

Do You Use It?

It's the best thing for the hair under all circumstances. Just as no man by taking thought can add an inch to his stature, so no preparation can make hair. The utmost that can be done is to promote conditions favorable to growth. This is done by Ayer's Hair Vigor. It removes dandruff, cleanses the scalp, nourishes the soil in which the hair grows, and, just as a desert will blossom under rain, so bald heads grow hair, when the roots are nourished. But the roots must be there. If you wish your hair to retain its normal color, or if you wish to restore the lost tint of gray or faded hair use

STOCK MAINE WITH GOATS.

A New Industry Which Is Expected to Pay Better Than Sheep Raising.

Lee, Me., Aug. 2.—The long-promised experiment of raising goats upon the newly-cut but uncultivated lands of Northern Maine is about to be made, and Major Charles J. House, of Augusta, Me., the president of the goat company, and promoter of the enterprise, is here securing leases of wild land and hiring goat herders.

According to Major House's theory there is more money in goats than in sheep. A sheep is doing well if she raises one lamb in a year and brings it up to a saleable age. A goat brings forth young twice in a year, produces two or three at a birth, and can be relied upon to rear three young ones every season. Since the price of wool is falling, and the price of a fat kid is worth as much as a lamb's skin with the wool on it, while the meat of a young goat is fully as good to eat as that of a lamb, sheep are subject to many diseases, the goats are constantly raised by dogs and wild animals, and the farmer who would grow sheep for profit must build barns, buy provender and make a great outlay for his goats are hardy, cropping the sprouts from stumps in the clearing, eating coarse hay and enduring all kinds of weather without harm. The billy goats in a flock are able to keep the dogs and bobcats away.

For these reasons Major House proposes to turn the great raspberry and blackberry wilderness of Maine into a goat pasture, stocking a half million acres of land with approved breeds of goats, and putting them in charge of herders who are to stay at the end of the meadow hay to carry them through the winter, and cull out the young males for market at the end of the year. The females will be kept for breeding purposes for a few years until the waste territory is occupied. The company will start out with about 500 goats and two herders. If the experiments succeed, Major House hopes to have 10,000 goats at the end of this century, and thinks the company will get a net cash profit of $1 a head for every goat.

BASEBALL.

AGRICULTURAL BALL AT GUELPH.

Special to The Advertiser.

Guelph, Aug. 2.—The morning game here today has already been described by your correspondent, and the result was a draw. The afternoon game was a better contest, the morning game being a mere formality. Matters were reversed very materially. The Leafs put up a brilliant game, playing up to the ninth inning without a mistake. They increased their lead as the game progressed, and the visitors were completely out of it as the Leafs had been in the morning. Cockman dropped an easy fly, and Gunther dropped balls on first in a way that would have driven the crowd home and broken up the club had the Leafs been the culprits. The people in Guelph who patronize the game do not demand that their team should always win, but they do demand a good exhibition of the sport.

Duty pitched a great game for the Leafs. Up to the seventh inning London only had two scratch hits off him, which were made in the second, in the seventh and eighth they bunched successfully, however, while the run in the ninth was due to two errors.

Curiosities of Trade Restriction.

As the result of last year's triumph of the trade restrictionists in the United States, a stiff protective tariff is being applied to all imports into that country. It affects Canadian products, as well as those of other countries.

Our neighbors have a perfect right to fix their tariff in any way that suits them. If they want to discourage international trade, and to curtail exports as well as restrict imports, they could not have gone about it in a more effective manner than they have done. Their foolishness consists in believing that trade can be most profitably carried on by putting obstacles in its way.

There is one aspect of the new order of things that is noteworthy. We have always recognized that in a free United States market Canadians could sell and buy to the profit of themselves as well as to that of those who buy from or sell to them. That is fair trade. But at the time when negotiations for reciprocity were possible, Canadian trade restrictionists argued that Canada had no use for the United States market—that we produced similar articles to our neighbors, and that it would be better for us if intercourse with our neighbors ceased. Now when a restrictionist government is on the top at Washington, and a tariff aimed to prevent international trade is enforced, these advocates of non-intercourse are loudly lamenting the loss of the United States market to our farmers and fruit growers!

It is a strangely inconsistent attitude, but not more so than their position with regard to the granting of preferential trade to Great Britain. For ourselves, we see no cause for sitting down and lamenting the attitude of the United States. That country can pursue its own course. We will pursue ours. If it will not seek mutually advantageous trade with us, we will cultivate that market still more which has always been freely open to us, and by our preferential treatment of the people of Great Britain help to largely swell our imports. At the same time, we will seek additional markets in every part of the world, knowing that if we find out what customers want, at a fair market price, and keep faith with those who trade with us, our products will be preferred.

The Buffalo Express, referring to the further promotion of the Canadian preferential tariff with Great Britain, says: "This is a phase of commercial development which will be carefully studied by all the nations of the world. If it succeeds well, the credit will belong to the Liberal party of Canada, whose leader, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, has reaped the lion's share of the jubilee honors."

Britain's Good Example

British statesmen keep level heads when dealing with delicate international questions, or they would find the empire constantly embroiled with one or other of the nations of the earth. Lively diplomatic correspondence has taken place with the United States, but the result is not a cessation of friendliness between the two great branches of the English-speaking race. Instead of that there is to be a conference at Washington between representatives of the two nations as to the best method for preserving the Bering Sea seals. Great Britain and the United States are also consenting parties to an international convention on the monetary question, at which the whole subject of bimetalism will be threshed out. In all these negotiations and conventions, Great Britain shows that a great government cannot be ruled by resentments, by piques, by petty expedients to "get even." She looks at the situation as it exists today. In this respect the motherland affords a striking example to Canada, to the United States, and to the whole world.

A New York boy has been sent to jail for throwing broken glass on a bicycle path. He should have been well tanned with a birch rod.

Silver and Wheat.

It is dangerous for a man to dogmatize too closely in these days of sudden changes. Last summer the price of silver and the price of wheat were both away down in the United States. Mr. Bryan, the presidential candidate, in support of his platform favoring the free coinage of silver, asserted on every platform that the price of silver and wheat go hand-in-hand—when one is up the other is up, when one goes down, the other tumbles with it. And really the experience of last year seemed to bear out the Nebraska statesman. But the present year has played sad havoc with Mr. Bryan's contentions. On July 29, 1896, at Chicago, the value of the silver dollar was 52c per ounce, and the price of wheat 75c. On the same date this year, the value of the silver dollar was 45c, and the price of wheat 77c. Mr. Bryan's most powerful illustration of the need of a monetary revolution is for the time being completely destroyed.

The Seattle, Washington State, speculator who asks that the railway bonding system, established between Canada and the United States, should be abrogated, because they are not permitted to bring into Canada their mining outfits free of duty, are altogether too modest. Why did they not ask that the Canadian government suspend the operations of the law of the land entirely in the case of aliens, and permit them to do as they please?

The Fish Come Our Way, Too.

United States fishermen, operating on Lake Erie, are again in great trouble. They find that the fish in the lake have left their side, and insist on living in Canadian waters. The Erie fleet, indeed, find they will either have to tie up or run the certain risk of being overhauled and heavily fined by the Canadian Government patrol boat. The Petrol is in the vicinity, and the United States fishermen know that they will not be able to raise any questions as to the boundary lines, as the Petrol officers conform to a United States chart when overhauling and seizing the nets of trespassers in Canadian waters. In the present condition of international law, the Canadian fishermen have a distinct disadvantage over their neighbors on the other side of the line. If Lake Erie fish persist on inhabiting our waters, they will be caught by Canadian fishermen, and the only course open to United States fish dealers is to hire Canadian men and Canadian nets to catch them. With their laws governing the fisheries made so liberal in regard to the marketing of fish by outsiders, the United States people can hardly expect any privileges at the hands of Canadians.

The falling through of the agreement arrived at between the London electric railway authorities and London Township Council, for the extension of the railway to Pottersburg, is to be regretted. But it is not expected that the rupture will be long continued. The company and the township authorities are mutually interested in having the line extended as soon as possible, and a way out of the difficulty will no doubt be found.

Another Good Advertisement.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier offered to her majesty's government the 24 horses brought over by the Northwest Mounted Police. He has received the thanks of the colonial and war offices, who have accepted the offer. The government were informed that a large quantity of similar horses could be obtained if they are found to be suitable for war purposes. This, it is expected, will lead to a greater demand for horses of this character than there has before been.—[Canadian Gazette.]

We know of no reason why Great Britain should not get a full supply of hardy horses, suitable for use in her army, in the Dominion. It has been sometimes asked, What can Great Britain do for Canada in return for a preferential tariff, such as our government has put on the statute book? She can buy what we have to sell to her. Her people can more and more prefer our products to those of foreign countries. Her government can buy its supplies of horses from us, and get ample value, too. It can give our goods a preference when it is buying supplies for its troops, and be well satisfied. By pursuing this line of action the British authorities can do much to cement the ties of friendship which exist between parent state and child, and to build up a strong nation on this continent that will continue to work hand-in-hand with the motherland in the perpetuation of British institutions.

President McKinley of the United States is inclined to carry out the civil service reform regulations passed by his predecessor. He has just issued an order which, while exempting from examination the cashiers and a few other officers of trust, extends the classified service in the custom houses, so as to include all the ports without regard to the number of clerks employed, and which promulgates a rule as to removals that stands for justice to the employees. This rule prescribes that "no removal shall be made from any position subject to competitive examination except for just cause and upon written charges filed with the head of the department or other appointing officer, and of which the accused shall have full notice and an opportunity to make defense." The application of this rule will not only be for the good of the service, but will relieve the president of a great deal of uneasiness over worry.

The August issue of Table Talk, outside of its usual useful and entertaining departments, such as "The New Bill of Fare," "Household Inquiries," "Seasonable Menus and Recipes," and "Fashion Notes," assumes quite the air of a camping life, giving an article of "Cooking in Camp," by Cornelia C. Bedford, and a sketch entitled "Memory of Camp Life on the Plains" by Mrs. Grinnell. It also contains the "Strangers Plants and Fruits as Food," by Ethel Ramsey, and other seasonal and interesting matter. Table Talk Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Century for August touches the particular topics of the time with unusual success. It has "A Journey in Thessaly," by Thomas Dwight Goetzell; "A Trip to Alaska," by John Muir; "Some Unpublished Facts Relating to the Impediment of President Johnson," by Lieut.-Gen. John M. Schofield, and various articles that are very interesting. It is a striking number.

Following the Emerson and Sterling letters, which appeared in the July Atlantic, Dr. George Birkbeck Hill, the eminent English critic and man of letters, has edited and printed in the August Atlantic the first group of Some Unpublished Letters of Dean Swift. Swift is recognized as perhaps the greatest of English letter writers, and with the editor's pleasant and instructive explanation of these letters form a series of great literary value and charm.

Rowland E. Robinson has written many graphic stories, but one of the most dramatic which has come from his pen for a long time appears in the August Atlantic. He calls it "Out of Bondage," and it is the story of a fugitive slave.

THE ICEBERG MAID.

[Buffalo Courier-Record.]

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"I'm going to Klondike, sir," she said.
"Can I go with you, my pretty maid?"
"Is your courtship provisioned for two?" she said.

Then he gazed in the sky and he looked in the mud.
The spick-and-span man with the button-hole bud.
For he had but a single suit of crash,
And not enough to jingle of cash.

He could cut a dash at a summer resort.
And dance with a heel-and-toe cohort;
But he couldn't dash for the Pole,
Or dance on the waves if you hadn't the glue?

So the spick-and-span man and the iceberg maid
Will not go north together, I'm afraid;
For the spick-and-span man has frayed his price;
He's awful nice, but that cuts no ice.

BRITAIN AND RUSSIA

The Czar's Policy in the East Explained by a Russian Statesman.

The Paris Soleil prints an interview between its St. Petersburg correspondent and a prominent Russian statesman which may be interesting just now. Among other things the czar's man said:

"We are not the enemies of England. We willingly recognize the great role that she plays in the world. We sincerely wish her success in her projects of Anglo-Saxon and colonial federation. But we are suspected of cherishing a desire to conquer Hindostan. What nonsense! What absurdity! England, however, refuses to believe this. As to the internal reforms, rest assured that we shall insist that they must be complete and final."

The correspondent expressed some doubt in regard to the docile resignation of the Porte, and asked for some further explanations.

"We are now as we were at the immediate close of the Crimean war," said the Russian statesman. "Today we are strong, and the Russian government can speak like a master. Moreover, we are in full accord with the ideas of Austria. The resistance of Turkey would bring about a military intervention in which we would play the first part. Turkey does not want to commit suicide. She knows that her life and her death are in our hands."

"But," said the correspondent, "Turkey will not last forever, and a time must come when the Ottoman Empire, poorly sustained by Europe, will crumble to dust under its own weight."

"Agreed," said the statesman, "but when that day comes we will be in a position to defy all our enemies and to be the sultan for the czar." That will be the dilemma. It will be for Europe to make the choice.

The property of Mr. Mann, mill owner, South Yarmouth, had his crops damaged to the extent of $200. A large haystack was destroyed. Farmer Hughes, who resides near Kingsmill, had his barn struck by lightning, and the building totally destroyed. He carried $1,000 insurance. The corn and peas on the Haight farm, near Union, were blown and cut to pieces. A field of oats was also destroyed. Four acres of watermelons were destroyed, and 28 lights of glass in a house were nearly destroyed. At Mr. Kipp's, son 4, Southwold, 36 window lights were broken, the ground being white with hail, trees were blown down and corn stripped.

AN OLD villa at Roseneath Terrace, Edinburgh, has had as good a chance as is going of being haunted. While clearing out the foundation of the old house three skeletons were found.

See Them In Our East Window

THEY'RE the $1.25 and the $1.50 kind. To describe them all would take up too much room. But they're in all the latest summer shades. Every color you ever saw on a shirt front is here for your choice. There are all kinds of checks and stripes and polka dots. Attached or detached cuffs. Some are made of French Cambrie, some of Madras and some of Percale. We bought 100 dozen of them, that's how we can sell them so cheap.

That Dress Goods Sale

We haven't been saying much about that "Big Four" Dress Goods Sale lately. It really doesn't require newspaper advertising. Each customer tells her friends about it, her friends come to see if such good goods can really be sold for so little, and then the goods sell on their own merits. That's better than newspaper advertising. But in case none of your friends have told you about it, we shall.

1	Elegant 45c and 50c Shot Lustres, 42 inches wide, green mixtures, blue mixtures and brown mixtures, all on the first bargain table.	25c
2	Check Tweeds that were sold all season for 50c, and that should never be sold for less; small, fancy and shepherd's checks. Your choice.	25c
3	French Debeige Cloths occupy the third bargain table; very popular goods, all the summer shades, 42 inches wide, absolutely all-wool and yarn dyed.	15c
4	High-class goods on this fourth table; black lace weaves for hot weather wearing. The lot includes Grenadines, Lace and Yack Goods. Regular $50.	50c

EXTRA

We added an extra table to our "Big Four" sale, and during the past week it's been the most popular of the lot. It is piled with the elegant Black Mohair Crepon that we sold all season at 30c, 48 inches wide. Now—

FAITHFUL—
TILL THE END

It is, however, only Mickey McNamara after all, with his face as black as a coal! He has raised his head on hearing the coming footsteps, and now presents a visage that would have routed a regiment of Zulus.

"Good heavens, Mickey!" cries Cecilia. "At this time the two rise, and glance backwards towards her. Neil seeing a man, instinctively pulls down her hair, and makes little soft darts at her hair. She is slightly flushed. Cecilia, who is seated at Mickey's appearance, stands still and points tragically at him, on which Gaveston and Neil look at him, too.

"What's the matter with me?" asks Mr. McNamara, lifting his hands to his face, which plainly is the point in question—they are all staring at it. Slowly he rubs his hands over it, after which nothing is left to be desired.

They all burst out laughing; Geoffrey has flung himself on the grass in a very agony of mirth.

"Oh, he is dirty, isn't he?" says Nell, shaking with laughter, upon which McNamara, casting a reproachful glance at her, wheels round, and dashes towards a pool in the distance.

"Peter," says Mrs. Gaveston, advancing. "I have an old friend to introduce to you."

The big man, whom Stairs had called the High Priest, turns at this, and with a smile still on his face he remembers the flying of Mickey's coat forward. Stairs' colors holdy.

So this is her husband. This tall, ugly, kindly, perfect gentleman? There is no taking Gaveston at any time to be less than that, and Stairs at once acknowledges it with a significantly painful pang.

"This is my husband," says Cecilia, smiling, and with the most buoyant prettiness. There is evidently no suspicion in her mind of anything but a simple happy, so everyone must be happy, too. She has played at happiness for six long years, and has quite come to believe in it. Is there anything beyond her present life? Her delightful life in which she is so accustomed to be petted and spoiled?

Well—there's a debt or two to be paid to her dress-maker, to be sure, and a few ridiculous principles of Peter's part to be overcome, but beyond that—beyond that the waves sink and all the lake seems clear.

Gaveston has come to her at once, his clear dark eyes smiling at Cecilia's visitor.

"A friend of yours?" says he, and extends his hand to Stairs, who takes it, presses it, drops it.

A strange turn of affairs truly, he tells himself with some bitterness, when he has taken, and pressed, the hand of Cecilia's husband!

"An old friend," such an old one," says Cecilia vivaciously. "Nell, you remember Philip?" At this the vestal virgin comes forward.

"Indeed I do!" says she pleasantly, slipping her hand into Stairs' in an outburst of friendliness. "I was only a baby then, and Cissy was a child—but we both remember you, don't we, Cissy?"

"Of course we do," says Cecilia delightfully. Phil quite brings back the old days, doesn't he? What a pickle you were then, Nell!"

Stairs' face has blanched. It is nothing to her then all this past—a dream and a forgetting, no more. "It brings back old days," Stairs turns, and for once, for the first time, perhaps in all his acquaintance with her, deliberately examines her. What a face! What lips—half-mocking—wholly delightful—and her eyes—

"Her eyes mean Beauty call, and her brow, with those little sunny ringlets running across it, and yet with all these charms, these exquisite delights, what is she? A mere bubble on life's ocean, a thing with nothing in it, a glorious fantasy, a passing sunbeam, a woman perfect at all points as far as eye can see, yet for all that,

"Light as the foam that flecks the seas, fitful as summer's morning dew, as transient as morning dew, a mere waste of time."

"I remember you, too," says Stairs with an effort, turning from Cecilia and looking down into Nell's pretty face. "Six years is a long time, of course, but I remember."

Again his eyes seek Cecilia's. At this moment, it seems to him that he would give his life to be able to compel her to feel, to remember, as he does. Cecilia laughs, and beneath the laugh which is perfect—the faint blanching of her face goes unseen.

"I hope you will come and stay with us, when your visit with the McGregors is up," says Gaveston, in his calm, kindly tones. Any friends of my wife's," with a tender glance at Cecilia, who nods back at him in quite a brilliant fashion, "is a friend of mine. It appears you knew her when you were both even younger—with an amused glance at his wife, who indeed looks a mere girl—than you are now."

"I met Mrs. Gaveston six years ago," says Stairs briefly.

"And were tremendous chums?" Peter laughs, and his wife laughs, too, and pats him on the shoulder with quite delightful bonhomie. The pat drives Stairs nearly mad.

"Yes, yes, you must come," says she. "It will be lovely to renew our acquaintance. Peter is right. We were chums. Do you remember that dance we were at?"—she smiles openly at Stairs—"that fancy ball given by Lady Adean? That was almost the last time I saw you before you went abroad, or was it the very last?"

"I can always call it to mind, because it was my very first dance; I feel a little ashamed now when I recollect how I danced that night, and wore holes in my stockings. Peter, you'd have shuddered if you had seen me! I never sat down for one moment!"

"I shudder," says Gaveston. "I know you. I should shudder if you did sit down for a moment; I should imagine that Peter is right. We were chums. Oh! what a shame!" says Cecilia, giving him a little push that wouldn't have upset a fly.

Stairs' damsel is watching her. Is it actual cruelty or only mere indifference? That last dance! And she—she—she! Cecilia knew then. He was poor, absolutely penniless, but for his pay, and had nothing to offer her. But his eyes—his eyes! She must have understood. And at the last—when he had taken her in his arms, and kissed her mouth—his mouth had been open to him, and sweetly willing. A childish mouth, indeed, yet not so childish but that its lovely owner must have known the passionate love he bore her.

It all comes back—the soft silence of the night, the faint dropping of the waltz in the ball-room that seemed so far away. The girl standing with her hand fast on Cecilia's arm. His desperate, honorable determination to bind her—once to speak. He had kissed her, once, that seemed speech enough. If she would be true, and he had believed she would be that. She knew, he felt she knew, how much he loved her, and she would wait, and soon he would come back covered with glory, and they—two—two—What a boy's dream it all was!

He had come back to find all things forgotten, and Cecilia married. These thoughts pass in a second; he comes back to the present moment, to the sound of her voice.

"You mustn't mind Peter," Cecilia is saying gaily. "And you must come and stay with us."

"I am afraid—" begins Stairs coldly. "I really hope you will," says Gaveston hospitably; whose star is hardly in the ascendant at this moment; the two, ungainly and to this invitation, are playing him a sorry game. "I hear you have no very immediate friends to saddle," and musingly that "saddle" and behind that "horse" riding to perfection.

Now you acknowledge that is a cart-rop of evil, but you want to know what are the small threads out of which it is made. There is a man, a disposition to hazard, they feel a delight in walking near a precipice, because of the sense of danger. There are persons who have their blood inflamed and accelerated by skating very near an air-hole. There are men who find a positive delight in driving within two inches of the edge of a bridge. It is this disposition to hazard that finds development in gambling propensities. Here are five hundred dollars, may I stake them? If I stake them I may lose them, but I may win them. I turn, I have the excitement. Shuffle the cards, deal the cards, and I have a chance. Here is a question of time when the odds are to be delivered. The thing is done. You may plant in the wall all the batteries of truth and righteousness, that man is bound to go on. When a man makes one thousand dollars a year, and spends one thousand dollars, he is bound to go on. When a man makes one thousand five hundred dollars and spends one thousand five hundred dollars, he is bound to go on. He says: "Here is my friend who started out the other day with only a little money, and in one night he has made a fortune. He has got it, why not I? It is the Grace of God. He has there any who have fallen victims to this sin that I have been and good principle of the community. Young men have nothing to do with these things. They only sharpen my respectability. I can't return. I have accomplished my object if I put you on the lookout. It is a great deal easier to fall than it is to get up again. The trouble is that when you begin to go astray from the path of duty, they are apt to say, 'There's no use my trying to get back. I've sacrificed my respectability. I can't return.' and they go on until they are utterly destroyed. WEDNESDAY, AUG. 4.

BREAKFAST—Blueberries, Cod-fish balls, Bread sponge muffins, Coffee.

LUNCHEON—Fried tomatoes, Baked potatoes, Fresh graham bread, Tea (hot or iced).

DINNER—Veal cutlets, cream gravy, Green peas, Mashed potatoes, Cucumbers, Green apple, governor.

Cut out these recipes and paste them in a scrap-book.

Blueberries—If the morning is warm a little finely pounded ice served in each saucer of berries is very refreshing. Pound ice in a flannel bag with a wooden mallet.

Bread Sponge Muffins—Set sponge as for water bread late the evening before. Allow one pint of warm water for one dozen muffins, to be baked in sem pans, and use one-third cake of compressed yeast and a pinch of salt. Mix sponge a little thicker than for pan cakes and beat thoroughly. In the morning dip, without stirring, into greased gem pans and let it rise not less than half an hour. Bake brown in hot oven.

If any muffins are left they are much like English muffins if cut in half and toasted.

By setting sponge for the regular baking at night, and mixing bread before breakfast, the muffins, white and graham bread, can all be baked with the heat of the morning fire.

Fried Tomatoes—Wash six large, firm tomatoes, and cut across in halves without removing skin; sprinkle with flour. Put one teaspoon lard and one of butter in frying-pan. When hot place tomatoes in it with cut side down. This prevents juice running out. Cover for ten minutes. Remove cover, sprinkle with one small teaspoonful of salt, a half-teaspoonful until pepper and fry twenty minutes until tender and brown, being careful not to burn. Place on platter and cover with a gravy made with one-half pint milk poured in the frying-pan and thickened with a tablespoonful flour made smooth in a little milk and seasoned with a pinch each of salt and pepper.

Green Apple Governor—Peel and core apples and slice thin. Fill a pie-pan heaping full of apples without seasoning or crust. Cover with pastry made with kitchen spoonful of shortening, half lard and half butter, cut through two heaping kitchen spoons of flour and mixed lightly together. Use enough lead water to make a dough and roll thin. Bake until apples are tender, lifting crust, in order to be sure. When done remove crust, place it top side down on a plate. Let stand until crust and apples are cold. Just before serving add to the apples one teaspoon of white sugar and stir and mash until smooth. Spread on crust and garnish with cream over the top. Serve with or without whipped cream.

—The late George Caldwell, of Troy, who died on Friday, aged 80 years, was buried on Sunday. He was an uncle of Messrs. Robert, William and Joseph Kilgour, J. C. Caldwell and Mrs. James McAulish, of Galt; and Mrs. McMechan, of this city.

—Mr. McCallum, of con. 3, Caradoc, was a great loser by the heavy hail that fell in that township on Friday night last. In his residence 37 panes of glass were broken. The storm lasted over half an hour, and did great damage to the crops, as reported in yesterday's Advertiser.

—The following party have left here for Windsor to take the steamer Monarch for a trip to Duluth: Messrs. A. and W. Tillman, J. Tyler, Frank Murphy, Bruce Wanless, Mrs. Elliott, Miss Kate and Miss Mary O'Flaherty, Mrs. Jerry Macdonald and daughter, and Miss Maud Dewar.

—Mr. J. F. Mesmer, of the Collegiate Institute teaching staff, has resigned. Prior to coming here in April from Aylmer, Mr. Mesmer suffered from defective eyesight, and the old trouble now forces him to quit teaching. His many friends in the city will regret to hear of Mr. Mesmer's misfortune.

—William Fraser, jun., and his brother were driving along Dundas street near Maitland yesterday afternoon, when they were overtaken by a market car going east, in charge of Motor-man John Dridge and Conductor Loughrey, which caught one of the hind wheels and upset the rig, throwing the occupants out on the hard pavement. Mr. William Fraser sustained a badly bruised hip and was otherwise shaken up. The rig was greatly damaged.

—Superintendent King, of the G. T. R. cars here, has been appointed master car builder of the middle and northern divisions. A circular letter signed by General Manager Hays and Superintendent McWood, of the car department, G. T. R., has been received here announcing the appointment, and placing Mr. King in charge of the London shops. The practical effect of the change will be to add considerable outside work to his duties at the shops. Mr. King is a hustler, and will bear the added honors well.

ESCAPED FROM THE ASYLUM.

On July 1, Henry Schlimme, of Lis-tow, a patient at the London asylum, escaped from the grounds, and no trace of him has since been found. He is 53 years of age, and a full description of his person and appearance is given in an advertisement in another column. Any information concerning him will be thankfully received at the London asylum. Druggist search has been made without avail.

TO KEEP OUT FLIES.

Near the tops of the screen doors and window screens punch several holes from the inside with some instrument about the size of a lead pencil, thus leaving slightly funnel-shaped apertures, having a rough, jagged edge on the outside. This renders it impossible for the flies to enter through these holes, while the flies which have strayed into the house the first time they light on one of the screens crawl to the upper part, and, seeing the holes, imagine there is some place where they are not wanted on the other side, and out they go.

SHOULD FARMERS ADVERTISE?

This question was discussed in a very forcible way recently by an Ohio farmer at an institute meeting. The following contains some of the more salient points brought out in the address:

"Have you thoroughbred cattle, sheep, or hogs? Have you extra chickens, ducks, turkeys, or geese? Let people know that you have them. Has your boy got some pet rabbits, pigeons or ferrets? Let him do a little advertising on his own account.

Have you extra nice wheat, corn, eye, barley, buckwheat, or flax, that is suitable for seed? Does anyone know about it? Did you ever tell your wife about it?

Have you nice clean oats that you can guarantee free from smut? Fifty thousand farmers are hunting for it. Have you any of the grass seeds that you can guarantee free from weed seed? Don't be afraid you will break that market. There will always be a demand.

Now, the next important question is the medium. This must be determined by the person interested, and only general directions will apply. You know the class of people who ought to buy what you have. Place your advertisement in the paper that reaches the largest number of that class. Not two or three lines that you can't find yourself without your spectacles, but a good, big chunk out of a corner of a page where everybody can see it. Don't sponage your advertising. That disgraces the newspaper man and makes your competitors mad.

Don't be ashamed of your business. Let people know that you are a farmer and that you are proud of it. Advertise your business as other business men do, and compel others to respect you because of your enterprise."

Charged With Murder.

Mary McGraw Placed Under Arrest

On the Charge of Killing Her Infant Daughter.

For a number of years the law courts and books of record have not contained a charge of murder against a citizen. But last night, however, "murder" was written on the police blotter opposite the name of Mary McGraw, whose dead infant's body was found in her trunk at the house of Mrs. Richard Eckert, 275 Ontario street, on Sunday morning.

The woman was placed under arrest by Chief of Police Williams, who stood by her bedside at the city hospital and read the warrant charging her with having "on July 31, 1897, in the city of London, unlawfully murdered her infant child." The girl lies in her position, but is recovering.

A watch was placed over her, and the particulars of the case will come out on Tuesday next, when the inquest will be resumed. The arrest was the outcome of the autopsy made by Dr. J. H. Gardiner, at the police station yesterday.

The possible legal penalty for the crime is death, but in case of conviction it is not likely, taking the circumstances into consideration, that the most severe of all penalties will be imposed.

Will Not Be Baited.

Collapse of the Pottersburg Electric Railway Deal.

Township Council Would Not Pass the Bylaw—Both Parties Refuse to Keep the Tile Ditches in Repair.

The utter collapse of the Pottersburg electric railway scheme at the meeting of the London township council yesterday was a great surprise. The bylaw had been prepared by the solicitor, the engineer and county commissioner had made plans and estimates, and it was a foregone conclusion that the bylaw would be signed and negotiations between the municipality and the railway company would be satisfactorily terminated yesterday. But the question arose who should maintain the drains at the roadside during the term of the franchise—25 years. Both parties positively refused to assume the responsibility, and on this rock the scheme was wrecked.

The deputation in the interests of the road consisted of Sir John Carling, Manager Carr, Lawyers Judd and Ivey, and Engineer Moore. They arrived at St. Johns, where the council was in session, shortly before 2 o'clock, and for over three hours endeavored to make a bargain with the council. The latter objected to paying the engineer's fees, and Mr. Judd made a proposition to the effect that the street railway company pay the engineer's expenses providing the clause regarding the maintenance of the drains in the bylaw be struck out. This, he believed, the council would agree to, and the company were to look after the surface of the road they should also be responsible for the drains.

Mr. Campbell, a ratepayer, protested very strongly against the council giving the drains in repair. This, he believed, to be the opinion of a great many of the ratepayers.

Councillor Dann—As far as the balance of the council are concerned, they may do as they see fit, but I will never agree to maintaining that ditch. Sir John Carling said he had just been told by Manager Carr that the president of the company was in favor of letting the matter drop if there were to be any changes; the company were getting tired of the delay. He believed the offer of the company to take a good road to the city and the chance to provide transportation for the residents of that vicinity should be taken advantage of. The road was certainly disgraceful, and if they would meet the terms of the railway company they would have one of the best roads in the country. The council ought to act liberally in the matter, and should not let it drop because of such a trifling matter.

The reverend—Would the company assume a portion of the cost of maintenance?

Mr. Carr—No, sir; we cannot assume any of it.

The reverend—Would you not for the sake of a compromise maintain it for ten years?

Mr. Carr—Most decidedly not.

The reverend—Addressing the councillors, then said: "Well, gentlemen, the matter is off, then, is it?" and as silence gave consent, so the deputation gathered together their papers and bade adieu.

After the council meeting, Councillor Clark, in speaking of the matter, said he would rather have lost $50 than have to tell the residents of Pottersburg that the road would not be built.

Dreadfully Nervous.

Gents.—I was dreadfully nervous, and for relief took your Karl's Clover Root Tea. It cured my nerves and strengthened my whole nervous system. I was troubled with Constipation, Kidney and Bowel trouble. Your Tea soon cleared my system so thoroughly that I rapidly regained health and strength.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Old London Boys of Various Cities Should Arrange a Visit to the Forest City on the Same Date.

Toronto Globe: The first excursion of the London Old Boys' Association has been such a great success that it has been determined to maintain the association as a permanent organization, for the purpose of making the excursion an annual one. It has also been suggested that an effort be made to secure the co-operation of old London boys in other cities.

This suggestion of co-operation is a very good one, and Londoners hope it may be fruitful. A hearty welcome is assured old London boys of any city whenever they revisit London, and if organizations were formed in several other cities, for example, Hamilton, Guelph, Brantford, Stratford, Detroit, Chicago, Buffalo, New York, they could coincide with Toronto upon the same date on which to hold excursions to the Forest City. In this way, hundreds of old friends would meet, who probably would never see each other but on such an occasion. In Toronto there are 200 old London boys, and in some of the large American cities they number nearly a thousand.

CROW STEALS AND HIDES JEWELRY.

Rockfield, N. Y., Aug. 3.—A tame crow belonging to H. D. Warren, residing near here, was seen this morning leaving the house with a spoon of silk in its beak. The crow flew to a grove not far distant, where it was seen to alight on the top of an old stump several feet above the ground. An investigation resulted in finding concealed in the old stump three or four gold rings, a watch, a bracelet, a bracelet, two studs, a sterling silver link cuff button, some spoons, thimbles, turquoise hairpins and many small articles, including the spoon of silk, which had been stolen from the house by the crow. The thefts had been credited to tramps.

AT STITTSTVILLE!

The Town's Leading chant Laid Up.

Rheumatism in various forms is one of the most common diseases there is. It arises generally from impure blood and a broken-down system. In the limbs it is painful; in most of the internal organs dangerous, and in the heart usually fatal.

The experience of Mr. S. Mann, the well-known general merchant of Stittsville, is interesting.

"Last winter I was badly afflicted with rheumatism. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Pills. To my surprise I got immediate relief, and before I had used one box my affliction was gone."

"I was also troubled with biliousness for years, and at intervals of three or four weeks would be laid up with a severe headache and sick stomach. Since using Chase's Pills I have not had an attack of either."

"I may add that Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles and skin diseases is just as effective as Dr. Chase's Pills for blood troubles. I have a clerk who suffered terribly from bleeding piles. He tried Chase's Ointment and in a few days was completely cured."

It is said that the working people in Ireland, who live chiefly on the potato, never suffer from gout.

LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believed it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me any good."

R. H. Fisk brought into Rosalia, Wash., seven strawberries that together weighed a pound, and three of them placed side by side measured a little over ten inches.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!
SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging, mostly at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue, tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. Swaine's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and most
