundred men of us held the line. Oh, boy! It was grand. Our reserves couldn't come up for some time, owing to such an awful fire. Our officers, for part forty of us, and we held them where I mark in the drawing. The our losses began. It was awful, our boys our fellows died game, and was grand to see them. Dear old and I stood together doing our share. I can tell you; then my officer came for me and put me further up the trench, and after a while, some of us were ordered out on sentry duty.

Graphic Story of the Fight
In Which Jack Hollands Was Killed and Phil

2nd Southern General Hospital,
New Southmead Infirmary,
Bristol, May 1st, 1915.
Dear Frank and Arthur.—Well,
boys, doubtless ere this, you have heard of the awful losses of the Canadians, but I doubt whether the real facts will be given out to the public for months. Last time I wrote, I was with the transport, on ammunition
wagon, but my officer got me back
in a company, and dear old Jack Hol-lands and I marched side by side, ves
and nearly died together.

I will tell you, I have been through a battle that Neuve Chapelle was not up to, one of the greatest of modern wars. Dear old Jack Hollands was killed like a hero, on the morning of the 23rd. Strange, a few nights before we went into the last battle, we were sleeping side by side; he said:
"Phil, here is my uncle's London address, take it for I have a feeling I am not coming out of the trenches this time." I told him not to talk
such nonsense, but he told me to wire
his uncle so as he could wire his father, the Rev. C. W. Hollands, of Carbonear. I have done this. Now I know you are just waiting to hear about myself. Well, I had a very narrow shave, struck by a "Jack Johnson;" I have six shrapnel wounds
in my back, but I am fine, not hurt
in any vital spot.

We went into the trenches on the 21st, just above Ypres in Belgium,
and on our left were the French and Zouaves. The first day it was fine, but although we did not know it, a great attack was being prepared by the Germans, and on the 22nd, they started shelling us, hundreds of great
shells pitching around in the trenches, with poisonous fumes. Well the French on the evening of the 22nd,
left from their trenches, leaving our company, the 5th Highlanders, 200 men, in almost a death trap. To illustrate this I will draw you the shape of the attack, and the position
of the trenches.

Now when the French ran, the Huns came on in thousands, and look their trenches, but they never took ours. Now we were between two fires, in this way: Our front
was high sandbags, but rear of our trenches were low, so they began shooting us in the back. Now we could have retired by our back trenches, but, no, Sir. Two hundred men of us held the line. Oh, boys, it was grand. Our reserves couldn't come up for some time, owing to such an awful fire. Our officers then put forty of us, and we held them
where I mark in the drawing. Then our losses began. It was awful, but boys our fellows died game, and it was grand to see them. Dear old Jack
and I stood together doing our share,
I can tell you; then my officer came
for me and put me further up the trench, and after a while, some of us were ordered out on sentinal post

were open to machine gun fire, and they have lights, which make it just like day.

Then my officer was told to form
rear guard, so about twenty-five of us held them, while the rest retreated. We would fire five rounds, reload, retire, forty yards, down and give it to them again. I saw fellows die that night in the same position as when alive.

Well, then all the regiment started
to dig itself in, with more British and Canadians supporting us. I went with a party to bring in wounded, and to carry water, and next morning we had dug ourselves in, after having been fighting four days, with no food
and no water till then.

As soon as daylight they started shelling us, and then it was suffered most, as we had no artillery to support us. Oh, it was awful, men lying poisoned; aeroplanes humming
overhead, giving the range, and they just pitched these big "Jack Johnsons" in our trenches. When we would hear them coming, we would all lie down and jump up again, as soon as they would pass.

At last came one it seemed right
on top of me; it blew a hole in my greatcoat nearly as big as a plate; it
paralyzed me first, and my wounds
looked so bad that several fellows left the part of the trench where I was. I felt I was dying, and I remember thinking of Jack and saying to my officer, "I am done, Sir; write and tell my mother I died alright." I remember seeing I girls in his eyes.
Then there came another shell and buried me right in. I stayed there till I heard the order to retire, so I determined I wouldn't be taken prisoner if I could possibly help it. Our regiment retired nearly two miles
with German guns playing on them.

I would run, get tired, fall down crawl, get up and go it again. At last two fellows got me to a dressing station, after nearly four hours after I was wounded. I was at last put on a stretcher and taken in an ambulance
and sent by train to Boulogne, thence here. Out of 1,100 men, they say only forty was left. English praise us up
as they say our regiment bore the brunt.

Hope my wounds will soon heal. I will keep you informed of my condition.

Your loving brother,
PHIL.

Dazzling the Helper.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Dazzling the helper might be
the title of a sport which is extremely popular among a certain
class of women.

I once had a
w a s h e r w o
man who worked
the day before for
a woman emphatically of this type. She came to me crammed so
chock full of
facts and figures
with which her yesterday's employer
had sought to dazzle her and establish a sense of her own importance
that some of them simply had to spill over.

"I ironed Mrs. Martin's best tablecloth yesterday, and what do you think she said it cost? Eighteen dollars. Yes'm, eighteen dollars. He-sister gave it to her when she was married. Her sister has lots of money, she says. Keeps two girls and a man. The napkins to go with that tablecloth cost two dollars apiece. I guess Mrs. Martin must have had a grand wedding. She said
there were four hundred people there,
and the silk in her wedding dress cost
five dollars a yard."

The Crowning Revelation.
At this crowning revelation my washerwoman's eyes grew large, and it was plain to see that my neighbor's desire to dazzle her had been amply fulfilled.
My neighbor is evidently an extreme case of devotion to this sport,
but I suspect that a great many of us indulge in it to some extent.

Part of Their Business.
I once knew a little seamstress who came of a wealthy family and who had had far more luxuries in her youth than any of us who employed
her. Some of her never patrons did not know this and it was half pathetic, half humorous to me to hear one of them trying to impress
her with her own humble splendors.
To my surprise, however, she seemed deeply impressed. I asked her about it afterwards. "It's part of my business," she said, "to give them pleasure that way. I don't grudge it."
I've been wondering since if a good many others do not, like her, pretend
to be impressed because they realize that that is a part of their business.
Not a flattering thought if one is
addicted to the habit, is it?

FISHERY NEWS.—Last evening
and again this morning, boats were
on the local grounds where there was a good sign of fish and some excellent fares were secured. Salmon

content that this is a good omen for a successful codfishery.

IRELAND.
The Y. W. C. A. and White Ribbon Dinner Hour Rest Room in Dublin is a great success. One month's work showed 107 attendances, and numbers are steadily increasing. Friends sent quantities of flowers and fruit during the summer months. The quietness
of the rest room seems to be its chief attraction, coupled with its moderate charges. The girls are allowed to bring their own sandwiches, which can be supplemented with a cup of tea, coffee, cocoa, or milk; many of them prefer to have lunch provided.
Some girls bring needlework, others
read or write. A good supply of ma-azines and writing materials is always at hand. It is hoped a library may be started. Miss Patten and our White Ribboners have organized petitions to the authorities to close drinking bars at earlier hours.—W. C.

WELL KNOWN NEW BRUNSWICK
MAN FELL IN A FAINT.
Suffered for Years Afterwards but Finally Found Relief and Permanent Cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.
Melrose, Westmoreland Co., N.B.—
June 4th. (Special).—R. S. Clarke-
Lewin, a member of a well known
New Brunswick family, has made a statement for publication which deals with his cure of a very complicated case of Kidney Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills.
"The first intimation I had of Kidney trouble occurred while on board the steamship on my return
from England fourteen years ago
when I fell in a faint on the floor.
"After my arrival at St. John my health became poor and I lost 30 pounds in weight. Year after year I became weaker. I suffered from heart trouble and nervousness and I became irritable and dyspeptic. My sight troubled me and my walk was unsteady as I suffered from dizziness.
"Reading a circular led me to use
Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's
Dyspepsia Tablets about June, 1913,
and my improvement began at once.
My strength came back in my legs,
the dizziness left me, my bowels became regular, and by New Year's,
1915, I claimed I was cured of Diabetes.

Medicines on any account."

Proposed Charity Dance

A preliminary meeting to arrange matters in connection with charity
dance to take place on the night of Labour Day, July 6th, was held by the L. S. P. U. last night. A committee of thirty was appointed, Hon.
M. P. Gibbs being made an honorary member, and the Chairman, Mr.
Frank Woods, was authorized to arrange for the distribution of tickets.
The dance will be held in the Prince's Rink and the proceeds will be given to the poor of the city. Another meeting to finalize matters will be held on Friday night next.

The West End Bazaar.

Some time ago the Telegram mentioned the fact that the Feildians and C.E.I. football clubs would play as one team this season. Last evening the C.E.I. Athletic Association had a meeting and it was decided to amal-gamate with the Feildians. The amalgamation was found desirable on account of the enlistments of so many players from both teams, but should result in their entering in the League
a strong representative eleven.
