At the Labor Day gathering in Toronto fair grounds, Hon. George W. Ross was one of the speakers. He dwelt upon Canada's present attendant | the empire, there may be considerations and future progress. At the Chicago exhibition a few years ago, he remarked, it was shown that we are equal to producing goods equal to those of any other country, and this opens up other problems. If we produce these goods, how are we to find a market for them? That is a problem which for the Dominion of Canada appears to me easy of solution. In finding a market there are one of two essentials. think, and the next is the power to produce in large quantities; I think we have natural resources in unlimited tion of transportation. > New York, Sept. 8 .- A special to the Sun from Richmond, Va., says: Henry Wall, the young white man who was lynched near Friend's Mission on Sunday for an alleged assault upon Miss Sadie Cook, was probably innocent. Wall was suspected of the crime, and was strung up to a tree when there was no evidence against him. Further investigation leads to the belief that he was innocent. There is much indignation against the mob. Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 8.—H. S. Perry was hanged for the murder of Beiy Lanier at Decatur today. The doomed man was paie but cool and collected to the last. CHAPTER XXXVIII. "It is quite hot still," says Cecilia, her hand upon the teapot. "How love-Let us have some more!" She has come out to the terrace to welcome back the haymakers, having got (happily) rid of some of her elder-ly gossips, though not all-Mrs. Cutforth-Boss, who is hard to uproot, following her on to the terrace. It was with fear and trembling-or, at all events, a pretty pretence at it-that above suspicion, and Mrs. Gaveston, after that quick touch, retreats, blow-ing daintily upon her forces. ing daintily upon her fingers.

It is still quite early. The golden glory of July, having distinctly refused to fade into the more amber brilliance of August, the days still tarry with us, and even when they are done, long and sweet are the twilghts. "At all events Cleopatra's skirts didn't stop at her knees!" says Maria

Whether she is alluding to Joan of Are as exemplified by Mrs. Brandrum, or to Mrs. Wilding as "Folly" must forever remain unknown. At all events the return is so ready that Mrs. Wilding, who is the first to see the malicious intention, leads them all into a burst of laughter. "I made a mistake about my gown

Mrs. Gaveston, you should have asked me to build haycocks a fortnight ago, she puts her long, lean firgers up to her head. "Who's going to pull the traws out of my hair?" asks she. "I just like that silly Hamlet's

She has half-a-dozen amateur hairdressers in a moment; all of the horrid sex, and it is quite astonishing, as Maria remarks, what a long time they take to remove three bits of hay.

"Oh! that's a hairpin!" cries Mrs.

Wilding suddenly. She puts up both her hands to defend herself, though, indeed, she need not have been afraid f any hairpin in the world, as all her fair tresses are her own. "Sir Stephen! what are you doing?" "I beg your pardon," says Sir Ste-hen, hurriedly; so hurriedly, indeed, that he digs the hairpin back into her head again, rather sharply. But Mrs. Wilding bears that thrust nobly; she has looked up and has seen Nell stepping out of the drawing-room window, and has at once known all about it. That's the good of a confirmed flirt like Mrs. Wilding! It is quite a renovated Nell on whom

"Well, of course," says Mrs. Chance, "Why?" asks Mrs. Cutforth-Boss Mrs. Chance smiles again and hesitates even more. She is in a bad temper. Alec having seen Nell go down to the river with Wortley, had gone home in a huff. And how had that girl managed to be there with eyes every now and then darting little eager inquiries at Cecilia, who is still public man, the private citizen, the The Dresden W. C. T. U. And after all your fa- dition of the mass of workingmen. Substantially it stood for more constant work, better wages, shorter hours, a better distribution of labor and for the protection of the vast body of unskilled labor which had not did not do so. the ability to help itself. IT IS NOT ENOUGH. Two hundred or three hundred dollars per annum for a man with a family was not enough. An elevated family was not enough. An elevated standard was wanted. A man in Canada willing to work should be able to command sufficient wages to keep himself and family in respectability, and I have no doubt that is the aim and the whole aim of the labor moveand the whole aim of the labor movement of Canada. Alluding to the labor legislation that had been put through the legislature, Mr. Hardy said that the legislature, Mr. Hardy said that it had encountered no opposition, and that all parties had joined in the effort to promote the welfare of the workingmen. Something, he said, had been accomplished in the past. Mr. Griffin, the celebrated English statistician, says that the British working-man gets from 50 to 100 per cent more money for 20 per cent less work than he did 50 years ago, a gain of from 75 to 120 per cent. Taking into consideration that nearly all the articles of consumption necessary to sustain life have greatly follows: of consumption necessary to sustain life have greatly fallen in price, a very large percentage could be added to this. He had further compared the increase of capital as Being from £190,-000,000 to £400,000,000, or over 100 per cent, but the increase of the income of the manual labor classes only was from £170,000,000 to £550,000,000 or over 200 per cent. The amount of increase due to capital was about £210,000,000. while the total increase due to labor generally was £755,000,000. as against the £210,000,000 to capital during the last 50 years. His general conclusion was, therefore, that what had happen ed to the working classes in the last 50 years was not so much what might properly be called an improvement as a revolution of the most remarkable description. From being a dependent
