largely patronized and his enterprises in getting the collection together was the subject of much favorable comment.

Government Stock of 1897.—The Deputy Commissioner of Agriculture has issued the following circular:

The conditions under which the stock would be sold were that bull calves two years old at date of sale (30th September, 1897) were to be kept in the Province for breeding purposes for three years; bulls under two years old at date of sale, four years.

"A great many cases a system of exchange of these animals from one locality to another would be the cheapest and best way to obtain new sires for the herd."

To assist in this matter the Department of Agriculture desires any one who has an animal which he wishes to sell or exchange, and also any one wanting to purchase, to notify the Department.

"A record of these applications will be kept and list of animals for sale or exchange furnished on application."

IT IS A FETTERING RUIN.

DENUNCIATION OF THE BRITISH TRANSPORT SERVICE.

Lessons Might Be Taken From the Colonies—Pack-horses Instead of the Ox-Wagon System Would Soon End the War.

Mr. Bates, the Australian special correspondent of the London Daily News, makes a vigorous onslaught of the army transport system. The transport, he says, connected with the British Army of to-day is too cumbersome, too unwieldy, too slow. For six months I have been constantly at the front during the present war, and each day has impressed this fact forcibly upon my mind. The first blow in the shape of army reform will have to be struck there, and it will have to be deep and far-reaching, for at the present juncture this end of the service is a little more use to our Army than a glass eye to a beaten blind. If our transport service were any good, it ought to have come conspicuously to the front in South Africa, for I doubt if in all the world there is another country where there are so few difficulties to contend with and so many advantages to be embraced. I am not speaking of Natal, for of that country I know nothing of my own observation. The wild makes magnificent operating base, for at the present juncture this end of the service is a little more use to our Army than a glass eye to a beaten blind.

THE NEED FOR REFORM.

What is the use of trying to the nation? Why toll the Empire that it has an Army equipped to be proud of, whilst this fettering ruin is in our midst? The nation is strong enough, stout-hearted enough to hear the worst, and virile enough to rectify its error. From our soldiers may smother, and say that my opinion is merely that of an outsider, of a man untrained to the use of arms possible, but I have had more practical experience in regard to transport through rough and inhospitable country, more practical experience in handling big bodies of men in country where every pound-weight of transport is a serious item, and every gallon of water a matter of moment, than nine-tenths of the professional soldiers get in a life-time. Many a time I have thought out this same question of transport in the heart of the Australian bush when pushing inland with the little armies of hardy pioneers who ransack the interior of the Silent Continent in search of precious metals. Many a time I have balanced it carefully in my mind before I knew that sooner or later Australia will have to face a foe on her own shores, and I dare assert that the finest army in all Europe would be out to pieces if the invaders moved inland if the foe came to us with such transport as is now in vogue with Lord Roberts' Army.

THE AUSTRALIAN BUSHMEN.

Has solved the problem of war transport, solved it in peace time, though he doubtless never gave the matter of war a passing thought. When a hundred or five hundred gold-burglers sneak up their mountain peaks, and then push far and beyond the farthest fringe of civilization they do so knowing that each man's life will depend greatly upon his individual strength, fortitude, and endurance. I have balanced it carefully in my mind before I knew that sooner or later Australia will have to face a foe on her own shores, and I dare assert that the finest army in all Europe would be out to pieces if the invaders moved inland if the foe came to us with such transport as is now in vogue with Lord Roberts' Army.

WHY NOT PACK-HORSES?

I have watched, from the very seat of war, the splendid efforts of our most dashing cavalry general, the flying French. No man living is less inclined to grudge him praise for his brilliant work in the field than myself. Yet how often have his best efforts been practically nullified by the absence of provisions to enable him to hold what he has gained and his daring have been done superbly, but how much better his work would have been if the British Army Transport Service had been what it should have been. We come to grief in South Africa on any very rainy day, the Transport people will beat the root of the trouble, for they multiply everything they touch.

JOYS OF MARRIED LIFE.

Doctor—What you need is change and rest. Patient—I can't afford it. My income's pretty well regulated all ready. My children get all the change and my wife gets the rest. Sumter, S. C., has a factory for making golf sticks of persimmon timber. It is claimed they are the best that can be made.

Through Storm and Sunshine

CHAPTER XLIII.

Her husband's words made a great impression on Lady St. Just. She knew they were true. She had room for no other thought in her mind but the thought of the child Oswald. She looked at him, and found that for hours together she did nothing but think and ponder. She could never have been a real criminal—she had too keen a conscience. She could take consolation from this joy because she did not think him worthy to hold it; but she could not forget the boy's existence. She must see him, care for him, advance his interests in life—do anything, in fact, except give him his inheritance.

"One thing is plain," she said to herself. "I will keep my secret, I must not let Oswald know I have seen him. The very expression of her face seemed to have changed; it was full of dreamy, absorbed thought, the life and animation had almost left it. "I shall be better when I have seen the boy," she thought. "I am haunted by a thousand fears and a thousand thoughts that will be laid as ghosts around me, and the day came that brought her a very fair chance of achieving it. Lord St. Just went with some friends to Gravesend, there was a government inquiry about some naval matters that required his attention. He would be absent the whole day, and on that day Lady St. Just resolved to go to Hammanham.

As when she visited Gerald Dorman, she dressed herself as plainly as possible—a black silk dress that showed some signs of wear, a dark traveling-bag, a bonnet with a thick veil. Thus attired, who would recognize the beautiful and magnificent Lady St. Just? She contrived to leave the house without being seen, having sent John Hubley out previously. She walked some little distance and then took a cab. "It is a long drive," was the man's comment when she gave the address. "You shall be well paid for it," she replied, with sublime ignorance of a cabman's peculiarities.

He bowed best and fast as the cab stopped before a large square house standing back from the road and surrounded by trees. "Grove House Academy," she read on the brass name-plate. "You will wait for me," she said, as the man opened the door, "I may be some time." "The man seated himself on his box, and the newspaper, and mentally congratulated himself on being "in for a good thing."

The door was opened by a footman, who said that Mr. Lester was not in, but that Mr. Hardman, the head-master, was. "I want to see one of the young gentlemen, a Master Henry Dorman," she said. "Yes, please step this way, and I will fetch him," was the reply. She was shown into a small anteroom, with nothing very cheerful to recommend it—it contained a square table, a few horse-hair chairs, a pair of globes, and a large map. All view from the window was cut off by a thick wire blind.

"I have five Smiths in this school, and the boys that I just don't like to take another. Mrs. Smith, did you know my father?" "Heaven pardon me!" she sighed through the depths of her heart. His father was her own. "Yes," she replied, in a low faint voice. "He and my mother are both dead," she said, and she looked at him with a look that said she was not a girl, but a woman who had been through a great deal of life.

"I think he had always lived in America," replied the boy, thoughtfully. "He never spoke of England to me when we were in New York. We came to England together. He placed me here at school, and now he is dead." "Yes, I was very kind to you," she said, "and no one could have been kinder," answered the lad. "I cannot remember going to America—I should not think I was more than five years old when I went."

Summer Sufferings of Women.

It requires an enormous amount of vitality to withstand the wearing and trying effects of the withering summer weather, to overcome the languid, worn-out feelings, and to fight off the fevers and dreadful fatal diseases which are especially prevalent in the summer time, and ever ready to attack those in a low state of health. There is nothing so trying on the system, as the hot, summer weather, and none who suffer more from the heat than the woman with the cares and a family on her hands, requiring work in the hot kitchen and over the stove. Many a woman, dependent upon her own strength, has been restored to health and vigor by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food pills, the great blood builder and nerve restorative.

Mrs. D. W. Cransberry, 128 Richmond St. West, Toronto, Ont., states: "My daughter got completely run down in health. Her nerves were exhausted and she was so weak and debilitated that she had to give up

Wild Grape Pie—Pick from stem and wash fruit grapes. Line a tin with good crust, place in the bottom one and a half tablespoons four and three table-spoons sugar mixed, now add the grapes, pour in enough water so that when you tip the tin the water can be seen readily, wet the edges of the crust, put on a perforated top crust, and bake until browned. Notwithstanding the numerous seeds, this is delicious when eaten with good cream.

WAR ABOUT OPIUM FIRST.

SOMETHING OF THE PREVIOUS TROUBLES IN CHINA.

British Traders Give Up Many Sheds and Stocks of Opium. The Chinese Government has ordered the British Traders to give up many sheds and stocks of opium. The Chinese Government has ordered the British Traders to give up many sheds and stocks of opium.

On the one side a resolute force, determined to overcome all obstacles to the spread of its commerce, and its conduct as with an equal nation; on the other side was an old, powerful, whose history was lost in the mists of antiquity, who having in the past resisted the intrusion of neighbouring kingdoms, felt not her deceptions and still believed herself equal to the task of excluding the foreigners from her territory.

THE OPIUM WAR.

Troubles first commenced in Canton during the reign of the Emperor Tiantung, between the Mandarins and the English merchants, who had persisted in smuggling opium into the country. All business became paralyzed, and finally the English Government sent Lord Napier, who had been acting as minister, to his arrival in Canton. He was succeeded by Captain Elliot, who, in 1839, agreed that all the opium in the hands of English merchants should be surrendered to the Chinese authorities. On the 3rd of April of that year, 20,233 chests of opium were handed over to the Mandarins, who immediately destroyed the drug, a strong proof of their anxiety to save their people from the vice of opium eating.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Lady St. Just could not forget her half-brother. She had fancied that going to see Oswald would put an end to the intensity of her thought about him, but she never left her by night or by day. "I have never seen him very much. He was tall for his age, with a fine, well-built figure. She was startled, too, when she looked in the glass, and saw how much her face was like his. He had Valerie's eyes and Valerie's hair, but the true Neslie mouth and brow.

"I took him from mother, home, and friends," she thought. "I must make it up to him—I must do all I can for him." "The consciousness of the difference between his position as heir of Lanewood and as an unknown boy in a boarding school was great—and that was what troubled her. She had had a long holiday, and was tired, and she had a great deal to do. "You are very kind to me, Mrs. Smith," he said, "what shall I do for you in return? Is it all for my mother's sake?"

THE QUEEN'S CURIOUS.

It is not generally known that the Queen possesses at Windsor a small collection of curiosities reminiscent of the earlier Chinese wars during this reign. There is, for example, a suit of Chinese armor which belonged to a chief in the remote interior, and it comprises a cuirass of lacquered steel, a half-mast with gilt teeth, and metal coverings for the arms with gilt ornaments. There is also an ancient knife, the ivory handle of which is carved into the figure of a Chinaman, and a one-edged dagger with an engraved wooden scabbard. Greater value is attached to a similar dagger of damascened steel with the horn handle weighted with lead. This was wrested from a Chinaman in a murderous struggle by Mr. Hargreaves, who presented it to George III. in 1807. Mention may also be made of a pair of ancient chopsticks, some spectacles, a carved jade talisman, and other objects of the same kind.

SULTAN'S EXPENSES.

The yearly expenses of the Sultan have been estimated at no less a sum than $30,000,000. Of this $7,000,000 alone is spent on the clothing of the women and $600,000 on the Sultan's own wardrobe. Nearly $7,500,000 is swallowed up by presents, $5,000,000 are paid to the army, and the rest, some $5,000,000 for a table, seems incredible that so much money can possibly be spent in a year. It is said that the Sultan has a harem of some 1,500 people living within the palace walls, and that he is so expensively at the cost of the Civil List, it appears a little more comfortable.

A CLEAR CASE.

What do you mean by saying music injured your health? Why, that girl next door pounds her piano so late that we have to go to bed with all our windows shut.

YOU MAY HAVE USED MANY BRANDS OF TEA.

Wild Grape Jelly—Remove all imperfect grapes from the bunch, wash the bunches and put over the fire in enough water to start them cooking. Cover and when done press all juice from the grapes. Use the same amount of sugar as juice, but let the juice boil a few minutes before adding the equal quantity of hot boiled potatoes. Add a large lump of butter, but no milk, and season nicely. Put in a hot dish, make a hole in the center, in which put another lump of butter, set in the oven for a minute or two, and serve very hot. This is a favorite New England dish, and is especially relished when beets are young and sweet.

BOXERS PRACTICE BLACK ART.

Some sensational details showing how the chief Boxers delude the natives into the belief that they are "Invulnerable," have just come to hand. As a matter of fact, it seems that they make a regular business of the Black Arts of the East, and rent rooms and give exhibitions of marvelous cleverness, which they declare any Chinaman can repeat himself if he only pays a trifling sum to them, and joins the secret society of the "Rights Harmony Fists."

WITH PEACHES.

Preserved—Choose fine large peaches, ripe, but not too mellow, pare and halve. Allow as many pounds of white sugar as of fruit, and to one pound of sugar allow a teaspoon of water. Make a syrup with sugar and water, skim well and add the fruit. Simmer slowly until clear, when done put fruit in jars, boil syrup until rich and clear, then pour over peaches. Marmalade—Pare and halve peaches and allow three-quarters pound of white sugar to one pound of fruit. Boil the sugar with a cup of water, stir it until dissolved, let boil and strain. Add peaches and stir constantly until done.

SARAH ON DIAMONDS.

Sarah Bernhardt says that the wearing of diamonds destroys the best expression of the face, dims the fire of the eyes and makes the teeth look like chalk.

Dodd's Kidney Pills

are the only medicine that will cure Diabetes. Like Bright's Disease, the disease was incurable without Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the first medicine that cures Diabetes. Initiation—box, name and address advertised to do so, but the medicine that does cure.
