

refining all our nickel ore in our own country? How concerned The Canadian Mining Journal is as to invested capital—in another country! It might be better employed in trying to get some invested here to develop smelting, find work for labor here, and a portion of the profits and perhaps a royalty to the state out of the enormous wealth that is taken from the Sudbury deposits. We would know all the facts if we refined here! Isn't that why all this circumlocution, this duplication and reduplication of companies, of owning companies, of refining companies, of holding companies? Let us get the facts.

GERMANY GOT HALF OF CANADA'S NICKEL IN 1913. (From The Financial Post, Toronto, Jan. 1).

As shown in The Financial Post last week, investors in the International Nickel Company and its subsidiary concerns have made large profits. The serious question with them and the holders of other nickel companies' shares is now, what of the future? Nickel has gone chiefly into war material, and the demand from Europe machine guns, and two military trains for this purpose has grown enormously in recent years. The statement made and destroyed on the road leading to generally believed is that at the close of the war there will be a heavy reduction in Kars. the building of battleships and warlike material of all kinds in all countries. This undoubtedly will have a serious effect on dividends on nickel securities and holders CANADA BETTER OFF should be prepared for temporary losses if this policy is carried out. At the same ime, there is room for large development in the sale of nickel for industrial pur

From the accompanying figures it will be seen that Germany has been a very So Says Experienced American heavy buyer of Canadian nickel. Practically all the exports to the Netherlands were no doubt intended for Germany. The figures available for the five years to June 30, 1912, iwtill be seen, include Germany. It will also be noted that exports to "other countries" average less than 25,000 ibs. a year. But, in the United States Government returns for the twelve months to Dec. 31, 1913, and ten months, to Oct. 31, 1914. Germany does not appear, but it is to be taken for granted that in these tables the shipments to "other countries" mean Germany. This would show that Germany took more than half of the International Nickel Company's export in 1913:

TUESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 5.

Colonel Roosevelt stands upon solid ground when he calls upon his country to stand by and vindicate The Hague Convention of 1907, to which all the leading nations of the world, including Germany and the United States, assented. . That convention pledged all the signatories to the pronosition that belligerents must not invade the territory of a neutral state. As Professor Hart of Harvard University puts it:

The system of neutralization was strengthened by the second Hague Conference of 1907, which dopted a chapter on "The Rights and Duties of Neutral Powers." of which the first signatory in alphabetical order was the representative of Germany. This convention let forth among other things

Colonel Roosevelt was at the head of affairs when the United States agreed to this principle of international law. The United States was a contracting party to the treaty that convention expresses. It was and is binding upon all the signatories. That, indeed, is not disputed. Germany has undoubtedly violated the contract or treaty. What obligation, therefore, rests upon the United States?

The convention was intended for the protection of the smaller nations, but no protection would have been afforded or could have been intended unless the stronger nations pledged themselves to protect it from violation. That point is made with his characteristic directness by Mr. Roosevelt, who arraigns the powers that be at Washington for cold-blooded timidity that borders on cowardice.

Perhaps Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan may suggest that the ex-president drifted about a long time before reaching his conclusion or making his indictment. That is as it may be, but Roosevelt appears today in a role that responsibility for the war on the kaiser the personal friend of the kaiser, but since that became apparent, been busy he now declares himself to be first of in attempting to show that Germany all the champion of freedom and hu- has been the victim of aggression. Of course you did it if you were a real boy. Who did you run away with, the 5:48 that night, and it was all very interesting, and then I came the minister's son or the widow's boy? How far did you go, and how did you feel when you found out that you could be homesick?

Oh, yes, I know all about it. I ran away twice. Once my mother criticised me for the way I hadn't made my bed, and sitting on the very top of the mountain notified the chief of the big city, and all the authorities were very busy indeed my proud spirit rebelled, and I ran away-far, far away-through a gap in the

"The names of the boys are being withheld by the police," said the news gone, it seemed to me, for years, and I cried and forgave them at home, and prepared to die. And then old Rover came and found me, and for his sake and because he looked at me so pleadingly, and because I couldn't bear to think how they would ever get along without me at home, I went back. There was company for dinner, and somebody was beating eggs on the back porch, and there was a smell of cake in the oven, and nobody even knew that I had gone.
