Guelph Evening Mercury

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPT. 5, 1873.

Town and County News.

An exhibition of boxing came off in the Town Hall last night to a slim audience. This year, however, the employees determine to reverse this, and to entertain the firm as their guests, in order to give a welcome to Mr. B. W. Bell, on his return from England. Accordingly an oyster supper was given by the employees to the firm at the Queen's Hotel on Thursday night. About seventy persons sat down to an excellent supper, the preparation of which did Mr. Bookless credit. The cloth being withdrawn, Mr. Prebble was called to the chair, and Mr. Leadley to the vice-chair. The cruet of the evening sat on the chairman's right and left.

The Chairman opened the proceedings by proposing "The Queen," which was drunk with musical honours.

The Chairman then alluded to the purpose of the meeting, which was to tender their warmest sympathies and congratulations to their worthy employer, Mr. R. W. Bell, upon his safe return from the old country. He deemed it not inappropriate to term this journey of Mr. Bell, small as it seemed, an epoch in this country's history, and for this reason. A noble duke who recently visited Guelph remarked that Canada was the brightest jewel in the British Crown. She had been formerly known to Englishmen at home for the industry, loyalty, and varied products of the country—known also as the land of the men who went into the forest and hewed out homes for themselves and their families. But this visit of Mr. Bell to England had enabled us to show our fellow-subjects there that we had advanced in civilization so far as to take comparatively the lead in some matters of refinement, even in music itself. He was glad to hear that Mr. Bell had found his friends there in good health, and especially his venerable father, whom he (the chairman) well recollected. He alluded in humorous terms to certain discomforts of the voyage from which Mr. Bell had not been free, and remarked that they had almost inclined him to form a resolution "never to do again."

Mr. Bell's health was drunk with musical honours and much cheering. Mr. Bell thanked his hearers cordially for the compliment. The chairman had alluded to some unpleasant experiences of his in crossing the ocean; but if he was always to receive as hearty a reception as this on his return, he would forego any resolutions he might have formed as to not crossing the waters again. His visit had been chiefly one of business, and the result was a matter of congratulation both to the firm and to their employees. A good many dealers in the old country whom he saw had never heard of Guelph, and thought it rather a piece of presumption to bring instruments from there to sell in England. However, he found that he could sell them readily at nearly double the price which other instruments commanded. They were tried alongside of the Mason & Hamlin, the Estey, and other well-known organs, and some competent judges even held them superior to those. This of course was a great honor both to the employees and to the firm. In compliance with a request of the chairman that he would narrate some incidents of his journey, Mr. Bell concluded by touching briefly upon the principal features of the places he had visited. (Loud applause.)

The health of the firm was then proposed and drunk with musical honours.

Mr. Wm. Bell responded to the chairman and thanked by Mr. Tyson, on behalf of THE MERCURY.

This concluded the formal toasts, and the musical element came uppermost. Songs were sung by Messrs. Storey, McKechnie, R. W. Bell, Tyson, Welch, Simmonds, Brinkman, White, Everson, a promising young vocalist, Jas. Chamberlain, Brandon, Lundy, and others. The chairman gave two humorous recitations. "America and the Americans" was proposed, coupled with the name of Mr. Powell, and briefly responded to; and a convivial evening was brought to a close soon after midnight.

An amusing hoax was perpetrated in Galt a few days ago by an Indian named John Johns. Some thirty years ago a pedlar of eccentric habits mysteriously disappeared, and it was suspected that he had been murdered and his body secreted, but the corpse was never found. A certain old Galt resident who had been a firm believer in the darkest version of the murderer's story was told by Johns that the pedlar's body was buried in the cellar of a house that the old gentleman himself at one time lived in. Quite excited by the story, says the Galt Reporter, the owner only stipulating that any hole dug was to be filled up again. Two or three able-bodied men soon went to work and in the course of a short time made a considerable hole in the ground, in fact the cellar grew into the dimensions of a very lofty apartment. They dug away, every spade taken being expected to uncover the ghastly skeleton, but they failed. They dug off the earth, and laid bare a bed of rock. "If they buried the workman here they must have used nitroglycerine," but no "demoralized pedlar" appeared, and finally the old gentleman ordered them to begin and fill up the hole again, satisfied that the Indian of today-festive ones, who will tell a yarn for the sake of "grub," and keep to himself all the truth he has been blessed with.

The Credit Valley Railway By-law was passed by the Waterloo County Council. John Waterson, Esq., Ayr., appointed Director.

Complimentary Supper to Mr. R. W. Bell.

It has lately been the custom for the firm of Bell & Co., Organ and Piano Manufacturers, to entertain their workmen at a supper on the conclusion of the fall show. Presentations to Mr. S. S. Bates.

On Thursday evening the Bible Class of the Baptist Church taught by Mr. Bates, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., congregated in the church to present him with some reminder of them on his leaving Guelph for Woodstock, where he intends studying for the ministry. The presentations were a large pictorial Bible handsomely bound and beautifully illustrated, and a large-sized album in which was placed their photographs.

After a few introductory remarks and prayer by Mr. Raymond, the Superintendent of the Sabbath School, and singing "Joyfully, joyfully," by the company, the following address was read and the Bible presented to Mr. Bates:—

DEAR AND RESPECTED TEACHER.—As in the Providence of God you are soon to be separated from us and will not longer be able to act as our teacher and guide in the study of the Scripture, we desire to express to you the deep regret which we feel in parting with you. The kind interest you have always manifested in us, and the pleasant hours we have spent together makes us now feel the sadness of parting from a friend. We will ever think of you, and trust though you may be far away you will sometimes think of us. Perhaps you will remember us when you come before the Mercy Seat and seek for us a blessing. We desire to express to you our confidence and esteem; and it is in our hearts to place in your hands some token of the regard we feel—some reminder of the hours we have spent together. Nothing seems so appropriate as a copy of the words which have been studied together. Please accept of this book, the Holy Bible, with the affectionate regard of your Sabbath School Class, and when you see this memento of our love think of us.

Mr. Bates, in replying, said he was taken at a disadvantage and hardly knew how to thank them for their handsome present, which he would ever hold dear for their sakes. He earnestly entreated them to choose the precepts laid down in that book—the Holy Bible—as their guide through life, and the sure path to life everlasting. He urged on them the necessity of attending their class regularly, of giving diligent attention to the word taught them, and expressed a hope that they would prove as attentive to the instruction of their new teacher as they had to him.

After other devotional services were gone through the album was presented with the accompanying address:—

DEAR TEACHER.—Before breaking up the enjoyment of the social evening we have spent with you—an evening which will ever be kept green in our remembrance, as amongst the most cherished memories of the past—we ask you at attention for a little space. We will not again revert to the high estimation in which we hold you, for we feel that words must fall far short of expressing the emotion of our hearts, and tend to frustrate rather than serve to bring us more vividly before your mind's eye when time's effacing hand has done its part to dim us in the distance. We pray you to accept of these as tokens of the heart's remembrance of the past—we ask you to pray earnestly for the Father that He will be your guide and stay in the unknown future which lies before us all; and if we may not meet here again—as it is more than probable we may not, for the reaper is using us—we pray that we may meet in the Father's house when He summons us hence—that house which has many mansions, and where no parting is known. We bid you farewell and a hearty "God speed."

Mr. Bates replied to this second "offering of esteem" in a few appropriate words, when, after singing "When shall we meet again," the meeting was brought to a close, time pressing to attend another of a similar character in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, where the party adjourned.

PRESENTATION AT THE Y. M. C. A. ROOMS.
Last Thursday evening a number of the members of the Y. M. C. A. met in their rooms. Dr. McGuire, President, in chair. After singing, reading a portion of Scripture, and prayer, a number of the members addressed a few words to the meeting, expressive of their good will, tender affection, appreciation of, and sorrow at losing the services of, Mr. S. S. Bates, General Secretary of the Association. After which Mr. Cooley read the following address, and the chairman presented Mr. Bates with a handsomely got up and elegantly finished writing desk and six beautiful bound books, on behalf of some of his personal friends and members of the Y. M. C. A.:

Dear Friends:—The announcement of your intention of removing from our midst was not heard by your many personal friends without sincere regret. The severance of the pleasant and amicable relationship which we have held to each other, and the separation of our intimate every-day intercourse, cannot but produce feelings of sorrow in our minds at your departure. While you have been with us we have constantly found you an able counsellor, a sympathizing and affectionate friend, an earnest worker, and one ever ready to lend your hearty assistance to any project having for its object the promotion of public or private good. Among the Christian workers of our town you have taken a prominent position as an energetic and zealous laborer in the vineyard of the Master, and the loss of your efforts will be felt somewhat as is the breaking of a strong link in a chain.

In token of our heartfelt esteem and affection, dear friend and Christian brother, we ask your acceptance of these marks of our friendship, hoping that, trivial though they are in comparison with the tribute of our feelings, they may prove useful to you in after life and may occasionally recall to your memory the affection and esteem of the donors.

In conclusion we hope that your preparations for entering on a permanent and more extended field of usefulness may be crowned with abundant success; and that, on the conclusion of your studies for the ministry, you may enter on that responsible work with the smile and approbation of your Heavenly Father, and in his hands may be made instrumental in leading many into the "Way of Life" by unfolding to them the story of the Cross.

As we bid you "God-by," our hearts feel the words and echo an earnest "God speed."
J. W. COOLEY,
(on behalf of presenters).

Mr. S. S. Bates, thanking them for the handsome present and kind expressions, said that he should always remember with heartfelt pleasure his sojourn in Guelph, and hoped that he should yet be spared to visit us again.

The meeting was then brought to a close, all present, including the pupils of his Bible class, who were loth to part with their teacher, shaking hands with Mr. Bates and bidding him good-bye.

The presenters have to thank Mr. T. J. Day for the liber discount made on the writing desk which was purchased from him.

ALLEGED LARCENY CASE.

The Case Dismissed.
Loomis Palmer Fuller, a moulder employed by Mills & Goodfellow, was charged before the Police Magistrate as having stolen $29 from Jas. Menzell, driver of the Hamilton & Dundas stage. The case came up last Tuesday, and was adjourned until to-day, Friday. The following is the evidence taken in the case:—

Jas. Menzell, the prosecutor, said that last Saturday night he missed the sum of $29. He had put it in his pocket-book in the breast pocket of his coat at Hamilton that morning. "Came from Guelph to Hamilton on Saturday evening. The $29 consisted of two $10 bills, two $4 bills, and a $1. As it was pretty warm, took off his coat and vest, wrapped them up in an oilskin coat, and laid them under the seat in the stage-coach just before starting. Never looked at the coat any more until arriving in Guelph about 5:30 p.m. on Saturday. Tied his horses, took out coat and vest, and put them on, noticing the book in the pocket as he did so. Had tea, drove to Ellis's stable, unharnessed horses, took off coat and vest, and hung them on a nail in the stable. Went out for a while, then came back, bedded and fed the horses, put on coat, and went down street. Met his wife, went into Fraser's to buy a carpet, and on taking out his pocket-book to pay for the carpet found not a cent of money in it. Went and told Chief Constable of his loss. Had two passengers, female, in the stage; one got in at Hamilton and the other one twelve miles this side of Hamilton. Did not know the first one; knew the other. Told Kelly that he thought the first woman might have taken the money, as she had ridden so far alone. Said no more to Kelly that night. Have seen prisoner frequently at Ellis's Hotel; he boards there. He was in the stable that evening at the same time witness was. Did not see him near the coat. Could not say that the prisoner was in the stable when witness went out. Heard afterwards that prisoner had hired a conveyance from Reuben Green, a liver-stable keeper in Guelph. Witness went to Green and asked him to let him see his money. Green did so, and witness picked out a $1 and a $4 which he recognized as being one of the bills which were in his pocket-book. The bill was a soft old one, which witness had for had for some time. Often counted his money. The other bill was a new one; could not tell what bank it was on. Had not had any Royal Canadian Bank bills. The oldish bill was not marked; identified it by its appearance only.

In cross-examination, the witness stated what bills he paid out in Hamilton. One of the lost tens in his pocket book was on the Bank of Montreal; did not know the bank of the other, although he had had it two or three weeks. "Could pick the bills he got from Green out of a hundred other bills of the same age. Many people are backwards and forward in Ellis's stable; people walk through it. The woman who got in at Hamilton was a mulatto. She saw me put the bundle under the seat. Other persons were in the stable at Ellis's when I was there. Have found no trace of the other missing bills.

Re-examined—Did not recognise the $4 bill by the number or letter, but by its general appearance. Would not be positive that he could pick out the other lost bills except one of the tens, which had an ink mark upon it.

At this stage the case was remanded until Friday, bail being taken for prisoner's appearance. On the resumption of the case—

Jas. Ritchie, sometimes called Patton, said he went out with prisoner on Saturday for a buggy ride; prisoner gave him a four-dollar bill to pay for the horse, which he had hired from Reuben Green at the prisoner's request. Did not know at the time on what bank the bill was or its number. Saw it afterwards in Green's possession; thought it was the same. Prisoner told witness not to tell his father who paid for the rig. (The $4 bill was produced). This bill is like the one given to Green, but would not swear to it. Witness picked the bill out from a number of others. The other $4 were all newer.

Reuben Green deposed to the hiring of the rig by Ritchie, for which he charged $1.75, took a $4 and gave change for it. On Monday evening prisoner and Ritchie came to his house and asked about the bill. Witness turned out his money on the table, and Ritchie picked out the $4 produced and said that was the one he had given Green. Menzell looked at the bill, and said at once "That's my money." There were other $4 bills, but they were all newer than this one.

At the request of Mr. Guthrie, the following evidence for the defence was taken:—

Hosea Randall Fuller said he was the prisoner's father, and they worked together in the shop of Mills & Goodfellow on piece work. They were paid fortnightly. Last Saturday his son drew the wages, gave them to witness, and afterwards said he would take some money to

CROSSBILL.—A NARROW ESCAPE.—On Friday last, 29th ult., Mr. Wm. Oakley, while drawing in wheat and stacking it outside Mr. Eggleston's barn, was in the act of climbing up on a load of wheat which was standing at the stack, and took hold of the rope at the front end of the wagon rack, holding the line when it broke, and fell backward upon the team. The shock fright ran away, throwing him through the

CHAPTER XXXVII.

BARNARD HAYES AND DICK MAYTOOKS IN SE- CRET CONFERENCE, AS THEY SURVEY.

"Well, you haven't hurried yourself in coming. Why the devil have you been so long?" growled Dick.

"Because it wasn't convenient for me to come sooner," returned the lawyer, as he pounced eagerly on the creature common to which in his assumed character he had had spoken of rather lightly.

"Wasn't it? Well you should have made it convenient, that's all."

"What's the matter? Anything wrong with Annabel? She hasn't managed to send another letter, I hope?"

"No—course it. I've taken precious good care of that, and neither has she got the chance of bolting again—the cunning little devil."

"Is there no fear of her getting such a chance to-night when you are absent? Well may not be so watchful as you."

"I haven't trusted to that," rejoined Dick. "See."

And he pulled from ample pocket a huge key.

"They are both locked in," he added, "and when I go back I can get admittance for myself. This makes all safe, don't it?"

"Well, yes, I should think so," said Hayes, continuing to eat as he spoke.

"But now, what do you want that you wrote twice for me to come?"

"I want to have this business ended," said Dick, savagely. "Moll and I are tired of staying by ourselves in the old house. We want to go back to Liverpool."

The lawyer looked keenly at his companion's face, and for some moments said nothing. Then he merely uttered the monosyllable—

"Well," echoed Dick, "and we mean to do it."

"How?" inquired the lawyer, in a steady tone.

"Why that's for you and I to settle. What's the use of going on like this? The girl may live for years, and I see no good in that. It's a misery for herself as well as for us."

"Just so, and you would propose to—"

"Exactly," growled Dick, with a nod. "To—?" repeated Hayes, inquiringly.

"Oh, curse it, you know what I mean—to get her out of the way."

Barnard Hayes heard the damnable proposal with unchanged countenance. He was not shocked, he did not even change colour. It seemed to be something which he had long prepared for—which he had even approved of.

"How would you do it?" he quietly asked. "Do it safely, I mean?"

"Oh, easy enough—by poison. Nobody here is likely to make any inquiry about the death of a mad woman, which of course they think her to be, and as they also believe her to be my sister there is still less fear of anything being suspected."

"No there is—on the whole, Dick I see little difficulty or danger either; and the fact is, the thing is desirable for another reason—Weston has come home."

"Weston home!" cried Dick, almost leaping from his seat; "and how does he take her death?"

"He's devilish set up. Never saw a man so miserable. 'Pon my word, Dick, you would pity him if you saw him."

"Would I?" hissed Dick. "Nothing would do me more good than to see him. Oh, I should rejoice to see him suffer. Haven't I cause? Didn't he spoil my game and smash my arm to a jelly, and make it that it hasn't been good for much since?"

which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever introduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Soreness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.
