Pallada at Port Arthur.

The admiralty has received official information that Vice-Admiral Prince Ouktomsky's five battleships and the protected cruiser Pallada are at Port Arthur. ### Leave Port or Disarm.

Shanghai, Aug. 20.—Despite the Taotai's decision to allow the Rusractal's decision to allow the Rus-sian torpedo boat destroyer Grozo-voi and the cruiser Askold to remain in port for a reasonable period to make repairs, the Japanese consul-general made three demands yestergeneral made three demands yester-day that the vessels either leave port or disarm. The ships are guarded by customs officials. Lighters will coal Semi-official reports state that the Japanese fleet will make a demon stration outside the harbor on Tues-day. Neutral consuls believe the day. Neutral consuls believe the Japanese threat to seize the vessels is a bluff. A pacific end of the con-troversy is anticipated. The damage to the Askold cannot be repaired under three weeks.

Want Squadron Sent.

Tokio, Aug. 20.-The Askold has the naval campaign.

This, it declares, to be an open violation of neutrality, which the Chinese Government evidently is powerless to prevent. Many Japanese openly urge the despatch of a squadron to Shanghai to seize and remove the Askold. The question, therefore, arises, the correspondent says, whether it is the duty of the British authorities to define and enfore neutrality. Aftes the Fugitives.

Che Foe, Aug. 20.—It is asserted that the Japanese torpedo boat de-stroyers which entered the harbor yesterday hoisted only one flag when they departed.

The Japanese naval attache here says that these vessels sought the Russian cruisers Diana and Novik, the only Russian warships unaccounted for since the sortie from Port Ar-thur of Aug. 10, or for some ship which may have escaped from Port Arthur.

Through the Dardanelles.

New York, Aug. 20.—The Odessa correspondent of The Times cables: In spite of the feeling aroused in England and elsewhere by the action of Russia in sending the Petersburg and the Smolensk through the Dardanelles, I learn on good authority that she intends to challenge once more the clauses of the Black Sea agreement by sending the Sarafoff, a sister ship of the Petersburg, out of the Black Sea on a similar errand. The Sarafoff is the last of six fast volunteer fleet transports, and has just been fitted with various naval appliances, including ammunition hoists.

Japa Capture Steamer.

Washington, Aug. 20.—The State Department has received a cablegram from Che Foo, dated yesterday, the substance of which is as follows: This morning seven Japanese destroyers entered the harbor and met an anknown steamer which they captured. Two Japanese cruisers are outside the harbor.

The despatch is so worded as to leave in doubt the exact spot at which it took place, and whether within or without the three-mile limit. The impression here is that the seizure took place within the Chinese territorial waters.

Russias Stabess stank.

Tokio, Aug. 20.—A Russian gunboat of the Otvajni type struck a mine and sank off Laoti Promontory, the extreme southerly point of the Kwangtung Peninsula, on which Port Arthur is situated, at 8 o'clock on Thursday night. The Rains Descended and the Floods Came to Chatham's Popular Summer Resort.

Fortunately there was little actual damage done and the cottagers viewed what was possible in the darkness in awed and interested wonder. The tents, however, were swept away like shreads and their occupants were domiciled in neighboring cottages. Several dwellings on the lake shore suffered from the waves which came right up and over some of the new tracks, but a sudden change in the wind shortly after three o'clock this morning relieved the situation considerably, while the Eau then commenced to boil threateningly. The tornado again jumped and struck the Illineis shore, near Madison, where it demolished several buildings. It blew down a portion of the Madison Cooper Works, killing John Tillington. Severe damage was done also to buildings in Venice and Granite City and several persons were injured.

A trolley car, containing eleven passengers was buried under six telegraph poles which wrecked the car. The passengers had a remarkable escape. The roof and part of the top storey of Sommers Bros'. factory were blown away. The loss at the Niedringhau's Rolling Mill, which covers two square acres, is estimated at $25,000. Six employes were injured. No damage was done at the World's Fair grounds.

COMMERCIAL SPONSES

P. H. Currie, of Massan, Bahama Islands, was in the city yesterday calling upon the Canada Flour Mills Co. Mr. Currie is in the sponge and commission business at Massau. The Bahamas are one of the greatest places for sponges in the world. Very little is known about sponges beyond that they belong to the lowest order of the animal kingdom and a Sponge and Turtle Board is being formed in Massau mainly for the purpose of studying the sponge. The sponges are secured in from six to 60 feet of water. A long pole with an iron hook is put down and the sponges are pulled from their watery home. Sometimes the sponge grows on the mud bottom and sometimes on the reefs. There are two kinds, the reef and the wool. The former is the better. The wool sponge is a black looking mass. The pores of the sponges are filled with animal matter. A kraal is built on the beach and the sponges are put in this. When dry they are taken out and beaten with a club and then washed. This removes the jelly filling from the pores.

Mr. Currie says that the temperature never goes above 94 or 95 in the shade in summer, and a day like to-day would be a cold day in winter Naturally it may be surmised that the Bahama climate is delightful. P. H. Currie, of Massan, Bahama

TALENTED ORGANIST

Mr. Walter Doleman, the talentee and accomplished organist of Christ Church, presided at the Holy Trinity Church organ last Sunday at both services in the absence of Miss Morrison. Mr. Doleman is an organist of exceptional ability, having played some of the finest organs while in some of the finest organs while in England, and he is greatly appreciated by the congregation of Christ Church. The congregation of Holy Church. The congregation of Holy Trinity Church were delighted with his marked talent and there is no doubt that Mr. Doleman should be classed among the very best organists in the city. He gave two excellent voluntaries at the end of each service, which were remarkably well rendered. Many have been the complimentary remarks passed upon his playing last Sunday.

WROUGHT IRON.

Its Decorative Possibilities, Espe-cially In Artistic Grills.

The decorative possibilities of iron have come to be well appreciated in this country, this metal having been put to a great variety of uses for the decoration of the home. Lamps, can dlesticks, door hinges and escutcheons, fireplace furnishings, screens and decorative grills for doors and windows are among the articles made of this ductile material.

Iron when heated to a certain degree may be hammered to a wonder-ful thinness and twisted by hand into curves and spirals of great beauty. It is this quality that gives it character and an individuality lacking in the cast metal. Hand wrought iron is exper sive because it is hand wrought and must not be mistaken for the cheaper product, cast iron. In no class of work is the ductility of iron so we'll shown as in artistic grills and screen work. The grill shown in the illustration is mentioned as an excellent example of simple yet artistic design by a writer in the Ladies' World, who says: A clever worker might carry it out in line by using the ready prepared iron ribbon work, which may be found at shops dealing in materials for the so called Venetian iron work. The resulting grill will be lighter in effect, but it will be pleas-

The design may also be worked out in heavier iron by the establishments that do this sort of work, and there are quite a number in our great cities that make this their business

Where a door or a window screen seems to be too high and narrow to present good proportions a grill set in at the top is an artistic recourse. A wrought iron grill, backed by rich or ange silk, makes a very decorative feature and accomplishes the desired

Canning Peas and String Beans. "Select tender green peas, shell and place in pint or quart jars within an inch of the top and fill the jars with cold water. Let them stand an hour, then fill up those that have settled and seal air tight. Make a frame of slats nailed together to fit the bottom of the wash boiler, set the jars on the frame and fill with cold water within two inches of the top of the jars. Boil for three hours after the water com-mences to boil, then take the jars out of the water and try each jar to see that it is perfectly air tight. Put away in a cool, dark place," advises a corre-spondent in the Woman's Home Companion, in which the following is also given for canning string beans: "String the beans and cook until perfectly ten der in enough water to cover them, adding hot water if needed. When half done, salt slightly. Use only good tin cans. Rinse out the cans with hot water, pack the beans closely in the cans while very hot, cover with the liquor and pour a teaspoonful of hot vine gar on top of each canful. Dry the edges of the can thoroughly and seal. ing, as they must be sealed while hot."

A Quart Baby.

Now and again there is an item in the Now and again there is an item in the newspapers concerning the birth of a puny baby so small that a quart cup holds it comfortably. If the article told all the facts it would probably tell also of a mother who in weakness and misery had looked forward to the baby's advent with shrinking and fear.

To have fine, healthy children the mother must be healthy, and it is the common testimony

License Inspector and Constable Brown Take Charge of Wet Goods in Blenheim

Blenheim is not such a dry town s people have, in recent times, been in the habit of believing. Yesterday the fact came positively to light. Casually perhaps, or otherwise, quor license inspector, Thos. Boon, of Bothwell dropped into town and accompanied by Constable and Baptist Minister Brown, a tour of inspection of hotels and other places was made. Ten cases of ate were seized from drayman, and the booze, which was sent by a Hamilton wholesale house, is being held pending an investigation as to the right of the party to have it. An agent of this wholesale house has been offering to dispose of the wet goods to Blenheimites.

The hotelmen were found, accord ing to the report of the raiders, to be behaving themselves pretty well. One hotel was found with some of the liquor goods on hand, but that was what was left when the license

A barber shop was tried twice, the first time it was locked and the second time everything was in first-class order, nothing but the bay rum otass order, nothing but the was discovered.

It is said that barber shops have been on the increase lately. Probably this accounts for the raiding of the tonsorial establishment.

The booze was taken to the police station or town hall, where on aplication to the Mayor of the town, it may be viewed. A report comes to town that some Blenheimites will stand and look and look at it with such a longing, such a long-

AN AUTOMOBILE TEST.

Briton Burst Tires to Prove Machine Ca

Deemed Serious.

So much has been printed in newspapers recently about serious accidents having happened to automobiles through puncturing of tires or the tires coming off that S. F. Edge of England, a well known automobilist, determined to take the matter up and show how misleading were such statements, and that accidents from such causes need never occur in properly constructed automobiles provided they were sent out on journeys in sound condition.

With this in view he gave a very interesting exhibition in the Crystal Palace grounds the other afternoon. He used a fifteen horse-power touring car and the racer in which he contested for the international cup recently in Germany.

For the purpose of bursting the tires the track was laid with broken bottles, broken steel chisels and long iron spikes driven into wooden blocks. The tires were burst while the cars were driven at full speed over the track, but the cars went blocks. The tires were burst while the cars were driven at full speed over the track, but the cars went straight on their way as if nothing was wrong with the wheels.

The most exciting experiment was when Mr. Edge, having cut the inner cases of a rear tire of his racer, dashed up and down the track with the view of showing the effect of casting a tire, but to make the tire fly off was no easy matter. He jerked the car from side to side and made it swerve violently as if turning a sharp curve, but it was not until after many attempts that the tire did sharp curve, but it was not until atter many attempts that the tire did leave the wheel, when the car continued the journey with a front deflated tire and a rear tireless rim.

Mr. Edge said only a slight diminution in the speed brought to his notice the fact that the tire had gone, but when questioned as to the danger of the spokes breaking, as in the case of an accident which resulted in the death of Sir William Rattigan, Mr. Edge said:

"When the spokes are of sound oak there can be no strain put upon them in the cars turning covuers which the wheels ought not to be able to withstand. In the Rattigan case the chauseur had already had a collision with a bank, which must have started the spokes, but an autohave started the spokes, but an automobile starting sound on a fourney can't come to grief."

The Points of the Law.

How many points has the law? ask-ed The London Chronicle. The Times quoted from itself of a hundred years ago: "The landed proprietors of modern France, who support the new Imperial Government, and thereby re-ject the chance of restoring the Bourbons, justify themselves by our old saying, that possession is eleven points of the law." Swift also used "eleven" in the same saying, which "eleven" in the same saying, which in full appears to have been, "Possession is eleven points of the law, and they say there are but twelve." Most of us, however, say "nine" instead of "eleven," assuming the law's total allowance of points to be ten; and Wharton's Law Lexicon gives us authoritative support. It has "nine-tenths" instead of "nine points," with the solemn warning that "this adage is not to be taken to be true to the full extent, so as to mean that the person in possession can only be ousted by one whose title is nine times better than his."

A correspondent of The Chronicle A correspondent of The Chronicle writes: "With reference to your interesting note regarding the points of the law, I may tell you that Brewer, in his 'Dictionary of Phrase and the law, I may tell you that Brewer, in his 'Dictionary of Phrase and Fable,' mentions the 'nine points requisite for a successful lawsuit:' (1) A good deal of money, (2) a good deal of patience, (3) a good cause, (4) a good lawyer, (5) a good cousel, (6) good witnesses, (7) a good jury, (8) a good judge, (9) good luck."

In the peculiarity of teeth and mouth the snail is the most wonderful of all the created creatures, and it has been truly said that it is fortunate for mankind that some of the larger of the wild animals are not similarly constructed. The mouth of the snail is greed with a wonder. not similarly constructed. The mouth of the snail is armed with a wonderful organ in the shape of a rapp-like tongue. This tongue resembles a long, narrow ribbon, coiled in such a manner that only a small portion of it is in use at any one time. Thickly distributed over the entire surface of this ribbon-like organ are an immense number of very minute but strong and sharp teeth, designed in a manner which admirably adapts them to the purpose for which they

in a manner which admirably adapts them to the purpose for which they are intended—viz., that of rasping off the edible portions of the vegetation upon which the owner of the rasp feeds.

The number of these wonderful teeth is perfectly incredible, one species having been shown by actual count under the microscope to possess not less than 30,000.

Oranges in Jamaica

Oranges in Jamalca.

An article in the Fruit, Flower and Vegetable Trades Journal of London gives the reasons why Jamaica oranges can be had for nothing in Jamaica and do not pay for packing. A car of oranges from Kandal to Kingston (thirty odd miles) costs £14 6s.; the same car laden with bananas cost merely £8. Orange marmalade made in Jamaica can be bought at 44d, per pound jar in Jamaica, so that it does not pay to make marmalade, and the demand for orange wine is small compared with the supply. So oranges are left to fall and rot.

Here is an imaginative story illustrating the estimate that some German citizens place on sauerkraut as a food staple. A German was speaking about the high price of cabbage. "I tell you, dese kebbages is awful high dis year," he said. "Me und me vife puts up six, seven, eight berrels of sauerkraut every year, but ve can't dis year. Dem kebbages dey cost too much." "You put up some sauerkraut, didn't you, Chris?" he was asked. "Oh, yes; two or tree barrels; just to haf in de house in case of sickness."

There are no gutters and the water from each side of the road almost meets in the centre. Head Street is also in bad shape."

ANXIOUS NIGHT

Four Little Maple City Lads Set Out From Erie Beach and Were Absent in Storm Till

A very anxious night was spen by the cottagers at Erie Beach last night by the absence in the storm of four little Maple City lads who had gone forth on a little pleasure stunt with pienic baskets-and failed to return.

The four intrepid boys, Robert,
Douglas and Hume Stone and Lawrence Glass, started from the beach rence Glass, started from the beach shortly before noon, removed their shoes and stockings and walked down to the p.ers at Er.eau, a distance of some seven milts. While playing on the p.ers they were overtaken by the rain and storm, but seemed to thoroughly enjoy it and remained playing there until they were thoroughly deprohed. oughly drenched.

oughly drenched.

Finally they made their way to S.

M. Glenn's cottage late in the afternoon, where Mr. Glenn took them in and removed their dripping clothing. There they stayed over night and returned to Blenheim on this merning's train.

Meanwhile, as can be imagined, the parents and friends at the Beach put in a very troubled night. Search parties were instituted and much anxiety was felt. It was a great relief when the valiant quartette turned up safe and sound this morn-

Perhaps there is no more fruitful source of sore shoulders in working herses than the too common practice of leaving the hamestraps loosed but here to buckled over the collar. Even moderately tight hames will, in heavy work, allow of an amount of play sure to result in galls, especiplay, sure to result in galls, especially if the collar is not, as it too often is not, a perfect fit for the shoulder on which it is placed. One cannot always be sure of anything more than an approximately well-fit-ting collar, but if the hames are so adjusted over it that when tightly buckled on, the sides of the collar buckled on, the sides of the collar press pretty firmly to the sides of the neck, and given reasonable care to the collars and shoulders daily in other ways, it will be found that the poorest shoulders on the farm will get along without the soreness and galls only too common as the result of neglecting to do this.

Made Only in Bridgewater, Eng.

The Westminster Gazette says: Few would connect the common bath-brick of our kitchen with a caprice of nature, or would credit that there is but one spot on the entire globe where these scouring-bricks can be manufactured. Yet so it is, for all bath-bricks are made in Bridgewater, in Somersetshire, and there only, because the River Parrett deposits for a distance of a few hundred yards only the peculiar compound of sand and slime of which they are composite to the composite of the compos and slime of which they are compos-ed. Farther up the stream the salt contains too much mud, lower down the proportion of sand is too great. Every ebb, therefore, the workmen remove the soil from this favored spot which Dame Nature has placed there the previous tide. Nowhere else in the world is a similar com-pound to be found.

pound to be found. Poetry does not mean only the clothing of beautiful thought in harmonious language; it means also the spiritualizing of life, the tingeing every common object with the warm sunshine of sympathy and love. Just as on rainy days the slush and grimy mud are swept away and put on one mud are swept away and put on or side, so the sunshiny nature will na-turally dismiss all mean and sordid thoughts and turn to what is true and noble and pure, as "the sun-flower turns to the face of its qod."

With a Fourth Reef

Copuright, 1903, by Sidney H. Cole

By SIDNEY H. COLE

Harriet Atherton stood on the end of the frail little pier, looking over the choppy water of the bay flecked with angry, hissing whitecaps. Save for these touches of white the water had taken on the leaden hue of the low clouds which hung the sky. The wind whipped her skirts about smartly and took untoward liberties with her hair, blowing a fragrant brown strand now this way, now that, in charming aban-don and bringing the color to her cheeks and the sparkle to her eyes at the thought of a sail in wind and water like these.

On either side of the pier was a catboat, triple reefed, and in either cat-poat was a young man prepared to buffet the gale in the open water outside. "Am I going out?" cried Harriet in response to a query from Stanley Drake. "Indeed I am. It'll be gor-geous. Rail under, shower bath with every sea and glorious shivers every time she heels to a flaw. You don't imagine I'd let a chance like this go by, do you?"

"And who's the lucky man?" called

John Frisby from the other boat.
"I believe I'm scheduled for your supercargo Jack" she laughed "All right," he said. "I'll be ready in trice." He scrambled from the cockpit and began to put another reef in the sail. "What's that for?" she asked sharply. "You," he answered simply. "I'm not taking any chances if you are go-

"If you won't take me along just as you were going yourself I won't go," she announced.

"I should have put in the fourth reef anyway," he said. anyway," ne said. Her lips curved disdainfully. She looked at Drake's sail. He was preparing to start with three reefs.

'Three reefs and I'll go with you," she said to Frisby.
"I'm afraid you won't go then," ha said calmly as he continued tying the "This is a four reef zephyr." "I'm going out with three reefs," she said impatiently.

"Not with me," he remarked with firmness that surprised her.
She had known Jack Frisby for five years, and during those five years he Drake was all ready to start. "Oh, Stanley," she called, "I think I'll go with you, may I?"

"Come on," said Drake with a grin in Frisby's direction. He helped her aboard, and they went heeling out over the bay. Frisby, under four reefs, followed. His face, still hard and set, gave no hint of the tumult in his mind. With the tiller in one hand and the straining sheet in the other, he followed Drake's catboat across the bay. He could see the spray come over her bows in bucketfuls as the wash struck her, and with every flaw she lay over until her boom dipped. He saw Harriet close to Drake in the cockpit, and once, when the flaw heeled them over more than usual, he heard the girl's little scream and her

He worked over the unconscious man, and when at last the eyelids opened waveringly he put his brandy flask between Drake's teeth. Then he turned to the girl. She stood heroically at the tiller, wet, disheveled and shivering pitifully, while great tears rolled down ber cheeks.

"Keep yourself together," Frisby said sharply. "Better take some bran-

She shook her head miserably. Frisby caught the tiller and held out the flask.

"Take it; it is medicine," he said shortly. Meekly she obeyed. They rounded the point again, and in the shelter of the bay the force of the gale was materially diminished. Frisby looked at the huddled figure of the girl beside him. He saw she was sobbing. A sudden contrition gripped him.

himself on an elbow "Where am I?" he asked. "In a boat with four reefs, thank heaven," Frisby replied.

Her Mistress Was Hard to Please. Misunderstandings sometimes arise from very slight causes, and occasionally one occurs which seems to prove that silence is not always golden. In this case trouble was brewed without a word being spoken. Young Mrs. Bond's Swedish cook was scrupulously neat about her work, but her figure was so unlovely and her countenance so unprepossessing that her overfas young mistress could never bear to look at her. Instead, whenever the young housekeeper found it neces-sary to interview her unattractive maid she kept her eyes fixed upon a large black coal scuttle that always stood beside the kitchen stove.

One day as Mrs. Bond stood, as usual, in the doorway, gazing intently at the coal hod while Matilda was tellng what groceries were needed, the handmaiden unexpectedly changed the subject and proceeded to give vent to her pent up feelings of many weeks. you all the tam luke at Love's Young Dream. The wind swept a cloud of dust about them as they turned the corner of the street.

"Did you get any dust in your eyes, darling?" he asked fondly, holding her closely to him as though to keep the too eager wind away.
"Yes," she murmured, searching for her handkerchief.

"Which eye, dearest?" "The right one, love. Did you get anything in yours?" she asked anxously, seeing his handkerchief appear. "Yes, darling."

"Which eye, dearest?"
"The right one, love."
"How sweet!" she exclaimed with a glad light glowing in her well eye. "Do you suppose, dearest heart, that it could have been part of the same piece of dust that got in our eyes, dar

"I hope it was," he said, beaming with one eye and wiping the other.
"Wouldn't it be sweet, dear?"
"Wouldn't it, love?"

And the wind howled round the corner as though it was in pain, and from the house three doors below a dentist's sign fell off into the street.

The Origin of the Umbrella. Our name for the umbrella, being obviously taken from the Italian om orello, naturally refers us to Italy as the source from which we have deopen sea. Frisby followed suit. Despite his extra reef he held his own with them. When they passed the point the full strength of the gale struck them. Soap, Ointment and Pills the World's Greatest Skin Cures.

Complete Treatment for Every Humour, from Pimples to Scrofula

WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurem as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants and the anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum, all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to edy of almost supernuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy, have made them the standard skin cures and humour remedies of the civilized world.

The grandest testimonial that can be offered the Cuticura remedies is their world-wide sale, due to the personal recommendations of those who have used them. From a small beginning in the simplest form, against prejudice and opposition, against monied hosts, countless rivals, and trade indifference, Cuticura remedies have become the greatest curatives of their time, and, in fact, of all time, for nowhere in the history of medicine is to be found another approaching them in popularity and sale. In every clime and with every people they have met with the same reception. The confines of the earth are the only limits to their growth. They have conquered the world.

Oxygen is a thing that has eight sides. The cuckoo never lays its own eggs. A mosquito is a child of black and white parents. A blizzard is the inside of a hen. A meridian is the name of the place where they keep time. "Parasite" is the slang name given to an inhabitant of Paris; it ought to be written "Parisian." The following has an odd ring about it and ought to be true: "Izaak Walton was such a good fisher that men called him 'Judiclous Hooker!' In this next instance phonetics is certainly to blame: "The equator is a menagerie lion run ing round the earth through Africa."-Liverpool Post.

A Modest Colonel According to the Canadian Military Gazette, the new adjutant of a volun teer regiment was asking the colonel a ew things about the corps and eventually got on to the subject of marks-manship. "Is the battalion a fairly good shooting one?" he asked. "Oh, yes; it is quite," answered the colonel grandiloquently. "You'll find a large percentage of good shots in my regiment. And some very fine shots, toovery fine shots. I myself"—here he dropped his voice to a lower and more oily pitch—"am the best shot. Only a slight scar is left to show the path followed by the wire. So this proves that ice actually melts at several degrees under freezing point

A Few Sentences That Were Written by Abraham Lincoln.

It is not very well known that in the hall of one of the great colleges of England there hangs a frame inclosing a few sentences of which Abraham Lincoln is the author. They are considered the best English that was ever written. You or I might read them over and call them very simple indeed. And they are so simple that any child who reads at all can read and understand them. That is one thing that makes them great. It was his being simple and plain that made Lincoln

Commissioner Hutchinson's idea is that it's a good thing for Canada to spread herself at World's Fairs, if she does it in the right direction. The Commissioner does not believe much in signs. A big sign with Canada on it affects an American in one of two ways. Either he is so possessed of the exclusive greatness of his own country that he will not walk across the aisle to look at what goes with the sign; or he feels resentment at the country which is drawing off thousands of his best citizens, and views the exhibit with partisan alarm. In view of all the circumstances, Commissioner Hutchinson thinks it best to make the signs just big enough to assert our dignity, and to let the exhibits do the loud talking. For the rest, he depends on a color scheme of red and gold, by which you may pick out the Canadian exhibit in whatever building you may happen to enter; and he fills in the panels of his pillar decoration with chirpy statistics about the gold and wheat, and cattle and butter and cheese we produce every twelvemonth, not forgetting to mention those things in which we beat the world, and also the fact that something like fifty thousand Americans settled in Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian exhibit a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Fair with a visit to the Canadian begins his tour of the Canadian begins with comfortable verandahs, where people are allowed to sit in the shade and eat their lunches. This makes it one of the most popular buildings on the grounds, for in the State buildings this privilege is not allowed. There seems to be a conspiracy everywhere else than in the Canadian building to drive the Fair visitor to high prices and the rest-Canadian building to crive the Fair visitor to high prices and the rest-aurants. But in the Canada building everything is free—free chairs and free cushions, free sitting-rooms and toilet-rooms, and a piano that can be played on by whosever is musically inclined. The water is filtered and the water is free—anywhere else that kind of water is a cent a glass. The soft carpets and the pleasant coolness and the unobtrusive Canacolness and the unobtrusive dian hospitality are all free to every dian hospitality are all free to everybody, and no questions are asked.

The building is always thronged for it is on one of the busiest thoroughfares of the Fair.

The Attract the Farmers.

The building is on the road to the Agricultural building, which everybody goes to see, and particularly the farmers. Now, the farmers are the people that Canada wants to attract, and if a tired granger and his tired wife drops into the Canada building who knows what may haptired wife drops into the Canada building who knows what may happen? There is a little room at the back of the building, and it is brilliantly lighted. The "armer, being curious, steps in ther and is confronted by an object lesson—a series of giotures illustrating life in the Northwest, the frames composed of the grains and grasses of the country. The pictures show a Northwest farm at various stages of development, from the prairie to the cultifarm at various stages of develop-ment, from the prairie to the culti-vated steading, with the home lot, the brick house, and the green erch-ard. One of these pictures represents a Northwest settler signing the pa-trol sheet of a Northwest Mounted policeman, who is on horseback.

Xankes Delusion Dispelled.

"I suppose," said a swarthy old farmer, as he strove to comprehend it, "that that's the downtrodden Canadian paying his taxes to the British soldier."

Whereupon one of the Commissioner's staff who was standing near found it incumbent on him to dispel the delusion which Yankee politicians would keep alive. He explained that we are not an oppressed race, and that more true liberty and better protection to life and property may be found under our flag than there is in the land of the free and the home of the brave.

And so the good seed is sown.

The American is impressed with the calm and abiding democracy of the Canadians, not the kind of demo-cracy that finds expression in stitled platitudes, but the kind that dis-

The Canadian Building Free.
The Canadian building is the first of a series of object lessons. Everything, as I have said, is free. Unlike other State buildings, it is never closed to the public for receptions of social bursting. It has a contract to the contract of the or social functions. It has no catched and the people are allowed to use it without vexatious restrictions. It reads a lesson to the nations of Rustrand Rus will find there an English accent and a cold stare; all the doors are marked private; the chief object seems to be to keep the crowd out and to maintain a haughty exclusiveness. Go to the Austrian building. Closed. Cardinal Satolli is inside, and needs the whole building to side, and needs the whole building to see things. Go to the French pavi-lion—a pretty place, with a pink marble effect. A notice is posted on the gate—passes must be procured in another part of the grounds, a mile distant. Drop into the Holland building. The only thing worth while is the Vandyck room, for which the Government of Holland charges to contra admission. Go to which the Government of Holland charges ten cents admission. Go to Italy—chains across the door—not ready for a week yet. Here is a little palace—Ceylon. The Government of Ceylon is evidently engaged as selling tea—tt costs are contact that while the Canadian building this, while the Canadian building the contact are the costs are wide. yearns for you. The doors are wide enter without money and

ing to get out. erestry, Fish and Game In the Forestry, Fish and Game building Canada has the finest ex-hibit. California has a better display of pollshed woods, but Canada ex-cels in general character and scope. The collection of stuffed animals bears, musk oxen, wolves, and so on —is admittedly the finest at the fair. The polar bear is a magnificent specimen, just about three times the size of the big fellow at Riverdale Park. Some of the other exhibits in the building derive a great deal of their attractiveness from the products of the Canadian forests. For instance, the central decorative feature of the Winchester exhibit of firearms is a moose head, splendidly antiered. That particular noose was shot by a Canadian the woods of New Brunswick, and it the woods of New Brunswick, and it cost the Winchester people five hundred dollars to make it their own. The colony of beavers, which is a special feature of the Canadian exhibit, draws great crowds. Our national emblems are thriving. Only one accident has happened, and that betell when two of the feroclous males are the control of the colons and destroyed each befell when two of the ferocious males got together and destroyed each other. Fut two male beavers together and they will behave worse than a Democratic convention. It is worth remarking that only two railways have had the enterprise to make exhibits in this building, and they are both Canadian—the Intercolonial and the Grand Trunk.

Our Agricultural Exhibit. But it is on the agricultural exhibit that the Commission has lavished the most pains. It is, as I have said before, the most complete, the most attractive, and the most instructive agricultural exhibit at the Fair. There is a toothsome display of maple sugar, with a sugar bush in small in active operation. There is also a fine display of cheuse and honey, which proves to all and sundry that Canada is the land of But it is on the agricultural hibit that the Commission milk and honey which is mentioned in the Bible. The centrepiece of the exhibit, however, is a huge kiosk made of grains and grasses, artistically conceived and carried out with splendid attention to detail. The ki cillustrates the products of the country through which the new Transcontinental Railway will run; it also represents the cereal products of the settled lands of Canada from Nova Scotia to British Columbia bia. It is so well arranged that the casual observer can follow the lesson with his own cyes; and in this way it combines beauty and utility in the most effective manner. The grains and grasses are handled so as te make frames for painted panels which depict the cattle fed on these prairin grasses.

Nature-Sowa Grasses.

Mr. Turpin, who is the cicerone, does not fail to impress the questioner that those cattle live on the grasses which Nature sows, and not on grasses sown by hand as in the United States. Another lesson of the kiosk is that wheat can be grown all over Canada; another that cattle can be fed with the best results on peas, barley, oats, and grasses. There are little points of details about the kiosk which will destate beholder, as, for instance, details about the kiosk which will dearlessbe beholder, as, for instance, a sample of oats grown in Alberta which ran 140 bushels to the acre. The gold-lettered pillar panels do not forget to press home facts like these, for example—that during the year eading June 30, 1903, forty-nine thousand four hundred and eight settlers came to Canada from the United States. United States.

Best Apples in the World. The horticultural exhibit, which is second only to that of California demonstrates that Canada grows th best apples in the world for texture and flavor. Our Northern Spies, our McIntoshes, our Golden Russets, are quite unapproachable. The exhibits tastefully displayed and carefully kept. No spotted or blemished fruits are allowed to remain on the trays, which is an example that might be followed to advantage by the various States. Mr. Race, the head of this department, states that it is a matter of constant surprise to the visitors that Canada, which they have considered a bleak and inhospitable wild, can produce such splendid plums, grapes and peaches.

Finest Display of Economic Minerals.

Prof. Day, the Government expert at Washington, concedes that Can ada has the finest display of econ omic minerals at the Fair. Neither in extent nor arrangement does any other exhibit in the Mines and Metallurgy building approach it, except that of Colorado, which is ingood works.

Canadian Building Free.

Canadian Building Free.

Canadian Building Free. the Fair is over. The Canadian exhibit are in knock-down cases, ready for some other fair, but only to that extent does the display suffer by comparison. It is a great source of satisfaction to Mr. Broadbent that Go to the British building: of corundum, of graphite, of nickel ore, of cobalt, and a nine-ton pyramid of iron ore from Londonderry, N.S. Where Ontario Shines. Ontario shows the largest mineral map in the building, besides an impressive display of cobalt and silver from Lake Temiscamingue, nickel from Sudbury, gold ore from the Rainy River district, and graphite. corundum, and feldspar from other places in the north country. The exhibit includes coal from the Rocky Mountains and Nova Scotia, asbestos from Megantic, in Quebec, chrometer in the coal from Megantic, in Quebec, chrometer in the coal form the state of the coal form ic iron from Quebec, silver and gold from British Columbia. A pet fea-ture with Mr. Broadbent is a perfect ture with Mr. Broadbent is a periety crystal of zercon, a curious gem embedded in apatite. The United States Government would like to buy it for the collection at Washington, but Canada will not let go. The largest that was even fined that was even mined was even feet long. It was found at Sydenham, Frontenac County, and a section of it is exhibited here. One crystal from Quebec weighs 1,200 crystal from Quebec weighs 1,20

Yukon Gold Cabin.

The most popular feature of this exhibit is the Yukon gold cabin. It is built of the characteristic minerals of the various Provinces, and is in that respect a well-contrived object lesson for those who are scientifical-ly minded. The cabin is lighted with electric lamps, and behind plate glass and iron bars is displayed a glitter-ing assortment of Yukon gold in grains, nuggets, and bars. The cabthe various Provinces, and is in grains, nuggets, and bars. The cabin is guarded night and day, for the gold is worth fifty thousand dollars. The idea of the cabin is Commissioner Hutchinson's, who says he is content to leave the scientific part the show to somebody else, so of the show to somebody else, so long as he can run what he calls the vaudeville end. By that he means that he will dig out the happy thoughts which will draw the crewda our way.—H. F. G., in Toronto Star.

Honors Fifty Years Ago. We learn that Mr. Chief Justice Robinson has received an intima-tion that it is Her Majesty's intention that it is Her Majesty's intention to bestow upon him the title of Baronet. His Lordship, if we remember rightly, was offered Knighthood in 1837, but declined it. . . We presume that Mr. Lafontaine, Chief Justice of Lower Canada, will receive the same title as Mr. Chief Justice Robinson. Titles command little respect in this Canada, and in consequence do little harm.—From The Globe of 1854.

His Criticism. Edmund Burke once showed a painting to Sir Joshua Reynolds, whose opinion he invited. Sir Joshua looked long and attentively at it. "Well," he said, "I really don't know what to say. It's a cleverish thing, but whether there's sufficient promise in it to justify my advising the young man to adopt art as a calling I really cannot say." It was Raynolds' own work, done many years be see.

A Hamilton Sensation.

Hamilton, Aug. 20.—Yesterday's sensation was a writ issued for alimony against A. B. Mackay by his wife. Mr. Mackay is a member of the firm of R. O. and A. B. Mackay, prominent coal merchants and vessel men. Mrs. Mackay alleges that her husband has not treated her as a faithful wife should be treated, and that her position became unbearable. She left her, husband about two months ago and went to London. Efforts were made to effect a peaceful settlement, but they could not agree on the amount of alimony. Yesterday Farmer and Gould issued a writ on behalf of Mrs. Mackey, who asks for $1,000 a month interim alimony.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—It is learned from a reliable source that it is definitely settled that A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., will enter the Dominion Cabinet. Before he went to Europe the Premier was assured that he would accept. Mr. Aylesworth is not to be assigned to a portfolio until the elections are fought. Aylesworth Will Enter Cabinet a Couple of Days-Mr. Hays Says Directors Will Make Known Their Decisions re. Terminals, Etc., Soon.

Port Arthur, Aug. 20.—The party of Grand Trunk officials arrived here yesterday by train. The following compose the party: President Hays, Vice-President Wainwright, Senator Cox, of Toronto, Premier S. N. Parent, Quebec; Hugh Allan, of the Allan Steamship Co.; Mr. Hobson, chief engineer; F. M. Morse, Mr. Biggar, solicitor; Mr. Stephens, chief engineer; L. A. Cannon, solicitor, Quebec; Mr. Hays, of St. Louis; Mr. Woods and Mr. Russell, engineers; Mr. Phillips, secretary to the president, and Mr. McNicoll, secretary to Mr. Morse.

Asked regarding the partles itinerary; Mr. Hays said:

"Oh we will be in this neck of woods for a couple of days, we have heard so much about Port Arthur and Fort William that we wish to see your surroundings and get some adequate idea of your facilities. We will then go on to Winnipeg for a couple of days, and from there through by C. P. R. to Vancouver, where we will meet Hon. FEARS NO PUNISHMENT.

Business Man Admits He Was Leader Lynching Mob.

Statesboro, Ga., Aug. 20.-Without any hesitation, a prominent business man yesterday admitted that he was the leader of the mob that burned the leader of the mob that burned Paul Reed and William Cato at the stake on Wednesday, and further made the remarkable assertion that he nor any member of the lynching party had any fear of prosecution.

He averred that no judge or jury would convict any man that took part in the double lynching, and as practical proof of his safety he told of the plans having been perfected twenty-four hours beforehand and boasted that the lynchings had been carried out without a hitch.

When it does straighten out, the vanishing point on the crest of a hillock appears entirely blocked by a slowly moving team of horses and reaper. There was a rush of bare brown inary. We were no sooner cabled feet across the lawn. A boisterious shout, beside the verandah appeared a flushed eager young face. Then a still more eager question. Would we like to go to Walpole Island? A sudlurch of the hammock brought consciousness to the occupant and return to things mundane.

As it was an ideal afternoon with a fresh breeze fanning our faces, a pleasant change from the last two sulky days, we at once determined feet across the lawn. 8 A boisterious

As it was an ideal afternoon with a fresh breeze fanning our faces, a pleasant change from the last two sulky days, we at once determined to go.

The inducement held out to bestimate ourselves was that an excursion had landed there from Pt. Huron brought down the St. Clair fiver on the Omar de Uonger, also a pleasure party from Mr. Clemens.

Owing to these landings one was ure that the Indians and squaws, with all their bright and quaintly-arved and plaited wares would be tathered in full force at the picnic grounds.

Another attraction and to the writer the chief one, was the anticipation of riding over the Indian reserve in an automobile.

A hasty foilet made our boyish have rubbed along together, each slowly suffering from friction. But the wild new red demon is bound at high speed over this. Shades of the Great Manitou! I Now watch the meteor. We hoped that our breath would be restored later on at the moment we had it not to hold. In a different sense from Young Lochinvar we "stopped not for break," although momentarily expected by one serve in an automobile.

A hasty toilet made our boyish chauffeur more presentable. Shoes and hose are somewhat of a necessity when pressing the carborator and brake, snake stories of the Island suggest foot-covering also.

In a few seconds we were ready and off at a rattling good pace, which we kept up past Henton's corner and along the Say road until we reached the Walpole ferry, where we found an Indian in attendance. Hailing him we were answered at once. ing him we were answered at once, when he had pulled off with a good show of muscle, (which is worked with a sort of wooden hook grasping the cable) we watched its slow, steady progress across the clear limpid waters of the channel E'Carte, limpid waters of the channel E'Carte, commonly called the Sny. Delight-fully tempting in its purity and transparency. We might compare it to the disadvantage of another familiar stream but will refrain as a sedimentation basin and water-works have made its crude and to use an expressive Scotch word "drumlia" waters altogether desirable.

This reservation of Walpole is very beautiful for situation and rightly

We landed with a spring fairly in the middle and stoped there; which was fine, as another pace or two would have given us an opportunity of examining the bed of this same beautiful stream and although tempting we prefered the surface view. This was only a prelimface view. This was only a prelimface view in the dark of the two turnouts, ference in speed of the two turnouts, with the two turnouts, ference in speed of the two turnouts, with the two turnouts, ference in speed of the two turnouts, with the two turnouts, ference in speed of the two turnouts, with the two turnouts, and the two turnouts, with the two turnouts, with the trong French accent he replied—"Well tak de road to dis way on de right, den come de beg bredge over. Den soon we'll see beeg of the St. Clair. Merci, a wave of the shand and away, the faithful auto going straight at everything.

Now the forest trees materiaced above our heads, the undergrowth switched our faces. At clearings stolid Indian toilers dropped the hoe

"De beeg brecdge" proved smooth and safe. It was like gliding in a canoe on the surface of a dimpling shallow, so great was the contrast in motion. Still we kept the pace. Ox-eye daisies blinked and bowed; buttercups shuddered; hazel boughs twigged us. Ever on, on. This was surely as exciting as Redgauntlets famous ride before the incoming tide of the Solway Frith. Tall marsh grasses gracefully bent forward to us in a reluctant adieu. The frogs we fear have not lived to tell the tale. They are most numerous this sunmer and the curious ones loitered to mer and the curious ones loitered too long in the way or were spell bound and so lost their lives. Several more short turns which the red whirlwind fairly spun around, then at last through the forest vista a gleam of sparkling blue and we shot out from tree and stump, failen giant and treacherous roots to the firm, smooth-washed sands of the shore.

Following this for a short distance we arrived at the landing pier, where the two steamers were tied up. On the grounds games were in progress, a band in attendance, some such revolutions of fortune's wheel and become useful and honored citizens of fair Canada.

Sudden remembrance of our wild ride caused us to turn our faces homeward. On the return taking it more leisurely, frequently stopping to gather great sheafs of golden bloom; the butterfly weed in gandy dress as usual. After the ferry crossing we reach the house at the soft evening hour. Pleased with the record of the invincible auto that "did" the Indian reservation so famously. the Indian reservation so famously

After refreshments, there are still a few moments left to enjoy that sweet calm of the evening, when a soft hush like a gentle lullabye seems to fall all around us, fitting accompaniment for the retiring monarch of the day. As he flaunts his crimson and golden banners at the finish of another triumphant march before our enraptured eyes. Furling and unfurling the circling clouds. Wave upon wave of splendor, each fold revealing new glories and brighter visions, until dropping lower and lower, at last to sink and rest upon his gathered laurels and billoway of the holiday-makers were enjoying a dip in the river. We sauntered about, buying from some of the booths, tried to engage the papooses in a rather one sided conversation. What they lacked in speech they made up in shy glances from their wonderous dark eyes. Resting apart and watching this gay scene, from a welcome shade, in a fit of retrospec-tion the mind again peopled those wooded aisles with dusky forms gliding noiselessly along the trail or swiftly and skilfully paddling their dugouts and bark canoes on the bosom of one of the many sparkling streams. To lovers of the traditions of their country many choughts crowd the mind. This people made the opening chapters of the history of our vast Dominion. True there are some dark blots upon the pages. It is generally conceded as a most regretable fact that the averice of the pale faces from over seas was largely accountable for their on-slaughts. To-day the hatchet lies deeply buried and forgotten in its its grave. Many bright episodes and re-cords of brave and manly deeds shall long be told of friendly warriors and hunters. Their name shall be found hunters. Their name shall be found in song and story, giving luster to romance and illuminating the page with the bright hues of their own brilliant dyes. Those shores are but little changed; the general outline is the same. The red-man might have gone on content with inherited customs. The invasion of the rest-less, adventurous whites caused all this so great a change. Yet it is undoubtedly for the best. In the building and rearing of our country's fortunes there have been many masons, many unskilled hands, oft a misplaced stone; still 'the Masterhand is over all and it may be will complete a perfect structure as the complete a perfect structure as the centuries roll over our forgotten

From the sheltering tree we lift our eyes and behold! The mighty freighters and passenger vessels ploughing their course past these same shores. The floating palaces, electric lighted, steam propelled, farreaching searchlight to penetrate like a great eye the gloom of wood and forest glade, pulsating little gasoline craft and puffing ferry, ungainly and ponderous whalebacks all valuable for their precious cargoes, pass in panoremic succession before our contemplative gaze. Hector was a big black cat, long the pet of Mrs. May Gehring, who lives on the fourth floor of No. 109 West Thirtieth street, New York. For years no other animal shared Mrs Gehring's affections, and Hector grew to think that she could love nothing else. Many a man has arrived at the same foolish conclusion under such cir-same foolish conclusion under such circumstances.

But recently Mr. Gehring brought home a flying squirrel, which, with great appropriateness, was named Santos-Dumont. Mrs. Gehring fell in love with Santos. Hector thought himself neglected. Filled with murderous anger, he often rushed at Santos to devour him, but the squirrel easily escaped him, taking flying leaps which made even the agile Hector's jumps look like the limping of a lame cat.

Santos-Dumount was seated on the front window sill yesterday. The window was open. Stealthfully creeping up, the green-eyed cat, sprang at Santos. The scared squirrel made a tremendous airy jump and landed safely on the school house on the other side of Thirtieth street. On the window, sill Hector looked for a minute at his rival. The cat's dejected expression plainly said—

TROUBLE IN THE CABINET

The Ottawa Citizen says: There is good authority for the statement that the Laurier cabinet is having troubles of its own since Parliament adjourned. It is said that the shareholders of the Grand Trunk railway, who are the power behind the Grand Trunk Pacific, are not enamored of the project to construct a railway through the hinterland of Quebec and Ontario, a region where the foot of a white man has scarcely ever trod, nor is likely to tread for several decades to come. This long and expensive line would be no use for through traffic, and as there would be no local traffic, the canny financiers are inclined to regard it as a purely political project which is being saddled on them in connection with the western line. It is an open secret that the Grand Trunk directors prefer to acquire the Canadian Atlantic and make the through grain route from Fort William via the lakes. They are even now negotiating for the purchase of the C. A. R. regardless of the Government's scheme, and the appearance of Mr. J. R. Booth on the directorate of the new Grand Trunk Pacific company is the subject of re-

It is further said that Sir Wilfrid would not seriously oppose a secret arrangement by which, after the government had secured the political benefit of the projected eastern branch at the next elections, that section of the enterprise should be lowed to remain in obeyance, and the Grand Trunk should be allowed to have its own way. But in that connection a difficulty has arisen - A pertain influential member of the cabinet has been arranging to retire from the government and take an interest in a large construction company which expects to secure some of the fattest contracts for this same eastern section. This gentleman and his financial backers, who are also expected to come down handsomely for election funds as the preliminary to securing the contracts, are not disposed to stand for any shuffling. They want that eastern section built, even if the Grand Trunk does not. There is reported to have already been a good deal of friction between the premier and this ambitious member of the cabinet over the matter, and through the talk of the financial are threatening all sorts of things if the original enterprise is not carried out, the affair is becoming public property in Ottawa. If Sir Wilfrid temporizes with the Grand Trunk the men who are prospectively interested in the construction of the eastern section threaten to make trouble and give the facts away, which would be awkard on the eve of an election. Whereas, if Sir Wilfrid refuses to fall in with the Grand Trunk's alternative scheme there will be much trouble and a scarcity of the sinews of war. Thus the premier is on the horns of a disagreeable dilemma.

> The Montreal Gazette says: "When Mr. Tarte says anything, or is reported as saying anything, on the political situation these days the Laurier newspapers show signs of being affected with a nervous tremor. It cannot be conscience that bothers them. It must be that they fear a main waeel in their party's political machine has slipped off."

Two negro murderers were burned at the stake in Statesboro, Georgia, a few days ago. They had been convicted of an atrocious murder, and were under sentence of death. In due time they would have been executed, but the mob was not satisfied to allow the law to take its course, and so there are two atrocious murders instead of one. The responsibility for the former murder was confined to two negroes; for the latter it is spread over the whole community, including the militia, who went on ard with empty guns, and the ofrs of the law, some of whom are

Lord Dundonald's farewell to Canda has evoked a demonstration gratifying alike to himself and to the best friends of the imperial connec tion. His departure from Ottawa, the night before last, was a triumph. Its great feature was the proof it afforded that the retiring general has won the approval not only of a party, but of the best elements in the Dominion, irrespective of political bias. Among those who united to do him honor were the municipal and county authorities, soldiers, and private citizens of all classes and creeds, and not a voice appears to have been raised to break the universal har-The question whether Lord mony. Dundonald had or had not failed in discretion in his difference with the colonial government was by common consent forgotten. It was as a sturdy representative of true imperalism that he was safuted by the people of the federal capital and its vicinity, and the attempts made by a few partisan journals to give a political complexion to the gathering proved a signal failure. It was assuredly no mere Conservative demonstration, when, as the Ottawa correspondent of the Times points out, the chairman of the local committee was a lifelong Liberal, and several of his collegues professed the same political Pacific company is the subject of remark. Pressure is being brought on Sir Wilfrid Laurier to induce him to drop the eastern section as it is a feature which will handicap the financing of the new enterprise. Whether he consents or not, the Grand Trunk directorate appear determined to proceed with their scheme as originally projected. The fact that there is no forfeiture clause in connection with the five million deposit makes it all the easier for the Grand Frunk people to follow their own Frunk people to follow their own

A tall, straight young man and girl who looked as though she had just stepped out of a love story illustration in a magazine stood together under the canopy in front of the Reading terminal after the rain had stopped late Thursday afternoon. Queer Effects of Sunshine Every one knows that the heat of the sun will expand iron and steel. Stevenson's tubular bridge over the Mena strait is 400 feet long. The heaviest train passing over it bends it just half an inch, yet on a July day, after the sun has been shining on it for sev-eral hours, it is found to be bent an inch and a half below its usual horizontal line. The heat of the sun acts on stone as well as metal, a fact which is proved by the Washington monument. It is 555 feet high, but it will be found to be about two inches higher in the evening than in the morning of a sunny day. A strange effect of sunshine was noted at Plymouth, where to lay the foundations of a sea wall the workmen had to descend in a diving bell. These bells had stupidly been fitted with convex circular glasses at the top. The sea was very calm, and the glasses so concentrated the rays of the sun that the clothes of one of the workmen were set on fire, and that at no less than twenty-five feet below the surface of the water.

The Iconoclasts. Iconoclasts were image breakers. The controversy respecting images, which had been introduced into churches for popular instruction about A. D. 300, was begun about A. D. 726 and occasioned much disturbance and loss of life in the eastern empire. Leo Isauricus published two edicts for demolishing images in churches in that year and enforced them with great vigor in 736. The controversy was carried on in the church, and the schism was the occasion of the second council of Nice, A. D. 787. The iconoclasts were finally excommunicated at the eighth general council held later at Constantinople, and this controversy led to the separa tion of the Greek and Latin churches.

Many images were destroyed in England and Scotland during the reformation and in the civil war—1641-48—and on each occasion the destroyers as-sumed the name of iconoclasts.

ANAEMIA--POOR BLOOD

Headaches, Dizziness, Heart Palpitation And Consumption Follows.

Anaemia — watery blood — is a treacherous trouble. It steals insidiously from slight symptoms of dangerous disease. The thin watery gerous disease. The thin watery blood shows itself at first in pale, lips, wan face, breathlessness, heart palpitation, lost appetite. If the trouble is not checked and cured, lips, wan face, breathlessness, heart palptation, lost appetite. If the trouble is not checked and cured, consumption follows; coughing, spiting, clammy night sweats, a total breakdown and death. What the anaemic suffering needs is more blood—more strength. And there is nothing in the whole wide world will give new blood and new strength so surely and so speedily as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to send new, rich, red blood coursing through the system, bringing strength to weak lungs and all parts of the body. Thousands testify to the truth of these statements, among them Miss Enerine Vilandre, St. Germain, Que, who says:—"While attending school my health began to give way. The trouble came on gradually and the doctor who attended me said it was due to overstudy and that a rest would put me right. But instead of getting better I grew weaker. I suffered from headaches and dizziness, and at night I did not sleep well. I was troubled with pains in the back, my appetite left me and I grew pale as a corpse. Finally I became so weak I was forced to remain in bed. As the doctor did not help me any, I asked my father to get me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had used two boxes there was an improvement, and when I had taken a half dozen boxes I was again in perfect health. I believe all weak girls will tind new health if they will take the pills."

Anaem a, ind gestion, heart trouble, rheumatism, kidney trouble, and the special ailments of women are all due to poor blood, and are all cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Entered according to Act of Parliament of Can-ada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of To-rente, at the Dep't of Agriculture. Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 14.-In his sermon the preacher shows how one sin breeds other sins, how remorse tortures and makes cowards of men and how human nature is pretty much the same to-day as in the time of Adam. The text is Genesis iii, 8, MAnd Adam and his wife hid them-

Where was the garden of Eden? is the theme of a never ending discussion. Some think its site was at the north pole. The site of the garden does not, however, concern us so much as the event which took place there. Man was put on his trial in that garden, and he failed. The consequences of his disobedience have come down to us, for all his descendants have been derrived of the blessants have been deprived of the blessings which would have been theirs had he obeyed God. I do not won-der that the sterile region around the north pole should have seemed a the north pole should have seemed fitting scene for the catastrophe. In the course of the ages it may have that the glory and fertility of been that the glory and fertility of Eden may have been transformed into a region of ice and snow. Many have tried to penetrate it and have

It seems as if the guardian angel, with her sword who once stood with her sword, who once stood at the gate of Eden, saying to the first ancestors of the human race, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther," stands to-day with the same warning message for the children of the twen-tieth century. Her garments of the "wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold," have been changed for the long flowing robes of spotless snow. She is perhaps the same sentinel, although her wardrobe of springtime has been thickened into the heavy toga of winter. Instead of swinging in her hand a sword of fire, she nov blade of ice. Instead of having her great armies of violets and pansies and lilies and geraniums and dahlias and pyristoponicas, and her innumerable hosts of other flora, both red lipped and white cheeked, she has her battalions of frosts, with their gleaming bayonets intrenched be-hind impregnable battlements of eternal snows.

Our first parents hid themselves our first parents and themselves, after they had sinned. That is always the impulse of the conscious sinner. He shrinks from meeting the God whom he has offended. A famous writer once declared, "The sins of the garden of Eden are as old as the dawn of creation, yet, like the rising sun, each day they are ever freeh and have new applications for fresh and have new applications for each changing hour."
What we first want to do is to find out how Adam and Eve sulked away into the edenic jungles to hide them selves after they had eaten of the fruit of the forbidden tree. Then to fruit of the forbidden tree. Then to ask whether living men and women are not now acting in the same way in trying to conceal themselves in similar hiding places. I want to show them how vain are such at-tempts at.concealment from the ommiscient eye of God and by the help of the Holy Spirit to woo them from their retreats and lead them to bend in humble contrition at the foot of the cross. There, there is pardon and cleansing for the sinner, and there may the vilest and most pol-luted be sprinkled with the blood which will make them whiter than

skulking feet and the averted gaze and the conspicuous absence of those who after they have injured a brother flee his presence even as the prodigal son when he desired to do wrong planned to take his goods and leave his father's house and go into the far country where he would not be in the presence of his parents, whose hearts the wayward boy was breaking. It is a peculiar but incontrovertible fact that sin, no matter whether spasmodic or habitual, produces a sense of humiliation and degradation in the presence of its victims whom it has deceived or injured. Thus Herod, the tetrarch, although he was a great Roman governor, trembled when he thought the beheaded John the Baptist was risen from the dead.

Remorse is a terrible castigator.

She has in her hand the grip of an unbreakable steel vise. She wields a whip which has a thousand lashes.

Each revolution of her avenging arm whip which has a thousand lashes. Each revolution of her avenging arm fetches the heart's blood a thousand times. Even under the very brightest of conditions remorse is a merciless and an implacable torturer.

Oh, sinner, let me prove to you that you are now, like Adam and Eve, hiding in one of the Satanic retreats. Why do you dislike Mrs. So-and-so? She was the wife of one of the best friends you ever had. Has she wronged you? No. The reason you dislike her and never want to be seen in her companionship is because that dead friend left you the executor of his estate. You mismanaged it. You used her money for your own benefit. If that widow had wanted, she might have put you in jail. Now you hate her. You never want to meet her. Not because she want to meet her. Not because she has wronged you, but because you have wronged her.

Why is that lifetime friendship be-Why is that lifetime friendship be-tween you and your school chum broken up? You were both born in the same country village. You grew up together. You came to the city on the same train, lived in the same boarding house and went to work at the same city store on the same day. Why are you estranged? I will tell you. You both fell in love with day. Why are you estranged? I will tell you. You both fell in love with the same girl. In order to win that girl's affections you lied about your old friend. You circulated evil reports about his past life, when you knew that no squarer, truer man ever lived. You said his family was not respectable, when his mother you have a second mother to you used to be a second mother to you and helped nurse you when you wersick. You hate your old school friend not because he has done an injustice to you, but because you have done an injustice to him. By the very reason you shun men and women who have done you no wrong I know. you have done them a wrong.

"Adam and his wife hid themselves" not because God hated them. They hated God because they had disobeyed God and eaten of the forbidden tree. Beware, O man, how you flee your innocent victims! But again I learn that our first an-

But again I learn that our first ancestors sought, other refuges besides leaf and flower and clinging vine and tree trunk and bush. It is true that the tropical forests are so dense that they make excellent hiding places. Sir Gordon Cumming, the great hunter of wild beasts, tells us that the Ceylon jungles in places are so impenetrable to the eye that the keepest and most experienced hunters keenest and most experienced hunters may sometimes be unable to dis-tinguish the wounded elephantine monster only a few yards away, monster only a lew yards away, though the valleys and the mountain sides may be thunderous with the bellowings of the dying wild beast. But sin never tries to cover up sin by the curtain of leaf alone. Sin always the tries to cover up sin by the curtain of leaf alone. ways tries to conceal sin behind the bulwarks of other sins. Thus, when Adam and Eve hid themselves from the presence of God in the garden, they tried to conceal their sin with the sin of falsity. They pretended they did not hear God when he called. They tried to conceal sin by saying, "The reason we have not answered thee, O God, is because we were unclothed and dare not appear before thee naked, as thou did'st create us." They tried to conceal sin in exactly the same way as thousin in exactly the same way as thou-sands and tens of thousands of living men try to conceal sin with sin. Ah, the "poisonous ivy" behind which Adam and Eve concealed themselves was not an arbor of oak, but our consciousness of wrong doing."

But one sin involves committing another to hide it and another to hide other to hide it and another to hide that until the sinner is buried under a mountain range of infamies Himalaya high, under a mountain range as long as the Rocky Mountains, which, like the vertebra of man, seems to be the backbone of a continent.

How does man try to conceal his

How does man try to conceal his first sin behi d a mighty bulwark of many sins? Here is a young man who has ben brought up in a country home. He was raised up right. He had sirst gospel lesson instilled into him at the family altar, in the Sunday school, and in the thurch pew, where, as a little child, he used to be taken to hear the service, and would sleep through the long sermon, clasped in his mother's arms. Away from home he falls into bad companionship. He gradually gets into the habit of spending his evenings in billiard halls, and his Sundays on excursion trains and picnic parties. He drinks a little. He plays cards a little. He dresses a little How does man try to conceal his cards a little. He dresses a little better than he can afford. He runs a little debt. One night while seeing some of his companions gambring he says to himself, "Why cannot I make says to himself, "why cannot I make a little money that way?" He is a collector for the store. He plays and loses. He plays again and loses. He plays again and loses. He feels again for money in his pocket. Now his cheeks pale and his hands tremble, for his fingers have touched the envelope which belongs to his employer. He says to himto his employer. He says to him self: "I must win. I will borrow $5 and pay it back very soon." He plays again and loses, again, and loses. What is the result? The next loses. What is the result? The next day he dare not comess, so he doctors his accounts. He keeps on using other people's money until at last one night in order to conceal his past sins he forges. Then all the infernal regions clap their hands for joy. At last they have a new victime. The law places its heavy hand when that young man's shoulder. A upon that young man's shoulder. A striped suit and a penintentiary cell and a broken hearted mother are the results of the sinner trying to con-ceal his sin behind a bulwark of many sins. But as we push our way through the flower gardens and the hedges of paradise and see our guilty ances-tors standing before God, I feel that they are not willing to leave their hiding places of sin even after the embowered roofs and the curtains of leaves have been torn aside, and the guilty pair are compelled to confess that the fruit of the forbidden tree has been placed against their lips. Even now they are both trying to conceal sin within sin. What is the man trying to do? Why, he is trying to throw all the blame of his sin upto throw all the blame of his sin upon his wife. What is the woman trying to do? She is no better. They are both tarred with the same black pitch of meanness. Why, she is trying to throw the blame of her sin upon the scrpent. The man said, "The woman whom thou gavest to me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." The woman said, "The scrpent beguiled me, and I did eat." The young Adam of the present day says: "I believe all my evil desires were inherited from my ancestors, and they are to blame, and not myself." The young Eve of modern times, lifting the glass of wine to her lips just bethe glass of wine to her lips just be-fore her doom, says: 'I am not to blame. Other people drink. Every one of my friends drink; therefore they set me an example I must follow.

They are to blame, not myself."

I believe in many cases the responsibility of sin may be placed upon other shoulders than upon the head of the one who has to suffer. But, though in some cases the responsibility of sin may be placed upon other shoulders, this was not true of Adam's tin. It was not true of Eve's sin. It is not true of your sin. It is not true of your sin willing to give you and me enough spiritual strength to resist any temptation which confronts us if we only other shoulders than upon the head tation which confronts us if we only go to him for help, as he was ready to help Adam and Eve. And, my friends, in reference to our own sins let us have the manliness to acknowledge them. In the courts even a criminal earns the contempt of his fellows when, as they say, "he pleads the baby act." The way to pleads the baby act." The way to forgiveness is by humble confession, and there is no other way. If a man will not take that way he ought to realize that he is dooming himself to destruction, that excuses are of no avail and that he himself and no other is responsible. Never charge your doom upon your mother, your wife, your child, your surroundings, when you have no one to blame but your own sinful self. Do not try to conceal sin with cowardly words such as those which Adam uttered when he said, "Yes, I sinned, but the woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." Inexpressibly contemptible was this cowardly excuse, and the would not bear the responsibility for her own and her husband's sin, but avail and that he himself and no her own and her husband's sin, but attempted to fasten the entire blame on the serpent. Ah, not Excuses and evasions wither in the presence of the evasions wither in the presence of the Great Judge. Be open, be true, acknowledge your sins, and he is faithful and just to forgive your sins and cleanse you from all unrighteousness. It is he who tries to justify himself by accusing others who will be condemned. But why should our first ancestors have concealed themselves in their hiding places of sin? Why should they have run away after the fruit of the forbidden tree was eaten? Why did they incriminate each other and the serpent after they were brought forth from their arboreal retreat? Did God want to destroy them as so forth from their arboreal retreat?
Did God want to destroy them as so many seem to think? I confess that in my younger days I used to picture God as a tyrant, a monster, when he was seeking those two frightened, fleeing sinners. I used to think his voice was harsh and condemnatory, that the call, "Adam, where art thou?" had in it the roar of a wild African lion starting forth at night to seek his prey. But a few years ago my mind entirely changed in reference to this, for then I heard a great English preacher say: "This call of God is the garden of Eden was not the call to death, but to life. God's call. 'Adam. where art thou?' was the pleading call of a sorrowing father seeking a lost and a wayward child." It is the same call that you would give if your boy were lost in the jungles of the Indian hills. Then you would call, "My child, oh, my child, cannot you hear my voice?" As God was calling to our ancestors to come forth out of their hiding places of sin and they would be forgiven, God the Father is calling to you and to me: "Come home, ye wearied and lost sinner. Come home. Come home." Will you not hear his voice and heed his call? Thus we started this sermon with a garden; we are going to end it with a garden. The apostle Paul sees in the story of our first homestead a wrecked and disorganized animal and wrecked and disorganized and or-vegetable and ichthyological and ornithological and human world. Heads us to see how the whole creation—the birds of the air, and the fishes of the sea, and the beasts of the forest, and the flowers of the fields were influenced through and had their natures changed by the sins of man. Once love reigned everywhere. Now the law of life is dependent upon on the "survival of the fittest." The eagle begins to mount higher and higher and higher, not to come near-er to the heavens to see God, but that on account of the greater altithat on account of the greater altitude he can have a wider horizon to swoop; that with his keen eye he may see the helpless dove afar off, into which the feathered murderer can plunge that terrible beak and rip and tear and slay. Once the trees as lovers stretched forth their arms of branches and with rustle and moan talked to each other until for very love they trembled with delight. very love they trembled with delight. Then it was affection, wooing affection, and tenderness, enchanting tenderness. But now the patteries of the storms are unlimbered, and the thunderbolts are aimed at their hearts Now the mighty forest giants, not as lovers, but as dying warriors, groan and totter and fall. Once the lion and the lamb lay down side by side to sleep. But after the sin of man the caress of the shaggy brute was the prelude to a bite by which the helpless lamb was gashed and torn and became a meal for its foe.

But this is not the end. The same inspired writer tells us that the time will come when creation itself also "shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liber-ty of the children of God." Then shall the day of universal peace dawn, which the ancient prophet de-scribed, when not only will men cease from war, but the animal creation will cease to devour one another, and again "the wolf shall also dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the cow and the bear shall feed, and cow and the bear shall feed, and their young ones shall lie down together, and the lion shall eat straw with the ox. and the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the waned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy temple, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the seas." the waters cover the seas.

Oh, my brother, will you not be-lieve that this call of God the Fath-er to his wayward children may mean a paradisaic, an Edenic and a redeemed world, glorified with love mean a parasatc, an Edeme and a redeemed world, glorified with love on the land, in the heavens and under the seas? Will you not heed the Father's call, which is to-day seeking you even in your shameful hiding

WHAT THE DOCTOR DOES.

The first thing the doctor does when he is called to see a fretting, worrying baby is to give it a medicine to move the bowels and sweeten the stomach. The doctor knows that nime-tenths of the troubles affecting babies and young children are due to irritation of the stomach or bowels and that when the cause is removed and that when the cause is remove the child is well and happy. Baby's Own Tablets are an always-at-hand doctor, and promptly cure all the min-or ills of little ones. They contain no posenous "soothing" stuff, and may be given with safety to the tenderest infant, or the well grown child. Mrs. J. Overand, Hepworth Station, Ont., says—"My little one was much troubligestion, and Baby's Own Tablets gave immediate relief. I have found the Tablets the most satisfactory medicine I have ever used for children." Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 25 cents a box, by writing The Dr. Williams' box, by writing The Dr. Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ONLY WANTED A TONGUE.

At an auction sale in a Scottish village the auctioneer was trying to sell a number of domestic utensils, including a porridge pot. As usual, he was making a great fuss. Finishing, his keen eye caught a well known worthy, the beadle, standing at the back of the crowd, and he shouted out: "Maister McTavish, make an offer for this pot! Why it would make a splendid Kirk bell!" "Aye," replied the beadle, "if your tongue was in it!"

It was impossible to stop, or even slack much, at that distance, as the train was heavy and the grade descending. In ten seconds it would have been all over, and after reversing and applying the brake I shut my eyes. I did't want to see any more. As we slowed down my fireman stuck his head out of the cab window to see what I'd stopped for, when he laughed and shouted at me: Jim, look here! I looked, and there was a big black Newfoundland dog holding the little girl in his mouth, leisurely weaking toward the house where she evidently belonged. She was kicking and crying, so that I knew she wasn't hurt, and the dog had saved her. Wy fireman thought it funny, and kept laughing, but I cried like a woman. I just couldn't helisurely weaking toward Tribune.

there be degrees or kinds of heroism, then perhaps that arising out of unselfshness is the highest. At all events, this type was well illustrated by a sailor fad many years ago. He had been sent, a poor waif, to the training ship Chichester, and when his time was up he went to sea. His ship, bound for New Zealand, was run down in the English channel, and almost at once began to fill. In the confusion a woman rushed on deck and shouted for the boats. A sailor told her the boats had beep swept away. "Madam," said a said standing by "you can't swim: I can. Put on my life buoy." The lad kept himself afloat until he was rescued in the last stages of exhausation, and, though nearly all lives were lost, the woman to whom he had given the buoy was among the

A young woman but recently married was the victim of a good joke on one of the uptown streets a few days since, says the Albany Journal. She is extremely youthful looking, and at the time she was sweeping the sidewalk she did not look to be over 15 years old. A fussy old lady came along and smiled sweetly on the young woman, and then said:
"Lovely day, isn't it?"
"Heautiful," was the reply.
"Do you know where I "fould get a good girl?"
"Not exactly, but there is an employment agency just above here."
"Do you like your position here?"
"Pretty well," was the reply.

"Who is he?"
"He's my husband."

Hamilton did not always have the prefix of "Lucky." Three or four years ago he might have had "Unlucky" for a title with all propriety. Such was his financial straits that he fled to the desert for relief. He had heard that rich finds were being made in the Mojave desert and he proured a prospector's outfit and he started out across the burning plain. It was in this region of terrors that luck was waiting him.

He had hardly begun his quest when he met with fortune. Not many miles from the town of Mojave is a place where the ground is strewn with rocks and boulders. In crossing this bit of rough territory Hamilton stubbed his toe upon a small rock. Tradition says that Hamilton, when he arose, caught a litton, when he arose, caught a litton, when he arose, caught a litton, when he arose, caught a flimpse of yellow in the stone. It looked promising and he at once pulverized the rock and horned out of the diminutive chunk something like a dollar's worth of the precious metal. He was, from that moment, "Lucky"

Hamilton returned to Mojave, secured a team and began hauling the loose, disintegrated quartz which lay upon the surface to the station. When he had four tons of the rock hauled he shipped it to a smelter. It metted him $4,000, $1,000 to the ton for surface ore. He was rich and could have sold his claim immediately for many thousands of dollars. He refused all offers.

Hamilton considers that claim a bank, upon which he can draw at any time and have his drafts honored. About once a year he goes up to the mine and horns out a few hundred dollars and then returns to enjoy the ease and comfort thus insured. He says he does not wish to develop the mine. His monney is afer in that bank than any other. Panies or speculative tashiers have no effect upon his bank. His weath is there, all he wants, and he prefers

As a man's salary infreases testes become more exquisite and ideas more elevated.

Lena McBride, 17. years old, who makes a 60-mile drive three times a week carrying the mail from Colby to this post office, is Kansas's youngest girl mail carrier. She uses two horses on the long journey, driving one 15 miles out from Colby and then changes for another, which she drives the remainder of the distance. She eats dinner at the ranch, then returns over the 30-mile course, changing horses again at the half-way station. Her buggy has become one of the familiar sights along the way and cattle herders and farmers all know her.

A few days ago she found that the owner of a big ranch that lies between here and Colby had run a barbed wire fence across the trail over which she usually drove. To go around the runch was out of the question, and she did not intend to go back to her starting point. She fook from her buggy a pair of wire cutters and clipped the four barbed strands that barred her progress. The next trip she found the fence repaired and again cut the wires and left the gap open. The owner of the did it.

President G. Stanley Hall, of Clark University, Worcester, Mass., told the national educational convention in St. Louis recently that higher education and co-education are largely responsible for race suicide. "A large percentage of high school girls," he said, "actually wish they were boys. Their manners are being roughened and they do not develop pride in distinctively feminine qualities. It is said that the presence of girls is hemanizing for boys, but there is something wrong with the boy who can truly be called a "perfect gentleman." I do not like to urge that he should be a little rowdy, but vigor must not be sacrificed to primeness."

DULL SCHOOL BOY COMPASS PLANT

If that boy of yours, who is reported by his teachers to be dull in his school work, is bright enough about other things don't borrow trouble concerning him. He will come out all right.

There are plenty of instances of brilliant men who were slow in school. For instance— Who would suppose that witty, successful Dick Sheridan, one of England's brightest men, was a dullard when in school f More than that. His tuor told his mother that the have was an incorrigible dunce.

And there was Robert Burns, the poet, always at the foot of the class, caring for nothing but sports. And Walter Scott, the novelist, of whom an Edinburgh professor said, "Dunce he is and dunce he will always remain." "Sailors, when they're lost, get sair bearings from the stars," said a estern miner. "Lost landsmen, nowing nothing about astronomy, nast trust to their botarical knownest trust to their botarical knownest trust to their botarical knownest to lead them home. If I ever at lost on the prairies I look for a mpass plant. This plant is a pretty manon growth on the western ains, and its leaves always point a north. If you know where north you are sure the south is behind on, the east on your right and the est on your seft, and there is noing for you to do but yash on ard in the direction your home lies, how the compass plant has saved any a lost traveller from death on the plains. Woodmen tell me that hen they get lost they find due then they get lost they find due then they get lost they find due the side of the trunks that faces of the trunks that faces on the side of the trunks that faces on the side of the trunks that faces on the trunks, but on the north side of the trunks will be und, to a certain extent, all over the trunks, but on the north side of the wood three times as uch of it."

A Boston man relates the following incident, which he says came under his own observation: Two young horses have been kept in a pasture with a number of cows and a year-old calf, and they were accustomed to come up to the gate every night with the cows, the older leading the line and the younger bringing up the rear. Owing to a want of water in their own pasture some sheep were brought to the one in which thee horses and cows were kept, and these sometimes followed the cows when they came at night to be milked. One night they did so, and when all the animals were standing together the ram butted the calf, which could not defend itself, and the older colt, going over to it, seized the ram by the wool on its back and lifting it entirely off the ground shook it vigorously. He then placed it on the ground and it quickly ran away, while the horse continued to stand

The Chinese, Japanese and Stamese are peculiarly skilful at botanical feats. One of their wonderful achievements is known as the "changeable rose." The bloom is white in the shade and red in the sunlight. After night or in a dark room this curiosity of the rose family is a pure, way-white blossom. When transferred to the open air the transformation immediately steps in the time of the entire change of the flower from white to red depending on the degree of sunlight and warmth. First the petals take on a kind of washed or faded blue color, and rapidly change to a faint blush of pink. The pink gradually deepens in hue until you find that your lily-white rose of an hour before Is as red as the reddest peony that ever bloomed.

The really bright boy may be pursuing a line of his own. He is studying outside the curriculum. His predilections sway him and he thinks of the things he wants to think of trather than of the things in the text book. Unconsciously he is educating thinself. He is working out his individual problem single-handed. Or it may be the teacher does not know how to clicit the boys interest. He struggles along and is rated low. At the same time he may be picking up more than he is given credit for. He absorbs something from recitations. And it may be that he is getting a better grasp on the salient features of a subject than some of the bookworms. There are good reasys fail to make a THEN THE FIGHT BEGAN.

"Why as recently as five years ago the sex had a craze for making pawnshop displays on their hauds and wore rings morning, noon and night, anywhere and everywhere.

"But it is not so now. The matron is content with wearing her wedding ring, even putting aside her ongagement ring, while her single sister, if she wears even one ring, usually adopts a plain dull gold seal ring.

"Oh, but that's wicked! It's gamb-ling in stocks you know!" A CAGF FOR THE LARK.

SMALLEST ELECTRIC MOTOR

The smallest electric motor in the world has been built by a watchmaker whose work has trained him to handle delicate machinery with the exquisite care required in making a motor that moves with all the regularity of a big maehine, and yet is so small that its owner wears it as a scarf-pin.

Viewed from a little distance, the article has the appearance of a very valuable and rather curiously-designed pin. It is only when standing near to it that its nature can be discovered.

The first thing to attract attention is the buzzing of the machine which, by means of a current obtained from a small battery darried in the vest docket, is kept in operation at a high rate of speed, with a noise like a bee buzzing.
