THE VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

This article appeared two weeks ago in both the Woodstock papers, but J. W. Maxwell, the brilliant young director of the Vocational School, has shown The Observer so much refreshing enthusiasm that at this special moment it is here reprinted. The story is told in a decidedly entertaining and should be read and discussed in every home The Observer enters.

That a Vocational School exists in Woodstock is common knowledge to residents of Carleton; that courses are now being held may be news to many, although much has been done in the way of advertising to acquaint the people with the present activity of the school. For the benefit of those to whose attention this matter has not been brought, this summary and announcement is hereby given.

An Act respecting Vocational Education was passed by the Legislative Assembly of New Brunswick on April 26, 1918. This Act, which for both Federal and Provincial financial aid to a district or county in the equipping and maintaining of a Vocational School, was the outcome of a realization that New Brunswick did not offer courses in Vocational Education to its young people, and that the training given in the schools is planned largely on the assumption that all the students shall take University courses. The general education of the ordinary school has for its controlling purpose, the all-round development of the individual, the preparation to live well and to appreciate the fine things of life such as art, literature and science but it leaves the training of the individual for profitable employment to the home and farm.

The current of modern improvement has served to draw country districts nearer and nearer the city, the resulting condition has been detrimental to our rural population. The youth and energy of the country has found the path of least resistance to be quitting rather than reconstructing country life. Thus we have seen the last fifty years on our rural cityward. How best then can we combat this depletion of our rural districts? Little has been done by the schools to make farming seem an opportunity for ambition and talent. Few educational and cultural advantages have been available for the farmer, whereas the city in itself a liberal education. True, we have our agricultural colleges, and much has been done by them in paving the way to reconstruction of farming methods, but these are gradually raising their standards of admission until academically they stand on the same level with engineering colleges. To the sons of wealthy farmers the courses provided by them are available, but what is being done to enable the son of the less fortunate farmer to become just as efficient as his richer fellow across the line fence? The agricultural colleges as a whole therefore do not really meet the general needs of the young agriculturists.

With a view of more fully meeting the requirements of the young boy and girl from the farm, courses in Agriculture and Home Making have been planned to be given at the Vocational School at Woodstock. A course in the latter is now in progress, having started started Nov. 3rd, but there is yet room for a considerable number of students, and applications for enrolment will still be accepted. This course will continue until June 30 and includes a study of the following subjects: Garment making, dress making, millinery, food study, cooking, elementary dietetics, home management, child care, and house planning. Relating subjects will include costume design, house furnishing, general science as applied to the household, hygiene and home nursing. The practical study will aim to make the work function in the home.

Housework need be drudgery no longer when intelligence and system are introduced into it. The application of scientific study to domestic economy may do for every other line of modern business. No one would dream of trying so simple a thing as piano-playing without practice, but to teach costly human bodies, to build a precious life—for this in our present day, instinct must apparently suffice. Mother love may be omnipotent in romantic fiction, but it will never tell the ignorant woman to scald the baby's milk bottle unless she knows the dangers of unscaled bottles. No less important is the efficiency of the woman in the home than the efficiency of the man in his ability to earn the livelihood by which the home is maintained. To attain this efficiency should be the aim of our young women, our young girls—the women to be. To equip them with the knowledge which will enable them to reach that stage of efficiency is the aim of the course above outlined. To enrol

Notice to Returned Soldiers

By Order-in-Council, dated October 16, 1919, no 62 members of the Canadian Naval or Military Forces shall be entitled to the benefits of re-training under the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment, unless application for courses of re-training is made within three months from the last day of November, 1919, provided that where the date of retirement or discharge of any ex-member of the Canadian Naval or Military Forces is subsequent to the last November, 1919, provided also that where an ex-member of the Forces has been transferred or passed directly from the Department of Militia and Defence or the Department of the Naval Service to the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment for a continuation of treatment such ex-members of the Forces shall be allowed three months from the date of retirement or discharge or from the completion of such treatment in which to make application for the benefits of such re-training.

Application for re-training of soldiers eligible in New Brunswick, should be addressed to: "District Vocational Officer, D. S. O. R. at one of the following addresses, whichever is nearest to home of applicant:— Fredericton, Hospital, Fredericton, N. B.; Merchants' Bank Building, Prince William Street, St. John; 100 Queen Street, Moncton, N. B.

KNOCKING THE POOR FARMER

In publishing the article that follows the editor gives it no endorsement and makes no comment. If, as one would surmise, the article was written by some one other than a farmer, it would have little merit, but an interesting fact is that the author is one of Carleton's most prosperous agriculturists—a man who all his life has been purely and simply a farmer.

The November 13 issue of the "Observer" contained two very interesting items namely: That the farmers of Brighton have shamefully failed to do their part towards subscribing to the Victory Loan, and that the United Farmer's Co-Operative Co. have purchased the Clark building at a price said to be between $8000 and $9000. This building to be used as a store by the United Farmers. Does the second named item answer the "why" of the first? Either the farmers of this parish are finding some other source of investment for their surplus cash or there is a deep prejudice among them against buying Victory Bonds. Possibly the election criticisms of Mr. T. W. Caldwell, of the 1918 Victory Loan have been bearing fruit or is there more truth than poetry in the statement credited to May or Nodden and widely used as a canvass by the United Farmers in the election campaign recently closed?

We read that the leaders of the Farmer's Movement in Canada are planning a Dominion wide campaign for the next general election. Are we about to abolish party politics and substitute class, occupational and representation socialism. Is it not time that the public is enlightened to the dangers confronting Canada from this wrongly called People's Party? The press has remained silent for fear of antagonizing the farmers but has not the time come to speak the truth and not allow agitators to sow their seeds of unrest, discontent and sedition. If the farmers of this country enter the political arena as a class will not organized labor do the same?

Today organized labor is a menace to the prosperity of this country with the labor unions and organized farmers electing class representatives to parliament and displacing the old political parties who dare predict what the outcome will be? The average United Farmer will deny they are seeking class representation. Why then was an appeal made to the farmers in the recent election campaign to stick together and vote solid for the United Farmer's candidate. In some local branches in this county a vote

WAR HERO NOW GAINS 24 POUNDS

After Strain of Service was Al- most a Nervous Wreck Praises Tanlac

Here is another instance of the remarkable reconstructive powers of Tanlac. William J. McCullum of 114 Broad St., St. John, New Brunswick, who spent three and a half years at the front in France and Belgium, wounded five times, gassed and shellshocked and finally invalided home, states that Tanlac has put him in shape to where he is not only beginning to feel like himself again, but that he has also gained twenty four pounds in weight, besides.

Mr. McCullum is a veteran of two wars. He holds a medal for service in the great European war and also a four bar medal for gallantry in the Boer war.

"I can hardly realize just what Tanlac has been worth to me," said Mr. McCullum, in an interview, recently, in restoring my health and putting me on my feet. When I got home from the war I was simply a nervous wreck and neither time or medicine seemed to do me any good. I was so nervous and shaky I could hardly hold a cup of tea to my mouth and if my wife happened to drop a fork or knife at the table I would nearly jump out of my chair. In this excited condition, my food could not digest, but would sour and form gas on my stomach adding more misery to my nervous condition. I would toss and roll most of the night, getting only about two hours restless sleep, and would sometimes have to get out of bed and walk the floor. My condition was distressing in the extreme and seemed to be getting worse all the time.

"Finally someone suggested that I try Tanlac and I got a bottle, having little idea it would do me any good, but it has not only helped me, it has made me feel like a new man. I now have an appetite like a bear and eat just anything set before me without the least effect from it. I have been built up and strengthened until my nervousness is practically gone. I can sleep all night long like a log and my wife has a job waking me up in the morning. I am now able to do a full day's work and Tanlac gets all the credit for me being on my feet. My nerves have steadied down until I can stand all sorts of noise and sudden jares. When I first began taking Tanlac I couldn't hold my hand steady enough to take a drink of water, but now I can shave myself. I am praising Tanlac to all the boys, especially those suffering like I was, take a 'tip' from me—get Tanlac, for I fully believe I would still be a nervous wreck if I had not taken it myself."

Tanlac is sold in Hartland by Estey & Curtis Co., in Bristol by Dr. G. W. Somerville, in Centreville by Stevens Bros., in Woodstock by E. W. Mair, in Benton by W. E. Porter, in River de Chute by Daniel B. Baird, and in Florenceville by A. B. Lovell and in Bath by Bath Drug Co.

Death of William M. Drost

The community of Wicklow was saddened by the death of one of its most highly esteemed citizens in the person of William M. Drost, who died after a somewhat brief illness at his home, Monday Oct. 6. The late Mr. Drost left to mourn his decease a sorrowing wife and a family circle as follows: Effie (Mrs. P. McCarthy), Maude (Mrs. A. McCarthy), Maude (Mrs. Henry Young), Indy (Mrs. William Buck), and Fanny (Mrs. Archie Lawrence), also three boys Stanley, Turner and Clarence.

The funeral service which took place on the Wednesday following his death was held in the United Baptist Church, Rev. C. O. Howlett, B. A., B. D. of Bath, preached a very impressive sermon making several references to the sterling christian character of the departed. The unusually large gathering attested to high esteem in which the deceased was held.

POOR THIN BLOOD BRINGS INDIGESTION

Make the Blood Rich and Red by Using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Thin-blooded people generally have stomach trouble. They seldom recognize the fact that thin blood is the cause of indigestion, but it is. Thin blood, weak, watery blood, is one of the most common causes of stomach trouble. The glands that furnish the digestive fluids are diminished in their activity, the stomach muscles are weakened and there is a loss of nerve force. In this state nothing will more quickly restore appetite, digestion and a normal nutrition than good, rich, red blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on the blood, making it rich and red, and this enriched blood strengthens weak nerves, stimulates tired muscles, and awakens to normal activity the glands that supply the digestive fluids. The first sign of returning health is an improved appetite and soon the effect of these blood improving pills is felt throughout the whole system. You find that what you eat does not distress you and that you are daily growing stronger and more vigorous. Mr. J. J. Murray, Regent street, Toronto, bears testimony to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. He says:—"During the latter part of 1918 I was a sick man. My stomach was simply down and out. I had no desire for food and when I ate it distressed me. I was pale, did not sleep well, naturally got up in the morning feeling grouchy. My wife was worried over my condition and urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, reminding me of the good they had done our eldest daughter when she was in a somewhat similar condition. I decided to follow her advice and got a supply and here is the story in a nutshell: I have got my appetite back, sleep soundly at night enjoy my meals and am so gratified with what the Pills have done for me that I strongly advise their use for all pale, sick people."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Perth Locals

The oldest inhabitant and one of the pioneer settlers of this village entered peacefully into rest on Friday morning at the home of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. E. Hitchcock, at the ripe age of 91 years, in the person of "Aunt Mahala Lacroix". As she was called by all, widow of the late Amos Lacroix. Her husband was gone to death by a bull many years ago. The deceased was a familiar figure around the railway station and on our streets, having carried the mail from the time the train first carried the mail up this way until a few years ago, when she was struck by an engine on the crossing and had her hip broken and later she suffered a paralytic shock. She was respected by all. Three children were born to her, all of whom have passed away: George W. died several years ago; Amos, a C.P.R. brakeman, was killed by his train; and Mary (Mrs. Craig) of Waterville died a few weeks ago. An adopted daughter lives in California and there are several grandchildren, sisters and other relatives. For several years she has been tenderly cared for by Mrs. Hitchcock and her granddaughter, Edna Lacroix and much credit is due them for in her later years she required much attention. The funeral took place on Sunday at the United Baptist church, Rev. G. A. Gilchrist of Bath officiating by special request of the deceased. A mixed quartette—Mrs. Nellie Anderson, Miss V. Smith, H. E. Blackwell and M. H. Craig—with Mrs. Blackwell as organist. Four Lacroix boys were pall-bearers. The remains were tenderly laid to rest in the family lot adjoining the church. She was always kind to the poor and needy, never turned any from the door, always ready to help in sickness or in trouble. Her memory will be cherished by all.

COPENHAGEN CHEWING TOBACCO

Copenhagen is used differently from ordinary chewing tobacco.

Take a small pinch, for a start, and put it between the lower lip and gum, in the centre.

Afterwards you can increase the size of the pinch to suit the strength of the chew you desire.

Copenhagen is strong, because the tobacco of which it is made is out into fine grains, which makes it impart its strength thoroughly and quickly.

Hence, a little "pinch" goes a long way, showing that Copenhagen is not only an unusually economical chew, but also one of the finest quality, being made of the best, old, rich, high-flavored tobacco.

ADVERTISING

Another Christmas Season approaches and again the merchants look forward to hours of mad last minute shopping. By the judicious use of advertising merchants can easily persuade their customers, into the way of "shopping early."

This "shop-early" idea applies equally well to the merchants. They should secure their extra space in The Observer at once. Reservations for space in the next three issues of this paper must positively be made by the evening of Dec. 6. The manager wants to accommodate every applicant for space but plans once made for the three big issues before Christmas cannot be changed. The Observer is the only newspaper that absolutely and thoroughly covers Carleton and Victoria counties. No business man for a moment questions this fact. There exists no truth more self-evident. The paper enters 90 percent of the homes in its field.

It costs more to advertise in The Observer than in other local papers, but the advertiser gets what he wants—the audience of the people.

If you want a page, a half page, a quarter page, or any space in the next three issues, notify the office by telephone at once.

We are eager to serve you.

Vocational School

for the course is an easy matter. The course is free to girls between the ages of 14 and 25 who are residents of Carleton county.

The course in Agriculture, commencing Monday, January 5 and extending until April 30, will include the study of field crops, livestock, soil management, poultry fungus diseases affecting field crops, insect pests injurious to farm crops, dairying, horticulture, veterinary science, and weed seeds. Bench woodworking and farm mechanics, including carpentering, building construction, gas engine study, forging, cement work, and motor mechanics will also be taken up in conjunction with the agricultural studies. During the initial year of the Vocational School activity, the course in agriculture and farm mechanics will take the form of a short course, although it is the intention to develop a three year course, and, in the event of that stage of development being reached during the coming year, those who successfully complete the short course will be given their second year standing.

Every boy taking the course is required to carry on a project during the summer following the school course, on the home farm, which shall consist of some work closely related to the subject matter taken up during the school year. Lectures will be given covering the planning of the work in advance; the work will be carried on by the student according to the plan, keeping records of the work, and rendering a final report and accounts. The success or failure of the project, whether it be an oat plot, potato patch, flock of poultry, etc., will be judged according to the gain or loss shown in the student's books. Supervision of project work, and instruction connected therewith, will be the summer duty of the agricultural teacher.

This course is free to boys of Carleton county between the ages of 14 and 25. To those who contemplate enrolling for this course, we would suggest that they immediately make application that the required attention might best be given to the matter of accommodation and preparation.

Neglecting to train our young farmers means as basic and certain destruction of natural resources and reduction of national prosperity as the demolition of our young forests. The nature of farm work renders special training for it imperative. Upon one man depends the success of many acres. An acquaintance with local soil and climate and their bearing on crop raising, with the chemistry of soil and crops, with ways of preventing depletion of the soil through exhaustion and erosion, with the principles of drainage, and of animal and plant physiology, care and breeding, with the pests and diseases which attack vegetation and the methods of fighting them—these are but a few things upon which the successful farmer can scarcely afford to be ignorant. That this knowledge might best be imparted to our young agriculturists some systematic agricultural education must be established, hence the Vocational School, Woodstock.

This new system of education must of course offer general academic branches, as these are the prerequisites of farming and home making intelligence. In propriety therefore with this new idea, academic subjects, including English, civics and citizenship and Arithmetic, are taught in conjunction with the home making and agricultural courses. The school day in each of these consists of six hours. Three hours each day will be devoted to the study of the subjects as outlined in the courses, while the remaining three hours are given to lectures in academic subjects. Education for the farmer's son and daughter must not lead them away from the farm, but teach them to bring the best from the outside world into farm life. To accomplish this is the aim of the vocational school.

To meet a local demand, particularly one existing in the town, a course in typewriting and stenography was arranged and this is now in progress. This course started at the same time as the home making course and is for the same duration. This class is filled to capacity, and those completing the course will be equipped with the necessary knowledge to fill positions as competent stenographers in offices.

Evening classes, which started on Nov. 10, are held every Monday and Friday evening in typewriting and stenography, in sewing and in millinery. As time advances and needs arise further evening classes will be arranged.

Besides the regular day and evening classes, the different grades from the public and high schools are given instruction in home making and bench woodwork. There are at present 267 students at present receiving instruction at the Vocational School, Woodstock.

In Carleton county there are 800 boys and girls of high school age not in school. A great proportion of these are not in school, no doubt, because the present academic school course, which leads to the professions, does not appeal to them. Surely for some of these the courses given and to be given at the Vocational School, Woodstock, supply the need. The school is there. The courses are free. The staff of instruction is prepared for you. Other additional buildings will be built if need be. The opportunity is offered you. Will you turn it down?

Any information sought or applications made should be addressed to the Principal, Vocational School, Woodstock.

was taken in which the members pledged themselves to support the United Farmer candidate no matter whom he might be. Mr. Caldwell has promised to resign his seat upon a sixty percent vote of the United Farmers. Does that look as if he is representing all classes of this constituency at Ottawa. The re-call or referendum is an important plank of the Farmers' platform. Such a system would make a class representative of parliament little better than a puppet or he would have about the status of a delegate.

Will some Farmer explain the speeches of H. W. Wood in the recent by-election in Cochrane Alta. Mr. Wood, by the way, is both president of the United Farmers of Alberta and president of the so called Canadian Council of Agriculture. The Winnipeg Free Press comments on Mr. Wood's election speeches as follows: "Mr. Wood and his protegee Mr. Moore, fought the election in Cochrane on the issue of class representation. Without having special grievances or complaints they advocated what, in the last analysis, would be occupational politics. The electors were asked to vote, not as citizens of the Province, approving or disapproving the policies of the Government or of some other political group, but as farmers simply. Labor was urged by Mr. Wood to adopt the same attitude, and so on through all the occupational classes. If his ideas were to be generally adopted Canada would be governed not democratically, but on the Soviet system. Members of parliament would no longer be representatives of the people but delegates instructed by the most narrow of class interests and liable to be recalled if in the give-and-take of politics by means of which progress is actually made, they failed to please constituents, who might be ignorant of the grounds for compromise. These representatives said Mr. Wood, 'will go as our lobbyists, not hired, but belonging to us body and soul, and go there to settle class differences'. That is the very antithesis of democratic representation. It is the doctrine of the class war condemned when preached by fanatical socialists, but apparently condoned, even accepted—though doubtless in ignorance of its real meaning—when advanced by the official representatives of the United Farmers of Alberta."

The organ of the Grain Growers of Manitoba in a recent article criticises the Government for fixing the price of wheat, at $3.21 per bushel. It claims wheat would now be worth four and possibly five dollars a bushel if the price had not been fixed. If it takes five bushels of wheat to make a barrel of flour what then would the poor consumer have to pay for his barrel of flour. Are not the grievances of the farmers greatly magnified? Is there any class feeling the high cost of living as little as the farmer's?

The writer is not trying to create prejudices against the farmers but would endeavor to have these same farmers look at this question from a national standpoint instead of the narrow selfish view prevalent throughout the country. "Anti-Bolshevik."

A party consisting of H. E. Adams, F. A. Aiton, C. Bradley, E. C. Morgan, Walter Morgan, Frank McCollom, Warren White, and John Thistle returned on Friday from a week's sporting at Long Lake where they have a very comfortable camp which they had built this summer. Game was not very plentiful.

Clark's Hotel

This week I offer an exceptionally good opportunity to any person desiring to secure a hotel property that has been one of the best money-makers on the river. This is the Clark Hotel in the Town of Hartland. The building is one of the most attractive in town, very conveniently located, and very completely equipped with all furniture and utensils for a going concern. There are 15 good sleeping rooms, good office, ladies' parlor and large dining room. Here is a splendid opportunity to open a hotel catering exclusively to the best paying trade. This proposition will bear strict investigation.

One of the most valuable properties in the Town of Hartland is the Morgan property near the station. This consists of a well-built, two-story building, 24x40 feet. Entirely steel covered, the insurance rate is low, while the store is one best business stands on the river. The upper flat, with seven rooms and bath, is a very pleasant home for any one. Included in this property is a frost proof potato house and three hay sheds, with siding close to them. There is also sufficient land to erect another building. Over the warehouse are two well finished tenements, always rented at good prices. The rent value of the whole property exceeds $100 a month. This is a splendid buy for a man with the money; or part of the purchase price may remain on mortgage.

The land alone is worth more than half the price of the whole thing, while the buildings could not be built for a great deal more. With 180 feet frontage along the railway track the property is always easily saleable. Any person interested in this buy should speak quick. Price on application.

Another desirable property is a nicely situated residence, one of the most attractive in town of Hartland. This will surely interest any one wanting a cozy home not two minutes walk from the station or post office.

A partly completed house on a nice lot near the school is offered at a real bargain for a quick sale.

G. B. Nixon's Farm

G. Burton Nixon of Somerville has listed his fine big farm with me and if there is anyone wanting what many consider the very finest farm in Carleton county here is your chance to get it. The property consists of the Joseph McGee and the W. J. Boyer farms, side by side, containing upwards of 300 acres of arable land, with a down-hill haul from the back field to Hartland station. One of the biggest, newest and most modern barns in the province just a half a mile from the station. House is thoroughly modernized and occupies one of the most beautiful sites on the river. Investigate this rare opportunity of farming in big, modern business-like fashion.

A fine farm of 115 acres, 85 cleared, 5 miles from Hartland station and 2½ miles from Valley railway. All needed buildings including new garage. Pump in yard and unfailing springs on farm. Every foot of the land is tillable and very productive. There is plenty of fuel and quite an amount of good lumber, with easy haul to mill. This is priced most attractively.

A 200 acre farm, 7 miles from Hartland, 3 miles from Valley Railway. Complete set of buildings, a splendid potato farm under state of high cultivation. Lots of lumber and hardwood, and the early buyer gets a bargain.

A 300 acre farm only two miles from Hartland is a rare bargain for anyone who wants a big farm close to market.

For all details concerning any of these properties consult me at my office in the store of Hartland Drug Co., Ltd. If just what you want is not in the list we may be able to interest you in something else.

Aerial Mail

By LYDIA M. D. O'NEIL

(Copyright.)

"By and by, Surly, they won't need you nor your Lulu any more. They'll have airplanes to carry the mail an' express, an' then it's 'Old Black Lulu' to the scrap-shop an' you to Highland Park, Surly Simmons. An' I'll be sittin' up in one o' them airplanes, all dressed up in goggles an' gloves an' things, steerin' the aerial mail an' lookin' tony. Aw, say, now, Surly! That hot like to fly me on the head. Don't be so reckless, throwin' things around like that. As I was sayin'—"

"Shut up, you thick-head, you! You couldn't steer a hand-car. An' there wasn't no aerial mail in my time, cub. Let 'em run all they like when I'm under the sod—but not in my time."

But Surly was perceptibly disturbed by the idle banter to which he was being subjected to daily. "Old Black Lulu," officially known as Engine 1448, was his darling. He abhorred electric locomotives, automobiles, gasoline launches, airplanes—anything and everything that was not run by steam power.

"Old Black Lulu" was good enough for him, he said. "Old Black Lulu" and the "drag" of express and mail cars he carried were good enough for anybody.

Simmons did not know that the big trunkline was already contemplating the building of a few airplanes for the purpose of conveying mail and express, or his mind would have been more troubled. It was rumored that the Continental Airship company was in the process of formation, and a continental airship line would mean more speedy delivery of mail and express, cheaper rates, and, therefore, considerable pecuniary loss to the railroad company. This threatened competition must be met and defeated; so, while Simmons growled and swore, the railroad company planned and experimented.

By and by there came a young Englishman from the other side of the Atlantic, with a little money in his pocket and a grim determination to earn more—much more. By night he dreamed of cogs and wheels and screws and propellers and dynamos and ohms; by day he worked on these dreams and made them come true.

He didn't become famous; he failed to marry. But he hadn't sufficient money, and no influential friends.

One day his dreams and his labor came to an end. That was the day that his small model of the Fenimore-Stokes airship was finished, tested, and found perfect.

Then Fate brought him into contact with Hendricks, the recently elected president of the Never-Mind-What Railroad company. Hendricks wanted an airship, and Fenimore-Stokes wanted money. Each supplied the other's demand. Fenimore-Stokes sold his patent outright, and went home to Merrie England and his sweetheart.

Hendricks went his way, rejoicing in the knowledge that he had secured the means to combat the Continental Airship company, which was still nonexistent.

The Never-Mind-What company built two large airships after the pattern of the Fenimore-Stokes model, and then hastened to build more, because, firstly, the Continental Airship line had become a reality; and, secondly, because of two daring mail and express robberies which occurred within a few weeks apart and defied solution.

Five mail clerks and three express messengers had been found dead in their cars, with their skulls crushed. A sixth mail clerk died without regaining consciousness, and a fourth express messenger became so hopelessly injured that no clue could be obtained from his confused, incoherent speech.

All the most valuable express packages were missing, boxes broken open and safes dynamited. In the mail cars not one registered letter or parcel had been overlooked. In both instances, No. 8, drawn by "Old Black Lulu" with Surly Simmons at the throttle was the train selected by the marauders. It hurt Simmons more than any one knew, but that did not mend matters.

The N.-M.-W. company decided then to convey express and mail by means of the Fenimore-Stokes airships; so they broke a bottle of wine over the grey metal body of the first man-made bird and christened her the "Registered Mail." The second they named the "Chicago Express."

When he heard of it Surly Simmons broke two bottles of wine over "Lulu's" black nose, saying to her: "If you ain't worth two o' them flyin' machines, then you can't run two miles in four minutes."

"Lulu" assuredly could run two miles in four minutes; but she sighed, nevertheless, and her iron heart throbbed convulsively.

The "Registered Mail" made three trial trips between her terminals—New York and a town half-way between the Eastern and Western coasts—safely and speedily. On the fourth day she started west with her first cargo of express and registered mail at the rate of three hundred miles an hour.

Only recently had the airship been utilized for practical purposes; and heretofore two hundred miles an hour had been the maximum average speed attained. In the matter of speed, as well as safety and simplicity, the Fenimore-Stokes model had proven superior to all competitors. The aviator in charge of the "Registered Mail" boldly asserted that the ship was capable of twice the speed at which she was permitted to travel, but the N.-M.-W. company was content with three hundred miles an hour—content to run two daily airships—the "Mail" and the "Chicago Express."

Side by side stood "Old Black Lulu" and the "Registered Mail." Side by side stood President Hendricks and Engineer Simmons. The old engineer was no longer surly, but sad. He spoke in a voice half-choked with sobs:

"Your pa wouldn't 'a' done it, Mr. Hendricks. Your pa was a railroad man from 'way-back, an' he wouldn't 'a' done it. You can fire me for that. If you like, it's said, an' I ain't a goin' to take it back."

His intense sadness and resentment were almost comic. Hendricks laughed a little and tried to "jolly" the old engineer, but Simmons was in no mood for jests.

He turned away, oiled the 1448, wiped her carefully with a handful of clean waste and polished her as vigorously and unconcernedly as if the "Registered Mail" were no more than a summer shower.

But Hendricks heard him murmur once or twice: "They don't want us any more, Lulu. They don't want us any more."

By and by Simmons walked over to the airship and examined her carefully. "No chance of a break-down, I s'pose," he queried hopefully.

"No chance whatever," smilingly answered the aviator. Simmons looked about to see if there was anything with which he could tamper—a bolt he could loosen, or a screw he could remove, but there was nothing. Besides, he would have been detected.

"Electricity, too," he growled. "Gasoline was bad enough, but electricity?"

He turned away, and climbed into the cab of 1448. He carried baggage and passenger coaches for the first time in many years, and a feeling of shame stole over him as he gazed at "Old Black Lulu" and the stater cars behind her.

It had all come so "suddenlike." Only a few days ago, said airships were only toys at which he had laughed. Yet one of these toys had supplanted his "Lulu"—and there the good, humming bird triumphed in his face—the blue-grey bulk three times as large as the largest car he had ever hauled and carried his freedom freight—his express parcels—his registered mail!

"Old Black Lulu's" days of glory were over—and so were his! Alas, how bitter!

As he counted off the miles as she always had, "Old Black Lulu" purred and whistled, and clicked and pounded over the track, just as she always had—and by and by, she started to sing a crazy little song of her own composing:

They don't want me—any more—
They don't want me—any more—
Simmons heard and understood—and answered:

"You're right, old girl. They don't want you any more. 'Lulu' to the scrap-shop, an' me to Highland Park."

In a short time they passed the silver mail-post, and Simmons began to look for the "Registered Mail." Somewhere along the line she would cross the N.-M.-W. tracks, headed directly west. She had no signals to head, as "Lulu" had; he curves to take or hills to climb; she had it so easy—plain sailing for her.

She would cross the N.-M.-W. tracks at the bridge, and sail away out of sight before No. 8 could—

"The devil!" The captain, or motor-man, or whatever he called himself, had told him there was no possible chance of a break-down, and yet—

"The 'Registered Mail' was wabbling—swaying—swinging! She was going to drop. Some one had blundered. Simmons was not the man to let a golden opportunity pass. Not he! Swiftly he calculated the distance to the point where the "Registered Mail" would land, and swiftly he jerked the throttle open wide. Then he "hooked her up"—gave her "the short stroke," and she responded:

"Lulu! Lulu!" he cried. "You go to it, old girl! Work hard now, hard, hard! Lulu! old girl, do your blundered! Go to it, Lulu!"

The short stroke won the day for "Old Black Lulu."

Simmons leaned out of the window and watched the airship anxiously. "Come—down—down it dropped, and "Old Black Lulu" plowed into its enemy body just as it struck the bridge. They plunged into the river together—the "Registered Mail" and her crew, and "Old Black Lulu" with part of her "drag." Simmons still sat on the leather-cushioned seat; his grey, stony face transfigured by a triumphant smile.

"Old Black Lulu" was never sent to the scrap-shop. She lies there, at the river-bottom, still "hooked-up," covered in mud and victory. And Simmons never went to Highland Park, for he lived just long enough to say:

"They can run all the aerial mails they like when I'm under the sod—but not in my time. No. Lulu—old girl—not in my time."

And still another, on the subject of color schemes, did you ever notice what a peculiar shining red-headed boy has for distributing black eyes among all his playmates?"

Epigrammatic Sermon.

Christmas in the Barnyard

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(Copyright, 1914, by Watson Bookkeeper Co.)

"CHRISTMAS is coming," crowed Mr. Noorick.

"Christmas is coming," roared Mr. Turkey.

"Don't be too happy about it, for you may be eaten, Mr. Turkey," said Miss Hen.

And then she clucked: "Christmas is coming."

"Gobble, gobble, gobble," said Mr. Turkey; "you needn't be so sure that you won't be eaten yourself."

"Well, it's the best time of the year to be eaten. It's an honor."

"That's what I've always said," gobbled Mr. Turkey. "Please, Miss Hen, try to be original."

"I may try to be many things," clucked Miss Hen, "but it is impossible for me to try to be original."

"Why?" asked Mr. Turkey, who was much puzzled.

"Because I don't know what it is to be original. I don't know what the word means. How can I be something if I don't even know what that something is? I can't try to be a thing I don't know anything about."

"You could ask what it means, couldn't you?" inquired Mr. Turkey. "Are you too proud for that?"

"Not a bit," said Miss Hen. "I don't care how I like to have them handed to me without the asking. It makes me appear so superior."

"Absurd," said Mr. Turkey. "Well, if you think so, then—"

"You may be eaten, Mr. Turkey," said Miss Hen, "I am Mr. Turkey."

"I suppose I will have to swallow my pride or my superiority and be friendly at this time of the year. Yes, I will actually say: 'What does it mean to be original?'"

"I will tell you," said Mr. Turkey, "but first of all let me say that you cannot swallow your pride, nor your superiority. Those are not things to eat."

"You may rise above your pride, but it is impossible to swallow it."

"Now, Mr. Turkey, I must be only a poor hen, but I know a few things. It's saying and a perfectly good saying when I speak of swallowing my pride. Everyone knows no one means to chew it and swallow it actually. Besides, as far as that is concerned, I might say to you that it was not correct to talk about rising above your pride as though pride were the ground and one took a trip in an airplane above it."

"Let us not quarrel," said Mr. Turkey. "For the joyous Christmas season is fast approaching."

"Yes," said Miss Hen, "and I was just approaching victory in that argument."

Mr. Turkey pretended he hadn't heard.

"Oh, by the way," he said, after a moment's pause. "I'd wanted me to tell you what it meant to be original."

"Yes," clucked Miss Hen, while a smile passed over her hen face.

"Well," continued Mr. Turkey, "when a creature is original and says original things it means he is saying things he has thought up himself and hasn't copied from someone else. A person who has original ideas all his own, a creature who says original things, says things he other creatures say."

"You copied me when you said it was an honor to be eaten at Christmas. That was what I have always said."

"Everyone should give me presents," gobbled Flaky Pig.

"It is the time of the year when everyone should give me presents. That is what Christmas means," said Flaky Pig.

"They should all give them to me," said Brother Bacon. "You pigs don't know the spirit of Christmas giving."

"You don't know it yourself," said Miss Ham. "Christmas is coming. I'm all ready for presents."

But the other animals sighed and shook their heads.

"Pigs don't even forget they are pigs during the Christmas season!"

ESTIMATES OF YIELD.

Detail of Figures on Canadian Field Crops Shows Decline.

Following is the detailed statement of Canadian crop yields, as issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, from reports of correspondents at the end of September.

The total yield of wheat in Canada is now placed at 133,488,000 bushels, including 174,684,000 bushels of spring wheat and 19,904,000 bushels of fall wheat. Upon the average of the past ten years the average yield per acre is 10 1/2 bushels for spring wheat, 23 1/2 bushels for fall wheat, and 11 1/2 bushels for all wheat. In 1913 the total yield of wheat was 139,076,450 bushels, or 21 bushels per acre. For 1914 the average yield per acre for Canada is 27 bushels, representing a total of 390,368,000 bushels, as compared with last year's average of 25 1/2 bushels and a total of 423,350,000 bushels. Barley, with an average of 22 bushels, yields 66,443,500 bushels, as against last year's average of 24 1/2 bushels and total of 77,287,240 bushels. Rye, with an average yield per acre of 14 1/2 bushels, yields a total of 9,234,400 bushels in 1914. The yields in 1913 for the three prairie provinces are estimated at 34,142,500 bushels of wheat, 248,556,000 bushels of oats, 46,412,000 bushels of barley, and 5,954,000 bushels of rye.

The quality at harvest time of the principal grain crops for Canada, expressed in percentages of the previous ten years, was as follows: Fall wheat, 94 (88); spring wheat, 91 (89); fall wheat, 92 (88); oats, 90 (84); barley, 89 (87); rye, 92 (82); peas, 91 (85); turnips, 85 (82); buckwheat, 90 (86); mixed grain, 88 (85); flax, 92 (82); and corn for husking, 84 (85). The figures within parentheses represent the quality of the crops in 1913.

The average condition of root and clover crops in Canada at the end of September, expressed in percentages of the decennial average, was as follows, with last year's figures for comparison placed within parentheses: Potatoes, 85 (83); turnips, 85 (80); sugar beets, 85 (87); fodder corn, 85 (82); alfalfa, 81 (83). By provinces potatoes appear to be best in Quebec, 103; the other provinces ranging as follows: Saskatchewan, 87; Nova Scotia, 84; Prince Edward Island, 83; British Columbia, 80; Manitoba, 89; and Ontario, 81.

"Reds" Like Canada.

All that remains of the Finnish Foreign Legion, which, under Britton, fought the Germans on the Russian frontier, but would not fight the Bolsheviks because they were revolutionaries themselves, are now in Canada. They were in the Baltic area, where would-be Canadian citizens who helped the allies against the Germans, but have been a problem ever since. These are strange allies since the legion was recruited from men who had been members of the Finnish Red Guard who were expelled from their country after the last change of government there. Men without a country, they were formed into a foreign legion, 14,000 strong, and under British and Canadian officers did good work against the Germans, who tried to cross the Russian frontier to reach Murmansk. After the armistice, however, they refused to fight the Bolsheviks. They were all but Bolsheviks themselves. Through the efforts of British most of the legion was finally repatriated, but there was a certain element too steeped in revolutionary ideas to allow repatriation. They were blacklisted men. They were formed into details and placed under Lieut. T. S. Wetton, of Winnipeg, a Canadian who went out with the Siberian force as an officer in the Devonshire. Wetton protests that the legion is not Bolsheviks, although a little radical in tendency. He says they are anxious to come to Canada, and he has made representations to the Dominion immigration authorities in that regard. However, it is scarcely likely that Canada will see the matter in the same light. Wetton's following are the very cream of Finnish revolutionism, Oskari Tokoi, former Red Prime Minister for Finland, being one of the most prominent of other prominent members of the red flag ranking as more private.

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Came to this Woman after Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Restore Her Health

Ellensburg, Wash.—"After I was married I was not well for a long time and a good deal of the time was not able to go about. Our greatest desire was to have a child in our home and one day my husband came back from town with a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and wanted me to try it. It brought relief from my trouble. I improved in health so I could do my housework; we now have a little one, all of which I owe to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." Mrs. O. S. Johnson, R. No. 3, Ellensburg, Wash.

There are women everywhere who long for children in their homes yet are denied this happiness on account of some functional disorder which in most cases would readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such women should not give up hope until they have given this wonderful medicine a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of 40 years experience is at your service.

A FEW LITTLE SMILES

First Step of the Divorce Court.
"George, dear," began his brand new wife, sweetly. "I thought you prided yourself on keeping your razors in such good condition."

"Well, I tried to open a can of beans and I couldn't do a thing with either one of them."

Cruel.
Miss Ainslie—I have a perfect mania for collecting antiques. Just now I am making a collection of pictures of the landmarks of this town.

Miss Kutting—I noticed you coming from the photographer's this morning.

Advice.
"Darling, you must never marry a man for his money."

"Why not, mother?"

"Because that sort of a marriage cannot but end unhappily. But I can tell you what to do. You can take care not to fall in love with a man who hasn't money."

Good Enough for Him.
"You know, Pat, it is said that a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, Pat. Now, which would you prefer to have, a good name or riches?"

"Well, you can give me the riches. My name's O'Toole, and that's good enough for any man."

Soothing Sirup.
They were talking in a foreign but a friendly tongue.

"Do you know what they are saying?" asked another guest.

"No," replied the hostess. "I do not understand a word—but, is that not the charm of their conversation?"

EVERYBODY DOES.
"He's made a failure of everything."

"That so. Why doesn't he try writing for moving pictures?"

More Like Bats Than Vines.
We call it "weaker sex" no more. To speak of "climbing vines," is folly. Although we see them by the score clinging to car straps in the trolley.

Rejected.
Movie Employer (to applicant)—"Ever see a cow?"

Applicant—"Yes."

Movie Employer—"I'm afraid you won't do. We want somebody to take the part of a cowboy."

Patent Medicine.
Mary—"She rejected him ten times before she accepted him."

Anna—"She must have thought he was a medicine and followed directions in shaking well before using."

Practical Girl.
He (reclining)—"I could die for you."

She (Goodness! I hope you won't think of such a thing until after we are married and I have the right to inherit."

Somewhat Scared.
"I understand that nephew of yours took you for a joy ride."

"That was no joy ride for me," answered Mr. Chugstun. "That was a fear ride."

The Exception.
"He may be grouchy, but he certainly cannot pick flaws in anything which is really well done."

"Oh, yes, he can. He complains of meat when it is rare."

So It Seems.
"A woman's strike is a very serious one."

"Naturally, since a vessel cannot start its cruise until its crews start the vessel."

Exalted Tactics.
Mrs. Knicker—Henry, I must say—Knicker—My dear, I beg you not to start a discussion until after I have had the last word.

A Real Nice.
"I understand you undertook to raise chickens on your place."

"They raised themselves. They flew the coop."

Exceptions.
"The early bird catches the worm."

"Not where the enthusiastic anglers have been digging for bait."

Wash Day and Backache

WASH day is the least welcome day of the week in most homes, though sweeping day is not much better. Both days are most trying on the back.

The strain of washing, ironing and sweeping frequently deranges the kidneys. The system is poisoned and backaches, rheumatism, pains in the limbs result.

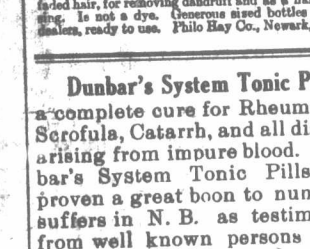

Kidney action must be aroused—the liver awakened to action and the bowels regulated by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This favorite prescription of the well-known Receipt Book author will not fail you in the hour of need.

"Autumn" or "Fall."
Both are correct, "autumn" being rather more classic and generally used in England, while "fall" is now distinctly American and more expressive in its reference to the time of falling leaves. In England, the autumn is still sometimes called "the fall of the leaf." An English writer says: "Fall is better on the merits than autumn, in every way; it is short, Saxon, picturesque; it reveals its derivation to everyone who uses it, not to the scholar only, like autumn; and we once had as good a right to it as the Americans, but we have chosen to let the right lapse and to use the word now is no better than harpocry."

Prince an Indian Chief.
"Dawn of Day" is the latest distinctive title to be conferred upon the Prince of Wales, who was invested with a chieftainship in the Six Nations (Iroquois) in the course of five hours spent in Brantford. At the Mohawk chapel the prince signed the register which contains the signatures of his grandfather and great-uncle the Duke of Connaught. He was particularly interested in the Bible presented to the Six Nations Indians by Queen Anne. The women of the tribe requested that he convey to his royal mother the Queen an address from them. The prince unveiled a bronze tablet inscribed with names of the 36 members of the Six Nations who died overseas.

Has an Appetite, Yes.
"Lucky girl, that."

"Seems so."

"Yes, indeed. She can look so full after a hearty dinner of ham and cabbage."

LOCAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

The members of Centre Lodge No. 102, I.O.O.F., were at home to their wives and best girls on Tuesday evening. The affair brought out a good bunch of Oddfellows and all went merrily. The committee in charge had made arrangements with Mr. Perry, the new proprietor of the Centreville Hotel, to provide a most delicious dinner with all the necessary trimmings, and the excellent manner in which he did this has elicited many hearty compliments. All seemed very unanimous in the opinion that the management of the hotel corporation had secured a most competent proprietor. After the disposal of the cots, the company of merry-makers adjourned to the Opera House where a most pleasant social hour was spent together, each one trying to give some one else a good time. The proposal to reorganize the defunct Rebekah Lodge met with the approval of all present, so we may hope that Bethel Rebekah Lodge may soon be running merrily again. All present went home feeling that they had enjoyed an ideal evening and with the hope that a similar function might be arranged for in the near future.

LeRoy T. Lee, J. O. Stevens, A. D. McCain and E. R. McClintock were among those in attendance at a ceremonial session of the Order of the Mystic Shrine held at Luxor Temple in Saint John last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cogswell and daughter Florence plan on leaving soon for Riverside, Calif., where they expect to make their home in the future.

F. J. Brewster attended a meeting of the directors and managers of the United Farmers Co-operative Co., in Woodstock on Tuesday.

Miss Marion White, R.N., was called to Woodstock last week on professional work.

R. H. Huerta of M.R.A., Saint John, spent Tuesday and Wednesday in town.

The United Farmer's held a meeting in their hall on Wednesday evening.

R. J. Clark made a business trip to Newcastle last week.

Eric Brown spent last week in Saint John.

We note with pleasure the real estate boom that our neighboring town, Hartland, is enjoying and only hope that this will prove an impetus toward very rapid growth in the near future. Our own good town, though primarily a residential community in the centre of a rich agricultural district, needs some live industry to lend employment both in people here already, who would court a good opportunity, and to outsiders who would soon crowd in to see what was doing. It seems of late the ambition of every town to put its name on the map in great big red letters and a very laudable one indeed. It behooves us all then to throw around all the red ink we can and let others know that Centreville is one of the finest.

Friends of the late Albert Simonson received word last week of his death in Centralia, Wash. Mr. Simonson spent the greater part of his life in Jacksonville, engaged in agricultural pursuits. Retiring some fifteen years ago he came to Centreville where he conducted a cloth store. In May, 1918, he moved to Centralia where he has lived in the meantime. He was a member of the Church of England and a Liberal in politics. He leaves to mourn, a wife, formerly Miss Agnes Hovey of this place, and one son, Rev. Ernest Simonson of Douglas, Ariz.

Centreville Red Cross Society has a limited supply of Little's grey yarn for sale at $1.50 per pound. Same can be had by applying at R.C. Room at Mrs. W. R. Reid's.

H. D. Hageman is official registrar of births, marriages and deaths in the department of vital statistics for the parish of Wilmet.

Mrs. L. L. Clark has returned from Woodstock where she has been the guest of her sister Mrs. F. D. Tweedie.

J. R. Scholey of Mars Hill, spent Sunday with his mother at her home here.

Mrs. George Williams spent part of last week with her friend, Mrs. J. C. Stevens.

The Observer will be sent to Canadian subscribers a full year for $1 paid in advance.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH BURIAL PERMITS

IT IS HEREBY ANNOUNCED that on and after January first, 1920, in accordance with Sect. 35 of the Public Health Act of 1915, and its amendments the body of any deceased person shall not be buried without a permit so to do from the Sub-District Board of Health for the Sub-District in which the death of such person took place, or in which the burial is to be made.

It is arranged by Regulation of the Minister of Health that such burial permits shall be granted by the sub-deputy registrars of Vital Statistics, or by one of their assistants, duly appointed for that purpose by the Sub-District Board of Health concerned, for the sub-deputy registrar area in which such death took place, or in which such burial is to be made.

Such burial permit will be made upon the production of a certificate of cause of death, and such permits shall serve as permits for the transportation of the body where such transportation is to be made by a common carrier, and when burial is to be made elsewhere than in the sub-deputy registrar area where the permit was issued.

Permits in prominent type, will be put up throughout the province, notifying the date of the inception of this service together with the post office address of the sub-deputy registrar of the parish, town or city, in which such permit appears.
