had not seen each other for twelve years; he was "homecoming," and I had some to receive my acquaintance. He had recently built a neat log house, and had just moved into it when I came to visit him. It was somewhat nearer the main trail than his old settler "hack," and to this I largely owe the preservation of my life, as my story will show.

The immediate neighborhood was sparsely settled; the nearest house was a mile away. To the westward, north and east stretched the wide open prairie; not a house for miles or any other kind of shelter, save a few poplar bluffs. Right in front of the house was the bed of an ancient lake, the sloping banks of which were covered with stunted trees and water willows. The main trail ran north and south on the high ground on the other side of this lake bed, at a little distance from the house, but at this time of the year was little used.

Mr. friend R— had been busy for some weeks building a bank stable in which to winter a number of cattle for a neighboring rancher. As the first snow had fallen and covered the ground to the depth of six inches, all outdoor feeding was suspended, and R— was expecting the cattle every day.

One morning just after breakfast R— said he thought he had better go over to the ranch and see when the cattle would be brought over. The air was fairly clear but it was blowing a blizzard, and the sky had a threatening blizzardy look; so when he started he said: "If it comes on to blow I shall not come back, so if I am not here before dark, don't wait for me." I told him I guessed I could make out all right, and would look after the animals in case he did not return.

Early in the afternoon I thought I would walk over to the post office for the mail; the wind had increased somewhat, and the snow was drifting, but not so bad that I could see the way. So putting on my cap and overcoat I went into the storm. When I reached the main trail I was surprised at the depth of snow on it, in places it was quite knee-deep, and walking was difficult; but as the wind was in my back, I plodded along fairly well and after a time reached the post office.

It was my intention to get the mail and return at once. But the post master was at home, and the room comfortable, and conversation interesting, and it was not until I noticed the fading light that I became aware of the flight of time. I rose to depart, but the good man and his wife urged me to stay and take supper with them, promising me that they would let me go as soon afterwards as I wished.

After a little hesitation I decided to stay, feeling assured I could find my way back to the house, as it was only two miles on a straight trail.
By the time supper was over it was dark, and with the going down of the sun the wind had risen much higher, and was blowing a hurricane. The air was full of fine powdery snow, rendering it exceedingly dangerous to be abroad. My friends at the post office advised me to stay all night rather than risk myself in the increasing storm, but I thought it advisable to attempt the journey, as I knew if R— came home and found I was not there he did not return the cattle needed feeding. I however asked them to put a light in the window, so that if I failed to find the trail I might be guided back to safety.

Bidding them good night, I passed through the carrol on, to the main trail without much difficulty. But I now found it would require all my powers to keep on it. I had to go northwards in the very teeth of the storm, and all appearance of the trail was obliterated by the drifting snow. The only means I had of knowing if I was on it was by the hard feeling under my feet. For the first quarter of a mile the trail ran close by a wire fence, and I anxiously watched for the fence posts as I walked along, to assure myself I was on the right track. Soon I came to the end of the fence, then my course lay straight across the open prairie, without anything to mark my way.

Darker and darker grew the night. Fiercer and fiercer came the gusts of wind, and deeper and deeper became the snow. On and on I plodded, stumbling through the drifts and ever and anon peering through the darkness for a sight of the house. Progress was slow. I had frequently to stop and turn my back to the storm to regain my breath. Soon I became anxious lest I should pass the house and not see it, especially as I had been walking long enough, as I thought, to reach the place. But I could not see anything. All around me was wrapped in dense, dark, blinding mist of night and snow.

Suddenly I plunged into "deeper snow than usual, and I knew at once I was off the trail. I endeavored to find it, but in vain. Every step I took was in deep snow. For a moment I felt all the terrors of the situation. Here was I alone on the prairie, for aught I knew far from human habitation or place of shelter—lost in a blinding blizzard, with the storm and darkness of night increasing every moment. For a moment my brain reeled. All the stories I had read of heard of persons lost in a blizzard dashed through my mind. Then I stopped, calmed myself, and considered what to do. To stay there meant death; the only alternative then was to struggle to some place of shelter. But where should I go? If I went before the wind I knew I should go out on the great desolate prairie, without a tree, or house for miles. It was equally useless to continue my journey; I could not find the trail, if I resolved to return to the post office if only I could find the way. So I struck out, heading to the west and keeping the wind on my right shoulder, hoping by so doing I should reach the fence I had passed, and then use it as a guide to shelter. On I went for some time, plunging through the deep snow, but it was hard work, and I was getting cold. I could feel the numbing sensation creeping over me, and it was all I could do to keep my ears, nose and fingers from freezing. I was becoming exhausted, and more than once felt like lying down in the snow. It was with a groaning feeling of satisfaction that I thought how good it would be to lie down and in a few minutes be at rest. I had no desire to live. It was too great a struggle, beside the attempt to reach shelter might be useless, even if I walked all night. I tumbled and fell and lay for a moment in the shelter of a drift, with a deep sense of relief, as though my struggles were over at last. Then I thought to-morrow search would be made for me, and my body would be found frozen stiff, or perhaps it would be under the snow until spring. I thought of home and dear ones there, and wondered if they would grieve over my being lost in a blizzard. I resolved to make one more effort for life, and rose to my feet and looked into the night. Then comes a full inheard or read about them, and fancy you know just what a blizzard is. But unless you have seen one, you can only have a faint idea of the fearful storm that in winter sweep over the great prairie country. The air is filled with fine particles of ice—fine as powdered dust; driven with the wind, whirling and swirling in great clouds, setting and striking the face and hands like sharp needles; filling the nostrils so that breathing is difficult, and blind, and the stars are everywhere, and it is almost impossible to see, and added to this is the intense cold which freezes and numbs every faculty of the mind, brain and soul. Woe be to the unfortunate traveler who is lost in a blizzard, either he must struggle to the nearest shelter or perish by the wayside. It is a case of life or death, and many are the thrilling tales told of narrow escapes from the fury of the storm. In the fall of '97 I had an experience in a blizzard which I shall not forget very quickly. I was on a visit to a bachelor friend of mine in Eastern Assinibois. We had been boys together in the old country, and which links New England and the maritime provinces of the Dominion together by a Pullman car service, and the fastest twin screw passenger fleet in the whole of North America. W. R. Campbell was born in Edinburgh on September 25, 1849. He was educated in Edinburgh, went through his apprenticeship in the North British Railway, joined the Brecon and Merthyr Railway, and then at the early age of 21, took up what proved to be his life work in connection with the Dominion Atlantic Railway and its kindred institutions, with which he was connected for 23 years. A man of exquisite taste, a passionate lover of music, a railway lawyer, who won one of the most difficult cases ever presented to the Privy Council, he was the esteemed friend of many American and Canadian statesmen, and was as well known in London as in Canada. He was in some degree the cause of a friendly reciprocity between the United States and Canada. He originated that vast stream of tourist business which now turns like a tide every summer from the Eastern States to the maritime provinces, and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick owe to him much of their present development and prosperity.

The Late W. R. Campbell.
The Times, Daily News, Standard, and all the leading London papers write in paying tribute to the late W. R. Campbell. The following interesting sketch is from the Daily News:
There was interred in Highgate Cemetery, London, on Tuesday afternoon, January 19, the remains of W. R. Campbell, the general manager of the Dominion Atlantic Railway, who died on Sunday at the early age of 49. He was one of the brilliantly clever young men educated by the North British Railway over 30 years ago, when it was not the system of today. That band of young men included the Hon. David Hunter, general manager of the South African Government Railways, and his brother James Hunter, the assistant general manager of the same property; James Thallow, the manager of the Queensland Government Railways, and now a Commissioner of Railways in Australia; more notable still, David McNeill, the passenger traffic superintendent of the vast Canadian Pacific system; and lastly, W. R. Campbell, who, from being secretary of a small line in the fruit growing districts of Nova Scotia, became general manager of the well-known Dominion Atlantic system of Canada.

Plain Talks With Business Men.
If your business is not God's business, whose is it? It would be well to take a moral inventory in cases there is a wide difference between your ways and God's ways. This should be done at the close of business every day, and with just as much care accuracy as you exercise in balancing your cash account. But if your business is not God's business, and "God is in all your thoughts," then it follows that you are not even in business for yourself, although self and selfishness are stamped on all your business transactions. There is another in business with you, a silent partner, who is running our business. Of course if God has no rights in the management of your business, neither has your fellow man any rights that you are bound to respect. And the history of such men who "fear not God nor regard man" in business, is written in the records of criminal courts, and in the suicides and broken hearts that flow in the wake of unrighteous business methods. The unrighteous business man may succeed apparently for the time being, but the crash always comes sooner or later, and generally sooner than he expects. "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants are ye to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Rom. 6: 16. Whose servants are you?
Smith and Jones were talking one day about their business interests. Smith was a hotel man, and Jones was a manufacturer's agent.
"I say," said Jones, "however do you use such an enormous quantity of pears and peaches?"
"Well," replied Smith, "we eat what we can, and what we can't we can."
"Indeed!" said the other. "We do about the same in our business."
"How is that?"
"We sell an order when we can sell it, and when we can't sell it we cancel it."
"Minards Liment for sale everywhere."
Mrs. Williams—I heard you tell Mr. Elliot to come around at lunch time down down to-morrow and you would have a hot Scotch. What is a hot Scotch, dear?
"Cooked oatmeal, my dear."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., FEB. 3, 1899.

Editorial Notes.

The Board of Trade meeting in Temperance Hall this evening should have a full attendance. Any who wish to become members can do so at this meeting. Every patriotic citizen should be a member.

Work is moving in the direction of the organization of a Board of Trade. A meeting was held on Friday evening last and a committee, consisting of Coun. Anthony, Messrs. A. S. Magee, H. E. Mosher, H. E. Johnson and W. V. Brown, was appointed to take necessary steps to provide for the next organization and to report at a subsequent meeting to be held on tomorrow evening. This is right.

Tuesday was the last day for filing nominations for mayor and councillors. The nomination of Mayor Thomése was the only one placed in for that office, and he was declared elected by acclamation. For councillors the following were nominated to fill the three vacancies: Dr. DeWitt, Messrs. J. K. Franklin, Wm. Chipman, J. E. Tingley and E. L. Collins. As will be seen by a card elsewhere, Capt. Tingley is asking the voters not to vote for him as he does not wish the position.

As far as we have been able to learn the condition of things at Kentville remains unchanged. The citizens appear to be determined to stop the sale of intoxicating liquors in their town and thus remove the stigma they have been compelled to bear for so many years. The cry that such an action will ruin the trade of the town has no foundation in fact. Kentville will be better, her people happier and more prosperous for the uprooting of the traffic. Strength to their arms, say we—and the people of the County generally will say "amen."

The people of Kings county will watch with considerable interest the proceedings of the session of the provincial legislature which began its labors yesterday at Halifax. At this session it was promised that the location of the seat of agriculture was to be fixed upon by the full house, and although it has been hinted that this matter has already been decided, there are those who still have faith that the government will keep its promise in this regard. Another matter in which our people are interested is the Court House question. It will be remembered that last winter the county council took steps to remove the site of the county building to this town. We have read the report of the last session of the council in hope of seeing that some action was taken in the matter, but that has not been done. However, we presume the "powers that be" have not lost sight of the "matter at hand."

"The Last Leaf."

Temperance Hall was comfortably filled on Monday evening, and the entertainment given was of a high order and much enjoyed. "The Last Leaf" is an old and popular drama, and was rendered in a most creditable manner. The attention of the audience was held throughout, and the skill with which every part was performed drew forth the praise of all present. Where every part was done so well it may be unfair to particularize, but Miss A. J. Marchant, as Fathy Jones, and Mr. J. E. McGowan, as Cady Bostom, certainly exhibited an unusual amount of dramatic skill for amateurs, while Mr. J. E. McGowan, as Kate Ashton, and Miss H. E. Colburn, as Lily Ashton, and in fact all the parts—were exceedingly well rendered. Instrumental music was rendered during the intermission by Mr. Fred and Miss Gertrude Beckwith, on the violin and organ, and was much enjoyed. Mr. Ford, who was expected to furnish the violin music, was prevented by a sudden illness from appearing. One of the most pleasing features of the programme was the reading of Miss Avois Dickey, which was exceedingly well given and received an ovation. The quartettes by Messrs Chisholm, Burlidge, N. Eaton, and C. Eaton were most enjoyable and received hearty applause. The program closed with the presentation of two farces, entitled "Wanted—A Male Cook" and "The Persistent Book Agent." Both were well given and exceedingly humorous, the last in particular, the audience being convulsed with laughter. Taken all through the entertainment was a most successful one and reflected the greatest credit on all who took part. The audience, composed of Wolfville's best people, were loud in their praise of the manner in which they were entertained, and will look forward to the next entertainment given by Wolfville Division.

Acadia Seminary Recital.

The second of the course of recitals being given by the pupils and teachers of Acadia Seminary was held according to announcement on Friday evening last in College Hall. There was a good attendance considering the bad state of the streets. The programme consisted of piano solos and duets, a reading by Miss Emerson, and a well performed "scene" by two young ladies. The whole was most enjoyable and reflected the greatest credit on pupils and instructors.

The Rev. Mr. Caldwell, of Boston, and his wife have been joined in a position for a few months in the office in any public park or pleasure ground in the state of Massachusetts.

Agricultural Education.

ANOTHER PLEA ON BEHALF OF KINGS COUNTY.

"The state has no material resources at all comparable with its citizens, and no hope of prosperity, except in the intelligence and integrity of its people."

SIR—There was just a thought or two in agricultural school which, for want of time, I omitted from my first letter, and which, with your kind permission, I would like to present now.

Our friends in Colchester county and those throughout the province who are taking an interest in this discussion must not think that Kings county wishes in any way to impair the efficiency of the Normal school, when its farmers advocate the amalgamation of the agricultural and horticultural institutions and their establishment in this county. Few counties, if any, outside of Colchester send more students to the Normal school than does Kings. The value of science instruction at the Normal school is fully appreciated, and it would not be the wish of any one who has given thought to this question to withdraw the subject from the course of study. But I have it from those most directly interested in the Normal school work that what would be desirable at present, and all that would be necessary to complete the efficiency of that school, would be a teacher of science and an enlargement of their laboratory.

During the last six months I have had the privilege of conversing with many of the most prominent educationists in Halifax and through the province, men whose life work has been spent with our common, academic and collegiate schools, also with several principals of large county academies in different parts of the province, men for whose judgement I am sure our government would have the greatest respect, and the opinion which they have expressed most emphatically is that "The Normal school should have a teacher in science, and the place for the agricultural college is in Kings county." They say that to have the school of agriculture connected with the Normal school "SOUNDS WELL BUT THERE IS NOTHING IN IT."

They say that the best educationist all over the continent agree that such an institution as an agricultural college should have no connection whatever with a Normal school.

Prof. Smith, in his closing remarks at the agricultural meeting at Truro a few days ago, very truly said: "To make the Normal and agricultural schools the best possible should be the desire of every patriotic Nova Scotian." How can this be done? No one can appreciate more fully than Prof. Smith and the instructors at the Normal school this fact, that the Normal school can never be made "the best possible" when the science work has to be taken by the pupils a mile or more away from their institution and in a manner peculiar to an agricultural college. I know that the teachers of the Normal school have felt so strongly about the many disadvantages connected with this, that they deemed it almost providential when the agricultural building was burned, in order that the new college might be placed on the Normal school grounds. But it seems from the report of the meeting at Truro, that our Colchester friends would like to rebuild the college on the old site at Bible Hill. If this should be done the very inconveniences and inconveniences of the past are to be perpetuated indefinitely and the NORMAL SCHOOL WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO DO ITS BEST WORK.

How infinitely more helpful could Prof. Smith be to the Normal school if he were in a position, unimpeded by the more purely agricultural work, to take up, at a suitable laboratory and classroom in close proximity to the Normal school, just those branches in science, and no more, which the Normal school students require. This granted, to put this institution in the best shape for work, Colchester people will be well-fitted for the efficiency of the Normal school has been appreciably their great concern.

Now let us turn to the other question—how can the college of agriculture (including horticulture, of course) be "made the best possible"? Certainly not by having its work divided, a part in one county and a part in another, as it has been during the last few years and will be again if this institution is rebuilt at Truro. We will never have an institution worthy of our splendid province in this way. When our agricultural resources and exports are yearly increasing, are the institutions which should foster and develop these resources to stand still and be ever open to unfavorable criticism for the amount of work they are doing commensurate with their expenses?

It was shown in a previous letter that Nova Scotia has population and resources as compared with States in the Union, to support a good agricultural college and farm, one that would command the universal confidence and support of the people. Never was there a time when agricultural education was more needed, never a time when farmers and farmer's sons had a greater thirst for it. Obstacles and perplexities are in creating that can only be removed or solved by scientific information. A degree from such an institution, that will be on par with that of an Art, Law or Medical college, is necessary. An opportunity is now offered the government to do the province a great service. Will the government improve this opportunity? We believe it will. These two schools must be combined to "make the best possible" institution, and located in the very best place in the province, the

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 2nd, '99.

TO THE OZONE COMPANY.

DEAR SIRS,—I have used your OZONE for myself and family for severe attacks of Grippe, and find it an excellent remedy. It removes the cause of the disease—and the disease itself.

I would recommend it to all who suffer from this troublesome and dangerous disease.

C. P. McLENNAN.

Mr. McLennan is the well known business agent for the North American Life Insurance Company.

When first attacked with Grippe, which is generally indicated by head and backache, and often by chills and fever, take a tablespoonful of OZONE in the same amount of water, every hour, until eight to ten doses have been taken, which will break up the disease. After that three to four tablespoonfuls should be taken a day until well and strong.

Hundreds are being cured. Get it at once. For sale at Rand's Drug Store, Wolfville; Borden & Co., and H. O. Martin & Co., Canning.

Not because of any special soil qualifications or climate influences but where the available resources have reached the highest degree of development.

IN UNION THERE WILL BE STRENGTH. Colchester should be glad to have this institution placed where all the conditions will render it most efficient. There are no direct or special financial advantages to any county in possessing such an institution, the profits will come from the amount of knowledge and inspiration absorbed by the farmers' sons, and to some extent by the farmers themselves, as they visit the school and its surroundings, and these profits will be accessible to any county in direct proportion to the college efficiency and the disposition of a county to avail itself of the privileges afforded. Now, if there is a county in the province having conditions and resources which can be duplicated in a large number of other counties, and where the men have applied their brains and muscles and developed what the Creator has given them until the agricultural status is far and away ahead of any other county, and if this county is not Colchester, then her students, along with those of the rest of the province, are going to derive corresponding advantage from their contact with the environment of such a county, and Colchester will be profited in exact proportion to the number of young men she sends forward to it.

There is such a county in the province—one that has shown by her common schools, academies and university her thorough appreciation for educational matters. A county with every variety of soil that any other county has, and a climate that will allow of any fruit or vegetable that any other county can grow. Not an Eden where, as some people argue, things grow spontaneously, but where THEY HAVE BEEN MADE TO GROW BY THE ENERGY AND INTELLIGENCE OF ITS CITIZENS.

There is one county in the province that has developed its resources until it will export as many potatoes and as many apples as all the other counties in the province put together, can show some of the finest barns of dairy and fat cattle, can equal any county and excel most counties in her grain and hay products, acre for acre, has five or six up to date creameries, has a canning factory and anticipates another starting next spring equal to any in the maritime provinces; and when the government of this province rightly encourages by a perfect gift the annual agricultural and industrial exhibitions, such an institution as is admitted the world over to be one of the greatest factors for fostering all the various pursuits of the country, there is one county, as was shown by the last exhibition, that can earn within three as many prizes as the four next best counties together. It so happens too that this very county has a valuable horticultural school. This institution has identified itself so closely with fruit interests of our province that the fruit men will never let it fall or be removed. Its director acts as a splendid referee for the fruit growers who are constantly writing him for information, and it would be difficult to estimate the value of his practical lectures and lessons in spraying through the province during vacation. Seven graduates of last year are now farming and there are in attendance at present,

THIRTY WHO EXPECT TO BECOME FARMERS.

This speaks well for so young an institution. I happened to visit the school when in class a few weeks ago and found there some of the largest and most up to date fruit groves of the surrounding country. I could not but wish, while there that every farmer in the province could avail himself of the practical and scientific discussion that was going on. One of the pupils present, a man who probably grew the second largest lot of plums in our province last year, remarked as I was leaving that these classes were better than a continuous Fruit Growers' Association.

Is there any question then as to the county where the government should start the new order of things? What an opportunity is here given to grant the province one of the greatest boons it has ever had. Agriculture is only in its infancy.

On it depends the future of our province. Our industries await development, development requires education, and "to make the agricultural college the best possible" there is ONLY ONE PLACE FOR ITS ESTABLISHMENT. We cannot credit the rumors which have been mentioned in the press that the executive of our government have decided to rebuild the agricultural school at Truro. The executive, we understand, is under pledge to bring this question before the whole house in a way that all the members will be free to discuss and decide it. We do not believe either that "political expediency" is to decide this question, that because Kings is so strongly Liberal and Colchester so doubtful that the interests of farmers in Nova Scotia are to be sacrificed in order that Colchester may be caudled. This question will have the fair consideration of our legislature and "patriotic Nova Scotians," we hope, will see in the near future an agricultural college worthy of their fair province.

Yours respectfully, RALPH S. EAVON, Kentville, N. S., Jan. 23rd, 1899.

Parable—The Committee and the Seasons.

Once on a time there was a prosperous and thriving little town named Somewhere. Being up-to-date, it had a Heat Committee. Under the excellent management of this committee, the public health was well cared for and the people were happy.

One summer a new Heat Committee were elected. Being wise gentlemen and anxious for the welfare of the people, they cast about for something to do to better the public health. Observing that a few foolish persons in the hottest part of the summer, persisted in wearing thick overcoats, in their own discomfort and the annoyance of others, the committee made a regulation that overcoats should be worn only in winter, and that the people were not to be worn. The foolish persons grew better in health, the town swarmed the better for the regulation, and all the people praised the wisdom of the Heat Committee.

But winter came. A few thoughtless persons, forgetting the law and always having been accustomed to wearing thick clothing in winter, appeared out in winter costumes. These were summarily arrested, and dealt with with such severity by the committee that the townsfolk, taking warning, obeyed the law with fear and trembling.

But the law did not lessen the severity of the season and the unhappy people began to feel its effects. The more sturdy managed to stand, but the weaker fell. At last, in the general discontent, the people began to murmur and to hint that they were masters of the situation, got the committee. The committee took the hint, and being wise gentlemen as I said before, repealed the late law and passed another, that all citizens should wear overcoats in winter, if not for their own sakes, at least that they might not injure others by their bad example.

Moral? It is undesirable in summer may be most desirable in winter.

Fruit Growers and Flower lovers should send a post card to Canadian Horticultural, Gimley, for a free sample of the beautiful Gimley number of that journal, which begins a new series enlarged and improved. It contains articles from the best authorities on fruit and flower growing, with numerous half-tone illustrations. This is its 22nd year, and its circulation is now 5000 copies per month. It has become the leading authority on fruit growing for the province.

The Penny Magazine, New York, which is the lowest-priced magazine in America (20 cents a year), and which is owned by Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, the eminent American orator, wants a representative in this vicinity. It is a good opportunity for one of our ambitious young men or young women. Applications should be addressed to the SUBSCRIPTION DEPARTMENT, The Penny Magazine, Temple Court, New York City.

Partial Paralysis

A SEVERE COLD BRINGS A WIFE AND MOTHER LOW.

Partial Paralysis accompanied by fainting fits follows. Doctors fail to bring relief. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restore Health.

Brookholm, a suburb of Owen Sound, is fairly vibrating with interest in the wonderful cures effected in that place by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. A newspaper man of Toronto, spending some time in the vicinity, was directed to a house on a hill overlooking Owen Sound's beautiful bay, and was told that he would learn something about a cure effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The hill was climbed and it is to Mr. F. Goodfellow, the genial owner and occupant of that pleasant home, that he is indebted for the following facts: "My wife owes her good measure of health to-day to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," said Mr. Goodfellow. "On the 12th of July, 1895, Mrs. Goodfellow went on an excursion to Collingwood by boat and came home with a severe cold, which developed into a partial or slight attack of paralysis on the left side and limb. In addition, at times she would be seized with a dizziness which often resulted in sudden and severe falls. The paralysis made her unable to lift any weight with her left hand. She called in medical aid and for some months followed the advice and took the medicines prescribed. But it was only money wasted as she did not get any better.

As Mrs. Goodfellow has three children and her husband to care for it was a deep grief to the family for her to be so afflicted. For eight months these dizzy spells and the paralysis continued. Then some friend asked her to try a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. To please the friend she consented to purchase a few boxes. When these had been taken she felt decidedly better. The fainting spells came less frequent, her strength returned to her side and arm and she was delighted with the result. After taking about six boxes, and feeling quite well again, she discontinued the use of the pills for a time, but later felt some of the old symptoms returning. She again procured a supply and recommended their use, and was everjoyed to find that these valuable little pellets again gave relief. She continued taking them until she felt that she must certainly be over the effects of the trouble when she again ceased to take the pills. That is over a year and a half ago, and only once or twice since has she had any slight symptoms of the old trouble, and then a few doses of the pills would give full relief. Mr. Goodfellow is decidedly of the opinion that the cure her present health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and is most enthusiastic in his recommendation of them to her friends and acquaintances."

Vegetable History.

The eggplant is a native of Asia, Africa and Southern America. Mushrooms are native to all temperate countries in short grass. Garlic came from Asia, and has been used since the earliest times. It formed part of the diet of the Israelites in Egypt, where a drink is prepared from them when they are ripe.

Brussels sprouts came from Belgium; they are native to the southeast coast of Europe; they came from South Europe; it was brought to China and Tartary. The arrowroot is from South America. Potatoes are native to Peru, and the Spaniards discovered them. From Spain they passed into Italy and Belgium.

The cabbage and lettuce grew wild in Greece where they originated. Radishes were native to China, but have grown in Europe for centuries. The cauliflower came from Cyprus.

The Electric Forge. One of the astonishing things developed through the introduction of electricity into everyday affairs is a forge made for bench use for the heating of soldering irons or light pieces of metal for working on the anvil, where the heating is accomplished by plunging the article to be heated into a tray of water. Nothing could be imagined more contradictory of one's preconceived ideas than this procedure, and yet to the electrician it is perfectly simple.

He makes the proper connections, plunges his iron into the water and presently the iron will begin to glow under water and then to turn red of white heat, just as he desires it for working. When he gets through working the iron, he may plunge it into the water again and cool it with a "dip" as expertly as he could in any other tank of water.

A Womanly Woman. The highest ambition of a thoroughly womanly woman when she becomes a wife will be to make her home so homelike and attractive to her husband that he will find his greatest happiness there. You will never hear her complain of this as being a narrow sphere for a woman's life and energies, for she is wise enough to know it is anything but an easy task she has undertaken, and also that the pleasures for good of such a home are not at all shared within the four walls that form its visible limits, but effect in some degree all who enter it, and that they will extend onward to generations.—Exchange

Father O'Leary, a well known Roman Catholic priest and wit, was on very friendly terms with his neighbor, the Church of England vicar. They met on the road one day, when the vicar said excitedly, 'Oh, Father O'Leary, have you heard the awful news?' 'No, said the priest, "what is it, at all?"

'Something awful,' says the vicar. 'The bottom has fallen out of purgatory, and all the Catholics have tumbled into hell!'

'Oh, dear, oh, dear,' says Father O'Leary, 'what a crushing the poor Protestants must have got!'

Priceless Stones.
All precious stones are purified by a bath in honey, according to an old idea. Many curious notions are current in regard to gems.

It is said that the agate quenches thirst, and, if put into the mouth, always fever. Amber is a cure for sore throat and glandular swellings.

Cat's eye is a charm against witchcraft, Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field. Diamonds produce somnambulism and spiritual ecstasy.

Emeralds, friendship and constancy. Garnets preserve health and joy.

The opyx is apt to cause terror to the wearer, as well as ugly dreams. Opals are fatal to love and bring discord to giver and receiver.

Sapphires impel the wearer to all good works. The topaz is said to be a preventive to lung troubles, and imparts strength.

Don't. Don't forget that the darkest hour is only sixty minutes long. Don't set the fool. There are too many people doing that naturally. Don't sacrifice the certainties of to-morrow.

Don't be afraid to speak out loud. The world is too busy to listen to whisperers.—Exchange

Sinning Against Children.
It does not require that we willfully crowd in order to sin against our children. The foolish petting and pampering of pride, and gratifying of every selfish whim may be as mischievous as harsh brutality. No worse sin can be committed against than to let pride always have its own way. Pride will grow fast enough in that daughter's heart without your adding fuel to the flame with extravagant flatteries and silly adulation. It is a curious fact that praise bestowed on noble conduct, has a strengthening and strengthening influence; but praise lavished on mere externals—like physical beauty or fine dress—is only apt to inflame selfishness.

Many a father studies his account-books and many a mother studies her magazines or her receipt-books, or her visiting lists more than they study the peculiarities of their own children. That boy is scolded into silliness; that other one is ridiculed till he gets desperate; harsh treatment often hardens the heart and then parental Pharisaeism prays that God will soften it. . . .

There is no trust in this world more tremendous than the trust of parents; and none which many persons seem to treat more lightly. Food, clothing, shelter and schooling they provide; but they utterly ignore the fact that the Creator has entrusted to them the most susceptible and receptive creature on earth when He commits to their charge a young immortal. A parent stamps character—and shapes destiny for this world—and for the next. He re-erectures you may see stone slabs which show the print of birds' feet, or of leaves which were made in the stone when it was once only a liquid planet. In the same manner are on the finger-marks and foot-prints of parental influence upon the character of children when grown to manhood and womanhood.

Children are imitative creatures; and we all know how tendencies to good or evil character grow from parental influence, and the chief element in moral heredity is the force of example.

—Rev Theodore L. Oyler.

From "Frances E. Willard's Crusade Experience."

At a signal from our gray-haired leader, a sweet-voiced woman began to sing, "Jesus the water of life will give," all our voices soon blending for this world-wide feast. It was the most novel spectacle that I recall. There stood women of undoubted religious devotion and the highest character, most of them crowned with the glory of gray hairs. Along the front of the hall the stoutest of cities rumbled the heavy wagons, many of them carriers of beer; against us and the saloon, in front of which we were drawn up in line, passed the merry throng, and all our eyes were lifted his hat, and even the little newboys doing the same. It was American manhood's tribute to Christianity, and to womanhood, and it was significant and full of pathos. The leader had already asked the saloon-keeper if we might enter and he had declined, else the prayer-meeting would have occurred inside the door.

A sorrowful lady whose only son had gone to ruin through that very trap, hark on the cold, moist pavement and offered a broken-hearted prayer, while all our hearts were bowed. At a signal we moved on, and the next saloon-keeper permitted us to enter. I had no more idea of the inward appearance of a saloon than if there had been no such place on earth. The tall stately lady who led us, placed her Bible on the bar and read a psalm. The spirit of these crusades was so gentle. Then we sang "Rock of Ages" as I thought I had never heard it sung before with a tender confidence height of which I have done not see in any other going regulation prayer-meeting, and then one of the older women whispered to me softly that the leader wished to know if I would pray.

It was strange, perhaps, but I felt not the least reluctance, and kneeling on the awdust floor, with a group of ears at hearts around me, and behind them, filling every corner, and extending out into the street, a crowd of unweaned, wet, harkling, and kneeling, I was conscious that perhaps, never in my life, save beside my sister Mary's dying bed, I had prayed as truly as I did then. This was my crusade baptism. The next day I went on to the west, and within a week had been made president of the Chicago W. C. T. U.—The Woman's Journal.

It is not for ourselves we are placed in this world. We live for others as well as for ourselves. We live for our neighbors. We live for the generations to come after us. The individual in himself seems insignificant. Yet in truth the life of each of us is a part of the great whole. We are members of a vast family, and the interests of that family must be to us a matter of concern.—St.

Good can not exist in peace with evil; truth can not exist in peace with error. In this world it is impossible to live at peace with everything. The man who tries it will fail. Peace can only be pursued and possessed along one certain line, and that is the line of truth and righteousness. As much as in you, let him live peaceful with all men.—St.

Do Not Cough.

A physician who is connected with an institution in which there are many children is reported by the San Francisco Examiner as saying:

"There is nothing more irritable to a cough than coughing. For some time I had been so fully cured of this that I determined for one night at least to lessen the number of coughs heard in a certain ward in a hospital of the institution. By the promise of rewards and punishments I succeeded in inducing them simply to hold their breath when tempted to cough, and in a little while I was myself surprised to see how some of the children entirely recovered from the disease.

"Constant coughing is precisely like scratching a wound on the outside of the body. So long as it is done the wound will not heal. Let a person when tempted to cough draw a long breath and hold it until it warms and soothes every air cell, and some benefit will soon be received from this process. The nitrogen which is thus refined acts as an anodyne to the mucous membrane, allaying the desire to cough and giving the throat and lungs a chance to heal. At the same time a suitable medicine will aid nature in her efforts to reperate."

Mrs Waring—Why is it that you will not allow your husband to have a lady typewriter? Men are so much more expensive, you know.

Mrs Ashcroft—I recognize that fact, but I was his typewriter once myself.
