SUPERVISED PLAYGROUND MARKS NEW ERA FOR ST. JOHN CHILDREN

A week ago today the citizens of St. John had but a vague idea of what was meant by a supervised playground.

To see so many children so busy and happy, with scarcely ever even a suggestion of roughness in their play is indeed a revelation.

As has already been stated, the playgrounds committee of the Local Council of Women incurred more expense in connection with this ground than would be necessary in all cases.

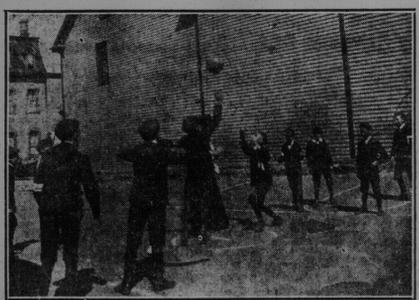

At a meeting of the committee yesterday Miss Mabel Peters read a letter from a lady in the north end of the city who said in pleading for a playground in the north end of the city:

"I have five children of the playground age, and they are very much disappointed that they cannot attend. As for grounds, the playgrounds of St. John are large, and with almost open country all about them, it is not surprising that they should have been able to find a place for a playground in the north end of the city."

This lady referred to the congested district around Sheriff street and vicinity, and suggested that Miss Peters interview the clergy and see if St. Peter's grounds could not be secured. Miss Peters, on receipt of the letter, visited the north end, went on an exploration tour of Sheriff street and vicinity, and finally was led by a boy named little people to St. Peter's rectory.

The pastor received her very kindly and expressed sympathy with the movement. He showed her the grounds, but could not assure her that they would be available.

Miss Peters was yesterday presented with a testimonial. It was a brass tablet moulded in clay, made and presented to her by a little girl. So eager was the day-moulding class around Miss Powell yesterday afternoon that the members refused to go and hear the concert, lest they should lose their places.

The circumstances of the case are related in another part of this issue. This morning Reynolds pleaded guilty to stealing the watches and Halligan and Griffin pleaded not guilty.

The complainant, John Peters, said that he had taken Reynolds last March to live with him because his father was a drunkard and the boy had no home.

He went down stairs and found Griffin lying in his cupboard. He had in his possession his revolver. It turned out that Halligan denied the theft and blamed it all on Reynolds.

He returned missionary work and the north west mission. The Missionary Aid Society will hold separate meetings on these days in the Waterloo St. church.

was perfectly wonderful. There were piles of knitted jackets, shirts, waistcoats, mitts, scarfs, dolls' things, hemstitched towels, boots, towel racks, book shelves, stools, knife boxes, rolling pins, ironing boards, a lot of old chairs beautifully carved, baskets, picture frames, and so on.

The playgrounds committee decided yesterday to send a communication to the school board on Monday evening asking for the use of two school rooms for kindergarten sewing and other work on wednesdays. It is expected the request will come in St. John in due time.

Fifty 600 children were present in the supervised playground at Centennial school yesterday afternoon. The great feature of the afternoon was the musical programme, which Mrs. McLellan had arranged. Mrs. George E. White presided at the piano and musical numbers were given by Mrs. Frank God-church had presented a lot of stools and table covers that would be very useful. Several more teachers had arrived and would be in use today. The big combination swing (eight in one) will not arrive until, perhaps the last of next week, and this is a great disappointment to the ladies.

AGNES'S AMULET

By Lucy Lindon.

Probably if the girl had not gone Agnes would not have lost her temper, but it was rather a sudden awakening from a honeymoon to have the girl calmly announce that unless Mr. Stormont would get his own breakfast she would have to leave.

Of course, Dick had refused to promise, maintaining that it was no hardship for Matilda to get his breakfast by seven, whereas Matilda had forced the issue by packing up her things and retiring to that servant's boarding house where she was wont to spend the intervals between her numerous "jobs," and Dick and Agnes had spent the evening in temperate debate, which had wound up with Agnes in tears and Dick occupying the servant's room, declaring that since the must add the duties of a domestic to his other work he would assume his proper place.

Agnes had declared that since he was responsible for Matilda's departure she would not get the breakfast, and all night long he tossed on the hard bed and wondered if a man had ever been so miserable before.

Once—it was perhaps an hour after the ultimatum—he had hoped that she was coming to seek forgiveness, but instead the steps had passed his room to the kitchen beyond, and the hopes of the approach had raised only renewed him more miserable.

He was worn and tired when the alarm clock pealed the morning air, and he was tempted to roll over and go to sleep, getting his breakfast at some restaurant then the thought of the way Agnes would leer at him after his declaration that it was the simplest sort of thing to get breakfast, served him and he sprang out of bed and slipped into his bathrobe.

It was an easy matter to start the coffee. It was a speciality to the cup and one over for the pot, he remembered that much, and with a patent pot it was a simple matter to fix it up.

The chops presented greater difficulties and after a short debate he decided that he was not very hungry, and that the coffee and rolls would be ample. He had been eating too much meat lately, anyhow, and this would be a good time to start the reform.

The coffee took an unconscionable time to run through. He remembered that when Agnes prepared coffee, when they came home from the theatre it had seemed such a short time before the intonation was steaming on the table. He would have had time to shave and dress had he only known in season.

Even when the water had at last run through and he had established himself luxuriously on one corner of the sofa, he felt it did not seem just right. There was a foreshadowing about it that reminded him more of soda than coffee and when he read the first to dispense the bubbles it only made matters worse, and in desperation he raised the cup to his lips. Shutting his eyes he took one gulp, then set the cup down quickly, his eyes wide and staring and his face ghastly white. He could see now why Agnes had gone into the kitchen the night before. It was not to get a drink of water. She had poisoned the coffee. Perhaps she had put too much in and so had defeated her ends. With his forehead beaded with perspiration he made his way to the front of the flat. Agnes was sleeping as placidly as if there had never been any trouble, and she stirred sleepily as she shook her shoulder.

"What is it?" she asked, as she looked into his face. "Didn't the cream come? There is a can of milk in the ice box, and the can opener is on the shelf over the sink."

"I got the cream," he said hoarsely. "I want to know what it was you gave me."

"What do you mean?" she laughed faintly. "You look so serious. Dick, what is the matter?" she cried, roused by the look upon his face. "What has gone wrong?"

"I want to know what you put in the coffee pot last night when you stole out in the kitchen after you supposed I was asleep. If you will tell me it is not too late—I may find an antidote."

"Are you crazy?" she asked as she sprang to her feet. "Do you think I tried to kill you?"

"What else brought you out there?" he argued.

"I went out to see that Matilda had left everything in order for you. All I did was to lay out the things you might need this morning."

"You see I did not drink it," he said. "I hope not," she laughed.

Dick shook his head sadly. "I never thought it would come to this," he lamented.

"I never thought you would go crazy just because you had to get your own breakfast," she retorted. "Now, show me what the matter is."

She led the way to the kitchen and dramatically he pointed to the cup. "You see I did not drink it," he said.

"I hope not," she laughed. "Did you pour coffee into your shaving-mug by mistake?"

She lifted the filter from the pot and to his surprise she laughed until through sheer exhaustion, she dropped upon a chair. At last, when she regained control of herself she looked up.

"You silly goose," she laughed. "You set the filter down on a cake of soap and the soap was damp and clung to the wire mesh of the bottom. Then you put it in the pot without looking."

"That's why it took so long to run through," he mused.

"Certainly," she agreed. "You had to wait until the soap soaked off."

"Agnes," he said softly, "you know that silk dress you wanted? I guess I can arrange to let you get it this week."

She kissed him for thanks.

"And you won't tell your mother about this," he pleaded, as she raised her head.

"No," she promised. "But the next time I say 'soap' you stop growing angry. That's going to be my amulet."

"Soft soap is good for tempers," he agreed humbly.

A NEW CHAMPION FOR JUDGE TUCK

Ottawa, July 6.—The New Brunswick judicature act was given its second reading in the senate today. Senator Ellis said he did not favor the change. It had been made by the New Brunswick legislature and this bill sought federal authority to give it effect. At present, of the six judges of the New Brunswick Supreme Court, all but the Equity one, went on circuit.

[This law provided only three would go on circuit and three sit on appeal. The result would be the three circuit judges would be overworked and the three equity judges not have enough to do.] No one could charge Senator Ellis with being unduly prejudiced in favor of the present chief justice, however he said he had the ordinary feelings of a man for him.

There was a general feeling in New Brunswick, he said, that this act was aimed at the chief justice, and was a plan to get him out of the way. The proper way would have been to have retired the chief justice, and then made the change in the court if it were thought best, which was not his opinion. The bill was read a second time.

AUTOMATIC RAILWAY CROSSING GUARD

Valuable Invention by St. John Men Likely to Meet With Acceptance of the Railway Companies.

It will be interesting to many St. John readers to know that three residents of this city have secured a patent for an automatic railway crossing guard, which is likely to meet with the acceptance of the railway companies.

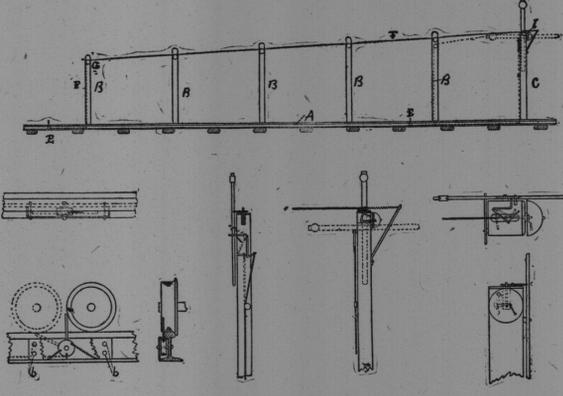

The inventors are William J. Tait, janitor of the High School, Sidney L. Kerr, of Kerr's Business College, and Frederick B. Cowell, manager of the United Typewriter Co. They have secured a patent through their solicitors, Messrs. Bustin and Poole. A general view of the invention is here given.

The train on approaching a crossing sets the signal and trips the gear automatically by the action of the car wheels on a pin placed at the side of the rail. Another pin further along releases the signal as soon as the train has passed the crossing. The action of the invention is as follows:

The lever box E being attached to the rail at a suitable distance, say 200 yards from the crossing to be protected, the signal post C being set up immediately beside the crossing; the lever box E being fixed at a convenient point near the signal post, and the lever boxes being connected with their respective parts of the apparatus by the connecting lines F; a train approaches the crossing from the side on which lever box E is installed, and its foremost wheel engages with the standing lever and forces it into an inclined position. This lever working against the cam causes it to make a partial revolution with its axle and the drum, thereby drawing the connecting line toward the drum, and causing the link on the top of the signal post to move sufficiently to communicate by means of the bent lever, A, a stroke to the gear, and at the same time to draw back the horizontal lever so as to release the semaphore, which, being weighted at one end, immediately falls into a horizontal position. The succeeding wheels of the train continue to act upon the lever in the same manner as the first such as it passes actuating the machinery which produces a stroke of the gear. The whole train having passed over the first lever box, in due time arrives at the second one, the apparatus in this box being the same as in the first one. The effect of the depression of the lever is to throw the semaphore back into its original position. Thus the entire apparatus is ready to act the whole turn over again at the passage of the next train. When so required the levers may be worked by hand instead of by the wheels of a train, and in such case the lever box may be set up in a higher or more suitable position. Trains passing in the opposite direction merely cause the depression of the lever which are loose on their axles, and therefore cannot act in any way on the mechanism of the apparatus. By this mode of construction or any variation thereof, this invention will automatically give warning to pedestrians and other persons of the approach of trains on tracks on which they are placed, and in a slightly modified form may also be used to signal trains, in a manner much superior to any arrangement now in existence.

WOMEN AGENTS DO WELL.

Southern Railway Pleased With Work of Three Between Nashville and Knoxville.

The three most popular local agents on the Southern between Nashville and Knoxville are the three women agents stationed at Waldensia, Ozone and Mount Juliet. It has been a question with railroad managers for a long time whether women would become successful agents. So far as the Southern is concerned, it has proved the affirmative at least in these three cases. In each of the three cases the women are also telegraph operators and handle all the messages and train orders sent there.

Miss Sophia Bond is agent at Waldensia, and her sister, Miss Lena Bond, is agent at Ozone. Miss F. H. Gannon is agent at Mount Juliet. When they were first put to work, says the Nashville American, they found the offices and stations in the usual bad condition where a man has had charge. About the first thing the three women did was to clean up the places and they now have the cleanest and neatest stations on the division. They have been extremely careful in their official work, and few errors—and they are of a minor character—have been charged up to them. Near train time when the ticket windows are opened the three women are always at the window, except when called to the telegraph key, and the days never get so busy that they have to call for assistance. The freight business is also handled by them and freight is checked in and out without an error. They have made a decided hit with the management and are registered for promotions as soon as vacancies occur.

The monthly meeting of the commissioners of the General Public Hospital was held yesterday afternoon. It was announced afterwards that only routine business was transacted and that the matter of appointments to the resident medical staff was not taken up. The commissioners are considering the question of additional facilities for lighting and heating and the installation of electric elevators. The attendance of one of the commissioners was called last evening to a newspaper report that Dr. D. Malcolm would likely be appointed superintendent. He said the matter had not been discussed or even spoken of and there was no foundation for the rumor.

INTERVALS OF DULNESS WITH SAGGING TENDENCY

This is what Some Banking Interests Say of the Market--The Matter of Gold Engagements and London Sentiment.

(Brooklyn Eagle, Tuesday.) Today's foremost topic of conversation was money and the probable future of the money market, as gauged by current and prospective conditions. It is banking opinion, as well as bear prediction, that the outlook does not favor relaxation in rates and that, even if call loans may shortly be obtainable on more favorable terms, time money will remain tight, there being as yet no assured sign of relief in any quarter. Whether or no a decided flurry would be experienced before the financing of the unusually heavy July disbursements was completed, did not enter so much into discussion as the fact that demands upon the money market for general accommodations would keep supply from becoming adequate to the point of abundance. Banking interests, finding a ready market for all available funds at remunerative rates and seeing the situation bested by some uncertainties--the crops, to mention one instance--are no less eager to put their resources to use offering than leads to employ them in the security markets. And, then, the outlook is complicated by the recall of the government deposits of $10,000,000 and by the injection of a loan to the extent of the yet undistributed amount of the settlement to be made by the fire insurance companies. Close observers in view of all these facts and today's movement in the market could be expected to do would be to rally from time to time. Intervals of dulness with a sagging tendency, were among the indications.

IRON TRADE HAS BEST HALF YEAR IN HISTORY

Review Declares Outlook for Second Half of Year Is Very Favorable--Prosperity Will Be Unchecked.

CLEVELAND, July 6--The Iron Trade Review says: "The first half of the year which has just closed has been one of the most prosperous in the history of the iron trade. While there have been no boom conditions, the production has been exceedingly heavy, and good prices have prevailed, but extreme quotations have not been made. The outlook for the second half is very favorable. Reports indicate that while prices will not be extraordinary, they will be fully up to the average, and there is no reason for believing that prosperity will be checked."

(New York Evening Post) In one particular London sentiment is being concluded in a fashion which seems likely to redound to the advantage of our securities. This is in the matter of gold engagements. Foreign exchange is now at a point where our bankers could take London's metal at a profit irrespective of the Shaw system of gold exchange. Small sums will be engaged in all probability. But be concerned of judgment among American bankers is that the present is not the moment for large engagements, and for two reasons: first, because now we do not need the gold, and second because London does not need what she has. The withdrawal of large amounts would disturb the London market, without special provision to our own. Until the Russian situation is clearer the European market will be particularly susceptible to bad news in that quarter. It will be almost as adversely affected by uncertainty. Scarcely the czar is making up his mind to grant large concessions to his people, represented by the Douma; but, pending an assurance that even very large concessions could placate the fanatical radicals who would establish a Russian republic in a week, the London world will remain acutely sensitive; and it is wisdom on the part of American financiers to adopt just the attitude of restraint they are adopting toward London's gold holdings. By the time foreign gold is needed on this side of the Atlantic for the ends of legitimate trade, the chances are that it could be imported with slight embarrassment to London. This date is at least ten weeks ahead.

MINERS LOSE $12,400,000

WILKES-BARRE, July 6--It cost the mine workers of the anthracite region a loss in wages of $12,400,000 in striking from April 1 to May 15, according to figures just compiled by coal operators. The total anthracite shipments in April, 1905, were 5,278,941 tons, and for May, 1905, 6,200,188 tons. Estimated on this basis the tonnage from April 1 to May 15, 1905, would have been more than 8,000,000 tons. The average amount paid in wages of labor per ton of production in the anthracite field is $1.85, showing a loss of at least $12,400,000 sustained by the wage-struckers.

THE HAPPY CHILDREN

The pictures which the Times prints to-day will convey a slight idea of the appearance of things at the supervised playground at the Centennial school. Children were there from the south end and even from the north end of the city.

One remark apparently needs to be made. It has been noted by some who have seen the pictures that the children are very hard to get, there is also a scarcity of teachers, and in any case the ladies have in mind the scheme of a large public playground for the larger children, that may call for considerable expenditure.

The Times has already suggested that if the people of any section of the city find that they have a suitable ground, and are willing to aid in having it equipped, the ladies will no doubt be very glad to assist.

POLITICS AND PROHIBITION

The attitude of the Democrats in two states has presented a political struggle that is thus interestingly set forth by a New York paper:

"In two states, Maine and Kansas, the election will turn, this year, upon a question of enforcing the prohibitory law. In Maine the Democrats hope to win by insisting that the law shall not be observed, even in theory, until the voters have another chance to pass upon it; in Kansas, on the contrary, the Democrats are basing their hopeful prophecies largely upon their announced determination to make prohibition real, rather than theoretical, throughout the state.

A CONTRAST

"Ottawa the Clean," is the heading of an editorial in the Evening Journal of that city. It begins thus:

"A point about Ottawa which seems to impress visitors is its cleanliness. Visitors speak highly of the beauty of the city and the courtesy of its citizens, but they dwell most on its cleanliness. Naturally Ottawans feel pleased that the city is regarded as being clean among cities, but their gratification can be especially deep when they remember that less than ten years ago the compliment could not be paid. Twenty to twenty-five years ago Ottawa, on the contrary, was entitled to the discredit which attaches to an unkept and dirty city.

and back yards were frequently most untidy. There was not then the spirit of civic pride which is today making Ottawa one of the cleanest and most beautiful cities in America.

But even yet the Journal is not satisfied. "And yet," it says, "there is room for advance. The streets and the public parks are not the city. The real work of beautification lies with the individual citizens. The secret of success lies in the lawns (big and small) the gateways and the back yards. If the surroundings of each house are pleasing to the eye, the effect as a whole cannot but be creditable to the city—and to the citizens themselves."

MONEY NO OBJECT

The following is a very good illustration of the sort of matter relative to the Thaw murder trial the New York papers are serving up from day to day:—"In their effort to gather every possible bit of evidence concerning the life of White, the lawyers retained to further the interests of Thaw have engaged the services of thirty women detectives, who are scouring the Tenderloin for evidence. Some of these women are called 'professionals,' but many of them are chorus girls taking their 'summer vacation.' Some of these girls know White, his habits, and his habits. Seeing a chance to turn an extra penny they wrote to Thaw's counsel and were immediately retained, for the order that has been made by the relatives of the slayer of White to his lawyers is: Spend. Spend every cent that is necessary to get him off. Money is no object."

The thinly veiled hatred of England which is characteristic of some of the Irish members in the British parliament broke out yesterday during the disloyal speech of John Dillon relative to Egyptian affairs. With fatuous persistence he and other Nationalist members disregarded the dictates of policy and gave offence to the feelings of every other member. They did their own case no good.

Aldermen complain that the mayor is too officious in regard to harbor matters. That may be, but nobody will make such a charge against the aldermen.

THE STARS AND STRIPES

Complaint That its Display is Overdone in This Country.

(Montreal Witness). Considerable indignation was expressed among the members on Change this morning at the protest display of United States flags at Dominion Park yesterday. "White flag is made for the fact that it is a holiday throughout the United States, yet those who complained of the incident were of the opinion that the whole thing was overdone, and adverse comment from Canadian visitors to the park last evening was heard on every side."

Complaint was also heard regarding the custom of Canadian navigation companies displaying the Stars and Stripes on board their steamboats, when a similar compliment is never paid to English or Canadian people traveling through the United States.

The closing of the Winnipeg Stock Exchange yesterday caused considerable inconvenience to the eastern grain trade, and, according to a grain merchant, a large amount of money was lost to the local market. The opinion was expressed that the practice of closing Canadian markets on American holidays should not be permitted.

Corporation

Each man around the store had told his tale of the "hardest rain he ever saw fall out of the sky." Tom Linkins was an easy winner with his of the greatest harvest rain in '93.

"It began with big drops kinder eastern-like," he said. "Then it got to a shower, and I just thought I'd crawl under the canvas on the resper till it was over—knowed the team would stand. But air when the lightning took to hittin' right at that binder I concluded to get out from there. I had a gallon-and-a-half bucket on my arm and I lit out for the mule-shed. When I was about half-way there the thing began to get heavy. I looked down and if I blimed this wain't full of water I'm a —"

The lank individual who had been leaning against a barrel broke in: "Well, now, I reckon that must 'a' been the day I am thinkin' about. What made me know it was rainin' some was seen' a flock of wild ducks go over. Gensie, them ducks had folded their wings and was just naturally paddlin'."

Part of It Was. There is in the employ of a Chicago lawyer an office boy somewhat averse to over-activity in the line of duty, says the Boston Record. Willie's duties comprise, among other things, the proper care of the lead water receptacle. Shortly after his arrival at the office one morning the legal man swallowed a copious draught of the fluid, and immediately became conscious of a very distasteful quality of the fluid. He called the boy, 'Willie,' demanded 'Where is the water from?' 'Yes, sir,' was the answer in a somewhat hesitating tone. Observing this, the lawyer added, 'Willie, are you sure that the water is fresh?' 'Well, sir,' replied Willie, with the utmost naivete, 'part of it is.'

The Cleveland Leader told this: 'I had occasion not long ago,' said 'Private' John Allen, in conversation with 'Public' Joe Cannon, 'to visit a certain hospital where an old friend of mine was convalescing. When I asked him how he liked it, he replied: "John, it would be all right if the egg was as new as the sherry, and the sherry as old as the egg."'

Source of the Old Story. 'Traveling men, who are chronic story-tellers, are funny propositions,' said C. H. Churchill, clerk at the Brown Hotel, yesterday, according to the Denver Post. 'They'll make fun of the man who tells an old tale and then they'll go right ahead and tell stories with whippers. This morning I met a traveling man and he told me two drummers. It was one I'd heard several years ago. The other traveling man and I laughed and decided it a good one. When the first drummer went away the other said: "Great Scott, Churchill! I heard that story long ago." "It was pretty old," I replied. "I'd be ashamed to go around telling old ones," said the traveling man. Then he started in and told one that was old enough to vote. When he got through I laughed and laughed. "Fine," I replied. Then I added: "By the way, do you remember where you heard that story?" "He thought a moment. "By Jove!" he said, "I believe I heard it right here in this hotel last year. Didn't you tell it to me?" "No," he said, "I replied, laughing. "And do you know where I heard it?" "No." "The fellow who told us that old one just now, handed it out to me," I said.'

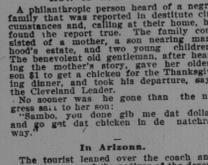

How to Get Chicken. A philanthropic person heard of a negro family that was reported in destitute circumstances and, calling at their home, he found the report true. The family consisted of a mother, a son nearing manhood's estate, and two young children. The benevolent old gentleman, after hearing the mother's story, gave her oldest son $100 to get a chicken for a dinner and took his departure, says the Cleveland Leader. 'No sooner was he gone than the mother set to her son: "Sambo, you done git me dat dollah and go get dat chicken in de satchel way." In Arizona. LOUING GOWNS NEEDED IN HOT DAYS

All women who study the needs of health and beauty realize the importance of comfortable house garments in mid-summer. When the really hot weather is well on, easy, cool, fresh, light, kimono and one or more elegant tea gowns become the really important things in the wardrobe.

which was put on with a cord shirring. White dotted Swiss or white and black dotted Swiss is another effective, even more stylish, textile which colored ribbons deck modestly.

Under the negligee head are also seen some shirt waists which are charming for house wear. These are the Peter Pan styles, with three-quarter sleeves and necks finished with low unattached collars, which soft ribbon scarfs, fasten with a large neck bow.

embroidery silk. The gowns for children are often made exactly paper doll fashion—with the material dotted and the two side of it game at exact a 1/2. The skirts make only two seams in the entire gown, those under the arms, for the sleeves are draped in the cut.

LEE-ENFIELD CRITICISED Sir.—In the face of the facts already published in the press respecting the defects of the Lee-Enfield rifle, not only shown in England and Australia, but likewise in Canada, expert military men connected with the Canadian military service are beginning to realize the inherent weakness of the Lee-Enfield small arm, and consider it strange in view of the exposure on this head, that the Dominion government do not withdraw the arm altogether from the Canadian service.

In the matter of ready-made negligees the shops present a wealth of loveliness. Everything from the tiny sacque made of gaily colored handkerchiefs or wide flounce embroidery to tea gowns which are almost bald dresses in splendor, can be found. In the last field, indeed, there is quite a rise in interest, which for a while fell off considerably under the adverse criticism these toilettes obtained here.

Among the more elegant effects in these the Empire styles stand decidedly first, this model being especially suited to the house use and the changing fabric employed. Most charming gowns seen in Empire style employed liberty silk and lace of various sorts with very happy results.

Continuing the hot weather subject, the reader in search of pretty outdoor frocks had better give attention to the wash shirt waists frocks with Peter Pan collars. These are displayed in an admirable way, and are going admirably with the costume. Along with everything else, enormous reductions are now seen in these frocks, $6, $8 and $10 buying very elegant dresses.

ALMOST HOPELESS. The Condition of Thousands of Pale, Anaemic Girls. "Almost hopeless is the best way to describe the condition I was in about a year ago," says Miss Maudie Manette, of St. John, N. B. "My health had been gradually giving up until I reached a condition when I feared I was sinking into chronic invalidism. I was as white as a sheet, my blood apparently having turned to water. I had no appetite, suffered from headaches, the least exertion would leave me breathless, and it appeared that I was going into a decline. I decided to give them a trial. It was a year ago that I saw in the paper an advertisement for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which I purchased and began to take. I was so weak that I could not walk, and I was so nervous that I could not sleep. After taking a few boxes, I began to feel better, and after a few more boxes, I was able to walk and sleep. I am now as healthy as ever, and I owe my recovery to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

SMART TEA GOWNS.

Robbons coming from the back of the neck, crossing at the bust and then carried again to the back, where they are tied with bows and ends, accomplish the fit in many cases, especially where Swiss, tulle, lace and madras are employed.

Some delightful little negligees seen in a shop were both elegant and inexpensive. A gown with a wide Watteau pleat falling at the back from a little square neck, and which was held in at sides and front with pink ribbons, was a Swiss crossed with a net lace with large thick disks decollete neck and sleeves of this, a number of little bees with a similar oval trimming gowns in French batiste, lawn and flowered muslin.

In juvenile departments, rajah silk, silk gingham and pongee are frock and suit materials used for both sexes. All of these silk materials are very cool, and while silk collars, cuffs and belts give a refreshing touch to the yellow shades. With the little Russian blouse suite made for baby boys in these materials the untidy trousers are left open at the knees and made wide and short. The blouse shield is also left off for hot weather, and not uncommonly the sleeves of the blouse are cut off short, just above the elbow. With such suits, and also suits of thin white linen and white lace collars and straps/cuffs or capers are in keeping.

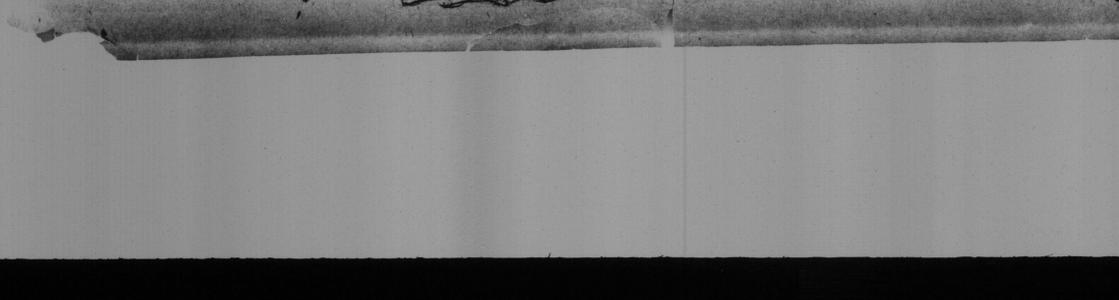

It is stated that Hugh J. McCormick has secured a lease of the Windsor Hotel at St. John, and will probably take possession early in September next. It is understood that it is Mr. McCormick's intention to run his home on Moore's Green in the case of the present season.

With the wash fabrics generally a very simple model is employed, the gowns of wrapper order being slightly escaped at side seams and adjusted with waist ribbons or sailor collars edged with lace or both in the same material a charming French essence may be obtained. Among the choice fabrics for this species of negligee are the delicately striped batistes, striped and flowered lawns and French and domestic muslins. All of these are shown in a number of styles, and with pretty little lace for collars, and matching ribbons for bows and drawstrings, a smart toilette may be obtained. The negligees need to be more full than petticoats proper, and if drawn in with ribbons, with ends to be tied in a shawl, they are still prettier.

The most easily accomplished negligees are those only slightly draped at the back and with loose fronts, with a generous lace trimmed collar for shoulder trimming. A delightful little negligee of this sort was of white batiste striped with faint corn color. German Valenciennes formed collar and sleeves, a narrow white edging and heading the wide skirt, founce,

French and Russian Upheavals Paralleled

FRENCH REVOLUTION.—RULER, LOUIS XVI.
 Causes, poverty of the people; high taxes; no voice in the government; oppression by the nobility and church.
 Third Estate, representing the lower classes, organized under royal edict, but the rights were curtailed.
 Necker, minister of finance, looked upon to regenerate France, dismissed by the king.
 Louis XVI retires with royal family to Versailles, just outside of Paris.
 Masses call on Louis XVI. to save them from respect of the nobility, promising him safety.

RUSSIAN REVOLUTION.—NICHOLAS II.
 Poverty of the workmen; excessive taxation; little voice in the government; oppression by the grand dukes, bureaucracy and Holy Synod.
 Douma, representing the peasants and workmen, demands more liberty.
 Prince Mirsky, former minister of interior, who suggested many reforms, dismissed.
 Nicholas II. retires with the royal family to Tsarsko Selo and Peterhof, a few miles from St. Petersburg.
 People appeal to czar to redress their wrongs.

THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

History shows that the great political upheaval in France more than one hundred years ago was the result of conditions similar in many respects to those now prevailing in Russia.
 Like Russia, France supported a great body of the nobility and a priesthood, taxes paid by the masses were high, wages exceedingly low, and the common people had practically no voice in the government.
 There were 23,000 manors in France, 60,000 curates and vicars, 37,000 monks, 2,200 nuns, 1,500 convents and 60,000 churches and chapels. In all there were 130,000 persons in the religious establishments of France. Like the great religious dead weight now borne by the Russian people, this vast body controlled nothing toward the welfare and prosperity of France.

There were also 140,000 nobles in France while the noble families numbered 30,000. On each square league of territory and for each 1,000 inhabitants there was one castle and one noble family. Almost precisely similar conditions now prevail in Russia, where the great mass of landed proprietors hangs like a dead weight upon the country.

BURDENS OF THE PEOPLE.
 As showing the conditions out of which grew the French Revolution and illustrating the poverty of the peasant class in France, it is said that the Abbey of St. Germain des Pres alone owned about 60,000 acres. One-fifth of all the lands of France belonged to the clergy, one-fifth to the nobility and one-fifth to the Communes and the King.

Making up the third estate were 20,000,000 of people whose only property lay in the fact that they supported the nobility and the King and furnished the clergy with material.

Just as in Russia today, the vast bulk of valuable land is entirely in the hands of the noble and aristocratic classes, so in France three-fifths of the real estate of the Kingdom was held by privileged orders, and, furthermore, these three-fifths were by far the richest and most valuable of all.

The masses of the people were treated not like human beings, but like animals by the wealthy nobility. The court of Louis XVI. was one of the most luxurious and extravagant that the world has ever seen. The burden of this court was borne by the people from whom, in taxes and tithes, were wrung vast sums of money to pay the gaudy and pleasure at court of the nobles.

CORRUPTION AND GRAFT.
 Corruption and graft were prevalent throughout France, favorites of the queen and privileged officials taking enormous sums from the funds which should have gone to alleviate the sufferings of the poor. As in Russia, the despoiling of the nobility, the priesthood, the sovereign and his court constituted a burden which at length drove the people to frenzy and brought about the terrible political upheaval which swept before it almost every institution that then existed in France, and resulted in a new government and a new nation.

It was such a condition as this which resulted in first the parliamentary battle in France and then in the reign of terror and rule of violence which brought forth eventually a new government and a new people.

The ignorance of the French peasant class was almost unexampled, but travelers who have studied the conditions of the masses in Russia believe that the ignorance of the Russian peasant of today is fully as great. Immorality, wastefulness, extravagance and tyranny of the noble class in France has perhaps never been paralleled except by the Russian aristocracy. The element of immorality and the fact that the institutions of the family and the home had lost their inviolability were among the most important causes of the downfall of the ancient institutions and political structure in France, beginning with futile appeals to the sovereign for aid and for the amelioration of their condition, the people of France quickly progressed to open defiance of king and government. The army, like that of the czar, early showed unmistakable signs of siding with the people, and in the end the old institutions of France were swept away and Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, his queen, gave their lives.

POWER OF NAPOLEON.
 Napoleon, swept in on the tide of revolt and posing as the champion of the people, eventually attained supreme power in France, and by his superlative military genius made himself not only ruler of the French but seemed for a time to be destined to extend his sway throughout Europe.

Will the destiny of France be that of Russia and will the ultimate result in the land of the czar be the complete overthrow of the government and the establishment of a republic such as that which followed the downfall of the ancient institutions in France?
 Time alone will show whether the course of events in Russia will continue to run parallel to those which occurred a century ago in France. Thus far the similarity under conditions seems to have been proved beyond a doubt, and there are many careful observers of events who believe that the final result will also be similar.

THE SITUATION IN RUSSIA
 Back of rioting, slaughter, race feuds and the poverty and misery of the peasant population, the primary cause of the great political upheaval in Russia, which seems likely to overthrow the empire and result in a new form of government, perhaps a republic, lies the longing for real freedom and a voice in the government with which all mankind is endowed.

Like the fight for Magna Charta in England and the similar struggle which disrupted the French monarchy more than a century ago and ultimately resulted in a republic, Russia's battle of the people springs from the unquenchable love of liberty.

As the immediate cause of political chaos in the empire of the Tsar, the war with Japan looms large. It taught the Russian peasant that the power of the Tsar was not supreme, that the Emperor's armies could be beaten, that the cruel burden of war rested on the peasant and that the struggle itself was made a medium for graft and stealing by that inner circle of the nobility and grand dukes known as the bureaucracy.

LIKE FRENCH REVOLUTION.
 The herculean efforts of the masses in Russia to overthrow an ancient system, replete with all the horrors of despotism and tyranny, has been compared by some careful observers of events not only to the French revolution, but to the present economic struggle in America between the people and the corporate interests which has become so powerful a factor in the national life.

Expressed in different terms say these observers, but nevertheless similar, is the effort of the Russian people to obtain real

The course of events in Russia continues to run parallel with those in France during the period of the revolution. Just as in France, the ultimate outcome hung on the position of the army and the loyalty or disloyalty of the troops to the King, the result in Russia, apparently, will depend on whether the army sides with the Tsar or with the Douma.

From the hour when collision between the Bourbon monarchy and the States General in France was seen to be inevitable, it was predicted that the result of a struggle would depend entirely upon the attitude of the French standing army. On July 12, 1789, two months after the States General had met, Swiss and German troops in the pay of the French sovereign were ordered to disperse a procession of the people in Paris.

They fired on the crowd and, as it happened, a soldier of the Guardes Francaise was among the killed. Whereupon the entire body of the Guardes in Paris sprang into revolt and the old municipality and eventually the old government was swept away.

Soon after occurred the successful assault on the Bastille, which was described at the time as not a revolt but a real revolution.

Up to the present time the trend of events in Russia has been almost precisely similar. The first victory of the people was scored in the convocation of the Douma, the first real representative gathering that ever assembled in the land of the Tsar. The struggle between the Douma and the government is now well under way, and to many it seems that there can be but one outcome to this battle, that is the triumph of the representatives of the people and the downfall of despotism in Russia.

Whether the Russian masses will win their battle in a bloodless victory, or whether, as in France, liberty can only triumph at a terrible cost in human life and treasure remains to be seen.

MUTINY IN RUSSIA.
 In Kurak and Poltava provinces mutinies have begun. At Kurak an infantry regiment made certain demands, on the refusal of which the soldiers beat their colonel and received with ridicule his order to lay down their arms. The artillery and even the Cossacks, who formed a part of the same garrison, disobeyed an order to attack the mutineers.

At Poltava on the day named an infantry regiment, at the failure of the military authorities to keep their promises regarding certain conditions, left their barracks armed with rifles and held a meeting in a public square, at which delegates from another regiment of infantry and from an artillery brigade pledged their support to the mutineers. In other words, these two important provincial cities have become centres of army insurrection.

Still more alarming from the viewpoint of the czar and his reactionist advisers is the growing doubt as to whether even the troops stationed in the capital can be relied upon. On June 11, several non-commissioned officers and thirty privates of the Horse Guards, together with some non-commissioned officers of the Preobrazhensky guard regiment, were marched to prison, and the sentinels have been trebled around the fortress in which they are confined.

Both regiments have been shut up in their barracks, while the Novocherkassky regiment has been broken up and apportioned among places outside of the capital in consequence of the discovery of revolutionary literature in its quarters.

RACE HATED FACTOR.
 One of the important factors in the Russian struggle is race hatred. Modern hatred of the Armenians is later. This feeling is of long standing, and is never absent. The Armenians have been detected as parasites and exploiters of Mohammedan and other populations in the Caucasus, and for several years the Russian authorities have had much difficulty in repressing the Tartars from cruel and bloody reprisals.

The Armenians understood the situation, and, aware of their danger, armed themselves. The Baku massacres showed how well they could defend themselves. This was evidenced again by the large numbers of Tartars killed in the riotings. The Tartars, however, seem to be bent on exterminating the Armenians by killing them and destroying their villages, homes and churches.

The government continues to be severely criticised there for its inactivity in dealing with the situation. The absence of intelligent and energetic administrators in the Caucasus is said to be responsible for many outbreaks.

A well known writer says:—
 "The simple truth is the Russian peasant, 100,000,000 of him, is under present conditions slowly starving to death. His average earnings in the central provinces are seventeen and eighteen copecks (eight to nine cents) a day throughout the year; during the busiest harvest time they rise to an average of twenty-seven to thirty-five copecks (thirteen to sixteen cents) a day during the whole winter he and his family earn nothing. His diet consists of meal, flour and grits, cabbage and potatoes; no meat except three times a year. His diet is insufficient, and less than in any civilized country. The hovel he lives in is two and a half yards long and one and one-half yards high, harboring the whole family and whatever cattle he possesses. These data are taken from official sources.

BURDENS OF THE PEOPLE.
 Some of the monetary burdens borne by the people of Russia are:—
 National debt, $1,500,000,000.
 Annual interest on debt, $80,000,000.
 Expenses on Siberian and Manchurian roads, $1,500,000,000.
 Taxes unpaid by peasants (1900), $30,000,000.
 Loss by industrial depression in three years, $300,000,000.
 Loss by famines in five years preceding 1902, $300,000,000.
 Eight famines, five since 1902, loss $200,000,000.
 Loss to toilers by 160 to 170 holidays each year, $100,000,000.
 War loss, $1,000,000,000.
 Expenses of Holy Synod annually, $18,500,000.

From these and other causes the revolutionary spirit has grown, partly unobserved, in Russia for a decade or more. It has been a quiet, steady development along industrial lines, whose progress has been unnoted by the general public, as the national, rather than financial, importance has been not under but unestimated by the world.

LAND UNPROFITABLE.
 Until some nine or ten years ago the industries of Russia were confined practically to the cultivation of the soil, even this being carried on in a haphazard fashion. Agriculture was the only possible industry under the political and national conditions which then held. Each of the serfs, at the time of his emancipation, in 1861 received from the government a strip of land to serve as a means of support, the land to be paid for in installments.

These men, then lately set free, had little initiative towards the acquisition of the modern methods of agriculture, and under the primitive attempts at cultivation the land did not yield enough profit to pay the taxes imposed by the government, and also support the farmer and his family. At the same time, this land was a burden of which the peasant could not be rid, in order to devote himself to becoming skilled in some trade. Bound to the soil, the peasant met the heavy financial obligation imposed by the government by emigrating to the cities during the lengthy winter months when the farms were necessarily unproductive and there hiring out as a driver, servant, messenger or at any unskilled employment which he could gain.

At this time Russia was completely lacking in skilled workmen.

The year 1895 witnessed the beginning of a new industrial era. At this time in Russia there were some small factories for weaving cloth in the larger cities; also scattered efforts at the manufacture of iron. On the coast were unimportant industrial cities, whose trade was carried on mainly by the leadership of German and English firms. Neither the capital nor the skilled mechanics of these enterprises were Russian, and this served as an excuse for the refusal of these foreign interests to move inland when pressed to do so by the Russian government.

The foreign capitalists of industry refused to move too far from the base of supplies, true to the tactics of all warfare,

An inland factory might be closed down for weeks for lack of a skilled mechanic to patch some temporary leakage of the boilers or other similar mischance. The interior of Russia contained as a vast farming community the farming being carried on, not as a means of gain and advancement, but merely to wring from the soil the bare necessities of living.

GOVERNMENT AIDS.
 Failing the effort to induce foreign capital to forward the industrial advancement of the nation, the government attempted the task under the wise and capable administration of Sergius Witte, whose profound knowledge of economics and of Russian conditions made him the man needed for such a gigantic undertaking. Witte raised enormous sums of money in foreign countries. The railroads throughout the colossal Russian Empire were enlarged and new ones were built, this work necessitating, in turn, caused the founding of factories everywhere. The iron industry, one of the few native to the country, received additional impetus. The mineral interests of Russia, rich in coal and ores, began to be advantageously worked.

In five years, from 1894 to 1899, the Russian government chartered almost one thousand stock companies, with a capital estimated at over $1,400,000,000. Industrial production increased by 50 per cent. The steady advancement of values went on until by 1907 it amounted to some $1,816,000,000. The new born industry of the nation was largely dependent on these government railroads. In some provinces were depressed through a new policy, the government contracts being reduced in the prices paid for building supplies. The factories, which had grown up in a night at Minister Witte's bidding to supply these materials, ceased to be paying ventures. In buying supplies the government gave preference to high priced native manufactures, rather than buying more cheaply in England and Germany, thus adding to the financial confusion of values which was steadily increasing.

The exports of the country did not keep pace with its productiveness, the former averaging $38,000,000 yearly, while the latter aggregated $1,800,000,000. The appalling poverty of 125,000,000 out of the 180,000,000 of Russia prevented their purchasing the native manufactures. The great industries were either directly controlled by the government or were fed by its patronage.

INDUSTRIAL CRISIS.
 The first serious industrial crisis came in 1899, when many large failures took place owing to the scarcity of capital coming from outside sources. At this time there were 146 foreign corporations in Russia, the capital coming from France, Belgium, Germany and England. A greater financial crisis followed hard upon the first in 1900. Political complications, connected with the Boer trouble in China, combined to embarrass the Minister of Finance, and, owing to the nationalization of the Russian industrial system, the private banks of the empire became involved in the difficulties of the government.

The artificial inflation of Russian industrial values fell like a prickled balloon. A terrible financial panic ensued. In 1901 the loss to Belgian investors alone approximated to $20,700,000. Twelve millions of dollars were lost by the Ministry of Finance by the stoppage of building operations for which the government had no further use. Interest to the amount of $1,000,000,000 (approximately) were closed.

ARGOSY LOST FAIRLY. LONDON, July 6.—Commenting on the Argosy's defeat by Third Trinity, at Henley, the Standard says that everyone is sorry for the Canadians. They are good sportsmen to a man and will always be welcome. The Telegraph says that scarcely a single Englishman imagined Stuart could do what he did with the Canadian crew against magnificent built opponents, by far the strongest eight Canada has sent over.

The Mail says that undoubtedly it was due to the efforts of Stuart that the mighty Argosy was beaten. The Post says the pace of the stroke of the Canadians robbed them of all reserve for making the spurt which might have wiped out a few feet by which they lost. The Tribune regrets that Canada, not Belgium, had been vanquished. Even at Henley blood is thicker than water. Captain Wright told the News that of course he was disappointed, but the crew was fairly beaten. They were coming back to lift the cup.

YACHTING A Series of Snappy Suggestions for Young People Facing their First Etiquette Problems of Summer Vacation --- Yachting and Sailing Parties.

The first yachting trip holds many uncertainties for the inexperienced person. It is not a matter of course, and there is nothing more embarrassing than to realize that you have left undone something which your average host expects you to do, or have done something which the more experienced water guest is expected to avoid.

First—Preparations.

Your invitation will state clearly the hour and port from which you are sailing. Like a host or party, this invitation requires an immediate and unequivocal reply. If there is any chance of your being delayed at the last moment, send your regrets.

Yachts, even more than country homes, have unelastic accommodations, and you must give your host ample time to invite some one to take your place.

If the host is a bachelor or widow, he will state clearly his invitation to sail. Mrs. So-and-So has kindly promised to chaperon the party. This relieves you of all responsibility along this line. On married guests is sufficient chaperonage for a party of any size. If no mention of chaperon is made, and for any reason you question the advisability of joining this particular party, send courteous regrets. Do not wait until you are on the high seas to discover that you have made a mistake.

Second—What to take. If you are an acquaintance intimately with your host and hostess and the character of the boat, make tactful inquiries and pack accordingly. The average yacht anything larger than a steamer trunk is an absurdity. Several suit cases or bags are better still. On a steamer yacht, with the luxurious deck and awnings, you need only a rain coat in the way of rough weather clothing. If you find that it is customary to dress for dinner, be sure to take a decollete dinner gown of a material like crepe or soft clinging silk.

Phoebe W. Goes to New Hampshire—Cresceus Acting Bad—Maritime Trotting Schedule for 1906.

GRECEUS ACTING BAD.

MINNEAPOLIS July 5.—George Ketchum, former owner of Cresceus, the great trotting stallion that ever pulled a sulky hurried here a few days ago to endeavor to induce the noble steed to work for his new owner, M. W. Savage.

The valiant animal is calm and is making up all sorts of excuses. His trainer, Hursig, wired Mr. Ketchum appraising him of the fact that the horse refuses to be ruled, and asked for advice.

Mr. Ketchum wired back asking for kind treatment and good care for the animal, and suggested that these recommendations were not productive of good results he (Mr. Ketchum) should be wired again to come to Minneapolis and talk to the horse.

Later he received the following telegram: "Please come."

Lady Ellen Elliott won the fishing competition after a dead heat with Mrs. Buckle. The cup being a great hold in my hand (the name of which was brought to her in a sealed envelope) was so prompt and unimpeachable that her partner, Captain Goring, was enabled to get away with a long start in the sprint race, the judge, Lady Ruby Elliott, with Captain Goring, was second to a Captain and Mrs. Lovell-Carnegie in the Gretna Green race, and Lady Violet gained some more marks by her second in the Aunt Sally stakes, when she was Captain Ross, one of the victors of the A. D. C.'s, completed the cycle of success by carrying off the polo ball race.

Another Great Discovery

A well known gentleman in Black Bay, Ont., Mr. John Cowan, has discovered an absolute specific for Rheumatism. It worked a marvelous cure for him and will be just as effective on other cases.

"I was afflicted with Sciatica and chronic Rheumatism which I contracted years ago. My disease had a great hold in my blood, and it was hard to make any impression on it. Reading of Ferreroze I was convinced of its merit, and have it in my hand. I have never tried. Why it just drove away the Rheumatism day by day, till finally it disappeared."

This is not a claim—it is positive proof that Ferreroze does cure Rheumatism. Even chronic stiffened old sufferers will experience quick results. The reason is that Ferreroze acts through the blood and thereby destroys the cause of the disease. Price 50 cents per box at all druggists or V. O. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. and Hartford, Conn.

France and Russia

(Continued from page 9.) Factories were closed, mines ceased to be worked, blast furnaces shut down. Men were thrown out of work by the thousands, and the distress multiplied from day to day.

The efforts of the government to retrieve this situation were, in the main, unavailing. Millions of dollars have been sent back at least fifteen years. The present political situation in Russia is pretty the outcome of these Russian versions of "frenzied finance."

The present situation is not so much a struggle between the emperor and his subjects as the first manifestation of the spirit of the new Russia.

GREAT FIGURES OF CRISIS.

Great figures that stand out in the present crisis are the Premier, Gosenkwin, General Trepoff, famous reactionary leader, the President of the Duma, and, of course, the Emperor himself.

Cures Rheumatism

"I had an attack of Rheumatism—pains near my heart—which increased to such a degree that I became very anxious. I lost my appetite, and an intense itching or heating of the head made life miserable. I asked a druggist, was there nothing he could suggest that would help me, and he replied 'Why not try ABBEY'S SALT?'

I did so, and can now state positively, and without solicitation that the Rheumatism has disappeared—my appetite is grand—and the itching of my scalp has ceased.

I suggested to my aged Father and Mother that they should try ABBEY'S SALT for their Rheumatism—and they tell me they have received immense benefit."

Ladies who are preparing for their summer vacations, will no doubt appreciate the sale that F. A. Dykeman & Co. advertise in today's papers, as the goods are such that nearly every lady would require when taking a summer vacation. R. yard had lost two fingers in an accident yesterday was not to optician only. The hand was considerably injured, but the fingers were saved. In the police court yesterday afternoon, Judge Ritchie dismissed the charge of selling liquor on Sunday June 24, preferred against J. Everett Waters, druggist, Charlton. Several witnesses were examined and they secured no liquor there. The judge said the government may feel that it is necessary to pass an order in council forbidding druggists, who have been charged with violation of the liquor law, whether found guilty or not, to open on Sunday. John Peters, of Marsh street, had his trunk rifled last night, and as a result two boys are locked up and a third will be today. Mr. Peters went out for a walk and on returning found that his trunk had been tampered with. He looked up John Reynolds, aged 14, who has been staying with him for some time, and also James Halligan, aged 13, who had been invited to supper by Mr. Peters, as the lad said he had "no regular place to hang his hat." Mr. Peters found several of his articles on Reynolds and Halligan and on a boy named Griffin he found his revolver and cartridges. The police arrested Reynolds and Halligan late last night.

WORKERS ARE WELCOME. While I can find the best opportunities for my son or daughter's success? Is the question asked by many parents. Are you not aware that one institution can claim the honor of being instrumental in placing one or more young people in positions from almost every block in our city, besides looking after many from the country districts? The Currie Business University, Ltd., is recording the name of a successful student in the papers almost every day and some half dozen vacancies are still on the call book (one offering $700 per year) awaiting qualified applicants. Now is the time to enter this school. Its certified students are admitted to be equal to, and in many cases above the average experienced office hands in this and other cities. Its employment bureau is a quicker medium for placing pupils in positions than the ordinary business school. Success is street and the way to taste of its sweetness is to get into its environment. Workers are welcomed in this school; but strikers are not tolerated. Each department is under the strictest discipline. Any person is entitled to one week's trial free of charge. Terms of settlement are easy—Only one-half the tuition is required in advance—the balance not payable until pupil secures a position.

AFTER THE CEREMONY. After the marriage ceremony those who have not furnished their new home can do so now at Amland Bros. Ltd. Waterloo street, as they are in a better position to cater to your wants. They have a complete line of all kinds of furniture, carpets, iron beds, etc., and the above firm make a specialty of turning new homes in the latest styles and at prices to suit everyone. NO BALL GAME TODAY. Manager Durham of the St. John's baseball team received word late last night that the Moncton Trojans could not get a team together to come here and play today, therefore the game announced for this afternoon has been called off.

E. R. MACHUM'S HOUSE BURNED

Pretty Cottage at Woolastook Burned to the Ground Yesterday Afternoon.

E. R. Machum's pretty summer cottage at Woolastook, near Westfield, was completely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The flames were discovered shortly before 3 o'clock and in less than an hour the building was reduced to ashes. Everything possible was done to save the house but the fire soon got beyond control. The piano, silver and some other household effects were saved, but a great deal of valuable goods were destroyed. Practically all in the upper portion was lost, including clothing. The house was built on land purchased by Mr. Machum, part of the one which he owns. Three or four years ago Mr. Machum built the house on plans furnished by a friend in Bar Harbor. The house was valued at about $2,000 and there is $2,000 insurance on the house in the Law, Union & Crown, and $400 on the furniture with the same company. How the fire started is unknown. There was a fire in the kitchen, but the pipe was protected by a sparkar. Men had been engaged looking for a well near the house and it is thought that possibly sparks from the steam engine may have caused the conflagration.

A LIVELY SESSION

Meeting of Harbor Improvement Committee Yesterday Afternoon Was an Interesting One.

A meeting of the committee appointed to consider the question of harbor improvements was held yesterday afternoon. There were present: The mayor, Ald. Bullock, Pickett, McGoldrick, Vuurvar, How and Ald. Baxter. Ald. Lockhart was the only absentee. After considerable discussion, it was decided to adjourn, the idea being to reassemble when sufficient data as to the cost of the present harbor facilities had been secured by the treasury board. The meeting is reported to have been of a warm nature. Ald. McGoldrick took occasion to rap the mayor on the knuckles for interfering with the work of the board of public works. Ald. Bullock also made some adverse comments and was brought up short by his worship, who intimated that any complaints should be made at the council meetings. The mayor defended his actions and Ald. Baxter after having a say in the discussion moved the motion to adjourn.

SUCCESSFUL PILGRIMAGE

The most successful pilgrimage to St. Elizabeth ever made from New Brunswick ended last Thursday, and the St. John people, seventy-five in number, returned yesterday, among them being the Lordship Bishop Casey and Rev. J. O. Neil of Silver Falls.

Nine hundred people from various parts of the province attended. Devotions began shortly after the arrival of the pilgrims on Wednesday afternoon, and ended on Thursday. On that day His Lordship Bishop Casey celebrated grand pontifical mass at eight o'clock, and the closing exercises were at 10:30 a. m.; the pilgrims leaving by the afternoon and evening trains. The pilgrimage was organized by Rev. Fathers Roy and L'Abbe, of St. Joseph's, and was under the patronage of His Lordship Bishop Casey and Rev. Father O'Neil called at the residence of Archbishop Beagan to pay their respects to his grace and were cordially received. While the New Brunswick pilgrims were at the shrine two or three other pilgrimages from various parts of Quebec province arrived.

PECK AND HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW

The attraction at the Opera House next Monday evening will be those famous fun-makers, Tenbrooke-Lambert and Tenbrooke, and their company players in the latest musical comedy, "Peck and His Mother-in-Law," which has been one of the big comedy hits of the season wherever it has been presented. Tenbrooke-Lambert and Tenbrooke among the exponents of comedy are second to none. Their positions in the very front rank having established themselves so thoroughly in public and critical favor that their engagements here becomes one of the really important events of the season to those who are fond of laughter and to the better class of theatre-goers. None of the fun producers make their points so effectively, and with less apparent effort than Tenbrooke-Lambert and Tenbrooke. There is no exaggeration about their work, it is natural in the extreme, and without raising their voices above an ordinary conversational limit, their audience never lose a word they are saying.

THE "FRISCO FIRE

One of the greatest scenes in the awful calamity that befell San Francisco on that beautiful April morning is the waterfront; also Golden Gate Park, the city of tents. Mile on mile the tents extend—here neat and well equipped, there only a makeshift of rags and sticks. Hundreds are seen sleeping under awnings spread on bushes or twigs caught from the trees. Delicate women in little children half clad among the tents, swarm on the grass of the waterfront and Park. Men and women who have lost their all are seen wandering aimlessly, stricken, almost lifeless, all but senseless by the blow that has befallen them. Such are some of the scenes depicted on the screen by the moving picture machine that comes for a three nights' engagement at the Opera House beginning next Thursday with a matinee Saturday. Leonard J. Mack of the Alcazar Theatre stock company accompanies the pictures and will describe in detail the story of the calamity. Additional comedy and sensational films will also be shown.

WHEN WOMEN LOVE

A fair sized audience witnessed "When Women Love" last night in the Opera House and a number of times throughout the performance the company had to respond to curtain calls. Miss Ada Greenhalgh, as Madge Carlton, played her part well, while Miss Bessie Dainty, as Jessie Burnham, was a favorite from start to finish. Baby Dorothy and Miss Sadie Hilton also played well. The male cast is well balanced. There will be a matinee this afternoon and the engagement will be closed this evening.

HAMMOCK WEATHER, from 65c. to $6.50. The Grand Prize at the St. Louis Exposition was awarded the famous Palmer Patent Hammock, which is recommended enough, surely. We have sold thousands of these Hammocks of late years, and never a complaint yet. There are various models, various color schemes—some with Valencas, others with Spraders. Sizes range from 28x78 to 60x84, and all as strong as possible. Even the cheapest grades are pretty and reliable. If they were not, we would not have them on sale, for poor goods hurt business.

SUMMER CHAIRS CHEAP, from $1.25 to $3.75. Chairs and Seats for the verandah, lawn or cottage have been a specialty with us for some years. The gaudy red of the Verandah styles, Basket-Seated Chairs, cool-looking Wicker and Rattan goods and Wooden Seetjes go a great way in making surroundings bright and cheery. The inexpensiveness of them, too, is a factor in making them popular. Drop in and see our Big Red Rockers and other hot weather seats. They are grand for the winter months, too—fine, free and easy chairs.

AUTOMATIC LAWN SWINGS, Only $8 and $12. This is not by any means merely a child's amusement but a delightful source of pleasure for grown-ups as well. The lawn swing has ceased to be a novelty; it is a staple article of solid enjoyment. Large-framed and gaily decorated, a person would think them expensive, but they are not. They are made of hardwood and have two opposite seats, with a capacity for four children or two adults. By a slight foot movement the swing is set in motion. No effort, no labor, but a charming, healthful diversion.

NEW USE FOR WIRE COTS, from $2.50 to $5.40. A Wire Cot is usually looked upon as a make-shift in case the house is filled with visitors, but ask a deep-dyed fisherman what else they are good for, and he will promptly tell you: "Camping." We have sold a stack of these cots this season to enthusiastic anglers, as well as to the suburban trade. As emergency beds when "company" arrives, they still are the right thing in the right place. We have several folding varieties. Easy to handle, easy to stow away.
