LADIES MAKES SUGGESTION

Submits a Plan for the Raising of Funds for the Tecumseh Monument.

Successfully Carried out in Oxford County—Gives an Opportunity to all to Contribute.

"I cannot understand why those in charge of the project to erect a monument to Tecumseh do not formulate a definite plan for raising the money," said a loyal Maple City young lady to The Planet this morning. "It really seems too bad to let all this laudable enthusiasm go to naught."

"And I think the ladies ought to be permitted to help, too. I know many of them would like to. In fact I think everyone should have an opportunity of assisting."

"Why not adopt the plan so successfully carried out in Woodstock and Oxford county a few years ago. Malcolm McKenzie, a young soldier and an Oxford county boy, was slain while opposing the Fenians at Ridgeway, and it was desired to erect a monument to his memory. To do this the city and county assessors were empowered to afford everyone an opportunity to donate 10 cents and no more to the fund. Enough money was in this way collected to build a fine

DRAMA IN REAL LIFE

Kent County Provided the Stage Setting and Residents the Actors.

Trial Scene in the Merchant of Venice can now be Passed up—Majesty of the Law.

A highly colored farce. Characters. Geo. Seacold—Constable watch. Dogberry—A Justice of the Peace. Hero and Margaret—Principals. Leonato—A learned man. The Duke's Jester—A man living by his wits.

Where only a few trees left standing marked where the primeval forests had once stood, two peasant women lived with but a few acres separating their humble dwellings. Hero and Margaret were their names and both, having a taste for chicken broth, raised poultry.

Some of the hens were speckled, some were brown, some slaty, others white and black, big, little, old and young, the ordinary fowls as they run.

Some of Margaret's chickens, when half grown and inexperienced, were missed one more from their accustomed hill.

On search some half-clad youngsters of a similar build were found in Hero's yard, who claimed herself had raised them. Time passed and maturer plumage came with age and more experience and when in good condition for the savory soup Margaret demanded of Hero all chickens of a certain style and carriage as her own. Hero, true to name, denied the right. Margaret claimed that with oats and other enticing and endearing ways Hero had won the affection of some of Margaret's brood, which now refused to roost at home and so she sought the power of Justice as it is.

Straightway to Dogberry, who represents the local millstone of justice, she hied herself to lay her plaint and, when explained Dogberry says, "Of a truth this is alienation of the affections, a most heinous crime and all the powers of law must now be moved."

Away both go to the native village, where lived Leonato, a learned man who knows good chicken (when well served) and has an eye for future profits. There they are told that laws are made to punish crime, therefore there must be crime, consequently it should be punished and for this reason there can be no doubt some one must suffer in vindication of the law lest the law be made in vain. Well satisfied that prosecution would be meat and that duty calls him on Dogberry now writes out a plaint that Margaret's chickens were stolen and are thought to be secreted in a mature state on Hero's premises.

The watch is called and Seacold, armed with Margaret and a writ for search, stealthily approaches the place of Hero, Margaret explaining how she knows her flock by the merry tumble in their soft brown eyes and an extra scale on the left hind legs. If they are hers, when she calls they will bow their heads in homage to her.

The flock is reached and the watch marks the sparkle of certain eyes and tries to count the scales. Margaret scatters corn and calls chuck, chuck, and down go several heads. Convincing proofs! The watch can satisfy the law of homage due, so Hero is arrested on the spot and dragged into the court. The case goes on, the oaths are taken and the evidence written down that Margaret had some chickens which were missed and ones of similar demeanor and resembling when mature what the half-grown ones should be. "And did they not due homage pay," quoth the watch.

Then Dogberry says, "I suspect a most foul crime is here exposed. It makes my very blood run cold." The Watch replies, "I, too, am shivering and am covered with chicken flesh. What must be done?" Dogberry considers and decides to consult Leonato and makes some confusing posthumous, scarce knowing what should be his action in the case.

A week goes by and all are re-assembled with one more who by his wits doth live and mends his own affairs by mending it for others. The case is called and for the first time it is found the charge is laid against no person and that no one is accused but Dogberry, equal to the task, writes out an information accusing Hero of the crime, but Margaret will not say that Hero took her fowl. Dogberry is now confined but feels that he has been appointed to convict and thus to vindicate the law.

monument, put a handsome iron railing around it, and there was sufficient left over to put a memorial window in the university the young soldier had attended.

"Besides this, the monument was in the truest sense a public tribute. Every donor felt that he or she was equally interested in it."

"Why not suggest a similar plan to the gentlemen in charge of the Tecumseh memorial tribute?"

GOD SAVE THE KING.

God save our gracious King,
Long live our noble King,
God save the King;
Send him victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us;
God save the King.

Thy choicest gifts in store
On him be pleased to pour,
Long may he reign;
May he defend our laws,
And ever give us cause
To sing with heart and voice,
God save the King.

THE MONDAY HOLIDAY.

On Monday the employees of The Planet will observe the holiday proclaimed by His Worship Mayor Sullivan in honor of the King's birthday. There will accordingly be no issue of this great home journal upon that date.

While The Planet thinks that the observance of the natal day of our beloved monarch is a very happy and commendable custom, there does seem to be some force in the contention of many that our holidays are becoming too frequent for the conserving of the best business interests. The enactment by which the late Queen's birthday became an occasion for permanent commemoration was a splendid one. The season is specially adapted to holiday seekers and the young folks to relinquish the pleasures of the time honored 24th of May, would have been a hardship indeed.

But in the present month conditions are different and The Planet would earnestly urge the combining of King's Birthday and Thanksgiving Day on the occasion of the former, November 9th.

The Planet will, however, as we said before, observe the holiday on Monday. And incidentally we might mention that the busy character of our columns to-day have occasioned us to issue a four-page six-column supplement.

A MODERN FABLE.

(Suggested by the interview in to-day's PLANET with a practical young lady, up on the Teumess Monument project. With elaborate apologies to Mr. George Ade.)

Once upon a time there was a Bright Town situated in the centre of a Fair Farming Country. Now it happened that one of the Brave Young Men dwelling in the Bright Town went away to war to fight the enemies of his country and keep away the invaders from his home.

In the battle the Brave Young Man was killed, and his fellow-townsmen desired to erect a Tablet to commemorate his deeds. The only thing wanting to this end was the Mercenary Metal, in those days called Money. The townspeople and husbands of the district were greatly troubled at the absence of the Necessary Bullion and Mourned Much. They assembled many times in many public places and talked of Ways and Means. The wise men and the counsellors were consulted without avail. Nevertheless, one day he who was known as the Winner—the Man who Hostiles while he Waits—made a Suggestion and Backed it.

In this Bright Town there were men who annually visited the husbands and the tollers and affixed the amount of tribute each should pay to the state. It was proposed that these men should give every man, woman and child the opportunity to Donate Ten Coppers, which was but a Small Sum of the Basest Coin of the Realm, and that no more should be taken from any one person.

It was done accordingly and a Beautiful Monument was built by reason of the large sum of money collected.

And, once upon a time, there was Another Town, situated in a Fair Country, the inhabitants whereof wished to honor a Brave Indian Chief.

The Stimulus of Pure Blood

That is what is required by every organ of the body, for the proper performance of its functions.

It prevents biliousness, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney complaint, rheumatism, catarrh, nervousness, weakness, faintness, pimples, blotches, and all cutaneous eruptions.

It perfects all the vital processes. William Ross, Sarnia, Ont., took Hood's Sarsaparilla to make his blood pure. He writes that he was all run down, his appetite was gone, and his nerves were so unstrung he could not rest nor sleep. He had tried many remedies without benefit when Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and he began its use. Three bottles of this medicine entirely cured him.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

tain and Soldier. They, too, didn't have Ready Money with which to Build a Monument. But they didn't feel so Bad. They Dreamed it was Done. They sat down and Told their Troubles to Themselves and anyone else who would listen. They made no attempt to help themselves, hence no one helped them. But they Talked and Talked Again. Their Eloquence was Beautiful to Behold. Their Oratorical Tributes were Much Applauded and in the Secclusion of Home they Shook Hands with Themselves. And in the meantime the city did no Permanent Honor to the Brave Indian Chieftain and Soldier.

Moral—You can use the ideas of others if you ain't got none of your own.

WOOLING CANADA.

The Boston Trade Press List, a trade paper, is one of a number of American publications which has come to the conclusion that the tariff "freeze out," which was to bring Canada to her senses has not worked. It proceeds to woo Miss Canada in this dulcet, if slightly inaccurate phrased, appeal:

"With the near approach of Thanksgiving Day, and our heartfelt national appreciation of the wonderful progressive condition of our country, we are drawn into a warmer touch of sympathy and feeling toward our Canadian cousins, through the utterances of King Edward VII. His Majesty, with that kindly friendship he has always exhibited towards the United States,

MIRROR, SCALES, ETC.

There was a man. And his mirror said "sallow skin." And the scales said "losing weight." And his friends did wag their heads as he passed by. But being a prudent man he forthwith swallowed daily certain pleasant doses of Scott's Emulsion.

Then his mirror said "ruddy face." And the scales sunk beneath his weight. And his friends looked upon him with amazement.

has appointed Thanksgiving Day celebration of the Dominion of Canada to fall on the same date as in this country. With a true feeling of thankfulness, why should we not give more consideration towards the expansion of our trade with Canada, through special treaties, and a reciprocity that would be an absolute future safeguard. Ten years ago, the exports from this country to Canada were valued at $28,000,000; while last year they increased to $110,000,000. An import duty is imposed on nearly every article imported from Canada, while it is estimated that 30 per cent. of our manufactures are admitted to Canada free. The Canadian market is well worth our cultivation, for the people have tastes in common with us and our manufactures will naturally go to supply their needs.

It will well repay readers of this evening's Planet to peruse the introductory chapters of our new and splendid serial story "Lone."

Rural Reader—Yes, the two days' fog in London, England, is estimated to have cost the city $1,000,000. As to the cost of the personal fogs prevailing in befogged and benighted Windsor and London, Ont., we give it up and "go 'way back and sit down."

Of the hundreds who attended the Central School concert at the Grand last evening none were disappointed. It was a successful production from every standpoint and The Planet sincerely congratulates Principal Plewes and all concerned.

It must have been very gratifying to the esteemed pastor of Park street Methodist church, Rev. Dr. Hannon, to receive a cordial invitation yesterday, from a congregation whose pulpit he filled for three years, twelve years ago. As the Doctor has already accepted the call to Exeter, he had no decline.

The Chatham Banner-News by reason of the pleasant things its contemporaries are saying about it runs some risk of having a badly swelled head. Whenever it feels the enlargement coming on let it take up a copy of the Evening Record. This is a sure cure.—Windsor Record.

Quite so. Self will doubtless be forgotten in compassion and commiseration for its unfortunate rural contemporary at Windsor.

Li Hung Chang is dead. It would be unwise to criticize this great Oriental because we did not know him, we could not understand him. The information received of him usually was unreliable. Conditions under which the Chinese statesman lived were so different from those prevailing in any other nation. This much can be said, a great man has gone to his eternal rest.

There is one thing about the raising of sugar beets that commends this industry to the farmer. There is no fear that the buyers will combine to put down the price, as was done when farmers of this district raised tobacco. If such a combine were made by the beet-root sugar buyers, the farmers would have the satisfaction of seeing the factories lying idle.

UNCLE EPH'S EXPLANATION.

"I reckon de reason w'y dey don't let de Chinese come to dis country," moralized Uncle Ephim, "is dat we hain't got room for de Chinese an' de Annakis' boys, an' we gotta hev de Annakis'."

C-LICIOUS AND HEALTHFUL MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Delicious and healthful! A happy combination found only in Malt Breakfast Food.

You may be a user of stomach-irritating oatmeal or other grain foods difficult to digest. You use them merely from force of habit. Can you truly say that they are delicious and appetizing? We think not. They certainly do not conduce to good digestion and regular health. They contain too much insoluble starch. This element taxes the powers of digestion, uses up bodily energy, and too often aids Bright's disease and diabetes.

Malt Breakfast Food is a sustaining and energizing food, a nourisher of body and brain a builder of flesh, bone and muscle. You are not half-enjoying life if you are without Malt Breakfast Food each morning. Breakfast commenced with a dish of Malt Breakfast Food means that you go to your day's work fortified with energy and strength.

Major Coogan was the first constable to receive the reward of $20 granted by the County Council for the conviction of every thief who stole more than $40. The Major got his money for the conviction of George Lucas, on the charge of stealing $50 from James Thomas Dunne. Lucas was released on suspended sentence.

Sheriff Gémall and his deputy, C. E. Beeston, were in the Sheriff's office to-day but they were not doing any business. The canny Scotch reason which the Sheriff gave for being present was "Mr. Blackburn was kind enough to put on a fire and it was warm and comfortable here."

The office of County Court Clerk J. Holmes and the Judges' Chambers were closed. The other offices in the Hall were open.

The Warden says that the citizens must not think that the County is not loyal because the flag is not flying on Harrison Hall to-day. The flagpole is broken in the true season. A new steel pole similar to the one at the jail has been ordered and will be erected in the grass plot at the south end of Harrison Hall. It will be put up as soon as it arrives. The flag will be an inch longer than the city's Union Jack.

They Will Adjust Themselves

To a wide range of circumstances—the eyes will stand lots of hard work, and get along with very little attention.

When they do complain, it is usually the result of their being overworked. They are calling for a rest.

They ache, smart, burn, very likely you are subject to headaches, which you never think of attributing to your eyes.

If you're bothered, call on us some day. We will gladly inform you as to the exact shape your eyes are in, and charge you nothing for the service.

FAT POULTRY

These fairs bury fat poultry 53 chickens for the English Market this year.

Thomas Sainsbury, who has charge of the government poultry fattening depot here, has only 153 chickens to kill this year, as against 500 last year.

The birds are chiefly Plymouth Rocks, and were in the fattening pens four weeks yesterday. They will be killed and shipped to the English market next week.

Last year Mr. Sainsbury sent the best chickens sent from Ontario. In each box 12 fowls were put, and Mr. Sainsbury beat all Canada by 6-12 lbs in each box.

The morning Mr. Sainsbury said, "The chickens will average as well this year. I raised 50 of them myself and bought 103. Last year, after buying the feed, and paying me, the Ontario government had quite a nice surplus from the sale of the chickens. We feed the chickens on oatmeal and milk and during the last week we mix tail-roped with the feed. Last year this fed the chickens, but we didn't this year. One of the chickens fed this way was worth half a dozen barn yard raised fowls. The meat is white and tender. I think I will raise some for the local market next year. The chickens I purchased I paid 7c a pound for."

This year Mr. Sainsbury started new stations for the Ontario government at Smithville, near Hamilton, and Homesville, near Goderich.

A WEDDING WITH A SEQUEL.

Since the wedding of Miss Nancy Hugheson and Frank Woodworth, as announced last week, serious complications have occurred. The couple had been but shortly acquainted when married, and certain relatives of the bride were much angered. Rumors were spread around that the groom had a wife and family in the United States, and the bride demanded explanations. Mr. Woodworth was given $100 for expenses by his wife to go to Detroit where he declared he could clear things up satisfactorily. But before he had been in Detroit very long the groom disappeared, and the bride believed foul play had occurred.—Blenheim News.

Mrs. Woodworth is 49 years old, owns 28 acres of land and has about $3,000 in cash.

SENDS HIS BILLS TO THE MEN.

A Shopkeeper Who Found That They Paid More Promptly Than the Women.

"There is a man in an eastern city who does a large business in babies' dresses, and clothing for very young children," writes Edward Bok, in "The Ladies' Home Journal." "He makes and sells nothing else. His trade is almost entirely with women. Up to within three years ago he would send out to his customers bills amounting to as much as $10,000. In six months' time he would receive less than $3,000 in return. Yet his customers all stood well and were considered women of easy means. Then he deliberately changed his methods of rendering bills. He went over his books and found that he had some $12,000 worth of unpaid accounts. He made out the bills, and addressed them to husbands or fathers of his customers, directing the bills to their offices. Within sixty days he had received $8,000 in checks. His invariable rule now is to send all his bills to the husbands, fathers or male members of his customers' families. When no male member exists he insists upon a cash transaction."

Popular Christian Names.

Some romantic parents love to christen their infants with high-falutin' names. Religious parents search the Scriptures before the baptismal ceremony. Parents in search of a fortune will label their luckless babes with the surnames of the expected testator. But, nevertheless, the list of common English Christian names is a very small one. Out of every hundred fathers and mothers of male children some eighty-four limit their choice to fifteen familiar names.

The favorite name is undoubtedly William. In all ranks of society—in the peerage as in the workhouse—William is the commonest of male Christian names.

Stop the first thousand men you meet in the street—no fewer than 170 are Williams. A long way behind them come the Johns, closely followed by the Georges. Of every thousand men ninety-four are called John and ninety-two George.

The next commonest is Thomas. There are seventy-four Thomases, while James claims seventy-two. Henry and Harry between them are seventy in number. Of these about one in four has received the name. Following them come Frederick with fifty-seven; Charles, with fifty-eight; Alfred with forty-five; and Albert some ways behind, with thirty-one.—London Tit-Bits.

Questions Worth Consideration.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse asks: "Is it too much to hope that the time will come when men in whom are many instincts that are noble and generous, shall feel that it is a mean and miserable thing to find their purses in excessive drinking, muddling their brains, degrading their manhood, and unfitting themselves for their best work?"

"Is it too much to hope that the time will soon come when fathers and husbands shall feel it an utterly shameful thing to spend in their own self-indulgence which might add largely to the comforts of home, to the benefit of the children, as well as providing for times of sickness and old age?"

"Is it too much to hope that the time will come when either as manufacturers or shareholders, men shall refuse to fatten upon the misery of their fellow-men and to make a fortune out of that which produces such widespread destitution and anguish, such want and curse? For that day let us hope. For that day work. For that day let us pray."

St. Louis Exposition Buildings.

The principal buildings for the St. Louis exposition, which has been decided upon in many cases by larger than buildings constructed for similar purposes at previous expositions. There is to be an agricultural building, 700 by 2,000 feet; a manufacturers' building, 600 by 600 feet; a liberal arts building, 600 by 1,200 feet; a social economy building, 550 by 700 feet; a transportation building, 600 by 1,200 feet; an education building, 550 by 600 feet; a fine arts building, 600 by 600 feet; a mines and metallurgy building, 600 by 1,200 feet; an electricity building, 600 by 550 feet; and a government building to cover 100,000 square feet. The estimated cost of these buildings is $7,000,000. To these will probably be added buildings for fish and fisheries, for machinery, for forestry and for horticulture. Work of designing buildings whose dimensions have been assigned to architects, and, as in other expositions, the preliminary plans will be compared to secure harmony in design.

Very Curious.

The Yale Record reports that "an unknown friend" has lately presented some choice specimens to the Peabody Museum. A few of them are as follows:

A wag from the "Tale of Two Cities," some water from "all's well," the rollers from the "shades of evening," a drink from a "sandalbar," a rocker from the "cradle of the deep," a free lunch from the Sandwich Islands.

Meaning of Chiropody.

It would be interesting, at least to a philologist, to find out why it is that chiropody has come to mean only the care of the feet. Chiropody's true meaning is the care of the hands and feet, for it is derived from the Greek words, cheir, the hand, and pous, the foot. Everywhere, though, chiropody is used with reference to the feet alone, while manicuring relates to the hands.

The K. O. T. M. do not Lose Any Money through the Shortage of the Accounts of the Supreme Treasurer.

Mayor G. W. Sullivan, a member of the Supreme Tent, of the K. O. T. M. in an interview with The Planet this morning, said:

"I regret exceedingly the circumstances surrounding the case of Chas. Thompson, the Supreme Treasurer of the Order, who has had a shortage of $57,000 in his accounts. There is probably no more highly esteemed and occupied different positions of trust, such as County Treasurer, and President of the Commercial National Bank. The Order loses nothing by the transaction, as Mr. Thompson was bonded for $75,000. He has been Supreme Treasurer for 15 years, ever since the Society was organized, and during that time over $20,000,000 has passed through his hands."

WERE WEDDED

Pretty Ceremony With Accompanying Social Entertainment to Mary Friends.

A very pretty French wedding was solemnized at Drumbo, last Thursday evening at 10 o'clock, when Miss R. Hewett, daughter of Chas. Hewett, a farmer residing near Woodstock, and William Barner, a prosperous young farmer in Dover South, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The wedding was a very quiet one, only the immediate relatives of both parties being present (present, Geo. Hewett and Miss Florence Hewett, brother and sister of the bride, and as groomsmen and bridesmaids, the newly married couple arrived in Chatham at half past three o'clock yesterday afternoon, and an oyster supper was given at the Mesitana at six, after which the bridal couple repaired to their new home in Dover, where a party was given in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Barner are well and popularly known in Dover, and their many friends will join in wishing them much happiness in their future life.

PASSION PLAY.

The Passion Play sets forth the life, death and mediation of the Redeemer. It was a religious devotion devised by the residents of Ober-Ammergau in Bavaria over 250 years ago, and has been enacted annually ever since. Its origin was the result of a vow made in an effort to stay the plague, and it is said the plague was stayed.

Rev. Canon Richardson, M. A., of London, one of the ablest clergymen in the Diocese of Huron, will preach the sermon at the annual Harvest Home Services in Christ Church tomorrow.

Monday will not be generally observed a holiday in this city, as the local merchants have intimated that their places of business will be open as usual. A number of the factories will, however, close for the day.

Dr. Maud Kellan, from Chentu, China, will lecture in Park St. Methodist lecture room on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. Dr. Kellan is a gifted speaker; and has been associated with hospital work in connection with her mission. Those attending the lecture will have a profitable entertainment. A collection will be taken up.

Thames Lodge, No. 101, Sons of Regular Benefit Society held their regular weekly meeting last Monday evening, Bro. W. A. Moore, Worthy President, in the chair. Six committee reported Bro. Holt better, and had resumed work; Bro. Haney doing well and left the hospital. The auditor's report was read, showing the lodge in a prosperous condition. Next Monday evening, the twelfth anniversary will be held in the lodge room; an excellent program has been arranged.

The committee are hustlers and are sparing nothing in making this one of their best entertainments. Members failing to be present will miss a treat of their lifetime. Refreshments will be served. Don't fail to be present and bring your basket.

for why else should the law be made and be appointed.

Thus reasoning he pleads the chicks were missed and Hero had them of a similar kind therefore is she guilty!

"Yes," puts in the Watch, "and does she not claim to have raised them?"

This is forgery, therefore is she doubly guilty, and did they not homage pay to Margaret?"

But Margaret hesitated and would not say that Hero stole the fowl and so they all dispersed, Dogberry still avowing he would yet see Leonie and vindicate the law.

PASSING OF A PIONEER

John McCrae, a Well Known
Windsorite Died Last Night.

Was Over 81 Years old—Helped Organize the First Church in the Frontier City.

Detroit, Nov. 8.—John McCrae, for over 30 years division court clerk for Essex county, died at his residence, 151 Bruce avenue, Windsor, last night. Early in the week he suffered from a stroke of paralysis and his advanced age of 81 years, made it impossible for him to recover from the effects, and he gradually lapsed into unconsciousness, passing away at 9 o'clock.

Mr. McCrae had been confined to his home since last November, when he suffered his first stroke of paralysis. Before being appointed division court clerk he was official assignee for the county of Essex, and in the early '60s he and J. W. Blackader organized the first church in Windsor.

He was born in Kent county, England, in 1820, but came to Canada when a young man and started an insurance business in Windsor, remaining in this business until he was appointed clerk of the division court. In politics Mr. McCrae was an active Conservative. He belonged to the Presbyterian church, of Windsor, and until failing health made it impossible for him to attend, never missed a Sunday service.

He is survived by a widow, and five children—two sons, Frank of Chicago, and Walter, of Detroit, and three daughters, Mrs. H. S. Millar, Edith, and Eva, all of whom reside in Windsor.

The funeral will be held from the residence on Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

The deceased was a brother of the late Squire McCrae, of this city, and has many relatives residing here and in Raleigh township.

WILL RUN

W. F. Cornish, a Maple City Grocer, States His Intention to Compete for a Position on the Public School Board.

The early bird catches the worm. If the truthfulness of this proverb holds true during the school trustees election this year, W. F. Cornish will occupy a position on the Public School Board for 1902.

Mr. Cornish is the first candidate in the field has already made a thorough canvass of all the residents in the fourth ward who are entitled to a vote.

In an interview with The Planet he said:—

"Yes, I am out for municipal honors, and if I do run, I am sure I will be elected, providing, of course, that Mr. Thompson is my opponent. If, however, some other man stronger than Mr. Thompson comes out I will not stand as good a show, but I intend to run, no matter who comes out."

"I have canvassed nearly every resident in my ward and, if all who have promised, will vote for me, I will have a big majority, and I feel sure they will."

"Among the first things I will do when I am elected is to have the Payne School reopened, during the winter months, anyway. It should never have been closed up. During the winter months when the snow is so deep, and, especially in Chatham, and none of the people shovel snow, it is a shame to make little children from over the creek walk all the way to the Central school, when they might just as well go the Payne school."

"I have talked to several of the residents on the subject, and a number of them say that they will keep their little children at home before they will let them trudge through the deep snow to the Central School. That is the reason why I am going to see that."

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A SERIES OF SIDELIGHTS

EDITED BY HELEN HALL.

The art gallery of the Pan-American Exposition did not attract nearly the attention that that of the World's Fair at Chicago did. This may be partly accounted for from the fact that the home of art, the old world, was not represented in a Pan-American exhibit. Be this as it may, one could carry some pleasant memories from an hour's stroll through the building. A noticeable feature of the portraits, especially those of the women, was that the strong, sensible, homely—in the true sense of the word—faces predominated over the pretty ones. One easily recalled in a middle aged woman that you knew was a mother and one who had more up-hill work than otherwise in this old world of ours. Looking at her face, however, one felt that if she were her mother she would help out of many a tight place. Another one was of a younger woman, who looked as though she would be a bright and jolly companion to the man, evidently her husband, standing behind her. There were two large pictures hanging on the same wall, which, while they could not be said to leave a particularly "good taste in one's mouth," will be remembered for their strength. The larger one was "The Salem Witches," by W. McEwen.

The room was plain and bare. The men's faces were stern and hard, while those of the women were eulien and dogged. One of the women's faces had a look of entreaty on it but there was too much agony to change the general impression of the piece. The other work was a picture of "Mass in Brittany," by Walter Gay. The room was just as bare, the people were also of peasant origin, with the same severe faces, but the religious thought had eliminated all the hard, unpleasant lines. Another picture in the same room was "The Sheep Fold," by C. E. Pearce. The central figure is a shepherdess—a strong, muscular girl, with a complexion that gave evidence of being exposed to all kinds of weather. In front of her are the quiet, peaceful sheep, passing to the fold, cropping the grass as they go. There is nothing else in the picture to detract from the central figure. The whole treatment is severely plain and full of repose. A picture with more of the element aesthetic beauty than the above is a study in "Reflected Sunshine," by J. L. Stewart. The figure is in nude, standing on green grass with trees overhead. A rose-pink veil is held by the hand of the figure between it and a bright sunlight. On the skin is the reflection of the green from the grass and the trees, the pink from the veil and the bright sunshine, and all this without the skin losing any of its clearness and beauty. It certainly was exquisite.

There were four pictures by J. G. Brown, which seemed to be the most popular in the gallery, judging from the crowds always seen around them. The one above was a picture of some fifteen street Arabs, evidently admiring one of their number who is standing on his head. It is perfect in detail. Even the dust is on the soles of the feet of the little bare-footed performers.

Thousands of young and middle-aged men are troubled with this disease—many unconsciously. They may have a smarting sensation, sharp, cutting pains at times, weak organs, and all the symptoms of nervous debility—they have STRICTURE. Don't let doctors experiment on you by cutting, stretching or boring you. This will not cure you, as it will return. Our NEW METHOD CURE DOES NOT absorb the stricture tissue, hence removes the stricture permanently. It can never return. No pain, no suffering, no detention from business by our method. The sexual organs are strengthened, the nerves are invigorated, and the bliss of manhood returns.

THE DREAD DISEASE WAS BANISHED AFTER USE OF TWO BOTTLES OF Paine's Celery Compound

A Statement Carrying Warning and Encouragement to Every Sufferer.

While the body is the life of the system, carrying to every part its share of force and energy, it is also the means by which the waste matter, the result of decomposition of the tissues is removed from the body. If disease has touched the kidneys, there is grave danger, and deadly oppression will settle upon the body and mind.

If you have any of the symptoms of Bright's Disease or diabetes, Paine's Celery Compound is the only medicine on earth that can stay the ravages of the disease and cure permanently. Mr. C. Kevill, of Dunstable, Ontario, testifies as follows:

"For the past 15 years I have been troubled with diseased kidneys. Often while working in a stooping position I would find it difficult to straighten up at once, and could only do so after repeated efforts. While under very severe attacks of my trouble, I became very nervous and continually had tired, worn-out feelings. My rest at night seemed to me no good, as I always felt tired in the morning. I had been taking medicines, and was getting worse all the time. At last I decided to give Paine's Celery Compound a trial. I procured a bottle and took it as directed, and found its effects wonderful. Before I had finished the first bottle, I began to improve; after I had used the second bottle I felt as well as ever I did in my life. It banished all my pain, and my nervousness disappeared. I can go to bed now and sleep well, and rise in the morning rested and refreshed."

formers. The expressions on the boys' faces are so different and so natural. You could think of some boy you knew that was like any one of them. Beneath these were three smaller pictures, all of old women. "The Gossips," "What Say?" and "Quitting." The same naturalness was to be noticed in these faces as in those of the boys. The next face, that of a kindly old woman who would be likely to pat you on the head and call you "dear," even after you felt you were too old for such a treatment. The last one portrayed a hard-working woman, one that you felt would give a crabbed refusal to any request whatsoever. The detail work in these was also excellent. The little homelike touches, the rooms seemed to be alive, pleasing and satisfying. What a boon Ruskin bestowed on mankind when he demanded as an art critic that all art should be according to nature!

MAN'S DAILY TASK.

Number of Words Used by Various Persons in Twenty-four Hours.

"I have been trying to figure out how many words the average man utters in every twenty-four hours," said a gentleman who had a penchant for peculiar things, "but I have been unable to reach any satisfactory conclusion on account of the different rates of speed at which different persons talk. Of course I have no reference to the different kinds of words, but the total number of words uttered, counting repetitions and all, during every twenty-four hours."

"There is the quiet, melancholy gentleman who will not speak on an average of 500 words a day, and there are many who for one reason or another would not utter anything like this number." On the other hand, there is the conversational gelling gun, not always a woman, either, who will roll off words at a fearful rate of speed and whose aggregate for one day would run up to dizzy heights. Then there is the normal talker, who will strike a good decent average—the man who will neither bore you with his indifferent silence nor tire you with his meaningless verbosity.

"But suppose that we figure that the average person will utter an average of sixty words every minute. This would amount to 2,400 words for every hour, or about 57,600 words for every twenty-four hours. Of course no person will talk this much, as the windiest of men and women would probably break down before they had talked as much as fifty-seven columns in the average daily newspaper. The only question is as to how much time each person puts in talking during each day. Some men and women are situated so that they cannot talk during the day, except at mealtime, on account of the character of the work they have to do. There are others, such as travelling men, for instance, who depend upon talking for a living. I have figured that the high man, probably the travelling man, will talk an average of every twenty-four words every day. I have figured that most any sort of man will talk as much as ten minutes out of every twenty-four hours, and this would give him a total of 600 words for the day."

"These are the two extremes. I am satisfied that the normal man—the man who strikes a decent average between the indifferent silence and disgusting verbosity—will talk probably one hour, all told, each day, which would allow him 2,400 words. And this, by the way, is considerable talk, for it will fill all columns of a newspaper, and a whole lot of wisdom can be crowded into two columns."

ANIMALS.

Seven species of wasps secrete and store up honey just as the bees.

The jawbone of the average whale is twenty-five feet in length. The tongue of such a monster will yield a ton of oil.

Cats and several other animals have a false eyelid, which can be drawn over the eyeball either to cleanse it or to protect it from too strong a light.

During the summer thrushes get up before 3 o'clock in the morning and sing. So they work nearly nineteen hours.

The Telega polyphemus, the best known species of American silkworm, feeds readily on the leaves of the oak, maple, mulberry, willow, elm and several other trees. The value of haddock landed on English coasts is usually $4,000,000 greater than that of herrings and constitutes one-third of the value of all the fish annually taken.

The big gray kangaroo of Australia measures about seven feet from the tip of its nose to the end of its tail. He can run faster than a horse and clear thirty feet at a jump.

In the stomach of a ten pound pike taken from Loch Gave, Scotland, was found a full grown rat, quite intact, except that the head and neck were slightly cut, presumably by the pike's teeth.

Swiss Cure For Cold In The Head.

Campoth is much used as a remedy in the beginning of a cold in the head. Those of our readers who have faith in its virtues will probably be interested in what is said to be the Swiss method of applying it. The method certainly appears simple and efficacious: Half fill a jug with boiling water, and into that put a teaspoonful of well powdered campoth. Fashion out of writing paper a funnel, with the neck cap the top of the jug. The campothed steam should be inhaled through the nose for ten or fifteen minutes, the inhalation being repeated, if required, every ten or twenty hours. In spite of its unpleasantness, the inhalation is persisted in, it is said that three repetitions will always effect a cure, however severe the "cold in the head" may be.

Greatness is not being lifted up but in growing up.

Years of Suffering.

HOW RELIEF CAME TO THOMAS FINDLAY, OF PETROLEA.

He Had Suffered for Forty Years from Dyspepsia—Food Became Detestable and Stomach Cramps Made Life a Burden.

From the Topic, Petrolia, Ont.

Few men in Petrolia are better known than Mr. Thomas Findlay, who has resided here nearly forty years. In 1862 Mr. Findlay came here, and before the railroad connected with Petrolia he drove a stage coach bringing the early oil men. When the railroad came here Mr. Findlay engaged in the oil business, and later he suffered from a gun wound that disabled his hands permanently. After recovering from this Mr. Findlay was appointed constable and night watchman for the town, which office he has held during thirty years past. This accident was by means of Petrolia's worst misfortune. From early youth he had been a martyr to dyspepsia, which finally became so bad that he looked forward to death as a merciful release. Happening to hear that Mr. Findlay had found complete relief from his lifelong foe, a Topic reporter waited on him to find if this was true. Mr. Findlay was only too glad to tell his story, hoping its publication might help some other sufferer. "I am a pretty old man now," said Mr. Findlay, "but I cannot remember the time when I was not in pain from pernicious dyspepsia and stomach trouble until lately. As a young man on the farm I suffered all sorts of pains with it; food would sour on my stomach and violent vomiting spells would follow. As I grew older my sufferings increased. I could not eat anything but the simplest kind of food, and little of that. My system became badly run down and I grew so weak that I really looked forward to death as a relief. One after another I tried doctors and medicines, but could get no relief; then in despair I concluded to quit all and await the end. Meanwhile my condition became worse. Violent cramps attacked my legs, prostrating me for a time. They became worse and more frequent until they one day attacked my stomach, and I thought my end had come. Unable to move and in agony I was driven home, as I thought to die, but after an injection of morphine I gradually recovered. From that time on the cramps increased in frequency and violence. Nothing gave me relief except the temporary immunity from pain afforded by morphine. I became so weak from pure starvation that death stared me in the face. Finally a friend said, 'Why don't you try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills?' 'What's the use?' I said. 'I've tried everything and just got worse all the time.' 'Well,' she said, 'you try a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I believe they will do you good.' Well, I purchased a box and started taking them. After a little I thought they helped me, so I kept on taking them for a couple of months when I felt I was really cured after so many years of suffering. My strength came back, my stomach recovered its power, and I was able to eat anything I fancied. I am now two years ago, but I was cured to stay cured. I have never had a sick day since or known the slightest stomach trouble. I am confident I would be a dead man now if it were not for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—nothing else ever helped me."

The old adage, "experience is the best teacher," might be well applied in cases of dyspepsia, and if sufferers would only be guided by the experience of those who have suffered but are now well and happy through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, there would be less distress throughout the land. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be had at all dealers in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE SMALLEST PENSION.

The smallest pension extant is believed to be that paid to an old sailor in the Portsmouth Workhouse. It comes to fourpence a year, paid quarterly. Each quarter, therefore, he duly receives a penny stamp, with which is enclosed a stamped envelope for the receipt. He is then granted leave of absence to convert his little Eldorado into cash. The master, it is said, invariably gives him the penny admonition to take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves.

Big Rent Rolls.

The Duke of Norfolk's rent roll from lands is £270,000 a year, and the late Lord Bute's estates were valued at £232,000 a year.

MUTINY IN THE REGIMENT.

Seaford Highlanders Once Rose Against The Officers.

The Seaford Highland Regiment may be surprised perhaps to learn that their renowned corps once rose in mutiny against their officers. The regiment was raised by Lord Seaford among his tenants, but a large proportion of the men were not Mackenzies, as would have been expected. At some prehistoric date—history does not go far back in the Highlands—the Clan Macrae emigrated to the Mackenzie region, and became henceforth the most devoted supporters of the chief. Many of them joined the new regiment. In 1778, the men being trained and fit for service, it received orders to embark for Jersey. A rumor spread among the soldiers, a few of whom sold them to the East India Company. The Macraes headed a protest, which was disregarded, and so, quite calmly and quietly, they marched out of Edinburgh Castle, where the regiment lay, and occupied Arthur's Seat, the crest of the mountain above. When it came to the days and those nights, keeping the strictest discipline. Fortunately the Scottish commander-in-chief at the time was a man of sense. Instead of attacking the innocent criminals, who meant no harm, he discussed matters with them, and finally gave them a written undertaking that their suspicions were unfounded. The Duke of Buccleugh and the Earl of Dunmore countersigned, and the Highlanders marched down from Arthur's Seat as quietly as they marched up—London Standard.

Sailors' Trouse.

Everybody knows that British sailors wear their trousers wide at the bottom, but everybody may not know that they can either make, mend or wash their own clothes. One time, every sailor had sufficient cloth given out to make the articles in question, with just a bit over for future repairs. But here came the difficulty. He was not allowed to have any pockets. So, quite naturally, he kept the repairing bit in a handy place, where it could not get lost. If he wanted to mend a hole in his jumper all he had to do was to cut a piece out of his trouser waist. It will be readily seen, therefore, that by the time the trousers were altogether worn out they had become the same width of the whole of the way down, or, better still, the much desired peg-top shape. The navy is very conservative, and that's why sailors' trousers still continue to float in the breeze to-day.

Little Homemaking Hints.

The coffee should be served very hot and with hot milk. The plates should be properly heated and placed before the carver. A meal should never be announced until everything is in readiness. The dining-room should be in perfect order before the breakfast is served. The table should always be so kept as to be ready for a guest with but a moment's notice.

A cotton flannel "silence cloth" not only makes the tablecloth look infinitely handsomer, but preserves the varnished surface from stains from hot dishes. The butter should be kept in the refrigerator until the last minute in summer, but kept where it will be soft enough to spread easily in winter.

Turns Flank on Monitress.

It was at an exclusive South side boarding school and the young women pupils in the institution were at dinner. The preceptress was a task mistress of the most rigid sort and always paid special attention to the manners of the young women at the table. She laid down the strictest rules and she compelled her pupils to obey them to the letter. On this occasion she espied one of the young women wiping her knife with a napkin.

"Would you do such a thing as that at home?" asked the preceptress sharply.

"No, indeed, I would not," replied the young woman. "We have clean knives at home."

Two Remarkable Women Photographers.

Much interest in women's work in photography has been aroused by the series of picture pages now appearing in The Ladies' Home Journal. But no one of them is likely to attract more interest and admiration than the page in a forthcoming issue which will be devoted to five exquisitely picturesque reproductions of quaint village life by Frances and Mary Allen. These pictures recall with wonderful charm the simplicity and stateliness of bygone days.

Foot Evil in Cattle.

Poultice the foot with bran mash for a few days to clean it, then mix one ounce of nitric acid with four ounces of tar, put the tar in a cup, then put the cup in hot water to melt the tar, then put in the nitric acid, remove the cup out of the hot water and keep stirring with a piece of wood until it is cool; apply a little of this to the foot once a day.

Big Rent Rolls.

The Duke of Norfolk's rent roll from lands is £270,000 a year, and the late Lord Bute's estates were valued at £232,000 a year.

ANOTHER STARTLING OTTAWA CASE.

A LETTER FROM MR. S. A. CASSIDY

Following The Report Of G. H. Kent's Cure Of Erigh's Disease By Dodd's Kidney Pills, An Ottawa Paper Calls Attention To Another Remarkable Cure.

From The Ottawa Citizen

A representative of the Citizen recently learned of a remarkable cure of a well-known resident of Ottawa who has suffered for years with a terrible affliction. The well-known resident is Mr. S. A. Cassidy, and the affliction was stenosis in the kidneys. The Citizen representative called on Mr. Cassidy to verify the reports of his recovery and found them to be true. He is the proprietor of the Bijou hotel, Metcalf street.

He is known by almost everybody and is liked as generally as he is known. His hostility is between the main entrance to parliament buildings and the principal thoroughfare of the city, and it is not to be wondered at that he has more than a nodding acquaintance with the gentlemen who hold the destiny of this country in their hands.

When the old residents of Ottawa are in a reminiscent mood and talk of the good old sporting days, they all associate the name of Sam Cassidy, who took an active part in sport 30 years ago. He was a fast runner, and jumper of local renown, and took an active part in all lines of sport. To-day he is forty years old and tips the scales at 250 pounds.

The intimate friends of this robust man have known that the past ten years he has been a sufferer from a disease that baffled medical skill, and that he has lingered between life and death on many occasions since he was first attacked. At the initial stage of the disease he was taken with violent cramps in the left side of his stomach and the best skilled physicians could afford him very little relief. The attacks were of about two weeks' duration, and when he left his bed he was reduced in flesh and almost a physical wreck. Some years ago an eminent physician diagnosed his disease as "stone in the kidney," but even after the diagnosis the physicians were unable to effect a permanent cure. To-day he is a well man. He has found a remedy that has banished the disease—a remedy that has cured where medical aid was ineffectual. The remedy is Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Mr. Cassidy feels so elated over his release from the excruciating suffering that he has given the following statement over his own signature to a well-known Ottawa newspaper man.

Ottawa, Aug. 8, 1901.

Dear Sir—I want you to publish for the benefit of others who are suffering as I have suffered for years about how I was cured of stone in the kidneys. My friends all know that I have been a martyr to this disease for years. They know that besides consulting the best physicians in the city and trying every kind of remedy I could think of, I was unable to get better. Some time ago a friend of mine told me that Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure me. As a last resort I tried them and they have cured me. This is the first year in a great many that I have not been confined to my bed with the disease. I could not imagine more severe suffering than one endures who is afflicted with stone in the kidney, and I feel the greatest gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they have cured me. Anyone who has suffered need suffer no more.

Excellent Meeting of the C. C. I. Literary and Musical Society.

An excellent program was rendered on the occasion of the fourth regular meeting of the Collegiate Institute Literary and Musical Society on Thursday afternoon. The following report was presented from the General committee:

1. The committee congratulates the society on its large and influential membership, there being now over 1,000 members, classified as follows: active members 250, associate 300, visiting 400, honorary 75.
2. In order to get the best results from the efforts of this members, supervision, direction, rehearsal and concert are necessary. To this end the following appointment of work is recommended:
 - a. That the principal exercise a general oversight of all the work of the Society, and take particular charge of the educational part of the program.
 - b. That Mr. Lane supervise the essay work and Mr. Mowbray the speaking and debating.
 - c. That Mr. Jewett direct the scientific discussions and essays.
 - d. That Mr. Black take charge of the addition, the typewriting and the shorthand and the spelling contests that may be engaged in by members of the Society.
 - e. That Mr. Taylor direct the Glee Club that Joseph Robert be president, E. M. Campbell, secretary; Beattie Bracken, pianist, and Verna Sheldon and Lena Bullis members of the committee.
3. That as it is "more blessed to give than to receive," and as no one should "live unto himself," a branch society of the Canadian Colleges Mission be formed, with Charles Heath as president.
4. Type-written notices have been sent to the honorary members. The thanks of the committee are due to Edith Holmes, Manager, Ives King and Matilda Primeau for valuable assistance in this work.

PROGRAM.

Elocutionary contest between 12 pupils of Form 2A and 12 of 2B; Schiller's Diver.

Chorus—"Speed away," Glee Club.

Debate—"Resolved that a quick and fiery temper is a source of strength rather than of weakness." Aff. C. D. Farquharson and J. A. Samson; neg., C. Heath and W. Mounter.

Piano duet—Ada Wrong and Charlotte Hoig.

Critic's report—W. Taylor, B. A. Address—Thos. Scullard, Hon. Pres.

The debate was decided in favor of the affirmative and Form 2A was considered to have done better elocutionary work than 2B, although the contest was a close one. Mr. Scullard delivered a short but very appropriate address on the wisdom of having a purpose in all that we do.

THE STYLE OF HAIR WORN.

Is an important factor to produce a younger and refined face and a well shaped head to any lady or gentleman. Prof. Dorenwend, who will be at the Garner House, Chatham, can demonstrate this to anyone calling on him at his show rooms. He has ladies' and gents' wigs, toupes, bangs, wavy and plain fronts, switches in every length and shade, that he will gladly adjust on any lady's head free of charge to prove this. Don't fail to see him, Wednesday, Nov. 13th.

Theatrical

THE "PASSION PLAY" TO-NIGHT.

Mr. Fried's famous Passion Play comes to Chatham very highly recommended and it is to be hoped that he will be greeted with a goodly audience. In connection with the play there will be several illustrated songs with special scenic effects.

THE LYCEUM COURSE.

The second regular number in the Lyceum Course at the Grand will be furnished next Wednesday evening, the 13th instant, by "The Fiddlers," Women's Orchestra. The Halifax Herald, of recent date, says:—"The program included numbers from the cream of composers past and present. The selection of the music was of the highest quality, and the performance was of the most excellent. The instruments were so beautifully blended that none were more prominent than others. That beautiful effect, the harmonic of orchestra has been reached by Mrs. Nichols, who has reached the climax after years of experience. Encores followed every number on the program. Miss Rogers, the violinist, proved herself to be an artist possessed of a voice of great power, over which she has every control. The impersonations and recitations of 'Little Lina' simply carried the audience away. She is a young lady of rare promise and evidently has a great future before her."

THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT.

"The House that Jack Built," a new comedy by Geo. H. Broadhurst, who introduced the "Joneses" and "Smiths" to the stage, plays an engagement at the Grand here on Saturday, Nov. 16th. The new play differs radically from any of the author's previous comedies. It has no relation to the familiar nursery rhyme. The action takes place in a new house which is built and tenanted by a wealthy, but eccentric doctor, whose name is "Jack." The most humorous situations, and one of the most novel, is the paper hanging scene, which is infectious. Arthur Broadhurst wishes to go on record, saying that he considers Mr. Geo. H. Broadhurst, who is leading part, as one of the best non-star English-speaking actors on the American stage. The house is tenanted by a number of other prominent people, whose principal mission is to evoke laughter.

Caldwell's Flight.

John Burns of Bedford had at one time a very narrow escape from the Indians, the man with him being killed and scalped. One of Burns' neighbors by the name of Caldwell, used frequently to tease him about the occurrence, and question his courage in the affair, and end by declaring what he would have done under such circumstances. One evening Burns found his boasting neighbor hard to bear.

"I suppose you know just what you'd do if you met an Indian that wanted your scalp?" Burns inquired.

"Well, I guess I do," was Caldwell's confident reply, and he soon took his departure.

No sooner had he left the house than Burns rigged himself up, and much like an Indian as possible, and called for after Caldwell. He soon came near him, and without making any other noise broke some dry twigs. Caldwell heard the sound and gave one glance backward.

It was a clear, moonlight evening, and Caldwell had no difficulty in seeing the Indian. He sprang quickly into the bushes, where he stood still. Burns, too, stepped into the bushes. After a while Caldwell ventured out and looking carefully around moved forward. Burns followed, breaking more twigs. Caldwell again concealed himself in the bushes, and his pursuer did the same. Several times this performance was repeated.

At length Caldwell could endure it no longer, and leaping from his topmost perch, Burns uttered a wild whoop and pursued him. When Caldwell came to the brink, which was spanned by a single plank, he was in such haste that he could not stop for the bridge but bounded through the water.

He ran into the first house he came to and gasped. "The woods are full of Indians—more'n a thousand of 'em! And they'll be here in a minute! Where's the gun? Where's the gun?" He was in a terrible fright.

While the owner of the house was trying to find out what really had occurred, Burns appeared at the door, laughing heartily. "I say, Caldwell," he said, "I thought you said you wouldn't run for an Indian."

The Cigarette Cure.

The crusade against the cigarette is a contemporary, gathers force. Superintendent Ferrier of the Mimico Industrial School reports that out of spanned by a single plank, he was in such haste that he could not stop for the bridge but bounded through the water.

International Bible Lesson for Tomorrow—Israel Oppressed in Egypt—Ex. 1, 1-14.

Golden Text—"God heard their groaning and God remembered His covenant."

Only 70 Hebrew emigrants located in Goshen about 60 years after Joseph's death, the country is filled with them, national jealousy against the sons of Abraham at their prosperity and increase is the result of this, and now God multiplied them to a nation. Their cruel bondage and bitter cry is heard by Him who hears the whole creation groaning and travelling in pain together, until the Deliverer comes. Their only help was in God. God's people then and now are assured of final deliverance and glory at the Lord's return. Egypt, a type of the world, Pharaoh of Satan, Israel a type of the church and Moses of Jesus, the deliverer; as Israel's bondage and suffering preceded and prepared for deliverance, so the bondage and misery of a sinner leads to repentance and eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Suits of Fancy Worsteds

The fancy worsted suits we are selling are simply unrivalled in Ontario at the prices. A smaller claim might sound more modest, but would not convey the whole truth.

To begin with, these English worsteds are a material by themselves, and we have learned how to buy them to the very best advantage. Our system of large direct purchasing tells tremendously in these goods. Quality, variety and originality of patterns are all secured in the highest degree—indeed it is almost as if you went to the mills yourself and selected the cloth.

But the making is the biggest feature of all, and this year it's a lot better than ever. You would wonder at the distance some of these suits are sent. Men who have once learned to depend on our work do not stickle at distance in sending orders afterward.

At present we are showing this class of suits in nine distinct patterns of cloth—mostly smallish checks and stripes, in medium and dark colors. All-wools, every one. $10, $12, $13, $14, $15 and $16.

Doesn't Want Monocles.

Here is an extract of a private letter just received from an officer now a patient in No. 2 Officers' Hospital, Pretoria: "Lord Kitchener came round the hospital two days ago, looking for officers who were shamming. I saw his mustachios pass the door, but he did not come in to look at me. He is very strict about everything. The other day he stopped an officer in the streets of Pretoria who was wearing a single eyeglass. He said, 'Excuse me, but you think it absolutely necessary for your sight to wear that glass?' The officer replied, 'Yes, sir, certainly.' Lord Kitchener said, 'I am particular to have officers with good sight only in Pretoria. You will report yourself for duty on lines of communication at the office of the R. S. O. at five o'clock.' Collapse of officer."

Keep Your Eyes.

The moment you are instinctively inclined to rub the eyes that moment cease to use them; also it is time to give your eyes a rest when you become sensible of an effort to distinguish. Cold water is about the safest application for inflamed eyes. Never sleep so that on awakening the eyes shall open on the light of a window. Never read or sew directly in front of the light. Light being that comes from above or obliquely or over the left shoulder. Too much light is an evil, just as is a scant light. It creates a glare that pains and confuses the sight.

When Most Needed.

In the entrance of a certain public building is a placard, so placed that it confronts the eyes of those who come in, bearing these words: "Please wipe your feet."

The building is very badly kept, discolored, and full of dust.

Not long ago a visitor, after noticing this general untidiness of the interior, took down the sign as he came out, and changed it to a position where it only confronted the eyes of those who were making their exit from the building.

A Good Memory.

A highland girl, who had been in service in Dundee and had gone to a place farther south, called upon her old mistress on her way north to visit friends.

She was invited to take dinner with the family, and her old master asked a blessing on the meal as usual, when the girl said:

"My, maister, ye maun hae a gran' memory. That's the graco ye said when I was here six years syne."

THE CENTRAL SCHOOL ROYALLY ENTERTAINS

Splendid Concert Provided by the Students to Large Audience.

EVERY FEATURE OF A DELIGHTFUL PROGRAM ENTHUSIASTICALLY RECEIVED.

Over Eight Hundred Pupils Took Part—The Features Which Contributed to Success of the Concert—Names of Scholars Who Took Part—Those Who Won Honors.

It is very seldom that the citizens of Chatham ever have the opportunity of seeing such a happy and animated group of school children as was displayed when the curtain rose on the Central School Concert last evening. The sight was simply amazing and one never to be forgotten. About five hundred and fifty children were seated on the stage on an embankment of seats extending about twenty feet in height. They were arranged according to their different grades with each teacher commanding her own section. During the choruses, in which all of them took part, they sang with a volume which filled the whole house, their childish voices ringing out with an enthusiasm and wholeheartedness which thrilled and captivated the immense audience.

Never before was the Opera House so well filled. It was taxed to its utmost capacity and many were turned away unable to secure entrance. And never before were the people present provided with such an excellent local entertainment. Everything passed off in a style which reflected great credit upon both the performers themselves and their capable instructors.

There is one man, however, to whom the greatest portion of the credit is due. That man is Mr. Plewes, the principal of the Central school and the promoter of the concert. The whole idea and plan of the entertainment was of his own making, and he certainly should be very highly commended for the most excellent and gratifying results.

Mr. Plewes is a man of inestimable capabilities and puts his knowledge into practical use in the advancement of modern school life and education. During the comparatively brief time he has been principal of the Central school he has shown his ambitious nature, energetic work, and skilful management built up for himself a most enviable reputation as an able and efficient public school teacher.

Little did the School Board realize when they engaged Mr. Plewes what a prize they were receiving. His work in Wallaceburg was such as proclaimed him a very valuable man, but what was Wallaceburg's loss was Chatham's gain and the Central school has now at its head, one of the best Public School Principals in Ontario. In fact Mr. Plewes is worthy of the highest complimentary remarks that can be paid him. He has a natural gift for managing children who, while they respect and obey him, do not look upon him as a harsh task-master, but rather as a companion and friend, who is fondly and deeply interested in their welfare.

The Central school to-day, is one of the finest, most up to date, and best regulated public schools in Ontario, and its efficiency along these lines is daily progressing. The number of scholars passed yearly from it, to the high school, compares very favorably with any other school of similar size in Ontario, and the degrees which these same scholars attain in after years, in the course of their higher educational work, speaks well for their public school training.

The opening chorus "God Save the King" was sung in unison by the whole class, and was followed by a short address by Dr. R. V. Bray, Chairman of the Public School Board. In the course of his remarks he took occasion to compliment the Principal, Mr. Plewes and his able staff of teachers on the creditable showing they had made on this their first special entertainment.

"At the last meeting of the board," said he, "we saw fit to voluntarily increase the salaries of some of the teachers on the staff. The increase was very deservedly bestowed and well earned by the teachers to whom it was given. I only hope that it will prove an incentive to the other teachers to go on as they have been doing and work hard to deserve a similar reward."

Following Dr. Bray's address was another chorus. The greeting to the King, after which a class from the Kindergarten played a game, "The farmers." Those who composed it were:

B. Westman, M. Peace, H. Dell, L. Gordon, C. Wellman, E. Park, W. Andrews, M. Kingsmill, H. Evans, M.

are more efficiently taught than in Chatham. Of course there is a healthy and friendly rivalry between the two schools, but I am happy to state, above all this, peace and harmony exist. May this happy condition of affairs long continue.

"The general public do not realize the enormity of the duties of the principal of a public school. Teachers are architects and arbitrators of character. Their duties, when faithfully and conscientiously performed, educate and awaken the responsibilities resting upon their scholars, and it is also their duty to teach the art of right living."

In presenting the medal he paid a great tribute to the receiver, Miss Weber.

"In presenting to you this token of your industry and capabilities," he said, "allow me to congratulate you on your well deserved success."

A large class of pupils from the Queen Street School, consisting of M. Crozier, M. Buckingham, L. Cuyler, M. Dines, N. McGowan, W. McEwen, E. Ward, L. Tefft, J. Cumming, L. Ainsworth, E. Lowe, O. Hewson, M. Stitt, V. Moffat, N. Daniels, M. King, M. Barnes, F. Roache, L. Reid, A. Herman, E. Shepley, V. Nethercliff, A. Anquetil, A. Reid, P. Wanless, B. Kerr, A. Mann, N. Remington, K. The last, but by no means the least important, was a fancy drill by thirty-six girls conducted by Misses Birch, Hillman and McKellar. This exercise was one of the favorites of the evening. The girls who composed the fancy march were: R. Martin, D. Foreman, G. Hall, E. Hicklin, M. Thomas, V. Stone, L. Kil-

The concert was closed by a farewell chorus, "Mizpah," by the entire school.

Every precaution was taken against confusion in the event of a fire. Six firemen were stationed on the stage with two extinguishers, the back doors were left open and a line of hose laid from the nearest hydrant to the stage.

CENTRAL SCHOOL.

Taylor, M. Charteris, R. Fleming, F. Reid, M. Winters, F. Waugh, O. Kim, L. McCall, I. Pope, G. Tye, V. Marshall.

The work of these little tots, under the instruction of Miss Green was amusing in the extreme. They sang and acted their parts with an intelligence and activity seldom found in children so young. Miss Green has indeed great reason to be proud of the work of her small charges.

The event of the evening, however, was the presentation of the gold medal to Miss Belle Weber, awarded by Alex. VonGutten for obtaining the highest standing among the pupils from the Central School, who passed the recent entrance examinations.

"Before presenting the medal," said Dr. McKeough, "I must congratulate the zealous, competent, energetic principal of the Central school, and the excellent and efficient staff of teachers, who have produced such a gratifying result in their first entertainment. Never in the history of the Central School has such a successful record been made as was made this year."

"We also have in (North Chatham) a school quite equal to the Central. In Mr. Brackin, the principal we have a genius. For twenty years he has been one of the leading educational factors in the city and county. His talents, zeal, energy, originality, and resourcefulness have made him successful both physically and morally. Mr. Park assures me, also, that his staff is an ideal one, but it is unnecessary and uncalled for, to make comparisons between the two schools. Few scholars in any other city in America with them they went through a number of drills. Their work is worth more than a passing mention.

Mayor Sulman then presented the certificates to the successful students who passed the recent entrance examinations. Those who received certificates were B. Bedford, W. Scott, C. Nagle, A. Martin, C. Sheldrick, Wm. Craddock, H. Bragg, R. Campbell, W. Lister, C. Gammage, R. Dunlop, G. Harwood, Ed. Mounteer, B. Binga, R. Robertson, P. Coyle, L. Dean, R. Duff, D. Dale, P. B. Mann, D. Dunlop, F. Hutchinson, A. Longley.

A chorus, "Prince George," was then given by the scholars, the solo parts being taken by Miss Gertrude Potter.

The audience was then given a quarter of an hour on the quarter-deck with the crew of H. M. S. Park. Naval brigade—J. McMurray, A. Perry, S. Poole, S. Campbell, S. Knott, F. Johns, W. Harrington, P. Moss, A. McKenney, E. Smith, R. Edwards, F. Munro, T. McKie, R. Park, J. Boyd, D. Kofage, P. Chrysler, J. Northwood.

Stick twirler—Percy Moss. Song—The Jolly Sailor Boys. The baton swinging by Percy Moss was exceedingly well done and called forth much applause.

The next was a Japanese drill conducted by Misses Collett and Ryan. Those who composed the drill were: Soloist and leader, Gertrude Potter. The names of the others are—P. Pope, B. Smith, A. Massey, N. Carr-

GOT THEIR PASSES.

TWO CASES WHERE PURE NERVE WON FREE TRANSPORTATION.

The Case of the Candid Man Who Tackled Old Commodore Vanderbilt Outdone by a Young Woman Student Who Objected to Paying Fare.

"You may have heard the story of how Commodore Vanderbilt issued a pass to a candid man," said the general passenger agent of a western road as he fingered gingerly a daintily tinted piece of paper.

"No? Well, an early country acquaintance of the old commodore, whom he had known years before he became a millionaire, was in New York one day and thought he would pay his friend a visit. He presented himself in the office of the president of the New York Central and was very kindly received. After the conversation had proceeded for awhile in a friendly way the commodore remarked:

"Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Yes," replied the caller, "I am going up to Albany, and I wanted to see if you would give me a pass."

"The commodore's manner changed instantly, and he was at once a strict man of business, looking at the request from a purely business standpoint.

"On what do you base your request for a pass?" he asked. "Have you rendered the road any service, or is it indebted to you in any way?"

"No," replied the man, "it does not owe me anything. I have not had any dealings with it."

"Then why do you ask for a pass?"

"Well, as I told you, I am going to Albany, and I don't want to pay for the trip if I can ride free. It just occurred to me that you might furnish me transportation if I asked you, and so I asked."

"My friend," remarked the commodore, "you are the first man who ever asked me for a pass and told me the simple truth about it. You shall have a pass." And, calling a clerk, he ordered him to furnish his caller with transportation.

"I have had a parallel experience to that of the commodore. This note is from a student at one of our high-toned young women's seminaries, one of whom I had no knowledge before the receipt thereof. It was written just before the summer vacation began and while preparations were going on in the seminary for the closing events. It asks me if I will not be kind enough to furnish the writer with transportation to her home in Kansas. The letter is nicely worded. There is nothing bold or unladylike about it, but its receipt pleased me considerably. I could not recall the name as that of any one of my friends or acquaintances and could not conceive of any reason why such a request should be made. Just to satisfy myself I dictated a note to the writer, asking her to call and see me in reference to the matter, and in the course of a day or two I had a visit from the young woman in person. She was a fine, handsome young woman. The term business would hardly apply to her; she was altogether too cultured and refined for that. Her whole appearance indicated that she was not one to whom the financial consideration involved would appeal very strongly. The moment I saw her I knew she could not be applying on the strength of any previous acquaintance. I had never seen her before.

"You desire a pass to—," I said to her by way of introducing the subject.

"Yes," she replied, "I would consider it a favor if you will be kind enough to furnish me one."

"On what grounds, might I ask, is the application made? You know we are in the habit of treating these matters as purely business transactions. Have you any business reason to advance as the basis of your request?"

"Well, no. I do not think I ever thought of the matter in that light. Indeed, I do not think I should have ever thought of applying for a pass had not several of my classmates been provided with them, and I did not see any reason why, when they had them, I should not have one too. Their parents are as rich as mine, and I could see no reason why they should ride free and I pay. I wanted to be on an equal footing with them."

"Do you know on what grounds they received their passes?"

"Oh, the father of one is a railroad director. He got his daughter her pass. Another is the daughter of a large manufacturer who ships trainloads of goods over the road. Another is the daughter of a general superintendent. She travels free."

"And your father?"

"Oh, his money is in other kinds of investments. He is not a railroad man."

"Well, you see, your case is different from any of those you have mentioned."

"Yes, I know it is, but I want to do away with at least some of the difference. I do not want to pay when they can ride free."

"You would hardly think it reasonable to ask for free transportation for the whole school you attend, would you?"

"I never thought of the reasonable. All I thought of was that unless I could get a pass I would have to pay, while some other girls could ride free."

"But if I should give you a pass you would be riding free and some other girls would be paying. There would be a difference between you and them still."

"Oh, yes, but I do not care about that kind of a difference. I want to be always classed among the most fortunate."

"Well, you are candid about it, anyway. I like that. Strictly speaking, you are not entitled to any pass, and I should turn down your application with a cold refusal, but owing to your candor I suppose I shall have to make an exception in your case."

"She got her pass."

An Avenue of Escape.

"I'm thinking seriously of resuming business."

"I thought you had retired permanently."

"I thought so, too, but I need some excuse for not attending my wife's after-school tea."

Too Thankful.

SUMMUM BONUM.

How blest is he that can but love and do And has no skill of speech nor trick of art Wherein to tell what faith appereth true And show for fame the treasure of his heart!

When, wisely weak, upon the path of duty Divine accord has made his footing sure, With humble deeds he builds his life to beauty, Strong to achieve and patient to endure.

But they that in the market place we meet, Each with his trumpet and his noisy faction, Are leaky vessels, pouring on the street The truth they know ere it has known its action.

And which, think you, in his benign regard Or words or deeds shall merit the reward? —Peter MacArthur in Atlantic.

CUTTING DIAMONDS.

The Various Stages of a Delicate and Interesting Process.

"The diamond, when mined," said an expert, "is very often of a shape so uneven that, in preference to cutting half off and letting that part go to dust, air, sharp tap, and stone will split as the grain runs, and thus two or more smaller but better shaped diamonds are made."

After the diamond is cleft it is necessary to do the rough cutting technically known as "bruting." This is done by affixing two diamonds on the ends of two boxwood sticks with a very hard cement. One is then rubbed against the other, and "diamond cuts diamond." They are held over a cutting box having two iron pegs for levers and containing finely perforated brass pans, through which the dust falls, the chips remaining in the top pan.

The stone, having been cut to the satisfaction of the master, is taken to the polishing room, where a setter selects a suitable sized brass wheel called a "dope," fills it with a mixture of lead and tin and melts it in a gas flame. Having worked the solder to its proper shape he places the diamond in the center, leaving only a very small part exposed. A mark is made on the solder before it becomes thoroughly set, and then the stone is passed on to the polisher. By the mark made on the solder the latter knows at once the precise run of the grain and the way in which it will polish to the best advantage on the mill.

"The first operation is the making of the 'table' of the diamond. This done, it is handed back to the setter that he may take it out of the solder and reset it for the first corner, called the flat corner. The solder is again marked to indicate to the polisher the run of the grain and the way in which it will polish to the best advantage on the mill."

"Without the assistance of the diamond dust the iron would not make the slightest impression on the diamond. The polishing wheel or disk is covered with grain of unwell, give Paine's Celery Compound a trial."

"Why is it that so few people seem anxious to talk to Mr. Carlington? He seems very well informed."

"That's just the difficulty," answered Miss Dimington. "He's one of those dreadful men who know enough to correct your mistakes when you quote the classics and who don't know enough not to do it."

A BROKEN LOVE DREAM

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "A Broken Betrothal," "Parted by Fate," "Parted at the Altar," "Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Miss Middleton's Lover," Etc., Etc.

CHAPTER I.

It was on the tenth of January, and intensely cold in New York city. I am particular as to date, for it marked the bitter tragedy that ever darkened a beautiful young girl's life.

All the night before a thick, steady storm of snowflakes had been coming down, until it seemed on this fatal eventful day that the world lay lost under a shroud of whiteness, and it was snowing still. Great icicles hung from the bare branches of the trees and from the eaves of the houses. A cold, north wind was blowing—a wind that chilled everything it touched.

On this bitter cold morning, hurrying along with the crowd that surged up Broadway, was a young girl who, despite her shabby attire, was rarely beautiful.

She was not more than seventeen, this fair maiden who was destined to meet so strange a fate, so wonderful a fate, with a face dark and pensive, framed in a wealth of nut-brown curls; dimpled cheeks, which the cutting wind had kissed into twin roses; lips like the heart of a crimson blossom; and those eyes, dark as stars, looking out from the rose-leaf face, would have startled anyone with their vivid loveliness. She had the grace of a dainty princess, though Ione Lawrence was but a working girl—the daughter of a Knight of Labor.

Ione had been the pride and darling of her father's heart. Six months before our story opens he had passed away, leaving the wife of his youth, leaving two daughters behind him.

On his death-bed he had called Barbara, his eldest daughter, to his bedside, and drawing her face down to his own cold, clammy one, he whispered, solemnly:

"You are three-and-twenty, Barbara, and Ione is but seventeen. I leave her to your care. You must be both mother and sister to her, Barbara, she is so young. She is gay, impetuous and wilful, but you must be patient with her. She will be more beautiful than I seldom falls to the lot of women to be, Barbara, and great beauty in a young and unprotected girl brings with it either a blessing or a curse. Oh, my dear, I have such strange fears for Ione's future. I cannot tell why. I trust to Heaven this premonition of coming evil is but a sick man's morbid fancy. I could not rest in my grave if I had not your guard our treasure well, Barbara."

"I will, father," said the weeping girl. "You may safely leave Ione to me."

Barbara Lawrence had taken up the thread of life when her father had laid it down and sought work in an adjacent mill; but Ione was kept at school.

Then a sudden change came. Barbara was stricken ill.

The doctor who was summoned saw at once what he dared not tell Ione—that the end was near; she would soon be alone in this pitiless world. "Oh, my darling!" Barbara had moaned, "what shall we do now? I dare not look the future in the face. The money we have laid by will soon be run through with."

"Do not fear, dear," cried beautifully, brave Ione. "We shall not starve. I can take your place in the mill."

At first, Barbara demurred; but there was no help for it. Ione must be bread-winner now by force of necessity; but ah, how Barbara dreaded it. Her darling knew so little of the great hard work of men and women! How would it end?

On this eventful morning on which our story opens, Barbara had kissed her darling good-bye with a wistful sigh, asking, anxiously:

"Are you sure you can find the way to the mill, darling?"

Ione threw back the brown head running over with curls, and looked at her, a gay, rollicking laugh that sounded like the chiming of silver bells rippling over the cherry-red lips.

"Don't be a goose, Barbara," she cried. "Why shouldn't I find my way? One would think, to hear you talk, that I was a child of seven, instead of a young lady of seventeen."

With a kiss and a bear-like hug, Ione darted away before her sister had time to reply, and Barbara remembered afterward she had watched the girl till she was out of sight.

More than one pair of eyes turned to gaze admiringly after the slim, girlish figure, but Ione Lawrence paid no heed.

Turning hurriedly off Broadway, and crossing Canal street, she paused at length before a large brick structure which bore above the broad entrance door the sign:

ROCHESTER & LELAND.
NOTTINGHAM LACE MILLS.

"This is the place," murmured Ione, her heart at a flutter as she nervously ascended the steps that led to the office. "Oh, they will, they must, take me in Barbara's place when I tell them she has fallen ill, and that I—"

The sentence never was finished. All in an instant Ione was conscious of a swift, dizzy sensation; the earth and sky seemed to meet, and then—

"I hope you are not hurt," said a deep, husky voice. "Those uncovered steps are treacherous. I am so fortunate as to have saved you from an ugly fall."

Ione struggled out of a pair of masculine arms, and, raising her bewildered eyes, saw a tall, fair-haired gentleman standing before her. He was a gentleman friend had but a moment since alighted from a sleigh that had dashed up to the pavement. "I sincerely trust you are not hurt," he repeated, looking earnestly at the lovely young face flushing and paling in evident embarrassment, as she murmured she was "not hurt, only stunned."

"You can go into the office through the private door, if you like. These steps are actually dangerous. They are actually dangerous."

He could not account for the impulse that led him to add:

"Allow me to introduce myself, and to apologize for the condition of them."

He drew a card from his card case, and handing it to her, Ione read the name—"Arthur Rochester."

"Are you, sir, one of the owners of the mill?" asked Ione, with timid eagerness.

"The son of the senior member of the firm," he replied.

Then her eyes involuntarily traveled toward his companion; and she saw a face that left its memory on her heart while her life lasted—a dark, handsome face that usually won women's hearts at the first glance; a pair of dark, laughing eyes that met her own, and seemed to hold her spell-bound by their magic power.

Poor, beautiful Ione! She might have led a happy enough life if her path had not been crossed by this handsome young man.

Although Arthur Rochester made himself known to her, he did not offer to introduce his companion, Ione noticed. On the contrary, he hurried away, when he glanced suddenly around and saw that his friend was regarding the girl with apparent admiration.

A frown came over Arthur Rochester's fine face, and, raising his hand, he hurried his companion quickly away.

But not before the darkly splendid eyes had flashed another glance full of unbounded admiration into the lovely, girlish face; for Frank Lyons, his college chum, from Philadelphia, he hurriedly introduced her to.

"And you are?"

"Ione Lawrence," she replied, answering the question with a flush covering her shy, sweet face.

"Do allow me to insist upon taking you home, Miss Lawrence," he pleaded. "You can see for yourself you will never be able to make your way home on foot; you would meet the fate of poor Gretchen; you would be found frozen stiff and cold in death in the snow drifts to-morrow morning."

Ione was a little delighted, a little bewildered and just a little frightened. If she could have foreseen the future, she would have turned from him and fled ere the first steps were taken in so bitter a tragedy were taken.

With girlish, bashful hesitancy, she allowed herself to be persuaded and placed in the sleigh.

He took up the reins, and the handsome horse fairly flew over the frozen snow drifts.

CHAPTER II.

Ione Lawrence never forgot that sleigh ride; it was destined to live in her memory for many a long year afterward.

Frank Lyons was a clever man, quick of comprehension; he had the great gift of understanding character, and of adapting himself to the peculiarities of many a man was thrown. He misused the gift terribly, even fatally; but he had it, and used it like a charm.

Although he had exchanged but a few indifferent words with Ione, he understood her perfectly.

He talked with her of the books she had read, as the sleigh dashed on over the frozen drifts; he quoted sweet, poetic lines from the poets; he cited the beautiful love story of Romeo and Juliet as the sweetest he had ever heard, and complimented her by remarking, she was strangely like the picture of sweet Juliet which hung in the Art Academy, adding that he intended to purchase the picture, that the face he admired so sincerely might be ever before him.

It was pleasant to sit there and hear such kind words; it was pleasant to read the admiration so clearly revealed in those dark eyes. It was very romantic, too, to think that he thought her so like Juliet.

Although he did not say it in words, Ione was too clever for that—he made Ione understand that the brightness of life had just begun for him that morning; for, like Romeo, he had seen for the first time a fair face which he should never forget.

Listening to him, Ione believed him to be the brightest, kindest, truest man upon earth.

She was very young and inexperienced, or a pair of dark eyes, a dark, curling hair, and a mustache, a voice, could not have charmed her so.

The drive home had been of scarcely twenty minutes duration, but it seemed to Ione she had lived long of work, and he found, to his dismay, that she had been already sent away.

A strange regret that he could scarcely have defined thrilled in the young man's heart. The result was, however, an office boy was hurriedly despatched to overtake the slim figure hurrying down the street, almost lost to sight by the blinding storm, and Ione was recalled, and given her sister's place in the mill.

All that day thoughts of pretty Ione filled two different masculine hearts. Arthur Rochester, who had been hastily summoned from the city by a telegram, thought of Ione as the train whirled him on his journey. His friend, Frank Lyons, had thought of nothing else.

"Confound it!" he muttered, reaching for his sealskin overcoat, and throwing it on somewhat hastily, "what is coming over me, I wonder. I have seen a pretty, girlish face, and I cannot forget it. There's but one way to cure myself of this mad fancy, and that is to see the same face again;" and he laughed a little, hard, cynical laugh. "I ought not to give one thought to the pretty little gypsy; the fates have forbidden it, that's certain."

All day long the storm had raged on, and night, dark as Hades, had set in early.

At length six o'clock sounded shrilly from the clocks and adjoining bell-towers, and a few moments later throngs of nimble-footed ladies came from the broad entrance door of the Nottingham Mills to battle with the storm and the darkness as they made their way to the elevated roads and street cars, anxious to go to their homes.

Ione could not afford the expensive luxury of riding, so she made her way alone on foot. The night was growing colder and colder; the very breath seemed to freeze on her lips, and the snow had fallen to such great depths, and beneath the street was covered with such a glaze of ice, that making one's way was almost impossible.

Suddenly she heard the sound of sleigh bells, and a few moments later a sleigh dashed up the street; and when it was abreast of Ione, to her surprise it stopped short. How was she to know that its occupant had purposely followed her from the mill?

Glancing up, she saw by the yellow gleam of the street lamp, the dark, handsome face of the stranger whom she had met that morning with Mr. Rochester.

"If you are going my way," he called out, pleasantly, as he raised his hat to her. "won't you let me persuade you to ride? Walking is among the impossibilities. I hope you recognize me; I am your employer's friend."

He had sprung from the sleigh, and was standing, hat in hand, before her, knee deep in the drifting snow.

"I almost envied my friend being of assistance to you this morning," he went on, laughing. "Fate is kind in placing me in that position now. He best knows why. Let me introduce myself; I am Frank Lyons, his college chum, from Philadelphia."

"And you are?"

"Ione Lawrence," she replied, answering the question with a flush covering her shy, sweet face.

"Do allow me to insist upon taking you home, Miss Lawrence," he pleaded. "You can see for yourself you will never be able to make your way home on foot; you would meet the fate of poor Gretchen; you would be found frozen stiff and cold in death in the snow drifts to-morrow morning."

The heart of the little heiress, who loved Arthur Rochester with a mad, passionate love, was fired with bitter jealousy at once, and she made up her mind that this lovely working-girl should never see him, if she could prevent it.

Housekeeper's Backache.

Many women lift and strain, over-work and over-tax their strength. Their back gives out. Their kidneys become affected. They have a painful or sore feeling in the small of the back that takes all the life and ambition out of them. They feel dull, depressed, lifeless.

Listen! The hard work you've been doing has thrown extra work on the kidneys. They cry out in protest through the aching back.

You feel wretched all over because the kidneys are not working right and poison is circulating in your system. The kidneys must have help—better give them the benefit of the best Kidney Medicine made—Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets—the prescription of a kidney specialist—the result of years of study of kidney diseases.

PAIN PREVENTED SLEEP.

Mrs. N. Layton, Amherst, Ont., writes as follows: "I have used Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. They are beyond question the best kidney remedy I have ever used. I had lameness and an acute pain between the shoulders. I could not sleep nights. I had more or less headache. Often I suffered from indigestion caused by acid in my system. These troubles departed after I had used Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets, my kidneys were strengthened and I rested better nights. I think these Tablets the most effective kidney remedy I have ever seen. I know that they surpass every other that I have tried heretofore, and I do not hesitate in recommending them."

Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are 50c. a Box, at all druggists or by mail, from Dr. J. C. Pitcher, Co., Toronto, Ont.
