"This must be a very inconvenient town to live in," said a Cockney to an inhabitant of Ryde, "for I understand you have to get all your milk from Cowes?" "Not so bad as London," replied the Isle of Wight wag, "for they tell me you get all your milk from Wells."
 "Say, Jim, what mechanical work did you first do?" said one darkey to another. "Why, why, cut teeth, ob course," replied the other.

The first pair of buckskin breeches seen in the South Sea Islands were so little understood, that the natives stuffed them with seaweed and had them 'biled' for dinner. General diet for a small tea-party that!
 GENEROSITY.—A gentleman, praising the generosity of a friend, observed: "He spends his money like water!" "Then he liquidates his debts!" rejoined a wag.

BAD SPELLING.—A gentleman wrote Dr. Francis the following note:—"Dear Doctor,—I caught cold yesterday and have got a little horse. Please write what I shall do for them.—J. F."

We annex the answer:—"Dear P.,—"For the cold take half a pound of sugar candy. For the little horse buy a saddle and bridle, and ride him out of town the first time we have pleasant weather. Yours, Dr. F."

What is the difference between a Puseyite and a Baptist?—One uses wax candles and the other dips.

A young lady was told by a married lady, that she had better precipitate herself off Niagara Fall into the basin beneath than marry. The young lady replied, "I would if I thought I could find a husband at the bottom."

Adam Smith was at times very absent. He was told he had sent a letter to a lady unsealed. He called on her the following day and said, "My dear madam, I have brought you the wafer I forgot to put in your letter."

"It's all over with me!" as the pancake said when it was turned.

DIVISION OF TIME.—"Murphy," said an employer the other morning to one of his workmen, "you came late this morning; the other men were an hour before you."—"Sure and I'll be even wit 'em to-night, then."—"How, Murphy?"—"Why, faith, I'll quit an hour before 'em all, sure."

A publican's wife, in Suffolk, whilst in church fell asleep and let fall her bag in which she carried a large bunch of keys. Aroused by the noise, she jumped up and exclaimed, "Sally, there's another jug broke."

CUT IT SHORT.—A gentleman having his hair cut, and being annoyed by the operator's stories, in the middle of each he said, "Cut it short." At last the barber, in a rage, exclaimed, "It cannot be cut shorter, for every hair of your head is cut."

A conceited cockcomb called out to an Irish labourer,—“Here, you bogtrotter, come and tell me the greatest lie you can, and I'll treat you to a jug of whiskey-punch.”—“Mytroth,” returned Pat, “an' yer honor's a gentleman.”

A LETTER WRITER.—“I say, Pat, what are you writing there in such a large hand?”—“Arrah, honey, an' is'er't it to my poor mother, who is deaf, that I'm writing a loud letter.”

FRIENDLY ADVICE.—Never lend an umbrella, or your name to a bill; the chances are the one will not be returned and that the other will.

A gent, while being measured for a pair of boots, observed: “Make them cover the calf.” “Heaven!” exclaimed the astounded artist, surveying his customer from head to foot, “I have not got leather enough.”

Are you a Me. s?" "No; I'm a carpenter by trade." "Worse and worse! Are you a Son of Temperance?" "Bother you! no; I'm a son of Mr. John Gosling." The querist went away.

"You look as if you were beside yourself," said a wag to a fellow who stood beside a donkey.

Alderman Bangs remarked to his wife one day—"I can't imagine why my whiskers turn grey so much sooner than the hair on my head." "Oh, la!" said Mrs. Bangs. "It is because you work so much harder with your jaws than with your brains."

At the time Lord John Russell was defeated at two elections, an anonymous writer sent him a sixpenny drum, with the inscription, I am beaten on both sides.

THE COW AND CALF.—A dandy who wanted the milk, passed to him at a country tavern, thus asked for it: "Landlady, please pass your cow this way." To whom the lady thus retorted, "Walter, take the cow down there where the calf is bleating."

It was a favorite saying of Wilberforce, or Deaf Burke—The man who pledges his health too often, will soon be left with nothing else to pledge.

Dibdin had a horse which he called Graphy. "Very odd name," said Oxbury. "Not at all," responded Ton; "when I bought him it was Buy-a-Graphy; when I mouned him it's Top-o-Graphy; and when I want him to go, it's Gee-ho Graphy."

A noble saying is recorded of a member of the British House of Commons, who, by his industry and perseverance had won his way to that high position. A proud scion of the aristocracy one day taunted him with his humble origin, saying: "I remember when you blacked my father's boots." "Well, sir," was the noble reply. "Did I not do it well?" General Meadows being on a reconnoitering party in the Mysore country, a large shot struck the ground at some distance from him, and was passing in such a direction as would have exposed him to danger had he continued his route. Quick as thought he stopped his horse, and pulling off his hat, as the shot rolled past, good humoredly said, "I beg you to proceed, sir; I never dispute precedence with gentlemen of your family."

A person well known in Wellington, has assured us that he has in his possession the identical knife with which Napoleon "cut his stick" from the field of Waterloo.

"How these shopkeepers will fit it," said Mrs. Partington, with an expression of pain on her venerable features; "that young man I bought those needles of said they were good-tempered, and only see how pitifully this one has masecrated my finger."

A Doctor lately went to bleed a dandy, who languidly remarked, "Oh, Doctor, you're a great butcher!" On which the doctor rejoined, "Yes, and I've been sticking a great calf."

An old count paid his addresses to one of the richest heiresses of Paris. In asking her hand in marriage, he frankly said to her, "Miss B, I am very old and you are very young; will you do me the honor to become my widow?"

"I wish to know if you called me an ass?"
"I did, sir, but I qualified it." "You qualified it, did you? so much the better for you, sir, but pray how did you qualify it?" "I said you were an ass, sir, all but the ears."

There is a young man in Toledo who has grown round shouldered through bending over so much to kiss the girls, who are rather short in his neighborhood.

An exemplary young lady up town is very particular about closing the window-curtains to her room before retiring, for the night, in order to prevent "the man in the moon" from looking in.

"Susan, I will commit suicide if you wont have me." "Well, John, as soon as you have given me that proof of your affection, I will believe that you love me."

Beggar Woman: "Please, sir, give me a penny to keep me from starving." Gent: "Can't stop—in a great hurry—I've got to make a speech at the Society for the Relief of the Destitute."

The Chronicle tells of a man meeting two attorneys, one of whom he did not know, but asked his friend to be introduced to his brother-in-law.

CARE OF FARM TEAMS.

are of farm teams in haying time is a no small importance. Most farmers think, to give their horses less care at any other time. Horses are worked and harder at this season of the year other, and too often on nothing but with but little grain. At nights have four quarts or more of oats, if ned out as they should be, but we at them no grain in the morning, as usually full enough to work without any ed. They ought to have water before and be fed four quarts or more of oats after morning. For hot weather there is no grain so good for horses as oats. Feed and meal are said to be heating, and we are certain that many horses are lost by feeding the last in hot weather. Horses should not be worked over four or five hours without feed and water. Their stomach being smaller than that of the ox, they digest their food quicker. Instead of using the curry-comb and brush extensively, we should treat them to a bath of water, if the brook or pond is near. They soon get to enjoy it, and it does them good.

HOW ABOUT THE OLD HORSE?

How about the old horse? What is to be done with him? Or, what is to be done with a mare that is growing old? These are hard questions for a humane and moderately circumstanced farmer to answer. There can be nothing wrong in disposing of a horse ten years old, saving considerable work in him; but how old a feeble should he be before it would seem wrong to get rid of him? If one has an old horse, and he cannot well be kept, the best way is to find some humane farmer who will take him for what he is worth and agree to keep him as long as he lives. But, if possible, he should be kept on the place, and be fed and cared for, as much for the good he has done. And he will be useful for the women and children to drive, whose ways are understood, and he really has valid claims to a living from the farm. A humane man will be certain to have a calm and sensitive mind, and such a mind will devise ways for keeping a horse or worn-out animal which a cold and cruel mind would not think of, and that nothing would be lost.

The difference between a watch and an insurance company seems to be that when you wind one up it goes on, and when you wind up the other it doesn't.

N.B.—The Postal Union limit of weight of Newspapers and Printed Matter is 4 lbs., and for Samples 3¼ oz.

* Where the rate on Samples of Merchandise for Postal Union countries is given at 1c. per oz., it must be understood that this does not apply to the first 4 oz., the rate on which is 2c.; each subsequent weight of 2 oz. being chargeable 1c., as given in the table. Where the rate is fixed at more than 1c., the initial rate is not doubled. Commercial papers addressed to Postal Union countries are assimilated as regards postage to printed matter and samples of merchandise, except that the rate for the first 10 oz. is 5c. for countries in table A, and for each subsequent 2 oz. 1c. The rate for countries in table B, 5c. for 4 oz., and 2c. for every additional 2 oz.

† Where the names of places are printed in italics, the rate named is for each Newspaper under 2 oz. in weight.

a Additional charge is made on delivery; when the a is not used no additional charge is made.

c Prepayment is compulsory. If matter is not fully prepaid it will not be forwarded. In all cases where the c is not used, prepayment of letters is optional; all other matter, if not prepaid at least one full rate, will not be forwarded.

e The fee for Registration is for the package, and must be placed upon it, in registration stamps, in addition to regular postage, before it is presented to be registered.

g Canadian Newspapers and Periodicals sent from office of publication to regular subscribers by Canadian steamers, 1c. per lb.; if sent by Cunard or other Packets than Canadian, full rates must be charged. Samples to Great Britain must be limited to 8 oz. in weight.

m No Sample Post.

No Letter for a British Colony or Foreign Country may exceed two feet in length or one foot in width or depth.

POSTAGE RATES—LETTERS.

For places in the Dominion and the United States, 3c. per ½ oz.

KELLY CAKE.

One and a half coffee cup of sugar; two cups of flour; two-thirds of a cup of milk; four eggs; beat the eggs and sugar together, then add the milk and flour by degrees, then a half cup of melted butter; the last before putting in the oven; one teaspoonful of cream of tartar mixed in all the flour; half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in the milk.

DROP GINGER CAKES.

One cup of molasses, butter half the size of an egg, three tablespoonsful of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda, flour enough to make just stiff enough to drop.

FRITTERS.

One pint of sour milk; one egg; a little salt; one teaspoonful of soda, and flour to form a batter sufficiently thick to drop from a spoon without running. Fry in hot lard, a small spoonful for each one.

TIP-TOP CAKE.

One and a half cups of white sugar; one cup of sweet milk; two eggs; the whites separated from the yolks, and beaten to a stiff froth; butter size of a small egg, melted and turned into the milk; two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar; one teaspoonful of soda; one spoonful of lemon, and a little salt.

DELICATE CAKE.

Take one cup of flour; one cup of white sugar; half a cup of butter (stirred to a cream with the sugar before using), whites of three or four eggs stirred in last. Flavor with vanilla, rose water, or lemon.

A gentleman was lately inquiring for a young lady of his acquaintance. "She is dead," very gravely replied the person to whom he addressed his enquiries. "Good God! I never heard of it. What was her disease?" "Vanity," returned the other; "she buried herself alive in the arms of an old fellow of seventy, with a fortune, in order to have the satisfaction of a gilded tomb."

An old count paid his addresses to one of the richest heiresses of Paris. In asking her hand in marriage, he frankly said to her, "Miss B., I am very old, and you are very young: will you do me the honor to become my widow?"

"What makes the milk so warm?" said Betty to the milkwoman, when she brought her pails to the door one morning. "Please, mum, the pump handle's broke, and missus took the water from the biler."

SNOWBALL CAKE.

A cupful of sugar; half a cup of butter; and two cups of flour; the whites of three eggs, a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and a half a teaspoonful of soda, beat butter and sugar thoroughly together, add the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff foam, then the flour with cream of tartar sifted in, and milk and soda last.

PUDDING SAUCE.

One half tea-cup of butter, one and a half teacups of sugar, and one pint of strawberries mashed till juicy. Canned berries may be substituted for fresh ones. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream, then stir in the berries.

INDIAN PUDDING.

Put a stick of cinnamon and a quarter of a lb. of butter into a quart of milk, and put it on the fire; when it boils, thicken it with four tablespoonfuls of corn meal; when cool add four eggs, the whites and yolks beaten separately, and a cup of sugar. Pour the batter into a baking dish, and bake until brown.

YEAST.

Two cups of grated potatoes; one half cup of sugar; one fourth of a cup of salt. Place these in a pan and pour over the mixture one quart of boiling water, stirring it meanwhile. Place the whole on the stove and let it boil up once. When cool enough—about blood heat—add half a cup of good yeast. Set in a warm place to rise. It is very light and foamy, and does not sour readily; like all soft yeast, keep it in a covered vessel as cool as possible without freezing.

"It's very well," said Mr. Dodd's helpmate, "for the moral papers to keep saying, don't get in a passion; but, for my part, when Mr. D. goes to bed with his muddy boots on, I kind of bile over."

"Kitty, where's the frying pan?" "Johnny's got it, carting mud and oyster shells up the alley, with the cat for a horse." "The dear little fellow! what a genius he'll yet make; but go and get it. We're going to have company, and must fry some fish for dinner."

An elderly miss was heard to exclaim, while sitting at her toilet the other day, "I can bear adversity, I can encounter hardship, and withstand the changes of fickle fortune; but O, to live, and droop, and wither, and die like a single pink, I can't endure it, and what's more, I won't!"

USEFUL THINGS.

1. VENTILATION OF BEDROOMS.—It is at night of all other times, and when we are asleep, that we require to have the largest and most continuous supply of the freshest and purest air. It has been calculated that three thousand cubic feet is the minimum breathing space that should be provided in any sleeping room for two people,—in other words, the room should have the dimensions of fourteen feet by sixteen feet, and should be ten feet in height. Moreover, this three thousand cubic feet of air should be constantly changed and renewed. Every bedroom, therefore, all the year round, should have some communication directly or indirectly—say by the window of the room itself, or by that of an adjoining room—with the external air.

2. CRIMPING HAIR.—To make the hair stay in crimp, take two pennyworth of gum-arabic, and add to it just enough boiling water to dissolve it. When dissolved, add enough alcohol to make it rather thin. Let this stand all night, and then bottle it to prevent the alcohol from evaporating. This put on the hair at night after it is done up in paper or pins will make it stay in crimp the hottest day, and is perfectly harmless.

3. COLD STARCH.—A splendid thing to give gloss and prevent the iron from sticking: Make a suds of white Castile soap, and add to your raw starch.

THE PARISH CLERK AND THE PEDAGOGUE.—A parish clerk overheard a schoolmaster giving lessons in grammar. "You cannot place a, the singular article," said the preceptor, "before plural nouns. No one can say a pigs, a women, a—" "Nonsense!" cried the clerk; "the prayer-book knows better than you, I should think; and doesn't it teach me to say every Sunday a-men?"

One of our excellent ministers, who preaches "touchingly," recently spoke in one of his sermons of "the sad funeral procession" which followed Abel to the grave. A naughty, irreverent woman in the audience nudged her companion, and whispered, "Not such a large procession, but very select. None but the first families."

A young gentleman, the other day, asked a young lady what she thought of the married state in general. "Not knowing, I can't tell," was the reply; "but if you and I were to put our heads together, I could soon give you a definite answer."

4. CURE FOR LOCK-JAW CAUSED BY A WOUND.—If one has an attack of Lock-Jaw, pour a small quantity of warm Turpentine on the wound, and it will give instant relief.

5. If STOVE POLISH is mixed with very strong soapsuds, the lustre appears immediately, and the dust of the polish does not fly around as it usually does.

6. To KEEP FURS.—Seal them up before the first of May, as that is the time the moth miller's mischief is accomplished. Seal up your fur boxes in paper bags. Be sure there is no crevice in the paper. Some say, for the preservation of fine Woollen Goods and Furs always use Camphor. Nothing else is sure.

7. To mend GLASS and CHINA use the white of egg and flour.

8. It is said a handful of brown sugar thrown on the bottom of a hot oven will take taint out of meat when baking.

9. To CLEAN TIN-WARE.—Dampen a cloth, and dip in soda and rub the ware briskly, after which wipe dry.

10. Never iron lace curtains, but stretch them on a mattress to dry, pinning down carefully each point or scollop.

A gentleman was awakened in the night, and told that his wife was dead. He turned round, drew the coverlet closer, pulled down his night-cap, and muttered, as he went to sleep again, "Oh, how grieved I shall be in the morning!"

There is a Quaker in Philadelphia so upright that he won't sit down to his meals; and so downright in all his acts, that he never goes up stairs, but lodges on the basement.

"Ma, that nice young man, Mr. Saftung, is very fond of kissing." "Mind your seam, Julia; who told you such nonsense?" "Ma, dear, I had it from his own lips!"

The matrimonial blacksmith at Gretna Green, being asked why old women were so fond of matrimony, replied, "You know that old wood catches fire in an instant."

An old gentleman, being asked what he wished for dinner, replied, "An appetite, good company, something to eat, and a napkin."

THE SOCIAL SCIENCE SISTERHOOD.

Pursuant to announcement, the Social Science Sisterhood met at their rooms last week for the purpose of discussing the "Bill for Women's Rights," about to be presented to the legislature. The President, after calling the meeting to order, said that the time had come for a decided stand to be taken regarding the object nearest their hearts, and she wished to inform her sisters that she was so deeply interested in the movement she could neither eat nor sleep in her anxiety to have something done about it at once. The youngest Sister, a blushing young creature of forty, here arose, and said that before proceeding any further she wished to have the question satisfactorily settled, "What is the object nearest to every woman's heart?" For her part, she had always understood the dearest object to any woman was a man, but—Before she could say another word cries arose from every portion of the room of "that's so," "no, no," "shut up," and "you're right." The President, with a majestic wave of her hand, silenced the uproar, and said she was surprised that any Sister could be so foolish as to introduce what she must know was a forbidden subject in their deliberations, for once get on the subject of "Man" and they might bid farewell to any other being discussed. The offending Sister apologized, and said she would not have mentioned the forbidden topic, only that it was ever uppermost in her thoughts, and every one knew that "out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh." She was sternly forbidden to say another word by a hard-visaged Sister, who said that she pitied her ignorance, for no woman who knew anything of men could speak as she did. To her sorrow, she owned a man of her own, but that for all useful purposes she had much better be without, for she could not place the slightest reliance on him. For instance, she had that very morning requested him to see about getting the children ready for school, while she studied up the subject they were now assembled to discuss, but so far from acceding to her very reasonable desire, he told her he thought women's rights began at home, and that she ought to be satisfied in attending to home duties, instead of spending her time in inciting a parcel of silly old women to make fools of themselves. [Cries of "shame!" "old fool himself!" "home duties, indeed!"] Now the question she wished settled was, "What are women's rights?" Several sisters rose to reply, but the President said only one could be heard at a time, whereupon much wrangling ensued as to which should have the floor, each insisting that she was the first one on her feet. An amicable solution of the difficulty appearing to be impossible, the President ordered them all to their seats, saying she herself would answer the question. "What are women's rights?" She had given the subject much thought and was sure she would be sustained in what she said by every sister present. She had jotted down a few of her ideas, and she would now let them hear what they were, and drawing a voluminous roll of papers from her pocket she proceeded to read them aloud: "The first right of every woman is to have her own way in everything." [Applause.] "Secondly—It is the right of every woman to get a husband, by fair means or foul, only get one." [Prolonged applause.] "Thirdly—It is the right of every woman to keep her husband—when she gets him—in a proper degree of subjection, and to make him bear his share in what is called 'home duties.'" [Applause and cheers.] "Fourthly—It is the right of every woman to insist on her husband—when she got one—accounting to her for every cent he spent, after allowing her a fair proportion of his income—say two-thirds—to do as she pleased with unquestioned." [More cheers.] "Fifthly—It is the right of every woman to insist on her husband—if she has one—being at home by 9 o'clock P.M., or, if out later, to give an account on oath of how every moment of his time was spent." [Cries of "You're right!"] "Sixthly—It is the right of every woman to dispose of her time as she pleases, and if she chose to spend her evenings at her club or elsewhere she is not to be asked where she has been, or, if asked, to reserve the right of answering or not." ["That's bully!"] "Seventhly—It is the right of every woman to insist on her husband—always provided she has one—altogether dispensing with buttons, replacing them with studs, or when that is impracticable, pins." [Deafening applause.] "Eighthly—It is the right of every woman to insist on her husband entirely giving up the use of tobacco in every shape." Here murmurs of dissent were heard by those of the sisters who were not married, one even declaring that tobacco smoke always reminded them of the men, and was, therefore, not objectionable, for, "if not the rose, it was its perfume." She was darkly frowned on by the President, who proceeded to Ninthly: "It is the right of every woman to compel her husband—" Here the first speaker of the meeting arose and said: "All these rights apply to women who have husbands. Now, some of us have none, and I want to know, first, have we no rights? and, if so, what are they?" Not waiting for any reply, she continued, as she, too, drew from her pocket a bundle of papers: "I have inscribed a few of my ideas on the subject, which I shall give my sisters the benefit of now and here." She was at once declared out of order by the President, and forced to resume her seat. The President said she had only reached the Ninth of her "Rights," when she had six hundred and forty-seven on her list to be indorsed. The Sisters immediately took sides for and against the further reading of the document. Some declared they had heard enough; others desired to hear the views of the Sister just snubbed and forced into retirement. By degrees the discussion as to who should and who should not be heard became so warm and furious that all the Sisters were speaking at once, and our reporter, seeing little likelihood of the meeting being brought to order again, gathered these notes together and departed. We are, therefore, at present unable to give our readers full particulars of the termination of the proceedings.—San Francisco News Letter.

"When is a man not a man?" asked Jones. Of course, he expected everybody to give it up, and then he was going to say, "When he is a shaving." But they didn't give it up, not a bit of it. One said it was when he was fool enough to deal in conundrums; another answered that it was when he worked over jokes a thousand years old, and a third told Jones to look in the glass and see for himself. Jones said that he didn't see what in time they were driving at, but somehow he had lost all interest in his conundrum, and had not the heart to tell them the true answer.

THE MYSTERY OF THE PLEIADES.

To show, however, how widely spread these traditions as to the Pleiades are, I may attempt to give the information which Dr. Tylor invites as to the myth of the lost Pleiad being a heritage among savages. The stars are only apparently six, yet all the world over, among civilized and savage races in Europe, in India, China, Japan, America and Africa, this diminutive star group is not merely regarded as seven stars, but what is still more surprising, as "The Seven Stars," though the far brighter seven stars of the Great Bear might seem to deserve the title. There are various myths to account for the missing Pleiad, but one I think will suffice to show that the Australians did not borrow the idea from Europeans. I once asked a native of the Gold Coast, a negro Hercules in strength, who had therefore been christened (probably by some pious naval officer) Fivehorsepower, whether he knew anything of the stars. "No!" he replied, "I know nuffin about de stars." "But don't you know anything of 'the seven stars?'" "Oh yes, of course," he answered; "every nigger knows de seben stars." "Why do you call them seven?" I asked him; "can you count seven stars?" "No," he replied, "you count one, two, three, four, five, six; then todder one hide herself, no let you count her." There is also a savage tradition, which I can recollect, that the Pleiades are young women, six of whom are very beautiful, but the seventh is so plain that she conceals herself from sight. Some tribes of the Australians dance in honor of the Pleiades, because "they are very good to the black fellows." Was this borrowed through Europeans from "the sweet influences of the Pleiades" which Job celebrates? Ask a negro in the Southern States to look through a telescope, and he will invariably turn it towards the Pleiades, "for they are berry good to the darkies." The natives of America, both North and South, regard the Pleiades as beneficent stars and dance in their honor. "Oh, what do we owe to thee!" is the grateful salutation of one tribe. Whence then did this arise? It was not merely because those stars announced spring, and were "stars of rain," or because they were "for signs and for seasons and days and years," but also because they were connected with the idea of Paradise and the abode of Deity. The problematical theory of Moedler, that Alcyone, the brightest of the Pleiades, is the central sun of the universe, is most interesting on account of the singular fact that such was actually the belief of early ages. I have within the past year found unexpected, and I think conclusive, proofs that the name Alcyone (or rather Alkyone), meaning a centre, pivot, or turning point, was not given without some reason to that star, for the ancients in very remote ages undoubtedly believed that it was the centre of the universe, and that Paradise, the primeval home of our race and the abode of Deity and of the spirits of the dead, was in the Pleiades, traces of which ideas we even find among savages. The Alkyonic Lake, the waters of which led to the world of spirits, must have meant simply "the waters of death" leading to Alkyone or Paradise, and reminds us of Ulysses's voyage to the abodes of the dead and to the Gardens of Alkynoos. With the Pleiades, too, sacred birds (birds of Paradise) were connected. In my journal of researches (1863) I expressed my conviction that Manu (a word meaning, in the Indian Archipelago, a fowl or bird) would be found to have been connected with the Pleiades. I have been recently gratified at finding that in far distant Samoa there is a sacred bird called not Manualli the royal bird, as some European writers have assumed, but Manu-lili, the bird of the Pleiades. What a singular link we have here between the folk lore of these savages and that of the Old World, for

to this very day, from Britain to Japan, the Pleiades are popularly known as "the hen" or "hen and her chickens." In Mexico the beautiful kingfisher was a sacred bird. May not the name of the same bird in Greece have been a survival of similar ideas, as it was called the Halcyon, i.e., belonging to Alcyone, or a bird of Paradise. The bright sunny days, too, at the end of autumn, that shining season of the Pleiades, called in America the Indian season, were Halcyon days among the Greeks, which we should now render heavenly days—R. G. Haliburton in Nature.

"Why dont you strike something fresh and new?" said the petulant city editor to the "funny man," whose wit, from constant abuse, had grown as thin and transparent as a four-bit umbrella after a strong shower. There was life, however, as well as several soul-stirring cock-tails, in the old dog yet, for in less than half a second after the editorial lips had scoffed at his pungent wit, the new editorial plug-hat had got further down on the editorial head than it ever had done before, and, as he struggled in vain to clear the mashed wreck from his visage, the mocking voice of the flying man of fun was heard to shout: "Guess I've struck it!"

Most modest of men is the plumber,
No rival has he save the drummer;
Tho' the world e'er maligns,
Yet he never repigns,
And thriveth in winter and summer.
Give him but an order to plumb,
And his bill straightway reaches a sum
That depletes your exchequer—
Would equip a three-decquer—
And makes you most awfully glumb.

"Will you take 'em on the half shell?" asked the agreeable oyster opener. "No," said the stranger, regardless of expense, "whole shell or nothing."—New Orleans Picayune.

The aesthetic craze has extended itself to the Oil City Derrick, which thus ruthlessly disposes of one of the gems of our childhood by remarking: "Twinkle, twinkle, diminutive type of nebular condensation; how I meditate upon your composition. Situated above this oblate spheroid at such an altitude, in similitude an infinitesimal crystalization of carbon in the blue empyrean." This induces us to add that the venerable maternal Hubbard went to the mural orifice enclosed by a door, to obtain for her pauperized and antiquated mongrel a desiccated ossification from a quadruped. On arriving at the pantry, Mrs. Hubbard discovered that the shelves were denuded of provisions, and, consequently, the un-felicitous canine was obliged temporarily to fast.

'Twas Harry who the silence broke:

"Miss Kate, why are you like a tree?"

"Because, because—I'm board," she spoke.

"Oh, no, because you're wood," said he.

"Why are you like a tree?" she said,

"I have a—heart?" he asked, so low.

Her answer made the young man red:

"Because you're sappy, dont you know?"

"Once more, she asked, "why are you now

"A tree?" He couldn't quite perceive.

"Trees leave sometimes and make a bow,
And you can also bow—and leave."

Once upon a time a woman died, and as the mourners were carrying her to the grave, they tripped against a stump and let the coffin fall. She revived, having been only in a deep trance. Two years after, she really died, and as they were carrying her down the same road, and neared the same stump, the disconsolate widower sobbed: "Steady, boys, steady there. Be very, ve-ry careful."

IF WE WOULD.

If we would but check the speaker
 When he spoils his neighbours fame
 If we would but help the erring
 Ere we utter words of blame,
 If we would, how many might we Turn from paths of sin and shame.
 Ah, the wrongs that may be righted
 If we would but see the way!
 Ah, the pains that may be lighted
 Every hour and every day,
 If we would but hear the pleadings
 Of the hearts that go astray;
 In each life, however lowly,
 There are seeds of mighty good;
 Still, we shrink from souls appealing
 With a timid "if we could;"
 But a God, who judgeth all things Knows the truth is, "if we would."

EPIGRAMS FROM "ENDYMION."

The following scraps of epigram are culled from Lord Beaconsfield's novel, Endymion:

"A little knowledge of the world is a very dangerous thing, especially in literature."

The only use of being in opposition is that we may enjoy ourselves."

"When a nation is thoroughly perplexed and dispirited, they soon cease to make distinctions between political parties. The country is out of sorts, and the Government is held answerable for the disorder."

"Sensible men are all of the same religion. And what is that? Sensible men never tell."

"Great men should think of opportunity and not of time. Time is the excuse of feeble and puzzled spirits."

"Every political party changes its principles on an average once in ten years."

"Dynasties are unpopular especially new ones. The present age is monarchical, but not dynastic."

"That hecatomb they call a wedding breakfast, which celebrates the triumph of a rival."

"Everything in this world depends upon will." "I think everything in this world depends upon woman." "It is the same thing."

"One should never think of death—think of life—that is real piety."

"Turtle makes all men equal."

"A public man is responsible, and a responsible man is a slave. It is private life that governs the world. The world talks much of powerful sovereigns and great ministers, and if being talked about made one powerful they would be irresistible. But the fact is, the more you are talked about the less powerful you are."

In Philadelphia they have a sewing-school for young ladies, where they are specially taught to make shirts. The course of study occupies four years, after which the young ladies who graduate receive a diploma and the degree of C.B.S. (collar button stitcher). Philadelphia, the beautiful city of brotherly love, has every reason to be proud over this university for the production of male garments, and we may, in the far distant future, look forward to the day when the blushing bride can timidly boast of having made her husband's—but no; the thought is not delicate and we suppress it.

A man at Rome, Ga., recently felt that the best interests of the country demanded that he should attend a circus then in town, but he had no money. He accordingly went to a merchant, bought a dollar's worth of coffee on credit, sold it for 75 cents in cash, and went to the show with as much unconcern as the man who had to get a $25 bill changed to buy a ticket.

Sweet Evelina, from the suffocating embrace of her lover, cried out: "Give me liberty or give me breath."

MR. WAGONTONGUE'S CRITICISM OF LUCIA DELAMERMORE.

She seemed to feel pretty bad when she first came out. It took another girl to hold her up. She wanted to fall frequently, but the other girl wouldn't let her. The other girl sung short sentences. Then her feller came. She was right glad to see him. They sung a long metre hymn together, and had a right good time. Then he left. That closed his good time out. Then Lucy had a long confab with a fellow in short green pants, edged with lace. She didn't appear to like him. Both of 'em got pretty mad. She swore she would. He swore she shouldn't. Pretty soon he showed her a letter. That closed her up. The wedding was a splendid affair. Everybody sung, including the minister. Lucy looked bad, and didn't seem to feel well. She married the wrong man. They hadn't been tied two minutes when the right man burst in. He was pretty mad. Then everybody got mad. There would have been a row, but the minister got madder than anybody and stopped it. The old lover treated Lucy very badly. He made for her, sung at her, made faces at her, got his jewelry back and jumped right up and down on it. Lucy tried to tell him how it was, but the fool wouldn't hear it. If he'd kept his temper and sung less, the thing might have been made up right there. Lucy could have got a divorce in Indiana. The other fellow was willing to compromise. But, no. Everybody went off singing and swearing. Then Lucy jumps from the frying pan into the fire, got her new husband's sword out and sawed him in two with it. He died. Then she came out crazy and bragged of it. She sung it before them all. She sung crazier and crazier. She waltzed up and down half a dozen octaves, turned somersaults over them, ran up to the very top of the gamut, jumped off head first, caught herself on her own larynx before she came down, went hand over hand up the scale; again, turned three vocal flip flaps in the air on nothing, ran a foot race with a flute, beat it on its own ground and then blew herself out in one tremendous squawk. Then she laid down somewhere and died. After this the old lover came poking round a graveyard at night. He disturbed the dead about half an hour by singing how bad he felt. Then the villagers all piled into the graveyard and told him she was dead. Upon this he uncorked himself with his dagger. It took two men then to hold him up while he sang it out. Everybody was glad that he killed himself. Some of the folks who paid $3 for a seat wouldn't wait to see him die. I did. I wanted my money's worth. It wasn't much of a death. He ought to have given us more of it for the money. A man ought to be at least fifteen minutes dying for $3 per head.

Mr. Smithson (the name is unique)
Met with dire disaster last wique;
Being rendered so dumb
By drinking hot rumb
That his wife swore her spouse couldn't spique.

But Smithson had plenty of chique,
And not wishing to pose as a snique,
Spoke right up and said:
"As I hope to be dead,
The truth is, the barrel did lique."

"I was there with the rest of my clique
(Among them an old Arab Shique),
So our thirst we allayed,
Without being afrayed,
Though I own 'twas a singular frique."

The Court (austerely): Prisoner, how did you have the audacity to break into this man's house at midnight and rob him? Pri-oner (piteously): But your honor, last time I was before you you wanted to know how I could have the audacity to rob a man on the highway at high noon! When do you want me to get in my work?

EDITORS:

GEORGE ROSS, A.M., M.D.

W. A. MOLSON, M.D., M.R.C.S., Eng.

Subscription, $3 per Annum, PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

A monthly publication of 64 pages, containing carefully selected matter by competent scientific editors, and successfully strives to place the medical fraternity au fait in current (medical) events; cases of peculiar interest outside the ordinary practitioner's observation are given, original papers are contributed each month, and, generally, such a compendium of matter is found as to render the JOURNAL indispensable, not only for present perusal, but also for reference hereafter.

Although not by any means a College organ, yet it enjoys the confidence of Canada's greatest medical school—McGill University.

The endeavors of the editors to supply at once popular, interesting, reliable, scientific and technical information is being rewarded each publication by an increasing subscription list; at present the JOURNAL far exceeds any other Canadian medical publication in point of circulation.

As a medium of advertising new appliances, new remedies, hygienic foods, or any article requiring the attention of both medical men and chemists, the JOURNAL has no equal in Canada.

GEORGE ELIOT'S SAYINGS.

See the difference between the impression a man makes on you when you walk by his side in a familiar talk, or look at him in his home, and the figure he makes when seen from a lofty historical level, or even in the eyes of a critical neighbor, who thinks of him as an embodied system or opinion rather than as a man.

The beginning of hardship is like the first taste of bitter food; it seems for a moment unbearable; yet if there is nothing else to satisfy our hunger, we take another bite, and find it possible to go on.

The finest language, I believe, is chiefly made up of unimposing words, such as "light," "sound," "stars," "music"—words really not worth looking at, or hearing, in themselves, any more than "chips," or "saw-dust," it is only that they happen to be the signs of something unspeakably great and beautiful.

When death, the great reconciler, has come, it is never our tenderness that we repent of, but our severity.

There is no despair so absolute as that which comes with the first moments of our first great sorrow; when we have not yet known what it is to have suffered and be healed, to have despaired and to have recovered hope.

The mother's yearning, that complete type of the life in another life, which is the essence of real human love, feels the presence of the cherished child, even in the base, degraded man.

A Chicago naturalist stated in his lecture that a black bear could hug seven times as hard as a man, and the next time a menagerie visited that town every girl in the crowd made eyes and waved her handkerchief at the black bear, and paid him so much attention that he got confused and blushed.

THE EMBARRASSED PASSENGERS.

You may have been a passenger on a street car at a time when some one picked a half-dollar off the cushions or a dollar bill from the straw and anxiously inquired for an owner. At such a time every man instinctively feels in his pockets. Every man feels like saying that he is the lucky party, but an inward voice somehow restrains him, and he remembers that George Washington could not tell a lie. The money is invariably pocketed by the finder, and he is set down in the opinions of his fellow-passengers as contemptible and mean.

On a Woodward avenue car yesterday a young man purposely dropped a green-back on the floor, and at a proper moment he picked it up and observed:

"Who lost this dollar?"

Every one looked at him, and every mouth watered.

"Did any one drop this bill?" continued the young man, as he held up a corner.

There was another embarrassing pause. Then a man reached out for it with the remark:

"I dropped it sir. You are an honest man to return it."

"Are you sure you dropped it?"

"I am. I am not a liar."

"But—you see—you"—stammered the young man.

"You give me my money or I'll wring your neck!" interrupted the other, as he reached out for his victim.

The young man gave it up. He looked white and red and green, and he felt so bad over it that he soon dropped off the car and took to the icy walk.

A religious paper printed at Poohab, India, says of a young woman who committed suicide: "She ended her virtuous life in the cool retreat afforded by a convenient and umbrageous well."

A TRAGEDY.

"Thou wilt be true?"

The words came from the pale lips of a tall, fair girl who stood on the piazza of one of the stateliest mansions on the Island. Her features were cast in a patrician mould. Her eye also had a cast—but let that pass. From off a broad, low brow of purest marble swept a mass of fair and glossy tresses, upon which the sunlight fell, causing them to glimmer with golden glint. It was "the glintiest hair in the world, my pet." A stately figure, clad in such fashionable habiliments as could only have been turned out of the factory of the celebrated Lamier de Paris (de29-1t), completed an ensemble that would have made glad an artist's soul. Gwendolen Kahill was, indeed, a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

The winsome maid gazed up into the dark, imperious eyes of a noble cavalier, who bent fondly over her. His arms were entwined about her lissome form. 'Twas love's first embrace. It was calculated to discount the famous hug of the Huguenot lovers. (Don't shoot!) Ferdinand Shine was a hugger beyond compare. He had graduated at Chicago and taken first honors. He was truly a hugger from "way back."

But enough; he speaks. From his stately throat his rich voice rises in tender accents, the while he runs his jewelled fingers through his raven locks in dreamy and searching fashion. The action is full of grace, and yet—but let that pass.

"Oh, Gwendolen!" he exclaims, "can you doubt me?"

There was the tremble of tears in his voice. Ferdinand's was a high-strung, fervent nature. 'Twas agony to his proud soul to be suspected. Besides, he was nervous. He had poetically described himself to Gwendolen as "off his nut." The evening before he had—but to our story.

dreamily, abrading his left ankle with his right brogan, "little knowest thou the frenetic passion that rages in my heart as my eyes gaze down into thy deep azure orbs! Oh, yee-umf!"

He took another reef in his arms. Gwendolen gasped. A lovely blush suffused her demask cheeks. She gazed once more into his faithful eyes. Then the graceful head nestled confidently upon the bosom of his three-ply ulster.

"Oh, Ferdy," she whispered, sighing gently, "you hold me so tight. I feel I am all going to sleep. I think my circulation's stopped. But I am so happy, love."

A pang of terror shot through Ferdinand's heart. He rapidly uncoiled his arms. Too late! The sweet girl who had loved him not wisely, but too well, fell back lifeless. Gwendolen was paralysed by pressure.

Before the remorseful youth could recover from his trance of horror a dull thud was heard in his rear. Kahill frere had debouched from the vestibule. Ferdinand Shine caromed upon the elm tree that stood opposite the front door—the one, you remember, gentle reader, that the boys peeled for "slippery elling" on that glad summer day last June, when all the air was heavy with the hum of humble bees and the musical voice of the strawberry vendor warbled adown the tropical streets.—From "Love's Own Love," by Colonel Perry Carson.

The Chicago Tribune says that most papers do not pay for poetry, but that, wishing to encourage genius in a substantial manner, it gives a cent a pound for all verses written on white paper.

What the ex-Secretary of the Navy likes about the Isthmus Canal is that it won't have any water in it until he is dead. That is the kind of a sailor the Secretary of the Navy usually is.—Hawkeye.

SECOND YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The Educational Record, 1882.

(OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE PROTESTANT COMMITTEE OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.)

PUBLISHED MONTHLY.

$1.00 PER ANNUM.

Arrangements have been made by the Protestant Committee of the Council of Public Instruction for the gratuitous issue of one copy of the RECORD for 1882 to each Protestant School District in the Province of Quebec. It will be addressed to the teacher, but it is intended not merely for his use, but for such circulation among assistant teachers, Commissioners of Schools and parents.

THE RECORD is intended as a medium of communication between the educational authorities and the teachers and others interested in education. It will also contain educational intelligence and information of a general character, and will be rendered as practical and useful in its tendency as possible.

It will be seen, therefore, that it offers a certain and effective means of reaching the best informed and most influential people in every English-speaking district of the Province, and is thus a specially valuable means of advertising matters in which teachers and parents are concerned.
