Stella Mordant,
—OR—
The Cruise of the "Kingfisher."

CHAPTER IX

To return to the Isle of Refuge.

Rath was not quite easy in his mind about the "bargain" he had made with the strange being whom he had mistaken for a boy. His father had charged him to give men a welcome, but to keep women at arm's-length; and Rath had already disobeyed him!

But he consoled himself with the reflection that he had refused to have anything to do with Stella's mother, that Stella herself was scarcely a woman, and that they had agreed to regard her as a boy. Besides, her agreement that he could shoot her if she proved "dangerous" carried a deal of weight with him, and seemed indeed, unanswerable; though what she meant by "dangerous" he had not the least idea.

His ignorance of the world, and more especially of women, was of that intense kind which one would expect to find in a being who had lived with only one male companion on an unfrequented isle, and was ignorant of the art of reading and writing.

But though he had certain misgivings, and his conscience pricked him, Stella appeared to think the trouble had been settled in the most satisfactory manner.

"Mind, I mean to keep to our bargain," she said when she ran back to him an hour or two later. Of course, she made no apology for keeping him waiting. The youngest and most unsophisticated of her sex seem to regard the wasting of a man's time as their privilege. "You've got to teach me how to do things—hunt and—no—well, all the things you do. And I'm to help you with your work. And there are things that I can do that you can't."

"What are they?" asked Rath, with the directness which came of his peculiar upbringing. His father and he had grown to economize their speech, and Rath reversed the cynical adage, and used language to reveal his thoughts, not conceal them.

"Why, you can't sew, for instance," said Stella.

They were walking in the direction of the pine wood, and the girl's step was lighter and her face brighter than it had been since she was cast ashore, and she looked up at the grave face of the lad with a smile in her beautiful eyes.

A Bronchial Cough, Perhaps Weak Throat Use "Catarrhzone"—Dead Sure Cure

Wonderful Success Reported in Thousands of Bad Cases.

How many thousands are there who would gladly pay any sum to be cured of bronchitis or catarrh. Many could be cured if they would just use common sense in selecting their remedy.

Bronchitis of course is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes which were made for the passage of air alone, and neither the moisture of an atomizer nor the liquid of a cough syrup can get where the trouble really is. The diseased parts can only be reached by a remedy that can force its way through all the breathing organs. Doctors who have used "Catarrhzone" say it is the only rational cure for bronchitis. It cures by inhalation. You breathe in its healing balsams.

"Yes, I can," he said. "I made the bed covering in the hut."

Stella tossed her chin contemptuously.

"Oh! if you call that sewing! I call it botching," she said. "I mean sewing properly. I could make you"—she looked him over—"some shirts for instance. You seem to want them."

Rath was not at all nettled by this piece of candour.

"I buy them of the Indians," he said.

"And a pretty nice price you pay, I expect," she retorted, with an air of superior intelligence.

"I give them pelts."

"What on earth are they?"

"Skins; seal and bear. And sometimes the breast feathers of the seabirds."

"Do you know what a seal-skin is worth?" she asked, with an air of anticipatory triumph.

"Two hundred Winchester cartridges, a cask of sugar, and ten yards of calico," he replied, promptly.

She laughed him to scorn.

"It's worth pounds and pounds!" she said. "Why, only rich people can afford furs! The Indians cheat you, I daresay."

"I don't know anything about money," he remarked, placidly. "It would be no use in the isle, while cartridges and sugar and calico are."

She pondered over this for a moment or two.

"Yes, of course; but you ought to get more for them; and that's where I shall be of use to you, for, you see, I know better than you do the worth of things. And now show me where you live."

Rath led her to the hollow tree. He had rigged up a small shade, or awning, under the entrance, and Stella passed under it and looked in. It was a poor place compared with the hut. The bed consisted of a heap of dried bracken. There was no furniture.

Stella gazed at it remorsefully.

"It's like a bear's den," she said.

"That was all she said; but she turned away with that peculiar expression in her eyes which a woman wears when she is resolving upon something.

"And now, what were you going to do when I met you with that gun? I hope you're glad that you didn't shoot me?"

"I don't know yet," replied truthfully Ralph. "I was going to try and get a deer. There are some round the point."

"I'll come with you," she said, promptly, "and you shall give me my first lesson. I told my mother that I might be away some time."

He assented with a nod, and they went on through the little wood.

As they neared the clearing beyond Rath dropped on all fours, and began to crawl, and Stella, after a moment's hesitation, followed his example; but when they had covered some little distance—it seemed at least twenty miles to her—she whispered, for Rath had motioned her to keep quiet:

"I can't go on much longer."

"Hush!" he whispered back. "There are two feeding just behind that rock. We'll get between them and the wood."

"Is there any—danger?" asked Stella.

He glanced back at her, not contemptuously, but with a kind of speculative wonder.

"Why, are you afraid? No; they are small things; they are not bears."

They crawled round the rock, and presently Stella saw two graceful animals a little larger than sheep.

"Oh, how pretty!" she whispered, scarcely above her breath. "Isn't it a shame to kill them!"

He motioned her to silence, and all the Winchester towards her.

"You shall have the shot," he said. "Aim at the shoulder of the first one. Look down the gun until—"

But Stella, in her excitement had fired without waiting for further instructions. The bullet soared toward the sky, and she dropped the Winchester, and, with a cry of pain, rubbed her shoulder.

Rath rose and regarded her contemptuously.

"You didn't hold the rifle tight enough against you, and it kicked."

Remember it did that the first time shot when I was a boy."

Stella kept the tears out of her eyes, but still rubbed her shoulder ruefully.

"Did I hit it?" she asked.

Rath pointed to the two deer rapid ly vanishing in the distance.

"Never mind," he said, consolingly. "I'll give you some lessons. You shall aim at a tree-trunk. I should think that would be big enough," he added, innocent of irony. "Does your shoulder hurt? Let me look at it."

But Stella suddenly ceased rubbing and drew back.

"No, no; it's all right," she said quickly.

"If it hurts much you'd better rub it with some bear's grease. You'll find it in the cupboard in the hut. It's no use trying after deer now; they've gone for a week, at least. We'll go down to the boat and get some sea trout. They ought to be ripe now. You must get me the rod and tackle from the hut."

"Are you afraid of my mother, that you don't come in?" she asked, as they walked towards the hut.

"No, I'm not afraid," he said. "But she's a woman, and I don't like women," he replied, gravely.

"Why, I'm a woman—Oh, no! I for got. No, no; I'm a boy. Don't mind what I said."

He waited a few yards from the hut while she got the fishing tackle and they went down to the beach.

Rath ran out the rather heavy boat as if it were as light as a match-box, but first he made Stella get inside that she would not wet her feet.

"The water rots your boots, and you won't get another pair until the Indians come," he remarked.

She opened her eyes at this ungallant explanation.

"I thought you thought I should catch cold."

He stared at her.

"Do you catch cold every time you get your feet wet?" he asked.

"No, no; oh, no!" she responded hastily.

He rowed the boat clear of the reef, and took it towards a bend of the island where a stream ran over the sands into the sea.

"You can row, can't you?" he asked.

"A—little," she replied, doubtfully.

He gave her the oars, and stood at the bow of the boat and began to fish.

Stella watched eagerly, and uttered a cry of delight as a sea trout, gleaming like a bar of silver, leapt into the air, and presently lay kicking in the bottom of the boat.

"That's better than shooting," she said, her eyes sparkling.

He signed for her to take the rod. The boat was rolling a little, and of course she nearly fell over the thwart; but he caught her with his strong hand, and held her up right, as she showed her how to handle the rod and throw the fly.

"It's heavy," she said.

JOHN A. BRUCE & CO., LIMITED
Established 1850
HAMILTON, ONT.

"It's a light rod," he responded, calmly.

Stella performed the usual extraordinary tricks which mark the first attempt, and once or twice Rath had to duck his head to dodge the fly as it whirled around, and she smiled at the girl's flushed face and evident annoyance at her clumsiness; but presently a trout rose and took the fly—the fish were swarming at that spot—and she uttered a cry of triumph; but her triumph was short, for the trout leapt, she failed to lower her rod in time, as Rath directed her, and the fish got away. She stamped her foot, and, of course, turned on Rath as if it were his fault.

"It's hard—being a boy, isn't it?" he said, gravely. "But you'll learn in time."

"Put me ashore!" she said, in accents of despair; but he shook his head.

"Not yet. Try again; and do as I tell you this time," he said, coolly.

She looked at him indignantly; but, with a pout, took up the rod again, and presently she had landed her first fish.

"Take it off the hook!" she said, delightedly.

"No; you must learn to take it off yourself," he said as calmly as before. He showed her how to hold the fish, and watched her with a smile, as she, gingerly and with strange grimaces, performed the operation. Then she resumed her fishing, and was so absorbed in it that she forgot all about her companion. And Rath noiselessly plying the oars gazed at her thoughtfully. He was asking himself why it was almost as pleasant to watch her as to fish himself. The sleeve of her blouse-shirt had come unfastened and fell below her elbow, leaving the white arm bare. It was as white as snow, and looked so fragile and delicate that he wondered how she could hold the rod, and the sun shone on the soft, rippling hair and turned it to glistening silk. She reminded him of one of the sea-gulls, or a young deer.

She turned suddenly with a sigh.

"I am tired!" she said. "How many have I caught?"

"Ten," he said, counting them. "You can go ashore now; but I will go on fishing, for they are rising fast. You miss half of them. But you have done very well for the first time."

"Thank you," she said, with the tilt of the chin to which he was already accustomed. "How long shall I be here?" she asked, as she leapt from the boat which he had pulled well on to the beach.

"An hour," he answered, glancing at the sky.

She nodded and ran off, and he pulled up again. When he had finished fishing, he strung the trout together and carried them to the hollow tree which was now his home. But at the entrance he stopped with amazement. On top of the heap of bracken was spread the seal-skin coat from the hut and a rug; a tin cup and jug, and similar articles were hung up on the natural walls, and on an upturned box was laid his supper.

He regarded this accession of luxury for a moment or two in surprised silence; then he looked round, and even called "Stella! Stella!" intending to thank her, and persuade her to take the seal-skin coat back, at least, for she might want it—the nights were sometimes cold. But no response came to his call, and after awhile he sat down to the food; for he was hungry.

Presently, with steps so light that even he did not hear them, Stella stole from the shelter of the trees, and, keeping out of sight, looked in upon him. She watched him for a moment or two; then, with a little sigh of satisfaction, she stole away.

MOVING PICTURES.

The moving picture business, emanating from one of the most wonderful discoveries of the age, fills just where most business fail, increasing to desires which ask for excitement, novelty and thoughtless pictures because of the money there is in doing so. We find more money and less trouble in doing things which will appeal to the lower desires of our nature, and the struggle which all the "Uplift" organizations are engaged in is in uprooting the hardy plants of loose living which a great many people are making by greed of some sort. The making of money principally, there is education in some of the moving pictures, but such pictures are few. We have instead "strong dramas," "powerful climaxes," in which the heroine kills the villain with a glance and casts her eyes at the ceiling. Some children who had never been to a show before went on a recent afternoon and because of what they saw they don't want to go again. They were shown a war picture and witnessed a man shooting and killing another. A serious other incident that gave a nasty shock to their little minds. War is horrible enough four thousand miles away, and surely it is unnecessary to caricature it with such publicity and especially before children. Moving pictures have too often been the cause of turning to young minds to acts that have brought bad results, and the moving picture places cannot be too careful in their choice of subjects. I don't think we have a censor here but we ought to have every picture shown to a competent (not necessarily narrow) mind before it is given to the public. The great majority of pictures to be shown

THE THOUGHTS OF THEOBALD.

MOVING PICTURES.
The moving picture business, emanating from one of the most wonderful discoveries of the age, falls just where most business fall, in catering to desires which ask for excitement, novelty, and thoughtless pictures because of the money there is in doing so. We find more money and less trouble in doing things which will appeal to the lower desires of our nature, and the real struggle which all the "Uplift" organizations are engaged in is in uprooting the hardy plants of loose living which a great many people are fostering by greed of some sort—the making of money principally. There is education in some of the moving pictures, but such pictures are few. We have instead "strong dramas," "powerful climaxes," in which the heroine kills the villain with a glance and casts her eyes at the ceiling! Some children who had never been to a show before went on a recent afternoon and because of what they saw they don't want to go again. They were shown a war picture, and within a few minutes they were shouting and killing another. "Austrian other incidents that are a nasty shock to their little minds." War is horrible enough, four thousand miles away, and surely it is unnecessary to caricature it with such publicity and especially before children. Moving pictures have too often been the cause of turning a young mind to acts that have brought bad results, and the moving picture places cannot be too careful in the choice of subjects. I don't think we have a censor here but we ought to have every picture shown to a competent (not necessarily narrow) man before it is given to the public. The great majority of pictures to my mind are trashy, and, as I intimated at first, represent a catering to the loose way most people will live if they are given the lead.

THE SEALFISHERY.
From a sealer I have heard that this year's venture was one of the most foolishly led of all. When the steamers reached Cape Freels, instead of heading north a bit they deliberately took the shore route, tackling mountainous ice and trying to do impossibilities, the result being that the steamers were thrown up on the ice as neatly as if they were on dock on shore. In this sealer's steamer there were not ten men who would have done this—they felt like throwing away their sheath knives for they knew that the "follow-the-leader" game had lost them the voyage. It may be a blessing in disguise that the seals escaped this year, but men and owners are without remuneration. It seems funny that we go on every year and continue a business that depends so much on chance. More than ever does it appear to me that the most profitable to the country and the best way to manage the sealfishery is by Government control. The Government would own and outfit certain steamers and if you like, the men would share as they do now and certainly a bigger proportion than they do now; scout ships would be sent out early in the winter to locate the seals and at the proper moment the steamers would leave St. John's and be sure of getting such quantity of seals as may be decided by the Government as is needed. The oil and skins would be owned by the Government or the whole people instead of a comparatively few men, and the revenue would offset a great deal of the taxation we labour under to-day.

OUR ASSETS.
It is incomprehensible to me to see how the assets of our country are utilized. We are Newfoundlanders—we are born here and we feel that we have a claim on the country. We have a feeling of "home" about it and we are attached to it. But two or three find out some day that there is iron on Bell Island. They can, and they do, immediately buy it from the Government, making the rest of us aliens as far as that piece of ground is concerned. Then they sell it to a company which proceeds to literally dig wealth from it. And what do we get from it? All we get is the privilege of labouring hard to produce wealth for another country. If the People, the State, owned Bell Island, what would it mean? The expert value on iron ore is put at about $1,300,000 so that we may safely take this as the cost of the ore delivered to the steamer and would represent at the lowest valuation what it would be worth to the Colony. As a matter of fact the Colony could sell the ore for much more than this and the profit accruing to the Treasury would be well on to the million dollar mark. This should mean that our present taxation would be less by one-third, quite an item, representing better times and more for a man's dollar. If we all shared in the same way with the wealth of forest land what a difference would come over us—how we could lighten the chain of taxation that is so heavy on our necks now. To redeem Bell Island is well-nigh beyond our resources—we remember what it cost the Colony to buy back the telegraph lines from Reid. But with our forest land on Labrador and elsewhere, it is still ours; we have parted with many of our assets (notably the "Nest Egg" of half a million lately), but let us hold the land for Newfoundlanders and if it is sold let all Newfoundlanders participate in the price.

PROHIBITION.
The selling of liquor is based on the same principles which unfortunately govern most businesses, that is, to make money. Take the profits out of the liquor business and it will disappear in a month. The business is an ugly one because you can see directly the effects of it, but the seller can ignore this with the same unconcern that a merchant does the result of his large profits on groceries, dry goods or anything else. Each impoverishes, one in a direct way, the other in a roundabout way, and the miseries of an empty purse brought about by high prices are only in degree different from the miseries brought about from liquor. But however blind we want to be to the other businesses, I believe that we ought to help along any effort that will make men better. The cause of temperance has received perhaps a setback by the arguments against the passing of Prohibition now used by the morning paper by a highly prominent temperance man. These arguments have been put in the mouths of the liquor-supporters who have willingly taken them in and used them. I do not understand a man who can see so many sides of a question. In reality there is but one side to any question, and that right side is based on moral grounds. If Prohibition will make as much change as we are often told then it is right to have it. The loss of revenue may be likened to capital which is spent on the initial cost of a business; the dividends will come and they will increase every year, and the reserve will mount up in the prosperity of the people. The million dollars that we spend every year now for liquor will be spent in other directions and the revenue will benefit in an increasing amount every year. What ever ill woman suffers will bring it is undoubted that if women had the opportunity they would quickly do away with the saloons. The parade last Tuesday was no insignificant showing and was representative of the feeling in the city—all classes were there from the labourer's wife to the wife of the Legislative Councillor. As to the assertion in the Daily News that a Government monopoly in beer would make every clergyman, teacher and citizen a shareholder in the brewery, surely it was an inconsiderable excuse. Are we not all shareholders now in all the saloons of Water Street and elsewhere? Do we not take three hundred thousand dollars in duty on liquor? Is not this put into the same fund from which we pay Education grants, build our roads, our light-houses, pay our charities? Now we are shareholders in the sale of whiskey, rum, brandy—then we should only be shareholders in the sale of beer.

Falling Hair Means Dandruff Is Active

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.
Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scrub. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—any time—will surely save your hair.
Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

not one of the Government voted for it, thus voting against the very thing they spoke in favour of and proving conclusively that it was a party vote. The Premier also refused to name a day or a session or a year when he would bring in his Bill by which an election could be held on Prohibition so that it may be next year or the year after before he does it. The amendment, giving an opportunity to hold a plebiscite this fall and in the event of Prohibition to allow till July 1916 for liquor dealers to sell out and allowing another year's duty for the exchequer, is generous enough for all parties.

OUT "The Guard of Honor."
Silent and rigid—erect you stand, Unbent as the vernal rod!
With hearts untired for the awful feud 'Gainst Empire and our God!
You "presented arms," to the Most odious—
You stood as the soldier should; With the tender cheek and the tender heart
Of the boys we know! So good!
You may stand erect in the Fanes afar
Where feudal glory shines;
But your hearts will turn to your own dear land
And the love that beats and binds!
You go! May the scene of each church, at home
Within your memories dwell!
May the fervent thought and the heartfelt prayer
Prevail 'gainst shot and shell!

Fine Old Gentleman Suffered 40 Years With His Kidneys

He even had Hemorrhages from the Kidneys, so you may know how bad he was. Yet today, at 67 years, Mr. Allen is able to do a good day's work or enjoy a long drive without the least pain. This is what Gin Pills did for him. They will do as much for you if you have any Kidney or Bladder Trouble.

"I feel it my duty, for the sake of those afflicted with similar troubles, to send you these few lines about Gin Pills. I am about 67 years old and have been troubled with Kidney Trouble since I was 26 years old. This was brought on by my getting over-heated and then sitting on cold steps in a draught.
At last, I had Hemorrhages of the Kidneys. I went to three doctors and tried most everything on the market but got no relief. I got very weak, had pain and lameness in the Back; often, I had to lie down during the day and it hurt me to be on a wagon. I began to think there was no help for me. The bleeding continued for 16 months until I just happened to try Gin Pills which has now put an end to the trouble.
Now I can look back over 15 months at my relief from suffering and anxious care. I can do a lot of chores, drive all day, have no pain, although I am still taking 2 pills a week as they seem to make things easier."

Close Scrutiny Essential.

The demises, grants, agreements to make concessions, to give powers, and to exempt from taxation, which are contained in the Deal, now subject to the approval and confirmation of the Legislature, before they can become effective and be turned into law, are on such a colossal scale that it will behoove the members of the Legislature to subject the Deal and the Resolutions and the relations of one to another to the closest scrutiny. Moreover, in reply to a question asked by Mr. Lloyd, the Prime Minister stated that the Resolutions confirming the agreement had been drafted at the request of the Government, by the Solicitor of the House, who had submitted them to the Attorney General and himself. They had some doubts as to whether the Resolutions did not go further than the agreement, and had had a conference of two hours with Mr. Furlong, the Solicitor of the House, who had satisfied them that there was no foundation for their doubts.

In our opinion it would have been more seemly, if the Government had not sought the services of Mr. Furlong, although he is the Solicitor of the House, and of great experience and ability. We have no doubt also that Mr. Furlong would have been better pleased if he had been relieved of that duty, under this special circumstance of the case, and the work submitted to some other legal draftsman. He is a Director of the Reid Nfd. Company, and that Company has transferred large properties to the Newfoundland Products Company Ltd., and taken stock in it. Moreover, Mr. H. D. Reid and Mr. R. G. Reid are Directors of the N. P. Co. Ltd., and are signatories of the deed. Mr. Furlong's close connection with them and the Reid Nfd. Co. are circumstances which would have made it a matter of greater propriety, that his services as Solicitor of the House should not have been sought in the drafting of the Resolutions. We have no doubt Mr. Furlong endeavored to do his duty fully as Solicitor of the House, but that does not relieve the Government of the impropriety of the request, and it casts on the members of the House a duty of special care in scrutinizing the Deal and the Resolutions and their relations one to the other.

It is stated in high official quarters that it is becoming increasingly improbable that Italy will participate in the war, at least for some time to come.

RUSSIANS INVADING EAST PRUSSIA.
LONDON, To-day.
A strong column of Russian cavalry again has invaded East Prussia near Memel, says the Petrograd correspondent, and is threatening the German left flank.

A GERMAN REPORT.
LIMA, To-day.
A despatch to LaPrensa states the British steamer Orcoma has sunk a German merchant steamer near Bayovar. It is also stated that the British cruisers Kent and Orana have received coal from a British steamer, Eggesford at Port Bayovar.

AUSTRIA WANTS PEACE.
LONDON, To-day.
The Daily Mail's Warsaw correspondent sends a statement from a high authoritative source, in which the possibility is described of an early conclusion of separate peace with Austria. Although the air is full of such stories and indications show that Austria is desirous of an instant and lasting peace, the statement says it must be understood that if Austria ceased to be a belligerent, her position as neutral would mean that she would be able to offer as great if not a greater obstacle to the success of Russian arms as if she remained a belligerent. From the same source the correspondent says, we learn that recently there has been two conferences between Emperor William and Francis Joseph and Archduke Eugene of Austria at which a possible separate peace for Austria was discussed.

1.15 P.M.
WATCHING AND WAITING FOR THE WIRELESS FLASH.
LONDON, To-day.
All Britain is watching the North Sea for signs of a collision between the great fleets, which is believed to be impending. Message follows message from Scandinavia and all tell of unusual activity by the smaller fighting ships in northern waters. No conjecture can be made concerning the lurking place of the backbone of the navy—dreadnoughts and dreadnought cruisers; but there is every reason for saying that they are within call and ready, with decks cleared for action, to respond to the wireless flash. The announcement of the German Admiralty yesterday that the German high seas fleet has been out in the North Sea frequently of late without encountering British ships, is not taken seriously by naval authorities here. They incline to regard the statement as meant for home consumption, answering the demands by the people for naval activity. It is thought the German ships may have cruised in the vicinity of Heligoland, but a thorough British patrol would have sent a warning, it is sure, of any extended dash.

STAKING EVERYTHING ON TREMENDOUS EFFORT.
LONDON, To-day.
A special to the Express from the Belgian frontier says: "The entire area west of the Brussegart road is said to be literally flooded with Germans. Messages reaching me by indirect route from Antwerp and Brussels describe continuous passage of troop trains from Eastern Belgium. The Germans appear to be staking everything on this tremendous effort. The Daily Mail's correspondent in Northern France, describing the British attack on Hill No. 60, southeast of Ypres, says: 'The British success was due largely to the speed of the tunnel engineers for explosion of British mines, who anticipated by only a short time a similar move planned by the German engineers. The Hill is only 200 yards long. Fighting here has been more terribly concentrated than in any spot in history. While the hill mined and trenches sand-bagged and covered, some of the enemies' trenches are still virtually on the Hill within twenty yards of our trenches.'

CANADIANS RECEIVE PRAISE.
The Canadian troops have been specially commended by British commanders for speed and precision with which they dug themselves in after charging.

At one time contemplating going to Sealing Cases Before the Court.

The attention of the Magistrate's Court was occupied all this forenoon in the hearing of three sealing suits before Judge Knight. The court room was thronged with interesting listeners, amongst whom were several of our principal sealing captains. The following cases were tried: (1) William Hibbs vs. Capt. Robert Bartlett, neglecting to supply beef to crew;
(2) William Hibbs, Stephen Hibbs and Matthew Greeley vs. the Bonaventure Steamship Company, Ltd., sailing before March 13th, and (3)
William Hibbs vs. Captain Robert Bartlett of the s.s. Bonaventure, killing seals on Sunday. The complainant was represented by Mr. Morine;
Capt. Robert Bartlett by Mr. Mc-Nelly and the Bonaventure Steamship Company by Mr. Fenelon. Judgment in each case was deferred.

Spring Troubles Are Cured by Zam-Buk

Are you suffering from pimples, blackheads, an irritating rash, any form of eczema, or any other skin trouble? If so, remember that Zam-Buk is the best skin tonic. The rich herbal essences of which Zam-Buk is composed penetrate right to the root of the skin troubles, kill disease germs, and so stimulate the tissues that new healthy skin is quickly formed.

Mr. O. M. Smith, of Edmonton, Alta., was troubled with a blotchy, irritable skin. He tried Zam-Buk, and now says:—"My skin was very blotchy and irritable. I used various remedies, but nothing gave relief until I tried Zam-Buk. It quickly stopped the irritation, and after perseverance with Zam-Buk, I am pleased to say, my skin is again perfectly clear and smooth."
In addition to the ordinary spring skin troubles, Zam-Buk is without equal for serious cases of ulcers, eczema, etc., which have defied all ordinary remedies. Many people have been cured of such, after suffering for years and experimenting in-vain with numerous so-called remedies. If you are a victim to any of the more serious forms of skin disease, profit by such experiences, and instead of wasting time and money on useless preparations, try Zam-Buk first.

Zam-Buk is also best for cuts, burns, bruises, piles, etc., or as an embrocation. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk. Refuse substitutes; see name on box when buying.
For free trial box, send 1c. stamp, this article, and name of paper, to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

At Rest.

The funeral of the late Francis Coady took place on Sunday last and was attended by a large concourse of representative citizens. The deceased was very popular with all classes of the community, which was fully proven by the large number who paid their last tribute of respect to his remains. Mr. Coady was a shoemaker by trade, and worked at it continuously to within two years of his demise, when he was appointed caretaker in the General Post Office.
A few months ago he was stricken with an internal malady which was the immediate cause of his death. In early life Mr. Coady took an active part in all public matters, and was all his life identified with our local fire brigades. He is survived by a widow, three sons and one daughter, three sisters, namely, Mrs.
M. J. Murphy, and Misses Ann and Bridget Coady.—Com.

1192.—A HOUSE OR HOME DRESS IN COMFORTABLE UP-TO-DATE STYLE.

Ladies' House Dress With Sleeve in Either of Two Lengths.

Striped seersucker in a neat gray with facings of white pique was used for this style. The waist is made with a vest, finished with a box plait at the centre, and has raglan sleeves—a good and practical style feature.
The four piece skirt has an inverted plait at the back, which may be stitched in tuck effect. The Pattern is also good for gingham, chambray, percale, lawn, serge, voile, linen or linene. A splendid business suit could be made from this model in serge or taffeta, with vest and waist trimming of contrasting material. It would look well in green or brown crepe with satin trimming. The Pattern is cut in 6 Sizes: 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34 inches bust, measure, and requires 7 yards of 36 inch material for a 36 inch size. The skirt measures about 2 1/2 yards at lower edge, with plait drawn out.

FISHERY REPORT.—A message from T. Soper, of Chanaan, to the Board of Trade, received yesterday, stated that during the week six bankers had returned from the fishing grounds with about 400 qts.
The message further stated that prospects were good, but operations were hindered by foggy weather and scarcity of bait.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mr. E. Simmons' schr. Studland, is now ready for St. John's with a load of fish. She will return with provisions.

Mr. Wm. Day of Green's Harbor was in town for a couple of days this week.

Mr. George French, ex-constable, passed away on Wednesday forenoon, aged 82 years. Mr. French leaves 6 sons and three daughters to mourn his death. His two sons Wm. and Samuel, arrived from St. John's yesterday to attend his funeral which took place this afternoon. The C. B.
P. Society attended.

A baby boy was born on Monday the 12th inst. to Mr. and Mrs. John Bekham.

Flags are flying to-day in honor of St. George, England's patron Saint. The children of the High School paraded to St. Paul's Hall and had a little patriotic gathering, where suitable speeches, recitations and songs were rendered.

Miss Susie Courage and her brother, to take the S.S. Stephano en route to New York. Miss Courage goes to Buffalo where her sister, Mrs. Par-mitter, resides.

Dr. Paterson was in town on Mon-

Travers who was taken suddenly ill.
The doctor returned to St. John's on Tuesday morning. We are glad to say Mr. Travers is much better.

Mr. Albert Rogers met with an accident at his wood factory yesterday.
Mr. A. was operating a planing machine and the top of one of his fingers was cut off. He suffered much pain. Dr. Strapp attended to the injured member.

Mr. William Babb of Bryant's Cove, has just installed an engine in his trap boat. The boat is a very fine one, and was built the past winter for the purpose for which she is now being used.

A trip on the harbor ferry will convince any person of the great convenience this boat is to the public.
Mr. Ernest Sheppard, who is in charge, is uniting in his efforts to please the public, and that he is succeeding can be seen at every turn.

Mr. Albert Rogers steam whistle is quite an addition to the town, particularly in the west end, where the factory is situated. The whistle blows at 8, 12, 1 and 6 o'clock.

Three, Seven and Nine.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Why is a dozen? Why is twelve a fixed stopping place any more than fourteen or eight? It is easy enough to see why with our numerical system built on decimals, five and ten should be way stations, so to speak, but why twelve? Aren't numbers queer things anyway when you stop to think of them? And what an individuality some of them seem to have.

Three as a Fairy Tale Number.

Take three for instance. That's pre-eminently the fairy tale number. Everything in fairy tales runs by threes. There are usually three princes, of whom the third and youngest is always the right prince. There are invariably three sisters, of whom, again, the third and youngest is the desirable one. If the prince has to undergo trials of his efficiency there are always three trials. In the Merchant of Venice, to take a grown-up fairy tale, there are three caskets, and of course it is the third to which the prince's suitors are led which is the right choice. On the other hand, like the fairy tails of our babyhood, how many little pies did the bad wolf try to "huff and puff" out of existence; and how many bears wanted to know, "who's been eating up my porridge, who's been sitting in my chair, who's been sleeping in my bed?" Another series of threes, by the way.

Seven the Mystic Number.

Seven, I believe is supposed to be a mystic number, the symbol of the ystic religions. It is moreover a favorite number in the mysterious imagery of Revelations. You doubtless remember the seven golden candlesticks, the seven seals, the seven angels with seven trumpets, and the magnificent imagery of him "that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand."

Nine has always seemed an interesting number to me chiefly because of a peculiar phenomenon based upon it. Take any number containing several digits such as 54382; add these digits together and subtract their sum from the original figures and the digits in the remainder added together will always make nine or a multiple of nine. For instance, take the number 54382. The sum of these digits is 22. Subtract 22 from 54382 and you get 54360, the sum of whose digits equals eighteen.

Puzzle Somebody With This Trick.

This can be made into a parlour trick by asking anyone to take any number, add the digits together, subtract the sum from the original number, then give you all the digits but one of the new number and you will guess the other. You do this, of course, by adding together the digits given you and subtracting from the nearest multiple of nine. The only difficulty is when the digits given you add up to nine or a multiple of nine. The remaining digit may then be either nine or zero.

I have never heard anyone explain why this is so and if any reader friend can explain this mysterious property or nine, I shall be most interested, although I doubt very much if I shall be able to understand the explanation. You see, I really am a woman.

THE WHEAT CROP.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old St. Wash."

About this time of the year a great many people begin to watch the wheat crop reports with feverish anxiety.

Some of them are farmers and some of them are men who would like to sell things to farmers later in the year. And some of them are men who wouldn't know a farmer if they saw one, but who believe that they alone are able to guess what the price of wheat will be in fourteen days from now.

The farmer has a right to be anxious about the wheat crop because if it is too small it will not pay him to harvest it and he will have to go through the winter on the same old set of tires. And if it is too large, the price will go down and he will spend twice as much perspiration and binder twine for less than he got last year.

The merchant also has a right to be anxious about what wheat may decide to do in July. If there is plenty of high priced wheat, business will hum and there will be so much money in the country that the bankers will be compelled to lend a little of it in self defense because they can't sit on it all. Nothing is more pathetic than a banker who is trying to gather in all the money in the country after a bumper crop has been paid for and to guard it in his vaults, shaking a solemn head whenever a manufacturer wants a small loan. He can't do it any more than a hen can set on twenty-four eggs.

The speculator also has a good excuse for examining the prospective wheat crop with earnest care. More men have become millionaires by guessing how much wheat we are going to raise in this country than have gotten the same result by raising wheat, clad in overalls and an old straw hat; and a sudden, unexpected drop of 10 cents in the price of a wheat crop which will not be ripe for three months has ruined more men than the chinch bug ever has.

The only people who do not need to worry about the wheat crop are the ordinary Americans who are going to eat it next year. The crop may be big or small, expensive or cheap, but it is going to be sufficient. The American citizen who sits down with a furrowed brow and wonders whether the wheat supply is going to last through June is not only borrowing trouble but he has gone into the manufacturing end.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

A child forms new habits much more easily than an older person, and there is therefore the greater danger of the formation of undesirable habits. On the other hand, the young child is for the same reason all the more teachable, and can more easily learn good habits. A baby of eleven months, whose mother had carefully watched her development, and had especially guarded against the forming of bad habits was awakened one evening by some noisy visitors.

The following night she awoke again, and this time she cried until some one came to her. Her mother concluded that she was simply calling for a repetition of the previous evening's amusement, and let her cry for half an hour. Had she been indulged a second and third time it would have been very difficult later to get her back into her regular habits. The suckling babe can be taught to expect food and a nap at regular intervals just as well as to be allowed to fuss. However irregular may be the affairs of adults in a household it is very important that there shall be a fixed order of things everyday for the little ones to follow.

"Cascarets" Cleanse Liver and Bowels.

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic. Get a 10-cent box now.

Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headache, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

Embroideries are novel trimmings, being rare this year, the Paris designers seem to have excelled themselves in creating charming trimmings fashioned by cording, piping and passementerie effects.

Fads and Fashions.

Some of the newest imported gowns have a sort of corset effect of shirring.

The tasseled top boot of shiny patent leather is worn with grace by smart women.

Never were such attractive cotton petticoats shown as are now to be seen in the stores.

The Scotch Highlander's cap is in fashion for the child who has grown beyond the bonnet age.

Yoke skirts are still being used to a limited extent. Sometimes they are shirred very closely.

Floresces of sheer net, heavily beaded in Bohemian design are used on some of the newest skirts.

Black-edged handkerchiefs are not in good form for mourning; all-white handkerchiefs should be used.

Little cravats of silk cord, the ends weighted with cord ornaments, are worn under turn-over collars.

A new shade, described by its name, is known as clay gray. It is charming combined with yellow and black.

Charming, little motor hats, rather small, round crowned and sailor are developed in contrasting colors.

The oxford tie has returned, but it is glorified with an upper part of light color such as biscuit, champagne or sand.

A FOND FAREWELL.

WILLY MASON

Good bye for a season, old furnace, my lad; you kept us from freezin' when weather was bad; your rest, till November, you've certainly earned; I'll always remember the coal you have burned. Rest there in the cellar, oh, furnace, and rust, forgetting the feller who fled with disgust, forgetting the mountains of coal you required, forgetting the fountains of oats you inspired. You caused my soul twinges too fierce to relate, daddust your old hinges, doggone your old grate! I toiled like six dragons to keep you in coal, the coal dealer's wagons forever did roll out here to my palace, the basement to fill; I bustled my galus to square up the bill; for weeks did I scamp to heat up the flat, confound your old damper and cheap thermostat! Oh, rest till the autumn, down there in your den, and then your old bottom I'll shake up again; I'll claw at the clinkers and paw at the slate, and cuss like the tinkers—till then you may wait.

Willard at Baltimore.

Claims being made that New Champion is 33 years old.

Baltimore, Md., April 10.—Jess Willard made his first public appearance as heavyweight champion of the world at the Lyric Theatre in Baltimore, last night, and was received with wild ovation.

In the introduction of Willard, Tom Jones, his manager, announced that regardless of credit due to Willard or himself, the heart must be born in a fighter. The first preliminary of three rounds between Jim Savaga and "Tex" O'Rourke was a friendly affair.

Willard then appeared with Hemple, which was also harmless, but displayed the signal fact that Willard does possess the agility in footwork as well as defensive tactics.

Willard will appear in Philadelphia before a club-to-night, but expects to get through there before 9 o'clock and leave for New York by a special train, which is due to arrive there in time to have him appear in the ring at 11 o'clock.

Willard's Age and Name.
There is quite a discussion in the U. S. papers as to the age of Willard, and it is being placed at 33. One journal quotes from the birth and marriage records as follows:

Jess was born Dec. 29, 1881, in Potawatomi County, Kan., and on March 13, 1907, when Jess married Miss Hattie Evans at Leavenworth, Kan., he gave his age to Probate Judge Johnson as 25 years. Of course that was before Jess had any idea of entering the ring. When he took up boxing he chopped off five years.

A Kansas City despatch says that tomb-stone records show that M. B. Willard, father of the champion, died Oct. 29, 1881. This was about two months before the birth of the future champion.

A man in Denver who claims to be a distant cousin of Willard, says the pugilist's correct name is Arthur Buttingham. This supposed cousin explains that about 10 years ago "Jess" or Arthur, whichever it is, was one of the principals in a private boxing bout near Cripple Creek with a miner, unnamed now for the reason that when the 10 was counted the miner not only failed to get to his feet, but upon examination it was found that he was dead. The authorities are said to have gotten wind of the affair and made matters so uncomfortable for Arthur or "Jess" that he was forced to seek a change of scenery and also to acquire an alias.

CHEST DEVELOPMENT.

To enlarge or develop the chest one must increase the actual size of the lungs, or, in other words, to expand their unused portions. One should frequently inhale long and deep breaths, followed by slow exhaling exercises.

One should also take a lesson from children and indulge in hopping, skipping, jumping a rope, or running. Such movements cause deep respiration, also bring into action such large masses of muscles as those in the legs and thighs which demand large supplies of blood circulation and quick action of the heart to supply it. These exercises require deep inspirations, the lungs are thus stimulated to activity, their size is increased, which in turn expands the chest.

Breathing exercise which may be practiced with benefit is taken as follows: Lie flat on a couch or floor, extend the arms over the head; in this position inhale deeply through the nostrils while counting ten; hold the breath an equal length of time and then slowly exhale through the lips.

Nearly every movement of the arms calls into action certain chest muscles, but many of them are not sufficiently vigorous to cause development. Standing, feet slightly separated and resting both arms from the side until they reach an angle of about seventy-five degrees, palms turned inward; the arms are then carried slowly backward and downward, at the same time turning the palms so that the thumbs point forward and down, and then backwards and down, as the arms describe a circle, finishing at the side.

This movement may be repeated ten to fifteen times to begin with, but as the muscles become accustomed to the strain the number of times to repeat may be increased.

Design all your frocks with simplicity as the keynote and you will be in fashion.

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, April 23. The Governor, Newfoundland: The French Government reports German counter-attacks on Hill 60 have definitely failed.

Near St. Eloi the French have carried two successive lines of trenches, which formed an embarrassing salient in their positions. Fifty prisoners were captured, and many German dead were left on the ground.

The Indian Office reports Turkish forces, retreating in Lower Mesopotamia, attacked by turncoat Arabs. Their retreat was turned into a rout. The enemy's casualties are now estimated at six thousand.

HARCOURT. ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, April 23. Near Langemarck north of Ypres, the British repulsed two attacks on height 69 near Zwarteleen. German counter-attacks failed. The fierceness of these counter-attacks can't be explained unless it's the wish to compensate for the defeat of the Imperial German Staff. The enemy's losses are much higher than indicated in yesterday's figures.

In Rheims section, artillery duels. In Argonne, at Bagatelle pavillion, a German attack not very important, was repulsed near St. Mihiel. In Apremont we captured by assault two consecutive lines of trenches at a place known as "Tete de Vache." This point formed a salient in our positions worrying us seriously. A great number of German corpses were left on the ground, and we made prisoners. In Alsace we continue to advance on both banks of the Pecht. North, we occupy a tributary of the Focht and the Wurman; south we have reached Schlessloch, thus advancing eastward in the direction of Metzeral.

TORPEDOING STILL GOES ON.

LONDON, April 23. The trawler St. Lawrence was torpedoed yesterday in the North Sea, two members of her crew being killed.

A LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, April 23. With battles developing near Ypres in Flanders, reports of a prospective naval engagement in the North Sea, and preparations for advancing for the commencement of a combined naval and military attack on the Dardanelles, or some other vital spot in Turkey, the people of Europe are highly expectant. Of these three anticipated events, only one has actually reached fulfillment, that of the battle near Ypres.

That a severe engagement has taken place in this part of Flanders is confirmed by official reports, but these are so contradictory in their claims, that the actual result of the preliminary fighting is not known.

To those outside the War offices of the belligerent nations, it would appear, however, that following their loss on Hill No. 60, and their failure, after repeated attempts, to recapture it, the Germans have commenced an offensive from the northeast against the Anglo-French line in front of Ypres, which was the scene of such bloody battles last autumn, also against the Belgian line farther west. The Germans claim that with a rush they drove the Allies back to Ypres Canal, taking 1,600 British and French prisoners and a number of guns.

The French account admits that Allies had to fall back, but this was due to the use by the Germans of asphyxiating gas bombs, and Sir John French confirms this.

Paris asserts that with counter-attacks the Allies took many German prisoners, and that the Belgians repulsed the attacks launched against them. It is believed here that these operations are but the commencement of another battle in Ypres.

Although the despatch received from Holland to-night gives full back on the Liege line in order to have troops ready for possible use against Italy, should she join the Allies, it is considered more likely in military circles here that the Germans will give battle where they are, preferring to be first to attack, having learned from recent experiences, that it is difficult to hold even the strongest positions when extremely heavy cannonade is directed against them.

Fighting continues in Woerve, and here also both French and Germans claim successes. The French in this region are seemingly still on the offensive apparently determined to make another attempt to squeeze the German wedge which has it apex at St. Mihiel.

The prediction of a naval battle in the North Sea, which is based on reports from Scandinavia of activity by warships, and the prohibition of shipping between England and Holland by the British Admiralty, and the announcement that the German high seas fleet has several times lately been out in the North Sea without encountering British ships, are incidents of the war that are calling for much discussion.

The only news from the Aegean Sea comes from Athens and the Greek Islands. It is to the effect that firing is heard on times in the vicinity of the Dardanelles and Smyrna, also in the Gulf of Saros, where it is declared the Allies have made a landing in the vicinity of the Turkish port of Enos.

There have been reports of Zeppelin airships making their appearance along the northeast coast of England, but these reports lack confirmation. No bombs have been dropped on the coast towns, and it is thought probable that if Zeppelins have again been along the North Sea coast, it was for the purpose of reconnoitering for the German fleet.

Field Marshal Sir John French, Commander-in-Chief of the British force in France and Belgium, communicates the following under today's date: "Yesterday evening the enemy developed an attack on the French troops on our left in the neighborhood of Bixchoote and Langemarck, on the north of Ypres salient.

"This attack was preceded by a heavy bombardment, the enemy at the same time making use of a large number of appliances for the production of asphyxiating gas. The quantity produced indicates a long and deliberate preparation for the employment of such devices, which is contrary to the terms of the Hague Convention, to which the enemy subscribed.

"The false statement by the Germans a week ago, to the effect that we were using such gas, is now explained. It obviously was an effort to diminish neutral criticism in advance.

"During the night the French had to retire from the gas zone, overwhelmed by fumes. They have fallen back to the Canal in the neighborhood of Bosinghe.

"Our front remains intact, except on the extreme left, where our troops have had to readjust their line in order to conform with the new French line.

"Two attacks delivered during the night on our trenches, east of Ypres, were repulsed.

"Fighting continues in the region north of Ypres.

"This morning one of our aviators, during reconnoissance which he completed successfully, damaged a German aeroplane and forced it to descend.

"Our Flying Corps has brought down another German machine near Messines."

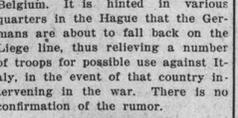

ARE THEY OUT OF HIDING?

BERLIN, via London, April 23. The German Admiralty to-day gave out the following statement: The German High Seas Fleet has recently cruised repeatedly in the North Sea, advancing into English waters without meeting sea forces of Britain."

GERMANS REPORTED FALLING BACK.

THE HAGUE, April 23. It is rumoured in military and diplomatic circles here that the closing of the Belgian and Dutch frontiers to traffic of all kinds, outward and inward bound, is connected with important German troop movements in Belgium.

It is hinted in various quarters in the Hague that the Germans are about to fall back on the Liege line, thus relieving a number of troops for possible use against Italy, in the event of that country intervening in the war. There is no confirmation of the rumor.

contracts had been drafted at his request by the Solicitor of the House, and submitted to the Attorney General, and himself. A question had arisen in their minds whether the resolutions went further in the way of concessions than the Agreement, and after a two hours discussion between the Attorney General, himself and Mr. Furlong, Mr. Furlong had satisfied them that they did not.

Mr. Lloyd asked the Minister of Finance if any further instalment of answers to his question, asked two weeks ago, was ready. The Finance Minister said it was not ready. It would take a fortnight.

Mr. Morine thought it inadvisable to go into Supply before a financial statement of the Colony's condition was submitted. It was common knowledge that the deficits were great, besides there were a great many outstanding obligations, amounting to many millions of dollars and the Government should outline how they propose dealing with them, before voting away revenue. He wanted to know whether it was the intention of the Government to meet the shortages by a broad cut of the expenditure or by trying to raise more revenue by increased taxation.

As far as he could see the Estimates were made up on the old model, and that some of the cut was made over expenditure with a Bill of indemnity after it. In face of this he thought the Finance Minister would not be acting improperly by adopting the suggestion.

The Finance Minister said he could not see eye to eye with the previous speaker and what he asked for was very unusual in the House. He, Mr. Cashin, was following what had been usual in the past and did not see why he should depart from the custom. He remembered the Budget of 1893 which he said was brought down by Mr. Morine, then Finance Minister, and which stated that there was no redemption for the Colony and that there was no more necessary now to come down with a financial statement than there was 20 years. He said the course suggested to be outlined was altogether unusual and unheard of before in the House and considered that no benefit could be derived from it. All the statements asked for, he said, that could be tabled, were tabled, and that there was very little kept back.

Mr. Morine replied that the reason he had asked for a statement was because we are in unusual times. Dealing with the Finance Minister's assertion that the financial condition of the Colony was all right, Mr. Morine retorted: "Is not the public debt larger than ever before?" "Is not the tariff larger than ever before?" "Are our loans not larger than ever before?" "Are our bank deficits not larger than ever before?" It was owing to the unprecedented circumstances, he made the suggestion. He did not make any such statement in his Budget as alleged, about there being no redemption for the Colony in 1893. It was at that time he brought down the Railway Contract and a considerable amount of which it was thought the Colony could not be redeemed, but he said under which contract the Colony was redeemed. He urged that no voting should be done until a clear, explicit statement of the financial state of affairs was submitted. The Auditor General's Report, which members were not yet conversant with, only contained data up to June 30th last. There was no statement for the 9 months covering the whole period of the war. We are now within three months of the termination of the present year waiting and expecting hopefully for the financial state of the Colony. He suggested that a Finance Minister without any knowledge of his bank accounts should be in the institution about which the Colonial Secretary was talking.

Finance Minister.—"We did without you when you were away out of this country and can do without you now."

Mr. Morine.—"I met men as big as you before and knew how to handle them."

Finance Minister said he could do likewise.

Mr. Morine.—"You never proved your ability and if you had your proper place in your own country, you should be inside of four stone walls and I know it."

Finance Minister.—"Do you want to prove it?"

Mr. Morine.—"I will take the opportunity to prove it in due time."

The curtain then rang down and the "parliamentary" talk ceased.

Mr. Kent asked that the matter be deferred, pointing out that when the House had not been sitting members had been busy on Select Committees, that he had been on four or five Committees, consequently had not time to study the number of figures given in the Estimates. Continuing, he said the public accounts presented an unusual aspect and the financial statements were rather complicated and required considerable study, hence he asked for further consideration to give hon. members an opportunity of reviewing the estimates and becoming conversant with them. He advocated strongly that before going into Committee on Ways and Means we should have tabled some general statement of the finances of the Colony, not because of anything peculiarly being disclosed and not because it has not been the practice in the past, but because of the phenomenal times and furthermore he thought it a good practice to inaugurate before dealing with supply.

Mr. Coaker was the next speaker. He hoped to see no more scenes in the Chambers, as witnessed, and expected better treatment from a Minister of the Crown, who had no justification for the way he acted. A reasonable request elicited a row. He hoped that business would go ahead with despatch as the P. U. members were anxious to get home as soon as possible for the fishery.

Finance Minister said he had no objection to rising the Committee if the gentlemen on the other side were satisfied to it.

Mr. Lloyd asked the Government to consider the request of a financial statement. There was no desire to ask for anything to embarrass the Government. We do not ask for any revenue proposals that would prejudice the Government in disclosing them at present. We ask for a plain statement how the Colony stands to-day. Tell us in a general way if you are not going to make a broad cut in the estimates, whether you intend to meet the deficit by means of loan or otherwise. He said that such a course would facilitate business. He hoped that before the Committee sits again that the Government would take the request into consideration.

The Finance Minister replied that he did not see anything to warrant keeping away from the usual custom. Any straight questions coming from the other side for information would be answered but he was not prepared to make any statement before the estimates were passed.

Mr. Morine.—"That was not getting over the desire for a financial statement, showing what our present position is and what the Government proposes in a general way to meet the situation by loan or increasing of tariff."

Mr. Cliff.—"The request of the member for Bonavista was a reasonable one. We cannot close our eyes to the fact that this is an extraordinary time. Since the end of June last considerable obligations were undertaken by the Government and a considerable shortage in the revenue. Yet we are asked to come here and vote away four millions of dollars. Conditions are unparalleled and before any money to run the civil service we should know in detail, or at least have a statement of accounts, showing the obligations the country is up against. The present accounts tabled did not give the desired information and only contained a statement of affairs up to June, 1914. A statement of estimated expenditure up to the present time should be brought down so as members could discuss supply intelligently. Four million dollars was voted away last year to run the public service and there had been no substantial reduction in any one branch of it. The estimates ask that the same amounts be voted for public Charities, Lighthouses, Agriculture and Mines, Roads and Bridges and other public purposes when all of these services could be reduced until the Minister can show that he is going to get a revenue to justify them."

Mr. Coaker.—He objected to voting for the estimates until it is shown that we are able to meet the votes.

Mr. Lloyd again pressed the Minister to take into consideration the request of the members of the Opposition.

Finance Minister said he knew the practice of the House since Responsible Government and an unusual request was sprung upon the House without previous intimation.

Mr. Lloyd pointed out that it must be within the recollection of the Finance Minister that we had asked when the Estimates were tabled some days ago for a statement of the financial condition of the Colony before going on with the Estimates. We ought to have a general statement of the course the Government intend to pursue. These were unusual times and the financial conditions of the Colony were abnormal. He knew the course that was usual just as well as the Finance Minister. He also knew that the custom was not unchangeable and was sufficiently elastic to permit a change to meet the demands of the present situation. He earnestly asked for a consideration of the request and not a blunt refusal without further consideration. The members on the Opposition side of the House were not desirous of offering captious opposition or embarrassing the Government in its financial difficulties, but on the contrary they wished to facilitate the despatch of public business. Personally he (Mr. L.) felt he was not justified in giving his support to any single vote in the Estimates until the statement asked for was made, so that members might see where they were heading.

Mr. Stone endorsed the remarks of the Opposition members. In extraordinary times like this he did not wish to embarrass the Government, but merely asked that they all should know the condition of the country before dealing with the estimates.

Mr. Morine wished to justify himself against aspersion and did not want to indulge in captious opposition either. He pointed out that up to 1897 the practice was to bring down a financial statement at the same time with the Estimate. He said it was he who instituted the present practice in the year 1897, and said that the Finance Minister was in error in stating that the practice went back further than that. The first financial statement he brought in was in the year 1898, for the purpose of cutting out useless expenditure. He hoped that a statement would be brought down this session.

The Committee then rose and asked leave to sit again on Monday next.

The House then resolved itself into Committee on the Stamp Bill. It provides that the Government cheques shall not bear stamps in future and that there should be a tax of 2 cents on receipts for any amount exceeding $2.00, and 2 cents on P. O. Money Orders and Postal Orders.

Mr. Kent considered the act was a great hardship on people and should and should be properly drawn up, and as a matter of principle the Government should reconsider the question of a tax on receipts. The Act in its present form is inapplicable to our circumstances and he most confusing and unworkable if made law. If it is decided to bring the Bill into force, the term "Receipts" should be exactly defined. He thought it too burdensome on poor people who would have to pay considerable more revenue than the rich man, and suggested that the amount be extended to say $20 or $25.

Mr. Lloyd spoke along similar lines pointing out that the Stamp Bill brings up the need of an answer to his question of a fortnight ago, asking what Revenues had been derived from the similar taxes since September last. He thought the Finance Minister did not know exactly what this kind of taxation will produce in revenue, and was going blindly into the matter. He asked if the Government had made any increased sales of stamps within the past six months and if so what was the increase. He said that no stamps in receipts under two pounds is required in England. The working classes in England are not burdened by the tariff because they buy from week to week and do not have transactions of amounts, which call for stamped receipts.

Mr. Hickman, speaking from the standpoint of fish-handling, said there was endless trouble last year over receipts and thought they should be properly defined.

Mr. Cliff reviewed the difficulties that would be met with in relation to Post Office Money Orders and Postal. The Bill in its present form did not specify who was bound to put the stamp on the Order, the purchaser or the seller. This should be remedied he believed to save friction.

Messrs. Morine, Higgins, Coaker and Grimes also spoke on the Bill. The legal points of the Bill were discussed by Mr. Kent, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Morine and the Premier, after which the Committee rose till Monday.

The Colonial Secretary introduced a Bill dealing with the Management of the General Hospital. The Bill was read a first time and will be read a second time on Monday.

The House then adjourned till 3 p.m. Monday.

And He Was a Leper.

A man whose life of supreme value and heroism was too little known to his fellows has passed away with the death from leprosy of Sir George Turner. He entered the Civil Service of Cape Colony as Medical Officer of Health in 1895, at the age of fifty, and in the next twelve years placed the Colony under a debt which it can never forget. Koch had been earnestly engaged in seeking a preventive for rinderpest for the Cape Government, but was recalled before his work was finished. Turner took his place, produced an effective serum, and within a year of its discovery the outbreak in the Union had been stamped out. Rhodes supplied means for carrying on the work until Rodesia and Egypt had similarly benefited, and before it finished Turner had saved the Governments concerned millions of pounds.

Preteroria had a leper asylum, and in his spare time Turner worked there ceaselessly, trying to alleviate the lot of the lepers and winning their deep devotion. When he retired it was only to seek in the laboratory, and in 1913 the King, on his own initiative, knighted him. His name will live with that of Father Damien while records remain of the ultimate sacrifice bravely made in relief of human suffering.

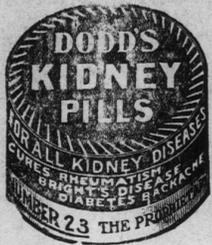

They Helped Him and His Friend.

THAT IS WHY H. A. CLARK RECOMMENDS DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Western Man Tells Why Dodd's Kidney Pills are so Popular on the Prairies.

Highway, Alberta, April 23rd. Special.—Just why Dodd's Kidney Pills are so popular on the prairies is shown by the statement of Mr. H. A. Clark, a well known resident of this place. "Since I came West," Mr. Clark states, "I was often troubled with my stomach and back. Finally I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and before I had taken more than half a box I was so much benefited that I recommended them to friend. He also found them a benefit. I am still taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. I would not be without them." In new countries bad water is one of the difficulties settlers have to fight and bad water makes its first attack on the kidneys. To resist this attack the kidneys must be stimulated and strengthened. In other words the kidneys need Dodd's Kidney Pills. By giving the kidneys the help they need people get new health, and Dodd's Kidney Pills add to their popularity.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

John West Has Paid the Extreme Penalty.

"INNOCENT" IS HIS LAST CLAIM. John West paid the extreme penalty this morning for the murder of Miss Cassie Dunn, of North Sydney, last December. He was hanged at the County Jail at 6.15 o'clock. Death was instantaneous. Holmes, who executed both Frank W. Haynes and Gustav Brauer, officiated.

West walked to the door unassisted and with complete resignation, though protesting his innocence to the last. He did not sleep during the night and refused breakfast this morning, continuing to chat occasionally with his guards until the arrival of Capt. Galoway and Rev. Mr. Rainor, who stayed with him until the end.

Up to the last West protested his innocence, repudiating his confession which he said was obtained through unjust pressure. His last words were uttered in the ante-mortem service, when he repeated the twenty-third Psalm. His voice trembled with deep emotion as he spoke the words of the fourth verse: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death."

The death march left the cell a few minutes after six o'clock. Rev. Mr. Rainor said the prayers for the dying and the condemned man walked with a firm step, quite resigned to his fate. He was slightly stooped and rather sallow; but showed no sign of fear or emotion. He halted for a perceptible instant at the foot of the gallows, and then walked out of the window into the cold gray air of the morning onto the fatal trap. Hangman Holmes slipped on the black cap and affixed the noose, while Capt. Galoway read the last prayers. At 6.15 the trap was sprung, and West had gone into eternity.

The body was taken down twenty minutes later and is being held for instructions from the attorney general. Dr. Brookman pronounced death to have been instantaneous. Captain Galoway, on behalf of West's friends, made application to have the body handed over to him for burial.—Sydney Record, April 19th.

WET OR DRY WHICH SHALL IT BE?

LARGE CLASS OF RESPECTABLE CITIZENS SATISFIED WITH "WET" CONDITIONS. While the Country rings with temperance discussions, many ardent prohibitionists completely forget one class of respectable citizens who are satisfied with "wet" conditions. They are honest, industrious, SOBER. They treat their wives and families well. HUNDREDS ARE TOTAL ABSTAINERS. Why are they satisfied? Because they wear "Bear Brand" Rubbers. The man who wears them is well satisfied with WET as with DRY roads. They are the only rubbers on sale to-day in Newfoundland that carry with them the guarantee of the sellers. apr24, ll.
