[From the Liverpool Herald.]

WORD PALMERSTON ON THE ORANGE SOCIETY.

The Protestant remonstrance has been presented to Lord Palmerston. Of course he has confirmed the acts of the Lord Chancellor. It was not to be supposed that the patron of third-rate barristers, merely because they are Papists would prefer to have Orangemen occupying the seats upon the ministerial bench, though they happened to be gentlemen of property, and men of intelligence and uprightness.

The deputation was introduced by Mr. Cairns, the member for Belfast, in an able speech. He did not enter into the merits of the Orange Society, as this was neither the time nor place; but he placed fully before Lord Palmerston the consequences attendant upon the acts of his Chancellor, and handed him a copy of the memorial. We refer with pleasure to the speech of Mr. Cairns, and have no doubt that he will do full justice to the cause he has taken up, in another place.

One statement of Lord Palmerston was satisfactory. "I must take leave," he said, "to assure you that neither the Lord Lieutenant nor the Chancellor of Ireland, nor any one else that I am aware of, has ever imputed to the members of the Orange Association, as at present constituted, that they were anything illegal in their confederacy." He added, also, that "Everyone must admit that the gentlemen who are members of this association are eminently loyal, and that there cannot be anything in their political opinions which should exclude them from exercising ministerial functions. In fact, the association must, though I differ from it, be admitted to be founded upon a principle which assumes peculiar loyalty."

So, at least, we have an admission that no one ever cast an imputation of illegality upon the Orange Institution, and that its members are "eminently loyal." The institution is against it, especially that of persons belonging to different sections of the community. The priests are against it, the Hibernians are against it, and Lord Palmerston, admitting that they are wrong, deems that the Lord Lieutenant and the Government would consider the Lord Chancellor's letter, but that he could hold out no promise on the subject.—Independent Sentinel.

THE ORANGE SOCIETY.—DEPUTATION TO LORD PALMERSTON.

The Protestant remonstrance has been presented to Lord Palmerston. Of course he has confirmed the acts of the Lord Chancellor. It was not to be supposed that the patron of third-rate barristers, merely because they are Papists would prefer to have Orangemen occupying the seats upon the ministerial bench, though they happened to be gentlemen of property, and men of intelligence and uprightness.

The deputation was introduced by Mr. Cairns, the member for Belfast, in an able speech. He did not enter into the merits of the Orange Society, as this was neither the time nor place; but he placed fully before Lord Palmerston the consequences attendant upon the acts of his Chancellor, and handed him a copy of the memorial. We refer with pleasure to the speech of Mr. Cairns, and have no doubt that he will do full justice to the cause he has taken up, in another place.

One statement of Lord Palmerston was satisfactory. "I must take leave," he said, "to assure you that neither the Lord Lieutenant nor the Chancellor of Ireland, nor any one else that I am aware of, has ever imputed to the members of the Orange Association, as at present constituted, that they were anything illegal in their confederacy." He added, also, that "Everyone must admit that the gentlemen who are members of this association are eminently loyal, and that there cannot be anything in their political opinions which should exclude them from exercising ministerial functions. In fact, the association must, though I differ from it, be admitted to be founded upon a principle which assumes peculiar loyalty."

So, at least, we have an admission that no one ever cast an imputation of illegality upon the Orange Institution, and that its members are "eminently loyal." The institution is against it, especially that of persons belonging to different sections of the community.

It is impossible to conceive ignorance so astounding as that of Lord Palmerston when he declared that the Orange Association is organised with an annual procession of armed men! This was never my part of the Orange Organisation. When Lord Cottenham was Chief Magistrate, in Ireland, and had dismal dreams of a rebellion, he gave arms to the Orangemen, and thanked them for their demonstrations of loyalty. But the Orange Society, never shrinking from the use of arms, in defence of the Sovereign and the British Constitution, behaved in a frank, perhaps not unknown to Lord Palmerston, which says, "if it is possible as much as lie in you, live peaceably with all men."

"What is the object, and what are the prospective advantages of this Orange Society?" said Lord Palmerston. We have been told that the objects and aims of the Orange Society have been sufficiently put before the public. We believe not; but some people that knew all about it themselves, got rather tired or rather frightened at the constant iteration of the aims and objects of the Orange Association.—We hope that the Orange Association thro' its Grand Lodge, will answer Lord Palmerston, by and bye. But, in the mean time, we shall try to put the matter fairly before the public.

In the first place, the Orange Institution is not solely or chiefly organised for self-defence, unless by self-defence of Protestants and its rights against all aggressions of the Papacy. This Institution is formed by Protestants desiring, to the utmost of their power, to support and defend their Majesty Queen Victoria, the Protestant Religion, the laws of the country, the Legislative Union, the succession to the throne in Her Majesty's illustrious house, being Protestant, as well as for the defence of their own persons and property, and the maintenance of the public peace." So runs the first section of the "Laws and Ordinances of the Orange Institution.

Lord Palmerston admits its legality; it is impossible to deny its loyalty; it is the very foundation on which it rests; casts a reflection upon the institutions of the empire." The foundation on which it rests is the "Institutions of the empire" used to be contemptible theo. Now they are not—Maynooth is not; the National Board is not; and the Orange Institution is worthy of the son of Lord Palmerston, because it "casts a reflection" upon these and kindred institutions!

Let us admit that the Government is able to protect the Crown; let us grant that the Legislative Union, and our persons and property, are in no danger under the benign and sheltering influence of the British Government. Will any one say the same of the Protestant religion? How does the maintenance of "the Protestant religion?" How does the maintenance of the "Protestant religion?" How does the maintenance of the Protestant religion agree with the spirit of the protest now? Are Protestant questions treated in Parliament? How are Protestants treated by Government? How are the Scriptural Education Schools, in Ireland, treated? What about Maynooth? This answer to these questions will supply the reason why the Orange Society must continue to exist, by God's blessing, notwithstanding the spirit of the present age.

We could not wish that this view of the matter had been brought before Lord Palmerston. We trust that it will not be lost sight of, in any further attempts at elucidating the objects of the Orange Institution.

To confine the benefits of the Orange Society to a mere party question of police, is utterly to ignore its grand design. Every Orangeman has a high and holy work to perform, "to live, uphold, and defend the Protestant religion, and sincerely desire and endeavor to propagate its doctrines and principles; he should strenuously oppose and protest against the errors and dangerous doctrines of the Church of Rome, and by all lawful means resist the ascendancy of that church, its encroachments, and the extension of its power."

This the Orange Institution is identified with the body of true and earnest Protestants, who would be Protestants in reality, and not in name only. It is entitled to the support and sympathy of all true Protestants everywhere; it is fighting their battle and maintaining the great cause of civil and religious liberty. Therefore it is that those who belong to the Orange Association cannot and will not "resist that this bond of union is no longer necessary;" and are being much disposed to adopt the word "conciliation" when principle is concerned, prefer, so help them God, the old watchword "No surrender."

THE ORANGE SOCIETY.—DEPUTATION TO LORD PALMERSTON.—On Saturday last a numerous deputation, upon Lord Palmerston at his house. Principally Protestant gentlemen, who have been signing the letter of protest, and the Plenipotentiaries being afraid that the city would be sacked by the populace, it was resolved there to go to him in his private room, and speak with him, & Council of the town, composed of two English Officers and one French officer. Thomas, the former Lieutenant Governor, is now Governor of Cork, and the latter General the Lieutenant Governor. The courtesy of installation was paid to the former, and the latter received the Plenipotentiaries, who were strongly garrisoned, and the Plenipotentiaries and their suite entered the hall of the Chinese Government, who were strongly garrisoned. The following gentlemen were present:—The Earl of Enniskillen, the Earl of Bandon, Sir W. Vernon, M.P.; Hon. H. Corry, M.P.; Mr. Moore, M.P.; Mr. Robinson, M.P.; Mr. Mawson, M.P.; Mr. Napier, M.P.; Mr. White, M.P.; Colonel Lewis; Mr. Webb, M.P.; Mr. Vane, M.P.; Mr. Grosvenor, M.P.; Mr. Archibald, M.P.; Hon. Colonel Maxwell; M.P.; Mr. Gough, M.P.; Mr. Lacy, M.P.; Mr. F. Colville, M.P.; Mr. Lloyd, M.P.; and Mr. Currie, M.P. A very animated conversation was had to take place between Lord Palmerston and the deputation, in the course of which his lordship strongly argued against the Orange Society, as an insult to the community. We refer with pleasure to the speech of Mr. Cairns, and have no doubt that he will do full justice to the cause he has taken up, in another place.

By the arrival of the steamer Emperor, at this port from Liverpool, last evening, we are pleased to note, has given a renewal of hope for the removal of the Chinese Government, who are strongly garrisoned, and military commandants established in the hall of the Chinese Government, who were strongly garrisoned. The following gentlemen were present:—The Earl of Enniskillen, the Earl of Bandon, Sir W. Vernon, M.P.; Hon. H. Corry, M.P.; Mr. Moore, M.P.; Mr. Napier, M.P.; Mr. White, M.P.; Colonel Lewis; Mr. Webb, M.P.; Mr. Vane, M.P.; Mr. Grosvenor, M.P.; Mr. Archibald, M.P.; Hon. Colonel Maxwell; M.P.; Mr. Gough, M.P.; Mr. Lacy, M.P.; Mr. F. Colville, M.P.; Mr. Lloyd, M.P.; and Mr. Currie, M.P. A very animated conversation was had to take place between Lord Palmerston and the deputation, in the course of which his lordship strongly argued against the Orange Society, as an insult to the community. We refer with pleasure to the speech of Mr. Cairns, and have no doubt that he will do full justice to the cause he has taken up, in another place.
