PORT HOPE

THE history of the town, which for nearly a hundred years has borne the name of Port Hope, began near the close of the eighteenth century. A trading post flourished here at least as long ago as 1778, at which time the site was occupied by a small Indian village. The name of the village, which consisted of a number of wigwams, inhabited by the Mississauga Indians, was Cochingomink. The first white man who left any enduring monument of his presence, was one Peter Smith, a trader, who dwelt in a log hut on the bank of the creek which empties into Lake Ontario at this point. The hut stood on the east side of the creek, about two hundred yards from the latter's mouth and disappeared before the advent of the last century. Peter Smith in his day achieved some fame throughout this region as a hunter and trapper, but his ostensible calling was that of a fur trader. He enjoyed an enviable reputation among the Indians for truthfulness and fair dealing, and was resorted to by them from far distant points. The creek which flowed past his door was named after him, and the village itself came in process of time to be called Smith's Creek.

The date of Peter Smith's arrival at Cochingomink cannot now be definitely ascertained, but he was succeeded about 1790 by a man named Herchimer, who took possession of the hut and carried on the fur trade established by his predecessor. Neither of these traders, however, can in strictness be called permanent settlers.

The first white man who took up his abode on the site of Port Hope, with a view to permanent residence there, was a Mr. Myndert Harris, a U. E. Loyalist, who removed thither from Port Royal (now called Annapolis), in Nova Scotia, in the year 1702. He made the journey from Nova Scotia to Upper Canada through the state of New York, and upon his arrival at Newark (Niagara), he was entertained for some days by Governor Simcoe, who had not then removed to Little York. By the governor's advice Mr. Harris determined to settle at Smith's Creek, whither he was despatched in a gun-boat commanded by Captain Jonathan Walton, a gentleman whose name is familiar to all old residents of Port Hope, and whose name is perpetuated in the designation of the principal street of the place. The boat reached its destination on the 8th of June, and Mr. Harris and his family at once disembarked, not without certain misgivings as to the manner of their reception by the Indians. These misgivings proved to be not altogether fanciful. The village then contained about two hundred Indians, and only one white man—Mr. Herchimer, already mentioned. The former regarded the fresh arrivals as "Yankee intruders," and were by no means disposed to welcome them with open arms. It required all the eloquence of Herchimer and Captain Walton to convince the Indians that the emigrants were not Yankees, but loyal subjects of the great Father—the King of England. The assurances of these gentlemen finally prevailed and the new comers were permitted to settle in the village without molestation. Before the setting in of winter several other families arrived from Nova Scotia and elsewhere, and the smoke of half a dozen log cabins mingled with the curling wreaths which ascended from the wigwams of the Mississaugas. The aborigines were, upon the whole, not unfriendly, and the whites set themselves diligently to work to clear the land. The latter accommodated themselves to circumstances, and though the immediate proximity of a numerous body of Indians was not regarded by them in the light of an advantage, they were free from any of the hindrances incidental to pioneer life in other parts of the province. The situation of the village, clustered at the foot of the gently sloping hills, was charming. The woods abounded with deer, rabbits, partridges, pigeons and other varieties of choice game, while the sparkling stream which wound its way through their midst was full almost to overflowing with salmon and speckled trout. The greatest difficulty was to obtain flour, but even in this respect the settlers of Smith's Creek were privileged far beyond many primitive communities in Upper Canada. The lake was at their door, and a boat enabled them to reach Kingston—the site of the nearest grist mill—by water.

On the 26th August 1707, a crown patent of the land on which the present town of Port Hope stands was granted to Elias Smith and Jonathan Walton, subject to the condition that the patentees should with all reasonable diligence erect a grist mill and a sawmill on the site. The condition was fulfilled, and not long afterwards both mills were in full operation. The grist mill, then erected, was on the west side of Mill street. The sawmill was on the east side of the creek, not far from the confluence with the lake. About the same time Messrs. Smith and Walton laid out a village plot, which continued to be held by them, under their patent, until the 25th July 1815, when they divided the land between them, each giving a quit claim deed to the other for the portion relinquished.

Notwithstanding the beauty of its situation, the progress of Port Hope has at no time been very rapid. For more than twenty years after Mr. Harris' arrival, as previously mentioned, there was no regular store in the village. Supplies, as a general rule, were obtained by means of the different vessels arriving at the port. It was not until 1815 that any one thought proper to open a store. In that year Mr. Jeremiah Britton opened out a stock of goods in a small wooden building on Walton street. It is not generally known, even by the inhabitants, that the name of Smith's Creek had by this time fallen into disuse, and the name of Toronto substituted therefor. The latter name prevailed for several years, and was generally employed in conveyances of the period. In 1817, however, a post office was established under the former name of Smith's

WILLIAM'S MONUMENT

Creek. The duality of names gave rise to some confusion, and in the spring of 1819 a public meeting was held for the purpose of fixing upon a permanent and definite name for the village. The late G. S. Bolton, who was then a resident of the place, suggested the name of Port Hope, which suggestion was unanimously assented to, and the place has been so designated ever since. The name was confirmed by the legislature of Upper Canada on the 6th of March 1834, when an act was passed to define the limits of the town and to establish a police therein. The population at this time was 1,517.

Since the date of its incorporation the only two events of great importance in the history of Port Hope have been the construction of the Grand Trunk and the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton (now called the Midland) railway. By the former of these enterprises, which was opened through Port Hope in 1857, the town enjoys communication with all points east and west, and is 63 miles from Toronto. By the latter, opened for traffic in December 1857, the fine country to the north and northwest is placed in direct railway communication with Lake Ontario, and facilities are afforded for the shipment of lumber, grain and other commodities which are exported from this point. A great deal of money has at various times been spent on the Port Hope harbor, and most of the capital required for its construction has been contributed locally. Of later years the harbor has been very much improved, and it is now one of the best, if not the best, on the north shore of Lake Ontario, and has ample capacity for holding the entire fleet of the lake. The local shipping interest is of considerable magnitude. The principal branches of industry consist of extensive file works, a large brewery, two tanneries, canning and preserving factory, carpet factory, flour and planing mills, foundries and machine shops, glue works, leather lace factory, etc. A new factory for the manufacture of steam radiators is at present being fitted up in the building formerly occupied by the Consumer's Cordage Co., and is expected to be in operation early this summer. Good water power is afforded by Ganaraska river (Smith's Creek), which runs through the town.

Of late years a strong effort has been made to induce the government to make Port Hope the outlet for the proposed Trent Valley canal, in preference to Trenton, the cost of the Trent route being about $5,000,000, while that of the Port Hope route from Rice Lake to Port Hope would not exceed $1,500,000. Only three miles of the latter require any great excavation, while the cutting along the Trent route is principally rock. The canal via Port Hope can reach Lake Ontario without crossing the Grand Trunk railway—entrance to the harbor being under the viaduct, while the distance from Port Hope to Rice Lake is only 13½ miles, which is a great saving in time and travel as compared with 46½ miles, the length the route to Trenton. These statements are all borne out by the government engineer.

WALTON STREET, LOOKING EAST

The commercial part of the town of Port Hope lies in a pleasant valley, situated between two eminences, which from an early period have been colloquially known as English Town and Protestant Hill. The former name is applied to the westward eminence, the latter to the one on the east. The principal street, which is called Walton street, runs east and west through the centre of the town, and nearly all the retail stores are situated upon it. Upon the eminence to the northeast, known as Ward's Hill, is the fine building of Trinity College School, while the Town Hall and Market House, a massive red brick building, is situated at the intersection of Dorset and Queen streets. It contains the various municipal offices and a fine public hall, seating 700. The government building on Queen street is one of the best in point of architecture in the united counties. The Methodist church at the corner of Brown and South streets, is incomparably the finest church edifice in Port Hope, costing nearly $50,000. It was first opened in March 1876, and has a seating capacity for 1,500 people. Next in architectural importance is St. John's Episcopal. There are five other church edifices, including Baptist, Episcopalian, two Presbyterian and Catholic. The town is lighted with electricity and has a well equipped fire department; also one of the best waterworks in the country, using a gravitation system and steel standpipe, with a pressure of over 100 pounds to the inch, and a plentiful supply of pure water is provided for all purposes. In the east is a public park containing about 37 acres. The scenery around is very beautiful, and the adjoining heights, more especially those on the western side, are dotted with beautiful and costly private residences, commanding a fine prospect of the town and lake beyond, and as a favorite resort for summer visitors its popularity is increasing every year. On account of its beautiful situation, Port Hope is considered one of the healthiest towns in Canada. During the last few years, many of the finest residences have been secured by Americans, and more are coming every season. The hotel accommodation here is better than ever before; the "St. Lawrence" having been recently rebuilt and fitted with all modern appliances, and is now considered equal to any hotel outside the cities. During the season of navigation, steamers call daily for all points. Present population about 5,000; assessed valuation of real and personal property, $1,500,000.
