Who lov'st on mariners to shine,
These volive garments wet, to thee
We hang within the holy shrine.
When o'er us flashed the surging bri
Amid the warring waters tossed,
From carthly aid we turned to thine,
And hoped, when other hope was lost.

Ave Maris Stella:

Star of the vast and howling main,
When dark and lone is all the sky.
And mountain waves o'er occan's plain
Exect their sto my heads on high;
When matrons by the hearthstones
They raise their weeping eyes to thee;
The star of occan heeds their cry,
And saves the foundering bark at sea.

When weaking tempests round us rave.
The gentle virgin form we see,
Bright rising o'er the hoary wave.
The howling storms that seem to crave
Their via us, sink in music sweet:
The sun ging seas recede to pave
The path beneath thy glistening feet.

The part occurrent of at that blest name. The waves sleep silent round the keel. The tempests wild their fary tame, That made the deep foundations reel; The soft celestial accents steal, So soothing through the realins of wee, That suffering souls a respite feel From torture in the depth below.

Star of the mild and placid seas,
Whom rainbow rays of mercy crown,
Whose name thy faishful Portuguese,
And all that to the depths go down,
With hymns of grateful transport own
When gathering clouds obscure their light
And heaven assumes an awful frown,

The star of ocean glitters bright. Star of the deep ! when angel lyres To hymn thy holy name essay,
In vain a mortal harp aspires
To mingle in the mighty lay!

"A few years ago I took a very bad cold, which settled on my hungs. I had night sweats, a racking cough, and great soreness. My doctor's medicine did me no good. I tried many remedies, but received no benefit; everyhody despaired of my recovery. I was advised to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, as a last resort, did so. From the first dose I obtained relief, and, after using two bottles of it, was completely restored to health."—F. Adams, New Gretm, N. J.
