BECHUANALAND ANNEXED.

London, Aug. 1.—A dispatch from Cape Town says that the Cape Colony House of Assembly passed a bill annexing British Bechuanaland to Cape Colony. During the debate on the bill the Opposition severely criticised the British conditions relative to the liquor, land and native jurisdictions as tantamount to interference with the colony's institutions. No free people, the speakers declared, could accept these conditions and retain their self-respect, and the British Government would not dare attempt to enforce such conditions in the Australian colonies.

A BOY GUILTY OF MURDER.

London, Aug. 1.—In the case of Robert and Nathaniel Combes, the two boys who were accused of having murdered their mother, the jury found a verdict of wilful murder against Robert, the elder son, while Nathaniel was held as accessory before the fact. The jury added a rider to their verdict, urging that the sale of inflammatory and shocking literature be stopped on the ground that it is answerable for many crimes. The jury ignored the case of Fox, the half-witted man, who helped the boys to spend the money they obtained by pawning the goods taken from the house.

ONTARIO'S PROHIBITION APPEAL.

London, Aug. 1.—The court of the judicial committee of the Privy Council was filled today with Canadians and others interested in the Ontario prohibition appeal case. The court was opened by Lord Chancellor Halsbury and Lords Herschell, Watson, Morris, Davies, and Lord Macnaghten.

Ontario and the Dominion were represented by Messrs. J. J. MacLaren, Q.C., and Richard H. Hildene, M.P., and Messrs. E. L. Newcombe and H. W. Lochin.

TERRIBLE DEEDS OF RUSSIAN BANDITS.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 1.—Organized bands of robbers armed with Remington rifles have for a long time harassed the district of Ertman in Transcaucasia. These bands recently united under the command of a notorious leader, Abdul Heyder Khan, and attacked and burned several villages. All the men who were unable to escape were put to death, while the women and children were carried off by the bandits. A force of 200 Cossacks was sent to punish the robbers, but after a sharp fight on the night of July 25 the bandits repulsed the Cossacks. Reinforcements to the number of 300 men have been sent to assist the devoted Cossacks, and the troops are now billeted throughout the harassed district.

ANTI-CHRISTIAN RIOT.

Another anti-Christian riot has occurred at Ping Yang, a China inland mission station, 33 miles south of Wan Chow. During the dragon festival two boats ran a race. The defeated crew invited the Taoist priest to explain the cause of their disaster, and he discovered an endless idol on board the boat. He said the Christians must have been gouged out of the Christians. A band of roughs proceeded to the residence of a prominent native Christian, and warned him that if the boat was again defeated a household would be destroyed. The boat again failed to secure first place and on the 28th the raising of Christian houses and chapels commenced. Throughout the week twenty buildings were in ruins and ashes. Whether a house stood alone it was burnt. When it adjoined others it was killed down. News of these doings has caused some excitement in Wan Chow and there are fears that the city may become the scene of further outrages.

A CANADIAN FORESTER'S DEATH.

London, Aug. 2.—The following additional particulars have been obtained regarding the sudden death of Mr. McConnell, the delegate from Toronto to the session of the Supreme Court of Independent Foresters. After Dr. Or-onhyatekha, Canadian Mohawk, the supreme chief ranger, had made the biennial report in the presence of the American and Canadian delegates, the committees were elected, and the court was adjourned from biennial to triennial, and Mr. McConnell, who was sitting with the delegates, left the hall and went to the lavatory. Other delegates who went to this portion of the building were unable to enter the door, which was subsequently forced open. Mr. McConnell being found dead inside. There were many doctors at the scene, and they were hurriedly summoned, but the efforts made to revive Mr. McConnell proved unavailing. The deceased delegate was stopping at the Westminster Hotel, and his death is believed to have been due to apoplexy. Mr. McConnell had intended to make a speech before the court finally adjourned. An inquest into the cause of Mr. McConnell's death will be held.

STILL ANOTHER VICTIM.

Harry Walker Thought to Have Been Killed by Holmes.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—There were no important developments in the Holmes and Watson-Holmes inquiry. Patrick Quinn was examined in regard to the statement said to have been made that Emetine Cigrand is still alive and in a convent. He refused to tell anything on this point, he knew nothing. Inspector Fitzpatrick says he has nearly abandoned all hope of getting any information out of the Quinlans which would incriminate either them or Holmes. Holmes asserts that he is worth $200,000, and would have no difficulty in raising that amount were he out of prison. Both Holmes and his counsel assert that developments are to be looked for shortly that will clear the former.

Greensburg, Ind., Aug. 2.—Facts have developed here which make the supposition very strong that Harry Walker, who mysteriously disappeared from here about two years ago, became another victim of H. H. Holmes. Walker was about 23 years of age and a jeweler by trade. He first met Holmes in the Union Station at Indianapolis. Holmes said he was a real estate dealer and had considerable property of his own in Chicago to look after. He was desirous of employing a secretary and offered Mr. Walker a large salary to fill the position. Walker declined the position, but later was induced by Holmes to have his life insured for $15,000 and promised to pay all dues in case Walker died and he would give $10,000 of the money to his sister in Pennsylvania. Walker left shortly afterwards and went to Batesville, where he engaged in the jewelry business. He had not been there long, however, when he mysteriously disappeared. In about ten days the proprietor of the hotel at which he boarded received the following letter: "Chicago, Nov. 7, 1893. Mr. Holmes: I am secretary for Holmes, who was down to see me the other day. He will pay me $10,000 a year, which is more than I could make in Batesville or Greensburg either. I will be down in a few days and settle. Yours, HARRY WALKER."

LOCAL BREVITIES.

J. H. Reid, an East Ender, was arrested yesterday charged with defrauding James McCabe, of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, out of $28 50. Bail was taken for his appearance on Monday.

—Ald. Parnell, in particular, deserves credit for having an iron-bound clause inserted in the contract with the Barber Asphalt Paving Company to the effect that none but city laborers and teams be employed in constructing the pavements on Dundas and Richmond streets.

—Mr. Robert Amos, city, mourns the loss of his mother, at the advanced age of 81. Her husband survives her. He is now 84 years old. The aged couple not only celebrated their golden wedding, but last February celebrated the 60th anniversary of their marriage. The funeral took place yesterday, and was largely attended.

—Saturday morning the steamer Joe Milton, of Port Stanley, will run a one dollar excursion to Ashtabula, Ohio. The boat will leave on arrival of the morning train at 3 a.m. from London, and returning will leave Ashtabula Monday morning at 7 o'clock, reaching Port Stanley in time for the 1 o'clock train for London.

—A very pleasant time was enjoyed Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. Ralph Ferguson, Grand avenue, South London, by the members of the King Street Methodist choir. Mr. Fred Rossiter, choir leader, read an appropriate address. Misses Cook and Friend presented Mrs. J. Scott (nee Miss Henderson) with a handsome dinner set on behalf of the choir, of which she was a member. Mrs. Scott feelingly responded. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson provided refreshments, and were unanimously voted excellent entertainers.

NEARLY SUFFOCATED.

On Wednesday a party of young men came down from Zurich, Ont., to see the circus. They put up at the City Hotel, and during the night one of their number—Louis Foster—had a close call for his life. Although coming from Zurich, Mr. Foster had read the comic papers. From them he has received many pointers in the use of gas, and says that the thought never occurred to him to blow it out. He shut it off very carefully instead, and felt it again just after the light was extinguished to see that everything was all right. This extra care must have been the cause of the cork being partly turned. When the hotel people, noticing the smell of gas, went to Foster's room yesterday morning, he was unconscious, but medical aid was summoned, and fresh air, coupled with a vigorous Zurich constitution, enabled him to recover in time to take the forenoon train home, although he was in a shaky condition.

A FOMER LONDONER.

A St. Paul paper publishes an excellent photograph and a brief sketch of Hon. Freeman Talbot, who many will remember visiting the country some years ago as a guest of United States Consul Taylor. Mr. Talbot was born in 1811 in Tipperary, Ireland, and lived 39 years in this city, and 39 years in Le Sueur county, Minnesota. In his part of the State he is a prominent man, and has served in the Legislature, sitting as a Senator in the term of 1871 and 1872. He is now visiting friends in St. Paul. Although nearly 85 years old he says of himself: "I should not be afraid to go out tomorrow and chop two cords of wood," from which it would seem that he still feels the glow of youth in his veins. He is, in fact, remarkably well preserved, and is as lively as the traditional cricket.

DEATH OF A DELEGATE.

Supreme Secretary McGilivray, of the I. O. F., yesterday afternoon received a cable message stating that Dr. John McConnell had died suddenly in London, England. Cause not stated. Dr. McConnell held the office of Supreme Secretary of the Independent Order of Foresters. As a delegate he went with a number of other well-known Foresters to attend the Supreme Court in London.

At the post mortem examination of the remains of Mr. McConnell today it was decided that his death resulted from pulmonary apoplexy. The body was removed to the morgue and a coroner's inquest will be held on Wednesday next. At today's session of the Supreme Court of Foresters resolutions expressing condolence with the family of the deceased delegate from Toronto were passed. The Supreme Court decided, during today's session, to increase the rate of assessment upon new members between the ages of 40 and 49. The salary of the supreme chief ranger was fixed at $10,000 yearly, that of the supreme secretary at $6,000, and that of the supreme treasurer at $2,000 yearly. The auditor's salary was fixed at $1,000 per year, and that of the supreme physician at $6,000 per year.

THE COLORED BALL.

A fitting finale to the celebration of Emancipation Day was the grand ball in the City Hall. It is a long time since its interior presented so pretty an appearance. The old walls were rejuvenated by flags and bunting galore, while from the center of the ceiling depended large streamers of red, white and blue.

Many handsome designs in gray colors were scattered around. A unique and striking emblem of emancipation was a huge whip, with the lash folded, a mute but eloquent witness of slavery departed. The guests were honored with a large attendance of white spectators, who crowded both galleries and occupied seats by the score on the ground floor. It was after 10 o'clock when the ball was opened by the grand march, Mr. Thomas E. Taylor and Mrs. Williams leading. The movements were executed with such precision and grace that the onlookers applauded warmly. A programme of 26 numbers followed, and included all the popular dances. The musical incentive was furnished by the Detroit City Band orchestra, who were stationed on an elevated platform at the north end, screened by a bank of flowers and foliage. Their performance was really excellent. In the Council Chamber, which was curtained off by two magnificent flags—the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes—the tables were laden with choice refreshments, most artistically and invitingly spread.

The native charms of the ladies were enhanced by rich and elegant costumes, cream and white being the prevailing colors. With so much attractiveness, it was difficult to select the belle of the ball, but the verdict of the majority seemed to favor Miss Tallafiero, of London, who won similar honors in Detroit recently. The whole affair was a gratifying success and a credit to the colored people of London. Its excellent management was due to the following committee: Thos. E. Taylor (chairman), N. Martin, T. Logan, John Fountain.

OBNOXIOUS FISHERY REGU-LATIONS AND WESTERN M. P.'S.

The Sarnia Canadian takes issue with the "Advertiser," and denies that the constant pressure of Messrs. McGregor, Allan, Lister and other western M.P.'s had anything to do with the tardy withdrawal of the obnoxious fishery regulations by the Dominion Government. It argues that Mr. Costigan, Minister of Fisheries, refused to admit the clear presentation of the case of the Canadian fishermen and those who were affected adversely by their unjust treatment, but that he readily agreed to the change when Mr. W. J. Hanna, of Sarnia, presented the facts to him.

Our contemporary's estimate of Mr. Costigan's ability to understand the effect of the obnoxious fishery regulation either does the Minister a serious injustice, or he is really a very stupid or bitter partisan.

Years ago the western members whose names we have mentioned, backed by Hon. David Mills and Mr. Campbell, M. P. for Kent, supplied on the floor of Parliament unassailable proof that the Canadian fishermen were constantly harassed by orders that their nets should be changed to meet the views of experimenters at Ottawa. These members pointed out that while Canadians were prevented by Dominion red tape from catching fish in the Great Lakes and connecting rivers, United States fishermen were making money by catching fish on their side of the streams and of the lakes. They pointed out, particularly during the session of 1893—many months before Mr. Hanna is alleged to have taken the matter up—that the fishermen of Canada were unduly restrained and restricted in their labors, while the United States fishermen were reaping a rich reward. "We feel," said Mr. McGregor, M.P., in the House of Commons, on March 27, 1893, "that the Czar of Russia is not treating his subjects as harshly as this Administration has treated our people in this matter of the fishing laws." Mr. Allan, M.P., then said: "Through the policy that has been pursued by the Government our fishermen have been outraged in the past," and he gave unassailable statistics to prove his statement. Mr. Lister's views were stated with equal strength, and both members presented petitions from many fishermen in support of them. Hon. David Mills ridiculed the motion entertained by the men at Ottawa that the fish found on the Canadian side are confined to that side, and do not cross the lake or river to the United States shore. On this most absurd theory the Government regulations were defended. Mr. Campbell (Kent) condemned the constant changing, at a moment's notice, of regulations affecting the fishermen. They should have ample notice, he said, when changes were contemplated. This view was endorsed by Mr. McMillan, of Huron.

Surely our Sarnia contemporary will admit that the western Parliamentary representatives named did their full duty to their constituents in fighting the obnoxious Government fishery regulations, and in compelling the men in power to give them up. That it should take years to effect the change, imposing a grievous loss upon the fishermen, and much injury to other Canadians, must be laid to the blame of those in power at Ottawa. The western M.P.'s, as we have proved, gave the Government convincing data years before the Ministers acted, or before the alleged all-powerful Mr. Hanna appeared on the scene.

BRITISH EDUCATION GRANTS.
In Great Britain, the Parliamentary grant for elementary education is distributed to the schools, whether conducted by boards or under the management of churches, in accordance with the work done, as reported by the Government Inspectors. Last year the amounts were distributed as follows: Board schools received £2,653,656; Church of England schools, £2,732,436; British and undenominational schools, £10,127; Roman Catholic schools, £321,421; and Wesleyan schools, £198,276. The average attendance of children at all these schools was 4,250,000. The total Parliamentary grant being £6,315,916, the appropriation was about 30 shillings (say, $7 50) per capita.

This year, apples are very scarce in Western Ontario, but the crop is large in the Niagara Peninsula, and as the yield is unusually large in Great Britain and a fair average in the United States it is not likely that prices will be high.

POINTS.

The New York Times urges that the Canadian marksmen, now on their way back from Bisley, should cross the border and give our neighbors a specimen of their prowess in the approaching meeting at Sea Girt. Certainly, international rivalry of this kind should be encouraged. Mr. C. S. Hyman's cricket team is now showing the Yankees what our cricketers can do. Let Mr. Hayhurst, the Queen's prize man of this year, organize a Canadian shooting team, and give them a sample of our skill in that direction. No doubt the riflemen would make as enviable a record as the cricketers.

The men primarily responsible for the boodling at Ottawa were allowed to go scot free. One or two subordinates were arrested, and sent to jail. But, one by one, they have been pardoned by the Government on the ground that they would enjoy better health if given their liberty. There are hundreds of convicts in the penitentiaries and jails who doubtless hold the same views with regard to the effects of fresh and free air on their bodily and mental condition. But the Minister of Justice makes no effort to set them free. Why? Is there one law for the treatment of friends of the Government who have the misfortune to be found out, and another for the ordinary criminal? It seems like it. The country wants a change. There should be no discrimination on the part of our rulers in the treatment of high and low, rich and poor.

Vice-President Shaughnessy, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who has just returned from the Pacific coast, says he regards the Kootenay mining district as a wonderful country. It is full of prospectors, and developments that will pay are expected. The natural resources of this country are all that can be desired. What we need is extended markets—the greatest freedom possible to buy and to sell.

Editor McKay, of the Ridgeway Plaindealer, has gone west in search of health. He misses it by not coming to London and its recuperative baths.

An interesting paper dealing with the progress of the idea of "An Arbitration Treaty Between Great Britain and the United States" appears in the August Arena from the pen of Prof. Geo. H. Emmott, of Johns Hopkins University. Prof. Emmott, who came to Johns Hopkins from Oxford, writes upon the English sentiment in the matter, and says that the great body of the English people are ready to heartily co-operate in any possible scheme which may be proposed by the Government of the United States for the practical solution of all matters of judicial decision not involving the existence of the national life. Three hundred and fifty-four members of the British House of Commons recently signed a memorial to the President and Congress of the United States, declaring their hope that Congress would invite the British Government to join in framing an arbitration treaty. If the United States will only take this initiative, as she can well afford to do with her peculiar position among the powers, it looks as though there will be no further danger of great wars among the English-speaking people, and this would do much to insure the peace of the world and the expansion of commerce, science and civilization.

The New Specific Remedy Is Being Extensively Used at Ottawa.

Ottawa, July 29.—The marvelous recovery of Mr. G. H. Kent, of this city, from Bright's disease, by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills is still fresh in the memories of Ottawa people, and the remedy is being freely recommended both by druggists and private citizens. The similar wonderful cures of Dr. A. G. McCormick, of Richmond, Quebec, and of Mr. Arthur Coley, of Somerset, Manitoba, to say nothing of many others, are generally quoted in favor of the assertion that no remedy of modern times has gone so successfully through a severe trial, and has been so efficacious in all cases of kidney trouble. It is also proving itself invaluable in the milder forms of sickness which appear during the summer.

The Celebration at Dresden a Success.

Hon. D. Mills on the Past History of the Race,

In Slavery and Out of It, in British and American Dominions, Great Historical Events Attractively Discussed.

The Cruelties of Bondage and the Responsibilities of a Free People.

Dresden, Aug. 1.—The colored people of this neighborhood celebrated Emancipation Day with a grand demonstration this afternoon. Among the speakers a number of prominent citizens occupied the platform. The meeting was held in the shady grove near the Erie and Huron Railway station, and fully 2,000 took part in the demonstration. Three brass bands enlivened the occasion, and the celebration was a great success. On being introduced to the large audience, Hon. David Mills said:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen—I rejoice with you on this very important occasion. You are here to commemorate the emancipation of your race from the chains of slavery. Sixty-one years have passed this day since that event took place. These sixty-one years have been filled with great discoveries and great reforms; but perhaps no one of them is calculated to make a more profound impression upon the progress of the world than that one which you are assembled this day to commemorate. This is the third of your emancipation celebrations which I have had the honor to attend. I say honor, because I think it is a high honor to assist in the commemoration of an event which concerns in the highest degree the temporal well-being of some millions of the human family.

The first of these celebrations which I attended was at Buxton in 1857. That celebration was conducted under the auspices of the late Mr. King, a name dear to those who hate oppression, who took so lively an interest in the emancipation of the colored people in the United States, and who sought to provide for them a refuge here. Many were then present, and I was no longer with us. Dr. Irving, of Hamilton; the Rev. Principal Willis, of Knox College; Archibald McKellar, and other prominent citizens of Kent. There was also present, Lord Althorp, then a young man, who had just been returned for the first time as a member to the House of Commons, and who in recent years as Earl Spencer has been a great service to the cause of the inhabitants of the British islands the gratification of their aspirations for a larger measure of self-government. I can this day recall that vast assemblage. There were present many persons who then enjoyed, as you do now, the blessings of freedom; but they had an experience which the vast majority of you have never had, a knowledge of the cruelties of slavery. They realized to the full what it was to be counted the property of others, and they have, on many occasions, experienced the brutality of men, unrestrained by the fear of the law, and by a humane public opinion. Five years ago I spoke to you of the CRUELITIES OF SLAVERY in the British West Indies—how humane men, in seeking to ameliorate the condition of the slave, were treated as enemies of their race, were imprisoned, and perished in loathsome dungeons; how women were murdered with the lash. I shall not revert to the cruel, repugnant feature of slavery today. We are removed farther in point of time from these events. Other duties now devolve upon us than to brood over the cruelties of the past. We have to remember not only the evils from which you have been delivered, but to rejoice in the freedom which you possess, and to rightly appreciate all the advantages of that freedom. I would not have you forget the evils of slavery. I would not have you forget the cruelties that your fathers endured to perish from your traditions; but I should wish them to be handed down from generation to generation. Let it be known to the son by the father, and to the daughter by the mother. Let them be told again and again until they become an indelible part of the very existence of every son and daughter, that they may know in the commemoration of this day the terrible evils which they have escaped, as well as the blessings which they have gained. Let Byron in a sonnet on the Prison of Chillon, where Bonivard had been chained to a pillar, around which he had walked until he had worn a path in the stone pavement, draw a vivid picture of the devotion of the heart of man to freedom and its detestation of oppression. He says:

"Eternal spirit of this chainless mind,
Brightest in dungeons, Liberty, thou art."
For there thy habitation is the heart—
The heart which love of thee alone can bind;
And when thy sons to fetters are consigned,
To fetters and the damp vault's day-
less gloom,
Their country conquers with their martyrdom,
And Freedom's fame finds wings on every breeze.
Chillon, thy prison is a holy place,
And thy sad floor an altar—for 'twas trod
Until his very steps have left a trace
Worn as if the cold pavement were a sod,
By Bonivard—May none those marks efface.
For thy appeal from tyranny to God.

EMANCIPATION IN THE BRITISH DOMINIONS.

was brought about by peaceful means, and largely through the unrelenting exertions of Buxton, Clarkson and Wilberforce. There were held in the West Indies at the time 800,000 slaves. The Emancipation Act became law on the 30th of August, 1833. It came into operation on the first of August, 1834. The first of August fell on Friday, and throughout the British West Indies there was to be a holiday from Thursday night until the following Monday. In the island of Antigua the planters had agreed to hold a grand ball on the first of August, but that all the slaves should be free upon the appointed day. On Thursday night they gathered into the churches and chapels awaiting the hour of midnight, when they should be freed from the condition of servitude to that of freedom. It is easy to understand how intense was the excitement of these assembled congregations. It was to them a passover night. When the cathedral bell announced that midnight had come, and there was no longer a slave upon the island, the excitement broke all restraint; in some cases the masters attended with their slaves, and shook hands with them, and wished them joy with their new born freedom. Some sang, and others prayed, that they might become free from the slavery of sin as they had become free from that slavery which the law of man had imposed. I do not mean to suggest that the stroke of the cathedral clock put an end to all discontent. The master could not at once lay aside his habit of command, nor could he who had before little interest in the product of his labor suddenly become an industrious and thrifty freeman; but in all this great empire man had no longer property in man. It was perhaps fortunate for the colored race in the West Indies that they should have been in numbers so preponderant, for they have been thrown almost wholly upon their own intellectual resources, and have, as tillers of the soil, been left without that assistance which might have, if wisely afforded, contributed to their rapid progress in industrial civilization. We must not forget that the civilization of Europe has been built upon that of Greece, Rome and Palestine, and that it has been fitted hundred years in arriving at that degree of progress which it now exhibits. But I am sure that though we are here today, rejoicing in the fact that in no part of the British Empire does slavery longer exist, it is not because of your personal connection with the Emancipation Act of 1833. The great majority of those who hear me are not the descendants of persons once held to servitude in the British West Indies, but in the neighboring republic. Slavery in the British dominions perished by the operations of law. The people of the United States put an end to it by

THE MOST STUPENDOUS WAR of modern times. They were compelled to destroy slavery in order to preserve the Union. Six billion dollars were spent. Half a million of lives were lost, and the masters received nothing, but vengeance executed what justice would. When the republic was founded, slavery had not become a great political force. Jefferson, himself a Virginian, desired in the Declaration of Independence to charge the curse of slavery upon George III., but the slaveholders even then had a more favorable opinion of it than Mr. Jefferson, and all allusion to it was omitted. It gradually died out in the Northern States, and in the more northern of the States that retained slavery, as the land became exhausted, the feeling in favor of its continuance grew weaker. Until Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee became slave-breeding States. After that the northern slave States became as fiercely pro-slavery as those situated farther to the south. The Constitution of the United States recognized slavery, in a provision which authorized a person held in service in one State, and who escaped to another, to be delivered up upon claim of the party to whom the service was due. This was a feeble recognition. The slavery sentiment in the United States underwent a great change for the worse, chiefly through the teaching of Calhoun. He maintained that slavery was not an evil, but the normal condition of those then held to servitude; and this doctrine became not merely the political doctrine of southern politicians, but an essential part of the religious teaching from every pulpit, in every slave State of the Union. It was a part of the southern gospel. It was the lot with which it was a mortal sin not to be content. The cruelties to which the slave was subjected, the pitiable condition in which he found his way across the ocean, the fact that he was hunted with bloodhounds, like a wild beast, excited sympathy in those who beheld him, and humane men like Channing, Garrison, Phillips, Lovejoy, and others, formed abolition societies. So thoroughly had the public opinion of the United States become reconciled to slavery, that the leaders in the abolition movement were regarded as INFIDELS, and were shunned by those who laid claim to orthodox opinions. On one occasion Mr. Garrison was assailed by a disciple of Calhoun, who reminded him that slave holders were Christians, and that slaves had their prayer meetings in the south in honor of Christ. Garrison replied "that they prayed not to a slaveholder or a slave-breeding Jesus." The slave holders in this country that strikes off chains. In this country the Jesus of Galilee has become obsolete. A profession in him is no longer a test of love for the poor or the oppressed. No one objects to his course in Judea. The Pharisees are dead. The Jesus here believed in is the most respectable person in the United States. He believes in slavery, and in war, and in giving the Mexicans hell." Garrison perhaps more than any other man duly appreciated how far away slavery was in spirit and in principle from Christianity. He had no regard for its religious defenders, who professed a reverence for the person of our Lord, and ignored and hated the work which emanated from his spirit and his life.

preserve their ascendancy in the Senate by the multiplication of slave States. First Louisiana was acquired from France, and out of its southern portion three slave States were formed, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Missouri, which gave to the south six additional representatives in the Senate. Then Florida from Spain, Kentucky formed out of Virginia, Tennessee from North Carolina, and Alabama and Mississippi from West Georgia. Then there were filibustering expeditions across the Mexican border. Settlements were made in Texas. After a time, Texas became independent, and a little later a further step was taken to admit Texas into the Union, as a slave State. Then under Mr. Polk, a southern President, war was declared against Mexico, with a view to a further acquisition of territory, in order that an area might

A WALKOVER FOR THE CANADIANS.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—For the fourth time Canada's cricket representatives defeated a Chicago team, today's game with Pullman being won in a walk-over. The first three men who went to bat for Canada scored enough runs to win the game, and to ensure, but after the heavy-weight battery, Walker, Goldingham, Terry and Laine had been retired, the Pullmans braced up and sent the rest of the team to the tent for an evening rest, although the byes were numerous. The score was 202 to 129. Eight of the Pullman side were bowled out by Laine and "Giddy," who, with Terry, are a couple of strength of strength. Tomorrow's visiting team meet an all-Chicago team. #### PRIZE FOR THE CANADIANS.

The Chicago papers continue to praise Captain Hyman's London-Toronto eleven. Terry was the hero of today's game, and the Chicago papers published his photograph. The Times-Herald says of the match:

"For so slow a wicket as is the one at Fullerton avenue, 218 runs is a record. The chief credit of the performance belongs to Terry, who fully sustained his reputation as the best bat in Canada. He was at the wicket for one hour and three-quarters, twice he hit Cumming over the pavilion, and, though in the middle of the inning he steered down, both the beginning and finish of his display were marked by class. Terry, and driving, he had a chance at the wicket when he had made 61, the inning was without a mistake, and as he was several times hit by bumpy balls, his nerve cannot be gainsaid."

The honor was wrested from him by Joe Patchen in a most exciting contest. The second heat was the beginning of the surprise show, as the favorite, the horse and his jockey came into the stretch neck and neck, after having paced the middle half in 1 minute. Jack Currie, who was driving Patchen, seemed to push the back stallion under the wire, and he won by the shortest kind of a nose in 2:04 1/4. The last two heats were a trifle easier for the black stallion, although he won by less than a length each time. It was the fastest four-heat race ever paced, and the last heat, in 2:05 1/4, was the fastest fourth heat ever paced.

GOODWOOD CUP.

London, Aug. 2.—This was the fourth and last day of the Goodwood race meeting. ### ONE WEEK UNDER A HAY MOW.

Adrian, Mich., Aug. 2.—Humphrey Taber, jun., a young farmer living ten miles west of here, has been mourned as dead the last week. On July 22 he disappeared from his home, and was last seen going in the direction of his barn. Nothing was heard of him until yesterday, when one of his hired men found him in the hay mow and, disheveled and in a state of distress, he was rescued. He had been in the mow for some time, and he had no idea how long he had been there. The doctors say he will probably die.

ful passing of what was really the first great act of Parliament elected after the Reform Bill of 1832. One hundred millions of dollars were appropriated to pay the cost of securing the freedom of the slaves. This, though an enormous amount of money, is a small sum compared with the cost of the civil war in the United States, which was the direct result of slavery. It is said that over six thousand millions of dollars were spent in this war. It is difficult to grasp the meaning of six thousand millions of dollars, an amount which, if divided amongst the people of Canada, would give over twelve hundred dollars to every man, woman and child in this great Dominion. In addition to the money expended, over half a million of lives were lost in the struggle. Jefferson, one of the fathers of the American Union, referring to slavery, said: "I tremble for my country when I remember that God is just. We might have trembled for our country, and how severe was the punishment inflicted upon her through this accursed slavery."

The honor was wrested from him by Joe Patchen in a most exciting contest. The second heat was the beginning of the surprise show, as the favorite, the horse and his jockey came into the stretch neck and neck, after having paced the middle half in 1 minute. Jack Currie, who was driving Patchen, seemed to push the back stallion under the wire, and he won by the shortest kind of a nose in 2:04 1/4. ## The Secret Out.

"Then," rejoined Mr. Cameron, glowing, "her husband will take you into his confidence. Mr. Gryce, I love my wife. How deeply and how entirely I ever knew until I saw the shadow of death creeping over her. I must, therefore, have been for her sake, in a terrible suffering, if not in a terrible danger, to see her if I cannot make it apparent in some way that the story she told you of Mildred Farley's unkindness and its consequences. What will do it for I am sure something and something will. Tell me, then, what will it take to satisfy you of her innocence. For though you do not say it, I see that you are the one who took the phial from her jewel casket."

"Dr. Cameron," was the quick reply, "the strongest proof of your wife's innocence, as you yourself phrase it, is the lack of any apparent motive on her part to wish ill to the girl. Make that apparent lack an undoubted one, and we must believe her story, preposterous as you yourself deem it. In other words, unravel the whole secret of their connection. Prove that Mildred Farley had cause sufficient for desiring death and make the conduct of Julius Moleworth seem in accord with the spirit and good judgment of the man."

"I will do it," came from Dr. Cameron's white lips. "I can learn nothing that will give me pain which your suspicion has done."

"And if in doing this you come across others working in the same field?"

"I can but acknowledge their superior right. Not a word of mine, but for love, you from official duty. I have neither the facilities nor perhaps the courage to vie with you. And with a bow of formal politeness he took a hurried leave."

CHAPTER XXII.
Dr. Cameron may have been rash in the making of these promises, but once having made them he meant to keep them. The sight of his wife's pale face, staring blankly from the almost unruined pillow where it lay, would have strengthened his determination. It had ever weakened. It brought back so many memories which made her unresponsive glance almost unendurable to bear. If he could but see it beam again with pleasure! If at the first dawn of intelligence in that blank eye, he might lean over her and whisper, "Joy, joy, my darling. All that troubled you is vanished and gone into nothing. Not a word of mine, but for love, you from official duty. I have neither the facilities nor perhaps the courage to vie with you. And with a bow of formal politeness he took a hurried leave."

But between hope and fulfillment there is a great gulf. As he withdrew from her side and sat down in his boudoir to think, he asked himself if he possessed any secret knowledge likely to lead to an elucidation of the problem he had set himself. He thought he did. There was a fact that had once attracted his attention and then been forgotten again until this new danger threatening Genevieve had roused all his faculties and awakened all his memories. It was this: At the moment when some weeks before, when Mr. Gryce and himself stood peering through the curtain at the hotel, which Mildred Farley had been writing, a pile of manuscript, or rather a number of closely written sheets of paper, tied into a small roll. It had seemed important at the time, and he had not in recalling the realization came with great force that those sheets might have been letters; and that letters held and cherished by her at such an hour must contain facts relative to her love and life, that it would be of inestimable value to him now to learn. Where was that roll? It had not been found in her bag or mention would have been made of it at the time. Had it been destroyed, or was it still in existence? It was certainly his first duty to inquire.

But of whom? Dr. Gryce? That would not do. Though Dr. Cameron felt every confidence in the detective's integrity, it had become his ambition to refute that detective's suspicions, and how could he hope to do so if he gave away the one clue which he imagined he possessed to a different conclusion from that which present circumstances put upon the police? That he could always fall back upon the detective's knowledge was his excuse for attempting to take the first steps without it. Besides, Mr. Gryce might not know any more about the matter than he.

The packet might have been removed from the table before that gentleman took his place at the curtain, and if so, the probabilities were that he did not even know of its existence.

"Let me see," quoth Dr. Cameron to himself, "if I can transfer myself back into that gloomy room and into the presence of that despairing girl. And he dropped his head forward on his hands, shutting out to the best of his ability all sight and consciousness of surrounding objects. "It was a picture not soon to be forgotten. Let me see if I cannot recall it." And he bent his mind upon that departed scene and soon beheld rising before him in detail that little, stiffly-furnished room, with its one occupant kneeling on the lonely hearth, watching with tearful and miserable gaze the burning of a single sheet of paper. "A single sheet," he repeated to himself.

"Like the roll, but not part of it. For that was tied with a tiny blue ribbon, and lay apart and by itself on a table some few feet away. Had she been burning the roll the circumstances would surely have been different. She would have held it in her hand or the ribbon would at least have been untied, and the sheets laid ready to her reach. No, the paper she burned was a draft of the note she afterwards left for Dr. Moleworth. Though the recollection was a dim one, he felt quite certain he had also observed a folded paper lying beside the rolled ones. Of the ink bottle and pen he retained a decided impression, and he even remembered how the pen lay half on and half off the table, as if it had rolled thus far and stopped.

But the roll, the roll! What had she done with it? Burned it afterwards? There was no proof of this. There had been plenty of testimony as to the finding of the one bit of charred paper he had seen blazing on the hearth, but none as to the discovery of the greater quantity which the destruction of the roll would have occasioned. How, then, had she disposed of it? He tried to put himself in Mildred Farley's place and he tried to realize what she would do if these letters were what he imagined them to be, tokens of affection from the man she no longer desired to marry. She would not leave them behind her to be returned to him by careless and possibly inquisitive hands. They were too sacred for that, possibly too precious. Since she had not the courage to return these compromising sheets at the moment he had displeased her, she would take them with her and keep them till time and opportunity came for disposing of them. She would put them in her bag; and since from a nice calculation of time and distance he had already satisfied himself that she must have gone without any delay up to the house of the doctor, he concluded that she carried them into Mrs. Gryce's house. But had they gone out with her? That was not so easy to determine; for let alone the possible interference of Mr. Gryce, the purpose and determination of Dr. Moleworth showed him perfectly capable of opening her bag and taking out these papers either before leaving the house or during that tedious ride he had with her dead body. But if he had not meddled with them and Mr. Gryce was ignorant of the fact of their existence, where in Mrs. Gryce's house would he find them? Why, in Genevieve's room, of course. And where in Genevieve's room?

As he asked himself this question he raised his head and saw that his eyes fell on a certain chintz-covered sofa that filled one corner of the apartment in which he sat; and, remembering that it was the one article which Genevieve had requested him to have brought over from her old home, he rose hurriedly and approached it. It was old, it was ugly, it was uncomfortable; he had never seen her lie or even sit on it, and yet she had not been easy till it was brought into the house and established in this room, where each and every object surrounding it was a work of the highest art and the greatest expense. There must be a reason for this interest in so incongruous an article. Could it be? He did not complete his thought, but rapidly stopped and ran his hand around the sofa. He stopped suddenly. He had touched something smooth and firm and round. It was a roll of paper, and the moment he drew it out, in search of it for the one he was in search of, by the looks of the writing upon it, and the small thread of blue ribbon that surrounded it.

It was one of those cases where perverse or illogical reasoning still brings one directly to a definite issue. There had been a dozen contingencies against the hope that he would find that roll still in existence, and in a spot available to him; yet they had all gone for nothing, and the one line of argument he had allowed himself to pursue had brought him straight to the object he was seeking. It does not happen often, but it happened in this case, and he accepted the result with gratitude.

be added to the United States, out of which new slave States might be carved. There had been added to the Union many free States, by the purchase of a territory, and by immigration. Slavery forbade skilled labor, and the kinds of agricultural pursuits for which northern States were fitted were not such as would permit of the profitable employment of slave labor. The South had hoped that California would have become a slave State, but the discovery of gold, and the tens of thousands of seekers of the precious metal who flocked into that territory settled the question in favor of freedom. The next struggle was over Kansas. Then the Missouri Compromise, which barred the establishment of slave States north of 36 1-2 degrees north latitude, was repealed as ultra vires.

Three interpretations of the constitution now sprang up in Congress and the Supreme Court. The first was the ancient interpretation, that slavery was local, and depended upon the positive law of the State in which it was established, and could not exist outside of the territories, and in which that law operated. The only exception to this was that provision of the constitution which gave the right to reclaim a party who escaped from service. The slave holder took a slave, by his own voluntary act, into a free State, the law of the free State emancipated him, for he could not claim him under a provision of the constitution, which only related to the territories. The second view of the constitution also maintained that the territories were under the absolute jurisdiction of Congress; that it could make all laws necessary and proper for their government, and had over such territories sovereign authority. A second view of the constitution was the one promulgated by Mr. Douglas, and was related only to the territories, and was known as the doctrine of

SQUATTER SOVEREIGNTY.
The advocates of this doctrine held that persons who went into the territories settled them, and carried with them the sovereign powers of a State to establish such a government, subject to its being republican, as they thought fit. They would establish or exclude slavery, and exercise all the powers of self-government belonging to a State. It was during the period that this doctrine was most prominently before the public mind, that the conflict in Kansas was carried on. The South, until Kansas was lost, accepted it. The third doctrine was that put forward by the South. The South held that the States were sovereign, and that the territories were entitled to protection for himself and his property in every part of the Union. That going into a free State with his slaves, so long as he did not become a citizen, he was not guilty of crime, and the terms of the Union, as much entitled to protection as a northern man would be, and for any property which he carried with him, were as good as his own. The South held that the territories were entitled to protection for himself and his property in every part of the Union. That going into a free State with his slaves, so long as he did not become a citizen, he was not guilty of crime, and the terms of the Union, as much entitled to protection as a northern man would be, and for any property which he carried with him, were as good as his own.

The South strove to protect its peculiar institution by the manipulation of slaves States, and by an ascendancy in the Senate to counterbalance the numerical superiority of the North in the House of Representatives. When the Kansas conflict ended they were numerically inferior in both Houses. The election of Lincoln in the presidential convention of 1860, which refused to accept of a free State man as a candidate for the Presidency, showed that they staked their assent to continuing in the Union upon the condition that the chief magistrate of the Republic should always be a Southern man. With the election of Lincoln that condition came to an end, and the South declared against the Union. An institution like slavery, in the very nature of things, aggressive; and the South grew in arrogance until every other interest in the republic was subordinated to the right of the slave to hold another as his chattel. The war which this arrogance provoked destroyed slavery; and those who at the beginning were ready to give additional security for its maintenance for the sake of the Union, had forced upon their unwilling vision the obvious fact that between freedom and slavery there could be no peace, and that the Union could only be maintained by the complete triumph of the one or the other. The giants in the old classic fable could not scale the battlements of heaven, no more could slavery triumph in its contest with freedom. John Brown's body lay mouldering in the ground, but his soul went marching on, until victory was achieved and every slave became free.

THE FUTURE OF THE COLORED RACE.
is, in the neighboring republic, still an unsolved problem. What it is to be I am not here going to discuss. Let us hope for the best. It is not their color, but our own which most concerns us. It is our business to consider that this country of which we are citizens, requires from us. It is for us to consider how much the future of the State are bound up in what we are and what we may become. We see in the neighboring republic how rapidly it rushed on to conflict when men undertook, in the name of Christianity, everywhere to proclaim that evil was good. Nothing can be more true than this, that the fortunes of a country are inseparably joined to the personal character of its people. No nation can rise to eminence whose people have no moral stamina, and who do not prefer honesty and truth and duty to what seems a momentary personal or pecuniary advantage. The greatest work of political philosophy that has ever been written is the Old Testament, and it everywhere proclaims that national greatness is the outcome of personal excellence, without personal excellence it can neither be attained nor maintained, and that a noble character is the most precious gift that is in the power of man to bring to the altar of his country. The man who is really free is the man who is emancipated from the slavery of vice, who considers the interests of his neighbors as well as his own, who endeavors to do to others as he would that others should do to him, and who trains up those over whom he has authority to deal honestly, to speak the truth, to be industrious, and thereby aid in maintaining constraint, peace and good-will in the community, and to the best of his ability, the property of the State. These are the obligations which free men owe to a free State, and which they are loyally bound to discharge.

congratulate you on the success of your celebration, and trust that the lessons which it suggests may be always worthy of the day."

The honorable gentleman resumed his seat amid loud applause.

AN AWFUL CLOUDBURST

Sweeps Town the Casper Mountain—A Number of Campers Drowned.

Casper, Wyo., Aug. 1.—A terrible cloudburst occurred south of this city on Casper Mountain, at the head of Garden Creek, last night. The creek is about seven miles long from mouth to source, and is lined with camps. Near the head of the creek is a summer resort. At this point all the buildings were crushed and swept away, and the site of the hotel is buried beneath debris twenty feet deep.

S. Newby and his family had retired when all at once they were surrounded with water, and a race for life commenced. Newby heard his wife scream for help. He grabbed for her, but missed, and in the next second he was carried on by a great rush of water. That was the last he saw of his wife and baby. Newby was saved by clinging to a floating tree. Mrs. Newby was found this morning beneath a pile of debris twenty feet high. The boy had not been found.

Near the Newby Camp was camped Samuel Harrison's two children, who were caught in the flood and carried away. Their bodies were recovered this morning.

Now see that your blood is pure. Good health follows the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is the great blood purifier.

The man with thin legs wants to avoid golf stockings, if he has any desire whatever to be picturesque.

A LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron, states: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than a half-bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me any good."

London and Environs

—The authorities at Wolsley Barracks have again commenced enlisting. Several coach loads went to Port this morning. It was McCormick's annual picnic.

—Mr. John Snow is convalescent, after a severe attack of blood poisoning, and will be able to attend to his duties in a few days.

—Advertisements are faithful mirrors of the times—so faithful, in fact, that "the story of our lives from year to year" might easily be made up from their data alone.

—Richard Hargreaves, the young Londoner who was so badly injured at Buffalo a week ago, died in the hospital there yesterday morning. His mother, Mrs. R. Hargreaves, King Street, and his sister, Mrs. Obadiah Richards, Queen's Avenue, were present at the death-bed. Mr. Hargreaves leaves a wife and one child. The body will be brought here for burial.

—Donations for June and July are gratefully acknowledged by the trustees of the Convalescent Home as follows: The Countess of Aberdeen, a book, "Upward and Onward"; a friend, $30; Mrs. Graydon, fruit and sugar; Mrs. Bullen, reading matter and vegetables, etc.; King's Daughters, Memorial Church, cake; Mr. Goodge, milk; Mrs. M. and Mr. De la Hooke, preserves; Mrs. Macbeth and Mrs. Theophilus Willis, reading matter; Mr. J. E. Boomer, confectionery; English Church and First Congregational Church, flower missions, flowers.

—At this morning's Police Court Christopher Moriarty, who is charged by his mother with assault, was again bailed until Tuesday next. His mother says she will be content if he will leave the house.

—A man, who was charged with allowing his horse to stray at large, was allowed to go on suspended sentence. Thomas Yeo, a Wolsley Barracks man, was drunk. He was sent to the hospital for trial. Noah, an Indian, who also looked upon the wine when it was red, was discharged to leave town. Frank Willis, another drunk, was also discharged.

—Among prominent former Londoners visiting in the city is Mr. J. A. Stevenson, now a leading business man of Brookfield, Missouri, who is accompanied by his wife and his sister-in-law, Miss Josephine Utley. The party are visiting the parents of Mr. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stevenson, 234 Piccadilly street. It is a good many years since Mr. Stevenson left the city, and he is now a well-to-do man. His early training, and though he has been prosperous out West, his recurring visits to the old home and the pleasing associations of the Forest City are always most enjoyable. He says he is proud of London.

LONDON SCHOOL FAVORED.
Lieutenant Noble Bartlett has returned from the London Military School, where he has been taking a special course. He took his certificate with ease, and is now eligible for the rank of captain. His rank of lieutenant, which was provisional, will now be confirmed. It says that the school of instruction held here last year by Sergt-Maj. Munro proved a great assistance to him and made his work on this occasion much easier. The London school seems to be a favored institution, as many come from the east, passing by the Toronto school.

—Windsor Record.

HORRIBLE BURNING ACCIDENT.
A sad accident happened at the home of Mr. Coulson, Queen Street, South London, about 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening. Mr. Coulson snatched a vessel from the stove containing a combustible fluid, which had taken fire, and threw the contents outside the door. His infant boy was sitting unclothed before the door, and to the father's horror he found that he had thrown the burning fluid over his child, and before the flames could be smothered and the clothes removed the little one's head, face, neck and arms were burned. The entire skin was burnt off the child's head, face, neck and arms, while the eyes, it is feared, are seriously injured. Dr. Ferguson, the medical attendant, does not hold out much hope of recovery. Mr. Coulson's hands were badly burned, but his greatest distress is over the pitiable accident to his child. The little one is only a year and a half of age.

We are quoting very low prices for Lily White Oil, Aurora Light, Water White Benzine, gasoline, machine and cylinder oil. Send for quotations. Phone No. 307. EMPIRE OIL COMPANY.

Mrs. Foster, of Kent street, has just recovered from a serious attack of La Grippe. This is the second siege she has had of the influenza, the first of which attacked Mrs. Foster about three years ago, and left her with a very troublesome cough, accompanied with chronic bronchitis, and a complication of other diseases, which made it almost impossible for her to attend church without disturbing the congregation by coughing, and, indeed, Mrs. Foster assures us that so bad were the spasms that she often feared she would burst a blood vessel during one of these severe attacks. It was very natural that under such circumstances numerous friends would recommend as many different "cure alls." She tried Cherry Pectoral, Tar, Linseed and other preparations, but was growing generally worse when a friend who had been benefited by Barkwell's Bronchial Balsam advised her to try that, and in a few days she was out of bed, and the best feature is that she is now entirely freed from all symptoms of the Bronchitis, of which she never hoped to be cured. Mr. Millar, a neighbor, also had a bad cough and was completely cured by the same preparation.
