BRITAIN'S SECRETIVE FOREIGN OFFICE AND THE MAKING OF TREATIES.

The fact that the agreement between Great Britain and Russia was signed without any discussion in parliament, and three days after parliament rose, and that no facts are known concerning the actual terms of the agreement, has caused considerable criticism. It is contended that such secretiveness and such isolated action by the British Foreign Office is out of harmony with democratic ideals.

of serious danger. The country has no opportunity of judging the terms of the arrangement till the fact is accomplished, and then criticism comes too late for practical effect. "Sir Edward Grey has done exactly what the late government did in the case of the Japanese treaty. He has delayed a controversial act until controversy has become impossible," contends the London Daily News. "It is with reluctance that a Liberal newspaper criticizes the act of a minister whose personality exercises a magnetism amounting almost to fascination over the House of Commons. But there comes a point when a regard for democratic ideals overrides personal considerations. A secrecy which culminates in an action which seems so like a defiance of parliament strains loyalty too far."

EMPEROR WILLIAM OF GERMANY ON PATRIOTISM AND RELIGION.

The Emperor William, at a banquet to the high officials, and representative magnates of the province of Westphalia in the Munster Museum, recalled one of his soliloquies when tempted to be angry. "Religion, the Kaiser said, according to the London Times report, "is not the narrow ecclesiastical sense, but as a practical element in everyday life, was the only means by which a union of all classes could be effected. "The emperor then proceeded to illustrate this contention by relating his personal experience in dealing with the manifold characters with which he had come into contact since his accession. "During the course of my long reign," His Majesty said, "I have had to do with a great many people, and I have had to endure a great deal from them. Unwittingly and often, alas! unwittingly, they have caused me bitter pain. And when in moments like these my anger threatened to overcome me, and thoughts of retaliation came into my mind, I have asked myself by what means anger might best be mitigated and forbearance be strengthened. "The only remedy that I could find was to say to myself, 'They are all human like yourself, and, although they cause you pain, they have within them a soul which comes from the bright realms above, whether all of us want some day to return, and through this soul of theirs they have a part of their Creation within them.' Those who think like that will always be able to judge leniently of their fellow-men. If this thought could find a place in the hearts of the German people in judging their fellows the first condition of complete unity would have been achieved. But this unity could only be attained in the central person of our Redeemer in the Man who called us brothers, who lived as an example for all of us, and who was the most perfect of personalities. Even now He still goes up and down among the nations and makes His presence felt in the hearts of all of us. Our nation must look up to Him and be united, and must build firmly upon His words, of which He Himself has said, 'Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not pass away.' If it does this it will succeed. "It is for help in this work that I would ask today, especially from the men of Westphalia, since, as I have already explained, they have shown in their province how to present the fair picture of reconciled differences. They will, therefore, be able to understand me best and before anybody else. Providence old and new, townfolk, farmers and workmen, must band themselves together in this spirit, and all alike must work together in one same allegiance and love of country. Then our German nation will become the block of granite upon which the Lord our God can build up and complete His work of civilizing the world. Then, too, will be fulfilled the words of the poet who said, 'The German spirit will one day prove the world's salvation. "The man who is ready to lend me his aid in bringing this to pass will earn my gratitude, and I will gladly receive him as my fellow-worker, whoever he may be, or to whatever class he may belong. I believe that the men of Westphalia will be the first to understand me, and that is why I have addressed myself to you. "His Majesty's spiritual appeal," says the London Times, "falls upon deaf ears or is met by the cynical retort that there are many useful members of society who can find their way without the crutches of religion."

TAKES OFF HIS FACE TOO WASH IT DAILY Artificial Jaws and Cheeks Provided for Victim of a Gun Accident. PARIS, Sept. 21.—Dr. Delair has just presented to the members of the French Academy of Medicine a man with an artificial face. In consequence of an accident with a gun while out shooting, the man had his chin, the lower part of the lower jaw, lips, a portion of his tongue and the whole of his upper jaw and nose blown away. These have been replaced by artificial parts, and the doctors present expressed astonishment at the marvelous ingenuity with which the work has been done. The mechanical face is in four pieces. The first consists of a silver groove into which some of the lower teeth are fixed. This is attached to a dental apparatus of tin, into which are fixed the remaining teeth. The second piece consists of a dental apparatus in vulcanite and gold for the upper row of fine teeth. This is fitted to two small protuberances, which fit into the nasal cavities. This also fills up the right sinus, which was smashed in. At the back is a piece of gold mechanism with hooks, used to fasten on the face piece. The third piece of the mechanical face consists of the chin and lower lip. This is of india rubber, painted to resemble nature. Over the chin a false beard is fixed. At the back are a couple of small bolts, which pass through holes of the teeth, and fix the lip to the artificial lower jaw. The fourth and last piece of the apparatus consists of the upper lip and nose, also in india rubber, and painted, to which is attached a false moustache. At the back are two small clasps, to which the upper dental piece and jaw are fixed. The man is able to masticate his food with comparative ease. From a distance of a few feet the appearance of his face is quite natural. He can take off his artificial face himself, and washes it in soap and water every day.

MOVING PICTURES.

The moving picture show has come to stay. At the present time, like most other novelties, it is a fad. By and by it will become an institution and probably a valuable one from an educational standpoint. The tendency of the present age is toward amusement or entertainment, but people are not averse to instruction. The only condition imposed is that such instruction shall be acquired in the most palatable manner, and with the least possible effort. The dislike for serious intellectual application is apparent in all classes; there are fewer students and thinkers among the so-called educated men and women than at any time in the past, but it is equally true that there is an enormous increase of those desiring to acquire even a superficial knowledge. The lack of application to subjects of importance is noticeable on all sides, but there is to be seen, too, a craving for information on the part of persons who hitherto have been satisfied to live in semi-ignorance. The press, the great civilizer, formerly contented itself with an uncolored and rather dull presentation of facts served up in an almost indifferent form. The life of the world became faster, and people who formerly made opportunity to carefully read all news of interest, found that they had no time for this. They demanded condensed paragraphs. This was followed by the introduction of black type headings, and in the alleged modern journal the indigestible facts of the day's news can be gleaned by a glance at the headings. People want their knowledge in a form which can be grasped and digested without what they regard as waste of time. They avoid lengthy articles, the reading of which demands thought, and they insistently clamor for brevity. They are too lazy to work for what they desire. The present tendency is to go even farther than this. Printed descriptions, no matter how clearly and concisely they may be presented, are valueless if a picture can be obtained. Illustrations which place before the eye the exact conditions found in any happening of interest, are sought, and newspapers are turning to photographers rather than to skilled writers as the most satisfactory method of depicting what people want to know. That same impulse which forced scorch-heads on an erratic public, is rapidly making the camera replace the pen. Information in the form of easily digestible pills is replacing knowledge acquired by the long draughts of study. The old time magazines, filled with carefully prepared and well written articles of history, science, travel, and on political, social and economic questions, are losing in popularity, giving place to illustrated periodicals which deal in a breezy manner with live issues of the day. People are living for the moment, and feel that each day is sufficient unto itself. The lecture is now chiefly confined to members of various organizations who desire something better than is afforded in the ordinary amusement hall, and the great body of the people flock to those entertainments which provide information in the most attractive form and with the least possible effort. Moving pictures are of interest, and ask no more of the spectator than that he shall keep his eyes open. This is the simplest form of instruction yet placed before the public; it will last, and its possibilities are great. The picture business will become an institution when those who develop it realize the importance of their work. At the present time it is looked upon as an inexpensive method of amusement. Its educational value is scarcely appreciated, but the day will come when all that is important in the life of the world will be thrown on the canvas, when the difference between the traveller and the stay-at-home will be diminished because the latter will by the aid of the camera, be enabled to obtain an almost personal knowledge of distant lands, and when the actual conditions which give rise to our social and industrial problems will be presented for individual observation. At the present time the picture chiefly in evidence are made for the amusement of the crowd. There are comic pictures, to which, unless they become too common, no objection can be taken; there are made pictures intended to present unusual incidents, and there are more valuable pictures depicting scenes of industry or travel. The latter will eventually predominate, and their effect must necessarily have some influence on the general mind. Many of the subjects now treated are unfortunately chosen. This is to be expected, when the science of picture making is in its infancy and the promoters are only feeling their way. The demands of the public will be more clearly appreciated later, and the views will gradually become of more value, such as will, while still creating entertainment, offer wholesome pleasure and accurate information.

THE MADNESS OF WINDS.

(By Lloyd Roberts.)
On all the upland pastures the strong winds gallop free, Trampling down the flowered stalks
sleepily in the sun,
Whirl away in blue and gold all their fiery,
'Till naked crouch the gentle hosts where the winds have run.

Along the rocky hillsides shaggy heads are bent;
Out upon the tawny plains tortured dust leaps high;
The red roof of the sunset is torn away
and rent,
And chaos lifts the heavy sea and bends the hollow sky.

The winds are drunk with freedom—
the crowded valleys roar—
The madness surges through their veins, and when they gallop out
The black rain follows close behind, the pale sun flees before,
And recklessly across the world goes all the broken roof.

I was striding on the uplands when the host was running mad, I saw them thrashing through the leaves and daisy tops below,
And as their feet came up the hill, my tired heart grew glad—
'Till at the music of their throats I knew that I must go.

So the winds are now my brothers, they have joined me to their ranks;
And when their rampant strength wells up and drives them singing forth,
I am with them when they roll the fog
across the dilly banks,
And tumble into the sleeping berge that crowd beyond the North.

The woods are drenched with moonlight and every leaf's awake;
The little beads of dew sit white on every twig and blade,
A thousand stars are scattered thick
beneath the forest lake:
We pass—and only laugh for the havoc we have made.

There's not a wind that brushes the long bright fields of corn, Or shrieking drives the broken wreck
beneath a blackened sea;
There's not a wind that draws the rain
across the face of morn,
That does not rise when I arise and sink again with me.

I KNOW A WOOD.

(By Gerald Gould.)
I know a wood where the winds make all day long
A sighing sound and a sobbing sound, and keep
Their sorrows unassuaged of any song.
Hopeless of death and ignorant of sleep;

I lie in the wood, and look up at the blue sky
Between the branches leafy or bare
above,
And the hunger of wood and wind
and season is I,
But the blue depths are the blue eyes of my love.

Gray cascades in the breast of a brown hill
Feed the stream that here its friends with me,
It dreams of a fairy lake that it shall fill,
And finds only the salt and barren sea;

I watch the shadows shift and the gleams go by,
Obscure with the pools below and clouds above,
And the trouble of earth and air and water is I,
But the heart of the stream is the strange heart of my love.

The ancient battle goes on by the river's marge—
The sunlight on the plumes of knights and lords,
The blowing of trumpets, the clatter
and clash of the charge,
The glancing of lances and the breaking of swords,
I hear a song in praise of them that die,
I see the light of the bright flag down
above.

And the old quest and the old desire is I,
But the voice of the call, as of old,
Is the love of my love.

THE LAND OF SHADOWS.

(By Ernest Howard Crosby.)
For we are vague and unsubstantial shadows Cast for a moment by our larger selves
Upon this whirling globe, itself mere semblance,
Which some adventurous, wandering ray of truth Paints with a wayward stroke on heaven's wall.

In vain we sleep and waken, thinking thus To escape the land of shadows. If by night
We singly dream, by day we dream together—
And all is dream—save when a sudden flood Of calm conviction, surging from beneath, Uprises through the fountain of our being,
And overflows the temporal world of senses—
A flood that in receding leaves behind Impenetrable truth and supernatural substance.

Beyond the pale of dreams. Our universe
Treads in the skirts of unimagined grandeur.
So, as a barnacle and battered keel,
Long buffeted by lapse of rushing waters,
Dank seaweed and the world of scale
and fin, Might, in the throbb and tremor of its frame,
Feel a faint whispering of slant towering masts (Friend to the sun), of zephyr-haunted sails,
And spacious bulwarks in an element Undreamt-of, incommensurate—so may we Thrill at the touch of our supernal selves
Which loom up dim in regions adequate Beneath an unknown sky.

WHITES NOW WORK FOR BLACKS IN RAND

Traditions of the Past Completely Reversed by Conditions of the Present.

One Native With Four Wives Now Pays Only the Tax Imposed on One With Two.

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 21.—Many extraordinary facts regarding the position of the natives in the Transvaal are given in a series of reports just issued by the Transvaal Land Owners' Association.

The reports are made by special commissioners sent out by the association. In one the writer says: "It has become quite a common practice for white men to plow land for natives. The latter pay the former so much per acre.

"A decided advance is noticeable among the natives as regards their methods of cultivation. In former years most of their land was tilled by women, who used the hoe, practically their only implement of agriculture, whereas at present it is quite common to see the men cultivating with plows drawn by either oxen or donkeys."

APPROACHING CULTIVATION.

"From conversation with the natives they all state their willingness to work; but, as formerly stated in my report, not underground. They also strongly object to being recruited, as they, without exception, all state that they have been cheated by labor agents to such an extent that they prefer to go and look for work by themselves, as then they will know exactly what work they will have to do, and what the remuneration will be."

PRICE OF A SECOND WIFE.

Dealing with the native but tax, the same writer says: "I note the government no longer charges a native anything more than 10 cents for the second wife. By this I mean that a native with four wives pays the same as a native with two. This is a decided course, was different. He had to pay for every wife above one."

With regard to agriculture, it is pointed out that the first sowing of the winter crop of Kaffir corn has been destroyed by locusts, which has necessitated a late second sowing. Unfortunately, a number of farmers of the Blyvoor class have been unable to purchase a second supply of seed. Owing to incontinence, mules are increasing, and are now generally used for transportation purposes, replacing donkeys, which were largely used after the war.

This season the game generally has increased. This is especially the case with koodoo, steinbuk, pheasant and guinea fowl.

Wild dogs are increasing, and complaints are constantly being made, more particularly from natives, of losses of goats and sheep killed by these animals.

MUTILATES PICTURE TO GET INTO PRISON

Expedient of Salvation Army Lass to Secure Free Board and Lodging.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—A French Salvation Army girl named Valentine Cantrel has achieved fame in an extraordinary fashion.

Having grown tired of work, it occurred to her that there was only one way to be boarded and lodged without undue exertion, and that was to get into prison.

So Valentine came to Paris, and yesterday afternoon paid a visit to the Louvre museum, she watched her opportunity, and when no one was looking drew a pair of scissors from her pocket and mutilated a fine picture by jagged, called "The Sistine Chapel."

In this magnificent picture she stabbed out the eyes of the Pope, a cardinal and two other ecclesiastics. Then she went to the nearest police station and gave herself up.

This is the third time within the last few months that pictures in the Louvre have been damaged. A meeting of the responsible authorities was held today, and it has been decided to place a greater distance between the public and the pictures, and to set more men to look after them.

Assassin Escapes in Gondola, But is Subsequently Arrested and Confesses Crime.

VENICE, Sept. 21.—An attempt was made here to assassinate Count Kaunovskiy, a Russian captain, while he lay in bed in his room at a house where he is staying.

The assassin, after gaining access to the count's room, fired five shots well into the count's body. He was taken to a hospital, where an operation was performed. The doctors are unable at present to give an opinion as to his hopes of recovery.

The would-be murderer escaped in a gondola, giving the gondolier $20 to take him away. Subsequently he was arrested by the police, he declared that he was Henry Durand, a Belgian, but before the magistrate he finally confessed to the crime, and said that he is Nicholas Naumoff, aged 21, born at St. Petersburg, the son of M. Alexander Naumoff, ex-Governor of Perm.

He persisted in stating that the motive for the crime is a very delicate family affair.

Survivor of a Tragedy of the Alps Tells Tale of Terrible Experience on Its Snow-Clad Sides.

GENEVA, Sept. 21.—Dr. Robert Hebling, of the Swiss army, has given a vivid account of the terrible experience which he and two friends, Major Henri Spörri, also of the Swiss army, and Herr Karl Infield, an engineer, underwent near the summit of the Matterhorn last week.

We started from Zermatt with the object of passing the first night at a hut on the Lac Noir," said Dr. Hebling. "Darkness overtook us two hours from the hut, however, and we spent the night on the Col du Lion.

"We continued the ascent at day-break, but as we climbed the weather grew steadily worse. Nevertheless, after a consultation, we decided to push on. Major Spörri was especially anxious to stand on the summit of the Matterhorn. For the first and last time," he said.

"At 2 p. m. we reached the dangerous portion of the journey, where ropes are attached to rocks overhanging deep precipices. Then the storm broke. "It is impossible to describe the fury of an Alpine storm in the higher altitudes. The hail and snow forced us to seek shelter under a ledge of rock, which was, however, exposed to the terrific wind. There was no other shelter near.

AN ALPINE STORM.
"There we crouched all night long, while the storm raged with increasing fury. We were being gradually buried by the drifting snow and frozen by the icy wind.
"Thunder and lightning added to the horror of our situation toward morning, and although we were not actually struck by lightning, we received many electric shocks. One was so violent that Major Spörri lost consciousness.
"About 11 a. m., realizing that if we remained longer under the ledge we would be frozen to death, I persuaded my companions to risk the descent.
"Major Spörri was in a state of exhaustion bordering on collapse, and after taking a few feeble steps he fell face downward in the snow.

"STRUGGLE FOR LIFE."
"The snow was again falling thickly, but we did not seem to mind it. We continued walking as in a dream.

"Finally we threw ourselves under a ledge on the Epauls, utterly worn out and disheartened, and hardly caring whether we lived or died. I worked hard throughout the night trying to keep Infield from freezing to death. His feet and hands were gradually freezing, and he begged me to let him die in peace.

"As the first streak of dawn we again started the descent, which, under ordinary circumstances, should be accomplished in a few hours. But poor Infield, whose legs had been badly frozen, could scarcely drag one foot after the other.

"He finally insisted that I should go on ahead to the little hotel at the Lac Noir and send up guides to assist him and to recover the body of Major Spörri.

"There was no guide at the hotel, and just as I was about to start for Zermatt Infield stumbled into the hotel more dead than alive. I left him in good hands and went on to Zermatt. A party of guides returned immediately, and Major Spörri's body was recovered."

Herr Infield is now in a Zermatt hospital in a critical condition. Both legs must be amputated in order to save his life.

BODY OF UNKNOWN MAN FOUND UNDER PECULIAR CIRCUMSTANCES IN DITCH ON THE MARSH ROAD

The dead body of a unknown man was found on Saturday afternoon about half-past four in a ditch on the Marsh road, about thirty yards on the other side of the three mile house. Coroner Berryman was notified and viewed the remains, ordering them to be taken to the morgue. Curious crowds saw the body there but no one was allowed to approach. There are no marks of violence and so far there has been no suspicion of foul play. Coroner Berryman will probably hold an inquest.

The dead man was first discovered by Robert J. Green, contractor, lying in the ditch, face downward along side the road. To those who first found the body it seemed that life had been extinct for some time. The body was hauled to the roadway and Coroner Berryman summoned. The ditch which the body was taken contained only two or three inches of water.

The coroner gave permission for the body to be taken to the morgue and it was taken there by George Coady of Main street, teamster for Gibson & Co. in their coal cart.

The dead man and his clothing were covered with mud but when these were partly cleaned away it was found that the remains were those of a well-built man of about thirty-five years of age, about 5 feet 5 inches in height and weight about 150 pounds, of dark complexion, dark hair, heavy black moustache and recently shaved.

His clothing consisted of a coat of a large grey check with brown thread and vest of the same material, dark trousers and lace shoes. All his clothes were in good condition and were nearly new. He wore a striped shirt with collar attached.

A small amount of money was found in his possession, while a number of keys and a time check were tied together with a string. The round brass time tag was such used in numbering their employees by large contracting firms and contained the words "G. and D., 28, time check."

So far as known there are no contracting firms in this vicinity which would be using those letters, and one might be inclined to think it was a tramp but for the fact that his clothes were so new and that he had apparently last been shaved a few hours previously.

Dr. Berryman, upon his hurried examination was of the opinion that the man had not been long dead when found.

Many yesterday viewed the body, which lies in the wooden coffin. The suitability of the present structure was most apparent yesterday.

A gentleman connected with the Mispic mills who wished last night to see whether he could identify the body was taken into the dark damp hole while rats scampered away on all sides and was given a chance to view the body by the ghastly light of a dim lantern. In the afternoon the lock to the house was in such condition that it would not fasten and the door had to be secured by the police with their padlock and rings.

BIG FOREST CEMETERY PLANNED FOR MUNICH

MUNICH, Sept. 21.—Munich is to have one of the most beautiful graveyards in Germany. The city has purchased about 300 acres of romantic forest land about five miles from its borders, which will be used as a cemetery. It will be the first forest graveyard in Germany, and to be so used that its idyllic character will be preserved.

Orderly disorder will be the rule in marking out the graves, and care will be taken that even in the matter of monuments and gravestones nothing will appear to disturb the rustic beauty of the landscape. White marble, for example, is not to be used. Preference is to be given to wooden crosses or to rough blocks of stone. There are to be plenty of flowers, but not in ordered beds and rows as in most graveyards. They are to be planted in such wise as to imitate the wilderness and freedom of nature. The new cemetery is rich in springs, which are to be led in meandering streams through the woods or turned into cunningly devised fountains.

THOUSANDS HEARD GENERAL BOOTH SPEAK AT THREE SERVICES YESTERDAY

Head of Salvation Army Tells of Its Success and the Great Work Which is Being Accomplished the World Over—Says He Has Decided to Live as Long as He Can—Excellence of Staff Band.

General Booth was supposed to be resting on Saturday last, but when he awoke he seems to accomplish much. He gave a lengthy interview to press representatives, received a large number of callers, attended to a lot of correspondence, and was almost continually in conference on Army work, with members of his staff and other officers. In the evening he conducted a rousing Army meeting in the auditorium of the new Army building.

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock he preached for an hour to an audience of over a thousand people in the Opera House. In the afternoon his lecture on The Secret of Success of the Salvation Army was heard by a gathering which filled the Opera House to its full capacity. In the evening he addressed another large meeting in the Opera House.

Tonight General Booth will address the Canadian Club, at the luncheon to be given him by them in the Keith assembly rooms. His address will deal with some aspects of Army government and work in relation to the cultivation of thrift and industrial progress, and the points on which the work of the Army comes within the scope of the objects of the Canadian Club.

The great interest in General Booth's visit has been shown by his enthusiastic reception, the large numbers who have gathered to hear him on every occasion, and the close attention paid to every word he utters.

The playing of the Toronto headquarters staff band has been a feature of the General's meetings. The band is under the direction of Brigadier Howell and led by Major Morris. It is a well balanced collection of instruments, and its performances show much talent and careful training. The members of the band also know how to sing when at the meeting, and last Saturday night at King Street and last night's meeting at the Opera House.

Secret of Army's Success

To an audience which packed the Opera House to its full capacity, General Booth spoke yesterday afternoon on The Secret of Success of the Salvation Army. The relation of the secret to his subject was so clear and so convincing that it drew an enormous audience everywhere, for who is more qualified to speak of the secret of the Army's success than the man in whose brain and heart the organization originated, who has given his life to its growth and maintenance, and who has done so much for the moral and material uplifting of mankind?

Leut. Gov. Tweedie presided, and welcomed General Booth to the province.

The general spoke for an hour and twenty minutes. He was received with rapid attention and frequently applauded.

As evidence that the Army has been successful, General Booth referred to public opinion in Britain, the United States, Germany and other countries, which from active opposition and acknowledgment of the great work the Army is doing. This approval and sympathy has been shown in many ways, and he pointed out that when one changed to a practical demonstration of sympathy in the way of a large offering.

On the platform besides the general's staff and other Army officers were noted Messrs. and Mrs. Sears, Mrs. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bullock, Alderman Hamm, Baxter, Spruce, Kelley and Sprout, J. D. Hazen, M. P., George Robertson, M. P., P. P., Col. G. P. White, D. O. C., John P. and Mrs. Bullock, G. A. Henderson, Rev. Wellington Camp, Rev. Charles Combs, G. S. Mayes, G. H. V. Belyea and many others.

Before the arrival of the general the fine headquarters staff band from Toronto rendered several selections in excellent style.

General Booth's Reception

General Booth received an ovation when he came upon the platform. He bowed his acknowledgments and took his seat at the governor's right.

Commissioner Coombs opened proceedings with a few remarks. The general then spoke of his visit to London, led in prayer.

Leut. Governor Tweedie, in welcoming General Booth to the province, said he was glad to see the general here again with his eye undimmed and his vigor unimpaired. He felt like saying to General Booth "Servant of God, well done."

General Booth thanked the audience for the reception given him, and hoped his observations would tend to increase their sympathy with the Army movement, and that they would lead to practical help.

The General's Address

The topic, The Secret of Success of the Salvation Army, implied that the Army had been successful. They had done something, and his only regret was that they were not able to do more. It had not been everywhere and always a success, because war meant masters and backward movements as well as progress. He did not consider the Army the only organization in this field. While acclaiming the soldiers of the cross who had fought under other banners in days gone by, he claimed that in the estimation of the truest friends of mankind the Army in its particular sphere had been a success.

Public Opinion

As evidence he would refer to public opinion—an unreliable and changeable quantity, but one which spoke with some authority.

The topic, The Secret of Success of the Salvation Army, implied that the Army had been successful. They had done something, and his only regret was that they were not able to do more. It had not been everywhere and always a success, because war meant masters and backward movements as well as progress. He did not consider the Army the only organization in this field. While acclaiming the soldiers of the cross who had fought under other banners in days gone by, he claimed that in the estimation of the truest friends of mankind the Army in its particular sphere had been a success.

Hein to Wayward Girls

Proceeding, he said the Army had done something for the daughters of shame. Something like 40,000 girls had been rescued from a life which is the nearest thing to damnation and ruin. Much had been done for the inebriate classes. He did not know the statistics of this province, but believed there were more drunkards in the world today than at any other period in its history. Much remained to be done, but he would not say that the Army had converted by a single corps, and told in detail of an incorrigible drunkard, who had been converted by the Army by an English magistrate. They had washed him and dressed him in a new suit, and he was now a respectable man. He had done this for the sake of the world, and he would do it again. He would do it for the sake of the world, and he would do it again.

The Work in Germany

He would take the German nation as an instance. When the Army flag was unfurled the police regarded them as probable authors of confusion. The secret of the Army's success was not in its subject matter, but in its method. It would not allow them to play a cornet or even to clap their hands on the street. They had to be taught to play a cornet or even to clap their hands on the street. They had to be taught to play a cornet or even to clap their hands on the street.

What had been done to secure these evidences of approval? What was the secret of the Army's success?

There was the organization itself. It was a great movement which he did not believe earth or hell could ever defeat. There had been a good deal of inquiry as to what would become of the Army when the general had passed away. Don't worry about it, said the general. He had been possessed of the idea that his life was of some importance to his own people and the world, and he had made his mind up to live as long as he possibly could. But if he were called away by the death angel, even then he would leave behind him a good deal of work. "Long live the general," he said, "and long live the Army." He had made all arrangements humanly possible that when one General stepped off the stage another would step on.

In 53 Countries

Today the Army flag is planted in fifty-three countries; other nations are beginning to enter, but their hands are tied and their steps stayed by the lack of suitable men and of money. Seven thousand five hundred separate societies preach salvation in thirty-two different tongues. There are 15,000 officers working for the movement. Twenty-five papers are published in seventeen different languages. Twenty thousand musicians, many raised from the lowest dregs of the people and taught every note of music they know, and marching 4,000 miles a week in England alone and play for the glory of God—for no handsman is paid for any musical performance. He did not pretend their music was perfection, but they had lately received a high compliment. Bernard Shaw, who is not in sympathy with religion had said that so far as rendering religious music was concerned, the Army bands are at the top of the tree.

Army's Social Work

In social work the Army had 700 institutions, which housed about 22,000 inmates. Six thousand girls passed through their 130 rescue homes every year, and thousands of them being permanently rescued. There are the bureaus, homes, emigration efforts and a host of other agencies maintained by the Army. The organization is not only evidence of its success but is one of the secrets of its success.

General Booth next spoke of the Army's work among the churchless multitude. They were found everywhere. Even in Japan he had found people grown careless about their idols and looking for a new religion. Are these multitudes to be allowed to travel the dark mountains and fall over the dark precipices unwarded? The Army workers formed a mighty force to save souls, not because they were ordained, appointed or paid, but for the love of God.

He felt that the Army had been a success, they had done something. They had done something for the daughters of shame, for the inebriate classes, for the world's drunkards, for the world's sinners. They had done something for the world, and he would do it again. He would do it for the sake of the world, and he would do it again.

Best Moving Pictures Ever Shown Here at Nickel Theatre.
On Saturday the announcement was made that the Nickel Theatre would present the best moving pictures ever shown in Eastern Canada. This guarantee will be fully lived up to, as today's patrons will readily see upon witnessing the programme, which is educational, descriptive, dramatic and comic in its entirety. The film is brand new, flickering and dimness will be entirely absent, and even the high standard of Nickel excellence will be surpassed in their methods. A poorly shown picture no matter how big the theatre—worse than no picture at all. Nickel operators are experts, the high quality of their work invariably assures a clear, steady photograph. With dependable operators and the newest and best pictures procurable, the Nickel is giving its friends the most expensive five cents' worth of entertainment in St. John. Added to this today will be Miss Foley's new song, "Visions," and Mr. Brown's "Take Me Around Again." The pictures are: Lumbering With Elephants, in Burma; The Cuckoo Walk, The Half-Caste's Revenge, and The Lost Umbrella.

Grand Millinery Opening at the Happy Half Hour.
Commencing today and continuing for the first half of this week the ladies, and also the gentlemen, will be greatly interested in the picture which will be shown at the Happy Half Hour entitled "Selecting an Easter Bonnet." It's very funny, the ladies will appreciate it and the poor men who pay but rarely see the fun will have a chance to enjoy a genuine millinery opening. Dear Mother-in-Law is a very funny picture and should not be confounded with other mother-in-law pictures seen here. She visits son-in-law, he is not delighted to see her, and tries everything to chase her, spending a small fortune to do so, and finally the smallest chance her home. A Trip Through India will prove to be one of the most interesting and instructive pictures ever seen here. It shows the natives at home, at play and at work, and also shows life on the River Ganges with its thousands of floating homes. All through the picture there is shown much of the beautiful and interesting scenery of this mysterious country. This picture is sure to make a hit. The Half Shilling will appeal to everybody, and particularly to those who have had at some

MORNING AND EVENING SERVICES

Yesterday morning at the Opera House General Booth took as his text Isaiah, 53rd chapter, 11th verse: "He shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied."

He said there was no doubt this prophecy meant that Christ should eventually see the results and marvelous consequences of His sacrifice, and be satisfied.

The prophecy also referred to those charged with carrying on the work of Christ, and to those who have endured suffering for they shall see the results and be satisfied.

The salvation of Jesus was intended to be satisfying. Many have experi-

SUDDEN DEATH OF GREAT VILLAGE MEN

HALIFAX, Sept. 22.—At Great Village Friday occurred an accident which resulted in the death of Dr. Neppard of that place and Samuel Lindsay of Londonderry station. The two men were out working at a farm, and becoming thirsty the doctor went into his office for a drink. On the shelf were two bottles, one containing strychnine and the other a drink of some sort. After taking the drink the two men went back to the fields. In a few minutes Dr. Neppard collapsed, but before he could assist his husband to the house he was dead.

Samuel Lindsay took sick shortly after the doctor fell from the rake and died the following day at five o'clock.

THE SPEECHES AND PUBLIC LETTERS OF JOSEPH HOWE.

The first edition in two volumes of Hon. William Annand's "Speeches and Public Letters of the Hon. Joseph Howe" is out of print and it is now almost impossible to purchase copies of the work.

For some time past there has been a demand for a second edition of the Speeches and Letters of Howe and it is fitting that this demand should be met by the Publishers of his old paper.

It seems only the other day that I arrived at Halifax to take up the duties of Governor General of Canada. I had two great surprises on my arrival—first, my introduction to the two volumes which contain the speeches and letters of Joseph Howe, and secondly the impossibility of buying a copy of those volumes except at a prohibitive cost.

from 1858 to 1873 will be dealt with by competent editors. It is desirable that the proposed edition should be well printed and bound and should be made in every respect worthy of the gifted Nova Scotian whose choicest works it is proposed to make accessible to all classes of his countrymen.

The Chronicle Publishing Co., Ltd., Halifax, N. S.

I am interested in your proposal to publish a new edition of the Speeches and Public Letters of Hon. Joseph Howe in three volumes and if the work is brought out in a form satisfactory to me, I will doubtless purchase them, if sold at a price not to exceed $10.00 for the set.

Servant He Had Approved Lays in Waiting and Perpetrates Brutal Assault.

A wealthy Englishman, named Vidian Worth, was attacked and severely injured by his valet. In the small hours of the morning Vidian Worth, a laborer returning from Fontainebleau to Bois-le-Roi, was a well-dressed man living in the road at the hamlet of Broiles. He was unconscious, his clothes were soaked with blood, and his features were badly cut. The man carried the inanimate sufferer to the village chemist, who recognized him as Vidian Worth, a rich young Englishman, who had been living for the last few months in a villa at Broiles, which he had rented for the season. After an hour's work the chemist managed to restore consciousness.

EMPLOYERS SUBMIT

The threatened strike among the tinsmiths of the city did not materialize. The difficulty arose over the fact that in a few shops there were some men who received less than $12 per week, which sum the union demanded should be made the minimum wage. The employers were reluctant to make any concessions as they claimed that the men in question, who were receiving $10 and $11 per week, were worth no more and that they would be perfectly willing to pay a competent mechanic $12. In the cases of many skilled workmen they pay more than $12 per week, the sum in each case depending upon the man's ability. The men were not satisfied and it is probable that a tie-up would have resulted in nearly all the local shops but at the last moment the employers made the necessary concessions and the work is going along today as usual.

MAKE MONEY BY WRITING LIMERICKS

The Star Starts a New Competition Today.

Everybody Who Enters Contributes Towards the Prizes—Someone Has a Chance to Make Money

The Star today announces an interesting competition which should afford amusement and entertainment among a large number of readers and which will undoubtedly result profitably to some. On a previous occasion this paper conducted a limerick competition in which the composers of best verses were awarded prizes, by this office. The Star does not now propose to spend any large amounts of money, but stresses that the competitors provide the prizes themselves on the accumulative plan.

The proposition is this: A coupon such as is published on page 7 will appear daily. On these coupons intending competitors will write the result of their best efforts at completing the verse given, and enclose with their answer the sum of 10 cents in cash or stamps. All the money so received will be distributed as prizes to those three whose efforts are regarded as the most deserving. The more competitors enter, the larger the amount of prize money, which will be in proportion of 50, 30 and 20 per cent, that is, if 200 persons enter, the winner in the weekly competition will get ten dollars, the second best writer six dollars and the third four dollars. The Star does not ask competitors to write the whole limerick, but merely to fill in the last line. This competition will be continued weekly if sufficient interest is exhibited. No answers received after noon on Saturday will be considered. Competitions close at noon Saturday and the results will be announced in the paper issued on the following Monday. This will be continued from week to week so long as interest is kept up. Anybody may enter; the only conditions are that the decision of the judges will be final and that 10 cents must accompany each coupon. The competition starts today. Those who wish to try for a prize of indefinite value are asked to send to the Star what they regard as the best line with which to complete the following verse:

There was a sweet girl named May,
Who went early to school every day,
She was first in her class,
And felt sure she would pass,

Coupons on which the line must be written will be found on page 7. A. Adress all communications to "Limerick, Star Office."

URGES POLICE TO GET AFTER SUNDAY VIOLATORS

Magistrate "Thinks That Greater Efforts Might be Made to Secure Evidence Against Those Who Sell Liquor

"Now get a hustle on and work just as hard as if I were to give you ten dollars for doing it," were the remarks of Magistrate Rickle this morning when he made for about the hundredth time an appeal to the policemen to try and get out the persons who sell liquor during prohibited hours. Unfortunately are often brought before him on Monday mornings, and in default of paying eight dollar fines have to do 30 days in the chain gang.

This morning the police court bench was occupied by five drunks, and all were fined $8 with one exception. Joseph Mills was arrested Sunday afternoon on Cambridge street. He was remanded to give the police a chance to try and find out where the man got his Sunday job. Samuel McDevour was found lying drunk on Long Wharf yesterday, and his case was also the subject of comment from the magistrate, who asked the police where the man got the liquor. Being told that they did not know, the magistrate said that a chief inspector, a deputy inspector, and all policemen took an oath to endeavor to find out where the illegal sale of liquor takes place. He mentioned a number of streets about York Point where there is some suspicious work going on on Sunday, and closed his address with a final, "Now try and get a hustle on."

CONTRACT AT LITTLE RIVER AWARDED AT LAST

Philip C. Graham Undertakes to Repair the House for $1,175.

The contract for repairing the house occupied by the caretaker of the Little River reservoir was awarded today to Philip C. Graham, whose tender for the work was $1,175. This contract has now been before the council for two years and the plans for the improvements have been changed from time to time as the price of the contractors for the work were much higher than the outside figure of $1,200 allowed by the council. Tenders were again called for about a month ago but the contract was not then awarded. The matter was left with Director Murdoch and Chairman Prink, of the water board. Mr. Graham now undertakes to make the stipulated repairs for $1,175 and the caretaker will at last be housed comfortably.

MUST PAY FULL PRICE FOR HUNTING LICENSES

Government Declines to Grant Any Reduction to Railroad Engineers Now Employed in the Province.

Sometime before the opening of the game season application was made by many of the engineers and others employed on the Grand Trunk Pacific railway construction in the province for residents' hunting licenses. The matter was placed before the surveyor general and it was decided that as many of the applicants had only been in the country for a few months and were unable to leave before a year or two had passed, the licenses should not be issued to them.

It was suggested that licenses, similar to those granted to lumber camps be given the construction camps, that is, to allow the killing of two moose to each camp.

This suggestion was also decided against and now if the men desire to go gunning on the side they must pay the full $20 for license for moose or $10 for deer or birds.
