MORE ABOUT ELECTRIC PLANT

Hopes Given that the Right Thing May at Last Develop

The following letter was received yesterday from Lieut. R.
W. Lindsay, who two weeks ago, met a number of citizens with
the proposal for an electric plant.
That there may be no misinterpretation we publish the letter in full:

Mr. Editor: I notice in your issue of the 24th April, an article entitled "Anticipation for Electric Juice" and while I thank you for the publicity given the question, I must take exception to one statement you made, and that was that "the Lieutenant was not able to give details of the cost, nor of the service that could be produced."

Now, I do not know who your informant was, but he either did not know what he was talking about or else willfully misrepresented me, giving
I am afraid, the people of Hartland a wrong impression. The fact of the matter is, that the six months I was in Hartland in 1917, I went into the lighting question very thoroughly, as I was astonished that a town the size of Hartland had never put in an electric light plant.

I took a list of every house and store
in the town, with the average number of lights required, drew a plan of the town, and sent this information to two of the principal electric companies on this continent, and received their estimates for installing a plant operated by crude oil. And on these figures could be shown each year, and at the same time supply light at very reasonable figures. I did state at the meeting that I had no figures to offer so far as the power part of the question was concerned, as this phase of the problem had not entered my mind until this last trip to Hartland, when it was brought forcibly home to me.

As I first considered the question,
I made inquiries re the Beaguineau and was informed by a prominent business man of Hartland that stream was out of the question as a Company composed of Hartland gentlemen had tried to obtain power from that stream, and the scheme had been defeated by the lumber company.

I then took a run out to the Little Presque Isle, and from rough observation judged it would be too expensive a proposition to dam for the amount of revenue there would be in the scheme.
Gasoline, oil and oil, and steam were out of the question, but crude oil is a very cheap motive power and is being used successfully by other towns in the Maritime Provinces for just such a purpose as this.

No one recognizes the fact more than I do that if it is possible to get water power cheap enough to enable a company to show a profit, or even an even break, without taxing the people too much for this light and power, it is the only scheme.

Thanking you for the space, I remain,
Yours sincerely,

R. W. Lindsay, Lieut.

Fredericton, Apr. 29.

Unfortunately the manager of the Observer was out of town at the time of the meeting mentioned and the first that he knew of Lieut. Lindsay's interest in the project was after his return home on Monday and the identity of whoever it may have been that gave the Observer the report is already forgotten. The article referred to was written by the editor from merely a superficial verbal report of one of the most interested persons present.

Electricity for Hartland is not a new problem and even the editor has given the matter a great deal of thought and study and has likewise secured details of the probable cost both before the war and since.

In spite of the above letter we fearlessly maintain that water power is the one proper source from whence commercial electricity can be secured. So far as the power at the mouth of the Beaguineau is concerned no one has an exclusive franchise to it and the N. B. year book just issued estimates the horse power per diem at 1000. Those of us who have lived our lives here are quite of one accord that the Little Presque Isle has throughout the year a greater debouché
ment of water than the Beaguineau —that is to say, that during periods of long drought more water flows into the St. John from the former stream than from the latter. It is estimated that a 50 foot dam can be built near the mouth of the Beaguineau.
It is certain that no such height can be reached on the Little Presque Isle, but A. B.
Flinn who has installed many electric plants in the State of Maine visited the stream during the low water period of 1913 and declared at a point not more than 80 rods from the main highway a dam could be readily built that would furnish a 24 hour light and power service sufficient for Hartland needs for many years to come. The site is available at a reasonable figure.

The only thing the Observer knows about crude oil is that it smells nasty but he has heard that the Diesel engine perfected and operated by crude oil will be the nearest thing to perpetual motion the scientific world has ever known. If Lieut. Lindsay has a plan where crude oil, kerosene oil or castor oil will successfully maintain a 24 hour
light and power service for Hartland he should by all means let us know about it. What Hartland requires is 100 horse power 24 hours in the day.

In closing the editor might state that during the six months that Lieut. Lindsay "went into the lighting question very thoroughly" and "took a list of every house and store in town" he failed to include the Observer which for want of electric power is still setting type by the old hand method and is operating under a handicap every day.

THE PRICES OF PRODUCE

There is a keen demand for potatoes that is likely to continue until all the local stock is cleaned up. The cause of this rise is occasioned by a failure of the new crop in the south and huge exportations made to Archangel in Siberia. The local price is around $4. There is also a tremendous demand for hay and from $20 to $25 is offered at leading points.
The demand for butter and eggs continues brisk and on a trade basis 40 cents will be paid for the farmers and 55 cents for the latter, oats are bringing 75 cents. Good seed stock brings more.

A Week's Leave

By ROBERT FORD TRESHAM

"It is Mr. Lyle Bartram," spoke the sweetest voice the owner of that name had ever heard, as he entered the office of his nearest relative, and he nodded blunderingly, for the sight of a lovely face in full accord with the musical tones for the moment held him spellbound.

"You are to wait for your uncle, Mr. Edson, if you please," continued Edna Worrell, flushing under the ardent glance of the visitor. "He expects you and he will be here soon, I am sure."

Lyle sank into the chair nearest to this rare vision of loveliness. She had, it appeared, succeeded to Mr. Robert Worrell, for ten years the secretary of the law office. Most heartily Lyle approved of the change, admired his uncle's good taste and was engaged in a most pleasing casual conversation with the young lady when Mr. Edson appeared.

"You got me a week's leave from the encampment—thanks," spoke Lyle at the start, as Mr. Edson led him into his private office. "I see you have made a change in your assistant."

"Yes," nodded his uncle. "Worrell was fairly superannuated." He anticipated it, I fancy, and schooled this treasure of a daughter to take his place when he got ready to retire. She fills the bill completely—more than fills it, I should say, for she has all Worrell's knowledge of detail and is more speedy in her work."

"A pleasant surprise, uncle," spoke Lyle warmly. "It will seem good, after a month of hard training, to have seven days of complete leisure."

"Ahem—just so," murmured Mr. Edson, with a keen glance at his nephew. "Only, I imagine your time will be pretty well occupied, Paul. I, and Mr. Edson smiled wistfully. "This war business has set my wife all fussy-turvy."

"I don't know a better patriot," enthused Lyle.

"That may be, and I wouldn't shirk a duty under any circumstances, only it's not going to be the same when you have gone away for good. It breaks a pleasant life from me, my boy. You have been like an own son and I am going to miss you greatly. The old home will be pretty lonesome."

There was a pathos in the old man's tones that touched Lyle deeply.

"There is nothing I would not do to prove my appreciation of all your kindnesses," spoke Lyle fervently.

"I realized that, I knew I could count on you," replied Mr. Bartram, in a tone of conviction. "There are two more months of training for you, then will come the hard tug at my heart strings. When the ocean divides us, you will seem little in life worth living for to me. Lyle, I have thought it all out, I want you to devote your week's leave to getting married."

"Uncle!" Lyle nearly jumped from his seat. Of such conjuncture he had never dreamed. He stared wonderingly at the serious, yet emotionally working face in surprise.

"There are any number of your young lady acquaintances who will be glad to welcome your attentions as 'warrior' Edson. "With a wife thinking of you, caring for you back here, you will have something to hold you and I would have someone to cheer and comfort me in my lonely hours."

Much more in a similar strain John Edson imparted to his nephew. "A choice of any good, lovable girl will please me," he said, in conclusion. "I do not dictate to you, Lyle, I only express the wish that lies next to my heart."

"I shall try to meet your wishes, uncle," spoke Lyle, and thought of Miss Edna Worrell.

John Edson was called away on professional business the next day. The week's leave was nearing an end when he returned. He was disappointed as he made some casual inquiries of friends before he met Lyle.

"He looks like a deep shadow as Lyle came rushing into the office all activity and ardor."

"You do not seem to have employed your time very diligently during my absence, Lyle," spoke the old man gravely. "I do not hear of your having visited one of our old friends."

"No, uncle," answered Lyle, with a quizzical smile upon his face. "I was too much occupied at the office, visiting the wife you ordered me to find."

"At the office? Are you making sport of me, Lyle?"

"Not a bit of it," replied Lyle. "Uncle, I hope you approve, for the first minute I saw Edna Worrell I fell in love with your lovely secretary."

"Ha!" exclaimed Mr. Edson, and the start of a bright smile showed on his relieved face.

"And the fourth day after you left I told her so," chuckled Mr. Edson, delighted. "A girl among a thousand!"

"You approve?"

"Decidedly Lyle, I congratulate you sincerely."

"Edna, dear," spoke Lyle, going to the door and opening it. "Your dear uncle wishes to give us both his blessing. For you see, uncle," continued Lyle, earnestly, "you need never be lonely while I am gone, for Edna will keep you company at home, and of course you can't spare her from your office where she is so essential to you, so you will have her with you practically all of the time."

"Goldie"

By ADA PAGE MARSHALL

Mort Allen put down the street, running like a whitehead. Two boy friends tried to stop the rushing whirlwind, but Mort sent them spinning and dashed on.

"Can't stop!" he yelled.

"What's the row—fire? Burglars?" Worse than that! Aunt Nettie's Goldie is gone! Then Mort spurred up afresh. Rounding a corner, he ran squarely into Lawyer Barnes, his employer, toppled him sideways against a fence, but halted not for apology or explanation.

"Goldie" was a pet hen of Aunt Nettie Gale, with whom Mort and his sister Juttie lived. Goldie was almost one of the family. In the estimation of Miss Gale, who had raised the plump hen, Goldie was almost human. She laid an egg every day of the year. She ducked to the minute at seven in the morning, at high noon, and at six in the evening. She never allowed a stray dog or cat to come near the place, and when her mistress appeared in the garden Goldie followed her every step.

Mort worked in the law office of Lawyer Barnes. He had just reached home when he found his sister, flushed, breathless and excited.

"Oh, Mort!" she panted. "Goldie is gone! I've been hunting for her everywhere. Just now, though, Ned Dayton told me that the Moores had sold all their chickens. The men who bought them had a wagon with a coop on it. By mistake they must have got Goldie with the lot, for she goes over there often, and Ned says he is sure he saw one of the men chasing her with a hooked wire. He told me they went in the direction of the freight yards."

"I'll soon have Goldie back!" vaunted Mort.

Just as Mort neared the freight yard he met an empty wagon with two men on the seat. He halted, and questioned them, and they proved to be the supposed abductors of Goldie.

"Remember the hen," said one of the men. "Say, you must. She's on the Chicago freight, just made up. We topped the coop in a box car about the middle of the train. The yardmaster is there."

Mort made a new dash. He reached the train, going with increasing momentum, and seized the iron rungs of a ladder, swung to the bumpers and clung to the brake rod.

The weather was quite cold, and Mort's hand, clinging to the brake rod, was numb and chilled. His position, too, was one of cramped discomfort. Right above him was an open end window of a box car. He pulled himself up and crowded through the aperture. It was to land on a shifting heap.

"Potatoes," he discovered, let go, and rolled down the shifting mass.

"What's doing?" he yelled upon his seat. "Who is it?" It was dark in the car, and the owner of the voice, seizing a lantern, lit it, and Mort confronted an unkempt, yet pleasing, freckled young man. The potatoes formed slanting hills at the end of the car, but in the center was a clear space where a stove was in place.

Very soon Mort understood the situation. The car in transit was in the charge of the man, who was supposed to accompany the freight to terminus, building a fire if the temperature fell below freezing. Then Mort's story came out. His companion laughed heartily.

"You've got pluck, lad," he commented, "but you'll have to take quite a journey to get back that pat of yours, for this train don't stop until we reach the city. Then I'll see that you get the chicken."

Mort liked his strange host the more he saw of him. The young man was an acknowledged rover, wandering about the country striking all kinds of work and adventure. For the sake of a free pass he acted as warden of the potatoes. When they reached the city he induced the train hands, whom he knew, to hunt up the shipped coop and Mort got Goldie, put her in a bag, and began to cast about for a way to get back home, so miles away.

"Here's something you dropped," he spoke, picking up a card on the car floor.

"Oh, yes," nodded his companion. "It's my pass. What's the matter?" as he noted Mort staring at the name it bore—"Robert Wood."

"Oh, say!" exclaimed Mort. "Is that your name?"

"Sure, it is."

"Oh, then," shouted Mort in wild excitement, "you're a rich man!" and proceeded to inform his astonished host that his employer, Mr. Barnes, had been advertising for a month for one Robert Wood, wanted in a neighboring county as one of the heirs to a large estate.

"And I got one hundred dollars for information," boasted C., pleased Mort, "and say I'll get to Mr. Barnes soon as we can."

It was the real Robert Wood, as was discovered later. The back trip was arranged. Goldie restored to the home nest and Robert Wood interviewed the lawyer.

And because Mort had been the means of lifting him from poverty to opulence, and because Robert Wood met pretty Juttie Allen, the young man lingered in the town and the day he received his part of a very substantial estate he asked Juttie to become his wife.

Economical—Because It Covers More

EVEN if this paint were sold at a price half as high as any other, it would still be the economical paint to use on your house. In sheer covering capacity it has no equal. A gallon of it goes so far that you'll buy less of it and yet do more with it.

B-H PAINT

This paint is guaranteed to possess all its important basic the above formula which we maintain on every can. The result of such a formula is a paint which could ask in brilliancy of color and in power "hold" a paint which gives a fine lasting finish, excellent all others in "covering capacity" and in durability. DISEASE COMES THROUGH THE BLOOD

To Cure Common Ailments the Blood Must be Made Rich and Red

Nearly all the common diseases that afflict mankind are caused by bad blood—weak, watery blood poisoned by impurities. Bad blood is the cause of headaches and backaches, lumbago and rheumatism, debility and indigestion, neuralgia, sciatica and other nerve troubles. It is bad blood that causes disfiguring skin diseases like eczema, and salt rheum, pimples and eruptions. The severity of the trouble indicates how impure the blood is, and it goes always from bad to worse unless steps are promptly taken to enrich and purify the blood. There is no use trying a different medicine for each disease, for they all come through the one trouble—bad blood. To cure any of these troubles you must get right down to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is just what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do. They make new, rich, red blood. They simply purify and enrich the blood, and the disease disappears. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured thousands of cases after other medicines had failed. Here is proof of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to cure. Mrs. M. Stills, who resides near the town of Napanee says: "I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. I was very much run down in health, suffered from frequent spells of indigestion, biliousness, and sick headache. I had an almost constant pain in my head and my housework was a course of dread. In fact I felt so miserable that life held but little enjoyment. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I did, and the result was simply marvellous, and can best be summed up by saying that they made me feel like a new woman, and fully restored my health. I would advise every woman and girl who has poor blood, or is run down in health to give these wonderful pills a trial. I am never without them in the house."

At the first sign that the blood is out of order take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and note the speedy improvement they make in the appetite, health and spirits. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Bath Cemetery

One of the most popular and needful movements made in the village of Bath is that for the putting into order of the old Baptist cemetery in the centre of the village. A standing committee of twenty men with Rev. C. O. Howlett as chairman are at present at work who expect to expend in a few weeks about three hundred dollars in making this long neglected spot a matter of credit to the whole community. Already a new piece of ground has been bought from Matthew Gallagher which makes a splendid addition to the cemetery. The purpose of the committee is to level and grade the whole plot and sow with lawn seed. All monuments are to be straightened where necessary and all known graves permanently marked.

The meeting took place last Monday evening in the United Baptist church and the organization completed to bring the work to a satisfactory completion. The following is the organization:—Rev. C. O. Howlett, chairman of standing committee with general oversight of the work. Chas. McLaughlan was appointed overseer of fence construction. J. O. Hayes, secretary treasurer. Finance Committee: Charles E. Giberson, Daniel Secord, S. J. Barker, William Giberson, Nelson Drost. Harder Grain was appointed by the meeting to hire labor in connection with the work of grading and fencing.

Rheumatism Every Winter

To be crippled by Rheumatism is to have life become an intolerable burden, especially in the winter, when the persistent cold and damp aggravate this complaint till it is almost unbearable.

Can you picture the dread that any man would hold winter in when all it meant to him was a yearly return of his Rheumatism and the agonizing pains that it brings?

Such was the case of Mr. A. Beaudry of Bedford, Que. Each winter he was forced to undergo the torture of Rheumatic pains, until he discovered Gin Pills. Read what he says about these little doctors:

"Every winter I suffered from Rheumatism, and this is the first season I have been able to go through without a return of my old trouble—thanks to Gin Pills. The pills are all you need for them, and more."

Testimony such as this should convince even the most skeptical that Gin Pills do remedy Kidney troubles. If you have friends or relatives who suffer from this dread affliction, tell them to try Gin Pills. So many people have written us stating in glowing terms how Gin Pills have relieved them of Kidney troubles, that we are convinced that all any person needs to do in order to obtain relief is—try them.

Recalled to Life

By RALPH HAMILTON

"I direct that my property be sold for an amount not less than twenty thousand dollars."

There was a sister, among aunts, cousins, nephews and nieces of "Griffith Tenby, deceased, his last will and testament." It was a tidy sum, if not too promiscuously scattered. Expectant beneficiaries began to calculate mentally.

"The proceeds from such sale," read on the dry-voiced lawyer, "to be divided into four parts. Those of my relatives who are young, prosperous and in good health are able to shift for themselves. My four relatives, namely, are dependent on circumstances and each is to receive one-fourth of the amount acquired from such sale. I direct that receipts in full be given to all those who owe me money."

Many a struggling and blessed Griffith Tenby that night. He had been a friend to everybody. It was to his energy and financial co-operation that a free library had been established. When the question of the town high school came up he had donated a pleasant and convenient site. He had followed a lofty purpose in forgiving his debtors, knowing that liquidation for them would be hardship.

There was one who had wept secretly when the news came that Mr. Tenby was among the missing in a great hotel fire. Adeline Ward passed a woe-filled night, thinking of the noble friend who had aided her at the darkest hour of her life. She was only twenty-five, but she had become a hard-working business woman. She had started a small department store in Orville, engaging all her means. She arrived at a point where she must go bankrupt or obtain new liquid capital. Tenby, the friend to everybody, had come to her rescue. He had advanced her sufficient to re-establish herself, and now had wiped the slate clean, and this grateful, graceful woman for a year wore a black ribbon at her fair white throat and told no one why.

Griffith Tenby was not dead. He had escaped from the burning hotel down a fire escape. Twelve feet from the ground he fell. An hour later, wandering about aimlessly, he had reached a wretched hotel, sat down on its door step and fell asleep. He awoke a new self, a placid being, with all his past blotted out from memory and acquiescent in all that the occupants of the hut for two years thereafter suggested to him.

This was Abel Wayne, a wretched old man, whose pipe and liquor were the very acme of existence. He was not a criminal, but when he found nearly two thousand dollars in Tenby's pockets and no papers identifying him, and judged from the abrasion on his head that some heavy blow had made his senses abnormal, Wayne gave it out that he had been employed to care for his helpless boarder. He arbitrarily placed the cost at twenty-five dollars a week, and every Saturday night took that amount as his rightful own.

This life went on for Griffith Tenby for nearly a year and a half. His self-appointed guardian was taken ill one day. Dying, the man confessed to the physician what he had done. He handed him what was left of Tenby's money. The physician, interested in the case, had Tenby removed to a private hospital, expending the money required, and one day his patient, after an operation on his skull, came back to normal. The doctor gave him the residue of the money from Griffith Tenby started for his old home.

It was about eight o'clock in the evening when he left the train, a large hat well obscuring his face. As he crossed the public square he noticed that a drinking fountain had been put in place since he had left. The electric lights glinted across a copper plate surmounting it, and he read: "Memorial by grateful citizens," and his name and a record of his public activities in behalf of the community. Two strollers passed by.

"Yes, it was Miss Ward who paid for the fountain," spoke one of them. "It cost her two thousand dollars." The amount she had owed Tenby! He sat down on a bench, a queer thrill traversing his frame. He started as there appeared the woman he was thinking of. Miss Ward paused at the fountain, filled the chained cup with water, and Tenby fancied she closed her eyes and her lips moved as if in prayer. He could not withstand a wild impulse of the moment.

"Do not be frightened," he said. "It is myself, in flesh and blood." "Frightened? Oh, is it true? I am glad! glad!" and she tottered to the bench.

"I imagine I shall have to begin life all over again," he said, when she had told the story of two years. "Having given away all I had."

"Except your interest in my business, which has grown, oh so prosperously?" interrupted Adeline. "It was your capital that brought it all about, and so a hundred times over you have added, thinking to divide it with those of your relatives who might in time need it."

His eyes became humid. How well had this peerless creature remembered him! How clearly from her eyes shone forth her gratitude, her esteem. Her love as well. He knew it shortly, and they continued partners for life.

An Uncrowned King

By SAIDEE ESTELLE BALCOM

Perhaps Oak Grove would have turned out to be a mere, had its provincial population known that a king and seven loyal subjects were toiling down the hot, dusty country road, more weary, hungry, worried and disheartened.

They were little, keen-eyed, small-featured little men, inconspicuous as to attire, with touch of oriental in the suggestion of fex, scar and sandal. Their king was a real king, though originally the possessor of a decidedly circumscribed domain. One of a tribe in Arabia that had split up into sections, for a full decade he had been the acknowledged monarch of about two hundred wild and fractious horsemen of the desert. Disease had decimated his following, the greater proportion of his subjects had deserted him for a more prosperous chieftain, and the bare remnant of the citizens of Zappa numbered seven only. King Hamad Djel sold his tent, his throne and his crown to a mountebank neighbor, and transported himself and his little contingent to the United States.

Hamad and his men were marvellous in athletic and acrobatic skill. A wide-awake manager booked them for a circuit covering from coast to coast. He got rich out of the venture, and handed Hamad a small fortune, in appreciation and gratitude for the free and of liberty that had given them so much benefit, the eight men became naturalized citizens.

Then Hamad and his faithful seven started out on their own hook. Lack of "managerial" jurisdiction caused hard-working business men. They had stales, their money vanished, and now they found themselves stranded.

"Shelter, rest, food—we must manage," Hamad declared with a glance at his worn-out comrades. As they neared the edge of a thriving village, they came upon a great open barn, half filled with hay. King Hamad led his men into it.

"We will stay here, if we are permitted," he said, "and will bring water," and from their traps he secured a large tin pail and started for a near house.

King Hamad reached the house and approached its well. Then he made a dash for the door, dashed in, reading under a spreading tree. He approached her, bending with a courteous grace, and stating his request for a bucket of water. Blanche Merwin had noticed the group at the barn, and was standing near the well, and that led to an explanation. His former royalty and his present distress was pathetically outlined by King Hamad. Warm-hearted Blanche arose and took up his empty pail, and said: "You and your friends must be weak and weary," she said. "There is milk to spare in the dairy," and a few minutes later, invoking blessings upon his fair patroness, King Hamad returned to the barn with the pail filled to the brim with cool, fresh milk, a boon inestimable to the famished group.

That evening Blanche's soldier lover, Clyde Seddon, came over from his engagement. With his dances he visited the old barn. In the meantime Blanche's father had given the wayfarers permission to camp in the barn, provided they were careful of fire. To show their grateful appreciation, the group gave an exhibition of wonderful acrobatic feats, their king sustaining the other seven on his shoulders, and walking around with them, a human tower twenty feet high.

"Your great friends have given me an idea, Blanche," said Clyde, as they strolled back to the house. "I am to have charge of a meeting at the town hall Saturday evening to drum up local recruits. If these nimble fellows will occupy the stage for an hour or so, entertaining the audience, they will prove a drawing card."

Blanche had charge of decorating the hall and found willing and efficient hands in the little group. She gave them a royal supper at the house for their services, and when the meeting took place and after they had delighted the audience with their nimble feats, they sat down in a row of front chairs and listened to the appeal of the various speakers for "more men."

It was after Blanche had read a beautiful patriotic poem, that King Hamad became excitedly busy in discussing some thing of intense interest, and with his subjects. One of them he sent to the barn to return with a little cloth roll. As Clyde, after enrolling a score or more of new recruits, renewed the invitation to entertain the audience, Blanche and made a profound obeisance, while they formed a semi-circle about her.

"Your sweet voice has called us," as a subject of Blanche's in his mother-tongue English. "You shall be our goddess, to inspire us to give all we have for our adopted country. 'Sweet lady, but place the poor old flag of Zappa beside those others, and we will go to your camp, to the front, to prove our loyalty!'"

He unwrapped a faded streamer with a blue ground and with silver symbols, the last remnant of his vanquished grandeur, the flag of the smallest kingdom in the world. Blanche went to the Stars and Stripes, and amid the cheering cheers of the audience knew that she had added eight new stars to the service flag of the Stars.

A Mother's Tribute

THIS letter from Mrs. Roberts gives such a fine idea of the value of Dr. Chase's medicines for use in the home that we shall publish it without further comment.

Mrs. Everett Roberts, 44 Endicott Ave., Halifax, N.S., writes:

"I feel it a pleasure as well as my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Ointment. After the shock of the Halifax explosion my system was all run down, and I was so weak that I could not walk. Night after night I lay awake unable to sleep. Nothing did me any good until one of my neighbors recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After a treatment of this medicine I can positively say that my health and strength have been restored, and I can now sleep well and do my work as well as ever."

"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for my baby, who had ringworms all over his face. I tried almost everything, I knew of without success until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This cured him in a short time. I would not be without either of these medicines in the house, and trust this may induce others to give them a trial and be convinced of their merits."

You can scarcely ask for a stronger guarantee of the value of a medicine than the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., on the box. This is for your protection against imitations and substitutes. Edmanston, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Y.W.C.A.

For the wives and children—Overseas, dependent upon Canadian soldiers, and for Y.W.C.A. work in Canada generally, a sum of $175,000 from the Red Triangle Fund will be set aside for the Dominion Council of the Y.W.C.A., which is caring for the soldiers' women folk, and their little ones on the long journey from Liverpool to Canada, and is also extending its work for Canadian girls.

For their sake also be generous when you make your contribution.

FOR the sake of our victorious soldiers and their dependents, and the happiness of their home-coming; for the sake of our future citizens, our teen-age boys; for the sake of rural life in Canada; for the sake of the social betterment of the toilers in factory and workshop; for the sake of lonely men and boys in our mines and forests; for the sake of Christian Society and Canadian manhood—we appeal to you. Give us your contribution, little or big. Be as generous as you can.

Hand your contribution to the canvasser when he calls, or if you live where it is difficult for him to call, send it by check, money order or registered letter to the National Treasurer, Red Triangle Campaign, 120 Bay Street, Toronto.

Please Note:

We are not asking for money to carry on our work Overseas, with the Army in Great Britain, France or Belgium. That work will continue at its maximum for some months, financially provided for by the liquidation of our assets Overseas, and will not terminate till the last man has sailed for home.

For Canada's Manhood

The Reconstruction program of the Y.M.C.A. includes the following vitally important developments:—

1. An increased service to 300,000 teen-age boys in the Dominion—the development of Canadian Standard Efficiency training; Bible Study groups; summer camps; conferences; service for High School boys, for working boys, in the towns and cities; for boys on the farm and for boys everywhere, who have lacked opportunity for mental, moral, physical or social development.

2. Inauguration of Y.M.C.A. work in the country, and the smaller towns and villages lacking Association buildings and equipment, on a plan of county organization. This will include the establishment of Red Triangle centres for social, recreational and educational work among boys and men, in co-operation with the churches.

3. The promotion of Y.M.C.A. work among Canada's army of workers in industrial plants, both in Y.M.C.A. buildings and in the factory buildings, organizing the industrial workers of our cities by meetings, entertainments, games and sports.

4. The establishment of the Red Triangle in isolated districts where lumbermen, miners and other workers hold the front trenches of industry.

5. Besides these main fields of increased activity for 1919, we have to provide for enlarged work among railway men, college students and for our campaign to encourage physical and sex education. Under all our work we place the fundamental foundation of manly Christianity.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

The disciples of Isaac Walton have already been busy with rod and line, tempting the elusive trout when he is the biggest sucker at any time during the season. We really have very good April fishing here and several nice little catches have been made already.

Work on the Hotel is progressing very favorably and points to an early occupation of the premises. No building ever got a more thorough renovation than it has, and when completed it will surely be a big asset to the town.

Leint G. H. Lunn who went overseas with a western unit from Calgary two years ago, returned a happy bridegroom on Wednesday evening. He and Mrs. Lunn are here visiting his uncle H. W. Arnew, after his absence of four years in the west, where he was engaged in school teaching.

On Wednesday afternoon at the Methodist parsonage, Centreville, Miss Clara Waters of Lakeville, and Owen Birmingham of Florenceville were married by the Rev. J. B. Champion. Only the immediate relatives were present at the ceremony. A reception was held at the home of the bride in the evening. The young couple will reside in Florenceville.

Miss E. Forne McClintock, R.N., who has been overseas for a year in France with the American Expeditionary Forces, arrived from New York on Saturday for a visit with her brother, E. R. McClintock. Miss McClintock enlisted with a unit from Portland, Oregon.

A VALUABLE MEDICINE FOR THE BABY

Baby's Own Tablets are a valuable medicine for all little ones. They are a mild but thorough laxative which never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach; drive out constipation and indigestion; break up colic and simple fever; banish colic and worms and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. S. F. Moulton, St. Stephen, N. B., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for a long time and find them a most effective and valuable medicine. I would not be without them."

The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The D. D. Williams' Medicine Co., Brookville, Ont.

Whooping Cough

Mrs. Arthur Heinege, Ashton Farm, Parley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country, our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid result. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days."

Bell's Early Atrial

The first patent for a practical telephone was granted to Alexander Graham Bell by the United States Patent Office in 1876, but Bell had a close rival for the honor in Elisha Gray of Boston, whose career for an invention "to transmit the tones of the human voice through a telegraphic circuit" was filed a few hours after the Bostonian's application for a patent. Gray had described his invention in a paper communicated the previous year to the American Electrical Society. The Gray and Bell telephone of two similar in many particulars, and if Gray had been a few hours earlier in filing his caveat he might have won the honor of being the pioneer of the telephone. After a memorable litigation, however, the honor was awarded by the courts to Prof. Bell. Gray contributed many other important inventions to mankind.

A Painter of History

Mr. Robert Harris, C.M.G., who died in Montreal recently, had a long and distinguished career, chiefly as a figure and portrait painter. One of his best known works was "The Fathers of Confederation," executed under a commission from the Dominion Government. It contained the figures of thirty-three Canadian statesmen, and was regarded as an accurate representation of them and of great historical value. Unfortunately this painting, which hung for many years in the lobby at the main entrance to the House of Parliament, Ottawa, was destroyed in the fire. Among the offices which he held were President of the Royal Canadian Academy, 1893-1904; president of the Ontario Society of Artists and Director of the Art School, Montreal Art Association, 1895-97. He was created a C.M.G. in 1908.

Democracy

"It's great to live under a Democratic form of government."
"No doubt about that."
"A man and woman are feeling frisky. For instance, he can say what he wants done with the railroads."
"True, and then he can sit back and wonder who's going to do it."
