CHATHAM, N. B., OCTOBER 19, 1893.
Valkyrie and Vigilant.

THE YACHTS FAIL TO FINISH WITHIN THE TIME LIMITED.
NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—It was no man's race to-day. The 'Vigilant' and 'Valkyrie' tried hard to settle the international question as to which is the queen of the world, but after alternate spells of racing, drifting and waiting for wind the yachts gave up the contest at the expiration of the time limit. It was long after dark when the crew yachts abandoned the drifting match of Highland beach and hailed their tugs. They had been sailing for six hours. The cup defender 'Vigilant' had turned the once-mark seven minute ahead of the English cutter and was leading by about half a mile when the time expired. The fortunes of each had varied during the day, and the British boat had the best of it during the promised well in the early morning. There was a good breeze from the north-west and the weather sharp and clear that would be a rattling wind outside Sandy Hook. The race was to be fifteen miles to windward or leeward and return. It was the third in the series and, if won by the 'Vigilant' the American cup would be an American trophy of prowess on the water another year. The usual crowd of yachtsmen were on hand, as also were the patriotic landmen who neglected 'biz' in order to see the British crack yacht defeated. The steamboats big and small and the yachts start tugs with private parties steamed down the bay as they had done on each of the preceding racing days. The day was a delightful one for a day's outing on the water. The two racers with their pyramids of white canvas gleaming in the sun lay becalmed. But by mutual consent their owners agreed to a postponement until later in the day. For two hours they lay idly flapping their sails or slowly gliding about among the excursion steamers. Then when the regatta committee asked if they would consent to a postponement the people on the American boat answered promptly in the affirmative, but Lord Dunraven hesitated and the wind freshening a bit, he asked for a race. The boats were started on a beat to windward and returned at 1.45 p. m. in light breeze with the 'Vigilant' had up her jib to the 'Valkyrie' got an advantage of one minute. Crossing the line she had the windward position as well as the lead. Both boats were under the same canvas, except the 'Vigilant' had up her jib to the 'Valkyrie' which was much smaller than the one the Englishman carried. The British boat pointed higher and footed faster in the light air. For an hour she held the lead and worked to windward of the white sloop. The two racers made a pretty picture as they worked in toward that part of the Jersey coast midway between Sandy Hook and Long Branch. Lord Dunraven led his opponent in close to the shore and then made a number of short tacks, for which the black cutter is famous. The people on the 'Vigilant' kept up a stern chase without lessening the gap, until, after racing nearly three hours with the small jib top sail up, she took it in and ran up a larger one. Then she began to pick up. Half an hour after she made the change in sails she had cut down the lead of the black cutter and crossed the bow of the latter to the music of 100 whistles from the fleet of escort. From that time on the gallant cup defender led. When the sun went down behind the Sea Bright sand dunes and left the yachts working slowly toward the turning mark the accompanying steamers began dropping out of the line and starting for home, but most of the steamers remained until the 'Vigilant' turned the flag buoy at 6.05 p. m., with the 'Valkyrie' seven minutes behind her. Then all the fleet, except the two tugs which acted as tenders to the yachts and the half dozen press boats, deserted the racers. On the rim home the 'Valkyrie' gained considerably and not until the six-hour limit had almost expired did either boat give up the race. They took their tugs about a mile south of the Highland lights.

It was officially announced to-night by the Racing Committee that the race will be sailed over again on Friday.
THE SENTENCE.
Ahmanzade Mehemed, the sirdar of the auxiliary troops of Tunis, was known on account of the rigorous discipline that he exercised over his soldiers. "It is not the enemy you must fear, but me," he would often remark to the young soldiers who came to increase the rank. Thus his army was an army of heroes, who had no fear on the battle-field, but who trembled in the presence of their leader. The first campaign in which they fought was at Albona, in the battle against the rebel Greeks and on that occasion Mehemed's men proved themselves efficient. Mehemed one day ordered eight soldiers to remain in ambush at the "five fountains" of Arta, at which point the Greeks were to stop anyone who should try to pass by, and they were strictly cautioned not to dismount or fall asleep. The soldiers executed with exactness all their instructions. A vehicle which attempted towards midnight, to cross the line unobserved was discovered and stopped. The man who had charge of the vehicle drew it away, abandoning his wagon. On this wagon was a barrel. It was easy to ascertain what the barrel contained, even without dismounting. It only had to open the bung hole to smell the pleasant odor of liquors escaping from it. And it must have been an excellent liquor, compounded largely of figs and raisins. The diabolical (Christians) undoubtedly knew what was good. The soldiers had not been forbidden if they seized liquor to drink it. And really they did not drink directly from the barrel. They merely turned the bung hole through which they sipped the sweet, intoxicating liquid. Was it not harmless to sip with such thin rushes? One could scarcely call that drinking. But justly does the prophet remark that wine is a doubtful beverage in which the devil has his hand, since this drink brings men to every evil.

First the soldiers asked each other what they should sit in their hand saddles with the grass made such a soft bed on the ground. And if they lay there for only a short while nobody would know it. They could tie the horses to the wagon, and these certainly could not talk. After they had dismounted the infernal drink persuaded them that it was a useless task for eight to remain on guard. Four would suffice and the rest could sleep. To the four men who were to keep awake the waiting for their turn seemed too long, and they agreed that two might sleep while the other two remained true to the orders.

The four men who were to be designated to watch for the rest. "Do you know," said Sefer to his friend—"do you know that that one man is of the same value in this case as two? It will do just as well if only one of us watches. Do you not agree?" Maruf assented. "I propose," continued Sefer, "that we play a game of chess. The loser will have to watch, and the winner may sleep." Maruf accepted the conditions. The two Bedouins prepared the ground in front of where they stood, and with their spears they traced a square, dividing it into 64 small squares. They then situated for the regular pawns the fruits of the woods. The wild pears became kings, the apples queens; the castles were represented by acorns, the bishops by rose hips, the knights by nuts and the pawns by berries. The men thus provided, the game began by the light of the campfire.

At first Sefer held the advantage, but that inhibiting drink overcame him little by little, so that he was not in condition to distinguish his pawns. He lost his queen and was very near checkmated. "Sefer, you are in a bad mess," remarked Maruf when he saw that the game was in his hands. "You are right. I am as sleepy as the sea when it is calm." "I can see that too." "Well, lie down in the name of Allah, I will watch for you." Sefer shook his friend's hand in grateful acknowledgement of the sacrifice, and he thought he spoke to him, but he only dreamed it, for he fell asleep immediately. Maruf, on the contrary, kept his eyes open, and leaning on his gun he looked at his sleeping companion. But that devilish drink began to murmur softly: "Why do you not sit down? You could see just as well." As soon as he was seated Satan again began to tempt him. "Why do you tire your eyes? If you shut one of them you will see with the other just as well as with both."

Maruf reflected that if his eyes were closed his ears were open, and that he would be ready to start at the smallest danger that might threaten his companions and himself. And with the firm purpose of not falling asleep he slumbered as heavily as the rest. In the meantime the hidden Greeks came all of a sudden upon the sleeping men, untied the horses of the Turks, and would certainly have killed them had not Maruf's horse, as though he foresaw the danger, begun to neigh. The first to awaken was Maruf, and in a few moments the rest were ready. They ran to get their arms and stood on the defense, now fully awake and sober. They threw themselves on the enemy, but it was of no avail. The Greeks had mounted the horses and laughed at the Turks, who endeavored to overcome them on foot.

Maruf's horse alone would not submit to the Greek who had mounted him and began to rear and plunge until he had succeeded in throwing the rider. He then kicked him and returned to his owner. Eight men had one horse left among them. What was Mehemed going to say? The Bedouins, yet young, were cast down at the thought of death. They knew their leader would have no pity for them, and still sadder were they at the loss of their beloved horses. Of what use is a man without a horse? Mortally worried at the punishment they expected, they returned to headquarters, and brought face to face with Ahmanzade, they narrated what had happened, how they had disobeyed his orders, how they had fallen asleep after drinking the liquor, how the last two watchmen had lost their horses, and finally how they had lost their lives.

As for eight men there remains only one horse," he remarked, "you will agree with me that there are seven of you too many. I have never read in the Koran nor in the Azorat that eight men should ride one horse, and as you are such good players sit down and let skill decide which of you is to be the man who will have the one horse. All the others are sentenced to die."

Having said this, Ahmanzade had four chessboards brought in, for the Turks are in the habit of carrying chessboards with them, even in war. As soon as the men were arranged he ordered the Bedouins to begin their play. Twelve of the best marksmen were ready with their rifles to shoot the losers. Two or three gave in at once to their stronger adversaries. In others despair baffled with craftiness against the advantage of their more skillful opponents, and the former would win when the latter had victory in their hands. The losers were immediately removed, and the noise of several shots indicated that they had ceased to exist.

The first tilt was over. Four had lost, four were winners. These last were paired. New hopes and new fears. A danger would pass unobserved, and he who had made the error would raise a cry which was his death sentence. Again two were lost, and again two were shot. And now only two remained—Maruf and Sefer. They fought themselves, as they had been before, in front of the campfire. They began the game with a good deal of caution, resting their foreheads on the palms of their hands, thoughtfully calculating every move, without hesitating, but without hurrying. For a long while neither of the two succeeded in obtaining an advantage. For each gain there was an equal sacrifice.

The spectators nod to each other when either one makes a brilliant move. Little by little the number of pawns on the chessboard diminishes; the main figures lie scattered to the right and to the left; the situation becomes plainer; a few more moves, and Sefer will lose his castle. Maruf has one more castle than his adversary, and this means a good deal at the present stage of the game. The crowd believes that the game is in his hands. All of a sudden great drops of sweat cover the forehead of Maruf—a fear overtakes him; he trembles, and he loses through all his body. He has noticed that as if his adversary sacrifices his queen instead of his castle he can checkmate him with the bishop. Would Sefer see that move? On that depended life and death.

Sefer looks at the chessboard for a long while. His looks betray that he has seen the move that will save him. But he seems to loathe the men, and he seems to hesitate. "Maruf," he asks all of a sudden, "how many children have you at home?" "Four," is the answer that comes from Maruf's lips. "You have a good wife?" "An excellent wife," answered Maruf, with a sigh. Sefer passes a hand over his face and begins to murmur as though he were praying. Then he asks for water. He washes his eyes, his hands—first the left hand, then the right hand. Unseen two guardian angels watch over by those who pray. "Yesterday night you gave me the game so that I might sleep," he says.

Maruf does not answer, but bows his head in assent. "You have always been a good friend of mine, Maruf." Maruf lifts his head up on his breast entirely overcome. Sefer then slowly lifts his hand to the chessboard and makes a move, not with the queen, but with the castle. "Checkmated," you hear murmured on all sides. Maruf has won and Sefer lost. Sefer rises quietly, offers his hand for the last time to his friend, Maruf, who seems nailed to his place, and signals to the soldiers to be ready. Two seconds later a shot announces that the tournament is over. But Maruf does not stir. With intent eye he looks at the board, and with trembling hands he puts the pawns in their places, but like one who does not know which are the places assigned to them. The other men are confused with the pawns, the white with the black. "Get up," exclaimed Ahmanzade. "Ride your horse; you are to live!" The man, however, does not move and continues with his vacant stare to arrange the chess-board, making strange moves with the figures. "What an absurdity," he exclaims, laughing recklessly. "One has a turban and the other a horse's head!" "Pick him up," orders Mehemed. And two soldiers lift him. Maruf, however, continued to laugh with a lunatic's laugh. Heaven, earth and men were now alike unknown to him. During the last move he had become mad—frustrated from the Hungarian for Romance.

AWFUL HEADACHES.
2 YEARS OF SUFFERING.
LIFE A TORTURE.
Kendrick's Nerve and Stomach Tonic, N. B., says: "For several years I suffered from severe and constant headaches, which caused me to be unable to do any work. I had several attacks of vertigo, and the result of anything exciting turned me sick. I would vomit and sweat, and had many sleepless nights, and for days could not retain food on my stomach. I suffered in this manner for over 2 years, and at length I firmly believe that I am now a free man from my sufferings. My brother brings me a bottle of HAWKERS NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC, and a box of HAWKERS LIVER PILLS. I had not taken them long before I commenced to improve and in a short time I was completely cured. A few months ago I was again seized with my former complaint, and I had another bottle of the Tonic, and in a few days I was again cured. I have not suffered from either of these troubles since, and my life is now as happy as any man could wish to be. I firmly believe that I am now a free man from my sufferings. My brother brings me a bottle of HAWKERS NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC and a box of HAWKERS LIVER PILLS. Saved My Life. I hereby certify the above statement is correct in every particular."

Why? Why are letters from Vancouver for Chatham sent first to St. John and then to their destination?

More Satisfied.—W. R. Gould, Esq., has put a larger and much improved safe into his watch and jewelry establishment on Water street.

Well Done.—Young Richard Hutchinson undertaken the work of unloading the goods from the stranded barge Gatineau and getting the vessel off, if possible, while his father is enjoying a trip to Chicago.

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Loathing of Food, dyspepsia or Biliousness, take Hawker's Liver Pills. They will cure you. Recommended by leading Physicians as a most reliable medicine.

The BROOKFIELD telegraph service has been restored, Mr. Daniel Lewis being engaged as operator. We came near losing it, as there was an evident intention to discontinue it when Mrs. Phillips left.

MR. CREAGHAN'S SALE OF THE NOONAN, bankrupt stock in the Argyle House has been a success and people are being brought to bargain. It is in general a success and the shopping public have found it out.

A LADIES' TRANSACTION.—An exchange says a large payment was made the other day by Mr. Gibson to Senator Snowball, who purchased the latter's interest in the Chatham Railway. The deal is said to have been $20,000.—Times.

RECOVERED.—Tollman Hainabotom is so far recovered from his recent illness, which confined him to the house for several weeks, that he expects to resume active duty Monday. He is a good officer, and law-abiding people will be glad to see him around again.

ESLANDER.—Mr. W. T. Harris whose business is largely increasing—he being one of the ADVANCE'S best advertisers—has annexed the old Strong store and improved it, turning it into a large and well stocked grocery department, retaining the Boot and Shoe and clothing departments in his regular stand in the handsome brick store.

H. A. HAVES, manager St. John of the Bank of British North America, wrote to the Hawker Medicine Co. of a case that came under his notice where a man who had been severely cough with a heavy cold and severe cough was restored to health by Hawker's Tonic and Cherry Balsam and Hawker's Nerve and Stomach Tonic.

LOST.—An overcoat of brownish color, with black lining, and having a pair of woolen gloves and a fig of tobacco in the right hand pocket was lost between the palp factory and Mr. D. Maclelland's store yesterday. The finder will confer a favor on a poor man if he will leave it to the owner at the ADVANCE office.

THE ESTROUSNESS of Victoria Colonization Railway Co. has made a commencement of a survey, and Engineer D. McMillan and a staff of ten men are now working just back of the town. The first fifteen miles will be a double track, and the Co. intends to have part of it pushed through this fall. The station is expected to be situated within the town limits.

A FIRE AT HARBOUR, Kent County, on Monday evening last, totally destroyed Mr. John Beck's residence near the railroad station. It was caused by the upsetting and explosion of a lighted lamp in a bedroom on the upper flat. The contents of the ground floor were saved, the bedding, clothing and everything in the upper flat being destroyed. The insurance was $300 on the building and $30 on the contents.

VANDALISM.—Eleven slabs and monuments marking graves in the cemetery of the Methodist St. John's church have been defaced, thrown down, broken or otherwise injured by some miscreant who are, so far, undetected. It is a suggestive fact that the defacement work was done about the time when the assault upon Mr. Joseph Travers, the house of Mr. Wall robbed and an attempt made to steal Mr. Joseph's cows, all the depredations being committed in the same direction from town.

IN ADVICE was lost.—Some days ago The Times editorially spoke of the alleged increase of burials thrown upon the municipalities by the Blair government and urged that in view of this claim it was important that the County Council should be elected should be opponents of the Blair government.

The County electors showed their appreciation of the advice by electing a County Council which including the representative from Moncton city, contains 12 representatives of the Blair government and three opponents—and even about one or two of these three, there is doubt.—Transcript.

CAGION AND CONVICTS.—Michael Jar, dines and Daniel Murphy, the two young fellows who assaulted Mr. Joseph Travers, as stated in last week's Advance, and were arrested by officer Rankin and tried on Thursday last by police magistrate McCullay. Murphy pleaded not guilty, but an unproved assault was charged against him, and he was sentenced to pay a fine of $30, or two months in jail. He was also tried and convicted of retaining officer Rankin on a previous occasion, convicted and fined $20, or three months in jail. Justice pleaded guilty and was fined $20, or two months in jail. Both are in jail.

PERSONALS.—Last Thursday's Halifax Chronicle says "Mr. Charles E. McLaggan of the Bank of Nova Scotia in this city, has been promoted to the New Glasgow branch of the same bank. He will be much missed by his numerous friends and acquaintances in this city."

Miss Edith Hastings, daughter of A. H. Hastings, barrister, of St. John, was one of the five candidates who successfully passed the entrance examination in Fredericton last week at law students. The young lady led the list. She is the first lady law-student in the province.

Mr. J. G. Forbes, of St. John, has received word that he has been chosen as the Liberal-Conservative candidate to contest Greybrook for the commons at the next election.

Rev. Canon Forsyth returned from Halifax on Friday. He will be accompanied by Mr. Messias Atkins of Newcastle has gone to Amherst, N. S., where he takes a position with Mr. Jas. T. Parsy.

Messrs. J. W. Smith, M. P. P., Chas. Hickman and Wm. Douglas were passengers on last night's Quebec express on a shopping excursion to Miramichi. They expect to return laden with brand and wild geese.—Transcript 12th.

Raspberries, Blueberries and Pans in October.

Miss Susie Stothard of Moorfield has sent the editor of the ADVANCE a nice lot of raspberries picked by herself, and they are both a delicacy and curiosity at this season of the year.

From Mr. Wm. C. Stothard, of the same place, we have a lot of green peas, raspberries and blueberries, which go to show the Miramichi has a long season for vegetable and small wild fruits and that Mr. Stothard is one of the men who take an intelligent interest in their production.

A Strong Law Firm.

Hon. T. J. Tweedie, Q. C. and Mr. R. B. Bennett, L. L. B., who studied law at Mr. Tweedie's office and Dalhousie Law School, and was admitted as an attorney at Fredericton last week, having done a professional partnership. Mr. Tweedie is the recognized leader of the North Shore bar and his ability as a lawyer is generally conceded. Mr. Bennett is known as a young man of excellent character and habits, capable, energetic and industrious. He is fortunate in beginning his professional career under such favorable auspices and both Mr. Tweedie and he are in a most congenial and happy relation on the consumption of an arrangement that gives promise of being a mutually satisfactory and advantageous one.

Mr. Tweedie's time is, unavoidably, occupied to a considerable extent with the duties of his position as head of the Crown Land Department in the executive government of the province, and the admission of Mr. Bennett as his professional partner will, no doubt, secure matters with the large clientele who seek the efficient legal assistance which his office affords.

A Pilotage Matter.

We are requested to publish the following complaint which has been handed to the Hon. Commissioners of the Port of Miramichi:—To the Pilot Commissioners of the Port of Miramichi in the Province of New Brunswick.

GENTLEMEN:—We, the undersigned masters of ships now lying in the Port of Miramichi, beg leave to call your attention to the negligence of the pilots in this port in conducting the vessels. We have during the present season, all had the experience of having pilots board our vessels only after we had crossed the bar, and when having done so we could have proceeded to our destination without their services. We call your attention to this in order that you may be in a position to hold an investigation and remedy the matter as in your power.

Our humble petitions, vessels visiting this port, and having a pilot on board, and better satisfaction would be given all around if the club were broken up and the pilots permitted to compete with each other as they used some years ago to do.

We have the honor gentlemen to be your most obedient servants.

The Captain is Top-Sawyer.

The Marine and Fisheries authorities are partners in a rather awkward situation with an Austrian captain. Some of the people of Hartigue settlement who are interested in the fishery, had occasion to petition through Hon. Mr. Adams, the representative of the County, against the dumping of ballast by the Austrian launch Fiume E. Capt. Antonio Vidassich, in the Miramichi river in its vicinity. Mr. Adams forwarded the petition to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and that gentleman directed the matter of the law to be invoked in the name of Mr. J. H. Harding, of the Marine and Fisheries Office, St. John, came to Chatham, and Fisheries Overseer Abbott made information before Police Magistrate McCullay against Captain Vidassich, charging him with violation of the Fisheries Act.

It is thought that the ship ought not to have been permitted to discharge ballast where she did, and that the sooner the practice is abandoned the better it will be for both the fishery and the navigation of the river, but Capt. Vidassich did not know anything about that part of the business and was, therefore, surprised when Deputy Mayor J. C. Johnston visited him at his vessel at her boarding berth—the Snowball mill wharf—on Tuesday and requested him to accompany him to the police magistrate's office, where he had to appear before the magistrate.

The gentleman of the Fisheries end of the case, however, were much interested when the captain showed that his vessel came in port from Miramichi on the 28th of the month of August and on being visited by Dr. McDoval, Quarantine officer, was ordered below quarantine to discharge ballast. Capt. Vidassich, who has been in port since the 28th, has not yet received the following order:—

To O. FOSTER:—Take the Fiume E. to Hartigue, clear the last bar to the stream. Wm. Johnston, Harbor master. Capt. Vidassich, who has been in port since the 28th, has not yet received the following order:—

When the gentlemen of the Marine and Fisheries Department took in the situation, they advised the captain, in a friendly way, that he had better place his vessel at the Snowball mill wharf, as his consignee, advised him in any way, but, the prosecution was not to be put off, and the captain's matter one between the British and Austrian governments. The officials have seen the point and proclaimed a truce.

Capt. Vidassich, who can speak very little English, was taken to the police magistrate's office and sent to the police station. The captain, who is an agent of the Marine and Fisheries Department, and he thinks it very queer British law if another agent of the same department of the Dominion government can succeed in having him held in a room for so long a time.

The result of this premeditated assault of their boats by the generous and sympathetic members of the Club was that they hoped for, but that was of the press and other organs, not yet overtaken by the temporary insanity, elation, self-exaltation and garrulity of the Ontario spirit. The pure egotism, however, would be to our shame, the accused would be to our shame, the accused would be to our shame.

their duty, after hearing the evidence of the witness, to say whether a prima facie case had been made out and if so find a verdict.

The Grand Jury then retired to their room and proceeded with the examination of the witness. The Grand Jury found a bill in both cases and the accused was discharged.

There was only one civil cause entered for trial, viz.—

George Ford v. John McLeod. This was an action of assumpsit tried at last County Court, but the jury having disagreed on their verdict the case is again entered for trial. Mr. E. P. Williston, Attorney, with S. Thomson, Esq., Q. C. counsel for plaintiff; L. J. Tweedie, Q. C., counsel for defendant.—Advocate.

Yachting for Fun.

The yachting season is now over, and all are regretting the loss of the fun that has characterized it.

The "Mills" boats were accustomed to have everything pretty much their own way, and Commodore John C. Miller—the real Commodore and our leading yachtsman and patron of the sport—always saw the honors he carried off with good modesty. Others, who were occasionally, accepted their good luck, or the reward of their skill in a similar spirit, and they were both the winners and the losers.

Fredericton, Oct. 12.—The trial of Joseph Morgan, charged with assaulting Frank Curran, causing actual bodily harm, commenced Tuesday morning at County Court shortly before 10 o'clock. J. H. Barry, clerk of the court, appeared for the prosecution, and Wm. Williston for the defence.

Frank Curran was the first witness called. This morning, and a GLOBE representative called out to get the facts.

Mr. J. A. Armstrong, P. G. M., was approached by the reporter, but he declined to say anything on the subject of the meeting which he said was a private one.

There had been some talk of a misapprehension of facts, but it was all included in a paper which had no interest in the order, and was not friendly to it.

Mr. Armstrong declining to enlighten him further, the reporter next saw Mr. D. McArthur, who is a District Master, and a prominent member of the order. Mr. McArthur gave a very good reason for not knowing what took place at last night's meeting. He was not there. Mr. McArthur said there had been some talk about the funds, but it was one of the slurs that were continually being cast at the order.

It had been said that the expenses incurred by the Bathurst school difficulty had been too large, but this all emanated from persons who had no right to talk of such matters.

The reporter next saw Mr. Richard G. Magee, the treasurer of the Grand Lodge. Mr. Magee declined the rest to say anything about the proceedings at the meeting.

He assured the reporter, however, that he supposed that the paper which was actually printed about a shortage in the funds. It was other matters that occupied the attention of the Grand Lodge; the members did not consider the rumors worthy of consideration.

implicit confidence should be reposed in it. The appeal of the board should be read.

It was said that the society was encouraged by the bulk of the clergy. It wants to be encouraged by the bulk of the clergy. It wants to be encouraged by the bulk of the clergy.

After a hymn Rev. Canon Mackenzie, of Toronto, spoke briefly, referring at the outset to a generally overlooked missionary passage in the 22nd psalm, the concluding verses of which tell of the missionary triumph of the Crucifixion Saviour.

After a hymn the chief speaker of the evening, REV. DR. SULLIVAN, of ALGOMA, made an address. The bishop is one of the most eloquent speakers in Canada, and his earnest words might have touched every heart as he described the condition and needs of the Indian people. In humorous terms he referred to the mistakes made by English reporters who variously described his diocese as the diocese of Allah, of Allah, while some paper actually termed him the Bishop of Ammonite!

The speaker, however, very considerably referred to the reporter generally as an anglicist individual. After describing the geographical, mineral and agricultural products of the diocese he referred to the former difficulties of traveling, and the great facilities so kindly afforded the missionaries by the Canadian Pacific railway. That company was ever ready to assist the society and not only granted free passes to the missionaries, but gave land on the line of railway for building houses, etc., and assisted in many other ways. As present there are only 29 clergy in the diocese, a noble and self-denying body of men, and the bishop touching referred to some of their needs. One of the great needs of the diocese is funds. The responsibility of the church of England in Canada is to support Algoma. The best investment we can make with our money is to help missionary work.

Time forbade him to refer to his Indian work, but he could not help paying them a brief tribute of affection and respect.

Why Ted Was Not Invited.

Grandmother. Hollrooke's temper had been much tried that morning. Everyone else was busy about the house, and her own work had been interrupted by an unusual number of callers.

Mrs. Clark had borrowed spoons for her lunch party, and Johnny Linn had come for a recipe his mother wanted. Then there had been an agent with a pint measure which could serve various purposes as occasion required, and a tramp asking for "a bit of cold victuals," while old Uncle Jimmy inquired through the window whether or not they would like to buy some fresh fish.

When once more a step sounded on the side porch and a shadow fell across the heap of carpet grandpa was bending over, her patience was quite exhausted. A small boy stood in the doorway, holding out a slip of folded paper.

"If you please," he began, "will you give—"

"No," said grandma, severely. "We haven't anything for you—not if you are deaf and dumb."

"I didn't want you to give me anything," was the puzzled rejoinder. "It's something for—"

"I haven't any doubt of it, it's probably a very good thing, but we don't need it and we don't want to buy it."

"But won't you just look at it—is it?"

"No!" cried grandma, "I've seen this carpet woven in New Scotland long ago if I had been left in peace. I know all about you, you are a set of impostors and we don't want to have anything to do with you."

"We aren't impostors! We're just as good as you are—so!" declared the small voice, and a pair of indignant feet clattered across the steps and out of the window.

"Perhaps I was a little hard on him," thought the old lady to herself. "I hadn't my spees on, but it was probably baking powder or medicine."

When Ted came home from school he went straight to the kitchen where mamma was helping Nora get dinner.

"Has it come, mamma? Have you seen it? What have you done with it?"

"With what, dear?"

"Why, my invitation to the party—Earl Davenport's party, you know. All the fellows are invited, and it's going to be real big and swell."

"And there is going to be lemonade dished out of a chunk of ice, and ice cream with peaches in it, and fireworks in the evening and everything."

"I have been here in the kitchen all the morning," said Mrs. Hollrooke. "Probably grandma went to the door."

But grandma had seen nothing of an invitation, neither had Nora, nor sister Bess, and Ted refused to be comforted.

Modern Chivalry.

"I tell ye, gentlemen, hit's impossible to rise corn and riss it right without litigation."

"I suppose he meant irrigation, but far be it from me to criticize a member of the school board," laughingly said the handsome young man that had just entered the cabin.

"These neighbors of ours must be the funnest people on earth, or do you invent these jokes for their medicinal effect?" inquired the sick girl, smiling from her comfortable chair.

"Oh, I'm not equal to that; my imagination is a mere speck, a tallow dip—so to speak—compared to their brilliancy. And the fun of it is they are so unconscious."

Two young men and a sick girl, accustomed to the refinements of civilization, trying to consider life a far away ranch.

"It was romantic situation, and 'deucedly unconventional,' as they admitted.

One of the men—a young doctor—had buried a charming wife, and was rushing away from sad memories to try life in a new land, together with another young adventurer.

When in New York, where they had stayed a few days, they met Bessie Mason, an old school friend of both, apparently dying with consumption, and quite alone in the world.

She had longed for a breath of the balmy south, a last chance for life, but under the circumstances it was useless. Now the coming of these friends revived the thought.

"Go with us," said the doctor; "you will get well. We will adopt you."

"Oh, to think of it restores me almost; but it is impossible."

The impulsive young men, persuading themselves that the change would save the girl's life, finally succeeded in overcoming her scruples.

She bore the journey marvelously, and leaving her in a little hotel in Texas, they prepared to set up housekeeping on a sheep ranch not far off.

The doctor riding over every day to see the sick girl, soon became convinced that more care was needed than could be had in that place.

Beside their cabin fire, the two friends held a consultation, and the verdict was that Bessie must come home.

"We must take care of her," they said. "Yes, by George; now we've brought her so far away, but ought not to let her die here."

"I'll settle it," said the doctor. "I've had more experience than you."
