of his creations. He wrote when Beauty was indeed the aim of Art. One of the unforgettable gems of all Mozart is his "Quintette in D Major." From this "Quintette" Casals takes the "Larghetto" and spins about us a web of magic music, melody woven to melody in endless delicacy. Echoing his own instrument in pianissimo passages some of the most perfect art of the master is found in this exquisite Mozart excerpt.

THE spirit of pure music which sleeps beneath the calm and passive exterior of Casals comes to pulsing and throbbing life in his interpretation of the famed "Evening Star" aria from Tannhäuser. At times art reaches a point where words fail. In this melody which has in it the essence of all evening calm, music of love and stars and night, the strings of the master's 'cello speak more eloquence than many words. Here is Casal's perfect record.

A discord, even an unexpected note, was almost an impossibility to Mozart. He was the master of pure melody and perfect form. Without either shock or surprise Mozart holds one enthralled with the sheer beauty

New York Philharmonic Orchestra First Exclusive Columbia Records

New York Philharmonic Orchestra

BEFORE the conductor's desk of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra have stood the leading musical directors of the world. Thomas, Seidl, Safonoff, Mahler, Stransky—these are the men who have made the Philharmonic what it is to-day, the symphonic keystone in America's temple of music.

It is with unique pride the Columbia offers the world of music the exclusive recordings of the Philharmonic Orchestra under the bâton of Josef Stransky, the present famous conductor of the Society.

Outline History of the Philharmonic

Musicians of New York called to a meeting by F. C. Ritt on April 2, 1842.

First public concert, December 7, 1842.

First composition performed, Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. (The first Columbia recording of the Orchestra.)

Conductors of Philharmonic: Hermann, Thomas, Seldt, Savonoff, Mautner, Stransky. Many of the great conductors of the world have also been guest conductors at various times.

Three concerts given during first season. Attendance 900.

Over 150 performances during Seventy-fifth Anniversary year, 1917. Attendance over 300,000.

"For the aim of the Philharmonic has ever been to appeal to the best, to the most divine in man and to give the highest expression to one form of the most moving of the arts."

When we recount the world's beautiful musical compositions in slow tempo, we naturally think of Beethoven, and among Beethoven's superb symphonies, the Andante from the Fifth is the admitted masterpiece. And justly so, for it is transcendently splendid in conception and expression. In substance this composition is an exalted reverie with wonderful melodies, masterly development and mighty chords. It opens directly with a typical Beethoven theme sung by the 'cellos and accompanied softly by the other instruments. The answering motive is played soon by the violins, appealingly, and with infinite sweetness. The development of the themes is charming and inspiring, working up into great climaxes and dying away into vaguely reminiscent strains. As played by The Philharmonic Society of New York this record is undoubtedly the supreme interpretation of Beethoven's great inspiration.

EARLY evening in an old monastery garden, the humming of the day's sounds sinking to rest, birds in the tree tops voicing their good night songs—this is the setting of Ketelbey's beautiful tone picture, "In a Monastery Garden." Down one of the flower-lined paths comes a group of monks chanting the "Kyrie Eleison." The whole calm, peaceful scene will come before one's eyes while listening to the stately harmonies of this unique descriptive.

To students of music the "Sonata" presents "one of the most singular problems ever presented the mind of man." Where the cantata brings us words to tell its meaning, the sonata is music of sound alone. There is no word-hint to tell its message. Human emotion must be told in tonal form. In the sonatas of Beethoven, we find not stories, but feelings. In these wonderful compositions the mind of Beethoven lives to-day in all its varied complexities—now tragic, now sublime, or in the perfect "Minuet" from his "Sonata, Op. 31," serene, gentle, peaceful. Probably music's greatest achievement is such expression of human emotions through the sonata form.

Two Patriotic Marches

THE magnificent contrapuntal arrangement of "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Yankee Doodle" in the American Republic March gives this recording an unusual musical interest. Coupled with Sousa's immortal "Invincible"—it makes no difference how many band records you have in your collection, this will improve it.

OSCAR SEAGLE could probably take from the world's golden treasury of music any song and popularize it simply through his gift of sympathetic interpretation. A singer to whom every word and syllable has its particular importance and receives its particular attention is bound to fill the simplest song with new beauty. The well-known Irish melody, "The Snowy Breasted Pearl," so demonstrates Seagle's great powers.

The "Ash Grove" does not lay claim to the 3,000 years which some Welsh airs say carry you back to the Druids of old, but it was originally published as an ancient Bardic tune and is undeniably full of quaint beauty.

Our dance page heading is interesting as the first photograph taken of the prize winning design in the recent Whitney exhibit of theatre foyer decorations. This is the fourth exhibition brought together by the Friends of Young Artists, an association formed to encourage students and beginners by opportunity to show their work to win cash prizes. The successful artist was Berton Kesler. The design itself, in red, pink, blue and gold, typifies dances in old Greek style and keeps the spirit of the dance in the design to a remarkable extent.

THE dance has now been transferred from its winter quarters and comes to out-of-doors! Whether on porch or veranda, sun-parlor or boat, you can still take the echoes of Broadway with you and dance to the most popular hits of the musical season.

The great hit of The Century Girl, "Alice in Wonderland," introducing Berlin's "That Broadway Chicken Walk," makes an extra lively fox-trot, as does the famous "Yaddie, Kaddie, Kiddie, Kaddie, Koo," which is introduced by "For Me and My Gal" on the same record.

The Century Girl also features in the waltz coupling. The song "You Belong To Me," introducing The Century Girl, with the very tuneful "Amaryllis" well fills the waltz bill.

A N event of prime musical magnitude is the announcement of the first and exclusive Columbia recordings by the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. No one present at the tumultuous ovation accorded this Orchestra at its recent New York appearance but will agree the Cincinnati is one of the great orchestras of the new world. Dr. Kunwald, famous as an associate of Arthur Nikisch, conducts the remarkable series of orchestral masterpieces to be issued by the Columbia, with the same keen dominant authority and the military precision for which he is noted on the concert platform. The unfailing unity and magnificent tone of the orchestra itself tell of consummate ensemble perfections.

The Entry of the Bojaren is a splendid descriptive introduction to the powers of the Cincinnati Orchestra. A far distant clarinet announces the approach. Soon the stirring roll of the snare drum (wonderfully featured in this composition) and the full orchestra crash into sound as the Bojaren come into view. A moment of pause—a solo roll on the drum—and again the triumph music reaches its apogee. A tidal wave of sound rises and dashes wild and high—then sinks to final silence. In such musical magnificence this orchestra is perfect.

But probably the greatest achievement in this first Cincinnati Orchestra record is the reproduction of the violin choir in Delibes' ballet, Coppelia. In this ballet—the Ballet Beautiful—is a string tone excelled by no orchestra before the public to-day, caught in every perfection on the Orchestra's Columbia recordings.

The Saxo

Sextette

 On June 22, 1846, Antoine Joseph Sax registered in Paris the first patent on his Saxophone. Seventy years later finds the saxophone one of the most popular musical instruments before the public. The entire saxophone family covers soprano, alto, tenor, melody, baritone, bass and contra bass units with a collective compass of over four octaves. The instruments run from 2 to 5½ feet long and are constructed of light metal. The fingering of the saxophone is practically the same as the flute and oboe. The tone is a composite of many of the orchestral colors in unison.

As a unit of a band or in solo work, the saxophone is equally effective, but the Saxo Sextette—six solo saxophonists—shows the instrument at its very best. Their Columbia records are sensational in their tone perfection.

Liszt's Master Rhapsody

HN this great Rhapsody we find one of the most famous compositions of Abbe Liszt. No other musician has so translated simple gypsy melodies into such deep haunting cadences, such tempestuous tumults of rhythm. Before a detailed description of this great orchestral transcription, special attention is called to the phenomenal clarionet work throughout played by Thomas Hughes, Prince's clarionetist, formerly a world-toured soloist with Sousa's Band and a noted master of this brilliant instrument.

Part I. (Based on an old Hungarian Folk Love Song.) All love's varied emotions are spelled in the muted mystery of the opening bars, music beaten down, down lower and lower by mighty brass chords; then the wakening orchestra, the questioning expectancy of the brilliant clarionet cadenza; the flutter and palpitation of strings staccato; final joy of life, the wild speed of the dance and the first theme ends as it began, an echo in a vast underground cavern of sound.

Part II. (Based on a Hungarian czarda theme.) What the native Hungarian does not express in song, he tells in the dance. The gypsy czardas gave to Liszt themes which he turned into Bachanalian riots of rhythm. Flung out by the brasses in this czarda is one of the most magnificently frenzied themes in all Liszt—a theme carried throughout the movement in brilliant development.

It takes the skill of a truly fine performer to give to the cornet the majesty of tone heard in the playing of this instrument by Herbert L. Clarke—probably the greatest cornet virtuoso in this country and soloist of Sousa's Band. The rich, almost trumpet-like tone of Clarke's cornet playing is perfectly reproduced in the glory music of "The Palms" and Godard's "Berceuse"—without question the tone truest cornet recordings ever presented the public.

Here is a great orchestral glorification of two world-famed piano compositions by two pianoforte masters—Kowalski's "Salut a Pesth" and Paderewski's "Minuet." The staccato brilliances of "Salut a Pesth" have been one of the triumphs of musical composition on this side of the water, as well as abroad. The glorious rhythms and the onrushing melody carry all before them in a riotous expression of exuberant spirit—music of red blood, vigor and life. On the other hand, Paderewski's exquisite "Minuet" will send one in dreams back to some stately old Victorian ballroom and picture the slow stepping dancers, the powdered wigs and the silks and satins of days gone by when dancing was an art as well as an amusement.

What can one say of Barrientos' singing of The Last Rose of Summer? The melody is one not only loved by all lovers of music, but admired by the great composers of the world. Flotow's use of the theme in Martha is familiar to all. The mighty Beethoven adapted it to one of his Irische Lieder. Mendelssohn wrote a fantasia on the air, and it was even a favorite of the brilliant Berlioz. But the world to-day has heard The Last Rose of Summer in a new way—sung by a voice divinely fitted to each note of the sweetly simple melody—the voice of Maria Barrientos, prima donna of the Metropolitan. With such a tender beauty does Barrientos sing the exquisite lament that tears will seem but a little way away and a just tribute to this most perfect interpretation of Thomas Moore's poem.

But it is when soaring skyward in pursuit of the clear notes of the flute you hear Barrientos sing as only Barrientos can—singing to the very envy of the birds of the wood. In The Pearl of Brazil (the opera success of David, who wrote music often worthy of his great predecessor Berlioz) is the great coloratura aria "Charming Bird." Here is voice and flute in wondrous interplay—note to note, echo to echo, the clear beauty of the flute only more beautiful in the human voice—Barrientos at her best.

In his handling of Saar's Gavotte Intermezzo, Eddy Brown, America's violin genius, shows an astounding mastery of technique, tone and interpretation alike. Throughout is dazzling double-stopping and a vibrato in the lower register which produces a tone of rich velvet quality. This luscious tone is also remarkably recorded in the adagio interlude in Schumann's Vogel als prophet.

America's Great National Anthems

THE expression of emotion through music is one of the most wonderful of all the gifts of God to man. The interpretation of such music is second only to the gift of inspiration. So it is when a great artist is born, a priceless gift is given to humanity—a spokesman for the unspoken loves and prides, hopes and fears of the whole world. So one feels at times when such an artist as Louis Graveure sings a song which lies near the heart of the hearer.

In all the world, where is America more truly expressed than in Francis Scott Key's "Star Spangled Banner" and Samuel Francis Smith's "America"? So true to every quality of his God given voice does Graveure sing these songs, that he seems to stand before you in the life. There is quality in Graveure's singing which can never be mistaken—when you hear this you hear Graveure, and in America's two great songs the baritone has poured, unstinted, all that he is and all that he has.

There is no American home that will not want to have this greatest of all patriotic records in its library.

When old Vienna gave a new court ball and wanted to dance it called on Strauss. The great Johann would leave his favorite café and on the way to his room select a group of the countless dance themes which seemed ever seething in his mind. That night all Viennese society would be in raptures over the "latest Strauss waltz." What a thrill would the old court have had if Lucy Gates had suddenly appeared in the balcony above and sung the familiar present-day vocal arrangement of "The Blue Danube." That thrill will be found in Miss Gates' brilliant vocalization with the Columbia

Stellar Male Quartette in her latest Columbia recording of the familiar Strauss number.

The eternally beautiful Carmena Waltz (Wilson) is another dance theme which turns into fascinating vocal beauties under the interpretation of Miss Gates on this unique record. The spirit of the waltz wedded to the spirit of song! Records these of endless delights.

12-inch | DI DIO. (A Vision of Beauty Appearing.) Hipolito Lazaro.
Single Disc | $3.00 tenor. In Italian. Orchestra accompaniment.

Here is one of the great love songs of all opera, the song of a love which brooks no reason, the confession of Ferdinand, the novice, to the Prior, of his love for an unknown woman. This solo in Donizetti's "La Favorita" is the opening sensation of one of the most melodious of all the world's operas.

"Spirito gentil" has already been sung by Lazaro from this opera, and his second Favorita aria is sung by the great tenor with a passion which translates every note into living emotion. Such singing is more than art —it is life itself.

Josef Hofmann Plays Schubert's "Erlking"

A 5942 { THE ERLKING. (Schubert-Liszt.) Josef Hofmann, pianist.
12-inch Unaccompanied.
$1.50 } CAPRICE ESPAGNOL. (Moszkowski.) Josef Hofmann, pianist. Unaccompanied.

In Schubert's art song, The Erlking, Hofmann has given one of the most supremely dramatic pianoforte interpretations of his career. The Erlking legend is a household word, the music stands among the most wonderful inspirations of time, yet Schubert wrote it instantly at one sitting.

"Who rides so late through night so wild?" in the accompaniment is the galloping of the hard driven horse. "'Tis the Erlking yonder with crown and shroud!"—in the very music is the fright of the child. There is the pleading of the Erlking in misterioso arpeggios; the comforting of the father in tender pianissimo passages; the growing terror of the boy in madly beaten chords, the fatal clutch of the Erlking, the ever galloping horse and final wild finale. "The father shuddered, his pace grew more wild. He reached that house with fear and dread"—then two lone bars andante, balancing the whole mad piece: "But in his arms lo! his child lay dead!"

As a companion selection in lighter vein, Moszkowski's brilliant Caprice Espagnol gives Hofmann an opportunity for a phenomenal exhibition of technique.

Two Exquisite Instrumental Serenades

A 2193 { SERENADE. (Jensen.) Prince's Orchestra.

These two unostentatious little Serenades are in reality two of the most exquisite musical miniatures in our Catalog. Jensen took much of his inspiration from Schumann and clearly does he reflect Schumann's gift of melody in this Serenade. Moszkowski, one of the great pianists of the close of the Nineteenth Century, in his pianoforte Serenade wrote a theme which is loved in every home.

TWO human interest factors enter into the singing of Helen Stanley, which make her singing thoroughly enjoyable to every listener. Both come naïvely from Miss Stanley herself: "I take more joy out of singing than anything else I do, and (this with calm assurance) I really can sing all the different kinds of songs that have ever been put down on paper." In proof of the last statement, Miss Stanley's Columbia recordings include operatic arias, art songs and now two of the most delightfully lilting Irish melodies imaginable.

The curate could find no fit marching song, and, sitting down the night before, hastily extemporized "Onward Christian Soldiers." The hymn found its way to this country during the Civil War and became immediately popular, appealing to the martial spirit of the day.

GEORGE POTTER, who has won first prizes galore in Gaelic singing contests, and whose Columbia records are the most authentic interpretations of Irish music before the public, has written some interesting data regarding our Irish records. For fifteen years Mr. Potter has studied Irish, Gaelic and Welsh melodies. Mr. Potter says:

"'O'Donnell Aboo' is a historical ballad written during the period of Young Ireland, and published in the Nation newspaper in the 40's. 'Aboo' is the Irish Gaelic word meaning 'to Victory,' hence the title really is 'O'Donnell to Victory.' O'Donnell is the famous Red Hugh O'Donnell, who aided O'Neill in defeating the most brilliant armies of Queen Elizabeth."

"'Molly Brannigan' is one of those little Irish pieces full of fun and good humor, set to an ancient Irish air, goodness only knows how old."

"'The Stack of Barley' is the tune played for the Irish Dance of the same name in reel time, while 'The Rocky Roads to Dublin' belongs to the class of tunes called Slip Jigs, a specialized dance called Slip or Hop Jigs. The origin of both airs is unknown."

Just one short passage in Tobani's transcription of Schuett's Canzonetta is enough to make fame for this number. The tone color of these "brass" harmonies is a masterpiece of recording. Evening Chimes is one of those semi-descriptive selections to which Prince always does full justice.

- A 2206 { POOR BUTTERFLY. (Hubbell.) Charles Harrison, tenor.

The most popular song of the day, “Poor Butterfly,” must rest its inspiration on the same magazine story of J. L. Long which became the libretto of Puccini’s “Madame Butterfly.” This pathetic and dramatic little story has an appeal almost as unusual as the infinitely tragic Margaret story of Faust. Hubbell, who has written much of our best popular music, has given in “Poor Butterfly” a beautiful melody which reflects the pathos of the old theme in a new musical setting. Harrison’s sympathetic singing completes one of the most charming and fanciful of selections. “Poor Butterfly” will live long as a widely loved melody.

One of the most beautiful of recent compositions of Ernest Ball is “My Rosary for You,” a song in its melodic and lyric inception beyond even the unusual high standing of this well-known song writer.

10-inch { MADAM BUTTERFLY. (Puccini.) Selections. Guido Deiro,

There are three distinct appeals to the unique “Butterfly” record by Deiro, here listed. The first is that the New York Hippodrome feature song is the most popular melody of the day; the second interest in the record is the personal playing of Deiro, wizard of the accordion; the third, and the most interesting appeal of all, is the opportunity to make a musical comparison of how equally well an Italian Grand Opera composer and an American popular song writer can treat the same subject. Both “Butterfly” compositions, it will be remembered, are inspired by the same theme. As to Deiro’s playing—it is quite common belief that he carries a full orchestra hidden beneath the two hundred odd stops of his famous instrument!

HARRY C. BROWNE, humorous actor and artist of the baritone, the Peerless Quartette, familiar as singers of real popular music, a full orchestra accompaniment, and Browne's personal banjo playing thrown in —here are two more of those Mississippi River songs, which make it really quite impossible to sit still.

The exotic atmosphere of Hawaii came to America about two years ago on the strains of the Hawaiian guitar and ukulele. Hawaiian music became instantly popular in America, due, no doubt, to the fact so much of the native melody is based on dance rhythms. In proof of this the six Hawaiian airs of the month's medleys are arranged in waltz and fox-trot tempo, and show how really "modern" is the music of our island neighbors.

Coupled with his wonderful leading ability, Rodeheaver has a voice which sings a secret way into every heart. The appealing quality of the great singer's voice is one which once heard is never forgotten, and is a quality which is perfectly reflected in his series of Columbia recordings.
