This is the record made by A. A.
Wright, M.P. for South Renfrew, on one of the smallest dairy farms in the

"It is true," said Mr. Wright, when asked him for the details behind the brief statement just given, "that I do not oroduce on the ten acres all the feed required for the twenty-five head which I keep. I rent about three acres of pasture land, but this is for the purpose of giving the cows exercise rather than for the amount of feed they obtain from the rented land. I also buy my hay, but it is cheener to buy my hay, but it is cheaper to buy hay than produce it. Of course, I buy my bran also, but this is done by all dairy farmers, no matter how much ther holdings. The land which I own is mainly given to the production of corn for silage. I plant Lengfellow and Leeming, and raise about 15 tons to the acre. The cost of maintaining to the acre. The cost of maintaining my cows will vary from year to year depending largely on the price of bran. Some years bran will cost $18 a ton, and in other years I can buy as low as $12. Taking the average of one year with another, however, the cost of feeding per head runs at about $50, and the average returns per cow will be $100 per year. The milk is sold in town at five cents a quart in summer and six cents in winter. I ummer and six cents in winter. I have three men at work all the time. My cows are all Jerseys. One of them gave 8,118 pounds of milk in a year, testing 4.2 per cent. Nearly all my cows, however, run six to eight thousand pounds per year, and none test under 4 per cent. I know just what each cow is giving, because I weigh the milk night and morning, and know at the end of a month how each cow in the dairy barn stands."

tories, I find that at present and for some time past, the makers are having great difficulty in turning out cheese of fine quality. That I find to be due to a peculiar taint which seems to be in the milk throughout the whole district. This is not a new last that it is a present at a research. the whole district. This is not a new taint, but it is so prevalent at present that it has become a serious matter, and as such, demands our immediate attention. The reason for this taint being so prevalent at the present time may possibly be due to the nature of the season, which for the last three weeks, has been most favorable for the growth ot the bacteria which produce this taint, and which are to be found in large numbers in cowstables, milking yards and cheese factories, baving poor sanitary conditions, and in and around whey tanks that have been allowed to become foul. The cheese made from milk with this taint is invariably open and not clean in flavor, invariably open and not clean in flavor, the openness taking the form of small, tound or obleng holes, increasing to to appear.

Therefore I would say to the makers who are having this taint to contend with, not to attempt to overcome it by ripening the milk too low before setting, as the taint seems to develop more rapidly in milk and curd having high acidity. Set the milk sufficiently sweet to insure good body and a bright color in the curd before sufficient acid Of couse to remedy this difficulty we must get at the source of con-tamination of the milk, and in our endeavor to find this out we have se cured the services of Dr. Connell, bac-teriologist, of Kingaton, who will take the matter up immediately and if possible find out the source. In the Four young gentlemen of Brockville have been having an outing up the line of the B & W., and were last week encamped just across the locks from Newboro. They were having just a plain Thousand Island time, varied by an occasional Charleston I would recommend the patrons. I would recommend the patrons to see ity to cow stables, milking yards, swill barrels, hog-peas, hog-troughs, or anything that gives an offensive odor, to see that the cows are not allowed to get stagnant or impure water, and that the milk is strained, sereated and cooled, in a clean at-mosphere, immediately after milking. I trust that the patrons sending milk to cheesefactories will take enough interest in this matter to see that everything is done that will insure their milk being in a condition to make cheese of fine quality. Un-less this is done you are sustaining so much loss and aiding to injure the reputation of the product.

A TESTIMONIAL

On the 17th inst., Mrs. (Rev.) D. Earl went to Delta for a visit with friends, and one day last week a gathering in her honer was held at Morris Park. About 150 of her friends were present and a very pleasant time was spent, Mrs. Earl being warmly greeted by all. A feature of the day was the presentation to Mrs. Earl of a purse and the following address:—

To MRS. D. EARL,-The undersigned friends have much pleasure in meeting you here on the beautiful shores of the Lower Beverly Lake, and desire to express to you the strong attachment we have always en-tertained for you as a friend, a neighbor and a lady, as well as our appreciation of your course and conduct as a Christian worker. We missed you when the rigid laws of the itneracy of your church compelled you to leave us for other fields of labor. We beg to ask you to accept of this purse as s rmali token of our esteem for you.

By Rev. E. J. Hardy, Author of "How to be Happy Though Married.

In Praise of Love.

Love rules without swords and binds without cords. We talk of the power exercised by the Sultan of Turkey or the Emperor of China, but what is it compared with the sway which love holds in court, in camp, and in the world generally? Love "raises the lowly and humbles the great." History records many examples of King Cophetuas marrying beggar maids and ruling according to the wishes of their wives. Almost every war which has been rying beggar maids and ruling according to the wishes of their wives. Almost every war which has been waged in the world, since the one for Helen of Troy, has been directly or indirectly caused by women. If this be too much to say, it is at least certain that women could have prevented these wars from taking place. If they all had united in refusing to give their love to soldiers and other fighting men, and there were no blacklegs among them, there would have been no wars. It is a fact, however, that in the middle ages the bright gyes of women rained influence and adjudged the prizes of fournaments, and that even in this twentieth century of Christianity women get scarlet-and-khaki fever and dote upon the military. Is it any wonder that wars do not cease?

not cease? So great is the power of love that So great is the power of love that a woman who loves and is loved can make a man and his life take almost any shape she likes. "Believe me," eays Ruskin, addressing girls, "the whoic course and character of your lovers' lives may be in your hands; what you would have them be they shall be, if you not only desire to have them so, but deserve to have them so," desire to have them so, but deserve to have them so."

A man who was competing for a Government appointment was observed at the examination now and then to take something from his pocket. Whenever a stiff bit of work was reached out came this mysterwas reached out came this hyster-lous something. An examiner, sus-pecting that he was copying, asked to see what he had in his haud. The man blushed and showed the portrait of the girl who was to be-come his wife if he gained the aptome his wife if he games the appointment. He was getting inspiration from the sweet face. This is an illustration of the power of love to urge us to be and to do our best. Drinking toasts is a stupid custom, but there is one toast which always seems to me to be excusable, and but there is one toost which always seems to me to be excusable, and that is the toost to sweethearts and wives. The word "sweetheart" is a beautifully expressive one, and is associated with the best feelings is associated with the best reetings of our nature, and with the bright-est period of our life. When a young man falls in love his heart is put to school, and our hearts need school-ing even more than do our heads. To have loved a good woman is to have received a liberal education, and it would seem that this means of culture is enjoyed by that many-sided man, the present Emperor of Germany. The domestic virtues of Germany. The domestic virtues of his wife help him to be the ruler he is. It was at Prinkenau, then the palace of the Grand Duke Frederick, that Prince William saw his future bride. He had arrived as a guest at the castle sooner than he was ex-pected, and while strolling in the park came upon a summer house, into which he penetrated. There he saw a fair-haired girl asleep in a hammock, and thought it only right obeying, she always knows how to Insist upon her own way when sho thinks that the best way in reference to her children. Speaking of her husband, she once said sweet-ly: "He is Emperor of Germany, but I am Empress of the nursery." Something to Love.

It has been said that "the first, condition of human goodness is some-thing to love. "I have lived—I have labored—I have loved. I have lived in thems I loved, labored for them I in them I loved, labored for them I loved, loved them for whom I labored. Well might Sir Thomas More, who used these words, add: "My labor hath not been in vain," for to say nothing of its effect upon others how it must have disciplined his own character. "Family life," says Sait leuve, "may be full of thorns and ress, but they are fruitful; all others are dry thorns," And again: "If a man's home at a certain period of life does not contain children it will probably be found filled with follies or vices."

In a speech upon woman's rights,

rith follies or vices.

In a speech upon woman's rights, lady orator exclaimed; "It is we'll a lady orator extantion. The same known that Solomon owed his wiredom to the number of his wives!"
This is too much, but it is an undoubted fact that the success or failure of most men depends to a failure of most men depends to a very large extent upon the kind of women they marry. And this we think is especially true in reference to men of genius. An intellectual life, however successful, requires the softening influence of a happy man life, however successful, requires the softening influence of a happy marriage to prevent its becoming sour and cynical. Tom More spoke for a large number of men of genius when he said that, having experienced the emptiness of applause and popularity, he found in his house something better than the world could give or take away.

It is often the case when you see a It is often the case when you see a great man, like a ship, saling proudly along the current of renown, that there is a little tug, his wife, whom you cannot see, but who is directing his novements and supplying the mostive power. This truth is well illustrated by an aneedote told of Lord Eldon. When he had received the Great Seal from the hand of the King, and was about to retire, he was addressed by His Majesty with the words, "Give my remembrance to Lady Eldon." The Chancellor in acknowledging the condescension int; mated his ignorance of Lady Eldon's claim to such notice. "Yes, yes," the King answered; "I know how much I owe to Lady Eldon. I know that you would have made yourself a country curate, and that she has made you my Lord Chancellor." my Lord Chancellor."

curate, and that she has made you my Lord Chancellor."

Some Famous Men's Wives.

William Cowper, the first earl of his line, was reclaimed from dissipation and disreputable connections by an early marriage, which he contracted a year before his call to the bar. Having lived happliy with his wife for twenty years he married in 1706, the year after her death, the beautiful Mary Clavering, lady of the bed chamber to the Princess of Wales. Her clary and their published letters show the loving terms on which they lived. Here is one entry in the diary; "After dinner we went to Sir Godfrey Kneller's to see a pleture of my lord which he is drawing, and is the best that ever was done of him; it is for my drawing-room, and in the same posture that he watched me so many weeks in my great illness." A man at court, in camp, or, indeed, in any of the affairs of life, cannot but be greatly strengthened for his work when has a wife like the one with whom Edmund Burke was blessed. He frequently declared that every care vanished the moment he entered under his own roof. His wife managed so well his private affairs that his mind was kept free for public duties. Prince Bismarck used to say of his wife, "She it is who has made me what I am." She showed her love to him in many practical ways, not the least of which was in defending him from bores. An ambasador of one of the great powers called on Bismarck, and in the course of a rather long conversation, asked the Prince how he managed to get rid of troublesome visitors. "Oh, that is very simple," replied the Chancellor. "When my wife thinks that any one is staying too long she merely sends for me, and thus the interview ends." At that moment a servant entered, and, bowing low, begged the master to favor the Princess with his presence for a few minutes. The ambassador blushed, as much as any diplomat can plush. Some Famous Men's Wives.

the master to favor the Princess with his presence for a few minutes. The ambassador blushed, as much as any diplomat can hiush, and at once withdrew as gracefully as possible in the trying circumstances. When the famous John Bright married his bride said to him, "John, attend to thy business and thy public affairs, and I will provide for the house, and relieve thee from all cares at home." lieve thee from all cares at home."
This is the sort of wife that ena-bles a man to work and rule in court, in camp and in the world generally, About Lady Beaconsfield.

A friend of Lord Beaconsfield, speaking of the time when he was plain Benjamin Disraeli, writes: "We were congratulating him upon the result of an election, and he said one thing that particularly struck me, "My wife will be very pleased." This lady was fifteen the property of the pligareli, and he with her naturalness and charm that he engaged himself to her in marriage. The Emperor frequently speaks of the Empress as a "pearl of great price," and has used on apublic occasion these words: "I could wish no better for the men of my nation than that the giris of Germany should follow the example of their Empress and devote their lives—as she does her life—to the cultivation of the three great Ks, 'kirche, kinder and kuche'—church, children, cookery. But though the Empress is one of those women who rule by obeying, she always knows how thinks at the Carlton Club, and begged him to join them. But no! In his triumphs, as in his defeats, there was no place like home, and Lady Beaconfield, looking back on this occasion, used to repeat, "Dizz came home to me." On April 3rd, 1872, this sympathetic wife hastened back from listening to wife hastened back from listening to one of his great speeches in order to receive the orator. When she heard his catrlage she hurried from the drawing room to the hall, rushed into his arms, embraced him rapturously and exclaimed: "Oh, Dizzy! Dizy! this is the greatest night of all; this pays for all!"

Marlborough's Wife. "Out of the strong came forth sweetness," might be said of many soldiers. An eye like Mars to threa-ten and command, but also a smile that betokened a loving disposition. Brave men are bender-hearted and chivalrous, and the sweetest domes-tic relations have not seldom been shown by those who were towers of strength against the enemies of their country. The great Duke of Mariborough loved his wife much, but Mariborough loved his while much, but it was not a love that cast out fear. In one of his letters from the Low Countries he wrote: "I have before me at this moment sixty thousand of the best soldiers in the world, com-manded by the best generals in Eur-ope, and I am not half so much afraid of them as I am afraid of you when you are angry." In very recent times we have heard of camps being ruled, and especially of military pat-ronage being distributed by woman's

Montreal, July 27.—(Special).—
Ernest Grant, 287 1-2 Urbain street, this city, is among those who never let an opportunity pass to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills. He has his reasons for this, and here they are in his own words:

"I had been troubled with Backache and Kidney Disease for twelve years," says Mr. Grant. "My urine was very dark and high colored. I would lose my rest at night on account of having to rise so often to urinate. I could get nothing to help me.

After a residence of sixteen months in Alaska an English physician has made a report of the diseases which most afflict the people of that cold region. There are, he says, two seasons—winter, the season of pack ice; summer, the season of swamps. The winter lasts for nine months, the summer for three. Among human maladies care to o spinal-meningith: is very prevalent, sometimes in spidemic, sometimes in sporadic form. It is often difficult to distinguish from the cerebral form of typhoid. Scorbutus is also widespread.

theumatism is frequent, and usually takes the neuralgic type; inflammatory rheumatism is rare. Pneumonia is almost unknown, strange to say. Affections of the digestion are very frequent, owing to poor food: nervous diseases, such as locomotor ataxia, etc., are also frequent. Alcoholism and the like are prevalent, due to the ennul of the long winter, but, on the whole, intemperance is less harmful in Alaska than in more southern climates. Insanity is by no means rare, and it declares itself most frequently in winter, owing to ennul, absence of occupation, lack of exercise and isolation. Its usual form is acute melancholia, almost always followed by acute mania. Suicidal exercise and isolation. Its usual form is acute melancholia, almost always followed by acute mania. Suicidal mania is also frequent. Taken altogether the catalogue of Alaskan diseases is a long one, and indicates that a vigorous physique and morals is required to resist them.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, etc. Wanted Jefferson to Cut Up

On several occasions last summer Mr. Joseph Jefferson had with him as a guide an old colored man to whom had reached dimly and from afar the fame of "Rip Van Winkle." One day, when the two were out fishing in a rowboat, he hazarded a few remarks. "Boss, is it a circus you are in?" "Not exactly a circus," said Mr. Jefferson.

"Yas, sar. Ye can act, can't ye?"
Mr. Jefferson made a modest reply.

Beef Dressing Contest.

Toronto report: Fally 5,000 people attended the second annual picnic of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, Local Union No. 188, of Toronto, which was held yesterday at Exhibition Park. There was plenty to amuse and instruct. Six bullocks and five lambs were killed and dressed during the afternoon, and the most expert workmen of this city and Buffalo showed what they could do and how quickly they could do and how quickly they could do it. The contest was between Walter-Dennison, of the Harris Abattoir, and William Glass, of Buffalo, champion of the Enited States. Mr. Glass holds the medal which he won at Rochester on Aug. 5, 1896, His best time is 4.44 Glass yesterday dressed his bullock in 5 minutes and 39 1-4 seconds, and secured 109 points. Dennison's time was 5.55, and his points were 101. Beef Dressing Contest. were 101.

General Botha's Aim.

General Botha's Aim.

Johannesburg, July 27.— General Botha's attack on Lord Miner at Cape Town may be explained by the fact that the latter was too strong to be deluded into granting class concessions to Boers at variance with the Vereeniging peace terms. General Botha's aim is undoubtedly to use all possible means to employ the undivided strength of the Boers in combating British sentiments throughout the Transvaal, thus seeking to create a leverage for party ends.

Where The Blueberry Grows

As I strolled up the walk of a great thoroughfare
And stopped at a fruitman's to taste of his ware,
I paused for a moment to study the hues
Of his fruits with their dainty yellows and blues.
There were oranges and lemons, bananas and limes,
And sweet, inscious fruit from the tropical chimes,
There were peaches and pears and clusters of grapes,
In boxee and baskets of many queer shapes,

As I stood drinking in the color array,
My attention was drawn to a quaint wooden tray
Of little round berries in purple and blue,
As fresh as the drops of their mountain home dew,
And my heart winged away to the tree-plumed steeps,
Where the wild poppy nods and the mountain stream leaps,
And I questioned within if the city folks knew
Of the beautiful glades where the blueberries grew.

Where the musical ripples so tunefully sing
And the leaf curtained thickets are all of a wing,
Where the wild bees are seeking the aweets of the flowers
And the butterdies spangle the walls of the bowers,
Where the world and its troubles are barred from the mind
And the pale cheek is kissed by the pure mountain wind,
There no worldlings disturb as the weary repose,
'Way up in the hills where the blueberry grows.

Where Nature holds fast to her motherly breast
The pine and the birch as they tower from the crest,
Where the eagle mounts high and the stag lifts to head
And stalks through the wood with a dignified tread,
Where the heart beats anow by the beauties inspired
And the toil-weakened soul of mbition is fired,
Where the wild flowers are fragrant and soft breezes blow
'Mong the harebells and terms, there the blueberries grow

[From the Sentinel, Gebo, Mont.]

[From the Sentinel, Gebo, Mont.]

In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortune who made the big race one fine day in April. During his travelling about and afterwards his camping upon his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a severe diarrhosa which it seemed almost impossible to shock and alone in June the tible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die. One day one of his neighbors brought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Celic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Celic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great sgony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed and within an hour the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disorders suggests this item. For sale by J. P. Lamb & Son.

The uniform success of this remedy has made it the most popular preparation in use for bowel complaints. It is everywhere recognized as the one remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant to take. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoes and is undoubtedly the means of saving the lives of a good many children each year. For sale by J. P. Lamb & Son.

4. Samuel......Came—The Lord told Samuel to go to Bethlehem, and anoint one of the sons of Jesse. But Samuel said, "How can I go? If Saul hear it he will kill me."—v. 2. The Lord then told Samuel to take a heifer and go to Bethlehem and sacrifice unto the Lord.

5. Sanctify yourselves— Change your clothes, and wash your bodies in pure water and prepare your minds by meditation, reflection and prayer, that being in the spirit of sacrifice, ye may offer acceptably to the Lord. "It is probable from the acts and words of Samuel on this occasion that he privately informed Jesse of his purpose to anoint one of his sons, but it nowhere appears that Jesse was informed as to the object of that anointing."

This was left for future develop-one of his sons, but it nowners appears that Jesse was informed as to the object of that anointing. This was left for future developments to disclose.

II. The Lord chooses David (vs. 6-12). 6. When they were come—After the public sacrifice there was the sacrificial feast, and in order to partake of this feast Samuel went to the home of Jesse. Between the sacrifice and the feast several hours would necessarily elapse, as the victim would have to be prepared and cooked. Eliah—Jesse's oldest son, one of Saul's army in the Palestine war (I. 7. Look not, stor—Even Samuel was still judging from outward appearances. "That which chiefly recommended Saul to the favor of Israel mended Saul to the favor of Israel was his size and beauty, but now in selecting a man after his own heart Jahovair shows that His divine judgment is based, not on external form or comeliness, but on the inner life. David also, however, was of a goodly appearance" (v. 12).—Terry. On the heart—God does not look at one's earthly possessions, or social rank, or family history, or literary attainments, or natural ability, for He does not judge from appearances, not even not judge from appearances, not even from religious manifestations—such as many tears, many prayers, a serious deportment, a solemn tone to the voice, etc.; but God looks on the heart, the inner life, the character, nd judges accordingly.

3-10. Abinadab.....Shammah—These 3-10. Abinadab.....Shammah—These two, with Eliab, were the sons of Jesse sent to war against the Philistines (chap. xvii. 13). Again—Jesse, no doubt, brought his sons before Samuel in the order in which he considered them to rank, bringing the most likely first. Not chosen these—David's seven brothers had passed before Samuel and the Lord had refused them all.

ready to give up. He quickly sur-mised that there might be one overmised that there might be one overlooked or counted unfit by the father.
Jesse had offered all of his sons, whom he supposed were at all likely to suit. But the Lord had sent Samnel, and the errand could not be in David was evidently a beautiful young man as he stood there before Samuel. This is he—This was God's choice, and Samuel was commanded to anoint him at once. We can see here how little stress the Lord really pets on outward forms and ceremonies, for David was not present when Samuel sanctified Jesse's sons with such great care.

sanctified Jesse's sons with such great care.

II. David set apart for his work (v. 13). 13. Anointed him—Isavid was anointed in the presence of his bretheren, though it is not at all likely that they understood at this time to what position he was being called. It is extremely doubtful if David understood the meaning of the act. He knew that God had some great work for him to do. The anointing was (1) the symbol of a setting apart by God for some special work, and (2) a call to him to prepare himself for that work.

Thoughts.—1. David had natural endowments: He had (1) a good in heritance; (2) physical strength; (3) attractiveness; (4) natural abilities

He had (1) a pious father and his home training was of a high order; (2) a healthful occupation, in which he developed in strength and agility; (3) an opportunity to study nature and meditate on God—seen in his writings in his references to the sun, the moon, the stars, the rivers, the mountains, the thunderstorm, etc. 3. He made a careful preparation. (1) He was faithful; (2) he improved his talents; (3) studied the Scriptunes; (4) became a true child of God.

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Samuel was the last of the three

Samuel was the last of the three great prophets who were illustrious n God's service under the theocracy. in God's service under the theocracy. These were Abraham (Gen. xx. 7). Moses (Deut. xxxiv. 10) and Samuel (Acts iii. 24). He was the last one of those great men who served God in the office of judge under the theocracy. He was also one of the only three persons who are mentioned in the Bible as being Nazarites for life. These were Samson, Samuel and John the Baptist. These last mentioned had all been born in direct answer to prayer of wives who had not been the Baptist. These last mentioned had all been born in direct answer to prayer of wives who had not been mothers, and they had been dedicated before birth to God's service to be Nazarites for life. Samuel succeeded Eli in the judgeship because of the wickedness of Eli's sons and the failure of their father to enforce obedience. Samuel was illustrious as being both a prophet and a judge, and laso by serving in both offices under the theocracy and as prophet under the reign of Saul. Samuel was a noble character, and the only blemish in his life seems to have been the very thing that brought disgrace on Eli's house, and that was the evil doings and disobedience of his sons (1 Sam. 8.5).

David was the second of the three great kings who ruled the united twelve tribes in one kingdom, and each of them reigned forty years.

each of them reigned forty years. He was by far the best, noblest and greatest of the three, and under his rule the kingdom reached the heighth of its power and strength. The events preceding the anoint The events preceding the anointing of David are briefly as follows: The people of Israel had rejected the theoracy, and in accordance with their request or demand God had consented to their having a king. He had chosen Saul for that place, and Samuel had anointed him to be king. But little was done towards his actually being king for some time, except the affair at Jebesh gilead, in which Saul defeated the Ammonites. This was feated the Ammonites. This was used by Samuel to officially install Saul into the kingdom, and Saul was acknowledged as king by the people of Gilgal. This first successful in the saul's saul's saul's successful in the saul's saul's people of Gilgal. This first success was the beginning of Saul's downfall.

This anointing was probably the most notable of any in the Bible, both on account of the character of the personages and on account of its results. Samuel was a pro-phet, Judge and Nazarite for life, the only instance of such a combination.

The results of this anointing of The results of this anointing of David are immediately manifest. The Spirit of the Lord came upon David, and at the same time departed from Saul. He continues in the kingdom for some time and has some remarkable success, but God has forsaken him. The anointing oil was an emblem of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit.

The patrons of a cheese factory have a direct financial interest in supplying only good pure milk, free from taints or bad flavors. Thousands of dollars are lost to the country annually because patrons send to the factories tainted milk, which to the factories tainted milk, which if used at all, not only precludes the manufacture of first-class-cheese, but diminishes the quantity of cheese per 100 pounds of milk. Some of the chief causes of tainted or gassy milk have been enumerated by the Dairy Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, in order that patrons may be induced to guard against them. In many cases the source of trouble may be found in the undesirable germs that get into the milk during and after milking. These germs are always associated with flith in some form or other. Careful investigations show that a very large proportion of the cases of taints or bad flavors in milk and its products are caused by the germs which are always present in the droppings of animals. Such germs are to be found in large numbers wherever such droppings are deposited. The mud of for growing or dry cattle, if turnips and rape are fed, even in limited quantities, to milking cows, there is a likelihood of imparting to the milk a taint which annot be eliminated by any process known to the cheesemaker's art. Some first-class foods when fed alone, and to excess, will cause indigestion and thus indirectly affect the milk. One example of this kind is found in green clover.

In conclusion it may be said that when cows have free access to sait at all times they will give more milk, which will have a better flavor and keep sweet longer, than when they do not get any at all, or receive it only at intervals. Yours very truly.

of contamination.

The whey tank is a common source of infection at those factories where the whey is returned to the patrons in the milk cans. This practice is detrimental to successful cheese making, but when it cannot be arranged to have the whey disposed of in some other way, the tanks should be kept thoroughly clean in order to lessen the danger of contamination. They should be emptied at least once a week. tamination.

Absorption of Odors.

It is a well known fact that milk It is a well known fact that milk will absorb some odors to which it is exposed. Warm milk will absorb odors quite as freely as that which has been cooled; hence the necessity for removing it from the stable or milking yard as soon as possible after it is drawn.

An Impure Water Supply.

An abundant supply of pure water for the cows, is one of the essentials for the production of good milk. When cows are compelled to drink the water of swamps, muddy ponds, or sluggish streams and ditches, in which there is dacaying animal matter, including their own droppings, there is a constant menace to their health, and unless the cows are in good health they cannot give first class milk. Moreover the mud, often full of foul germs, which collects on the legs, flanks and udders of the cows, and falls into the milk at the time of milking, is a direct source looked.

Improper Feeding. There is in Canada an abundance of good, wholesome food, available for cattle feeding purposes. The natural pastures are, on the whole, excellent, and it is only in limited districts or at certain seasons of the year that trouble is experienced with weed flavors. Among the cultivated foods, turnips and rape are two prominent exceptions to the rule of suitability which applies in general to Canadian fodder crops. THE SERVIAN MASSACRE.

The Shocking Truth About the Blackest of Crime.

The Shocking Truth About the Blackest of Crime.

("Ivanovich" in Ninescenth Century. Beigrade is less than two days by the Oriental express from Paris, lutthe psychical state of the French officer is hundreds of years in advance of that of the Servian colonel and lieutenants who tried to clear off by massacre the Obrenovich dynasty. The ultra modern circumstances which accompanied their work render it more revolting. Officers who had studied in the Zurich Polytechnic School knew how to use dynamite without injury to themselves when they wanted to break in doors massive as those of a church. Those who had been told off to cut the electric wires communicating with lamps had India-rubber gloves. They searched by the light of composite candles they had brought within pockets for the hiding-place of the King and Queen. When they discovered the fugitives, some of the officers held high the candles for their comrades to lay on and not spare the unfortunate pair. There was no attempt to resist. All Alexander wanted was "to die with Draga," and this elevated him into the region of romance; it may hereafter furnish a theme to Servian bards. Another gnodern circumstance makes one's flesh creep. The bodies, flung out of a window, lay on a garden walk until dawn, when a soldier received an order to wash them with a fireman's hydrant, and when they had been cleaned to lay them on the tables of the palace kitchen for dissection. The surregeons had been requisitioned to come there at 5 o'clock. When they arrived they received instructions to search into the cerebral causes of Alexander's incapacity and to ascertain whether Draga could have hoped to be a mother.

To what degree their report is sincere it is yet impossible to say. They Alexander's incapacity and to ascertain whether Draga could have hoped to be a mother.

To what degree their report is sincere it is yet impossible to say. They found the King had an abnormally thick and small skull and solerosed and adhesive meninges. He also suffered from spinal malformation. Draga suffered from the malady which two French doctors some time diagnosed, but of which a Russian doctor sent by the Czar to examine her could see no sign. * * Well, at the post-morten in the palace kitchen at Belgrade, the surgeons counted in the body of Alexander six revolver wounds, each deadly, and forty-two sword wounds. Draga received two pistol balls and sixty-two sword cuts and slashes. She had been cut to pleces, but they left her face unmutilated. And-still more frightful—her corpse bore black and blue marks that testified to a mercikess pounding with strong fists. The regicides gave so many conflicting accounts of their adventure that one did not know what to believe. It is now bertain that the King and Queen were defenceless; that they at once on being aroused by the dynamite took refuge in her wardrobe room, and that they never sought to escape by the roof, and did not run through a long suite of rooms, slamming the doors after them. They had not a moment's time to proper the country of the country o

They had not a moment's time to utter a prayer.
Draga's brothers received a five minutes respite to make their souls. N'codemus, the eldest, for whom Mademoiselle Pach mourns in Brussels, asked for clears and for leave to embrace his brother. He and Niebolns faced unflinchingly a firing party, casting away the clear ends as they stood before a wall. This reminds one of La Tremoulle, the light-hearted and heroic Frenchman in Sardou's "Patrie."

"No, my lord; no one but Mr. Saunders and me, and you now, my lord."

The marquis left the room, and came back with the soft cap on his head.

"I will go with you," he said.
Davie looked at him hesitatingly.

"Is—is it necessary, beggin' your lordship's pardon? It's late, and nothing can be done to-night, Mr. Saunders says, and it's raining in torrents, my lord."

The marquis turned up the coldiar of the velvet coat, and signed to him to go on.

"It isn't at all necessary, my lord, I'm sure," said the keeper.

The marquis closed the window after them quietly. There was is something terrible and unnatural in the intense stillness of the huge house. It seemed as if every soul should be awake and shouting "Murder!" instead of lying wrapped in slumber.

It was raining hard, and pitch ed her.

He dropped on to the chair at the writing table, and leaned his head on his hands, remaining so half an hour perhaps, then he roused himself.

The inspector nodded.

"You identify him, my ford. It's important. You are the first to see him after death; Idon't count. It is Captain Sherwin? I don't know the gentleman."

The marquis inclined his head.

"Yes, it is he, he said. "How—how—

"He paused as if he could not frame the question in its entirety, and Saunders drew down the cioth and pointed.

There was a red stain on the left side and on the dark lounging coat; in the centre of the stain a clear cut.

The seems as if he was out on the patrol along the bank, and heard my whistle. Between us we—we drew the gentleman out of the stream up to the bank—"

"The gentleman?" said the marquis. "You knew him, then?"

"Yes, my lord," replied Davie in a whisper. "It's Captain Sherwin, my lord!"

The marquis' hand fell on the back of a chair staading near him, and grasped it tightly. "Captain Sherwin!" lie said. "Are—you—sure?"

"Oh, yes, my lord, quite sure. I knew the captain well, saw him most every day. Yes, it's him right enough, poor gentleman."

The marquis stood motionless as a statue, his lips compressed tightly, his brows contracted.

Davie drew a chair for him and put out his rough hand as if to offer him support, but in a moment the marquis seemed to recover himself.

"He has been——" he said in a low male.

"You speak positively," said the marquis, slowly, almost mechanically, as if his thoughts were hard at work in another direction. "It may be suicide. You cannot say."

Inspector Saunders shook his head; he ridiculed the suspicion that it was a case of suicide. He declared, also that the captain could not have heen dead long when the body was discovered.

The keeper lit a lamp, and left the lantren standing on the table. Its firce circle of light happened to fall full upon the marquis. The inspector stood beside the doctor, but after a glance at the body his eye wandered to the marquis, standing upright and motionless. The inspector's sharp eyes, fellective and absent at first, suddenly grew fixed, and focussed themselves upon him. He drew nearer and nearer, and his most in the limself.

DO GIRLS MAKE TOO MUCH OF ATTENTIONS?

The marquis seized his arm. "Shade it," he said slowly. "We might be seen by those in the house, and alarm them. I cap find my way."

"If you'll put your hand on my shoulder—beggin' your pardon, my lord," suggested Davie, and the marquis laid his hand on the man's shoulder. He remembered and stated afterward, that his strong, firm hand was as steady as a rock. There are immense possibilities in this western trade for the Ontario fruit-growers, but up-to-date methods of packing and shipping will have to be adopted at once, or the whole of this great and growing business will be captured by the Amoricans.

Department of Agriculture, Comnissioners' Branch, Ottawa, July 9, 1903.

The fruit division, Ottawa, gives out the following statement; Numerous requests have been received from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories for Ontario fruit of the best quality, put up in neat and attractive packages of the sort that western dealers prefer to handle. There are immense possibilities in this western trade for the Ontario fruit is frequently forces. present fruit is frequently forwarded by express from Toronto to Winnipeg via Smith's Falls, and even via Montreal, to connect with the through trains. The result is that windless will be captured by the Amoricans.

Fruit Inspector Phip, of Winnipeg, writes that matters have come to a critical stage, and that unless Ontario, now makes a determined bid for the trade, the market will be occupied almost exclusively by fruit from California, Oregon, and British Columbia. In the case of apples, even Kansas and Missouri are likely to be strong competitors. According to Mr. Philp, the packages wanted in the Winnipeg market are the following; Early apples, the bushel box; pears, the half-lox, holding twenty pounds of wrapped fruit: peaches and plums, the crate holding four boxes, similar to those used by California shippers, and

Now is the Time to Spread Potatoes

Notwithstanding the fact that year after year the potato crop in Canada is very much lessened by blight and rot, and that this blight can be prevented to a large extent by spraying, comparatively few tarmers spray their potatoes to prevent this disease. It has been known for about eighteen years that Bordeaux mixture will prevent the blight, and it has been frequently demonstrated by experimenters and by other growers of potatoes that the crop is much increased by spraying. The vines were sprayed on July 10th, July 22nd, July 30th, and August 13th, and probably even better growers to spray, it is necessary to keep constantly demonstrating the value of it. In order, however, to get potatoe growers to spray, it is necessary to keep constantly demonstrating the value of it. The result of the tests made at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in 1902 and 1903 should be sufficient to induce everyone who lives in a disease infected district to spray.

In 1901 eight varieties were, tested. The average increase in yield per acre of the eight varieties, where sprayed, was 94 bushels. In one variety, however, there was an increase of 171 bushels, and in another 155 bushels per acre.

Weak, Languid, Sickly Children

Who Grow Up Frail of Body and Exhausted in Nerve Force Are Wonderfully Benefited by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is a puzzle to many parents to know just what to do for children when they get pale, weak and languid, lose their appetite and ambition, and seem to gradually fail in health and strength.

Eccause of its mild and gentle action Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is especially suitable to the needs of children, and endorsed by a great many grateful parents.

Mrs. George F. Brisbin, Lake street, Peterboro, Ont., states; "One of my children, a boy of about fifteen years, did not have good health for a year or more. He seemed to have no energy, was weak and languid and suffered from nervousness. The doctors said that he was growing too fast, but we became alarmed about him, and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It was not long until we noticed a great change in his condition. His appetite improved, he had a better color and soon became stronger and health. He is still using the following right along under this treatment."

Mrs. D. Ardies, Brandon, Man, or a great on every box.

Writes: "My son, aged fourteen, and little girl of three years, were both stricken with St. Vitus' Dance at the all-ment was, but could not keep them from getting worse and worse, so when I received a book about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I decided to try it. The boy had lost eighteen pounds in two months, and could scarcely take hold of anything. The little girl lost the power of her tongue, and could scarcely speak.

"In ow months, and could scarcely speak."
