THE DRUGGIST.

After a business connection of ten years in the town of Goderich,

I take this opportunity of returning to you my best thanks for the patronage that has been extended thing but kindness from the public.

to keep before the people the dif-

ried, have been duly appreciated

by those who have favored me

That I have been successful I am free to admit, but the success that has attended my efforts would never have been attained had it not been that my efforts to serve the public were duly appreciated by that wide and discerning class.

Another factor that has been of benefit to me is that I have always endeavored to supply my customers with the purest drugs and chemicals, and have avoided

Wholesale Houses where adulterated goods were countenanced in Again, I have invariably made discounts, and the saving thus effected I have given to my customers in the shape of the purer and better grades of drugs, toilet

I have found out that square dealing with the public and not extorting heavy tolls will bring grist to any mill, and that what is good for a mill isn't inimical to the interests of a wide-awake drug

Alice Arnden was not a woman on would select for a heroine because of her personality. She was neither large nor small ; she was beautiful. (I think beauty is a hard thing to define and limit), but it was a beauty of no wonderful or unusual type, and was of that kind which grows on one gradually, as his knowledge of the possessor of it grows. There was a wealth of sweetness and purity shining up in her eyes, which tears could never wash out : and the mouth indicated beginning long before the night's vigil which had left it so sternly agonized.

The trouble which had come to Alice Arnden is of no unusual kind. It is a sudden sorrow, of a kind which has crushed out all of hope in life, many for it. times in the past, and will many times in the future as long as men and maidens are proud and willful. One may say, " only a lover's quarrel," but one should remember that there are heart tragedies in this world, under the torture of which men and women drag out long lives without finding peace. To Alice Arnden it seemed as though everything worth having in life was now forever utterly beyond her hope. She arose from the seat she had occupied for so long, and moved slowly around her humble room. She had not known, until she had moved, how much she was suffering physically; how cold it was ; how cramped and weary she was. .There was really little to do. Her bed had not been used; her room was in order. She had plenty of time to prepare herself for the task of covering her sorrow from the gaze of her friends-if she could.

She made a fire and into it she remorselessly put all the fragments of the paper which she had spoiled in her efforts to write a simple letter, long ago, when her sorrow was new. Long ago? Last night! Happiness gives wings of lightness to eternity (lying about our being and so called time rather than eternity), which we roughly measure and call minutes and seconds; but sorrow weights their noiseless feet with lead.

Mr. George Fenby was next among the actors in this little fragment of human life.

He had sat at his window that morning as Alice Arnden sat at hers. His indow looked in the same direction from it he saw much the same scene she saw. The stars faced out for him as for her ; day brightened ; the sunlight fell across his face,

But as he sat there with a cheerful fire near him, he was strong from happy sleep; his eyes were bright and cheerful and looked as though tears had always been strangers to them, and his lips were emiling.

The icy marshes seemed to him a type of the future. Smooth, white, purethe light stretching warmly across them and with the ocean outside standing to him, as to her, as a type of eternity—an eternity which he felt would be one of strength and happiness.

George Fenby thought of what he had to be thankful for this levely morning. A small fortune, enough for himselfand one other, a fair woman-and good as fair-for his promised wife; health, education, friends, influence, position it was indeed a goodly prospect.

This man was strong and quick; good looking if not handsome. He looked like a man who would not do a wicked thing, or think it, while he might do a weak or foolish one. He was a man who would be likely to win a woman's heart -and hold it; a man whose love a woman might prize, and the loss of which she might wisely mourn. Weak enough to be a man, he was strong enough to be one hard to win from the life which had once had him.

There was a happy smile on his face as cheery voice.

' Here's a letter for you, George." "Thank you," said George, as he took

"You are welcome. By the handwriting on the envelope I judge the message will be a pleasant one."

And the boy left the room. A pleasant message ! The smile deep ened on the man's face as he lovingly handled the letter a little time before he broke the seal. A pleasant message !

These were the words he read : "MR. GEORGE FENBY,-I will not consent to be any longer a hinderer regarding your 'higher ambition.' I never wish to speak with you again in all my life. I give you back your freedom.

ALICE ARNDEN."

seemed dreary and desolate; George lives were drifting so far apart.

The village of Marsham was a small not into temptation." one, and most of it was farther from the Dean than were the two houses at the Kingsley owned the finest place in all you good."

Standard I he bight is perstepped into the road and placed the reins in George Fenby's unresisting hands.

happy persons.

It was a relief to both George and Alice that there was service in the little church that morning, and everybody a flirt, would be looked for there, Secret sorrow finds a certain abatement of its intensity in the efforts of appearing unconcerned. seeing what one has lost.

firmness and resolution, which had its their relations to each other were known to come with her father, as she had, but also. And so poorly had they played many were speculating as to the reason

Ralph Warden was too shrewd a mar not to see what every one else saw. He was deeply interested and very much of Alice Arnden, and there were those who had shaken their heads when it be came evident that she had been won by George Fenby, instead of Ralph.

Ralph had never spoken to Alice of love, and we will respect his reserve. What he cared for her may remain sealed book.

George Fenby walked home alone Ralph Warden came the same road, but a quarter of a mile behind him. Some distance out of the village Ralph suddenly came upon two papers, resting by the side of the road. They had most likely been pulled from the pocket of the owner in removing his pocket handkerchief. The smaller paper had blown apart, it lay upon the other, and its contents were so brief that Ralph had read it before he had taken it into his hand, and before he was aware of what he was doing. We have seen the paper before. It was the brief letter in which Alice Arnden had dismissed George Fenby. Ralph Warden stood for a long time with the letter in his hand. "I've read it once; it can do no harm to read it again." he said.

And he read it again-not once, mere ly, but a dozen times. It seemed as if the bit of paper which he did not find fore him.

After a time he stooped and picked up the other paper, a long, folded document but the action was merely a mechanical one. He did not open it to see what it was, but with his head bent forward on his breast, and with a very grave face he went on his way. He walked more slew ly than before; he sometimes stopped, and he talked to himself from time to

"If this is final." he commenced aloud, and then relapsed into silence. " 'A hinderer.'

Then, after standing and thinking for awhile, he went on : " She never was moody and self-distrustful."

He thought for many minutes now,

"I don't understand what she means by his 'higher ambition.' His highest ambition lately seems to have been to win her. It has cost her a great deal to think. But he knew it all. Two proud give him up-any one can see that with and obstinate young creatures had been half an eye. And his freedom is not parted by fate. And he muttered with welcome to him; he neither wanted it white, compressed lips. "I alone undernor expected it."

The noonday sun was shining and making everything pleasant. There was a glow in the wintry air which seemed to have a promise of summer in it. Suddenly he stood still, and a hot, fierce flush crept into his face. "I wonder if it is true that hearts are ever "caught in the rebound." as they sometimes say they are ? I will-" And he clenched his hands and hurried on his way.

He did not stop again until he reachhe heard his little brother knock at the door, and he answered "Come in" in a ter were waiting for him, nor did he think his thoughts aloud any more. With a few words of greeting and a few words of excuse, he put his mother and sister aside for the present, and went up to his own room.

> He seated himself at his table, placed Alice Arnden's letter upon it, and read it again. Then for the first time he looked at the other which he picked up. He turned it over and saw at once what it was -a deed from Bertram Kingsley, George Fenby.

The time had been when the He had known this for a long time gossips had connected his name with that and, knowing this, had thought little of events which might have otherwise deeply affected him.

Last night, for instance, a laughing group of gentlemen had spoken of Miss Kingsley. One had said: "She is beauty and heiress. Whoever wins her will have a beautiful home. The Kingslev estate is the finest in Marsham."

Now, every gentleman in the group knew that the Kingsley estate was for sale and every one had counted at its true value the answer which George Fenby had made. Indeed, his devotion to Alice Arnden was so absolute and complete that no one, save her modest self, would ever have doubted for

"It's my highest ambition to be the naster of the estate," laughed George, and I have made offer which I think will be accepted. I am to have an answer tonight. If I succeeded I shall be supremely happy. If notwhy, I will do as other men have done-failing of what I want, I will take what I can get."

Ralph could not remember where Alice Arnden has been when these innocent words had been spoken. That she had been near enough to hear them he was trying to draw something from was evinced by her letter, which was be-

He could only dimly imagine how ah must have suffered in trying to evolve the truth (as she believed the truth to be) from what she had heard. When a human idol falls from the place it has filled in the heart, not the least of the pain comes from what we see, or believe we see, of its unworthiness. To find out gold but glided clay is a sorrowful thing. So he sat there, and pitied Alice Arnden for the faith in man which she had last, as well as for the man himself who had been put from her. With what pain beyond that which would come to her from a belief that her lover would think and do what his words seemed to imply, must she face the added shame of his stooping to tell it; nay, more, to boast of it.

We want no Yankees coming over here to take the bread out of the mouths of our own actors and actresses was the loudly expressed decision of the theatrical profession and of the dramatic critics of London. Is this reaction against Americans in England never destined to find a parallel in the United States? Must we always worship at the feet of the traveling Britom, be he peer or player, whether he come in sublime solitude to spy out the weak places in our land, or whether he bring with him a mistress to introduce to the choicest circles of American society? At least the Americans are guiltless of that peculiar form of British social migge-meanor.

I used to drink a glass of beer every noon, two before supper and 'work the growler' before going to sleep at night. That cost about twenty cents a day. Now I save all that and get along just as well as before. I don't know what there is about the meal, but when I have had a drink of it I don't care for beer or anything else to drink. You'd better try it yourself."

"Oatmeal in water," explained a physician to a Mail and Express reporter who had overheard the above-recorded dialogue, "is one of the best drinks in the world for a workingman, especially in warm weather. It is nutritive, satisfying and agreeable to the stomach. For laborers it makes a useful addition to the diet, costs but little, and repays the small outlay in the form of increased ability to perform labor, either physical or mental.

She should exercise the there are the Sunday stories mamma tells right to reprove or punish when necessary, just as much as she should exercise the right to give encouragement, and praise, when needed or deserved.

All children at some time during their lives, need punishment, I don't mean whipping, there are other modes of punishment that meet all requirements, and are much less degrading to the child and mother. I find that a half hour of selitary confinement, going to bed an hour earlier at night, or the loss of some hoped for excursion, or toy, will usually work wonders with any little brood. Whipping is something seldom, very seldom resorted to with my little ones. Great indeed must be the offence that merits such degradation. And yet if such punishment must be administered, why my small men and women know that mamma will not shrink from the task. Although the children know that mamma suffers much more than does the offender, and I think that is the greatest punishment of all to them.

I can not kelp getting out of patience with the women who leave all such unpleasant duties to the father. It is not fair to the children, the father, or them-

Children should be taught to lock forward to papa's home-coming as one, if not the most, pleasant thing of the day. Not semething to be looked forward to with dread and fear, knowing that with papa's coming comes the long deferred punishment.

It must be, to say the least, decidedly unpleasant and discouraging for the father of a family of little ones, to come home at night after a hard and busy day, and be met with a row of downcast sulky, or tearful faces, and be told by mamma that Johnnie was saucy; Daisy disobedient, or that Freddie played truant instead of going to school. In stead of a quiet pleasant evening of games, and chats with papa, there is a hastily eaten supper, the culprits are the children sent to bed with bitter wounded hearts, and the parents sit in gloomy silence below stairs. Papa cannot help thinking that his children think of him only with dread and perhaps dislike. And the mother ought to feel that her children look upon her as a tale-bearer and spy. All this might be avoided if punishment had been given when the offence took place. Let your children understand that mamma can be firm as well as gentle. And that an act of disobedience will be punished by her, just as thoroughly, if not as readily, as for-pentant child asks for it. Never punish children without first being certain that they understand what they are being punished for. And after punishing them talk it all over with them. show them that you purish them not for revenge, but for their own good. DIPLOMATS AT ROME.

The Elegance and Polish of the Englishalan and Insolent Cannibal Islander.

Correspondence of The Chicago Daily News. ROME, Italy, Aug. 7.-There are legation and legations, just as there are men and men, people and people. At Rome the members of oreign embassies are, as a rule, ceremonious well bred, and socially elegant in manners They are acquainted with the ways of the world and the usages and manners of the best society. A few weeks ago, when the Duke of Edinburgh was in this old city, besides enjoying royal hospitalities at the quirinal court His Royal Highness went to an elegant luncheon party which was given for him by the first secretary of the British legation, whose wife is the sister of the beautiful Duchess di Sermoneta. After the luncheon the Duke of Edin-burgh was entertained elegantly in the handsome villa and grounds of the English ambas-sador's palace at the Porta Pia, which palace and grounds belong to the British Govern-ment. The wives of the secretaries of legation were the hostesses on the occasion of this gar-den tea. The English ambassador, Sir John Savile Lumley, is for the time being absent from Rome, and likewise in deep mourning for his brother, who died this spring at Cannes. The royal entertainment at the English ambassadorial villa was as socially perfect as such entertainments ought always to be.

But there are legations in Rome, infelicemente, totally different, where social refinement and civilized manners are unknown

But there are legations in Rome, infelicemente, totally different, where social refinement and civilized manners are unknown quantities. Indeed, you wonder why they are called legations or how the members can possibly have anything to do with diplomatio life. It seems almost a figure of speech to call them diplomates, so ignorant are they of the ordinary usages of even common intercourse among civilized people, and also as to how they should conduct their selves in their official positions so as to command respect.

I remember once the secretary of the Persian legation—his title was printed in full in French on a very dirty visiting card—came to call on me as a traveling pedler! He was a most untidy, greasy looking, "dark-complected" man, that Persian secretary. With him came a facchino, or porter, who carried some large packages of common, trashy Persian stuffs, which the secretary wished me to buy, or to find purchasers for him. The said secretary of legation, himself, had in his pockets a lot of rubbishy rings—pale turquoises set in base white metal—he called them "taliamnan" and said they were worn in his country by soldiers in order to secure lucky shots. The secretary retailed these rings at 5 francs apieco ($1). I bought two or three to get rid of the diplomate. I shall never forget what dirty hands that Persian secretary of egation had!

And as I am on the subject of outlandish legations I will relate to you a remarkable scene that actually occurred in one of these semi-savage diplomatic offices in Rome. I will tell you the tale as it was told to my, flissence could not possibly take place in your courtly official rooms, my stepbrother Britisher, and it is to be hoped not in ours, dear American fellow-citizens. For now, at least, the United States is ranked among civilized nations, and the social status of such officials as Mr. Marsh and Mr. Astor was very satisfactory to Americans.

You have never heard of the legation of His as Mr. Marsh and Mr. Astor was very satisfactory to Americans.

You have never heard of the legation of His Majesty, the King of the Cannibal Islands. Of course very few persons have, and the fewer that do hear and know of such a wild place the better it will be for their peace of mind and tranquility of nerves. One fine prising morning a lady—as strue a gentlewoman as ever trod in shoe kid—was obliged to hunt up that legation. She had some affairs, some business interests in the Cannibal Islands, and needed to have an official verification of her signature to an important paper, which had to be sent off as quickly as possible by post. For in the Cannibal Islands it appears there are all sort of great money and property transactions, as well as ferocious beasts. When she arrived at the building at which was the legation of the Cannibal Islands and made known to the doorkceper her desire to find the official tion of the Cannibal Islands and made known to the doorkeeper her desire to find the official rooms he showed her into one, where she found an elderly Cannibal Islander seated on the small of his back in a chair, his feet cocked up higher than his head on the mantelpiece, or some such elevated "coign of vantage," His costume had never seen the inside of the tailor-shop of the London Poole; his contraban large, was not that of an inversible Roman Contraban contra iness was not that of an imperial Roman who luxuriated in baths. He was sucking a who luxuriated in baths. He was sucking a cigar and reading a newspaper.

When the lady entered the room this Canpibal Islander did not rise from his seat nor even change the lofty position of his heels, and in reply to ber civil question if the Consul-General of the Cannibal Islands was in, he said curtly, throwing the words rudely over the newspaper:

"No; he has gone out of town."
"No; he has gone out of town."

"No; he has gone out of town."

"Is there no vice-consul here?"

"No; he is away," jerked out the man.

The lady was in despair, as we women are apt to be when any hitch in business affairs takes place. We cannot manage with sivil and presence of mind an emeute in the cook's department, bring to terms a refractory valet, or pacify a rebellious mind, but business is a dark continent to our minds. So, as I have said, she grew despairing, and exclaimed:

"Ah, what shall I do? I have with me a most important paper to sign."

An, what shall do: I have with he amost important paper to sign."
Hereupon the Cannibal Islander grew wroth. He did not change the position of small of his back nor lower his heels, but he cried out roughly, like a great ogre in a fairy

"I should think the consul-general had a right to go off for a few days if he wants to without every Cannibal I-lander coming here to make complaints."

This unexpected and rude rebuff caused the lady to say, remonstratingly:

what! Never tried Johnston's Tonic Bitters! Then do so at once, it's positine."

The Cannibal Islander jumped up, his heels were brought suddenly from mantel-piece to floor, the small of the back to a perpendicular position, and he roared out:

"Look here! Who are you? Coming here to make complaints? Go into the other room if you have any complaints to make. I won't hear them. Go out!"

Now, you or I (I, most certainly) would have been frightened out of our wits. I am sure I should have been afraid that the ferocious Cannibal Islander meant to eat me up raw without perper or salt. But title lady in question had the presence of mind to remember that Cannibal Islanders do not eat people uncooked, and also that it would be unwise policy to let a Cannibal Islander know that she was alarmed, so, although she was horribly shocked at the brutal treatment she was receiving, she said, quickly:

"I'do not know who you are nor why you dare speak so rudely to a gentlewoman who comes to this office on business."

Then, seeing that the Cannibal Islander was coming toward her in a threat-ning manner, as if he meant to take her by the shoulders and put her out of the room, she prudently and adding in a low voice: "Do not dare to address another word to me. I will not suffer such insolence;" so saying she left the room. When she resched the entrance door of the building she asked the door-keeper who was the rude man occupying tho office in the absence of the regular official. To her surprise she was told that it was no less a personge than his excellency the minister plensing that has a stold that it was no less a personge than his excellency the minister plensing that has a stold that it was no less a personge than his excellency the minister plensing the last of the catarrh remedies I ever saw advertised, but they were of no use. and the Broker Takes the Cake. From Puck.
[Enter Mr. Taurus, a lamb with bullish ocivities.] Broker: Good morning, Mr. Taurus.

Broker: What can I do for you to-day?

Mr. Taurus: Well, I'm thinking of buying wheat. What do you think obit?

Broker: Looks like a safe purchase. Just e how low it is, and consider how high it

Mr. Taurus: Yes; and 'then there is the prospect of a European war, you know.

Broker: That helps it, too, If war breaks out, wheat will go sky high.

Mr. Taurus: Bus there are signs of an early spring. Won't that induce heavy sowing? Broker: If the spring is early it will probably be very wet, so that the farmers won't get to sow any earlier, anyhow.

Mr. Taurus: That's just what I think.

Broker: Besides, it's the winter wheat that counts, you know; and the sowing of that was cut short by the early winter.

Mr. Taurus: Well, it looks very favorable for an advance. You may buy 10,000 bushels for me. Good day.

Broker: Good day, ir.

[Exit Mr. Taurus. Enter Mr. Broon, a lamb with bearish ideas]

Broker-Good morning, Mr. Broon. How are you feeling to-day?

Mr. Broon: Very well, thank you. What's the aspect of wheat?

Broker: There isn't much change.

Mr. Broon: Then of course it's bearish, for if it isn't going up it's coming down, you know.

Broker: That's about the way of it. Mr. Taurus: Yes; and then there is the Broker: That's about the way of it.

Mr. Broon: What do you thing of a short

Mr. Broon: What do you thing of a short sale?

Broker: It looks like a sure think. The market isn't very high now, of course; but it has been a good deal lower, you know, with far less production.

Mr. Broon: Yes; but the prospects of war in Europe must be taken into consideration.

Broker: Oh, the European war scare is a chestnut. It has no effect on wheat now. It's been worked too much. The fact is, the fellows a holoaded up on a prospect of war have got pretty tired of their load, and they are likely to drop it any minute, and knock the stuffling out of the market.

Mr. Broon: That's my view, exactly.

Broker: Yes, sir. Then, again, all these countries have been storing wheat in anticipation of war; and if war comes they have enough to keep them going for a long time. And if there is no war, of course the foreign demand will not be stimulated, and prices must go down.

Mr. Broon: In either case I don't see how.

must go down.

Mr. Broon: In either case, I don't see how

Mr. Broon: In either case, I don't see how the market can advance.

Broker: No sir. Again, the spring is going to be early this year, and the acreage sown will be larger.

Mr. Broon: But winter came early, you know, and stopped fall sowing.

Broker: Oh, that's no bull argument. It's the spring acreage that rules the market, you know.

New Eacs for the Shoe Buttoner. It is a singular fact that nine out of ten of he "bums" and tramps brought into the station house have on their person a shoe buttoner. No matter what kind of shoes they wear, still they have one of these simple in-struments. Lieut. Hambrock decided a week struments. Lieut. Hambrock decided a week ago to make a collection of the shoe buttoners taken from the prisoners brought into Bremenstreet Station. In the seven days they numbered eighteen, and, like young ladies do with their string of buttons, he attached them together. He has now a chain some three feet in length. A peculiar thing is that the book end is bent into a variety of shapes. This penchant for having buttoners attracted the attention of the detectives long ago, and it happened to strike some bright-minded policeman that the little instrument could be made to do the work of a skeleton key, as far as the locks in common use were concerned. In to do the work of a skeleton key, as far as the locks in common use were concerned. In reality, the shoe buttoner, to all intents and purposes, was converted into a burglar's tool, and still could be readily passed off as a necessary implement in arranging one's toilet. The possession of a skeleton key is a serious offence, and carries with it conviction of a penal term. The law, however, cannot regard the shoe buttoner as a contraband article, and still the evil intending are as well fortified with it as with the burglar's favorite tool, since, when properly shaped, it does the work equally as well. The expert can pick a lock with one of these little iron hooks with as much facility as if he had a skeleton key, any yet if caught with it in his possession enjoys immunity from the statute covering the offence. Usually, when one of these instruments is found on a prisoner's person it is thrown away, or perhaps given back if the owner is released. No doubt in the course of a year several hundred are taken up by the police. The amount of theft that could be traced to them would very probably prove startling.

THE Dominion Cabinet looks in rather shaky condition at present. The Postmaster-General has been unseated for corrupt practices; the Finance Minister has acknowledged bribery by agents; the Minister of Militia is endeavoring to work upon the sympathies of his opponents to get them to withdraw the charges of corruption against him, and the Premier will have to face the music in the courts at an early day. STRANDED AT PORT BLAKE. -The schooner Kolfage, owned by P.
McEwan, of Goderich, and sailed by Capt. John McDonald, was stranded
Tuesday morning near Port Blake, eight or ten miles below Bayfield. The Kolfage laft Goderich for Providence Bay on Sept. 26th, and left that port on Friday last laden with lumber. The which came up early Monday morning, struck her near the American shore, and so fierce was the gale that the entire deckload of the schooner was carried away. Tuesday morning they passed Goderich harbor, but owing to the heavy wind and rain and the spray raised by the waves washing over the deck, neither captain nor crew could see the lights. At daybreak they discovered the coast down by Bayfield, and endeavored in every way possible to make the river, but owing to the heavy wind and the violence of the waves the boat became unmanageable and drifted south ward some eight or ten miles. When Captain McDonald saw that the stranding of the vessel was imminent, he cast his heaviest anchor, but the strain was so great that the chain snapped. Other efforts to save the boat from drifting on to the beach were made, but without avail. At about 9 a. m. she stranded on the sand, and the captain and crew with difficulty made for the shore. Captain McDonald says the blow was one of the most severe storms he ever experienced, and says further that when soudding along the American shore under bar poles, he saw a large three masted schooner go down with all on board.

THE MAY .- R'S WELCOME.

Mayor Scager was proud to have the privilege of taking part in the inauguration of this great Exhibition and of thanking those who had been instrumen tal in bringing it to a successful result.
On behalf of the people of Goderich he heartily welcomed visitors and exhibitors, to our town and fair. This Exhibition is a credit to the directors. It is a commodious, well-constructed and the spaces are so allotted as to bring into prominence the most effective features of the exhibits. On ascending the gallery the were shown by these large and commo dious buildings and spacious grounds, strikes one as a most attractive and excellent display. The collections of beautifully wrought articles speak of many hours of patient-labor; of exquisite taste and judgment in decorative art and needle-work. It is gratifying to find our ladies coming to the front so successfully and the hope is not far fetched that looks for double the number of entries in their department before many fairs come and go. Ladies work and the FINE ARTS generally go together in the catalogue of an exhibition. And naturally so. The one might be looked upon as a sort of counterpart of the other and the "Fine Arts" do not lose by the association. The works of art on view this year show an increasing interest over former years in the matter of number and merit. One great end of exhibiting is gained when interest is stimulated in the artistic and the crowds which linger round the pictures and come back again evidence that popular taste in this direction is not people want. As a great educational medium, giving suggestions for improvements, and stimulating to greater proficiency in agriculture and manufactures, and reaching of the masses of the people currants, gooseberries and plums, in jars, was also to be seen near the dairy goods.

An Earthly Paradisc.

abolished in New York by law. There are now 1300 convicts unemployed, and soon the existing contracts will expire, when all will be idle. There are legislators and newspapers found to openly approve of this condition of affairs. New York has a prison population of 12,800 people, of whom there are available for productive labor about 6000, whose industry, if availed of, would come in competition with the wage-earning classes. In manufacturing alone there are 700,000 free workers engaged in this state. The proposition then is that 6000 convicts should be kept idle for fear that their labor would reduce the average wages of 709,000 who are free, supposing that all the convicts even are engaged in manufacturing. These 6000 convicts were engaged in actual competition before, and will be again, after their incarceration, with those who object to their employment under confinement. The cost of maintaining these 12,800 convicts is over a million and a quarter of dollars a year; and it is a grave emergency that would justify a state in wasting so much a year. But the cost in dollars and cents is the least serious feature of the problem. These convicts are nearly all destined to be returned to society. Their average age is under 25. The average nearly all destined to part of the convicts upon public works outside the prison walls. The number to be employed in any industry should bear a fixed proportion to the number engaged in that industry outside the prison walls, and that proportion should be so low as to preclude any genuine complaint of competition. The frauds that have been perpetrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlars by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all-important subject of the preservation of sight. there are only two articles from which the spectacles lenses can be manufactured. viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name, it still remains glass. Pebble, on the other hand, is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crystal found generally in freestone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald, and nearly as hardas the diamond. The Pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone, cut by aid of diamond dust, and the greatest amount of power is placed immediately over the centre of the grain found in all pebble. It will give to the spectacle wearer the coolness. freshness and a pleasant feeling that the ordinary spectacle lenses cannot by any possibility impart. All spectacles and eyeglasses are stamped B. WONDERFUL OLD LADY.

THE WIFE OF THE GRANDICLD MAN OF ENGLAND.

The Tory Descat at Northwich Largely Due to Her-The Gladstones and the Gres venors - Mrs. Gladstone's Political Growth-Holding Up Her Hasband's London Leiler in New York Sun.

while the effect of the Northwich election upon the future of parties and statesmen absorbs the attention of politicians, the victory of the Home Rule candidate is admitted to be a personal one for the Gladstone family, and, in a special sense, for Mrs. Gladstone. Her political power is essentially unlike that of Lady Holland, or Lady Palmerston, or Lady Beaconsfield. She has neither personal beauty nor vast wealth, nor blue-blood lineage nor a London drawing-room. But within ten years she has become an acknowledged power in shaping the course of political events, and this power has its source in her intellectual character and her high womanly integrity. The Northwich contest had in it something actually personal between the families of Gladstone and the root and branches of the Minister. She dresses generally in black silk or velvet, without style or adornment. Her age, a certain graciousness of aspect, her earnestness, her total loss of herself in him, her tact among politicians, her favor with the Queen and her popularity with the people all combine to make her a political power unique and unprecedented. The sympathy of the electors of Northwich was intense with her, and it was fanned into fervor by astute and well-bred speeches of Herbert Gladstone, who, although not eager nor brilliant, gives promise of a useful public career.

The Primrose League is not popular in Cheshire. The ladies of Eaton Hall despise politics as ungenteel—as something for the shricking sisters exclusively. The women of the constituency admire and love Mrs. Gladstone to a degree amounting to infatuation. The domestic influence was altogether with Mr. Brunner. The visits paid, the letters sent and received by Helen Gladstone and her mother during the last three weeks, would reveal more clearly than newspaper reports the story of the defeat of Lord Henry. Unlike Lady Randolph Churchil's, their political "interference" is not calculated to instigate talk of Parliamentary inquiry. After the last general election it was seriously proposed to contest a number of seats on the score of undue influence by the Primrose dames, who, by threats, by petty meddling, by gifts of clothing and provisions, and by a discreet use of money, saved certain candidates by conduct which, if committed by men, would have brought on their heads legal penalties. Mrs. Gladstone did not resort to these questionable methods. The victory of Mr. Brunner is first a victory for Home Rule. Secondly, it is personal tribute to the virbase of a true wife and noble woman, whose generosity has been so basely requited by the Duke of Westminster. Grosvenor stock. When, all but fifty years ago, Gladstone married Catherine Glynne, daughter of Sir Stephen Glynne of Hawarden Castle, Flintshire, the bride was a tall, longfeatured, amiable, but sedate Englishwoman, whose manners, as described by an old friend of her father, were shy to awkwardness. She was well educated, and by nature, as well as by attainments, well suited for the companion and closest friend of the man who has been the greatest of England's statesmen. Family cares, which in time included eight children, evenly divided as to sex, absorbed her early prime; and a more lovable or loving household not exist in the country. Most of them are either attached to the paternal home or near enough to be called to its hearth. None of them are brilliant in the shadow of their tather's greatness. But all are accomplished, dutiful, and exemplary.

The home is Mrs. Gladstone's. The inheritance of Sir John Gladstone's son was chiefly commercial and personal; and great a finan-cier as the Grand Old Man is for the Empire he was not particularly thrifty in keeping his own affairs in good shape. He spent money lavishly in travel and in the acquisition of the resources of mental pleasure with which Ha-warden abounds. Their children were taught everything which money could procure. During all the intervening years between marriage and the maturity of the youngest it was impossible for the family income to be increased, except by the emoluments of office at intervals; and it is doubtful whether Mr. Gladstone is a pound better off for the princely salary he has had in Cabinets. None princely salary he has had in Cabinets. None interest of the Gladstone sons added anything by marriage or otherwise to the family income; and the daughters married wisely, two of them, but not well in worldly sense. In their enlightened and tender devotion to their family the Gladstones have shown that perfect probity and healthful sweet nature which are characteristic of them in all their social relations.

Whenever the young members of the Glad-our side."

A little girl who wanted to describe the absent-mindedness of her uncle said:

The reconciliation, political and social, was effected by Mrs. Gladstone. Nor was her task difficult. The old man is tenacious of trust and a sentimental friend to those who are invincibly loyal to him, but he has that noble philosophy of soul which discards enmittes and finds in human rivalry, antagonism and collision only passing interest. It is this nobleness of nature which enshrines a bust of his arch enemy, Disraeli, over one of his writing tables in the magnificent library at Hawarden. It is this magnanimity which seals his lips toward hectoring old John Bright.

But the motive of the Marquis of Westminster was not so pure. He still yearned for a seat among England's dukes. He assiduously courted the Gladstones, and the gossips even hinted at marriage between the young people—an absurd speculation. In 1874 the Marquis became the Duke of Westminster by favor of the great commoner who had attained Curran as an Orator.

The following is Curran's description of his first appearance at a debating sopy centus and accessary pitch of power watch the wealth of the Grosvenors was unable to compass. The Duke's gratifude was boundless. The story of the Millais portrait, painted to be worshiped and then sold with derision and contempt, is too familiar for repetition. The Duke was one of the first to oppose Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule conversion. Nor was he timorous oy delicate in his desertion. He resorted to every device known to crafty politics to steal away seats in Liberal constituencies. His tenants and servants were ordered within a year to vote on two occasions for Tories, and they tamely did so. The passion of the Duke toward the great Commoner gradually exceeded all bounds, and throughout Flint and Cheshire the old families became inflamed by the memory of his former treason, his professed repentance, and the fullness of reward with which his return to loyalty had been signanized. "I stood up. My mind was stored with about a folio volume of matter; but for want of a preface the volume was never published. I stood up, trembling at every fibre, though remembering that in this I was but imitating Tully. I took courage, and had actually proceeded about as far as Mr. Chairman, when to my astonishment nd terror, I perceived that every eye signalized.

Mrs. Gladstone, meanwhile, had become a woman of affairs. Her tall, firm, unshapely and uncouth figure is as familiar in London and throughout the country as the Grand Old Man's. She is never absent from his side. She rode with him through savage London mobs, believing her presence would shield his gray hair. She is accustomed to sit in the House of Commons as many hours as he, unseen except by the fortunate few in the ladies' or the Peeress' gallery, where she usually went, often with the Duchess of Albany, while he was Prime Minister. She dresses generally in black silk or velvet, without style or adornment. Her age, a certain graciousness of aspect, her was riveted upon me. "There were only six or seven present and the little room could not have contained as many more; yet it was to my pain-striken imagination as if I were the central object in nature and assembled thousands were gazing on me with breathless expectation. I became dis mayed and dumb. My friends cried. "Hear him !" but there was nothing to hear. My lips, indeed, went through the pantomime of articulation; but I was like the unfortunate fiddler at the fair who, coming to strike up the sole that was to ravish every ear, discovered that an enemy had maliciously soaped the bow ; or rather like poor Punch, as I once saw him, grimacing a soliloquy, of which his prompter had most indiscreetly neglected to administer the words,

Such was the debut of Sack Curran or 'Orato. Mum" as he was waggishly styled : but not many months elapsed before the sun of his eloquence burst forth in dazzling splendor. "More Trouble May be Expected. If you do not heed the warnings of nature and at once pay attention to the maintainance of your health, How often we see a person put off from day to day the purchase of a medicine which if pro-cured at the outstart of a disease would have remedied it almost immediately. Now if Johnston's Tonic Liver Pills had been taken when the first uncasmess made its appearance the illness would have been "nipped in the bud." Gloss is imparted to collars and cuffs n steam laundries by passing them beween two hot revolving cylinders under heavy pressure. When this machine is not used suitable polishing irons and the expenditure of physical strength in bearing down upon and vigorously rubbing the linen, probably account in the main for the polish. Whatever preparation may be used in starch, a good "polishing" with a smooth iron is needed to bring out the gloss. A laundry gloss said to impart a good polish to shirt bosoms, collars and cuffs, is made as follows. bosoms, collars and cuffs, is made as follows : Melt slowly together two ounces of spermaceti and one ounce of white wax. When cold add a piece the size of a pea to sufficient starch, made in the usual way, for a dozen bosoms.

Mr Alexander Ross has purchased 320 acres of land from Mr W. Murray, jz., in the Algoma district, near Port Fin-lay, for the sum of $1000. Mr Ross intends the land for his son, as he is one of our wealthiest and most thrifty farmers. We wish Mr Ross and his farmers. sons abundant success.

REMOVING TO OTTAWA.

The Canada Lumber Company to Withdraw OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—The Canada Lumber Com-OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—The Canada Lumber Company contemplates removing its headquarters from Carleton Place to Ottawa. The company employs about three hundred men. The reasons given for the step are, first, that the rental of the water privilege at Carleton Place is out of proportion to the power obtained: second, the high rate of taxation; and, third, the very high freight rates on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The company have come to the conclusion that they can cut their logs at less cost and ship them to better advantage at Ottawa, where the water route and the Canada Atlantic Railway can be utilized to ship the sawn lumber.

THE K. OF L. ASSEMBLY.

Mr. Powderly Introduces Resolutions of Sympathy With the Irish People.
Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 5.—When Mr. Davit had concluded his adhess to the Knights of Labor General Assembly to-day.
Mr. Powderly introduced resolutions, which were received with enthusiasm, expressing hearty sympathy for the Irish people and condenning the oppressive laws by which Ireland is governed and the coercive acts of the English Government. Five-minute addresses were made by a number of delegatos, all favorable to the adoption of the resolutions.

Queen Marguerite and Her Strawberries. Now that the strawberry season is over King Humbert of Italy and Queen Marguerite are living very happily together at Mauza, near Milan It is a fact that this particular royal couple get along quite as well as ordin-ary everyday folk except when Queen Mar-querits are her a constant of the couple of the rite sets her eyes on strawberries at five oce apiece, an expenditure which the King will not hear of. The only shadow which is cast upon these happy and quiet days at Mouza is the news from the dead and dying of the cholera plague in Catania, Palermo, and Resma. It is said that if the epidemic increases the King will once more go among his suffering subjects, as he has already done before on similar occasions.

Feminine Industries.
Feminine industries of the world are to be extensively represented at the Glasgow Exextensively represented at the Glasgow Exhibition next year. There will be a special women's section, as the lady presidents want to show exactly what share women bear in the manufactures of the present time. Not only needlework is to be exhibited, but such mechanical branches as leather-dressing, book-binding, fish-tackle manufacture, glovemaking, and the like. Decorative industries, including carving, brasswork, painting and engraving, will find a place, as well as female hygienic clothing.

The California Boom.

"Yes," said a San Jose man, pensively, "the mercenary spirit of the age should be discount enanced by all who appreciate the value of the higher life. Why this haste to be rich? Let us strive for spiritual, not material, good. Hello! Excuse me."

Hello! Excuse me."

The philosopher was in the air on the first step of a hundred-yard dash, when, with rare presence of mind, his companion setzed his extended coat-tails and exclaimed:

"What's your hurry?"

"What's my hurry, you blamed chump?"
howled the San Jose man despairingly. "L't me go, can's you? There's a Los Angeles and a San Diego fellow with a tenderfoot down on the ground between them, and there won't be anything in his pockets if I don't get there in nine seconds with the plat of my new Dusenberry Addition

With Neatness and Despatch. A Cincinnati pastor, in announcing to his congregation that he was about to leave for his vacation, added: "During my absence my brother will occupy the pulpit, and he will brother will occupy the philpit, and he will take great pleasure in responding to calls, especially funeral calls, from the members of this church while I'm away." The brethren smiled, and will not be anxious to afford the maistant "great pleasure."
