Over two hundred derricks were blown down in the windstorm at Oil Springs.

Crude oil is now selling at $3.20 a barrel at Oil Springs, with a bounty of 52 1/2 cents.

Lambton county council has passed a by-law to borrow $20,000 to spend in building and maintaining good roads in the county.

A report made to the Middlesex county council shows that patients are kept in the poor house at Strathroy for 67.51 cents per day.

James Beattie of Metcalfe had his orchard completely demolished in the recent storm, as well as his windmill and minor injuries to his barns.

English women are beginning to wear monacles, and not only are they adopting them for home wear, but are appearing on the streets so adorned.

The automobile license plates for Ontario for 1920 will be a combination of blue and white, both letters and figures being painted on a field of white.

Mrs. McDonald, wife of a farmer near Severn, was killed in the recent storm. While attempting to close the large doors of the barn one of them struck her in the head.

About eighty neighbors of Alex. D. McMillan of North Dunwich gathered at his home a few evenings ago and presented him with two rocking chairs prior to his leaving the community.

It is estimated that one hundred million people in Europe are in danger of starving during the next few months. Although the war is over, its effects will remain for long years to come.

The high cost of living is causing many Turks to buy more wives. Women are cheaper at fifteen cents than men for labor purposes, says an official of the Near East relief organization at New York.

Dr. O. J. Glenn of Wardville is going into the sheep raising business exclusively and has bought the old Munro homestead, on the Furnival road, near Wardville, and will use it for his wool producers entirely.

The pupils of the Strathroy public schools are undergoing a thorough medical inspection by a doctor and school nurse, sent out by the Ontario Government for this special purpose. Cards are sent home by the children to their parents giving full information as to the results of their examination.

Perhaps prohibition does not entirely prohibit liquor drinking but it is certainly not contributing to our crop of drunkards. The Keeley cure institution which did such a driving business a few years ago in Ontario endeavoring to reclaim the drunkard has been obliged to close its doors and go out of business because there are no subjects to work on.

Russell Cook, formerly of Mount Brydges, has been acquitted of a charge of murder which had been laid against him in Saskatchewan. It appears that a body of a man was found in a well on the farm of the accused and that he was alleged to have had criminal knowledge of the death of the victim. The preliminary hearing, however, showed that Cook was absolutely innocent and the proceedings have been dropped.

TOO EASY TO GET DAMAGES

Middlesex county council has decided that section 460 of the Ontario Municipal Act has outlived its usefulness, and that now it furnishes too easy an excuse for careless people who get hurt on the highways to sue the municipalities, often collecting heavy damages. The Government is to be asked to repeal the section.

COUNTY MEMORIAL DISCUSSED

Middlesex county council discussed at length a proposal to erect a memorial to the boys of the county who gave their lives on war service, but it was concluded to take no action until a later date. Many of the township and village municipalities do not support a scheme for a general memorial, and they claim that they prefer something close to home.

HAS PREMONITION

OF MOTHER'S DEATH

London, Dec. 9.—An extraordinary coincidence of a son's premonition of danger to his mother and of her death in an automobile accident in Chicago attending receipt today of news of the demise of Mrs. Mary Beechey, mother of Thomas Beechey, 93 Tecumseh avenue, chief operator on the local staff of the G. N. W.

Following the accidental death of Mrs. Leo Sullivan, who was killed on the downtown streets here Saturday afternoon, Mr. Beechey became greatly concerned for the safety of his mother in Chicago. He was so disturbed by his fears that he telegraphed her to come home at once in order that she should be with him for Christmas.

Soon afterward a telegram came from Chicago advising him that his mother had been caught between two cars in collision, and that she had succumbed almost immediately. Burial is to be made in Chicago.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO

London, Dec. 7.—Mrs. Nellie Sullivan, age 23, wife of Leo Sullivan of 267 Waterloo street and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor of St. Thomas, was accidentally killed Saturday afternoon at the corner of Dundas and Clarence streets, when run down by a motor car driven by Mrs. J. Dracey of Wardville.

Mrs. Sullivan, with her husband, who is an L. and P. S. employee, moved to London a year ago from their home in St. Thomas. She was accustomed to make frequent visits back and forth to St. Thomas, and when she left home Saturday afternoon she stated that she would go over to see her parents, after purchasing some Christmas gifts to take down. Soon afterward as she attempted to cross Dundas street at Clarence, she was struck by a car driven by Mrs. Dracey. She was carried against a letter box standard and her head crushed so badly that she died soon afterward.

Coroner McLaren issued instructions to have the body taken to the morgue, and while the attempts to establish identity were carried on, Mr. Sullivan sat at home with their eleven-month-old baby. He fell asleep while waiting for her coming on the midnight car and when he awakened to find she had not returned he assumed that she had been detained. This morning he proceeded to the home of Thomas Terry, a neighbor, to telephone St. Thomas. Mr. Terry had heard of the accident, and without mentioning his suspicions to Sullivan, he drove to the morgue and identified the body. The shock to the husband of the victim was very great.

Mrs. Dracey, the driver of the car, is the wife of a Wardville farmer, and daughter of Chief Gardener Gale at the Ontario Hospital for the Insane. Her husband had been in a London hospital to undergo an operation. Yesterday she drove to London to take him home, but it was deemed advisable to send him on a train, because of stormy weather. Before undertaking the journey, Mrs. Dracey drove to the business district to do some shopping and while she was on that errand the accident occurred.

Coroner McLaren will hold an inquest Thursday night. Mrs. Dracey, who was very seriously affected by shock, is now at the home of her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Dracey came recently from Dakota, where they had a large farm, which they sold. They bought a property near Wardville but were living temporarily with relatives there.

Mrs. Dracey has given a brief version of the accident to the physician who is attending her.

"I was going to leave my car on a side street while I went shopping," she explained. "I thought my car since street would be a suitable place to leave it and that is why I turned to go south on that street from Dundas."

"I first looked on both sides of the crossing and saw that the way was clear and then I tooted my horn. Three women were crossing the street at the time. Two of them got by all right, but the third person stepped back directly in the path of my car. After hitting this woman I remember nothing of what happened afterward."

Mrs. Dracey does not know that the woman who was hit by her car was fatally injured. Her nervous condition as a result of the accident is very critical and in the opinion of her physician it would be unwise to acquaint her with the facts now.

BRITAIN RAPIDLY REGAINING HER FORMER COMMERCIAL STANDING

Paying Her Way on Almost a Cash Basis—Question as to Why the Pound Sterling is So Cheap Easily Answered.

London, Dec. 7.—Foreign trade reports for November, just issued by the Board of Trade, show that England is recouping her favorable position. The November exports were $537,000,000 and imports $718,000,000, compared with October exports of $433,000,000 and imports of $767,000,000. Exports for eleven months were $4,228,000,000, while imports were $7,313,000,000. Thus the visible unfavorable trade balance for November was only $181,000,000, compared with an unfavorable balance of $353,000,000 last January, the most unfavorable month after the armistice. The visible deficit balance for eleven months is $3,085,000,000. If to this be added the probable further deficit for December ($175,000,000), or about the same as November, England's unfavorable trade balance for the year will be approximately $3,250,000,000. But in the figures of the Board of Trade no account is taken of England's huge revenue from ships and banking services collected from foreign nations. Financial people estimate the shipping revenue at $2,000,000,000, and interest from foreign investments, together with profits from banking services at more than $1,000,000,000. This total of invisible revenue will almost wipe out the unfavorable trade balance. According to these figures and estimates England is really paying her way almost on a cash basis.

One might ask, if this is true, why is the pound sterling so cheap? This is a pertinent question, but easily answered. According to United States trade returns Great Britain exported during October only $1,000,000 worth of goods to the United States. If this same ratio prevailed in November it will be seen that the United States took only seven per cent. of Britain's exports. Where are British goods going? The majority is going to the Continent to help rebuild industry and trade there, and that is why the pound sterling is so low. Goods are being sold on the Continent on credit, but Britain is not buying from the United States on credit, so sterling bills must suffer for the time being. If the Continent succeeds in getting a big long-term credit the effect on sterling exchange would be noticed immediately, as it would have the effect of turning British exports to the Continent into liquid shape, enabling her to buy in the United States with the proceeds of the sales to the Continent.

The figures show that since the armistice British exports in food, drinks, tobacco and raw materials have quadrupled; that exports of manufactured goods have doubled, and the re-export of imported goods has increased one thousand per cent. The rapid increase in foreign trade is making it extremely difficult for the advocates of an anti-dumping bill, who are having a hard time proving that such a bill is necessary to prevent British trade from being killed.

MEXICO RELEASES U.S. AGENT: PRES. WILSON HANDLES SITUATION

Two Senators Who Visit President Find Him Mentally Competent to Direct Affairs of Nation—News of Jenkins' Release Halts War Talk.

A despatch from Washington says:—A sharp and sensational turn of optimistic character was given to the Mexican crisis on Friday. Its first phase was official announcement of the release of William O. Jenkins, the United States Consul Agent imprisoned at Puebla.

Its second phase, now more interesting to the country, was the report of a special committee of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, after a personal interview with President Wilson, that he was mentally competent to handle the business of the nation.

It was through this personal interview that the ghost was laid of the strong intimations that President Wilson was in no condition to direct American affairs.

The two Senators who interviewed the President, with the ill-concealed purpose on the part of members of the Foreign Relations Committee to ascertain the truth or falsity of the many rumors that he was in physical or mental shape to attend to important public business, came away from the White House convinced that his mind was vigorous and active.

Production in Germany Reaches Pre-war Level
Berlin, Dec. 8.—Minister of Food and Economics Herr Schmidt, speaking here yesterday, declared the economic situation in Germany recently had improved to an astonishing extent. Workers have returned to their tasks in far greater degree than was forecast last summer. Herr Schmidt said. He cited statistics to show that production in the mines, shipyards and general industries had reached a level approaching the pre-war basis. Some exceptions, he stated, were to be noted, but these were due for the most part to lack of raw material.

Had to Abandon His Baby Owing to Price of Milk
New York, Dec. 8.—The high price of milk was responsible for a seven-months' old baby being abandoned by its father in the Grand Central Station to-day, according to a note found in the youngster's hand by the police.

"Can't afford him on the price of milk they are charging to-day," said the note. "There are others I am trying to support."

HUGE GERMAN PLANE BOUND FOR RUSSIA CAPTURED BY ROUMANIANS

Cargo and Documents Are An Eye-Opener Regarding Germany's Attitude Towards the Entente Powers.

Paris, Dec. 7.—Aeronautical experts have pointed out often that it is dangerous for the Allies to permit the Germans to build new air machines or to use their powerful old ones unless the Allies limit and control their use. Such fears seem fully justified by a document published to-day by Le Journal. A photograph shows a huge German machine which was captured by the Roumanians in Bessarabia when the machine, which was flying to Russia, was forced to descend because of engine trouble. The picture in itself is nothing remarkable, except that it shows the size of the machine, which is one used to bomb London during the war. But the contents of its passenger cabin throws new light on the allied German undertakings with Soviet Russia. The cargo of the machine, which was piloted by two German officers, with the aid of three mechanics, included 200,000,000 rubles (nearly $180,000,000), a special press for printing rubles, and millions worth of jewelry.

Among the papers found on board, it is said, were documents which clearly show Germany's intentions in regard to the Entente powers.

The machine has five engines, each of 200 horse-power, and is capable of hauling 40,000 pounds and of flying for several hours without a stop.

Prince Replies to The King's Welcome

A despatch from London says:—Although the welcome home dinner to the Prince of Wales at Buckingham Palace Monday night was a private function, King George greeted his son in a set speech, addressing him as "My dear son," and adding, "I wish you a most hearty welcome on your return home, safe and sound."

The King expressed his pleasure at the remarkable enthusiasm with which the Prince had been everywhere received and because he had forged a new link between Canada and the Motherland.

The Prince of Wales, replying to his father, began: "Your Majesty, I feel very diffident in attempting to reply to this toast. When you bade me farewell I felt very proud of the mission you entrusted to me. I was following your footsteps, setting out to see the Empire for myself, and I meant to do my utmost to be worthy of your confidence."

"It is still a prouder moment for me when I hear from your lips that you're pleased with the way in which I carried out my task, and I am deeply grateful for the far too kind words you have used about me. I have had a wonderful journey, a wonderful experience, and can never adequately express my gratitude for the universal kindness and hospitality shown me."

British Subjects Only to Give Oaths
A despatch from Regina says:—Commissioners for oaths in Saskatchewan will have to be British subjects either by birth or naturalization following the passage of a bill before the Saskatchewan Assembly.

Appointments will, moreover, be subject to annual renewal. This is a question which has been much canvassed by the G. W. V. A. during the past year.

Queen Mary Accepts Indian Woman's Name

A despatch from Brantford says:—That Queen Mary has been pleased to accept the Indian name of "Cannon-Ronh-Nwa" from the women of the Six Nations Indians, whose reserve is near Brantford, is the information received here from Ottawa. The name given is the Indian name of Mrs. Helen Hill, President of the Six Nations Women's Patriotic League. The Queen also extended her gracious thanks for the address sent to her by the Indian women, and presented to the Prince of Wales on the occasion of the visit of the Prince here on October 20.

Settlement of Coal Strike in United States Now in Sight

New Proposal by President Wilson Will Be Accepted by Both Sides in the Opinion of U. S. Attorney-General Palmer.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Attorney-General Palmer announced early this morning that President Wilson has made to the coal miners a definite concrete proposal looking to a speedy termination of the strike and an adjustment of the entire controversy, and that acting President Lewis and Secretary Green of the miners would urge its acceptance at a meeting of

DOMINION SHIPYARDS ARE BUSY

Twenty Thousand Men Employed in the Industry.

A despatch from Ottawa says:—Including the two 8,340 ton steel vessels ordered recently from the Wallace Shipbuilding Company in Vancouver the Dominion Government has now contracted for 57 ships.

Three months ago there were 23,500 men on the payroll of thirteen Canadian yards, and there are probably twenty thousand men now actively engaged in the construction of vessels in Canada. The expenditure in wages is estimated at forty-two million dollars a year. In addition to this 23,000 employees of other industries which supply the raw or half-finished materials used in constructing ships, making engines and rigging and outfitting them, earn about forty million dollars annually.

The actual money invested in Canadian shipbuilding yards is $47,000,000. Eighteen ships of the Government fleet are now in commission, and there will be 22 before the end of the year. The Canadian Aviator, one of these vessels, is going on the first voyage of a Government vessel to Australia, with a cargo of paper. The steamships Canadian Volunteer and Canadian Trooper have sailed for Great Britain via the Panama Canal with lumber. It is stated here that the British Government is buying seventy million feet of lumber in British Columbia.

Another Record in Exchange Fall

A despatch from New York says:—Demand sterling or bills on London fell to $3.84½, to the pound in this market on Friday, representing a decline of 2½ cents from the recent low level, and a discount of about 21 per cent. from the pre-war rate of $4.86½.

Rates on Paris also made a further decline, the purchasing power of the franc falling to almost 10½ to the dollar, or a discount of slightly more than 50 per cent.

Demand in South Africa for Canadian Newspaper

A despatch from London says:—Robert Muir, representing South African paper importers, will sail for Canada shortly to negotiate for a large export of Canadian newspaper to that country. He hopes Canadian manufacturers will ease their prices, and ocean carriers their rates, as otherwise it will be cheaper for South Africa to obtain supplies from Scandinavia, from which steamship rates are lower.

Ex-Kaiser's Trial Will Take Place

A despatch from London says:—Speaking at Pontypool, Wales, on Thursday, Sir Gordon Hewart, Attorney-General, said the suggestion was not true that there were any dissensions or waverings with reference to the trial of former Emperor William of Germany. The law officers, he added, were continuing most careful preparations for it. Fifty thousand written statements with reference to the matter of prosecuting criminals for their acts during the course of the war had been examined. From this, the speaker said, the audience could appreciate the magnitude of the task and not be deceived by suggestions that the matter was not receiving the closest attention.

Only Two-thirds Wheat Has Been Moved East

A despatch from Winnipeg says:—It is estimated that not more than two-thirds of the season's grain has been shipped out from the West. To date 70,000,000 bushels have passed over the Canadian Pacific Railway lines, and it is said that between 30,000,000 and 35,000,000 bushels will yet be shipped out. The early cold spell is responsible in part for the slow movement, all available cars on railway lines having to be used for the transportation of coal.

Swimming "Agony" Feared.

Investigations have been made by a life-saving society as to why deep sea fishermen were not taught to swim. It was stated at an inquest at Grimsby, England, recently, that not one fisherman in twenty could swim, and inquiry at all the fishing ports of England and Scotland revealed the astonishing fact that a similar percentage of non-swimmers existed.

The belief among fishermen of all parts is that those who know how to swim only prolonged the agony of drowning.

GETTING READY FOR TOURISTS

ON THE BATTLEFIELDS OF FRANCE.

Influx of Visitors Expected Next Spring Will Help Pay War Bill.

France owes a large amount of money, having been a party to the scene of a large world war. It costs money to support five years of terrible struggling, and the financial gent of that country are devising ways and means of reducing the discouraging disparity between the cash-on-hand and the cash-to-be-paid-out sides of the national ledger.

The money spent by tourists is being counted upon as a means toward paying part of the war bill, according to Jules Dorang, who represents the newly formed Commission of Tourists, the government of France is virtually planning to standardize touring, in order that no guilty dollar may escape. Instead of being a nation covered with tourists roaming at will and without guides, France will have a few well-trodden paths, leading through the heart of the places where enough history was made to add another whiff of its worth to the high school curriculum.

"Why, in Verdun," M. Dorang said, "there are actual accommodations for only fifty, and yet 5,000 people visit the battlefields, with their million dead under this mound of earth, and some not completely under, almost daily."

"It is heartrending to see the hundreds of British women and the people from all parts of France combing through the rows of crosses for their beloved dead. They dare all kinds of hardships."

Providing Hotel Accommodation. As outlined by M. Dorang, the French government is heartily advocating the building of huge temporary hotels, with two hundred and fifty rooms each, equipped with every modern convenience. These, they said, will be established on the ten principal battlefields of France, including Verdun, Montdidier, Soissons, Amiens, Arras, Ypres, Peronne, Pont-a-Mousson, in the Toul sector and in the Argonne.

"The hotels will be built to last for eight or ten years, after which reconstruction will have proceeded to the most devastated points," Mr. Brunswick said. "Undoubtedly, the money spent on the hotels would be realized in the first year of their existence."

"Arrangements will be made in this country, through a bureau to be established by M. Dorang, to prevent congestion at any single point, by the routing of the tourists so that the entire touring body will move methodically and systematically."

"An attempt will be made to fix the itinerary so that five hundred persons will stop at each place one night. They will be given tickets, inscribed with numbers. These will show, for example, that Mr. A will be at Verdun on Monday, Soissons on Tuesday and perhaps the Argonne on Wednesday. His card will be stamped with the number of the room he is to occupy. Mr. B will have a card which entitles him to a room at Verdun on Tuesday, Soissons on Wednesday and the Argonne on Thursday."

"Wounded and maimed soldiers, residents of the battle-scarred territory, will serve as guides. Having lived and fought over the ground, they will be able adequately to give the tourist a lasting impression of the battlefields."

Tourists Spend $150,000,000.

Tourists in France spend on an average of $500 a year, according to M. Dorang. The amounts vary, he said, from tens of thousands of dollars spent by comparatively new millionaires to two or three hundred, spent by school teachers and others in search of some finishing touches to their education.

The 300,000 tourists, at the average named by M. Dorang, would spend $150,000,000, enough to pay, if not for a full battle, at least for a sizable skirmish.

The battle-scarred territory, M. Dorang explained, would not be in demand for agricultural or industrial uses for some years, because the value of the land is but 400 francs an acre, while it is estimated that, under present conditions, the cost of restoring the property would be 4,000 francs an acre.

The Ministry of Public Works, which has the preservation of the battlefields under its jurisdiction, M. Dorang said, has arranged to preserve the "pillboxes," or concrete machine gun nests, the tangles of barbed wire and the underground trench systems, just as they were during the fighting.

The ravages of civilization will not destroy the powerful, appealing beauty of the battlefields, M. Dorang assures all prospective tourists. By an Act of the French legislature the battlefields have been classified as historical reservations, he said. German prisoners are now digging drains on the battlefields.

Redresses Wooden Blocks. A machine has been invented in England to redress worn wooden paving blocks at a rate of 1,000 an hour so they can be used again.

THE TREASURE OF GOOD HEALTH

Easily Maintained Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There is not a nook or corner in Canada, in the cities, the towns, the villages, on the farms and in the mines and lumber camps, where Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have not been used, and from one end of the country to the other they have brought back to breadwinners, their wives and families, the splendid treasure of new health and strength.

You have only to ask your neighbors, and they can tell you of some rheumatic or nerve-shattered man, some suffering woman, ailing youth or anaemic girl who owes present health and strength to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For more than a quarter of a century these pills have been known not only in Canada, but throughout all the world, as a reliable tonic, blood-making medicine.

The wonderful success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is due to the fact that they go right to the root of the disease in the blood, and by making the vital fluid rich and red strengthen every organ and every nerve, thus driving out disease and pain, and making weak, despondent people bright, active and strong. Mr. W. T. Johnson, one of the best known and most highly esteemed men in Lunenburg county, N.S., says: "I am a Provincial Land Surveyor, and am exposed for the greater part of the year to very hard work travelling through the forests by day and camping out by night, and I find the only thing that will keep me up to the mark is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I leave home for a trip in the woods I am as interested in having my supply of pills as provisions, and on such occasions, I take them regularly. The result is I am always fit. I never take cold, and can digest all kinds of food such as we have to put up with hastily cooked in the woods. Having proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as a tonic and health builder, I am never without them, and I lose no opportunity in recommending them to weak people whom I meet."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be kept in every home, and their occasional use will keep the blood pure and ward off illness. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Outwitting the Skunk. Mr. Skunk with his unsavory reputation is probably the best known of our fur bearers. It is an exceptional farm which cannot boast of a skunk den or two. Civilization may drive the larger denizens of the wilds afar, but the skunk readily adapts himself to new conditions, and becomes domesticated to the extent that he is nothing loath to take up his abode under the barn floor or to burrow into a straw stack. While it is true that this animal is in some ways a friend of the farmer, by destroying harmful insects and mice, yet he has a black mark against him by virtue of his relish for chicken. He is a troublesome rooster.

In closely settled neighborhoods Mr. Skunk will often advertise his presence by odoriferous means, and by depleted chicken yards, yet trappers will tramp the hills over and fail to find his den, especially if he has been well trapped. In this case you will very likely find him holding forth in some old building, under a stone pile, or around the roots of a tree.

When you find his den set your trap (No. 142), digging a shallow trench in the ground so that the trap sets level with it, then fasten the chain to a stake and drive it down level with the ground. Too often trappers make the mistake of leaving a stake sticking up above the ground. Cover your trap with straw freely mixed with chicken feathers, and scatter a few grains of corn about. You will find this one of the best sets for skunks, and one that can be used anywhere.

When you catch a skunk, do not muss up the surroundings too much. Skunks often den up ter, or more in one hole, and if things are not too much disturbed, one set may prove very profitable.

Mice make good bait for skunks. If you can find where a skunk visits a

A COAT DESIGN

As anyone who has tried it knows, catching a skunk is only part of the job. Next, and some think most important, comes killing and skinning. The best way to kill a skunk is to shoot him in the centre of the back of the neck with a .22-calibre rifle, using a short cartridge. If you have no gun, break his back with a long pole, which will have the same effect.

Lots of people, especially boys, who skin a skunk advertise the fact for days afterward. However, it is quite possible to do the job in such a manner that half an hour later you need not be a total outcast of society. The secret lies in first greasing the hands well, then use a sharp knife, and be careful to cut only skin deep when peeling the carcass. Unhappy experiences are nearly always the result of cutting too deep. Stand on the wind side of your animal, and when you have finished wash your hands well with kerosene, and the scent will come off with the grease. If you get any scent on your clothes, fresh air and time are the best deodorizers.

Great Britain to Restore Louvain.

The destruction of property in Belgium was the most wanton of Germany's many crimes. Colonel William Barclay Parsons told members of the National Committee for the Restoration of the Library of Louvain University in a letter indorsing the movement.

"Much has been said about the destruction wrought by the Germans in France," the letter said, "but, terrible as it was, the destruction wrought in Belgium is worse."

"It was not caused by shell fire in battle; it was not committed in moments of excitement. Houses, factories and public buildings were intentionally, and in accordance with plans carefully prepared, razed to the ground and their contents carried off to Germany or burned."

"Of these crimes—because they are crimes—the wilful destruction of the great library of Louvain, which by no stretch of the wildest imagination could be deemed a military necessity, stands perhaps as the greatest."

Great Britain has undertaken the restoration of the art and literary treasures of Belgium. It was announced. A committee has been formed to direct the movement. It will replace treasures that were destroyed and trace those carried off to Germany.

The members of the English committee include: Lord Muir Mackenzie, chairman; Sir Frederick G. Kenyon, Sir Alfred T. Davies, Sir Alfred Hopkinson, Edmund Gosse, Hugh Butler, I. Gollane, Henry Guppy, Librarian of the John Rylands Library, Manchester; Dr. M. Rhodes James and Dr. C. T. Hagberg Wright.

New Way of Stumping.

A novel method of clearing a field of stumps is described in the following letter from a farm woman: "I had purchased a steam-pressure canning machine, but didn't have any land on which to raise the tomatoes with which I had hoped to make my canner a profitable investment. Eventually I persuaded my family to let me have the use of a two-acre strip that had been cleared off during the winter. I managed to roll the logs together, and either burn them entire or in small enough pieces to allow me to roll them entirely off the land. But the stumps stood so thick that the land was practically useless."

"Coming in the house one day I found my mother lamenting over the number of holes in the bottom of the heater that was being taken out of the dining-room. I asked for the stove, and was given it, with a lot of questions and wondering looks. I hacked the bottom out of it and carried it out to my new ground and set it over a stump. It worked fine. I put on a joint of pipe to keep the sparks in. It burns them quite a distance into the ground, and does even better when I dig a hole through under the stump next to the taproot, as it seems to draw better. And speaking of drawing, everybody knows how a heater can draw. Of course, the stump has to be chucked up, and it isn't very fast work, but I find I can burn out any stump the stove will fit down over, and do it well and safely."

CHILDHOOD CONSTIPATION

Constipation is one of the most common ailments of babyhood and childhood and unless it is promptly cured will undoubtedly lead to disastrous results. To cure this trouble nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. They are a mild laxative which instantly regulates the bowels, and sweeten the stomach, thus banishing constipation, colic, colds, etc. Concerning them, Mrs. Eugene Vallancourt, St. Mathieu, Que., writes: "When my baby was constipated I gave her Baby's Own Tablets and am well satisfied with the result. I would strongly recommend them to all mothers for this trouble. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont."

Keeping Canned Sausage. In fall when we kill hogs I always fry sausage in cakes just the size we use on the table, put them in glass jars, cover with melted lard, screw up tight, and it is ready for use at any time. I have kept it this way as long as a year. There has always been one drawback—it takes so much lard to cover the cakes, and while it is never entirely lost, it was never so nice to use again. Last year I tried a new scheme. I used only the grease that fried out of the cakes as they were cooking, two or three tablespoons to each jar of sausage; after screwing tight I turned the jar upside down to cool. Of course, the jar was perfectly air-tight when the lard cooled and my sausage kept perfectly. I left the jars standing on the tops, as in the warm weather the lard might melt away, and the sausage would spoil.

English Scheme for Second Garden City. A new project in industrial town building to be called the Second Garden City is in course of formation in England and the development will be on the lines of the First Garden City, which was established at Letchworth in Hertfordshire, fifteen years ago.

The estate chosen is in Hertfordshire, about ten miles from Letchworth, and twenty-one miles from London. Provision will be made for a population of from 40,000 to 50,000.

While the offshoots from the Letchworth experiment have been many, they have taken the form of garden suburbs with the idea of providing better accommodation for the workers in the city and, to that extent, have served a useful purpose. But no single development has embodied the principles of the First Garden City, which postulate a highly organized industrial town complete in itself and surrounded by a permanent agricultural belt, that shall not suffer disintegration by the expanding needs of the urban centre. The idea is that a chain of small towns properly equipped for all the uses and amenities of life and permanently in touch with agricultural areas is better for public welfare than a few large and overgrown cities constantly destroying the land areas that should feed the population of the cities. It also includes the idea of public ownership of land and public services so that the increments in value of the land and the profits of public utilities shall be conserved for the people who create them.

"What do you mean by your form?" asked the agent. "You state that your father's age is 110. That is ridiculous."

"No, it ain't," replied Giles. "Your form says 'if living,' and that's the age he'd be if he was alive now."

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"

The name "Bayer" identifies the only genuine Aspirin—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada. Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally. Tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer" Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Mannesmann & Co. of Germany. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer Manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

SUGGESTIONS OF VITAL INTEREST TO CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS

J. N. CURRIE & CO.

It is common knowledge that there will be a great shortage of Worthy Merchandise for this winter and Christmas trade. Although this store's stocks are much heavier than usual to meet the demands of our increasing trade, yet the increased volume of business has been much beyond that ever expected.

Our early heavy placing orders, prior to the many recent advances in prices, saves 10 to 20 per cent. in price. This enables us to sell, while present stocks last, at prices from 10 to 20 per cent. below today's values.

All Orders for Spring Delivery

Show advances of from 10 to 25 per cent. Still further advances without any guarantee of delivery. Many lines are off the market entirely.

Whether you buy from this store or elsewhere we do not hesitate to say "buy now," and keep your wants well supplied ahead.

Town people can do more satisfactory shopping in the mornings, and avoid the afternoon rush.

Always Buy the Best and Get Most for Your Money

Reliable merchandise and service is the constant aim of this store. How far we have carried this out remains for our customers to say. The best evidence, we think, is the great increase in the number of customers and volume of business.

Sensible Gifts are Always Most Acceptable

This store offers the widest range of suggestions for the whole family. Before you decide, suppose you look around and see what all others are showing, then come and see what this store offers. You will then be more satisfied, so will we. We could print a full page of articles and prices, but to see them and compare "quality" you can better get at the "real value."

Recent shipments of Merchandise of the most desirable class. It is well worth your while to see, if not to buy, now.

ENOUGH OF "LEISURE CLASS"

The Ontario agent general in London waxes enthusiastic over a proposal to move from England to Ontario some of the "new poor" who have been created by the war. These new poor are people of fixed but moderate incomes who find it impossible, as a result of increased income taxes and the higher cost of living, to make their pre-war status as part of the English leisure class.

Something of the kind of movement of population that is now proposed occurred after the Napoleonic wars. Considerable numbers of ex-army officers and "new poor" created by the great wars of that period migrated to Canada about 1820. It is not recorded that these added very much to the real wealth of the country or that they did a great deal towards changing Ontario from a land of forest to one of cultivated farms. That work was done in the main by men and women who came from the British Isles in the thirties, forties and fifties, and the great majority of whom landed here with no other capital than strong hands and willing hearts.

If the "new poor" who propose coming out now are prepared to take off their coats and go to work, real work, well and good. If they are merely to form a leisure class here as they have done in England, there is no special occasion for enthusiasm. We have a sufficient leisure class of our own without importing more of the same kind.

FRUITS OF EVANGELISM

In an article discussing "The Fruits of Evangelism" the London Free Press says:

It will be very apparent to all those interested in evangelism that the fruits of a campaign will not be fully reaped unless the churches organize with the utmost care to conserve the results already achieved and reach out after the many who have been "almost persuaded." Evangelism should go far beyond the appeal for confession and enrolling those who wish into the various communions of the churches. The great commission commands that they not only be disciplined, but disciplined and developed. These people must not only be brought to a knowledge of Christ, but built up in Christian life and activity. It would be a tragedy to enslave a great host on the church rolls of the city and then just leave them to drift without any systematic effort to strengthen and guide their lives into channels of unselfishness and Christian service. They must be taught to know, to observe and to do. Never will they be more receptive or more willing to be disciplined than at the present hour, and it is to be hoped the leaders of the churches will not be slow to systematically conserve the fruits of evangelism.

EASTER EARLY NEXT YEAR

With the New Year less than 30 days away interest naturally begins to quicken in the approach of 1920. Already calendars and almanacs displaying the numerals that mark the coming twelve months are to be seen in the stationery shops.

It is almost unnecessary to state that New Year's Day falls on Thursday, for every youngster in Christendom has already consulted the calendar to find out on what day Christmas will come, and has found out that the festival falls on Thursday. Grow-ups being aware that New Year's Day is just one week later, have drawn the natural conclusion.

Old Christmas, the festival that is known by the name of Epiphany, the Fete des Rois, the Twelfth Night, falls twelve days after Christmas on Tuesday, January 6. Lent will come in early in 1920 and the social season will close with the coming of Ash Wednesday on February 18. February will produce another day of interest to the general public, and that will be Sunday, February 23. For 1920 will be leap year, though unfortunately the twenty-ninth doesn't happen to fall on a week day this time, so some of the usual merry-making will be omitted.

Easter will come early—on April 4, which will make the dates of the two accompanying holidays, Good Friday and Easter Monday, fall on April 2 and 5.

Fishermen will be delighted to hear that May 24, 1920, will come on Monday, so a week-end in the country is assured to those who want it.

The King's Birthday, June 3, a school holiday, and July 1, Dominion Day, will fall on the same day of the week. School children will be interested in the fact that Labor Day, the first Monday in September, will come on September 6, for the high and public schools ordinarily re-open on the day following Labor Day.

Thanksgiving Day is a movable feast and its date will remain undetermined until next September when the Governor-in-Council will proclaim the date of the day set apart for general thanksgiving. If the precedent of the last few years is followed the day chosen will be a Monday in mid-October.

Christmas, 1920, will fall on Saturday.

The almanac announces that there will be several eclipses both of the sun and of the moon. Two of these will be visible in Canada, a total eclipse of the moon on October 27, 1920, and a partial eclipse of the sun on November 10.

The most obstinate corns and warts fall to resist Holloway's Corn Cure. Try it.

COMMENDABLE COURTESY

The warden of Oxford county has invited the wives of all the councillors to the warden's dinner. It is good news, as well as commendable courtesy. As the warden says, the women are now on an equality with the men, and they must begin to take their place in public life. The time will come, no doubt, when women will sit in the county council; it may be that some of us will live to see a woman in the warden's chair and inviting the husbands of the women councillors to her annual dinner. We are living in an age of change, and we hope of progress also.—Sentinel-Review.

OLDEST TUNE IN THE WORLD

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" is said to be the oldest tune in the world. The origin of the air is lost in antiquity but it is supposed to have been learned from the ancient Babylonians by the Egyptians, who popularized it in Africa, and Asia Minor Arabs still sing it. The Crusaders caught the tune from their Saracen enemies, and sang it under the walls of Jerusalem. The air was ultimately carried into Europe, where it survived, in various forms, among the folksongs of the different nations. In 1709, after the defeat at Malplaquet, the French, following a false rumor of the Duke of Marlborough's death in battle, composed a satirical lament, "Malbrook is Off to the War." Like most topical songs, this one was of short-lived popularity, but in 1781 it suddenly echoed from one end of France to the other. The young Marie Antoinette gave birth to an heir, and the baby prince's nurse used to put her royal charge to sleep with the old song of her village home, and as if by magic the song became the craze of the day.

FALL STABLE CLEAN-UP

The Health and Comfort of Live Stock Demand It.

Need of Ventilation, Light and Cleanliness to Avoid Tuberculosis and Other Diseases—Use Whitewash, Whether Sprayed or Brushed, and Brighten Interior.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE observance of the laws of health, so vital to the well-being of man, is regarded even in this enlightened age, with considerable indifference in the treatment of animals upon whose good health that of man himself depends to a considerable degree. That animals are not more affected by disease, of some form or another, to a greater extent, is purely providential, for the sanitary conditions under which they are often reared is of the worst. Why this apathy concerning the state of the stables, in which frequently valuable animals are housed, is difficult to understand, since cattle, any more than man, cannot maintain their health and vigor for long in such unfavorable conditions; yet the stockman who keeps cattle for profit must know that to gain maximum returns for his investments and trouble, and to guard against loss from disease and death reasonable care and comfort and sanitary conditions are necessary.

The first considerations to this end are ventilation, light and cleanliness. These essential elements of sanitation should be attended to at least once every year. This may be most conveniently done during the early fall before the cattle are housed for the winter. Effective sanitation is required to carry away the foul air and maintain constant and adequate supply of fresh air. The window space should be ample so that every crack and crevice of the interior may be flooded with light and sunshine, the source of health and destroyer of germs. Dirt and filth make productive breeding places for insects and bacteria. Cleanliness gets rid of conditions which produce them and prevents the possibility of infection and contagion, reducing possible loss from disease to a minimum. That much-dreaded disease, tuberculosis, in a measure, the product of dark, dirty, ill-ventilated stables. It is caused by organism or germs gaining entrance into the animal's system with the food. It is not easy to detect, and usually, when symptoms become evident it is too late to apply any remedy, hence the necessity of making every effort to secure and maintain sanitary conditions in the stable. Every fall, then, the stable should be systematically cleaned; cowbats swept from wall and ceilings; accumulated dirt and manure removed from manger trough, window-sills and all recesses in walls; the fresh air intakes and foul air outlets put in order; all cracks and holes in floor and walls with cement; replace all broken glass in windows and clean them; disinfect the whole stable thoroughly with some good disinfectant, such as chloride of lime, crude carbolic acid or zenoleum, which can be easily applied with a scrap pump or a watering can with a fine nozzle. Give particular attention to stalls which have been occupied by stock suffering from contagious disease or have been used by animals during parturition.

Then prepare your whitewash and do not postpone it because you do not possess a barrel spraying outfit. The whitewash brush is an effective and efficient tool—use it. Small brushes are best and may take you a little longer time to do. There are many good whitewash recipes. President Grant used the following to whitewash the White House in Washington: Take a bushel of unsalted lime, slake with warm water, cover it during the process to retain the steam, strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer; add a peck of salt, the same previously well dissolved in warm water, add three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stir in boiling hot, add one-half pound of glue which has been previously dissolved over a slow fire and add five gallons of hot water to the mixture; stir well and let it stand for a few days, covering it up to keep outside or inside work and it retains its brilliancy for many years. Disinfectant may be added or coloring matter may be put in and made to any hue desired.—Prof. J. Evans, O. A. College, Guelph.

Live Stock Scarce In Europe.

France has 2,366,000 fewer cattle than in 1914; Italy, 996,000; Denmark, 345,000; Sweden, 599,000; Germany, 2,200,000; and Austria-Hungary, considerable. These figures alone show a decrease of 6,306,000 head of cattle and many countries which have suffered are not named. The sheep decrease in France, Italy, Denmark, and Holland alone is over two and one-half millions, and pigs there has been a wholesale decrease to the number of 24,952,000 in France, Italy, Denmark, Sweden, Holland and Germany. Denmark, Canada's strongest competitor on the British bacon market is 1,873,000 short of a normal supply of pigs. Germany is 19,396,000 short of her 1914 hog population.

These figures should prove interesting to the Ontario live stock breeder. Reserves of food material in the world are very low. Stock with which to increase these reserves is not up to normal numerically. Indications are that a good demand must continue for the finished product of the farm.

THE LATE MRS. WILSON

Mrs. O. E. W. Wilson, who passed away at Glencoe on November 27th, after a short illness, was the wife of the late Thomas Wilson, M.D., of Leamington. She was born at Warwick and was a daughter of the late Rev. John Webster of Tara, Ont. Mrs. Wilson resided for a number of years at Wardsville when her father was pastor of the Methodist church in that village, and she received her high school education there, afterwards graduating at the Hamilton Ladies' College. After their marriage she and her husband lived in Tara for about twenty years. They then moved to Leamington, where the doctor lived in retirement for about five years until his death in August, 1912. Mrs. Wilson then came to Glencoe and made her home here up to the time of her death.

As a true daughter of the parsonage, Mrs. Wilson was always ready to give assistance in church work, especially with her musical talent. She was very successful in her choir work, and in that way was able to help when others could not. Shortly after coming to Glencoe Mrs. Wilson was engaged as organist of the Methodist church, which position she filled with credit to herself and satisfaction to the congregation up to a few weeks ago when she resigned owing to illness.

An impressive service was conducted in the Methodist church on Saturday, November 29th, and the remains were taken to London and interment made in Mount Pleasant cemetery there.

BALTIMORE ON THE TOBOGGAN

Baltimore, Dec. 9.—Baltimore is on a toboggan that is headed straight for hell and the devil with his pitchfork is prodding it along on the downward path," said Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, the "Female Billy Sunday," who has come to convert sinners here, in an interview.

Why? Because it has substituted for the real things in life the devil's counterfeit. It patronizes Old Nick's church, the theatre, where the worshippers bow down to the gods of style, money, popularity, social standing and unreason.

Because it frequents cabarets—the spider's parlor into which he invites innocent flies—death traps in which the victims hopelessly beat their wings against the walls.

Because it visits dance halls, the floors of which are full of trapdoors which open continuously and drop hundreds of silly, deluded dupes by direct express route to the very pits of hell.

Because its women dress immodestly, going forth as an Indian to the fray with face painted and armed with a vanity bag to answer the purpose of the tomahawk.

Because it enjoys card playing, flirting—in short, because it has substituted the spangle-dangle of the five and ten cent store for the real pearls of joy.

Mrs. McPherson will try to divert the city back to the straight and narrow path in a series of evangelistic services and miracle meetings. "I have witnessed some miraculous cures during my ministry," Mrs. McPherson said. "At Los Angeles a man who had been suffering from a dislocated hip for years and who hobbled along on crutches was made to walk. He came to the meeting a tottering old man; he left it almost dancing. All kinds of ailments have been corrected, cataracts have been removed and the blind have been made to see. But it is not done by me, but through the grace of God and because of the faith of the patient."

MEDICAL INSPECTION IN THE SCHOOLS

As medical inspection of the public schools is now being widely discussed a word of explanation may not be out of place.

It has been found that a large percentage of school failures are due to minor ailments or defects that could easily be remedied if taken in time. In order to help in this matter the Department of Education provides a nurse and doctor to visit each school where their services are asked for and give each child a careful examination. If anything is discovered to be wrong it is reported fully to the parents, who are asked to be present when the examination is being made. They can then decide what they should do. If minor operations are required the doctor and nurse are prepared to perform them at the request of the parents, but there is no compulsion in the matter.

The attitude of the department is merely to assist in the work of having all school children meet on terms of equality as far as health is concerned. There is no compulsion and there is no expense to the school section inspected. The only expense involved is that of taking the doctor and nurse from school to school, and that is attended to by the Women's Institute. The Women's Institute of Appleton is conducting an inspection of schools Nos. 5, 6 and 13. The members of the institute will be glad to give information to anyone who wishes to learn about the subject. It is hoped to have this matter decided at the annual school meetings and the members of the Women's Institute ask that all parents will attend.

All mothers can put away anxiety regarding their suffering children when they have Mother Graves' Worm Expeller to give relief. Its effects are sure and lasting.

There was a good response to the invitation given last week to attend a bee to clean up the debris of the skating rink, which collapsed in the big storm. A good job was made in piling up the salvaged lumber, etc. Nothing definite has yet been decided as to what steps will be taken to rebuild the rink.

Vera, the little baby girl of Thomas Diamond, Monday morning swallowed a pin which had by some means become concealed in a piece of bread she was eating. She was rushed to the doctor's office where, fortunately, it was possible to extricate the pin, which had become lodged in her throat.

Nearly everybody, especially the children, are talking about the "terrible storm" said to have been predicted for about the 17th of December by one Foster, who pretends to foretell the weather. An exchange says this man's recent weather predictions have been very close to the mark and that it will be well to have everything nailed down tight. Another alarmist assures us there are three large spots on the sun and looks for some dire calamity to happen this month. The goose-bone, however, has not yet been consulted.

The Game of Nations

By DONNA SHERWOOD BOGERT.

Miss Dorothea, who sneered at the luxury of a maid, hurriedly slipped into her unbecoming garments, pinned up her straggling locks and hurriedly descending found him apparently enjoying the perfectly cooked chops and hot, crispy rolls.

"Dear, dear!" She could not entirely keep a little quaver out of her voice. "How I shall miss you, to be sure. Just where had you thought of going, Basil, and what induced you to make up your mind so suddenly?"

With a nervous rattle Trevanion set his cup into its saucer. In spite of his iron self-control, he felt irritable and strangely weak. Was he going to break down and plead for sympathy at Miss Dorothea's willing hands? Not if he knew himself!

"I'm going up over the Canadian line. At present I cannot tell more. I'll write you when I'm definitely settled. His long fingers drummed an impatient tattoo on the table."

"Can I do anything for you?"

"Yes, you can. There was a girl in my office, Miss Herford—Peggy I think she called her; she once did me what she considered a favor. I should be glad if you'd look after her a bit—see that she finds another position—and all that." The explanation was clumsy but a strict sense of justice prompted his thought for Peggy's welfare. She had evidently believed her course of action to be for his best interests and Trevanion never liked to remain in debt.

Miss Dorothea was frankly bewildered. Was this a possible romance? Her faded cheeks flushed a delicate pink. Democratic in sentiment, she would have welcomed the lowliest mate for her brother, providing that the girl proved sweet and sufficiently well bred for her approval. Leaping into the future, her lonely fancy pictured herself in the role of beneficent auntie, cuddling little, downy heads.

"I shall be very glad to help you, Basil," she quavered. "Is she—is she pretty, brother?"

Trevanion frowned. "What's that got to do with it?"

"Nothing," she hastily replied, "of course it has nothing to do with it. I just—wondered."

At the completion of the meal Trevanion kissed her affectionately.

"Well, good-bye, sis. Take good care of yourself."

The hands Miss Dorothea clasped about his shoulders turned suddenly tremulous. How lonely the great, silent house would be without him! "Good-bye, Basil," she murmured wistfully. "Don't stay too long—and—promise me that if you need money, you'll let me know." Her composure broke for an instant. "I have given every cent, every cent, Basil, to have saved your business for you? I offered—but you wouldn't take it!"

"I don't gamble on a woman's dollars," said Trevanion, regarding her with eyes that softened. "You're a good sort, Dottie! I shall never forget that you were willing to go under with me."

"And you'll write, brother, when you know what your plans are?"

A smile of grim amusement played about Trevanion's lips.

"I shall probably write you long before that," he made reply.

"Lady to see you, miss!" She came in a swell car, I left her in the parlor. Thus Peggy's landlady announced Miss Trevanion's arrival at her humble abode.

Peggy was dressed for the street and in the act of putting on a pair of well-worn cotton gloves.

"To see me? I can't imagine—"

She ran downstairs humming a gay, little tune beneath her breath.

The occupant of the parlor, however, did not suggest, so far as appearance went, any connection with the swell car. Her badly-fitting clothes were out of date and her faded face under a dowdy, black hat held a wistful appeal.

"I am Peggy Herford."

"I am Basil Trevanion's sister," said Miss Dorothea. "You were his stenographer? He asked me to see you. You—I—" she hesitated uncomfortably, and the girl watching her was conscious of a desire to shake a bit of spirit into her caller's limp shoulders.

"Would you rather talk to me outside?" she questioned gently. The parlor was not a room to inspire confidences. Peggy hated its depressing atmosphere.

"Where you going out?" asked Miss Dorothea. "The car is waiting. I can take you anywhere you wish to go."

The girl tucked a friendly arm into Miss Dorothea's. Somehow it did not seem as though she were taking a liberty; the little lady was so pathetic, so like a helpless child. The lonely spirit of the older woman responded to the touch of human companionship.

"I knew you would be—sweet," she said.

Peggy's heart almost skipped a beat at the unexpected comment and she wondered with a strange little thrill of expectancy just why Trevanion's sister had sought her out.

It seemed like part of a delightful dream to rest against the luxurious cushions and glide swiftly through the crisp, bright morning. How often, trailing in to work on reluctant feet, she had envied the occupants of passing machines and sneered at the intolerant air with which she imagined they regarded the world of pedestrians. Now Peggy herself was for a moment one of that same disdainful class, her shabby gloves and carefully mended skirt no more inconspicuous than Miss Dorothea's skimpy hat with the faded clump of violets against the brim.

"I cannot tell you," murmured her companion presently, "how grateful I am for all you have done for my brother." Trevanion had left her with not the least idea as to the service Miss Herford had rendered him, but Miss Dorothea, faithful soul, was blindly obeying instructions.

With a slight start Peggy recalled herself from the world of unrealities. "It was nothing," she returned modestly. "I should have done as much for anyone." She caught herself up sharply. It actually sounded as though she were quoting from a book!

Trevanion's sister looked disappointed. Was there something disparaging to Basil behind the apparent indifference of the girl's answer?

"Wasn't he always kind to you?" she said reproachfully, and Peggy, with a sense of helpless dismay, awoke to the fact that there was a deeper meaning underlying Miss Dorothea's words than the casual question appeared to imply. The older woman spoke solicitously and intimately; this question linked itself with that other queer remark, "I knew you would be—sweet." The hot blood rushed to Peggy's cheeks.

"Of course he was kind!"

Miss Dorothea regarded her brilliant color approvingly.

"That's better," she nodded, "really better. I was afraid perhaps you did not care. Basil is so much older—"

Peggy's indignant spirit fretted against the false position in which this woman's romantic fancy seemed to place her. Good heavens! What had inspired such a thought in her mind? But what was there to say? How would it sound were she suddenly to deny Miss Dorothea's foolish, unspoken belief?

"Did Mr. Trevanion decide on Canada?" she questioned casually.

"Yes, somewhere up over the Canadian line. He is to write me as soon as he is settled."

"Luckily," said Peggy, "it is nearly spring. Mr. Trevanion is liable to find the northern winters lonely."

"You have lived in the north?"

"Well, my brother, on a Canadian ranch. I have only been in New York two years."

"Your brother? Ah—yes—I see—"

Miss Dorothea smiled a sly irritating smile. Then, as sudden thought of her mission obtruded itself and her mild, blue eyes became anxious.

"Basil would be sure that you had found another position. I promised to see to it for him. He seemed worried."

"I have one in view," interposed Peggy quickly. She had one in view, though the head of the firm might be interviewed.

Miss Dorothea persisted. "A good one?" she asked.

"Fine," lied Peggy laconically, who felt she had now committed herself, "in the—Building, Fifth Ave. That's where I am bound for this morning."

Miss Dorothea spoke to the chauffeur who in the car slowly turned, heading in the general direction of the great thoroughfare.

When they reached Peggy's destination, Miss Dorothea leaned eagerly forward from her seat in the car.

"Basil will be so relieved! I'll write him immediately I learn his address. And—Miss Herford—I wish you would come to see me sometimes. I shall be lonely now that my brother is gone. He is my all!"

The girl murmured an inarticulate reply and then stood irresolute on the curb, watching the blue machine twindle into the distance.

Foremost in her mind was the disturbing thought that she had allowed Miss Dorothea to depart believing that she, Peggy, was in love with Trevanion and he with her.

CHAPTER IV.

After days of traveling, during which he wished himself back again in his comfortable home, Trevanion left the train at Calgary and sought a hotel for the night. He was tired and dusty and felt desperately ill, the hopelessness of his mind weighing intolerably on body and spirit. Yesterday he had wired Miss Herford's brother, "I am Basil Trevanion's sister," said Miss Dorothea. "You were his stenographer? He asked me to see you. You—I—" she hesitated uncomfortably, and the girl watching her was conscious of a desire to shake a bit of spirit into her caller's limp shoulders.

"Would you rather talk to me outside?" she questioned gently. The parlor was not a room to inspire confidences. Peggy hated its depressing atmosphere.

and thrilled to the majesty of the spectacle. Those ice-kissed fangs seemed to offer a subtle challenge—to throw down a stern gauntlet to this man who had dared seek salvation within their shadow. Trevanion regarded them long and when he descended to breakfast he was not quite the hopeless, apathetic being of yesterday. Some spirit of the West had stirred in his sluggish blood; a whisper of hope had quickened and called to his dormant virility.

Canning and Drying With Electricity.

Experiments have recently been carried out by the United States Department of Agriculture to ascertain the best methods of using electricity in the home for preserving, canning and drying fruit and vegetables.

By using the hot plate of an electric range in exactly the same way as a coal or gas stove an excellent product was obtained, but the cost was too high. A second series of tests was made, in which the oven of the electric range was used, thus obtaining the sterilization temperature by baking instead of boiling. The water bath was omitted and the cans were placed on a rack in the oven, try these means a reduction in the cost was effected.

The electric fireless cooker proved the most efficient method of all, the cost being only one half that of the oven method. When employing this apparatus, the material is blanched and packed as usual.

Placed in the cooker and the electricity is turned on full strength until the thermometer registers 150 deg. The switch may then be turned down to the lowest heat, as 40 watts has been found sufficient to keep the jars at the sterilizing temperature.

The reason for the much more economical operation of electric ovens and fireless cookers is to be found in the fact that the source of heat and the articles being cooked can be enclosed together in an airtight space, while with fuel ranges a large amount of heat is unavoidably lost into the air.

Drying of vegetables was also tried, using first the oven of an electric range, then a combination of range and electric fan, and, finally, the fan alone. The cheapest way is to make use of the residual heat left in the oven following some cooking operation. This is sufficient to start the drying process, then, when the oven is nearly cool, the door is opened and an ordinary electric fan is placed inside. This soon finishes the drying process and also prevents the oven from rusting.

Influenza Plague Invades Australia.

Reports from Australia indicate that a recrudescence of the influenza epidemic occurred during the recent winter (which synchronizes with our summer). There were from 1,200 to 1,500 cases as a daily hospital average in Victoria. The mortality in Melbourne was from 10 to 12 deaths daily. In Sydney, a severe outbreak occurred in June, the mortality assuming serious proportions for one or two weeks.

With milder weather in mid-July, the outbreak rapidly subsided.

We, in Canada, are now sustaining a prolonged cold spell, hence the necessity for the public to bear in mind that there is the danger of a recurrence of the disease in Canada.

Every individual should take precautions against infection. Keep the body warm and guard against sudden changes of temperature. Guard also against fetid air. The more the bodily heat can be kept up by natural and the less by artificial means, the better.

As "natural means" we include heavy clothing, nourishing food, air well supplied with oxygen and physical exercise. Artificial heat is secured by fire through the various heating systems.

Persons who are well fed and well clothed and who moves briskly can easily support prolonged exposure to the severest cold. The greatest danger in Canada is the shock to the system produced by getting over-heated indoors and then going outside in zero weather. This is also a prolific cause of colds.

Men Canadian houses are over-heated in winter. Their average temperature is often higher than during the summer months and certainly higher than in spring and autumn.

It is unnecessary, it wastes fuel and it endangers health. Women are prone to wear too tight clothing in winter. It would be much safer for them to dress more warmly and have their houses ten degrees cooler.

Education to Cost More In England.

Education is to cost more in England. That is a fact most parents and youngsters of school age have already discovered, and fees are likely to go up still further in the near future.

All the public schools are experiencing such a rush of applications as was never before known. It is not merely Eton and Harrow and the one or two other schools with some "cachet" that are flooded in this manner, but also all those others, many of them equally as old, which are not quite just so well known.

To secure his son's admission to the right club the fashionable father of a generation or so ago would enter his heir's name on the club's books almost as soon as he was born. It would appear as if something of the sort will have to be done pretty soon to secure admission to some of the public schools.

Woman's Interests

Being Just to One's Children.

The unbiased observer was visiting the Heath family, in which there are three children—Max, who is thirteen; Gwen, eleven, and Dolly, four. The boy and the baby are generally easy to discipline, but there seems to be constant friction between Gwen and her mother, so much so that continual pointing bids fair to spoil what nature intended to be a really beautiful little face. To the unbiased observer, the fault appears to lie largely with the mother, and if the case were an unusual one it would perhaps not be worthy of record; but similar misunderstandings so often exist between parent and child that the consideration of the following incidents may be of value.

Gwen is not a bad child, but her mother seems to expect disobedience from her, or, at least, a lack of cheerfulness. For example, Gwen had been sent to bed at 8 o'clock Sunday evening, ostensibly because she was sulky; really because her mother thought she was tired and needed extra rest. The child was not given the real reason, however, and she went upstairs full of the rebellious feeling that a most unmerited punishment had been meted out to her.

Max, for his supper that evening, was given a large, fine banana, one of several which had been bought as a special treat. The next morning at breakfast two similar bananas were put at the places of the two older children. Gwen was particularly delighted, for she, of course, had had no banana the night before. She was smiling and happy when she took her place at the table, even though Max had already had one.

Then Dolly, the baby, arrived and began to whimper because she had been forgotten in the distribution of fruit.

"Give Dolly half of yours, Gwen," said her mother.

Gwen's smiles faded.

"But, mother," she said rather plaintively, "why can't Max give her some of his? He had one last night" (which would appear to be a logical and a decidedly reasonable question).

The mother did not think so, however. "Give me your banana, Gwen," she demanded.

Gwen passed it over without a word, evidently having learned the futility of expecting justice from that quarter.

Her mother cut the fruit in half, gave one part to the baby and put the other on her own fruit plate, where it remained untouched until it was removed to the pantry. Max, in the meanwhile, devoured his prize with gusto.

Gwen made no comment of any kind, but she ate the rest of her breakfast with small appetite and with a face, wherein sulks had replaced smiles, and with a very sore little heart she departed for school.

"Don't you think I did right?" asked the mother afterward of the unbiased observer, who didn't feel so very unbiased after all.

It was no time for polite camouflage. "If you really want to know," came the reply, "I think you did entirely wrong. Gwen was quite logical in her action, and perfectly courteous. I should have thought she was lacking in intelligence if she hadn't objected."

The mother looked surprised.

"But she is so sulky about everything," she complained. "I want her to learn to mind cheerfully."

"She'll never do that," remarked the observer, "while she feels such injustice in the 'powers that be'."

"Do you think it was unjust to send her to bed last night?" the mother went on, in a slightly injured tone.

The unbiased observer paused—but she had been asked for an opinion and she gave it.

"What heavier punishment could you possibly inflict if she is ever really bad?" she asked. "Social ostracism—just because she looked cross! What would happen if our sins were punished in the same ratio?"

And yet the observer wonders if she will ever be invited to make another visit.

Homely Wrinkles.

Fasten the covers on the restless child's crib with a pair of horse-blanket pins. They will slide up and down on the bars of the crib every time he turns over, but he cannot throw off the covers.

New, clean blankets should have the edges faced on both sides with cheese-cloth, or some thin washable material. The facing should be twelve inches deep, to protect the blankets and keep them clean. When soiled this covering is easily removed and washed.

When making feather pillows it is well to make a cheese-cloth bag much larger than the pillow is to be. Put the feathers in this, then put it in the ticking. When the feathers need cleaning pull out the bag and wash well through soapuds and several rinsings and hang to dry in an airy place, shaking and beating until perfectly dry.

Use a wooden spoon or an agate-ware skimmer or ladle to take pickles from an earthen jar; vinegar attacks metals, causing dangerous compounds, which are liable to be imparted to pickles handled with a metal spoon.

Use a biscuit cutter to cut the crust for meat pie, and place the pieces closely together over the meat. They are sure to be baked through, as the spaces between the biscuits allow the steam to escape and the dish has a more attractive appearance.

When making cocoa save time and fuel and have an ever-ready drink in this way: Boil for one-half hour on the stove or for two hours in the fire-less cooker, enough cocoa, water and sugar for twenty cupsful, instead of making four cupsful hurriedly without boiling at five different times. The cocoa flavor is improved by boiling, while simmering spoils the flavor. To serve this cocoa add hot milk, or, for a delicious hot-weather drink, add ice-cold milk.

Potato dressing requires less bread than the ordinary poultry dressing. It calls for two cupsful of hot mashed potatoes, one and one-quarter cupsful of soft stale bread crumbs, one cupful of finely chopped salt pork, one-half cupful of finely chopped onion, one-third cupful of fat, one egg, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, one teaspoonful of sage. Mix the potato, bread crumbs, fat, egg, salt and sage, then add pork and onion, and mix well.

It is well to know how to use the table left-overs—how to serve them the second time so they will be palatable. But in these times when we are all making extra efforts to use economy and thrift in our households, it is well to consider that many of the left-overs need not be. While it may not be possible always to know just how much to cook, surely close study will enable the housewife not to cook day after day, more food than is needed.

A woman of wide reputation told with evident pride, when addressing a gathering of women, that she was teaching her neighbor how to economize by helping her to make use of the food left from her meals.

The speaker said she received three slices of toast which were about to be thrown out, and suggested that they be made into croutons to serve with soup. Next she told that her neighbor's family of four always had a cooked cereal, either oatmeal or some wheat preparation.

for breakfast. "There was always a coffee-cupful left," she went on, "and the housewife had been throwing it away. I told her to use it to thicken soup."

Now, it seemed to some of the speaker's hearers as if the neighbor's family must subsist upon soup. The helper did not go back far enough. To have a coffee-cupful of cereal left each morning showed a lack of foresight. And three slices of toast left from one meal showed the same. One cannot tell exactly how much will be eaten, but in a family where economy is necessary it would be better to let some member of the family occasionally finish with a slice of bread cut fresh from the loaf when wanted, or with a handful of crackers. And cold oatmeal can be added to that cooking in a double boiler and reheated without injuring it in the least.

A Breeder's Problem.

There are many who do not believe very strongly in a careful, scientific breeding. There are many scrub cows that are enormous producers, both in quality and quantity of milk. Then there are many pure-bred cows that are poor producers. A case has come to our notice of a pure-bred cow which produced about twelve thousand pounds of milk in a year, mated with a sire whose dam produced eleven thousand pounds in a year, and the result was a daughter which was capable of producing less than six thousand pounds of milk in a year. It is because of occurrences like this that some dairy farmers look with some suspicion on scientific breeding of dairy cows.

The principle of atavism, which is breeding back to some primitive type, is well shown in such cases. This principle is frequently shown, not only in the breeding of cattle, but in the breeding of all other animals. In such cases the sire and dam that bred back should never again mate. It may be that the fault was not exclusively in either, but in the combination of blood. The intelligent breeder will see to it that such offspring is sent to the shambles.

The experienced breeder can usually see before the calf is two weeks old whether it will be suited to dairy purposes. The dairy animal will have a thin neck. There is a peculiar softness in the skin of a good dairy animal that all experienced animal breeders will quickly notice.

It is a fact that a great deal depends on the way calves are brought up. The best heifer calf may easily be spoiled by being fed fattening food, or by semi-starvation before it is a year old. Both of such procedures are injurious to the calf's digestion. If this is ruined in calfhood, the cow will be a poor eater, and therefore a poor producer, no matter what the sire and dam may have been.

It would also seem to go without saying that a great deal also depends on the way the mature animal is fed. Fine blooded animals require the best of care and treatment if they are to do to their best. If the owner is not able or prepared to give his cows the required treatment, or is too negligent to do so, his fine-blooded cows are certain to sink to a level with, if not below, that of the scrub cows. And so it often occurs that the best bred animals are often branded as cheats, only because their owners did not properly treat and sustain them.

How Our Silo Has Paid for Itself.

It is to me a great mystery that so many farmers are still without silos. Having been in use for a quarter of a century, they are certainly beyond the experimental stage. They have brought success to agriculturists in every country. Most farmers who have found their silos unprofitable have not used them rightly, or have made some serious mistake in their construction.

Before building our silo we had only ten cows; yet, to provide ample forage for them, winter and summer, good years and bad, was sometimes a difficult job. Now we have 20 cows, and it is easier to provide feed for them than it was to provide for the other ten. Besides, our silage-fed cows are in better condition, look sleeker, and produce a higher grade of milk. For the last two years every cow has produced on the average of 400 pounds of butter per year. This butter, we have ascertained, has cost us ten cents a pound less to produce than butter coming from cows not fed silage.

Comparing figures with one of our neighbors who has no silo, we find that each of our cows cost us, per year, $13 less to feed than his. We are also able to produce beef $2 cheaper per 100 pounds than he can. Figuring at this rate, we came to the conclusion that our silo earned, last year, at least $265. Moreover, we saved much grain feed by giving the silage, and also the horses, when not working. Indeed, I believe that our silo has saved enough to build a new one each year for the last four or five years.

Sometimes when the corn crop has been short we have made good silage from millet, clover, oats, or rye. We have fed this with success even in winter, but mostly we feed it during the latter part of summer, after the corn silage is fed out. In fall, again, we fill the silo with corn, and if the silage is not enough we refill it later with cornstalks taken from shocks in the field. The stalks, if soaked with water, can easily be cut, and make good silage.

We always try to have a supply of silage for summer. The cattle need a cool, succulent feed during hot weather, and what is better than corn silage? Some summers, also, the pastures dry up, and then silage comes in handy. Besides, high-priced pasture lands do not pay. Since we began feeding silage in summer, we have had only half as much pasture land as formerly, and our cows have milked as they never did before. A piece of land for raising silage crops will produce five or six times as much feed as will a pasture of equal size.

Every farmer having 10 cows or more needs a silo. Without one it is hard to do a profitable dairy business. A good silo will stand as long as any other building. We built ours seven years ago, and it is still in good condition.

The Dairy & Poultry

Many a dark and gloomy stable could be made cheerful and far more healthful to the cows and their caretakers by the expenditure of a very few dollars invested in a number of generous-sized windows suitably placed. Germs causing practically all of the dangerous diseases thrive in the dark, and direct sunlight is an effective germicide. Not only is sunlight health insurance for stock, but the cheer, comfort, and contentment that sunlight affords counts profitably in milk and meat production when the animals must spend the major part of every day indoors.

The same window opening properly screened in warm weather affords free circulation of air, while barring out flies. The objection sometimes raised against large windows as a means of losing much warmth by radiation at night can be readily met by using inside hinged wooden shutters, or spring-roller building-paper shades.

If the pullets have not been treated for lice it will pay to give them the bluing treatment at once. One application will protect them until late in the spring and it may be only lice that are keeping down the egg yield.

The pullets that lay first will probably be the best breeders in the spring and it will pay to band such birds and use them exclusively in the breeding pens. Even though trap nests are not used the farmer will doubtless be in the poultry house often enough during December and January to spot most of the pullets which frequently go to the nests. If the farm flock is to be improved the work must start in the winter with careful selection and management of the pullets.

Do not lose eggs during the cold weather by allowing them to freeze in the nests. When eggs are worth six or seven cents each it does not take many of them to pay a farmer very well for his trip through the snow to the poultry house.

Smothering Out Quack Grass On My Farm.

It seems to me I have never seen the treatment for quack grass which I have been practicing for some time with gratifying results, mentioned in any farm paper. I do not use the spring-tooth or have observed that the farmers who do use it have plenty of quack grass.

For several years I have been following the practice of always going the same way over the quack with wheel or disk harrow, smoothing harrow, or cultivator where there is quack. Go the same way in the row when cultivating every time. The idea is to keep crowding it under and covering it. If one goes the opposite way in the row alternately, it just puts the quack in good growing condition.

I prefer the disks to be dull, so as to not cut the roots when disking, because the more you cut the roots the more quack you have. Sometimes quack is hard to pull, and at other times it pulls easily. One should watch and take advantage of it when it is weak.

Ivory-backed or ebony brushes can be quickly cleaned by rubbing dry bran into them and shaking them well to remove the grain afterwards. Lots of people dislike using water and ammonia, because they believe it injures the backs of the brushes.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

A cold has made me lose my voice. This really is a boon to me. I'm in the limelight now at last. And how I love the sympathy.

Farm Meat for Farm Tables.

We have discovered in our neighborhood a plan for providing a generous and comparatively inexpensive meat supply for our tables. I know many who raise cattle but who rarely kill a beef because they feel they cannot afford it. But they are among those who waste too much of what the packer is valuable by-product—namely, blood, entrails, feet, head, and horns.

Let me tell you how we manage. Our poultry and pork are home-grown, killed and prepared.

For our beef, mutton, and veal we aim to co-operate with at least three neighbors, and each one of this group of four families butchers one small young beef and one or more veals and fat sheep each year.

A suitable butchering shed was prepared where the work is conveniently done, and provision is made for saving all the blood and every part of the carcass. The bones below the knees and hocks, and the feet, are cleaned the same as hogs' feet, and boiled until the meat is perfectly tender and slips easily from the bones. The meat, is then seasoned with salt, pepper, a pinch of sage, a little flour, a minced onion, and a beaten egg stirred in. This is carefully mixed, then dropped by spoonfuls into hot fat and fried. Thus handled, what is too often wasted is to us about the best relished part of our beefs. The water is then evaporated from the oil in which the feet and leg bones were cooked by boiling, and the meat's foot oil resulting is strained and bottled for harness and leather dressing.

The heads of beef, sheep, and calf are carefully cut up with a cleaver on a block, and are used for head cheese, hash, and sausage. The tongue boiled and served cold is a titbit high in favor. So, too, with heart and liver—every bit becomes appetizing meat for our family.

Instead of the customary way of frying liver, I slice it thinly, season, roll in flour, and fry in boiling fat like doughnuts, putting in the oven to brown, and turning when one side is browned. It's then no longer beef liver.

The heart I stew until tender, then bake with a dressing made of bread crumbs, seasoned as for chicken and made rich with butter. This makes a dish fit for a king.

The tail goes into "ox-tail" soup. All bones are ground for the laying hens, and the best of the entrails become tripe or sausage casings. Of course, every ounce of tallow leaf and "rough" is rendered, the best going into a lard compound shortening, and the poorest for soap-making.

All of these too often wasted by-products supply us with practically half as much value in meat as do a quarter of the animals butchered, and the variety furnished is much appreciated.

In cold weather some of the choicest roasts and steaks can be kept for future eating, some of the remainder is corned and some dried.

According to our reckoning, this plan of farm meat supply we are now making use of furnishes us about three times as much choice meat as we would get for the same expenditure were it bought at retail prices, as practiced by many.—L. A.

No Danger.

"In our family of five there are three boys and two girls. All of us are fine and strapping and have the color of apples in our cheeks. But here is the problem. My father, born in Ireland, was a fine, strong man who came over here the picture of health. When we all grew up to from 11 to 18 he contracted a cold resulting in his death from consumption. Does that doom all of us? He was very careful and since he died, three years ago, we are nervous. None of us so far as I know, ever had a cold; but does the first sign of a cold doom us to that disease? I have heard so much about the disease being hereditary that it is in my mind all the time. Please uplift a and imagination that I have upon myself."

Answer—My good friend, consumption is in the vast majority of cases neither a family nor a hereditary disease. It is in most cases acquired after birth. It has been learned beyond peradventure that the parent very rarely indeed transmits to the offspring the germ of tuberculosis (consumption), though a tendency to the disease (that is, a weakness of the body by which it may become fruitful soil for the implantation, and the growth of the weed-like germ) may be transmitted.

I am sorry to say that one of the races which are prone to such tendency is that of your forebears. If, however, no one of your family has shown any sign of the disease since your good father's death three years ago, you may be sure he has not transmitted to any one of you the disease itself. Tuberculosis has often been called a house disease for the reason that any careless sufferer may emit in his sputum the germs which others may inhale. But the germ of this disease cannot live and be dangerous for more than a few days outside any living body. Therefore, three years after, you need have no fear. Banish fear from your mind. For herein lies a potent predisposition to disease. Live the hygienic life, watch out (but not to any morbid degree) for the early signs of tuberculosis, go to a good doctor at the first sign of trouble, and there is no reason why you should not all, the five of you, boys and girls, live to fourscore and more.

Questions and Answers.

My little grandchild aged 3 1/2 years has had epileptic fits occasionally for the last year or two and is extremely nervous all the time. When she was born she was injured on the back of the head by the instruments used by the doctor. Do you think this injury has caused the fits? Please let me know if these fits can be cured, as the child is remarkably bright, perfectly healthy and normal in every way with the exception of being nervous.

Answer—Are you sure the child was injured at birth? In some cases of childbirth instruments have to be used if the mother's life is to be saved. People, I am sorry to say, sometimes unfairly attribute maladies to the procedures which doctors may institute. In any event, epilepsy may be due to an injury within the skull and in some such cases operation has resulted in its cure. In most cases of the disease, however, the cure is difficult.

Choose the best Fertilizer!

Instead of pricing the next fertilizer you buy—investigate first the quality. For it is quality, not mere bulk, that gets results. The time to ask the price is when you have made sure of quality.

We can prove to you—and the proof we furnish will be borne out by your own experience later—that Harab-Davies Fertilizer is the best that money can buy.

Its qualities are the result of knowledge—not guesswork. It contains Nitrogen or Ammonia, Phosphoric Acid and Potash. The Ammonia, which is the plant grower, is derived from materials which dissolve in the soil-water in proper order as the season progresses. This results in a crop that is not only large, but better in quality—and stronger.

A Country Church That "Came Back."

In Platte County, Missouri, lives a farmer who has worked all his life with the idea of retiring in his old age and buying a home in Kansas City. He has reached the point at which this ambition may be easily realized but for one obstacle—his young son and daughter firmly and vigorously refuse to give their consent!

They refuse because—what do you think?—they are afraid the city would be dull! They are very sure, at any rate, that it wouldn't give them the satisfying social life they enjoy in their home neighborhood.

Their mother is partly responsible for the attitude of the children who won't let Dad leave the country. She was one of seventeen mothers who met one day to make plans for building a social centre annex to Second Creek Church near Beresford, the oldest country church in the county. The seventeen had observed the waning influence and the gradual abandonment of many rural churches, and especially their failure to touch the lives of the growing boys and girls. They decided that Second Creek Church should not succumb to creeping paralysis, but should "come back" to the position of vitality and helpfulness it held in pioneer times.

Plans were made for a social centre annex to the church, consisting of an up-to-date kitchen and a community dining-room and auditorium. Modern plumbing was to be installed, with lavatories, drinking fountains, and inside toilets. A hot-air furnace was to replace the stoves.

These improvements would cost $1,000. The figures were low because the farmers in the neighborhood had offered to contribute labor and materials. Nevertheless, the raising of $1,000 was a task not to be lightly accomplished by a handful of busy country women in these days of scarcity of help.

"It will take a long time to raise $1,000," suggested one of the workers. "Our children would grow up in the time it would take for that money to trickle in from socials and bazaars. I move that we look on this as a business proposition and go at it just as men would. Who ever heard of men waiting for public improvements until they had raised the money by pie suppers? I propose that we borrow $1,000 at the bank and give our personal notes for it."

"If we get in debt, we'll have to get out. Our good names will be at stake, and we'll work like beavers to make up the payments. If we get a loan we can start building right away. We can have our improvements and be getting the good of them while we're paying."

Everybody gasped. But the more the proposal was threshed over the more sensible it seemed. The neighborhood needed social enlivening at once.

The women adjourned to put the proposal to the president of a bank in the nearest village. They got the loan. That was in 1917. The annex, completed in a few weeks, was equipped with a kitchen containing a gas stove, a cooking range, hot and cold running water, and every convenience for preparing and serving meals. The large dining hall is also used for a Sunday-school room, and as an auditorium for lectures, farmers' meetings, concerts, amateur theatricals, community dinners, and Christmas trees.

"The big thing about modernizing a country church is making up your mind to do it," said Mrs. Joe Couch of Westfall, Missouri, who is a leader in the social activities of the enlarged church. "Once you've decided to go ahead you'll get all kinds of co-operation. We couldn't have improved our church but for the help of our husbands, brothers, fathers, and sons."

"They contributed teams, labor, and material to the value of several hundred dollars. People who had never taken much interest in the church added their bit. The building of the annex stimulated the spirit of co-operation and teamwork, not only in the church but throughout the neighborhood. I think any band of church women could do what we did."

The annex has more than fulfilled expectations in supplying the community with social life. To the dinners given in the new dining hall, people come from a radius of twenty miles. They arrive by motor car, by mule team, and on foot. The young husband and wife who have just moved into the neighborhood shake hands with scores of new friends. Lifelong friends meet and talk across the table. The young people sit around in congenial groups.

The Ladies' Aid has met payments on the loan easily. The women got out a cookbook which they sold throughout the country to raise money. They have had entertainments, bazaars, and sales of food, garments, and fancy needlework. One day of each month they meet at the church to sew on garments which are sold for the church fund. Meanwhile there is "something doing"—some social or educational gathering—at the annex every week. And that is why the boy and girl in the home of at least one farmer in Platte County, Missouri, are growing up happily and wholesomely on the farm, and not in the city.

Time and tide wait for no man, but time and care applied to farm tasks pay any man.
