Canadian Roads Recovered from the Snow Blockade.

The C. P. R. has established a ticket agency at Tilsonburg, with Mr. A. E. Raynes as agent. The Canadian railways may now be said to have recovered from the effects of the great storm. The G. T. R. has its Levis section opened. The first line of real importance constructed in Scotland was between Edinburgh and Dalkeith in 1826. It was worked by horse till 1845, when it was acquired by the North British Railway. The G. T. R. have established a town office in Tilsonburg, and Mr. G. W. Hare, who has had a lengthened experience as a railroad and station agent, is prepared to sell tickets to all points. The office will be a great convenience to the traveling public. Just now the Caledonian and London and Northwestern are building saloons for their night service between Edinburgh and London of the finest description, probably, in the world. The fact of the matter is, they will be when completed like palaces on when wheels.

Mr. J. F. McIntosh, locomotive superintendent of the Caledonian Railway Company, Scotland, has been invited by the Belgian Government to design five engines for the state railways in that country, the building of which will be entrusted to private locomotive engineering firms. In engineering circles the request by the Belgian Government is regarded as a unique compliment.

Old-Time Inspection Beneath British Parliament Still

the British Houses of Parliament were searched, and the barrels of gunpowder under the custody of Guy Fawkes, a soldier of fortune, were discovered a few hours before the opening of the session. The Gunpowder Plot was not exposed by vigilance, but by means of a letter written by one of the conspirators to a relative, warning him against attending parliament on the first day. If there was lack of official vigilance then, there has been none since, for parliament has not been opened any year for three centuries until the cellars have been searched.

The lord chamberlain of the court is charged with the duty of examining the vaults and secret passages, but ordinarily it is the vice-chamberlain who conducts the search. With him are associated the deputy sergeant-at-arms of the House of Commons, the clerk of the board of works and an inspector of police

These four officials are preceded by four yeomen of the guard in uniform and fully armed. They trainp through one corridor after another, and look into every dark corner, and finally reach an agreement that no gunpowder has been stored in the cellars, and that it is safe for parliament to meet. When the earliest searches were ordered during the reign of King James I., the guardsmen carried lanterns through the dark passages. The corridors and underground rooms are now flooded with electric light, but the yeomen of the guard respect the old custom and have lanterns in their hands. Under the Stuarts it was customary, when the inspection had been finished, for the lord chamberlain to send a message to the sovereign by a mounted soldier, with the information that it would be entirely safe for him to at-tend the opening session of parliament. The mounted soldier no longer rides post-haste to the Queen at Windsor or Osborne; but every year the vicechamberlain sends the traditional message to her by private wire, and she is assured that there are no explosives in the cellars, and that she will not be exposed to unusual risks if she chooses to meet her lords and commons. She may not have the remotest intention of opening parliament, but the message is received and acknowledged.

The lanterns are swung in the full glare of electric light by the yeomen of the guard because the plot of the first Guy Fawkes was unmasked by lamplight, and it is the impressive and stately method of looking for conspirators. The mounted messenger has been dispensed with, and the message is enrusted to the wires. This is the only concession made to modern progress. Otherwise the traditions of three centuries are respected in detail whenever this strange and interesting function is repeated.

Mr. Emerson explained these changing customs when he said that the English god was Precedent. What-ment that the minister of education was to speak here last night was sufficient to tax to its utmost capacity the Duncombe Opera House. The meeting was the first mass meeting held in the city of St. Thomas during the present campaign, and the result is very gratifying from a Liberal point of view, and strengthens the feeling, which finds expression even among the Conservatives of the city, that Mr. Macnish will again be the choice of the electorate of the west riding of Elgin on Tuesday next. His majority at the last election was 171, and his friends predict a much larger majority on the present occasion. In introducing Mr. Ross the chairman took occasion to state that the growing patriotism of the Canadian children was largely due to the Canadianism in our school books. (Applause.) As Mr. Ross rose to speak the applause from the footlights to the last row in the gallery was perfectly deafening. While the applause was at its height a little fair-haired damsel tripped out of the wings and presented Ross with a handsome Souquet. The little girl was Miss Kathleen Broderick, and Kathleen was made so happy by the minister's gallant acknowledgment of the present that she climbed into one of the front rows of hairs and sat with the speakers for the balance of the evening. Mr. Talbot Macbeth was one of the speakers. He was warmly received.

THE CRUEL MAIL. Chatham, Feb. 26.-The Planet, the local Conservative organ, had the following cruel thing to say last night in reference to the Mail and Empire's forecast: "For once in his history the Mail and Empire was doing good work for the Conservative party in this campaign. Then it spoils it all by publishing a lot of fool reports that the office boy, if he knew anything at all, would know were so idiotically incorrect that they would even disgrace the Globe. Is the party always to be cursed with the Mail's foolishness? The Planet, sad to relate, is one of the organs of public opinion from which the Mail and Empire has been quoting most liberally of late in support of the shibboleth "Whitney will win."

Candidate Carscallen Has Discovered a Mare's Nest.

An Attack on Hon. George W. Ross Which Proves a Boomerang.

[Toronto Globe.] The palm for the discovery of a mare's nest may be yielded to Mr. Carscalien, of Hamilton. The World publishes his dispatch with flaring headlines:

"Hamilton, Feb. 22-(Special.)-The fifth ward Conservative meeting was treated to a sensation tonight. Ald. Carscallen, in the course of his speech, produced a text-book used in all the normal colleges of the province, and normal colleges of the province, and compiled by from G. W. Ross. It is entitled 'International Educational series, School System of Ontario, Canada; Its History and Distinctive Features. D. Appleton & Co., New York, 1896.' Aid. Carscallen wanted to know how it was that the book was printed and published in the United printed and published in the United States and afterwards brought into Canada for the schools instead of being handled by a Canadian publisher. Did the minister of education get a royalty on this book."

The book is not a text-book, and is not authorized to be used in any nor-mal school, public school, high school, collegiate institute, model school, training school, or any other institution under the control of the Ontario department of education. It is the redepartment of education. It is the result of the private enterprise of the publishing firm of D. Appleton & Co., New York. The Appletons publish a series of educational works, such as "The Evolution of the Massachusetts School System," "Esays on Educational Reformers," "Higher Education of Women in Europe," etc. They asked Mr. Ross to prepare a work describing the educational system of Ontario. and the educational system of Ontario, and he complied with the request, as we think he ought to have done. As a man of common sense, Mr. Carscallen will perceive that Mr. Ross could hardy have told the Appletons that their book must be printed by Canadain publishers. Its value consists largely of its being one of a series circulated among educationalists outside of Canada. In Ontario the facts which it set forth are known already, or ought to be known, although there Conservative campaigners who would profit by its perusal. Mr. Cars-cacallen asks whether Mr. Ross received a royalty. We do not know, but we hope he did, or was remuner-ated in some way, as we see no reason why he should be expected to write books for amusement. In any event, the province certainly stands to gain by the circulation in the United States and elsewhere of a book describing the erducational system of Ontario. The editor of the series is Dr. W. T. Hartis, United States commissioner of education. In his preface to Mr.

hoss work he says: Throughout this volume is seen what may be done by a central power that makes a liberal appropriation of money to local authorities, but requires as a condition the recipient to respond by contributing an equal sum of money, and by showing to the central supervisory power results that equal the standard of requirement. It may be doubted whether there is another instance in America of so wise a use of money and supervisory power as is shown in this Province of Ontario, excepting administration of the Peabody and Slater funds for the stimulation and nurture of education in our Southern Carscallen refers to this book he will not only withdraw the statement that it is a text-book in Ontario, but will also give the minister due credit for the pains he has taken to make our system known to strangers, and will quote the words of praise given to that system by an eminent American authority. We are glad that his speech has drawn our attention to the facts.

Dear Sirs:-Just a year ago I was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism in its most acute form, which totally incapacitated me from pursuing my trade—that of a tailor—or in fact from doing work even of the very lightest kind, as every nerve in my body was affected. I was in this distressing condition for more than seven months, when I commenced to use Paine's Celery Compound. I soon began to realize the beneficial effects of the medicine; but my case was an obstinate one, and required the persis-tent use of the Compound for some months before I was able to move about. I am thankful to say I am so far recovered that I have commenced work again; and I am very hopeful that by continuing the use of the Compound a little longer I shall, please God, be restored to my wonted health and strength again. Surely the medicine that has done so much for me will prove an equal blessing to others similarly afflicted; and to such say, "Give Paine's Celery Compound a trial." For what your medicine has done for me you have my most grateful thanks.

Wild Critic.

on the Government.

The opponents of the Ontario Govrnment have been printing garbled extracts from the Montreal Witness, in their attempt to bolster up a position for the opposition. The Witness is a candid critic, it must be confessed. We hardly think, however, that the friends of Mr. Whitney will circulate the following editorial article which appeared in this representative Montreal journal on Thursday last:

"The electors of Ontario must be convinced by the long articles in the Toronto Mail and Empire discussing the political issues between the Conservatives and the Liberals, that the Hardy Government has surely given a clean, honest and economical administration. What are the issues raised by the opposition organs? The great one is that the Ontario Government, being Liberal, is in some unexplained manner placing the Province of Ontario at the mercy of the Dominion Government to tax heavily for the benefit of all the other provinces. Of course this is arrant nonsense, calculated to disgust the electors of Ontario, who know well enough the position of Ontario in the Dominion under the constitution and in parliament, with its big representation.

"'Why was Nova Scotia told that she can expect the Federal Government and therefore Ontario, to take over her railway liabilities? Why was Prince Edward Island invited to claim three millions from us? Why is Quebec assured that we will subsidize her railways, bonus her bridges, and construct her harbors? The impositions arise out of party politics. Mr. Fielding in Nova Scotia, Sir Louis Davies in Prince Edward, Mr. Tarte in Quebec, wanted to carry their provinces for their party friends; just as they wish to carry Ontario for Mr. Hardy, who is to help them to complete their designs. They intimated that the success of their local friends would mean money for the provinces-money drawn from us. The plan of campaign, which has succeeded so far, simply meant that Ontario country and surrounding villages. uld meet the party expenses of elections elsewhere. Mr. Hardy has offered obeisance to Ottawa. He is in the scheme up to the neck. The Ottawa his enormous political machinery, for | 4 to 3. which we pay, to help them, and to raid us.'

"Does the Mail and Empire really expect the electors of Ontario to regard seriously such nonsense as the above? If they reject it contemptuously, what conclusion can they arrive at other than that the Mail and Empire is at its wits' end for matter for criticism? Another article in the same copy of the Mail and Empire deals throughout two-thirds of a column with one item of expenditure on the part of the government. The item is $136 paid for Shropshire sheep. The Mail and Empire cannot make out whether the sheep were bought at that price or whether that was a commission paid for the purchasing of the sheep. That is the ground of its criticism. The item would never have attracted the attention of the Alerts by 2 goals to 0. the editor at all but for the fact that the payment was to the brother-in-law of one of the ministers. The facts were that Mr. Burnet was asked by Mr. Dryden to buy the sheep, as a known teen registered thoroughbred sheep, in- ing difficult. Score: cluding a ram, were bought at an average of $9 70. It is on the strength o such criticisms as these that the Mai and Empire invites condemnation of the Ontario Government. Just imagine the electors of the Province of Quebec

That the present Ontario Government has been the providential instrument in promoting the magnificent reign of law and order, moral reform and provincial development, which has made the name of Ontario a watchword for progress and happy conditions, is well shown in the words of Dr. Dewart, the well-known Methoa t writer, which we reproduce

Under our representative system you an only sustain the government by voting for its candidates. There is no way by which you can support the government except by voting for its candidates. Let no elector, therefore, say, I am friendly to the government, and if somebody else were the candidate, then I would vote. In whichever of the 94 constituencies of Ontario a man has a vote, if he approves on the whole of the government's record, and for the syndicate, but the experiment | desires to see it maintained, it is his solemn duty to vote for its candidates. Any government may, like yourself, be lacking in absolute perfection-any government may, like yourself, have made occasional mistakes-but where uphold it by voting for its candidates. Nor is this a time for any dangerous frittering away of votes in futile theoretical markings of even mere handfuls of ballots. It is sometimes brought against a government that it should have made this or that fad its chief end of existence. But it should be remembered that the government is the government of the whole people, and not merely of a section. The govern-

Threefold Cable of Strength. The Ontario Government goes to the polls on Tuesday next to achieve a signal victory. It is supported on this occasion by each of three classes of voters to an unusual extent. 1. The agricultural classes. Their products never stood better in the markets of the world than they do today. They never before took possession of the British markets as they have done since Laurier did so much during the Jubilee festivities in England to smooth Canada's way in the Old Land in the way of securing a preference for our products. Every intelligent farmer knows that the Ontario Government's fostering care of our agricultural interests has been of immense service in putting Ontario's products at the top of the list.

2. The wage-earning class. No province in the world equals Ontario in legislative consideration for wage-earners generally. It is all Liberal legislation. 3. The young men, who have been enfranchised by the Liberal Government of Ontario, and for whose candidates the vast mass of the young men's first votes will be cast on Tuesday next.

One or Two Votes Extra in Each Subdivision.

The Opposition organizers have issued an appeal in all the Middlesexes to their workers, to make a special effort to gain two or three votes extra, by hard work, in each voting subdivision. As they point out, if there are only 40 sub-divisions in a riding, and you can poll three votes extra in each, by hard work, you are really 120 votes ahead of what you would otherwise

The advice given to the Opposition workers is just as applicable to workers on the side of the Government. To the individual voter we say: Poll your own vote at the earliest hour possible in the day. This will save the committee any trouble in looking after you. And to the workers we say: amount of electricity drawn by each Leave no stone unturned, start in early, and poll every available vote in your sub-division, if possible, before

Leys, who will sit as a supporter of a government with probably over twenty of a majority, or it will go to Mr. Adam Beck, who will sit in the cold shades of opposition, and who will support leaders who no later than last January declared on the floor of the legislature that they were opposed to the best interests of London. It is for the people to decide. What the careful elector ought to do is not to throw away his vote by marking his ballot for the men who cannot be elected, or for Mr. Beck, who would sit in opposition to the government of the day, but to vote for Col. Leys and London First

It is their intention that the national line shall pay in the future, instead of producing nothing but deficits

The Prophets.

The Toronto Mail and Empire, the chief opposition organ, has been joining Mr. Marter, the lieutenant of Mr. Whitney, in the business of prophecy. It figures out, in the most extraordinary and improbable manner, that Mr. Whitney will be successful on Tues- strikes. day next. It has discovered candidates running in Lambton, Wellington and other counties who do not exist, and in this and other ways it professes -as it professed in 1894-to see a Conservative victory in sight. The Mail and Empire is not alone in the role of prophet. Mr. Robert Birmingham has Mr. Birmingham was in the wholesale election of 1896, and the result of his second sight were given in the Toronto World of June 22, 1896. Mark Twain tells of the unparliamentary proceedings in the Austrian Parliament; there are articles by George du Maurier, Charles Henry Hart and Joel Benton, and contributions by new and old contributor to this magazine.

LOST TEN DAYS. Remarkable Experience of Two Mer in a Northern Michigan Blizzard.

[Evening Wisconsin, Milwaukee.]

George Avis and Patrick Barry recently had a terrible experience in Northern Michigan which lasted ten days, and during which they suffered all the imaginable pangs of cold and hunger, on a small island eight miles from Thessalon, and as a result of the hardships endured, they have both died. Mr. Avis formerly lived at Sault Ste. Marie and is well known. He was a brother-in-law of Owen Daily and son-in-law of Mrs. Barney Doyle. Mr. Avis was superintendent of the Cockburn Island operations of the Detour Lumber Company. Mr. Avis and his companion drove from the island with a team across the ice to Th miles distant, after supplies. They left Thessalon the following morning at and stormy. They had a heavy load. About 10 o'clock the next morning their sleigh got into a large crack in the ice through which water had flowed, covering the ice several inches deep. Their sleigh stuck fast. Night came and they had been unable to extricate their rig. They covered themselves up as best they could in the sleigh, blanketed the horses and remained there all night. The following morning, convinced that it was an utter impossibility to free their sleigh, the two men concluded to get on their horses and make for home. While Barry was getting the team ready, Mr. Avis accidentally stepped from the sleigh, went through the crust and got wet to above the knees. A blizzard was raging. The men hung on to the horses for awhile, and then decided to try to make their home

They lost their bearings in the storm and wandered around until the next morning, when they found a haven of refuge in the small lighthouse on Sulphur Island, into which they stumbled after breaking in the door. Both men were as much dead as alive, but Avis was the stronger of the two. His legs were frozen to above the knees and his arms above the elbows, and his face was badly frost-bitten. Barry's hands and his legs midway to the knees were frozen. They succeeded in getting a fire started in a small stove in the building. Avis kept the fire going all day, as his companion was unable to move. Avis could only crawl on his elbows and knees, and he carried the wood to the stove in his teeth. next day Barry kept the fire going, as Avis could not move. A small bag of oatmeal had been taken from the sleign by one of the men, and they ate this raw. It was all they had to drive away the pangs of hunger. They were suffering the tor tures of the damned from their frozen limbs. For four hights they kept the beacon in the lighthouse going in the hope of being rescued. At the end of the week Avis was not expected to live, and Barry made up his mind to set fire to the building if they were not found. in order to attract the attention of someone. Their light was seen that night by a woman at Thessalon, and a party went there early the following morning. Neither of the two men rescued could utter a word, they were so nearly dead.

Searching parties had been sent out during the week from Detour, Cockburn Island, where Avis lived with his wife, and also from Thessalon. The team has not yet been found.

About 9 o'clock Thursday morning Mr. Holland A. Whyte, of the Sun Life Insurance Company, Hamilton, while on his way to his office, saw the dead body of an infant lying on the side walk on MacNeb street, near Hunter street. An opinion recognized as being of great moment to labor unions and embor union, who were indicted on charges of "conspiracy to wickedly, maliciously, fraudulently and wrongfully deprive E. B. In summing up, Judge Baker said: "At one time the associations, which in our devices." time the associations, which in our day are known as trade unions, or labor organizations, would have been regarded as against public policy, as conspiracies in restraint of trade. I shall attempt no review of the authorities, no history of legislation either here or in England. It is sufficient to say that there has been a marked change in public policy toward such organizations. There and here such organizations are now recognized by law; the acts in question are not criminal independently of combination, but acts may be wrongful and wicked, though noteriminal. Acts may be wrongful in morals or wrongful in law. It is only with the question whether the acts in questions are wrong in law that we are concerned. There is no suggestion even in the indictment that the agreement into which it is alleged the defendants entered contemplated the use of force, falsehood or any other act of itself unlawful, and in my opinion it follows that the acts which the indictment alleges the defendants agreed to do, the means they agreed to use, cannot be held in law wrongful or wicked."

Why I Support Hon. George W. Ross."

in Independent Elector's Tribute to the Favorite Son of the County.

[Strathroy Correspondence of The Advertiser.] At this moment party principles and party lines must be distinctively drawn and adhered to. With this your columns, to say a few words for terson, N. J. Hon. George W. Ross and his honorable record, especially as I have the advantage of such a long and intimate personal acquaintance with him. I hope that every voter, especially in the riding of West Middlesex, may firmly consider this matter just now, and the query at the head of this paper is replied to as follows:

1. Because I know him to be industrious, sound and true. These are grand points in a man that I want to do serviceable work for me. He was brought up and educated among us, and worked and toiled among us in his early life from young manhood up to the top rung of the ladder. He is now in the enjoyment of the highest gift of his country; and yet he is not today in any respect proud, dazed or above work. He is one of the most efficient and industrious members of the cabinet, and is never weary of effort for the good of his constituency and the whole country. I know his and the whole country. I know his sterling worth, and am fully prepared mental interests of this young and promising country, just now so important because it is in its youthful formative stage of existence. I know his

fective teaching.

2. Because he is a successful, thorthis point cannot be reckoned, and to there is not his equal in ready and commerce, or temperance, or education and moral standing, he is equally well posted and ready for either of them. of education in all its separate requirements and equipments and is indispensable. A most potent, ponderous point that outweighs all others. Here only Mr. Ross, with his large and splendid acquirements, with his large the field, and special observations he and well-practiced knowledge and business aptitude, can fully satisfy the requirements of the position and the country. As far as our information goes at present, there is no other that has the desirable qualities to fill the minister's chair or approach it, should this country fail to support him. Shall old West Middlesex, that has staunchly stood by him so long, suffer herself so to fail in duty and proper appreciativeness of the real worth of her man, as to make it possible or even liable for him to be left out? We know that she does appreciate the honor in which she is placed to put the minister nobly and honorably away ahead at the polls, and so manfully and honorably perform her duty to herself and the immense interests of this great Dominion. 4. Because he is and has been a wise and judicious legislator and especial school lawmaker for the Dominion and for other countries. In this respect Mr. that of Hon. George W. Ross, the minister of education for Ontario. When we look at our bright and manly boys and lovely, polished girls, as we see them in our homes and on our streets, and think of the powers and influences that now are at work everywhere molding and training, we involuntarily break out in thankful gratitude to the man whose potency we can always in them see. As a fellow-citizen of ours, we ought to know and better appreciate his value and usefulness.

5. Because we prize him, and he is to be admired for his great excellence in his moral, social, educational and political public character. In all this round of manly and gentlemanly character, Mr. Ross is now even in his advanced manhood held as a model, and no man can point the finger of scorn at any definition of personal character, either public or private. nature. Another peculiar feature of the constant excitement is the so-called couru derived from courir, the French word for run-when everybody in the streets starts to run. I remember well one that happened in Port-au-Prince, the capital, about five years ago, when the situation was comparatively quiet. Two young men who quarreled about a woman met near the market place, drew their revolvers and fired at each other. This caused a panic in the market halls and everybody commenced to run, in order to get home. Nobody knew what had happened; nobody knew what was going to happen; those who had not heard the shots, seeing the others take to their heels, also ran for the shelter of their homes. The stores closed; strong detachments of troops patrolled the streets, headed by the chief of police, the commanders of the port, the town and the "arrondissement"; and finally the president himself, being in doubt as to the outcome of the affair, left the palace and rode through the streets at the head of about 250 cavalry, with their carbines on the thigh and their fingers on the trigger, who were followed by a battalion of infantry. Only one man of the party besides the officers was without a rifle; he carried on his head a soap-box full of cartridges. All this had been caused by a few shots exchanged between two

▲ Peculiar Investigation Which Has Been Set on Foot in Greater London,

Mr. William T. Stead, the well-known journalist of London, is about to institute a new hunt for facts which will establish religious faith upon a scientific foundation. It it pretty generally known that Mr. Stead has for years been an interested student of psychic phenomena, and has, among his other ventures, been publishing a quarterly called Borderland devoted to such study. He has now suspended the publication of this magazine; but he asserts that he does so, not because he has lost interest in the "invisible world around us," but because he is more anxious than ever "to get forward in the ascertainment of the fact governing" that world. We quote from his statement:

"I have suspended the journal, because I believe in it more than ever, and because I have a confident expectation that after the period of suspension we shall be able to come back bearing proofs that will confound the most obstinate skeptic in the materialistic

"The time is coming when all the churches will recognize that in this obscure and much ridiculed field of investigation lies their best hope of reestablishing on scientific foundation in finding if he does not the faith which materialistic science couraged: has succeeded, not in shattering, but in shaking. The old faith will be built up more strongly than ever, but some of the old foundations have moldered away under the corroding influences of modern science "I hope I shall in the future be able to make more progress in spiritual investigation than I have been able to record in the past. Those who are sufficiently psychic to conduct such an inquiry are numerous, no doubt; for the sixth sense seems to be possessed everybody, although in infinitely varying degrees of development. But those who are developed sufficiently to observe phenomena for themselves, without extraneous help, are seldom possessed of the scientific instinct. . . The more we know of the mysterious realm that surrounds us the less ready are we to dogmatize. So marvelous are the things which we know to be true, so utterly at variance are they with everything that is ordinarily accepted as true by the ordinary world, that there is hardly anything that can be regarded as antecedently impossible. Hence, more than ever do I feel it necessary to hold the judgment in suspense, and, while admitting all things to be possible, recognize that very few things that are certain, and that even those which seem to be most certainly true may be proved to be mistaken by a little more light and a litle more experience. Of one thing only I am more absolutely convinced than ever, and that is that the ordinary limited materialistic view of man and of the world on which he lives are absolutely inadequate to account for what we know to be happening all the time Whatever else may be true, the faith in which the majority of people live and die, which is based upon the assumption that there is nothing but

Mr. Stead has not, however, depended upon his own judgment in the matter of suspending the publication of Borderland. He does so in response to a communication from the invisible world signed with the single name Julia. "I uspend my journal," says he, "because Julia has so decreed." And he gives us the communication in full, as follows: "My Dearest Friend,-My heart is somewhat sad within me at the thought that this may be the last time for some months that I shall have the muchprized opportunity of communicating with my friends, whom I have so often addressed through the pages of your journal. It is now nearly four years since I began to write for them, and I have had much blessed evidence as to the help which my letters have given to many who had otherwise almost de-

"Now that for the present, and only for the present, my letters must cease, I feel more than ever impressed with the importance of insisting once more, more strongly than ever before, on the great truth that God is love, and that all who love really and truly are in God and he in them. I have said this many times. But you do not seem to realize how literally true it is, and how absurd it will seem to you when you come over

Actors, Singers, Speakers

Thousands of actors, public entertainers, singers, lecturers, preachers and readers are tormented with throat weakness. These delicate organs being overtaxed become susceptible to head colds, influenza, hoarseness, tickling in the throat, sneezing, dropping in the throat, pain over the eyes, dry throat, etc.; all these are forerunners of Catarrh, and are but stepping stones to Asthma, Tonsilitis, and are but stepping stones to more serious complications if neglected.

DR. AGNEW'S CATARRHAL POWDER.

"I can but proclaim Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Pow-ier a wonderful medicine, particularly for singers and public speakers. Myself and wife were both subjects of Tonsilitis and Catarrh, and never found anything to equal this great remedy for ouick action and curative qualities—it is a wonder worker. I out of your lives because of the lack of love in your hearts. There is nothing in all the world so true, so vital, so universal as this. Love and God are the same, and, when, from any cause, you hate or do not love, to that extent your shut God out from your life. "If I had only one message to give, this is the message-love.

"These messages which you have received at all times and seasons, of which possibly a hundredth part has been published, may, you suggest, have been due solely to your sub-consciousness, your other self. Your hand which has written things unknown to you which have occurred in the past, and which has written things as yet unknown to anyone which have been fulfilled in the future, is moved not by you, but by some hitherto unknown segment of your soul. Well, you can take it so if you please. But you know, best of all, whether these communications, many of which ran directly counter to your own views, and all of which form a consistent whole with a distinct character and individuality of their own, did, or did not, emanate from your own mind. They certainly did not emanate from your conscious mind; and if you know nothing of their contents you know nothing of their origin. I, who know both, have always told you the same thing. I am your old friend on earth-life who passed away some five years ago, and who has ever been with you to teach, to console and to assist you in direction.

Another and longer communication from "Julia" on the same subject was received later, and this also Mr. Stead publishes. In it he is told something of the nature of the truth he will succeed "Now, I do not think that you will find that what we have to tell you differs from what more intelligent and spiritual believers have arrived at or have received by inspiration. The fun-damental principles are the same. We have nothing to tell you that was not known to the seers, and that was not declared by Jesus. But we have to tell you that the ideas which have been received, and are still taught by many churches, as to the future state of man, are simply no correct. They make you believe what is not true. And there is no doubt at all that if you succeed in your undertaking you will render these ideas quite unbelievable by any one. "I want you to realize that the great established ruts in which the truth has embedded itself cannot be destroyed without injuring for the time the truth itself. This is what I feel I must say to you. For there is so much danger that if you expect too much and forge the shadow, if you are impatient and forget the slow processes of nature, you may give it all up. And that would be a crime. I will tell you at once that the result would not be the abolition of the old belief in hell, for that is already abolished. People don't believe in the hell of fire any more, and they have by clearly by you. "The chief change will be to increase to a quite inconceivable extent the consciousness of the responsibility of life." Still another letter from "Julia" gave Mr. Stead explicit directions how to

I shut myself up to begin the matter, is absolutely and demonstably building of the bridge between this-world and the world of spirits. When I have bridged the abyss I will emerge from my retirement, and those who are qualified to receive enlightenment shall know the result.'

PRONUNCIATION PUZZLE.

Test Yourself by Reading This Little Story Aloud-Words Often Mispronounced.

The following "episode" will prove a very clever puzzle as a test of the ability of people to pronounce readily and correctly many common words of their native tongue, says the New York Times. The list, which contains no words of disputed pronunciation, is as follows:

An interesting inquiry took place in the Court of Oyer and Terminer some time ago. Indisputable evidence was given toward proving that a heinous incident had taken place during a public pageant. It seems that a pretty girl, rather juvenile in appearance, having an extraordinary head of hair, like an Albino, represented Thalia, and se on a pedestal erected on one of the floats. The procession was directing its course down the Mall, when the attention of the onlookers was drawn to the excited conduct of one of the spectators who had fixed her eyes upon the tiara, set with jewels in the form of a carat, which Thalia wore upon her head as she sat in what seemed to be her wonted attitude of nonchalance and leisure. This person was afterward shown to be a maniacal laundress, whose squalor and detestation and hideous grimaces were all unnoticed by the hard to say; but suddenly, under pretense of seeing something on the ground, she produced a hiatus in the crowd, and thus obtained precedence of all. Simultaneously with her appearance the van drove past. She then alled the air with gross raillery, and which had been hidden under her shawl and threw it directly at the visor on the girl's head. Thereupon a flaccid lithographer who was cutting a swath es a tribune on the following van, grasped a seine and threw it over the gaunt old hag, so that her effonts to escape were futile, and she became as docile as a lamb. The pathos of the affair lay in the way the girl bore the In court the virago gave an alias instead of her own name. Her defense was that vaccine, whose presence was shown by a scabious arm, together with desuctude in the matter of personal freedom, had produced an obsession which decreed the irrevocable death of the girl. Where the Officer Controls Almost Every Move of the Citizen.

Germany is probably the most police-ridden country in Europe. I question very much if even Russia suffers more in this respect. The ramifications of the German police spread into all departments of social and political life, and with every year that passes they manage to extend and consolidate their power and influence. We can all see that in a progressive modern state a police system is an absolute necessity, called into being for the protection of society, which in its absence would be an easy prey for criminals and other adventurers; but in Germany, at any rate, the police are overweighted with multifarious duties which do not properly belong to them, and in the carrying out of which it is in their power to molest the most inoffensive citizen.

the streets in the neighborhood of the central events are rigorously closed by police orders, and only the privileged and the mighty are allowed through the cordon. When a newspaper is published, the first printed number must be sent in all haste to the police prefecture so that the authorities may have time to confiscate the entire issue should they happen on anything which in their opinion, calls for this step. Again and again in Berlin and in other German cities newspapers containing matter which the police consider unsatisfactory have been confiscated. Late at night they are engaged in seeing that the coffee-houses and restaurants are closed at the legal hour. If a new play is to be presented it must be first presented at the perfecture and receive the blessing of the chief of police. If a ballet dancer's skirts are two scant, it is the police who tell her of this shortcoming of her dressmaker. The grain merchants of Berlin a short time ago refused to meet any longer at the bourse and hired a neighboring hall. The police interfered, as the corn traders had not been legally permitted to meet anywhere but in the bourse. If I dismiss my cook I must tell the police why, and if she obtains a new situation I must tell them this, and give the address of her new name, age, religion, birthplace and where she was last employed. A German wishing to go abroad must tell the police about it. These functionaries keep a sharp lookout on the sign-boards of shops to see that the spelling of the names printed on them corresponds with the name of the actual possessor of the business. The tradesman's weights and measures and his tendency to adulterate his wares all come under police cognizance. The morality of the pavement is, also, their province. They regulate traffic, equally, of course. They are quite at home looking after truant children who will not go to school, and after the quality of the seltzer water sold at the street stalls. The building of lines for electric cars, the condition of the asphalt on the streets, the insurance of domestic servants, the sanc-tity of the Sabbath are all police duties. The mention of these varied and diverse objects, just as they occur to me, will illustrate what the German has to put up with.

But their power is felt to be more irksome still in political life. No meeting of a political or even semi-political character may be held unless the callers of the meeting acquaint the police of their intention, and hand in a syllabus of the subjects to be discussed. If the police in their wisdom object the meeting cannot be held. If they consent a police official is always present "takin' notes," and this official has the power to close the meeting should anything transpire which, in his opinion, is illegal. One can easily conceive how galling this regulation may be in country districts where the police are either ignorant or entirely under the influence of the local magnates. It is a plank in the platform of German Liberal parties—the reform of the police—but all the efforts of their best men, all the scathing articles in the newspapers fail in their object, and the police, as I have said, continue to grow in power and authority. Truly, the Germans are a long-suffering people.— New York Observer.

Undesirable Traits In Childhood.

The Prohibitory Edicts Against Freedom of Action.

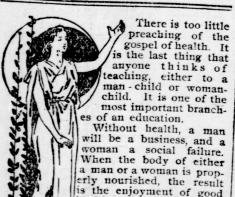

Oon't Mind a Child's Awkwardness or Heedlessness.

We parents are too prone to measure the conduct of our children by the degree of trouble or annoyance it may cause us. We ought to apply very different standards. It is clear that the normal traits, the spontaneous activities, the necessary transitions and infelicities of childhood are not in any sense the result of wrong-doing on the children's part, nor the just occasion for discipline on our own. Many a child is continually scolded for so-called faults which are pot faults at all, but rather virtues, since they are necessary conditions of his happiness, and play an important part in his develop-

Do we sufficiently realize that when we constantly reprove your child for making a noise, suppress his continual questionings, repress his bodily activity, and forbid him to learn by nature's method of experiment upon his sur-roundings, we not only do him a present injustice, but seriously hamper his growth, if we do not effectually dwarf it? Who can say how many of the unfortunate people whom we see about us, the infirm of will, incapable of independent thought, hopelessly fettered by convention, are victims of the repressive and prohibitory system of training children? It is pitiful to see the well-meaning advocates of this negative sort of discipline persistently striving to check the exuberant vitality, o subdue the unmanageable will, while the really grave vices of childhoodthose habits of body or mind which untermine character—spring up and flourish unnoticed and even fostered by the unconscious parent.

Among the child traits which are distinctly good-however much they may infringe upon the conventional quiet of the grown-up world-are boisterousness, destructiveness and persistence or obstinacy. Do not incessantly snub your healthy, noisy, active, self-assertive child; pray do not apologize for him -rejoice in his vigor and inventiveness and give it scope. If it manifests itself in inconvenient ways, that is chiefly because you have not provided a suitable outlet. We cannot have too much energy, ingenuity, and force of will, provided we know how to use them; and I am not to be understood as arguing against wise guidance, necessary authority, or that sort of control over children which helps them to self-control. I should like to make two very practical suggestions, those of my own experience. I would give the children My Goldilocks plays, a tea-box from babyhood, if possible, certain times and places and things of very own-furniture meant for hard usage, clothes none too good to play in, hours of unabridged freedom and thus by respecting their rights, teach them to respect the rights of other people, when quiet and order are absolutely demanded. Is it not also possible that we ourselves might well be more spontaneous-more natural? Let us try to preserve something of childlike simplicity and abandon, instead of making the children as constrained and self-conscious as ourselves. Oh, for a little more fresh air, more fun and laughter in the lives of grown-up people, so that the shouts of happy children might no longer jar upon their nerves and shatter their peace! There is another sets of habits characteristic of childhood at one stage or another, which I regard as neither good nor bad, but simply unavoidable, for the most part temporary, and to be judiciously ignored. It is positively cruel, almost always useless, and generally a positive injury to call particular attention to the awkwardness or heedlessness of a growing child. He can no more help stumbling, or carrying himself badly, or forgetting your frequent charges, or failing to learn lessons at certain periods of his development, than he can help losing his milk-teeth, and it would be as rational to scold him for one as for the other. Patience and watchfulnessthese are of more value than many admonitions. The same may be said of fretfulness in young children, which is nearly always due to physical causes, always removable-such as too little fresh air, unsuitable food or insufficient

Many mothers make the mistake of appearing too much shocked by the Eloise and her little brother Raymond nocently spoken, without the faintest comprehension of its meaning. Of course, we will guard our children as far as possible from hearing impure language, but, once heard and remembered, our notice and reproof only serves to fix it more firmly in the mind, child. It is one of the most important branches of an education. Without health, a man will be a business, and a woman a social failure. When the body of either a man or a woman is proprly nourished, the result is the enjoyment of good lealth. Almost all ill-health is due to improper or insufficient nourishment. If the stomach is right and the liver is right, the blood will receive its normal supply of the life-giving elements of the food and the body will be properly nourished. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts directly upon the stomach and lives. stomach and liver. It purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder, nerve tonic and restorative. It promotes the natural activity of the ennutritive organism. It puts an end to the slow starvation that is at the base of many diseases. It does not make flabby fat like cod liver oil, but firm, muscular tissues. It does not make corpulent people more corpulent but builds up the system to the normal standard.

'I was run down with nervous prostration and female weakness and kidney trouble," writes
Mrs. Maranda Ramsey, of Smartt, Warren Co., Tenn. "My bowels were constipated. My whole system was wrecked. My friends thought I would die. I bedracked for Branche wedi I would die. I had read of Dr. Pierce's medi-cines and sent for the 'Golden Medical Dicov-ery,' 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pel-lets'. lets.' In one week's time I began to sit up. In two weeks I could sit up all day, after being so bad that I had to be helped in and out of bed. I have taken four bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two of Favorite Prescription' and am in better health than I have been for years." Constipation is the father of all manner maladies. If it did not exist, or was in all cases promptly relieved, the majority of medical books could be safely destroyed. It is the easiest since to neglect and the It is the easiest sic ness to neglect and the Dr. Pierce's Pleasant simplest to cure. Pellets cure consti tion every time. They cure it promptly. mpletely and permaand, it may be, to awaken the unconscious child to its possibilities of evil. Many, again, are greatly distressed by the habit of imaginative story-telling, and do the child a manifest injustice by punishing him for the relation of marvelous tales, which are the outcome of mental images so yivid as to come of mental images so vivid as to be to him realities. I will now ask you to consider that class of traits which are positively un-desirable and hurtful, and I think you will find them rare in comparison with those innocent failings of childhood of which we have spoken. You will also find, if I am not mistaken, that the vices of childhood are unnatural, and generally the result of unintentional suggestion or mistaken teaching on the part of elder people. They may be to some extent hereditary. First among them I should place habitual slyness or deliberate deceit—the defect of a weak and cowardly or a very badly managed child, and correspondingly difficult to deal with. We cannot be too careful to discriminate between this variety of lying and the imaginative sort, or the occasional aberration of a candid nature, which is as promptly confessed.

Another trait that I greatly dislike to see, in children is morbid curiosity about unchildlike things, which is often closely allied with precocious sex-con-sciousness. Children should be children—not diminutive men and women— and we can not do them a worse service than by arousing a premature sense of the difference between boys and girls, at an age when nature has yet established a difference. Thoughtless parents sow the seeds of mischief by talk unsuitable for childish ears, or vulgar teasing about boy and girl playmates, and then complacently shut their eyes to the incalculable harm that may follow. I fully expect to shock some mothers and Sunday school teachers when I proceed to characterize as objectionable an abnormal piety. Let us respect the limitations of nature. Of all innocent prococities the most dangerous is moral and religious precocity, since it is almost certain to dwarf that side of nature for the whole after life. There is a large reverence for the Unseen, a short code of duty appropriate to childhood. It were wise to preserve these if we can, and doubly wise to refrain from filling the child's mind with grotesquely inadequate conceptions of God, and priggish notions of adult goodness, which render him an object of sincere pity to the mature and wellbalanced Christian.—Chicago Interior.

A Message Off Shore. There is a family living not far from ye?" asked the minister. Fire Island, on the shore of Long before Christmas. The father of the family, who is captain of a ship, had written to them that he expected to eat his Christmas dinner with them. Now in the family was an uncle, and an old sailor, who had sailed with this captain many times. The day before Christmas he told one of the boys that he believed that if they watched they would be able to see the signals their captain father would raise. He said the wind was blowing from such a quarter that the vessel would sail in near that shore. You may be sure that the boys watched. They took turns using a big marine glass. At last one of them sighted the ship. Then the old sailor took the glass. The first signal was the letter C; that identified the ship. The next signal, according to the code, was Sunday; the next, Constantinople. The old sailor was greatly puzzled. What did it mean? said one of the boys; "it means Turkey-I know. Father means he will be home Sunday to eat turkey.' The boy's interpretation was accept ed, and the Christmas turkey saved for Sunday, when the captain father was home. Saturday was Christmas.

S2 82 A Live Valentine.

[By Cora E. Harris.] One afternoon in the early winter, stood near the kitchen window watching the large feathery snowflakes fall softly down to the ground. "Oh, lock! what is that?" exclaimed the children both at once as something much larger than any snowflake, although quite as white, floated past the window and into the woodhouse. The children caffed to mamma, and tegether they softly opened the door shed, and there, perched on the high any good. woodpile, they saw a beautiful white bird.

"It must be a fantail pigeon," said sleep. I was bloated so terribly that I and probably it flew in here to wait until the storm is over. "Let's keep it!" cried Raymond. "You may feed it," said mamma, "and possibly it will choose to stay; and if so, perhaps grandpa will build it a little house when he has time." "Let's call him Snowflake," said Eloise; and all agreed that that would be just the right name. When the evening lamp was lighted grandpa, who had meanwhile heard all about the newcomer, took the two children on his knee and told them the old, old story of Noan and the dove, and when it was imshed they all went out into the woodhouse, where they found the pigeon sitting on a high pole, with his head tucked under his wing, fast asleep. So they tiptoed back again and were soon fast asleep too.

Every one was very kind to Snowflake, and after awhile he grow so tame that when the kitchen door was open he would fly into the room from the woodshed. But the funniest sight was to see him take a bath in the tin basin that stood on a little bench in the yard just outside the woodhouse. Eloise or Raymond would ill the dish each morning with warm water, and then Snowfiake would splash and spatter the water about, tossing the drops from his beak over his back and shaking them in a shining spray from his to ten days or so before the meeting. Grandpa soon found time to build pened, she did not know personally, the little house and place inside of it a small box lined with wool, for the days were growing colder, and Snow-flake needed a warmer place to sleep.

around the soft white neck of a beautiful pigeon held a tiny letter.

"Another pigeon!" cried Eloise, dancing in glee while mamma gently lifted the lovely bird from the box and read the letter. "A valentine for Eloise, Raymond and Snowflake, from Aunt Mary."

They decided to name this pigeon Valentine, and could scarcely wait to present her to Snowflake. The pigeons eyed each other sharply for a time, but at night, when the children climbed the ladder to look into the little pigeon house, they found the two birds sitting close beside each other and talking sweetly together. So the children felt sure that Snowflake loved his valentine, and they were glad.—

"Kites!" exclaimed Lord Redesdale. "Kites, Mr. Plunket, kites never could amount to the value of these securities. I don't understand this statement at all, Mr. Plunket.' 'A Fickle Weathercock. An old saying, "Fickle as a weathercock," once received a striking refutation in the experience of Dr. W. E Channing, says the Youth's Companion. The famous Boston preacher being of a feeble constitution, was led to go to extremes in protecting himself against the cold, penetrating air of the winter in Boston; at such times nothing would induce him to go out of the house, even in a carriage, if the wind was from the east. A friend, not having heard from Dr. Channing for three weeks, notwithstanding that the weather had been unusually mild and agreeable, feared that he might be ill and called at his house to inquire. He found Channing in his library, the sun streaming through the closed windows, and a blazing fire in the grate; the room was almost suffocating. The doctor himself seemed in his usual health and spirits. Naturally, the visitor asked why he was not enjoying the soft air and sunshine. Channing shook his head and said: "Impossible,my friend. I dare not, and you know I never do venture out of doors in an east wind." "But the wind has been in the south for the last three weeks!" urged his

The City Candidates.

ment Candidate.

In Striking Contrast With That of the Opposition Nominee.

Mr. Beck, the Opposition candidate, in this campaign, has laid himself open to the severe criticism of the electors of the city of London. He has posed as the one friend of the workingman; he has patronized and fawned upon the wage-earners of the city in a way that has been extremely distasteful to them. The workingmen know, as do the people of London as a whole, that Mr. Beck was never heard of as a friend of the workers till he was nominated as a candidate, and he was not thought of as a candidate until every prominent Conservative in the city had been offered the nomination, and had refused it. But no sooner was Mr. Beck selected than he appeared on the scene as a heaven-sent friend of the workingman! There are thousands of workingmen in London, and they know that until a month ago Mr. Beck had neither a word of sympathy for their aspirations, nor thought for them. He knew them not. Now he is running from factory to factory, and from house to house, urging that he should receive the votes of the workers because he has all these years been fairly panting to aid them! London workingmen cannot be gulled by any such pretensions. But let us give Mr. Beck's platform as publicly declared by him: 1. Mr. Beck said he was a German.

2. Mr. Beck said he was a sport, and would always be a sport.

3. Mr. Beck says he should be elected because he owns and backs race

These were the planks of Mr. Beck's the Grand Opera House Meeting. It is for the electors to say whether or not the prime requisites for their representative in the Legislature.

Col. Leys, on the other hand, when nominated as Government candidate for the city, did not require to run around the wards urging the workingests. The electors of London, without regard to their walk in life, know Col. Leys to be a kind-hearted, generous interests of the city. Col. Leys has rather than go to another place, because he regards London as the best

When Col. Leys, with others, was inket Company to occupy the vacant accep factory of the old Globe agricultural works, he was of great service to the city; and when he used his best endeavors to bring the Doherty works to Leys' services on the Western Fair Board, for many years as director, and the advanced classes. last year as president, were highly appreciated by his fellow-citizens. A lively debate is promised for the next council meeting, over the right of Dr. Cl. T. Campbell and Mr. R. Pritcard to vote on the sewerage commit tee. The chairman, Ald. In the face of this catastrophe, he mayor upheld Mr. Pritchard, but Ald. Carrothers patted Ald. Cooper on the back and said the ruling was all right. Ald. AT MOUNT BRYDGES. Mount Brydges, Feb. 26 .- A rousing meeting in benalf of Hon. George W Ross was held in the Muncey road school house last evening. The following gentlemen spoke in behalf of Mr. Ross: W. S. Calvert, M. P., of Napier and D. G. Glennie, of Delaware. Mr. Glennie very ably discussed the school and timber question. Mr. Calvert dealt with the political questions of the day in a very able manner, and in replying to Mr. Price, of St. Thomas, and Mr. Chisholm, of London (who spoke in behalf of the opposition, and who tried to prove that there was no surplus, and that the country was deep in debt), he asked these gentlemen wny, if we were in debt, we were not paying interest, instead of receiving interest. (Loud and prolonged cheering.) The meeting broke up about 12 o'clock with cheers for Ross, Hardy, Calvert and the Queen. AT GRANTON.

Granton, Feb. 25. - An enthusiastic meeting was held here last evening in the interests of W. H. Taylor, the Liberal candidate for North Middlesex. No one appeared in the meeting to represent Mr. C. C. Hodgins, although the bills advertising it cordially invited the opposition. This is a marked feature throughout this campaign. A Conservative speaker did arrive on the o'clock train, which was in ample time for him to be there, as the G. T. He was frightened that he would not be believed, and that he would be hanged. The jury gave a verdict against the prisoner, and the judge had no option but to pass sentence upon him. For a time it was believed by some that Dart had shot at the peddler for mischief, not intending to kill. Very recently, however, the prisoner made confession, giving the correct details of how the sad affair occurred, and in every particular this confession agreed with the story that had been worked out by the department of justice and officers of the crown. The trial judge reported to the department in favor of he acquittal of Dart, who is unquestionably an innocent man, and an order in council has been passed and approv-

Grave National Interestsat

This is a critical period in the history not only of the Province of Ontario, but of the Dominion. An attempt is made by the Opposition to carry the Province of Ontario, as they regard it as the chief defense of the Liberal Ministry at Ottawa. The leaders of the Opposition in the Pariament of Canada are not making a desperate fight in this connection simply to put Mr. Whitney, and the incompetent men he has surrounded himself with, in the place of Messrs. Hardy and Ross, but as the means to an end. If they succeed in Ontario, their plan of campaign would be carried to the other provinces, and an irreparable mischief would be done to the Dominion. No one can doubt for a moment that the leaders of the socalled Conservative party have had a very full and fair trial in the Parhausted an immense sum of money; they have added to the public debt $168,000,000; they undertook enormous public works, of which some were not. Not only will the Government retain the constituencies held by it, almost without exception, but a number of ridings represented by Conservatives or by Patrons in the last Legislature, will now return supporters of Premier Hardy.

Already the Government is two seats ahead, for two Liberal members were returned without opposition on nomination day, while every Conservative candidate has an opponent. Thus the nominations resulted 2 to 0 for the Government-an experience unprecedented in elections for the Ontario Legislature. Then it is ascertained the following constituencies, among others, held in the last House by Conservatives or Patrons, are considered as certain to go

The Government gains will be larger than any gains which Mr. Whitney can possibly hope to secure. Our summary of the situation, as gleaned from the most carefully compiled returns from all the constituencies, leaves it as follows: Liberal seats, sure..... 57

This gives the Government a majority of 20, not counting the probable Patron members, almost all of whom can be relied on to give the Administration an independent support, and without counting the six doubtful constituen-

"Oh, yes!" I replied. 'And where is he now?" she inquired, sympathetically. He lives here with me." answered David Palmer; "he saw us coming down the street and went away upstairs. He did not wish to hear bad news before strangers, and we felt sure it would be bad news. So now, you see, we three are bound together in a fellowship of sorrow, and we must bear one another's burdens. It is our bounden duty to do so. Miss'A Bricot, you will look upon me as a friend, and allow me to regard you as mine?" caps as usual. At the upper windows the housemaids were looking out, leaning far over the window-sills. All the decorous household was acting in an unseemly manner. The cariage was at the door, and my step-mother was standing in the doorway, just about to start off. She was white, either with anger or excitement; but she addressed me in tolerably composed and clear tones. There were half a dozen servants within hearing, who were listening with a slightly sneering ex-

"Yes," she answered, "your father telegraphed from town three hours ago. We are not to wait for him to come here. Tricker has packed up all you will want for a short time, as we expect to be home again in a few days."

It was impossible to disobey her, so urgent were her voice and manner. In a few seconds the horses were galloping along the drive. The gates were open, and I caught a farewell gesture from Rebecca. We drove all the way to Euston, but missed our train by a few minutes, and had to wait three hours for the next. My step-mother sent the servants away, and we sat in almost unbroken silence in the dull waiting-room. There was something appailing and unprecedented to me in the voiceless fury of my companion. It was plain that no words could express the rage and terror that possessed her. I begged of her to tell me something of my dying aunt in Ireland, and the only answer I got was, 'You fooi!" ter that I said nothing and sat motionless till the train started. It was a dreary journey. My brain, which had been in a whirl all day, felt numbed and incapable of thought. I sat with wide-open eyes, gazing out on the silent fields and woods, lying in the soft obscurity of a moonight, yet cloudy night. The train sped across the country with an untiring, monotonous motion, which apparently lulled my step-mother to sleep. I felt sure by this time that my aunt in Ireland was a myth. We were fugitives, runaways, but what we were fleeing from I did not know. We reached Liverpool at 3 o'clock in the morning, and drove at once to an hotel near the landing-stages. In the hall I noticed a huge pile of luggage, which the porter pointed out to my step-mother, informing her it had arrived a day or two before, and would be taken down to the steamer immediately, now she had come to claim it. Our cabin was taken, and we must be on board at 10 o'clock. I lay down upon a sofa in the drawing-room, while my step-mother waited to see the luggage safely started off. "Where is my father?" I inquired, when we reached the steamer, yet with a dull feeling of indifference as "He has gone on before us," my step-mother, shortly.

My head ached terribly, and I could nothing but crawl down to our cabin, where I suffered agonies of pain from the ceaseless tramping of feet just above me and the continual clanking of machinery in all directions. At length I lost consciousness in the freamless sleep of utter exhaustion. For three days and nights I lay helpless in my berth, incapable of thought and unable to make any effort of memory. My whole being seemed ablong green Atlantic billows that swished constantly against the port-hole of cloud covering all the sky. I moon rose softly into the sky. I was walked slowly up to the Common, for just conscious of the occasional visits of my step-mother, who was kinder step-mother's anger, and I was in no and gentler with me than I had ever hurry to meet it. This day was a known her to be. But she did not let any one else come near me. Was she life. In the morning the future had afraid of me being delirious? But stretched before me, clear, joyous and settled. This evening was all a blank. I wanted a little time to collect my was impatient to leave my stiffing quarters and breathe once more the For the first time since morning I fresh open air. My step-mother emrecollected Arthur, who, no doubt, phatically forbade it; but when she was gone I rang for the stewardess, with her willing aid was soon astonished at myself that I had not dressed and seated in a quiet corner on the deck.

Oh! the freshness of that air! The which I inhaled with delight akin to rapture. It seemed to sweep away all cobwebs from my brain, and after I had eaten the delicious lunch the steward brought to me I felt ready for any mental effort. Here was I, a woman of three-andtwenty, no longer a child, being carried away from my own country, and the man I was about to marry, with no explanation given, and no time for preparation allowed me.

An English Compliment to American Weather and People-Ingenuity and Resource.

[London Spectator.] It is commonly held in America that the climate is less rigorous than it was even within the lifetime of many people still living. The winter is now usually open along the Atlantic coast until Christmas at least, though in New England the "storm windows" are generally put in by the end of November so as to be ready for anything of an nusual nature on the part of a peculiarly treacherous climate. In Washington, bright spring-like weather is quite usual in December. In the northwestern states, however, the cold is generally intense, the winds cut like knives, and in Duluth, at the head of Lake Superior, which boasts the honor of being the coldest city in the United States, the winter season is no joke. While it seems certain that, on the whole, the climate has become less severe, it is at the same time treacherous and swift in its changes to a degree which we rarely know in England. There can be little doubt, we suppose, that America has always been the theater of greater and more sudden climatic changes than Europe, especially our part of Europe. Russia and Hungary more closely produce the physical and climatic changes of the central parts of the United States, though the summer heat rarely attains the same extreme as in America. Western Europe is so broken up by channels, gulfs and bays that the moderating influence of the sea does not permit the sudden changes so common in America. A FINE CLIMATE.

For a thoroughly healthy person the American climate, except in the gulf states, has many attractions. It is clear, dry, with a sharp, bracing crispness in the air at certain times of the year almost unknown in England, France or Germany, where the sea air produces mild and somewhat damp conditions. But each kind of climate has its own attractions; for while America can yield crispness and gorgeous sunsets, Europe gives that purple haze which lends poetry and mystery to the aspect of nature. Beyond the question of beauty or of health lies, however, vision of the fifth ward shall consist of the question of the influence of climate human character is largely molded by geographical conditions i Greeks would not have Greeks had they lived in the center of Russia. In his famous speech, Pericles connects the intellectual qualities of his countrymen with the "most pellucid air" of Attica; and in the same way we can connect many of the characteristic traits of our own countrymen with the physical conditions of England. The most obvious of these conditions is the perpetual nearness of the sea to every islander-a fact which has stamped our history with a character unique among modern nations. We live in the center of the modern highways of the nations, and we have been familiar with the sea for a thousand years, therefore we could not choose but to be a seafaring and colonizing people; the choice was practically made for us, as it was made for Greece and Carthage. But while this fact has been widely recognized, it has not been seen with equal clearness how much we owe to fairly calm and settled weather conditions. GREAT STORMS. There have been great and sudden storms in English history, such as that noted by Addison, or the great blizzard of Jan. 18, 1881, which certainly caught us napping; but, speaking generally, we have not in these islands to contend with sudden and unusual outbursts of natural force. We do not know whether it will be a wet or a hot summer, but we do know that earthquakes and cyclones will not wreck our cities, and that armies of locusts will not eat up every green thing. We feel, on the side of nature, a certain security, a certain assurance; even our rough ocean, as Coleridge says, "speaks safety to his island child." Can it be doubted that this smooth uniformity of climate has imparted to the men of England a certain calm which is not seen in the inhabitants of treacherous climes? The melancholy of the Slav is traced to his deep forests and boundless steppes; the quick energy and suspicious caution of the southern Italian to his volcanic hills; and the uniform course of nature in these islands has given to the Engishman his calm, his patient energy, his sure command of himself. Whether the race will maintain this character under such different climatic conditions as are afforded by Australia or Africa it is too soon to say at present. that this character of calm confidence has been associated with the English people in their history a thousand in-

MAKE LITTLE FUSS. We do not disturb ourselves or make much fuss; and, in spite of that "spleen" which we were long ago discovered to possess in an abnormal measure, we are never melancholy as is the Slav. Our Puritanism did not breed suicide or mutilation; the worst t did was to give us a gloomy Sunday. We have contrived to keep our balance because for ages we have felt safe and assured in the arms of nature. But there are advantages, too, in the more checkered course of the American climate. It has killed off many weakings, but it has developed a resourceful character, a mind ready for sudden emergencies. Nature must have begun this educating influence immediately the Pilgrims landed on the bleak New England shore; for they assuredly could not have survived at all unless they had been able to accommodate hemselves to the caprices of that exacting climate so amusedly described by Mark Twain. Many improvements n ways of living, in houses and in dress, have been introduced into America as the result of the educating influence of climate. The mind has be quickened, the character made both eager and more inventive by the pressure of natural forces. On the other hand, just as Englishmen are in danger of stolidity as the extreme of their calm confidence, so Americans are in danger of violent nervous ter he outcome of a climate full

POLITICS AND WEATH The sudden political excitements of America, so often inexplicable on purely political lines, may perhaps be exganism subjected to severe over-tension; and the sudden violence of American labor disputes, like a bot from the blue, may be due to the same extent we are all pipes to be played on by the mysterious forces, both natural and spiritual, which, unseen or only partly known, are all around us. The evolution of races for special functions in the world is at least in part determined by the soil on which a particu-lar race grows; and by "soil" we mean the general physical characteristics of the country in which the race lives. Our own race has in this island home slowly drawn in from the soil and climate an immense stock of vigorous energy, but energy dominated by calm directive force. Rome had a similar power, and hence Rome and England have, in two distinct orders of civilization, been able to spread, to organize and to command throughout vast re-gions of the world. For this quality we may partly thank the favorable physical conditions which have obtained

LAMBETH.

A Holmesville, Huron county, correspondent writes to The Advertiser: A very pleasant event took place Thursday, Feb. 24, at the Methodist parsonage, it being the marriage of Miss Victoria Andrews, youngest daughter of the late Rev. J. K. Andrews, of Lam-beth, to Mr. John Jervis, of Holmesville. The bride looked charming in a How Electors Who Desire To Be on the Winning Side lovely suit of cream cashmere, adorned with cream lace and pearls. Precisely at noon, to the music of Mendelssohn's wedding march, the bride appeared, leaning on the arm of her youngest brother, who conducted her to an arch of evergreens in the center of her, and in a few moments the words were said that made them one. Nettie Frizzell, niece of the bride, officiated at the organ, and Revs. G. W. and J. W. Andrews performed the ceremony. After partaking of a wedding breakfast the happy couple drove to Clinton and took the 4:30 p.m. train for London and western points. Mr. and Mrs. Jervis will be at home to their friends after Thursday of next week.
