The Canadian Tea Merchant WHO gave away as a present to his Customers a $500 Piano,

WHO was prosecuted by jealous and unsuccessful rivals. WHO was fined in the Police Court for giving the piano,

WHOSE Teas were acknowledged under oath to be better value than can be obtained elsewhere for more money. WHO is now doing the largest

Tea business in Canada, WHO gives away the finest and most costly presents, WHOSE celebrated Teas are now a necessity in every house.

WHO now presents his thanks to the party or parties who magnanimously spend their money in advertising his busiuess, whether done with kindly intention or not, so long as he reaps a benefit by it, he feels it due to them to make acknowledgments At the ELP same time he is sorry that disappointment and want of similar success should make them so foolish as needlessly to throw away their money, when they will soon require it in their new sphere of operations in the Northwest.

M. HILTON WILLIAMS, M.D. PROPRIETOR.

All diseases of the respiratory organs treated by medical inhalations, combined with proper consti-utional remedies.

Ozena is the professional or technical name given to an advanced form of catarrh in which ulceration has eater through the membrane lining of the nose to the cartilage of the bone. Any case of catarrh may end in ozene, but it most frequently occurs in those who are naturally scrofulous. The discharge takes place through the nostrile or abrough the throst, and is generally of a yellowish or greenish yellow color, frenquently tinged with blood, and hlmost always atten ied by an offensive smell. In the language of Dr. Wood, of Philadelphia, "the disease is one of the most obdurate and disagreeable which the physicians has to encounter. In bad cases the breath of the patient becomes so revolting as to issolate him from society, and to render him an object of disgust even to himself."

In some instances pieces of bone become separated and though off, leaving deep, unhealthy ulcers, which secrete a blood matter, and are extremely difficult to heal.

which secrete a blood matter, and are extremely difficult to heal.

After Ozena has continued some time the sense of smell usually becomes impaired and often lost.

Deafness is one of its most common consequences, and results from its extension through the custachain tubes to the internal car.

Pains in the head and over the frontal sinuses, impring memory, and even insanity, frequently spring from its extension to the brain.

The greatest danger, however, because the most common, is that it will extend downward and affect the lungs. In most cases of pulmonary disease catarrh is present in some degree, and in many instances it causes a large share of the patient's disconflort.

catarrh is present in some degree, and causes a large share of the patient's discomfort.

Besides these grave consequences, all of which are libble to spring from scrofulous catarrh or Ozena, shere are others which, if less dangerous, are sufficiently unpleasant. It occasions great unhapiness to thousands of both sexes, by isolating them and preventing their settlement in life. An offensive running from the nose, with-foul breath, is about as great a calamity as can befall young people.

The treatment of this disease requires much care and perseverance to conduct it to a successful issue. The remedies must be carefully adapted to the stage of the disease in each case, and applied directly to the parts affected, which may be done by the patients themselves, whereever they may be, and without hindrance to their daily occupation.

I have seen so many of those cases saved by inhalation that I cannot doubt its curative powers or regard any case necessarily hopeless unless both lungs are extensively involved. The great vriue of inhalation in the treatment of all head, threat and lung complaints has been indorsed by all the leading medical journals of England, France and Germany. If possible call personally for consultation and examination, but if impossible to do so, write for a "List of Questions" and "Medical Treatise." a "List of Questions" and "Medical Treatise."

Mr. Wood had formerly been of the opinion that the majority of the voters voting should carry a bonus to a railway, but he had chauged his mind, his experience being that municipalities had grauted too large bonuses under the majority plan. He opposed the resultation.

Mr. Deroche also opposed the resolution, citing the experience of the railway committee, to show that municipalities had granted railway bonuses, and were now seeking the protection of the legislature.

Mr. Ross, like several other speakers, spoke of the old system as one in which the organized influence of railways carried the organized influence of railways carried the organized to the control of the contro bonus by-laws against the majority of the voters. He was in favor of the present law, after deducting from the number of voters those voters who were not resident.

woters those voters who were not resident.

Mr. Meredith said it was evident the government had not been able to agree on a policy. There was a great deal to be said in favor of the resolution. He instanced a railway which could not have been built under the present law. He quoted the numbers polled in election contests to show that it was impossible to bring out the proportionate vote now required to carry a bonus.

Mr. Fraser opposed the resolution. He thought it was brought forward with a view to some special municipality, and he was not in favor of such changes. It was only railway promoters who were seeking the change, not municipal councils. His experience was that in hot contests the vote was closely polled. In railway bonuses organization

Mr. White had been opposed to bonuses but was in favor of the resolution.

Mr. Lauder opposed Mr. Cooke's position and said. Simcoe county was well satisfied with the aid which she had given to the Northern railway and the results of it.

Mr. Hay said railway bonuses had done a great deal of good, and although they might have been overdone and had injured some villages, they had improved the value of farm property in every instance. He favored the resolution.

Mr. Hunter said some municipalities in his county had granted bonuses to as many as three railways, and were satisfied with the results. He favored the resolution.

Nothing has been more remarkable in the history of political economy than like Mr. Patterson of Brant are for ever the rapid growth of what Professor Goldwin Smith has termed more euphoniously than felicitously "the doctrine of confiscation." The first economist in whose writings we find a distinct forecast of this doctrine is De Quesnay, but he contented itself to the liberals for discussing this queshimself with declaring that each man's tion, but at present they should give their water. The enunciation of this doctrine was new with De Quesnay, but in reality it was simply a return to first principles. It prevails to-day among the Maoris the most degraded species of mankind, not even excepting the Papuans, So thoroughly joined are the Maoris to this first principle that in the treaty with the British it is stipulated that the capitation grant, in consideration of which each party to the treaty resigned his rights to the land, be paid on behalf of every child born, the Maori negotiators alleging in justification of this demand that they had no right to sell the birthright of their unborn children. John Stuart Mill advanced a step from De Quesnay's position and advocated the confiscation to the state of what he termed the "uncarned increment," this being the enhanced price which a holder of unimproved property was able to command owing to the mprovements on adjoining property. It remained for Henry George from these germs to construct his great theory for the regeneration of mankind through an abolition of poverty, to be brought about by the confiscation of all private rights in land, in which he includes natural resources.

This is the bold and audacious theory which the Irish World now puts forward as which the Irish Werld now puts forward as a platform for the land league. To deny the out of his position. The members of the absolute truth of the fundamental principle is impossible; but it is also impossible to ignore the fact that the entire structure of civilization is built upon a principle just as essential to human happiness-security in the enjoyment of the fruits of labor, resent. The following is the article referred to

(From the Irish World.).

It is now four months since the no rent banner was unfurled by the order of the land league leaders. The manifesto that the fight landcalled upon the Irish people to fight land-lordism with the only weapon by which it could be defeated was like a thunderbolt rom a clear sky.

We do not believe that any on We do not believe that any one doubts that the victory so far rests with the Irish people. The experience of four monchs proves the wisdom of the step taken by Parnell and the other leaders whom they resolved to meet intimidation with an act of bold defiance. The first shock over, the people of Ireland have settled themselves down to a resolute tussle with landlordism, and are displaying a spirit of determination worthy of all praise.

factory commission calls for prompt action on the part of the government. Between the sees of ten and fourteen years, there are two thousand children employed during the same hours which are considered a full day's work for grown people. The effect upon the physical health of these children must be disastrous, and it is to be hoped that the government will, at this session, formulate a measure regulating the hours of labor. The results accruing from the Eng lish factory act have been most beneficial.

George W. Smalley, the talented correspondent in London of the New York Tribune, is charged with being a smob and a tory. There is just a grain of truth in this: Mr. Smalley's letters convey the impression that he is always mixing among archbishops, dukes and lords and that more important nobility, the aristocracy of art. So George is liable to become a reflector of their opinions.

with landlordism, and are displaying a spirit of determination worthy of all praise.

There is, however, something needed besides earnestness to secure a final victory. There is need of coming to an understanding as to what constitutes a final victory. In other words, it is time for the Lirish to know how far they ought to go before laying down the arms they have taken up against Landlordism. A victory that would dispossess the present landlords, and leave the system untouched under which landlordism. A victory. In other words, it is time for the Lirish to know how far they one down the arms they have taken up against Landlordism. A victory that would dispossess the present landlordism. A be but 10,000. 10,000. The whole question resolves itself into this: What right has resolves used into this: The habit has each of the five millions who inhabit Ireland to the soil to which he or she lives? Find that out, and you have a sure lives? Find that out, and you have a sure guide to direct you in the investigation of the land problem, not in Ireland only, but in all countries. We do not now deem it necessary to repeat the arguments so often used by the Irish World to prove that every man is entitled to have an equal share in the benefits derived from the land. But here we are confronted with the same timorous policy that four months ago condemned the act of issuing the no rent manifesto. We are told that it is not wise to ask for anything more than the abolition of landlordism and the establishment of "peasant proprietorship."

ment of "peasant proprietorship."

There are some in the ranks of the There are some in the rains of the sale league who would be satisfied with the abolition of the present form of landlordism, even though more than four millions living on Irish soil would have no millions living on Irish soil would have no more right to any share in the land than they had before the land agitation began. Now, let us stop and consider for a moment whether it is at all likely that these four millions will rest content with any arrangement that will exclude them from a just share in the benefits of the land, and even if they should be content with swift assurance can we have that their the land, and even if they should be con-tent, what assurance can we have that their children will be satisfied with remaining a disinherited class? We see, then, the importance of the Irish people seriously considering not so much how to destrey the present form of landlordism—for that is sure to be destroyed—but how to substitute in its place a system of land tenure that will do injustice to no class. Time-servers will try to throw obstacles in the way of the adoption of any such system. They will act as they did when there was question of issuing the no rent manifest But no great movement ever yet succeed under the leadership of time-servers.

under the leadership of time-servers. The good results flowing from the adoption of the no rent program ought to teach the Irish people the lesson that it is not safe for them to follow the advice of men who think that policy is always a good substitute for principle. -WHAT TO STUDY .- Pope, the poetical philosopher said: "The proper study of mankind is man," and yet, how little is the real science of man studied. "Confound it!"

"Andrew!"

"Pray excuse me, mother; but really you have no idea how much I dread the arrival of this young lady. I had planned to enjoy this summer, and it seems a pity to be denied the enjoyment."

"Andrew," said his mother, with a tone of voice full of surprise, "the mother of our expected guest has been a true friend to your father, as well as a faithful comforter to his companion in life; hence, if ahe wished her daughter to visit us, for the restoration of her health, we should welcome her kindly."

"Ah, yes; but, mother, we men regard them differently from what you women do. Besides I had planned to enjoy fishing and boating during my vacation, and what can a fellow do with a lady always at his heels? But I say, mother, is this Miss Nettie Chester good looking? You know we men admire beauty."

"She was called a beauty from a child. I have not seen her since," replied Mrs. Cornetter united." "However, Andrew, and the clean sheets upon the bed were rendered uncomfortable with oats.

In short everything was done to torment him; and Andrew cried vengeance, while at the same time he could not keep away from the young lady.

As for poor Austin, he looked as smilingly and studied harder than ever, while, as his shyness wore away, many an hour found Nettie Chester beside him, helping and encouraging him, until he grew at last to look upon her as a friend interested in his welfare, and quietly said, when put upon by his handsome brother:

"Don't be jealous, Andrew, I am only a poor farmer after all, and you are a gentleman, you k ow."

Yes, Andrew knew it to be just so, and, as he sauntered towards the great yard on the look out for their gay guests, he could not help casting one ray of pity on his rough, shy brother.

I have not seen her since," replied Mrs.
Carpenter, quietly. "However, Andrew, you will not be troubled with the care of this young lady; I will ask Austin to as sume that great responsibility.
"Austin!"

"Austin!"

And Andrew laughed aloud at the bare thought of Austin, his farm-bred brother, playing the agreeable to an heiress like Nellie Chester.

"Beg partion, mother, but really I could not help smiling, for Austin is so very bashful, and we men can not put up with that you know. By the way, brother ought to go to the city with me. He is just good for nothing moping here on the farm.

"I could not spare both my lads at once," replied Mrs. Carpenter, tenderly, yet half rebukingly, as the saucy eyes again looked into hers.

And nodding gayly the handsome face took its departure.

Andrew Carpenter rather liked the looks come to spend of the young girl who had come to spend of the young at his house.

After all, he was rather glad she had come to spend the summer; but to tell the truth, Miss Nettie proved a troublesome visitor to the haughty Andrew. Sugar was sprinkled upon his meat and salt in his coffee.

His private papers were displaced. His slippers were filled with prickly burs, and the clean sheets upon the bed were rendered uncomfortable with oats.

Yes, Andrew knew it to be just so, and, as he sauntered towards the great yard on the look out for their gay guests, he could not help casting one ray of pity on his rough, shy brother.

"Oh, Mr. Carpenter! Take care, please! I am losing my hold! There they go! Oh, dear me! What have I done?"

Andrew crushed the broken egg shells.

Nettie looked up quickly.

Then the solemn figure before her proved too much for her gravity, and she laughed as if she really enjoyed it.

"Oh, dear, how funny you do look!

It is all over your hair, eyes and ears!

Dear me! Pray exquse me, but really I cannot help it. Oh, those eggs!"

But, when the years rolling by showed that brother to be a rising merchant, he no longer wondered, but felt a deeper love for the gentle woman who overlooked his faults so kindly, and who never alluded to the many boastful sayings which had so often escaped his lips.

DEATH OF HUGH GALT. Alleged Particulars of the Career of an Alleged

Referring to the death of the man Galt, whom the family here say is no relation, New York Truth says :- While the body was being removed to the morgue in the afternoon, a person who had often met the deceased in his lifetime identified him as Hugh Galt, a member of a high Scotch family and a man who had once stood almost, on the pinacle of wealth if not of fame. Inquiries made in sporting and theatrical circles last evening by a Truth reporter disclosed some interesting facts concerning Galt's career. He was born some sixty years ago in Ayrshire, Scotland, and was the son of Galt, thel pathetic Scotch novelist. Hugh had SEVERAL BROTHERS all of whom are at present highly situated, one being Sir Alexander T. Galt, formerly Cana-dian minister of finance in Sir John Macdonald's ministry, and since in 1878 Dominion commissioner, at the court of St. James. From his early youth Hugh conceived a passion for the stage and, later, in the face of his parents' remonstrances, joined a traveling theatrical troupe. He was then in his giveenth year. The company in the course in the course of the cou sixteenth year. The company in the course of time went to Edinburgh, and there young Galt accidentally met his father. The latter, after some trouble, induced the way ward son to return home. But Hugh did not remain long under the parental roof. A year or two afterward, after travelling with a troup all over England, he came to America, where he has remained ever since. America, where he has remained ever since. In this city he became connected with several theatrical enterprises, and in 1848 visited Canada, and there met his brother Alexander, but a clerk in government employ. Upon his return to New York Galt was made stage manager of Furdy's national theatre, otherwise known as the new Chatham theatre the last remains of which fell down upon a man a few days ago, crushing him to death. In this capacity he had much success, and became very wealthy. In later years he obtained the position of manager of the Park theatre, and in 1867 went out west.

A HOPELESS CASE.

No definite data could be obtained yesterday in regard to all his movements since that hour, but certain it is that he has slowly "gone to the dogs." A year ago, it seems, he turned up suddenly in his old haunts in Houston street, and rarely let a day pass without getting intoxicated. His brother Alexander, who heard of his sad plight, repeatedly sent him small sums of money to keen him from starving, but Galt only spent the same on liquor. A gentleonly spent the same on liquor. A gentle-man told Truth last evening that Galt had shown him ten months go a letter from Sir Alexander couched in the most affectionate terms, in which the unfortunate man was

The rising town of Millford is the most important business centre in the celebrated valley of Souris, the claims of which has induced the Syndicate to divert the main line of the C. P. R. many miles south in order to traverse this desirable district. It is the point by which settlers for Turtle Mountain section can most readily reach their locations, going by the Assiniboine steamers from Winnipeg to Milford, from which they have only 40 miles to drive by a good road in place of 160 miles by the Emerson Trail. It has regular postal communication, and the location of the Dominion Land Office and Registry Office for the Souris and Turtle Mountain districts which have just been opened there render it in connection with the saw and grist mills a very desirable place for business and certain to rapidly develop into a very important commercial and manufacturing town. All the homestead lands in the immediate neighborhood are taken up and settled upon, but good claims may be had by purchase of railway land. The situation of Millford has been pronounced by all who have visited it as remarkably pleasant and attractive. Coal was brought in barges last spring from the Souris coal fields to this place, and there is a good supply of wood for fuel in the neighborhood. A large number of lots have already been disposed of, and the town is now looked upon as the commercial business centre of this important and highly for a steady and rapid rise in the value of this important property.

GENTLEMEN,—

I feel that I would be lacking in courtesy were I to fail in acknowledging the very prompt manner in which payment has been made of the amount ($250) due under your Company's Policy No. 3195.

Our late caretaker, Mr. Joseph Adams, insured in October last, and died yesterday, 10th inst.

This morning I presented the certificate of his death, and before leaving your office the claim was fully settled. It is difficult to estimate the benefit which will result to the family of the deceased by the receipt of this money, and they have reason to be grateful that the attention of Mr. Adams was drawn to the admirable plan adopted by your Company, whereby the workingmen or others in receipt of small salaries may make provision for their families. of small salaries may families.

I feel certain that were the plan more generally known it would meet with great favor.

Yours very truly,
