FREDERICTON, NOVEMBER 9, 1905.

CIVIC MATTERS.

When it comes to a conflict of opinion between Ald. Gilman and Ald. Everett on the one hand and Ald. Macpherson on the other, relating to the asphalt business, the DAILY HERALD and the public generally will have no hesitation in accepting that of the former gentlemen. The attempt of some of the aldermen to wiggle out of the fact, that when the assessment was ordered last spring, it was well understood that $1,400 of the amount levied for public works was for the construction of new asphalt sidewalks, is simply ludicrous. The amount was included in the roadmaster's estimate for new work, and was accepted by the Council. That has been so stated a number of times by Ald. Gilman, and he is borne out by Ald. Everett, who is head of the roads and streets department. Now the money has all been spent without a yard of new asphalt being laid, and the aldermen who have diverted the money to other channels, feel the embarrassment of their position when confronted with the indignation of citizens, who were led to expect the new work for which they were assessed.

It appears also that this economical council, elected on the cry that its predecessor was an extravagant and wasteful body, has actually had to borrow $5,000 from the bank to carry out the ordinary services of the city, and that at last night's meeting authority was given for an additional loan of $1,500.

Ald. Everett for one had the courage to stand up last night and remind the Council of its fine promises and poor performances, and the electors generally share his views. Of course very little could be expected from a majority of the men elected to the board last March. Many of them are persons without business capacity or ordinary intelligence, and never should have been brought out of obscurity to run the affairs of the city. The history of the year so far shows that the public money has been frittered away, with very little to show for it. Salaries have been increased, in several instances without apparent reason, and general neglect and incompetency have marked the reign of the present Council. The city practically has been under the domination of men like John Macpherson and Wm. Roborough, neither of whom are fit to be intrusted with such important interests as are placed in the care of the council.

It is certainly a grave reflection on the intelligence of Fredericton, that, like these, and some of their associates, should be permitted to play ducks and drakes with the civic business, and the electors when they awaken to the gravity of the situation, will certainly dispense with the services of such persons.

The question of severance, to be dealt with within the next, should be in the hands of men of greater capacity and better standing. What do the citizens of Fredericton think of entrusting the expenditure of say at least $50,000, to men of the Macpherson stamp?

AFRAID OF THEIR OWN SHADOWS.

The government organs do not mention North Ontario and West Huroon among the constituencies in which the date for the bye elections have been practically fixed, and yet both are weak. West Huroon, the constituency held by Hon. C. Patterson, now governor of Manitoba, was the first of the six seats vacated. Why not give the electors there an opportunity to pronounce on the public questions of the day. It is true the last Tory majority in that constituency was only 16, with a personally popular cabinet minister as the candidate, and the government have long since abandoned any hope of again carrying the seat. The bye elections announced in Cardwell, Missisquoi, Montreal Centre and Jacques Cartier, are all in constituencies which have returned Tories by large majorities, and hence the government propose risking their fortunes first in these. They are besides, with one exception, constituencies which might reasonably be regarded as viewing with satisfaction the government's proposed remedial legislation, and therefore the more likely to stand up for the Tory party.

The announcement of four bye elections to be held before the new session, evidently settles the question of whether or not the special session of parliament will be held. Many of the government's best friends doubted their intention to carry out the pledge they made to Caron and Olinnet on the matter when the French members took the Premier and his colleagues by the throat and compelled them under the threat of instant defeat in the house to promise a session and a remedial bill. It was thought when the government got clear of parliament, that such a counter in the midst of the rising generation. God has given us mind and memory, and we are responsible for their uses. The memories of the past should cause us to avoid its mistakes and emulate its successes. Orangemen have special reasons for remembering such events as the destruction of the Spanish Armada, when by the breath of God the enemies of liberty were discomfited; the siege of Derry in 1689, and landing of William Prince of Orange, days the memory of which should ever be kept green. Coming to the day we celebrate, November 5th, Mr. Hartley gave next the events leading up to the discovery of the famous plot, and pointed out how God's hand was manifested in the preservation of liberty and royalty.

The address Friday evening was said to be in his own, my native land. If so, he is not to be found in our ranks, or if so ought not to remain there. Then be sincere men. Guy Fawkes was sincere in his wrong doing, let us be sincere in right action. Inequality in politics and society is a great curse. Men sometimes use the order for personal aggrandizement. It ought not to be so. Let us be sincere. Mr. Hartley closed with an appeal to all present by the memories of the past, to be men of true worth, to cultivate patriotism and loyalty.

CELEBRATED AT FREDERICTON JUNCTION LAST NIGHT—AN INTERESTING ADDRESS BY REV. F. C. HARTLEY.

The Free Baptist Church at Fredericton Junction was well filled Tuesday night by Orangemen of that vicinity and their friends. The meeting was under the auspices of the Fredericton Junction Lodge, and was a celebration of Guy Fawkes' Day.

At 7 o'clock the members gathered at the lodge room and headed by County Master Parker-Nason and P. C. M. Dupluis, marched to the church.

The speaker, he took for his text Isaiah XLVI, 8, "Remember this and show yourselves men." He said the principles of the Orange order are often misrepresented and misunderstood; the public celebration of our days July 12th and November 5th is by many people frowned upon. The purpose of such celebrations is not opposition to any set or creed, but rather in the review of heroic deeds of men and the kindly province of God. Patriotism and loyalty, veneration and devotion might be instilled in the minds of the rising generation. God has given us mind and memory, and we are responsible for their uses. The memories of the past should cause us to avoid its mistakes and emulate its successes. Orangemen have special reasons for remembering such events as the destruction of the Spanish Armada, when by the breath of God the enemies of liberty were discomfited; the siege of Derry in 1689, and landing of William Prince of Orange, days the memory of which should ever be kept green. and Foster would like to suppress Tupper, and both are bidding for the shoes of the weak old Premier, who holds his position not by virtue of his ability or political weight, but simply because the choice of anybody else would send the warring factions in the cabinet into open warfare against each other.

SOME CIVIC DISCLOSURES.

Ald. Roseborough's rubber coat speculation, as exposed in our local column yesterday, emphasizes what the Herald said Wednesday in discussing civic politics. This person has been the leading spirit in the present council, and has been able to put through all his schemes until the course of events which decided whether France or England was to colonize the waste spaces of the world.

The second great division lasting from the fall of New France in 1763 to confederation, is the Period of English Dominion.

Its central feature is the struggle of the people for the right to govern themselves after the manner of Free Britons in their own land. During this struggle were firmly laid the foundations of our greatness, but what went on within the borders of our scattered provinces was little heeded by the world at large. When Responsible Government was gained it was by and by secured and enlarged by a union of the scattered provinces, and on July 1st 1867 Canada entered on the third period of Confederation.

Of this chief features so far are expected an expansion and consolidation with the growth (too long delaying) of a national sentiment. Of the name Canada itself a striking characteristic. At first it meant but a collection of lodges. At the borders of the Lord Jesus Christ, they will get to heaven. Seven, some say they are too bad. You may be within a step of perdition but if you stop and cry to Jesus for help he will save you.

Eight, I don't want to hold out. With Jesus' arms around you and both his hands around yours, cannot you trust him to carry you through?

Ninth, God is too merciful to let me be lost. Hell is prepared for the devil and his angels. The rebel story may be true, but he is an intruder.

Tenth, Time enough yet, this is Satan's strongest weapon and should be considered by us the least. Resolve from this hour to give up excuses and come to Christ.

Rev. Mr. Crossley addressed the people from his announced subject, the unparadiseable sin, blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, Matt. 23:19.

Many people have succumbed or are in the temptations of the devil, by mistake, that they have committed this sin.

A great many answers are given to it and its meaning and say that it cannot be explained. It is a state into which a person may get himself in time, in which the spiritual perception is totally gone.

There are two classes of people to be spoken of: 1st Those that are in despair, fearing they have committed this sin.

2nd Those that are in the midst of the spiritual moribundity of mind bring it on. If they had really their senses, they would not be so haunted, would not desire to be saved. Some in this class may be backsliders, who think that the sin mentioned. Satan tries to make Heb. 6 apply to them, when they should rather take Heb. 10. The present state may be yours. Again some think that their great sin has been the cause. The greatest of sinners have been saved, as Paul. A supposed lack of feeling troubles others. This very uneasiness is a sign that you are anxious.

The second class are those having no anxiety as having committed this great sin, but have really cause to be anxious.

The older we get the less we feel. The feeling of years ago cannot be regained. Some young people are even now indifferent and can speak about the matter. Don't wait for some ignorant, heard of, or past feeling. The freezing man dare not go to sleep as he will never awaken. Beware lest you sleep in indifference and never awake. Be alarmed because you are not alarmed. Start in activity because you are not active. Pray because you do not want to pray.

If delay is continued, the less likely we are to be saved. When this danger, the love of Jesus does not concern us, it is time to be alarmed.

If we are not saved and have feelings of desire to be so, thank God and accept them.

If I have none at all then become alarmed now, with the alarm come and God will receive you.

MAKING OF CANADA.

Prof. Roberts delivers an interesting address at the University Tuesday Night.

Governor Fraser presided at the University lecture Tuesday night and heard him on the platform Dr. Harrison and Dr. Inch. He introduced the lecture in felicitous terms.

The history of Canada said Prof. Roberts is divided into three parts, (1) the period of French dominion, which has for its distinguishing feature the strife between France and England for the mastery of North America. During this period the history of Canada is world wide in its meaning. Its course is the course of events which decided whether France or England was to colonize the waste spaces of the world.

The second great division lasting from the fall of New France in 1763 to confederation, is the

Its central feature is the struggle of the people for the right to govern themselves after the manner of Free Britons in their own land. During this struggle were firmly laid the foundations of our greatness, but what went on within the borders of our scattered provinces was little heeded by the world at large. stay away will blame themselves, and when they get to heaven will wish themselves back here again for a time to make up for their indifference now.

The speaker introduced Rev. Mr. Teasdale of St. John, as the White Knight, who had to take the place of the Black Knight, who had disappointed us. Mr. Teasdale was the one who, after great persistence, succeeded in bringing the evangelists to the town process.

Mr. Teasdale in speaking dwelt especially on the revival last year in St. John. The influence still continues, and between 65 and 75 of those who were added to his church then, still remain.

The address by Mr. Hunter followed, his subject being "The great supper, Luke 14: 16. The invitation is to all, and if it refused you will stay out for ever. There is no such thing as a reasonable excuse, yet many are given. Some say they cannot understand the Bible. Of course not; not all of it. But the plan of salvation in it is as plain as A, B, C.

"A. All have sinned."

"C. Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Another excuse is, this religion is too difficult. "It is the way of the transgression that is hard. It is seen in every drunkard's home and on every prison door."

Still another says, religion is a gloomy thing. Christians are the happiest people on earth. See the change from a convicted to a converted person. Look at the true Christians around you. "True that some carnal religion by certain forms and facts, but it is positively nothing but a mockery of God."

Fourth, That Christians are all hypocrites. There are really very few you can find if you look for it. Look out of eyes that are anxious for the next. There is no chance about it; your end is sure one way or another.

Sixth When I find which denomination is right I will choose. All are right in the making of the world. Catholic or Protestant, if trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ, they will get to heaven.

Seven, some say they are too bad. You may be within a step of perdition but if you stop and cry to Jesus for help he will save you.

Eight, I don't want to hold out. With Jesus' arms around you and both his hands around yours, cannot you trust him to carry you through?

God's word, Adam Clark used this method with good results; good thing to read God's word on your knees. Then prayer unlocks the door of heaven; you ask sometimes amine; We touch the Lord's good deal, we ask God for what we do not want, one of the hardest things to do is to wait on God, but I tell you that there is no unanswerd prayer. One great hindrance to prayer is doubt. Why should we doubt God? He gives us good promises. Another hindrance of prayer is malice and hatred, then if you have any malice or hatred get rid of it as soon as possible. Many people bury the hatchet, but leave the handle sticking up. Another hindrance to prayer is that it is

Mrs. James Carrier has returned from her son's home in Newton, having enjoyed a very pleasant trip.

Rev. S. J. Perry, home missionary, is holding a series of meetings in the F. C. B. ch. 3.

Rev. P. Sturt has engaged with the Baptist church for a short time.

Inspector Bridges visited school district No. 6, on Wednesday.

Rev. J. H. Erb delivered an interesting lecture here in the Temperance hall on the eve of Oct. 30th, his subject being "The Golden Calf."

Allan R. Carrier was taken sick on Tuesday, with a gripe, and is still confined to the home, but is slowly recovering.

The potato crop here proved a success. G. W. Coy dug upwards of 500 bbls., others digging from 200 to 500 bbls.

Nov. 4.—Mrs. Ann Harris, a well known resident of this place, died at her home on the 27th ult. Deceased was a very aged lady, and up to within two or three days of her death was quite smart. Rev. Mr. Clement preached the funeral sermon.

Miss Sadie McMillan of Boiestown was married at the home of her father a few days ago to Mr. Jewett, of Boston. The happy couple started for that city on a 1st. Inward to the heart. He said, "I am now ready;" not getting ready, but am ready. Some think they can't know this Paul was not of this opinion; neither did he think this to be presumptuous. He should be confident.

But not Boastful.
Many people are in a quandary; they don't know. There are hope so, think so, trust so and know so Christians. Here Mr. Crossley sang with much emotion "Whosoever."

Paul took a second view in looking backward. He said, "I have finished my course." This course he began at Damascus and ended it in death. We should have a high ideal in life like Paul, to run with patience. We have all a course to run, a God-given course. We can take the course God has marked out for us, or we can get out of this course and make one for ourselves. If we do we will surely run to ruin. Many of us are running our own course. Think of this as I sing "The mistakes of Life."

Paul took a third view in looking forward, and said the time of my departure, or of setting sail, is at hand. Instead of looking into the dark grave, Paul was looking into heaven; so should we. You never saw a tear in a dying Christian's eye. When death comes we should be able to say "I am going home." Will you be like Voltaire, who said, "I am taking a leap in the dark," or like Paul?

Paul took a fourth view; he looked upward and saw the crown laid up for him and for others. Heaven is as much of a reward as it is a goal. Many of our friends of Rev. Dean Partridge will be pleased to hear that he has passed the crisis of the fever, and is now steadily building up.

Mrs. R. H. Casey, of New York, is here visiting her brother and sister, Geo. E. Howard and Mrs. James Crangle.

Rev. Mr. Bryant, of Prince William, was elected a communion for this Parish. It is the first time Mr. Bryant has been in and it is hoped he will do well.

The funeral of the late Thos. C. Atherton, who died Tuesday, took place Friday afternoon from his late residence, Queen street. The remains were followed by a large concourse of sympathizing friends of the deceased. Rev. F. C. Hartley and Rev. Dr. McLeod conducted the burial services.

Harry F. Alward, of this city, one of the young men who are applying for admission as a student-at-law, is seriously ill with typhoid fever at his home on Brunswick street.

Miss Sayre and her assistants have arranged an entertainment and tea for the children of the Kindergarten and a number of their little friends Saturday afternoon.

W. S. Carvell has added to his already first class laundry, a new and improved ironer, which will give him facilities than ever for turning out satisfactory work.

A very handsome life-size portrait of the late John B. Gieves has been purchased by the Fredericton Curling Club, and adorns the walls of their club room in the rink.

Owing to the low condition of the river, the steamer Aberdeen will be unable to make any trips to Woodstock this fall. She is to be taken to her winter quarters at Swan Creek, next week.

Dr. McLearn whose arrival home last week was noted in THE HERALD, took a special course of two months in the leading New York hospitals on diseases of the throat and nose.

The David Weston brought an unusually large freight to the city Tuesday evening including, a quantity of molasses for Sheriff Sterling, and 13 tons of pressed hay and straw for John A. Edwards of the Queen Hotel.

L. G. Wheaton, of Londonderry, N. S., traveller for T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, has purchased Messrs. Edgecombe's handsome Shetland pony, together with the cart and harness, and will ship it to Nova Scotia in a few days.

Rev. Mr. Hector, the colored preacher who was to have spoken on temperance at the Baptist church Wednesday, cancelled his engagement on finding that he could not get back again to St. John before 9 o'clock that evening.

The members of the Cycling and Boating Club are planning a Smoking concert for Friday evening, Nov. 15th, and the musical programme will include such popular singers as Prof. Bristowe, H. V. B. Bridges and A. E. Masie.

The St. John schooner Adria, was towed into Mosher's Harbor on the Nova Scotia southern coast Wednesday, bottom up, and it is believed that Capt. Watson of St. John, and his crew of six men, some of them hailing from Chatham, have been lost.

The Telegraph says that all hope has been practically abandoned among lumber men of that city of being able to bring down the 2,000,000 feet of logs which are scattered in the St. John river, from Bristol to the limits of the Fredericton Boom Company.

The city council committees met Monday night and sat till nearly midnight. There were several lively discussions, particularly on the asphalt question, some of the aldermen wanting to know why the $1,400 assessed on sidewalks had been spent without laying any new asphalt.

Miss Nellie Hume, sister of Mrs. Wesley Vanvar, and daughter of the late George Hume of this city, was married at the residence of her brother-in-law, Frank Thompson, St. Louis, Oct. 20th, to George E. Baldwin, of Woodstock, Rev. Dr. Werlein performing the ceremony.

Thomas Gray, Kingsclear's cattle king, was in the city Wednesday, and started down river on a cattle-buying expedition. Mr. Gray is one of the most successful beefraisers in the province, and he expects to return with fifty head of cattle, which will stall-feed during the coming winter.

Thos. C. Atherton, who died suddenly Tuesday afternoon at the age of 50 years, was a well known citizen, and for some years, until incapacitated by failing health was janitor of the Normal school building. He leaves a widow, two sons and three daughters, one of whom is the wife of Geo. K. Lagrin.

Mr. Dunmore's men have about completed the work of repairing and rendering safe the spire of St. Paul's church and the cost is about $2,000. The work of frescoing the ceilings to which the trustees are committed, will probably be done next summer when Rev. Mr. Macdonald is taking his vacation.

A little eighteen-months old son of Chas. Gerow (colored) died Tuesday night of typhoid fever at his father's home on Brunswick street. Mr. Gerow is deserving of a good deal of sympathy; only last week he lost his wife from the same disease, and during the past season, he himself and three other children have been attacked with it.

Speaking of the Houlton wedding, at which Prof. Bristowe played the organ, the Aroostook Times says: One of the most noticeable features of the occasion was the excellence of the music. The organ was presided over by Mr. Bristowe of Fredericton, who by his skill and artistic power, added greatly to the effectiveness of the ceremony.

The Marysville Orangemen celebrated Guy Fawkes' day by a grand entertainment in the hall at that place Monday evening. A very large number of Orangemen and their friends were present. An excellent programme was presented, consisting of music, dialogues, speeches, readings, recitations and magic lantern views, and all present thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

J. F. VanBaskirk reports that a large business is being done in threshing machines this fall, as a result of the exceptionally heavy grain crop throughout the county. He handles the celebrated Little Giant thrasher, manufactured by Small and Fisher of Woodstock. This machine is almost an exact counterpart of the Parkdale, Pa., Little Giant, and enjoys a splendid reputation.

The name of Michael McElade appears in the list of gentlemen seeking admission to the study of the law. Our genial friend McElade has been a successful newspaper writer, an efficient and faithful legislative reporter, and a bustling life insurance agent, and we see no reason why he should not become a leader at the bar if with his usual industry he enters upon the study of law. We look forward to the time not so far distant perhaps when we shall be able to salute our friend as a Q. C. and perhaps a judge.

Leonard Fleet, a young man in the employ of the Aberdeen mills, met with a very painful accident while at work Thursday. He was in the act of picking up a board to run through the edger, when a heavy birch plank, thrown from the rotary, struck him on the right wrist, inflicting a severe bruise and causing him to faint away. Dr. VanWart, who was summoned, found the wrist badly lacerated, but no bones broken. Mr. Fleet expects to be able to resume work in a few days.

The club decided to have one night's skating every two weeks this winter, J. S. Campbell and Fred Hatt being the committee to put on the girls' skates, etc. The managing committee were authorized to refurnish the club room.

A committee composed of J. S. Campbell, T. G. Loggie, J. T. Jennings, J. H. Hawthorn and Dr. Bridges was appointed to look around for a building in which to hold a curlers' ball this winter, and report back to the club.

At the conclusion of the meeting the members present were sumptuously entertained at Parson's restaurant by the officers elect, a pleasant hour being spent by the company. Very many agreeable speeches were made by the gentlemen present, Pres. Allen and Vice Pres. Loggie giving full sketches of the history of the club, which enters upon the season in the best shape financially and every other way they have at any time in its history.

The curlers of St. Stephen and St. John want to get to work practising soon as the ice makes, if they expect to be in it this winter with the keen curlers of Fredericton.

LAW EXAMINATIONS.

Candidates for Barristers, Attorneys, and Students-at-Law.

The following attorneys have posted notices of their intention to apply for admission as barristers at this term of the Supreme court: E Albert Kelly, Oliver B Stockford, Alan B Wilnot, Thomas W Butler, Aaron Lawson, Hugh H Hansard, A G Blair, J R Copp, Frank A Harrison, A B Copp.

There are eight applicants for admission as attorneys: Harry F McLeod, Geo Black, Fred Peters, H H Pickett, Geo Shaw, Archie Irving, Edward McDonald, Geo K McLeod, Wm T Taylor, Geo M Blackney, Wm W Baird, Chas C Anderson, Seldon B Blechnor, Chas S Hanington, Frank A Baird, Hector Neadeau, Jas H Dunn, L E Visart DeBry, Michael McElade, Reg A Fairweather, Wm Max Aitken, Robt A Smith, John L Fawcett, Wm W Coster, A P Waterbury, Harry F Alward, H W Robertson, Edward B Manning, H A Simonds, A B, Wm B Connell, Fred W Cochran, R Y D Aitkin, C Lionel Hanington.

The examinations commenced Wednesday. The weekly sale of timber lands took place at the Crown Land office Wednesday a.m. Five bidders were put up and there being no competition, were knocked down to the applicants as follows: A berth at the head of Pleasant Brook, branch of the Gaspe river, to G. G. King; one on the north branch of the Mameozekel river to Hale & Murchie; one on Young's Brook, branch of McCallum's creek, to Alex. Gibson; one on Spring Brook, branch of Salmon river, to Hugh McLean; and one on Young's Brook, branch of McCallum's creek, to Donald Fraser. The first named contained two square miles, and the remainder three each.

The quiet little village of Hammondville, in the parish of Kingsclear, is shortly to have a double wedding. It gives promise of being a grand affair, and will knock in the snow next summer when Kingsclear has seen for a long time. The prospective bridegrooms are Orington and Sanford McKeen, sons of John McKeen, merchant and postmaster of Kingsclear, and the brides to be Una and Teal Hammond, who are sisters, and neices of Geo A Hammond, postmaster of Hammondville. A large number of invitations have been issued. The ceremony is to be celebrated at Mr Hammond's residence on the 20th inst.

Owing to the Saturday night service and the heavy work on the afternoon and evening of Sunday, the Evangelists will not preach in the morning, but Mr. Croesley will be in the P. C. Baptist church and will sing and assist in the lessons. Mr. Hunter will be in the Methodist church and will read the lessons. In the afternoon at 4 Mr. Hunter will address a meeting for women only in the Methodist church. At the same hour Mr. Croesley will speak to men in the City Hall. In the evening both Evangelists will be in the Methodist church.

A Maugeville correspondent writes that Mr. Barnes, M.P.P. for Kent, a well known contractor, has entered into a contract with Dr. L. G. de Bertram of New York to build eighteen miles of railroad from Chipman to Newcastle. The work will commence early in December. Dr. de Bertram is prepared to complete the road to Fredericton at an early day.

Editor Clarke of the St. Stephen Courier, was seen in earnest conversation with evangelists Hunter and Crossley on Queen street Friday morning, and it is supposed he was endeavoring to prevail on them to open a campaign against sin in the border towns. Like the evangelist, Mr. Clarke is a devout Methodist, and sees the necessity of fighting the devil in his strongholds.

Fred. Waterson of St. Stephen, who is well known among Fredericton sportsmen, has purchased from W. F. Todd, the fine stallion Elation by Electioneer. One of four of Elation's colts known to have been trained on the track says, the Courier, one owned by Hugh Love has entered the list, and another owned by Henry Murchie, could do so at any time.

Next week the Evangelists' evening services until Thursday will be held in the Methodist church, and in the afternoon in the Free C. Baptist church. Tuesday, bible reading; Wednesday, question box; Thursday, farewell to children.

A PRETTY WEDDING.

At St. Dunstan's Church Wednesday Morning.

The Guests, Presents and other Details.

Miss Mamie A. King, only daughter of Mr. W. H. King, of this city, was led to the matrimonial altar Wednesday a.m. by J. D. Shea, the popular junior partner of the well known firm of Kitchin & Shea. The ceremony took place at St. Dunstan's church at 8.30 o'clock, and the officiating clergyman was the venerable Rev. J. C. McDevitt. The church was thronged with spectators, and the wedding was one of the most brilliant ever celebrated within the old edifice. Miss King was conducted to the altar on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. W. H. King, father and mother of the bride.

The bride, a very bright and attractive young lady, was beautifully attired in cream crepe, on train, trimmed with cream moire silk and cream lace, cream bonnet, silks and gloves, and a bouquet of cream roses.

Miss King was attended by her cousin, Miss Ella Cassidy, of Houlton, Me., who looked very pretty, costumed in cream silk, trimmed with lace and ribbon of the same color, cream slippers and gloves, large cream hat trimmed with velvet and blue tulle, and carrying a bouquet of pink roses.

Mrs. King, the bride's mother, wore a black satin dress with jet trimmings, black velvet bonnet with gold trimmings, and grey gloves.

Mr. Shea was supported by Mr. Andrew Haslin. With their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Shea breakfasted at the bride's home, King street, and left in the 11.30 a.m. train for Moncton and Halifax on their wedding tour. They will return Saturday evening, and Mrs. Shea, assisted by Miss Cassidy and Miss Annie McGoldrick, will receive her friends on the 12th, 13th and 14th inst., at her father's residence, where she and her husband will board for the winter.

A Valuable Lot of Presents.

The bride was the recipient of a beautiful collection of presents, including the following: Gold brooch with a star diamond setting and gold neck chain from the bridegroom, whose gift to the bride was a gold chain bracelet.

CHAPTER VII.
IF I WIN HER AT ALL.

CONTINUED.

"Am I so very bad?" I asked bitterly.

"You are," he retorted, "so very bad that I repeat I would rather see Irene dead than married to you."

"You do not decide me, nephew of mine though you are, you are at least a villain. I will be frank with you, it is best, in the first place, although you are young, you have led a wicked life of it. I have heard, no matter how, of several little episodes in your college life that would not bear investigation. Irene is not of the class of women you understand. You are not even capable of appreciating her. She is far beyond you. You have broken the heart of more than one fair young girl, I hear, but you shall never break Irene's."

"Good heavens, sir! I burst out, unable to endure it a moment longer, 'you were a young man yourself, and you know that young fellows will be young fellows, and if they show their wild oats early in life, so much the better.'"

"If they sow wild oats in their youth they will reap a full and bitter harvest in their old age," he said, sternly.

"In vain I pleaded with him. It was useless, worse than useless.

"Enough of this," he cried, harshly; "you will find that my test to you as my nephew is nay' young man! Irene is not for you."

"This brings me to another subject," he went on, abruptly, "as I have said, I have studied you since you returned here, and I like you less as a man than I did malignant prevent the old idiot from changing with the will. He would send for his lawyer to-morrow, whatever was done must be done to-night. How I wished he would die in his bed that night."

"The sun went down and the dusk of the dusk of the summer night crept up; still I packed the busy streets, that one intense thought uppermost in my mind, how could I prevent that will from being changed? I must think, I knew where he kept that will, in the safe, and I thought of the great stacks of bills I had seen in that safe that afternoon. If I had them, I need not worry about poverty, and I hated the man who had them with all the strength of my fierce nature. By some strange fancy, call it what you will, glancing up, I found myself opposite the house. It was quite dark, silent and dark as a grain of sand, and in spite of that I felt a phantom and hurried down the street.

"With strange fascination I stood leaning against the trees, gazing up at the malignant rage in my eyes at the banker's window, my soul warring with conflicting emotions. I had only one while the darkness lasted in which to be a rich man. Soon after the sun of the morrow rose I should be disinherited. I ground my teeth together, cursing my lack as I stood there. Suddenly, to my surprise, the carved oak door opened and there emerged from the darkened corridor the figure of a woman, wrapped in a long, dark cloak, who glided down the marble steps like a phantom and hurried down the street.

"Recovering from my amazement I hurried in swift pursuit overtaking her just as she reached the first corner. Imagine my dismay upon beholding, as the light of the gas-lamp fell full upon her face, Irene.

"Irene," I cried, in dismay, "what can this mean, me alone and at night on the streets of London?"

"She did not answer me; she appeared not to hear me, gazing over my head in a strange, dazed, unnatural way. All in a sudden, I struck me just what was the matter. Irene was walking in her sleep; she was a somnambulist.

"I had heard of the danger of waking one so suddenly when in this condition. She fitted on before me like a shadow. I followed. She was so fleet of foot I could barely keep pace with her.

"Was it fate that had led this beautiful girl into my power? I thought with inward satisfaction. What an easy matter it would be to abduct Irene, to take her to—

"My reverie was cut short, for she had suddenly passed before a window in which glimmered a faint light, as from an office back, and to my surprise she put on her white handkerchiefs, groggily, found the knob, and turned it; it yielded to her touch; the door swung open. I drew back into an adjacent doorway where I could see and hear all that transpired, being at the same time unseen myself, for I had seen a man approaching the door from the interior of the store.

"The night had come on, intensely dark and sultry, but, by the lightning flashes which preceded the storm, I saw that she had entered the office of the safe and lock company, Oxford street.

"I saw the young man approach and ask her courteously what she wished, and I almost held my breath with intensity as I heard her murmur something about getting her uncle's safe opened. I heard the young man expositulate, complaining of the lateness of the hour for the work. I could have laughed aloud. Could he not see that the girl before him was in a state of somnambulism, utterly unconscious of her surroundings. Inevitable of replying, much less comprehending his remarks, she repeated over and over only those words she must get her uncle's safe open at once, and those replies fitted his remarks with wonderful aptness.

"Though she spoke but these few words, he replied, after a few moments of deliberation, that he would accompany her and open the safe for her.

"Matters were assuming an intense interest for me. How was this to end? What would happen if she were to awaken any instant? Surely the man gazing into that lovely, dazed face and expressionless eyes must see that there is something strange, unnatural about her. If he is not too enthralled by the girl's marvellous beauty to observe her closely, he must see that this is a case of somnambulism, I considered. But he apparently did not.

"She must have had it on her mind to visit this safe company's office, I judged, for only two previous she had said to me: 'Uncle forgets the combination of his safe of late; three times I have been on the point of going to that safe company's office to get someone to open it for him when his memory has returned to him. Alas! this is occurring so frequently of late.'

"This, then, was the key, the solution to the whole affair.

"My dismay rose at the complication matters were assuming, when I saw the young man prepare to follow her, taking his tools with him.

"As unceremoniously as she had entered the place, she turned abruptly and hurried down the street.

"To my amazement the young man hurried after her, with his case of necessary tools for opening the safe, I, of course following up the rear; I must overtake him and explain the matter to him.

"What law of nature is it that guides somnambulists that they thread their way through intricate places, and returned unharmed to their own little abodes?"

"As I saw Irene pass hurriedly up the marble steps, the young man following, a sudden demon seized me, urging me to let the affair proceed, it would place Irene in my power."

"Silently as a shadow I followed into the house, and into the banker's room to which they had proceeded, succeeding in secreting myself behind the heavy velvet portieres unseen.

"This is the safe you wish me to open, I presume?" the young man said, and in a moment later he set about his task, Irene having mechanically walked from the room.

"The midnight bells tolled ere he had succeeded in opening the door of the safe. He was little aware of caution as he worked, humming every now and then a few bars of popular opera. The noise he made in picking up and laying down his tools must surely awaken the banker in the adjoining room, I thought, but it did not.

"He waited some little time for the reappearance of the young lady who had summoned him for this task at this unseasonably hour. At length, reluctantly, as she was not forthcoming, he took his leave. I heard the outer door close behind him with a firm, metallic click.

"It was but the work of a moment for me to secure the money, which was in large packages of bills, and transfer them to my breast-pocket.

"This accomplished, a veritable demon seemed to possess me for, in examining a small compartment to the right I saw the old banker's will lying before me. To some eager, impetuous restless nature, such as mine was, a sudden temptation comes, which, like burning scorching lava, sweeps away all before it. A sudden, terrible temptation came to me to put the banker suddenly out of the way, then and there; the will standing as it did would give me all his property. I had no idea of how much or how little he was possessed, and in connection with this still more daring thought occurred to me, I whose imitation of the banker's handwriting was perfect, could easily insert the clause in that will, that Irene was to marry me. If she believed it to be her uncle's will, she would never refuse to comply with it."

CHAPTER VIII.
A CONVICT'S BRIDE.

"Need I add, that I accomplished this? My steps were then turned toward the banker's sleeping-room. I had risked too much to turn back now. I crept across the threshold, my eyes gleaming with hate as they rested on the sleeper.

"I had resolved upon the modus operandi as to how I was to consummate my plan. I turned out the faint spark of a gas jet, then turned the gas on full blast, hurrying out of the apartment and closing the door tightly after me.

"But, ah! the best laid plans of mice and men.

"Before I could make my exit from the interior room there was a sound from the old gentleman's vale's room; he had detected the odor of escaping gas.

"In an instant he was out in the corridor. Perdition! Closing the door of the room in which I had darted again, locking the door and putting the key in his pocket, muttering something about having forgotten to do this earlier in the evening. There was no way of escape for me save through the old banker's room, this was rendered impossible now, owing to the vale's presence there.

"In sheer desperation and fearful of detection, I darted back into my place of concealment, but the heavy velvet portieres again.

"And again I muttered Perdition! The valet had thrown himself down on a divan in his master's room; the banker complaining of a terrible sensation in his head and breast from the effects of the gas he supposed he had turned off wrong.

"I was worse and my confession is ended.

"I was forced to remain in my place of concealment until a late hour the next day. I witnessed the banker's discovery of the safe having been robbed, as he entered the room with Irene; she, of course, being entirely ignorant of the thrilling events that had transpired the previous night.

"When he sent them from the room he bowed his head on his hands, crying aloud that he was ruined, ruined!

"I seized that moment to escape, but, turning sharply around, attracted by a slight noise he swept the portieres asunder and I was discovered.

"You are the thief, the robber!" he cried. "I know it, I feel it! I struck him dead, and he drew his pistol upon me and fired, but the ball, luckily for me, struck a marble pedestal close by, which turned its course and it lodged in his own heart. In the confusion I escaped.

"Now we come to the last act that closed my eventful career. Irene—

"Whatever it was that Heathcliff, or Forester, as we shall hereafter call him, purposed to say was never uttered, a terrible fit of coughing seized him, which brought on a violent congestion. He sank rapidly and straightway the doctors administered opiates.

"The fearful strain of revealing all he had revealed had told upon him, the blood gushed from his mouth in a dark crimson pool.

"It is all over with him," said the doctor. "Here," calling hastily the attendant, "pour out four drops from that little phial beside my case; it will help him to die easier."

"In his extreme nervousness the attendant poured out ten drops and it was administered.

"His life will flicker out with the setting of the sun," said the doctor, and, glancing from the window—"the sun is setting now. He will not last five minutes at most." He took out his watch and timed the patient's rapid respiration.

"Five minutes passed—ten—the doctor looked slightly puzzled; he bent down closer, an exclamation of surprise breaking from his lips; there was a slight pink glow spreading over Forester's face, his lips were moist.

"I am of the opinion this man will live."

"The overdose of the drug administered by the attendant had saved his life.

The above was the detailed account of the startling story the extras had contained. Who will wonder that Irene fled outright when she read it, and that Frederick Esmond, steering into London as quickly as the railway carriage could bring him, devoted every word of it with avidity, clenching the paper as he came to the last word, with a shuddering groan.

"Oh Irene, beautiful Irene!" he cried, under his breath, "the happiest day of my life is this in which I find that you are innocent of that terrible robbery, and have been from first to last."

"A somnambulist! Great Heaven! that this did not occur to me before." In a trice all that had puzzled him was now as clear as noon-day to him. A bluish of shame rose to his cheeks that he had doubted so noble a girl as Miss Middleton, how he hated himself for it.

"What must she have thought of his inconceivable conduct as he left her, that memorable morning?"

How shocked she must have been to learn, too, of the prominent part she played in that midnight robbery, surely the strangest and most wonderful on record.

CURES CATARRHAL DEAFNESS.

Strong and Unreserved Testimony of the Curative Powers of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder.

Actions speak louder than words. Mr. John McInnis of Washburne Bridge, N. S. made use of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder and says: "I used the medicine according to directions and found it to be a wonderful cure for catarrhal deafness. I can hear as good as ever. You will find 60 cents enclosed for which please send me another bottle and blower to boot also."

One short puff of the breath through the boys and girls we romped with, father's nose and throat, the joy of the holiday—no pleasures of the present can compare with those enjoyed in the days now locked up in the eternity of the past. In a similar way we recall the old time tested friend of the past—Putnam's Pain-Expeller—that never failed us when we were in pain, and even then, 75,000 men would perish.

Speaking of Doherty who shot young Lake at Chatham, the World says: "Two or three months ago a lad died suddenly after having been roughly handled in a play by Doherty and another youth who 'rammed' him," that is, made a battering ram of him and butted his head against a cart wheel. Nothing was done about it. A few weeks ago he stabbed a man, but not seriously, and nothing was done about it. Now, at the age of 20, he has reached the legitimate climax of his course of conduct."

from taking medicine. They don't like its taste. But they are eager to take what they like—Scott's Emulsion, for instance. Children almost always like Scott's Emulsion.

And it does them good. Scott's Emulsion is the easiest, most palatable form of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda added to nourish the bones and tone up the nervous system. The way children gain flesh and strength on Scott's Emulsion is surprising even to physicians.
