THOUSANDS OF VISITORS COME TO MAKE FARMERS' DAY BIGGEST IN HISTORY

All Departments of the Exhibition Are Claiming Unprecedented Interest of the Crowds—Agricultural Exhibits Regarded by Farmers As Best Ever Shown.

IDEAL WEATHER CONDITIONS FAVOR FAIR

ATTENDANCE AT FAIR.
This Year	Last Year
Monday.....22,500	15,000
Tuesday.....20,000	14,000
Totals.....42,500	29,000

If the remaining days of the Fair attract such numbers as registered Monday, Tuesday and today, a record will be established which future years will find almost impossible to surpass. Judging by crowds attending the Fair today, the third of the exhibition, another huge total of paid admissions will be counted tonight.

For "Farmers' Day" at Western Fair is more than upholding its reputation for being the most successful of the week. At peak of morn agriculturists from all parts of Ontario swarmed in to the city by train, and motor, and the crowds promise to exceed by many thousands all attendance records of the past.

From an agrarian's viewpoint, the attractions are infinitely better than those of any other year, and the response elicited from farmer and city alike has been wonderfully gratifying.

All departments of the exhibition are claiming unprecedented interest, and every booth, from the minute gates of the big exhibition grounds, to the unrestrained enthusiasm which everywhere abounded. This year new spirit seems to actuate visitors—a spirit, not of mad hilarity which characterized the Old Boys' reunion but of goodwill and a sincere desire to make the Fair a success.

No Knockers Anywhere. For the first time in Fair history the habitual knocker is a minus quantity. Everybody from director to newboy appears keyed up with enthusiasm. Wherever you go you hear the Fair is the "best ever," and the booming spirit is contagious.

Nearly all judging has been completed and guests today were able to pick out the winning entries by the red and blue prize tickets. The augmented staff is utilizing every minute to get the returns in order, and the awarding of prizes will probably be arranged for Friday.

More than half the visitors today were from outside points, special rates prevailing on both railways. Every train which arrived this morning was crowded, and the downtown streets were black with people coming from the railroad stations. At the grounds the size of the attendance was again evident in the lines which waited before the booths to obtain the right change for admission.

ASKS WHEN MAYOR TO GET SHOWDOWN WITH ST. RAILWAY

Alderman Douglass Not at All Optimistic Regarding Lower Fares.

AWAIT MEETING

Ald. Leonard Douglass, member of the transportation commission, questions when Mayor Wenig is going to have a "show-down" with the street railway company, and adds that he fails to understand his object for launching at this juncture on another campaign for reduced fares.

"Reduced fares would be fine if we could get them," Ald. Douglass continued, but he acknowledges that he is not at all optimistic over the prospect, as outlined yesterday by the mayor.

"Nothing can be done about his suggestion until the transportation commission meets again," he continued. "In any event it won't interfere with Sir Adam Beck securing a purchase price from the company. I expect that he will have a figure from the company authorities in due course. He's probably working on it now."

As sponsor in the council for Sir Adam Beck as official mediator in the street railway muddle, Ald. Douglass is strongly opposed to any extension of the street railway franchise for any term of years whatever under the provisions of the present agreement, bylaw 918.

"We can't allow the street railway to put it over the people as in past years," he cautioned. "If there is any extension of the franchise, there must be a new agreement, and the company would be made to adhere to every clause contained therein. Not as in the past when upon hundreds of occasions, they have broken the regulations. The city must be amply protected."

The mayor insisted at the first of the year and for months previous that we should have a "show-down" with the street railway. I have seen it yet, and I am still opposed to granting any further concessions to the company."

OBSTREPEROUS HORN DISTURBS SLEEPERS

Doctor Comes to Rescue and Still Noisy Auto Klaxon.

The average medical school teaches its students all about every twist and turn of the human anatomy, but they have failed to keep pace with this now well-known twentieth century, in so far as they have neglected to throw in a dash of motor lore to add to the course and perhaps prove of benefit to their graduates when they come to grips in later years with such vexing "diseases" as contrary automobile horns.

This fact was brought home with a pang to a well-known young London doctor the other night, when he was wending his way home in the north end.

He was peaceful, and the moon was sailing high, when with a raucous, disturbing reverberation, a dismal, wailing, banshee howl perforated the atmosphere. It did not seem to come from any place in particular, but it was audible, nevertheless.

A policeman emerged from an alley.

"Do you know anything?" he asked the w. k. y. L. d., in a hollow voice, as he flashed his pocket Mazda into the latter's face.

"Yes," was the frank reply. "Can you start a car?" the bobbie pursued.

"No," was the answer. "Can you stop one when it is started?" he then queried, and was met with a negative reply.

In desperation, "come on down this alley with me and see if you can do anything to tie a can to this cursed horn," the doctor begged.

"This somebody has been using home-brew on it for a lubricant. It's been blowing for two hours."

He went, he saw, he pulled the obstreperous thing out by the roots, and then neighbors went back to bed.

PORT STANLEY ON HOLIDAY AT THE FAIR AND BIG GAME

Civic Holiday being proclaimed at Port Stanley today, a large contingent from that village were at the Fair Grounds, scores coming up early this morning to spend the entire day at the exhibition.

SPEAKERS AT FAIR RELATE TROUBLES OF MOST FARMERS

Shortage of Help Most Difficult To Meet, Says Hon. John S. Martin.

FOR IMMIGRATION GETS JUDGMENT

Both provincial and Dominion departments of agriculture were well represented at the luncheon of the Western Fair directors today, with Hon. John S. Martin, minister of agriculture in the newly-formed provincial government, and R. P. Arkell, livestock commissioner of the Dominion government, the guests of honor and speakers.

Neither of these gentlemen evaded the fact that farmers at present were carrying on under conditions of certain stress and difficulties.

Yet both looked upon this as a not unfavorable circumstance.

"When I look over my present position," Mr. Martin said, "I realized above everything else, that the farmers needed better farm labor."

"They are distinctly not able to compete with the manufacturers in paying high wages to their help. But I find the same situation prevails in the United States, and in that country, where immigration is held down to a certain percentage, they are not in anything like the position of the Canadian farmer with his excellent resource of first-class farm-labor."

ADmits HE WAS DRUNK AFTER THE FIRST GUESS

"Were you drunk?" questioned Magistrate Graydon in police court this morning as a recently inebriated individual climbed unsteadily to his feet.

"Yes, I guess I was," was the rather quick response.

"No, guessing about it. I want to know," coldly replied the court.

"Yes, I was, guess there's no doubt about it," quickly responded the guilty party.

"You haven't been here for some time, I'm sorry to see you back here again. I'll let you off with the minimum fine this time of $10," decreed the magistrate. The fine was paid after court.

CLAIMS SPINAL LESIONS CHIEF HAY FEVER CAUSE

Osteopathic physicians of Western Ontario met today in London for a session in orthopedic technique. Dr. T. V. Anderson, who demonstrated the correction of foot troubles, has studied extensively under leaders in the osteopathic world, and is now located in Sarnia.

The conference went to the Runglow Inn, Springfield, for luncheon, after which Dr. R. Harkins, London, opened the afternoon session with an address on hay fever.

The doctor claimed that after sinus, septum and pollen irritations had been all dealt with, the disorder still persisted in so many cases because spinal lesions were the underlying and chief points of trouble. Many cases cleared up promptly if this area received first and exclusive attention.

"Such a state of affairs are disconcerting, and I am faking it up when the new county force, provincial police and license authorities. On that occasion two men were arrested with 300 bottles of liquor. The maximum fine was imposed on each. Sir,

THREE CASES ARE POSTPONED, ONE ACTION SETTLED

Special Session of the County Court Is Adjourned to September 24.

GETS JUDGMENT

Postponement of three cases and the settlement of the fourth of four cases set down for trial before Judge Talbot Macbeth in the county court today resulted in the adjournment of the court until 10 a.m. Monday, September 24.

On consent of the defendant, judgment for $722.69, interest and costs, was entered against F. W. Anderson, in favor of the Molsons Bank. The decision to consent to the judgment was made following a recent examination of the books of the bank.

Anderson was being sued for $700, the alleged amount of a check made payable to Albert Mitchell and cashed by the Home Bank, for $2.69, protest charges and for interest from May 2, 1922, the date the check was issued.

In his defence, Anderson set out that Mitchell had no authority to place the check in the bank and that the bank was not the bona fide holder of the check for value.

Ivey, Elliott, Weir & Gillanders acted for the plaintiff, and Joseph Montgomery of Toronto, through his local agents, Fraser & Moore, for the defendant.

On application of the defendants' counsel, the three cases brought against Joseph Wolfe, Robert M. Birce and Ernest L. Hopgood for recovery of Toronto, through his local agents, Fraser & Moore, for the defendant.

W. A. Clark and E. C. Dusty, trading under the name of Clark & Dusty, of Essex, by McMahon, September 24.

The claims are under a guarantee alleged to have been written October 15, 1921.

The defendants claim the guarantees were obtained from them when Clark and Dusty were businessmen in Essex, and that Clark and Dusty told them they had obtained guarantees from Samuel Atkinson and William Hamel, who were then released from their guarantees. They also state that if the plaintiffs receive the assets and the fire insurance case they would obtain more than the amount of their claim.

They claim the plaintiffs received the assets and the fire insurance case from Clark & Dusty after the firm was burned out. They further claim that certain dividends were paid to the plaintiffs and creditors and that if the insurance had been properly applied there would be no claim. The amount of their claim is alleged to have been reduced to about $1,000.

Ivey, Elliott, Weir & Gillanders are acting for the plaintiffs and Kenney, Cleary & Levin of Windsor for the defendants.

DRAKE IS HORRIFIED BY VISIT TO MARKET

Ald. Gordon Drake conducted an impromptu inspection of the city market this morning, and when he was through he was so appalled that he immediately got in touch with Inspector Piper.

"Conditions were terrible," he related. "A disgrace for a city of 65,000 people. I found that waste water from the butchers' section was being actually drained into an old tub. They explained that they have no sewer connections there."

"Such a state of affairs are disconcerting, and I am faking it up when the new county force, provincial police and license authorities. On that occasion two men were arrested with 300 bottles of liquor. The maximum fine was imposed on each. Sir,

STATE CRIME DECREASING THROUGHOUT MIDDLESEX

County officials have obtained very few reports of crime in Middlesex County lately.

Since the new force has been established no cases of a serious nature have been reported. Arrests have been made for violations of the Ontario temperance act and the motor vehicles act, but only one or two cases under the criminal code have developed.

The only important case under the O. T. A. was handled by a member of the new county force, provincial police and license authorities. On that occasion two men were arrested with 300 bottles of liquor. The maximum fine was imposed on each. Sir,

ARRIVAL OF PRINCE AT QUEBEC CAUSES BUT LITTLE STIR

Residents of the Ancient City Observe Request Not To Stage Celebration.

GOES TO HOTEL

Special To The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent. Quebec, Sept. 12.—The Prince of Wales, Baron Renfrew, arrived at Quebec this morning. He stepped down the gangplank of the Empress of France as almost the last of the first-class passengers.

Quebec observed the prince's incognito. There was no more of a crowd at the docks than usually is present at the docking of an ocean liner. There was no riotous celebration, no thundering cheers. When dawn tinted the Laurentian Hills, the great ocean liner was nearing this historic city. When she was within a mile of the docks the sky was overshadowed with dark fuzzy clouds. The puffing tug which led her was joined by another. When the liner swung into position to be pulled sideways to the dock, the sun burst through the clouds, its rays glistened on the shining docks, and the steel of the ship, which bore the prince, sparkled on the wavelets thrown up by a light breeze which ruffled the water.

It was 7 o'clock when the ship could be seen from the heights of the city, but 7 o'clock found no crowd on the docks to greet the prince. By 7:30 a Quebec automobile had arrived and disgorged a man and two women. It was followed by one bearing a New York license number. Shortly afterwards came two more automobiles, and then a cab. When the liner docked there were no more than 300 people present. There was one line of spectators along the outside of the shed No. 28, which covered the dock. Inside the shed two hundred people formed in a square around the end of the gangplank.

Came to Meet Friends. There were more people on the Empress than on the dock. They crowded along the rail on the upper deck, men, women and young boys, and a beautiful young girl waving her handkerchief frantically. An old man focused binoculars on the deck and then signalled violently. A group of women on the dock waved at a lone woman on the upper deck; a little boy on the second-class deck yelled, "There they are behind that door!" and he pointed to a door behind which he was evidently waiting for a glimpse of the prince. They scanned the ship, bow to stern, A clean-shaven, middle-aged fellow, whose words bore the Yankee stamp, he claimed, "Well, I reckoned I'd see him looking over the rail. Can you spot him?"

His companion, a dark girl, dressed in a Broadway, replied with similar accents. There are a lot of good-looking boys up there, but I guess they are not him."

They raked the ship with their glasses, but the Prince of Wales was not to be seen.

The Empress pulled into the dock with a clatter and rattle and shouting. The gangplank was hoisted into place, and a chauffeur in white livery, rolled into the shed, and if it stepped Lord Shaughnessy. He strode towards the gangplank and, as he stepped, the ship disappeared from view. His retinue of ten or twelve men, and then returned to the dock.

Instructions were issued to the chauffeur, and Lord Shaughnessy returned to the liner and to the Empress. The first of the passengers disembarked. An aristocratic gentleman, bewhiskered and goateed, Others followed. Toronto people, Mrs. Lionel Clarke. At the end of the gangplank women were hugging and kissing, men shaking hands, luggage was hustled through the customs.

The passengers disappeared in automobiles. Outside the shed, lines of people still scanned the gangplank, and the ship for the prince, and still he did not appear. He was at his breakfast.

Finally at 11 o'clock Baron Renfrew and his party left the liner. He immediately went to the Chateau Frontenac to his suite in the tower. The prince is to spend the day in Quebec. It is expected that he will travel in the west tomorrow afternoon, travelling in his special train.

GOES TO WEST TOMORROW. Instructions were issued to the chauffeur, and Lord Shaughnessy returned to the liner and to the Empress. The first of the passengers disembarked. An aristocratic gentleman, bewhiskered and goateed, Others followed. Toronto people, Mrs. Lionel Clarke. At the end of the gangplank women were hugging and kissing, men shaking hands, luggage was hustled through the customs.

Try Delorme In November

Canadian Press Despatch. Montreal, Sept. 12.—Mr. Justice Demers today formally set the trial of Abbe Delorme, charged with the murder of his half brother, Raoul Delorme, for the November term of the court of King's Bench. Application was made by R. L. Calder, K.C., crown prosecutor, and by Allyn Taschereau, K.C., one of the counsel for the defence.

MARTIN DECLARES WESTERN ONTARIO CROPS EXCELLENT

Minister of Agriculture States Fair Great Aid to Farming.

"The Western Fair is a great exhibition, and a great aid to agriculture in this district," said Hon. J. S. Martin, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, to an Advertiser reporter this morning upon his arrival in the city at 11:30.

Mr. Martin addressed the directors' luncheon at noon today at the Fair grounds, and was met at the station this morning by George McCormick, a great friend of the minister of agriculture. Mr. Martin is known as the exhibition grounds by Mr. McCormick and

WILL FINISH RICHMOND PARK BEFORE SNOW FLIES

ENGINEER NEAR REPORTS PAVING WELL UNDER WAY

Richmond Street Work Will Be Completed Before Winter Sets In.

OVERCOME DELAYS

It will now be possible to complete the Richmond street improvement before the snow flies. City Engineer W. P. Near reported this morning. It was believed last week that certain delays would occur to prevent this.

On Monday morning next, however, the city engineer's men will commence to tear up what remains of the old pavement, on the west side of the street, from Fullarton street to Central avenue. It is proposed now to complete this side of the thoroughfare to Oxford street first. The street railway will place a cross-over at the corner of Dufferin avenue on Saturday night.

Engineer Near is confident that Central avenue will also be paved this fall from Clarence to Wellington streets, as this work will not interfere with the street railway trackage on that street.

Another section of pavement must be completed on Quebec street, while the engineer reports that within a day or two work can be started on Wellington street south from the C. N. R. tracks.

The fate of the Oxford street pavement has yet to be determined, and while there seems but little hope for a start this year, the engineer advises that the bylaw be passed and all be in readiness for work early in the spring.

At a Hayden voiced protest at yesterday's session of the board of works, suggesting that there had been a deliberate attempt to delay this year's work, the city engineer explained that no blame could be attached to his department. He pointed out that it was his duty to report to the committee that the bylaw authorizing this work had been illegally passed. Action now to rectify this would mean a saving of much money, and time later, the mistake would be bound to be noted.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1923.

Sir Adam Beck Speaks Out.

Sir Adam Beck used language that was plain enough to be understood at either Washington or Chicago when he made the statement that Ontario in particular, and he hoped Ottawa as well, would fight with its back to the wall to keep back the people and the interests who sought to take water away from the great lakes and the St. Lawrence.

To people in this section of Ontario the St. Lawrence may sound a long way off. It is generally thought of as some place away in the eastern section. As a matter of fact, this section of Ontario is interested in the welfare of all communities. There is a deeper meaning to it—it is the water power of the east, on the St. Lawrence, is interfered with by Chicago taking great volumes out of the great lakes and making it run through the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico, it is going to interfere with existing power plants in Ontario where we have invested hundreds of millions of our money.

So no matter which way the question is viewed it remains of very serious concern to this section of Ontario. We can look at it from the development of the whole province, or from the preservation of what we have already achieved, and we arrive at the same point in conclusion.

So it is that Sir Adam Beck speaks for Ontario when he says the people here are very firm in their determination that this wanton traffic in drainage canals that takes down the levels of the great lakes and the St. Lawrence must cease.

Sir Adam can repeat the assertion as vigorously as he chooses in the certain knowledge that the people are with him.

Is This Fund Necessary?

Premier Ferguson has promised a grant of $10,000 to the Veterans' Alliance of Ontario, the money to be used in the preparation of cases to go before the Pensions Appeal Board at Ottawa.

This may be all right and quite necessary, but the question at once comes up as to why it should be necessary for these cases to have such extensive and expensive preparation before being submitted.

If a returned man has a case worthy of consideration, or of reconsideration, he should be perfectly free to bring it before the authorities without cost.

If he has not got a case, money should not be spent on legal preparation.

When Canada asked these men to go to the front it was not on the understanding that they would have to pile up a fund in order to have their cases fairly dealt with when they came back.

Watch the Big Issue Now.

There is undoubtedly a move on to have the franchise of the London street railway extended for another five years. It is suggested now that there might be a six-for-a-quarter rate.

The citizens of London should not be turned from the purpose of taking over the street railway, owning it and operating it as a municipal enterprise.

It is not well, either, to talk of reduced fares. When the city comes into possession of the property the fares will be based on the cost of transportation. There might come a time, in the earlier stages of this work, when an increased fare would be good business, but that time would not be of long duration.

London can afford to go into the matter seriously and deliberately, with the one idea of securing the property at a fair price.

London would make a mistake that it would regret for a long time to come were it to allow the franchise to slide for another five years on the hope or the promise of a readjustment of fares.

Good Work in the Parks.

London's parks, whether at Springbank or at Victoria, have been, and still are, beauty spots that citizens love to show their guests.

Weather conditions in late summer have been such as to keep the grass thick and green and to bring to their very best the flowers of the late season.

The work has been well done, every bit of it, and the men responsible should be told that the citizens are proud of their year's accomplishment.

How Much Independence Is There?

In Somerset, Pa., where a rule was made in the public schools against rolled stockings and dresses minus the sleeves, some bright mind composed the following verse which has traveled quite a distance from home:

I can show my shoulders.

I can show my knees;

I'm a free-born American—

I can show what I please.

Now at first look that may seem quite smart, quite

Your Health: What Sound Teeth Mean to Health and Usefulness.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

There are strange beliefs in the world, one of the oriental religions have taught odd things. It is hard to believe that a teaching is divinely sent if it follows it brings disease. I am confident some of these customs are man-made and bear no vital spiritual relation to the virtues.

In certain eastern countries the flies are never disturbed. They swarm upon the face of a sleeping infant and are not awoken away because religious belief prohibits such a sacrilegious act.

It is no wonder that granulated syphilis and other infectious eye diseases are carried from one person to another. In those countries trachoma is almost universal.

In Turkey the admonition against personal adornment has been interpreted to include dental fillings. Until a few days ago the pious Turk could not have his teeth filled because it was counted wicked to add gold and other similar materials to his traditions.

A few days ago an edict went forth removing their restriction. Hereafter the Turk may stop his dental cavities without losing his religious standing.

This is a very sensible edict, because health and long life depend on good teeth. Not only is physical vigor affected by this cause, but good nature, mental capacity and actual sanity are menaced by the effects of diseased teeth. You cannot be sound in mind and body if your teeth and mouth are bathed in pus and if there is constant suffering and very independent. It might be imagined that the child had inherited the independence of her forefathers, for it was in this very state they signed the Declaration of Independence.

But she's wrong. In the wisdom of her schooling it may seem that she can do as she pleases, for in many a young mind that very same idea has come to camp. It may even be taken in and cherished for a spell, but sooner or later the truth will break—and the breaking sometimes hurts—that she can't do as she pleases.

No, you poetry-writing little school miss, you are wrong. The same shears that crop your frocks off far from the floor may also have bobbed your hair—they may even have cut the sleeves out and off before they had a chance to grow. And these same family shears may also be used to cut strips of adhesive plaster and long pieces of linen to bind up your cuts and your bruises. They won't always do just the things you would like to have them do.

If we start out to drive home this evening it must be on the right side of the road. It may look better over on the left, and all our inclinations may tug at the elbow to pull over to the left side, but the law, which is the voice of the majority, has said we shall drive on the right side, and so the right side it shall be, because we keep out of a lot of trouble when we do what the majority of the people have decided on as proper procedure.

Your peppy protest may excite some admiration, little school miss, but when a few more years have rolled over you with their mellowing influences, you will look back and see the folly of it all.

Escaping From Prison.

The number of desperate attempts that have been made at jail-breaking, capped by the one at Kingston on Monday, presents a serious case for officials at these institutions.

The tendency of the times is to make a prison term as helpful as possible to those placed there. There are many jail officials who desire to see the men, on the day of discharge, leave with a better outlook, a stronger frame and a determination to go straight.

If a man comes out, though, only to start in where he left off, the only purpose achieved is that society has been free from his mischief in the meantime.

Prison wardens and guards are faced with the fact that there are always those around who have only one idea, viz. to get out, and they are not going to be very considerate in the means they employ if this can be accomplished.

This class, and it is large, are punished, but not reformed. The only reformation that comes to them is that they hated the restraint; they disliked the simplicity or the monotony of the meals, and they say "never again" as they walk out at the end of their sentence. Their fear of going back there is greater than any sympathy they have for the law.

It is very seldom that word of a jail delivery finds any sympathy with the public. The men who are put there have had a fair trial and an impartial hearing. The public, after all, has more respect for the man who is prepared to stand up and take his medicine.

Searching For His Son.

There was a pathetic termination to the search for Arnold Tilton, a young Toronto man, when a party, headed by his father, found the remains of the son on the shore of Georgian Bay.

For days there had been no word of what happened to the canoe party of three young men. Hopes that they had sought shelter from the storm by taking to some of the islands off the shore lent a feeble glim to the theory that they might still turn up alive.

A father searching for a son under such conditions is an object of pity. It was the place any father would want to take in such a case—at the head of the expedition.

The finding of the one boy told the story of what had happened to the three.

That Toronto father searching and hunting along that long, wave-swept shore until at last he found the remains of his boy—well, that's part of the great things that bind families together and make fathers the worth while people they are.

Note and Comment.

There's no change in the situation. Each day as Fritz looks through the keyhole he sees France still sitting on the doorstep.

Jugoslavia is reported mobilizing. She had better put down the musket and stay with the hoe. Few people were ever killed with a hoe.

A firm in the Western States advertised for "two plain-looking girls." They got just as many answers as a similar ad would bring in London.

Every-time Hon. Robert Rogers can think of nothing else to do he goes to Toronto and intimates to the papers that he is ready to be interviewed once more on the reorganization of the Conservative party.

The New York Times claims that an "official statement" is a fair, unbiased presentation of facts made by your own government, and that propaganda is an "official statement given out by any other government."

Chief Deskah of the Six Nations is said to have created quite a furore when he went to Geneva with his feathers and paint. If this old city wants a real thrill it should see Premier King in his Windsor uniform.

Selling the House

By ANNE CAMPBELL.

I did not mind the thought so much: To sell the house was fine! All houses were the same to me. They painted up a sign And hung it up that passerby Could hardly fail to see. That there was a house for sale, And please apply to me.

Some folks came in to criticize, And some came in to praise; And some came in to chat a while, And some came in to gaze. They lingered in the cosy rooms, And I could almost cry: We're dropping in to speak of terms, So scared I was they'd buy!

I did not mind the thought so much, It would be fun to sell! To move into another place: Would please me mightily well; But when they tried to close the sale Somehow I never could. I couldn't bring myself to leave The dear old neighborhood.

I couldn't move the little print Of hands along the stair, I couldn't move the dreams that hung In every corner there. I couldn't move the love and joy Behind each time-worn wall, And so I just took down the sign, And did not sell at all!

The increased cost of fine teas has tempted some to try cheap, inferior teas to their sorrow. It is real economy to use "SALADA" since it yields to the pound more cups of a satisfying infusion, and besides has such a fresh, delicious flavor—Adv.

AN EMPHATIC NEGATIVE.

How often do I sit and gaze At pictures of my boyhood days, And contemplate these foolish things, As out-of-joint as my rhymes. How often reminiscing kills The aching stress of mental ills.

No worries had I when a lad Except, perhaps, when I was bad; I smoked tobacco often, and I smoked yellow on my hand To mother I could quite explain; It was a dab of walnut stain. Those carefree days no thought had I Except some necessary lie.

Would I go back again to youth, And faint devotion to the truth, Forgoing what I've learned since then Of ladies, life and gentlemen? Of drinks and books, and pleasures—what?

Would I go back? No, I would not! It seems to have become the League of Conster-nations.

A SPECULATOR'S CHANT. "We strongly advise purchase of rails on every setback."—Market letter.

Once upon a mid-day dreary, On a friend I bought Erie, Hoping soon to cog some price— Hoping for ten points or more. Suddenly there came a calling: For some margin; rails were falling, And my losses were appalling, Losing all I'd won before. And that stock rose— Nevermore!

WHAT SEPTEMBER OFFERS. Of the twelve months in the year September is the finest for your vacation in the "Highlands of Ontario." Recognizing this, a number of the best hotels are remaining open at least until the end of September for the accommodation of guests.

True, there are fewer people, but there are more fish, more sunshine, more space, more opportunities for every pastime as a consequence, and at reduced cost. Weather conditions in September are usually ideal.

A week or two spent at Bigwin Inn, Canada's finest summer resort hotel, located in the Lake of Bays region, during the month of September, simply makes a splendid holiday.

Fishing, boating, golf, lawn bowling, etc., are provided for guests. Ask any agent of the Canadian National Railways for full particulars.

The Guide Post—By Henry van Dyke

EFFICIENT FOES OF INTemperance.

Empty, swept, and garnished.—St. Matthew xii, 44. There are evil spirits which take possession of idle men. Let intemperance be the type of them all, because so many of the others are its children.

Drunkness ruins more homes and wrecks more lives than war. How shall we oppose it? I do not say that we can never really conquer the evil in this way. But I do say that we can never really conquer the evil in this way. I hold with Phillips Brooks that "all prohibitory measures are negative. That they have their uses no one can doubt. That they have their limits is just as clear."

The stronghold of intemperance lies in the vacancy and despair of men's minds. The way to attack it is to make the sober life beautiful and happy and full of interest.

Make the life of your community cheerful and pleasant and interesting, if you want to take away the power of the gilded saloon, and the grimy boozing-den.

Parks and playgrounds, libraries and music rooms, clean homes and cheerful churches—these are the efficient foes of intemperance. (Copyright, 1923, by The Republic Syndicate.)

LIABILITY IN BANK STOCK.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—To settle an argument we have had in this neighborhood, could you answer the following question:

A owns five fully-paid shares of the Home Bank, par value $100, which he bought for $80. If called on for the double liability, will he have to pay $500 or $1,000 more? Thanking you for any information, I am, Sir, yours truly, J. H. B. B. B.

Answer.—The maximum of the extra liability would be $500. It may not be that much, depending on the debts of the bank. Double liability in bank stock is based on par value; the price at which stock is purchased is not considered.

WHY CANADIANS GO TO UNITED STATES.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—I plead permission to your columns to state a queer condition that affects Canada very heavily at present, and that is Canadian migration to the United States. I have tried as far as possible to verify the facts as stated. There may be more; there is no less. At the head of 21 seats of learning in United States (major colleges), 11 are led by Canadians. In 17 automotive industries, 8 are headed by Canadians. In New York banking circles, out of 16 required, 9 are looked after by Canadians born here. In the railroad systems, 3 president, 1 vice-president, 32 superintendents, 3 master mechanics, 3 shop superintendents, are Canadian born. On one railroad that keeps a history of their employees on their payroll, 27 per cent of their help had Canadian birthplaces. I visited a steamship on the River Detroit some weeks ago, and from the captain on the bridge, chief engineer, the second officer, the chief, the purser, and 21 members out of a crew of 16 men, were Canadian born. Two congressmen, 5 assemblymen, 2 governors of states, had Canadian birthplaces. I inquired from two hospitals of note, and their staff had combined (nurses and doctors), a total of 31 members on their rolls who were graduates of our colleges and hospitals. And to show that all the people are not of the professional class, from a press agency, a paper to refer to, but I had my nerve, and I am not at liberty to divulge the name, but I had an interview, and was glad to hear it said that he would give a real salary to any twelve men who could and did put as much common sense into his works as the one superintendent of a department, who was born in a village of Ontario called "Rosenheath." Yes, and get thrown out of the office by the janitor for interrupting a busy man. I have only words of praise for a big man on a big job, who had time enough, 25 minutes to be exact, to answer a few questions and didn't expect to get a big boost and a lot of free advertising for it. I have tried it before in this country. I asked a superintendent where he was born, and was told it was none of my business. It wasn't because he was a product of a beautiful country called Denmark, and he learned his engineering at the Kaiser's shipyards on the Kell Canal, so I found out afterwards, and he knew all the engineering there was to know and he wouldn't have any Canadian tell him how to do it.

Our young men and women go to the States, and why? Because of lack of appreciation. Firms will employ them for years, and if they have no spunk they stick for the meager wages and plod on. They haven't the nerve to ask an increase; family ties hold them. No incentive to improve conditions. If they do advance, the firm takes it as a matter of course, and carries on. If you go to the head of a Yankee firm and say, "I think I could save you a dollar in your shop." How, when, where?" and if you save $1 you at least get 50c of it for knowing how.

But not so here. "Well, my grandfather ran this business, and his father before him, and we don't need any young fellows like you to tell us how to do it," and off they go to the United States, and in a few years they are the fellows who are hiring your man from you.

I had occasion to visit, in an Ohio city some time ago, 26 different plants (only one refused to see me), and I found in all of them, except two, young men much under 35 and two under 24, who were directing affairs, and believe me there was pep and energy displayed in some of those places. Not that they hadn't used the wise head of the older men, but that they had missed the combination of brain and brawn, and got results. And about 35 per cent was Canadian blood that made these results possible.

I find my epistle is a bit long, and perhaps tedious, so were the facts. But I may assure you that it has taken some time to gather them, and I saw five states of the union on our Great Lakes to do it. It has cost a great deal of time and postage, and I pass it on to you readers and to those men at the head of affairs who bewail the fact that Canadians go to U. S. Look over these figures. They comprise only a few isolated cases, but yours truly, without anything but lots of nerve and pride in the country he lives in, found out in a little intensive research in the blue books, the public library, and the office of a business magnate, who hated reporters (because he used to be a cub himself some years ago on the late Toronto News), thanking you, I remain,

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. AND A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor."

Terry Has Beginner's Luck and Wins At the Roulette Tables

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.

Miles Sheridan, made wretched by his wife's infidelity, is attempting to facilitate her obtaining a divorce by creating a scandal about himself. To this end he offers $20,000 to Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl known as the Million Dollar Doll, if she will take a yacht trip with him. Juliet is unable to go herself, but greedily for the money, she persuades Teresa Desmond (Terry), her lovely and unbelievably innocent half-sister, an exquisite counterpart of herself, to go in her stead, masquerading as the Million Dollar Doll. Ever since a kindness Miles did in her childhood, Terry has made him her Dream Prince, and now she is grateful for the opportunity of serving him.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife, is in love with Paul di Salvo, a handsome Italian.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, who does not know of Terry's relationship to Juliet, is in love with the younger girl.

Mrs. Harkness, Miles' old servant, prepared to hate the Million Dollar Doll, is won over by Terry's sweetness and charm. Miles has stipulated that he will have nothing to do with the girl on the voyage, but already his heart is wavering. He does not recognize the little girl whom he befriended so long ago, but he is surprised to find the notorious Juliet Divine so girlishly charming. In order to make the scandal known, he appears at Monte Carlo with the girl.

After leaving Miss Sheridan, who is horrified when she learns the truth, Terry and Miles continue their walk. Terry gives a start as she sees approaching Eustace Nazlo.

Miles snubs Nazlo, but the latter is convinced the girl is Teresa Desmond and not Juliet Divine. Miles and Terry go to the Casino. An employee recognizes Miles.

without being arrested as a kidnaper. They walked out, defeated. Sheridan still laughing, Terry ashamed. "How did you happen to pitch on 'I forgot,'" she said.

"I—forgot," she said.

"That was a quaint answer; but if she wanted to be seventeen, let her! He felt suddenly lifted out of depression by his own fit of laughter, the first for a long time without a tang of bitterness in it.

As the Casino was forbidden, and the Sporting Club closed till after luncheon, he took his companion to look at the shops in the Galerie Charles Trol.

Terry was thrilled by the hats and frocks, the furs and jewelry behind the plate-glass windows, but she seemed almost shocked at Sheridan's offer to buy her anything she liked. "No, I don't really want the things," she said. "And I couldn't let you give them to me."

Strange girl!—strange Million Dollar Doll!

Ciro's was not open. It was too early in the year, so the two lunched at the Hotel de Paris, on the awning-balcony. There Sheridan saw several acquaintances from New York, who evidently recognized Juliet Divine, and guessed unutterable things.

She, however, sat calm and unconcerned, as if she did not know the faces by sight.

Later, at the Sporting Club, there were a number of friends from villas nearby, people whom Miles had expected to meet, but now found himself longing to avoid. They talked to him, and asked no questions about Juliet Divine, except with their eyes. "The girl tidings will now be spread," he thought, all the bitterness pouring back in a flood.

Fighting his distaste at making her conspicuous, he forced himself to show the girl off by teaching her to play roulette. "Beginner's luck" was hers.

The won, and with the conscientious air of a young instructor, handed the winnings to her instructor.

"But the money's yours," he insisted, pushing back the bunch of hundred franc notes.

"Really, I can't keep it," Terry said. "You gave me the notes to begin with."

"That doesn't matter. You chose where to stake."

She shook her head. "No, I won't have the money."

Miles frowned. "We can't fight here. But I shall be offended if you refuse to take anything from me, even if it belongs to you by right."

The girl had the look of a spoiled child, as she heard the sharp whisper. She separated one note from the rest and tucked it away in Juliet's gold bag.

"I'll keep that one, then, just not to offend you," she said, "but you must have the rest."

"I won't!" Miles insisted. "Throw it on the table again."

"I'll put it all on the first dozen," she said. "You'll promise to keep the winnings."

Curious to see what would happen, Miles consented. "But there won't be any winnings," he added.

The first dozen came up. Terry had won a thousand francs; twice her stake. Gravelly she gave the money to Sheridan, who was obliged to stick to his bargain.

He recalled some words of Harky's after the day at the Azores; she had reported that, according to her belief, the girl was penniless.

Terry was very silent, rowing out to the yacht at 6 o'clock to dress for dinner, and Sheridan asked if she were tired.

"You don't need to come on land again tonight unless you like," he conceded.

Mrs. Happy Jack Sacrifices Her Safety For Happy Jack Squirrel

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

It was Mrs. Happy Jack Squirrel who had barked a warning just in time to save Happy Jack from the great claws of Mrs. Redtail the Hawk. Peeping out from the entrance to their home in the big beech tree she had seen Mrs. Redtail just in the nick of time. Happy Jack had been so busy playing a game of hide-and-seek with Redtail that he had had no eyes for anything else. So had it not been for Mrs. Happy Jack's warning he would have been caught by Mrs. Redtail.

Now, Mrs. Happy Jack was safe right where she was. All she had to do was to stay there. She knew it. She hadn't liked it when Happy Jack had foolishly gone out to dare Redtail the Hawk, but she hadn't worried much. She had felt that it was a foolish thing to do, but she felt that Happy Jack was quite able to look out for himself.

Now it was a very different matter. Happy Jack had two Hawks to dodge instead of only one. There was always a chance that in dodging one he would run right into the claws of the other. She saw that he was growing tired. She saw that he no longer moved as quickly as at first.

"I've got to help him," said Mrs. Happy Jack to herself. "I don't know what I can do, but I've got to do something. Oh, dear! Oh, dear! Why couldn't he have been satisfied to have kept out of sight? Oh-o-o!"

This was a little shriek for Redtail had all but caught Happy Jack. Mrs. Happy Jack waited no longer. She scrambled out of her home and up toward where Happy Jack was.

Mothers and Their Children

The Vegetable Problem.

One Mother Says:

I never make my child eat things of a strong flavor, such as onions or oysters, which may be distasteful to her, but I do insist that she eat nutritious vegetables. I explain what each does for her, and how important it is. From this she started a game of her own, which I took up. She always calls spinach "iron," carrots "complexion," and so forth. The Woman Who Didn't Come—and the "Woman" Who Did Everything was ready for the washing, but at the last minute the telephone bell rang. It was the old story—the washwoman couldn't come.

"She says she doesn't feel well today," sighed Mrs. Neelands.

It meant that she would be obliged to do again what she had often done before—keep one of the older children home from school to tend the baby, and do the washing herself.

Mr. Neelands went down town dissatisfied with this solution of the problem. That day he called at the electric light office and compared all the different makes of Electric Washers.

He found he could buy Miss Simplicity for much less than he had imagined, and could spread the payments by simply adding a small amount to his electric light bill each month. And he found

THE DAILY SHORT STORY

THE FORTUNE HUNTERS.

By H. IRVING KING.

Everybody said the match was a most suitable one. His comfortable little fortune, added to her comfortable little fortune, would be beneficial to both. The parties concerned in the case were Clarissa Maxwell and Madison James. James belonged to an exclusive but rather inexpensive club where he appeared regularly once a day. He accepted invitations to dinner and to take one on yachting trips sparingly and discriminatingly, and the people he knew of "the right sort."

Miss Maxwell was active in various charitable and "uplift" organizations. She called great society leaders by their first names, and by them they called her "Clarissa dear" in return. Like Madison James, she was discriminating in her intimacies and chary of accepting invitations to dinner and to take one on yachting trips sparingly and discriminatingly, and the people he knew of "the right sort."

These reasons for celibacy were entirely satisfactory to their inventors, but in point of fact were without the slightest foundation.

Clarissa had had no early love affair, and Madison was possessed of no healthy great uncle and extreme age, or in fact of any great uncle of any sort. But now everybody said the end of their bachelorhood and spinsterhood was approaching. Madison's antediluvian great-uncle had approved, and Clarissa had looked up the memory of her youthful lover in the closet of her wardrobe.

The engagement was announced. It only remained to fix the wedding day. It was agreed by the parties most concerned that this should be done on a certain night when Madison and Clarissa were to go out to dinner alone and talk it over. They possessed of a quiet corner. For the first time since their engagement, something intangible seemed to have risen between them. Both were strangely silent and preoccupied. They got through dinner by talking forced platitudes with each other.

At last Madison leaned back in his chair and said: "Well, Clarissa, when is it to be?" She hesitated; her eyes were misty. But she quickly recovered herself, and said in an even voice: "Madison, before we go any further I have a confession to make. You think that I am possessed of a comfortable fortune. As a matter of fact, I have a cent. I have been living on an allowance made me by my Aunt Martha, who is in the enjoyment of a large income from the estate of her deceased husband. This income is only for her life, and she is now aged and in feeble health. If you marry me, you take a penniless bride."

For the first time since she had begun speaking she raised her eyes and looked at him, expecting to see upon his face a look of surprise, if not of consternation. But his gaze was fixed upon his plate.

It was a full minute before he spoke, and then without looking up he said: "I knew all that long ago. I looked you up before I proposed."

"And yet you did propose!" gasped Clarissa eagerly.

"Yes," said he, "and I also have a confession to make. I have hardly a

Down the Line In All Sports

One of the season's surprises in sport is the way lacrosse has taken on in Hamilton this season. After years of trying to put the game over, Hamilton has at last warmed up, and thousands instead of hundreds, line the field. Mike Collins, who coached London and nearly put the national pastime on its feet here, started the climb of lacrosse in Hamilton, and some of the present success must be ascribed to Mike's pioneering. Today Hamilton meets St. Marys in the Stone Town with an 11-goal lead to start with. This 11-goal lead was a distinct surprise to Lavelle's Alerts, who apparently thought the Hamilton game would be just a mere matter of form before Alerts, according to habit and custom, went into the intermediate finals. It was anything but a matter of form, unless it was the better form shown by Hamilton. The rarer mountain air and this victory has put a greater strain than usual on the Hamilton ballyhoos, but the heavier air on the St. Marys flats and young "Slew" Stewart and that other nimble veteran, Billie Lavelle, and their fellow-townsmen may tone it down this afternoon.

The midiron is several inches shorter than the wood clubs and is heavier, and for that reason it is easier to hit a ball with it than with the longer clubs. P. Cummingsford, Western Driver, Severely Hurt in Pile-Up in 2:25.

Probably the worst spill ever witnessed on the Queen's Park race track yesterday was the harness club when P. Cummingsford of Swift Current, Sask., driving Blaise Patch in the second heat of the 2:25 race, was thrown into a post, as his steed swerved into Patty W. The accident occurred on the back stretch of the first lap. Cummingsford suffered a slight concussion of the brain, along with other injuries, and was ordered to Victoria Hospital by Dr. W. J. Stevenson, who rendered first aid. Baron Todd, driver, was badly bruised and suffered a broken thumb. Blaise Patch, Cummingsford's horse, resumed his heat, after tripping and finished the remaining lap and a half without a driver. The 2:25 race went to Flaxie Buegen in straight heats. After drawing fourth place in the first heat, he took two seconds for second money, and Hazel D. was third.

London, Sept. 11.—Unusually keen interest prevails in the running of the five great races for three-year-olds, known as the "classics," that feature the flat racing season in England. There are a number of interesting circumstances that have combined to make tomorrow's St. Leger the most interesting of the series. The St. Leger is the best test for the three-year-old, as falling as it does in September, the horses' mouths are closed and flies are more evenly matched than in the earlier races. Apart from this, however, and the honor and financial gain that accrues to the owner of the winner of this oldest of the classics, the opinion of most racing critics is that Paprys, the winner of the Epsom Derby and the heavily-played favorite for tomorrow's canter over the town moor of Doncaster.

STATES UNEMPLOYMENT IS ABATING IN ENGLAND

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Sept. 11.—Just back from England, Mr. Justice Hodgins of the Ontario Court of Appeal, says that the old country is feeling unemployment severely but that the government is taking hold and trying to reduce it on the surface, however, all is activity. It is the judge's view that a large section of the population is backing France in the latter's demand that Germany shall pay. Germany's progress has been so great that were she freed from reparations she would start again with a clean sheet, as the Germans have paid off their domestic debts with deflated marks.

KITCHENER WANTS CHEAPER HYDRO

Will Place City's Case Before
Sir Adam Beck For Con-

BIG STOVE INCREASE.

Special To The Advertiser.

Kitchener, Sept. 11.—Announcement was made by Superintendent McInyre of the light commission that hydro rates for this city had been increased 10 per cent by the hydro-electric commission of Ontario, and that as a result a corresponding increase will have to be made to local electric consumers by the commission. His will take place immediately with a raise of about one cent per kilowatt hour. The minimum rate of 75 cents per month will be maintained without change. The superintendent staton the local commission by the hydro is the fact that the increase announced for this city by the hydro commission is ante-dated to January 1. This will mean a positive loss to the Kitchener commission as it will be forced to pay at the new rate where it has been allowed to realize only at the old rate from January to September. Superintendent

Chairman of the commission he would leave the city's case before Sir Adam Peck with a view to reaching a better adjustment for the Kitcheners' commission. The increase in the cost of electric stoves is also a problem which the commission must solve promptly. The case all coming on at a time when they raise the peak load in the forenoon, causing the city to pay at that time the highest rates. The day, leaving the afternoon rates very desirable.

Mr. McIntyre stated that the electric ovens are costing the commission $5,000 a month for service with a revenue in return of only $17,000. He suggested that this condition would be so brought to the attention of the hydro commission by himself and Chairman A. R. Lane.

WAGS ENCOUNTERED IN HINDU MURDER CASE

Scarcity of Interpreters Causes
Hossein Cassum To Be Remanded To Jail.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Montreal, Sept. 11.—Unable to secure an interpreter in the case of Osseim Cassum, Hindu sailor, charged with killing a fellow sailor named Said Salem on the S. S. Sheaf Mount by the grand jury court of king's bench could not be explained to him day.

Cassam appeared to realize the gravity of his position, for he trembled and tears rolled down his cheeks. He gazed helplessly around. The court and officials are just as helpless, for unless they can find an inmate to defend him, no way to permit him to defend himself. Evidence of illness was taken at the preliminary hearing while the Sheat Mount is in port, but this does not solve the problem of the defence nor that of the prosecution. The prisoner was recommended to jail while a further effort is made to find an interpreter is being made.

DISCOVER NO CLUES IN MONTREAL DEATHS

quest Reveals No Reason
Why Youth Should Slay
Girl Then Suicide.

Montreal, Sept. 11.—Mystery still surrounds the tragic death of Pietro D'Ameli and Maria Madeline D'Allesandro, the two youthful Italians who were found dead on Monday morning at the home of the man's sister, Mrs. Costino Maggi, Longue Pointe.

The evidence given before Coroner Mahon this morning was of the fact that the two, who were married in a day or two, the young man having arrived from Italy, were on Saturday night, the day of the murder, at the home of the inquest. No Italian friends present at the inquest could suggest the remotest clue to cause of the slaying of the girl.

The suicide of the young man, following the inquest until coroners ordered the bodies of the two slain present in the morgue.

Judges at Western Fair Announce Poultry Awards

The poultry has all been judged, and by last evening a complete list of the winners was available. The poultry building is one of the most interesting on the grounds, and the public are inspecting the birds in steady streams. This is not surprising, as everyone who comes out of the building has praise for the manner in which the birds are exhibited and in the unusually high quality of the birds themselves.

Women Visitors At the London Fair

You are heartily invited to call at Moffat's Exhibit and see this Modern Electric Cooking Range.

Moffat's E-30D wins the heart of every fastidious housewife at first glance. And no wonder! With its convenient burners and oven, its glistening gray and white surface with nickel trimmings, and its three heat switches all named, high, medium and low, it is indeed a picture of convenience and efficiency.

And it is efficient! It has been proven by experts the most efficient electric range on the market. It is made of everlasting Armco Iron and porcelain enamel, which can never crack, rust or wear off.

Super-Oven Roasts With Less Shrinkage

And its one-piece, ventilated oven is porcelain-enamelled inside, the same as outside, making it easy to clean. The oven is also supplied with three heat switches and outside thermometer. This super-oven has been proven to bake and roast beautifully, and with considerable less shrinkage than other electric ovens.

Moffat's Electric Range has many exclusive features which can never be found in any other Electric Range because they have been invented and patented by Moffat's, Limited. And these are all devices which save the housewife time, labor and fuel bills.

Ask the assistant in the exhibit to explain the many exclusive conveniences of Moffat's Electric Ranges, and to tell you also why Moffat's give better and more economical service than other electric ranges. He will tell you also about the installation of any of Moffat's Electric Ranges, water heaters or grates. And he will show you these facilities in sizes suitable for any sized house, apartment, hotel or restaurant.

EXHIBITS EXCEL IN AGRICULTURE

Crowds Throng Flower and Fruit Display Building At Fair Grounds.

ANNOUNCE PRIZE LIST

The Agricultural Hall is one of the outstanding buildings of the Fair, not only in the quality of the exhibits there, but in the arrangement of the various exhibits in such a way as to show them up to the best advantage.

The center of the great hall is taken up with a bench display of potatoes, beets, cabbage and in fact everything that the farm can produce. These exhibits have all been judged, and but for the fact that the prize tickets are still attached to the winning specimens, it would be extremely difficult to differentiate between the various specimens.

The farm crops proper are arranged on the wall, and the bright straw of the carefully prepared sheaves gives a cheerful and relieving contrast to the darker colors of the other exhibits. The quality of the produce shown is high, goes without saying. It is an established fact that the growers of this vicinity show only the very finest of their products.

Besides the individual class entries of the various vegetables, several institutions and associations have display exhibits. Among these, displays of the Middlesex Fruit Growers' Association, and the Ontario Hospital stand out as the best.

Fruit and Flowers Good.

The Horticultural Building is probably the most popular one, from the standpoint of the sightseer. It is a wonderland of beauty, and the fruit-growers and florists exhibiting there seem to have worked hard to outdo one another in the creation of miniature gardens.

Half of the building is given over to the bench display of the competition in tree fruits, and these show a lot of painstaking preparation, as they appear to be as nearly perfect as one can picture them in wonderful abundance. One particularly striking feature of the exhibit in this building is the section devoted to the display of box packed apples and pears. The clean fresh fruit arranged in neat rows, finished off with paper headers, makes an attractive offering.

The portion of the building set apart for the florists is a credit to the growers. The predominating flower of course, at this season is the gladiolus, and four displays of beautifully colored "Glads" fills the center floor space.

FOURTEEN MILES OF HOT DOGS SOLD
AT FAIR EACH DAYTwenty Dining Halls and Committees' Lunch Stands
Require Tons of Viands.

LUNCH HABIT GROWS

Page Mr. Einstein: Happily it isn't necessary to compound an exact table of how much food is consumed at the Fair Grounds during one week. Because only an Einstein equipped with a staff of college professors and a score of adding machines could do it.

From a maze of figures, detailed in an interview this morning with two of the most capable persons available at the grounds on this particular subject, one amazing fact stands forth—that all the hot-doggies sold during Fair Week, if strung together, would reach from London to Toronto, and if the week pans out, according to great expectations, would pass on several miles farther along the lake shore.

Easily fourteen miles of hot-dogs are sold in a day. A pound runs about ten dogs, and they measure each from five to six inches in length. This reliable information was obtained from a man whose years of experience in this particular business give him exact detail at his fingertips, and who for twelve years has occupied the same corner at the Fair Grounds.

Today, of course, is expected to be the day of all days at the Fair Grounds, and on this account the supply laid in this morning was rather larger than usual.

Huge Supplies.
The amount of hamburger and hot-dogs together, counted a sufficient supply for the day, amounted to one thousand pounds, and in addition to this three thousand rolls were stacked away neatly under the counter along with three thousand ice cream cones and the moderate supply of one hundred pies, to be augmented later in the day, if necessary, and three hundred pounds of peanuts, all to be disposed of during the day. And with the ice cream wagons constantly arriving, it was expected that the day's supply would run easily into four gallons. And to wash all this down just about as many cups of coffee as there are yards in a mile, about 1,760, along with countless gallons of pop, lemonade and orangeade, the latter made fresh from hour to hour, as the demand occasions.

Only the faintest idea of the quantities of food consumed at the twenty-odd dining halls during the dinner hour can be gained from the following figures obtained from the ladies at the W. C. T. U. dining hall, which is, in fact, the oldest established dining hall on the grounds. They are expecting at least 700 to come in for dinner today. Throughout the week, night and day, cooks are constantly on the job making pies. Today they are counting on at least 200 of these to be disposed of. Last week the ladies spent an entire day making enormous plum puddings sufficient for a family of 20, to judge from their size, and about 20 of these are expected to go today, along with a third choice of dessert and between 10 and 20 gallons of ice cream. For the substantial portion of the meal there were 225 pounds of beef, cut into enormous roasts, 75 pounds of pork, and in addition to this about 40 pounds of veal made into a stew, and countless strings of sausage as a reserve supply. For the entire week, 40 bags of potatoes were ordered.

Business Drops.
And the number of those who dine at the Fair Grounds is not nearly so large as in former years. The advent of the Thermos flask and the automobile has meant a falling off in the business of concessionaires and dining halls. Visitors who formerly obtained their meals at the Fair Grounds are now able to return downtown for their dinner, and scores of them bring well supplied luncheon kits with hot tea and coffee and dine comfortably in their cars.

But, even with this considered, a Fair is not a Fair without its generous supply of hot-dogs and ice cream. The old rule of three meals a day becomes a mere bagatelle. Going to the Fair means eating, sitting and long. Some started in at 10 this morning while the supply wagons were still lumbering in and out with their coffee and doughnuts, or coffee and hamburger and pie. All rules of digestion and all fears of indigestion are in the discard. Ice cream comes now come as well after breakfast as at any other time in the day, and crackly-nut, peanuts, popcorn and pop merely incidental.

Today will in a large measure decide the financial success of many of the dining halls and hot-dog stands. Large sums of money have been expended in preparation. To have prepared beyond the demand will mean great losses.

And those who are taking this risk are for the most part optimistic concerning the crowds, in spite of the generally accepted belief that money is not flowing with anything like the readiness of former years.

WENIGE WILL ADVOCATE IMPROVEMENTS AT FAIR

Proposed improvements at the Western exhibition for 1924 are already under contemplation.

Mayor Wenige proposes that a curb and gutter be constructed from the King street entrance to the road directly behind the grandstand. Next year this important thoroughfare could then be paved, he argues. The cost would be slight in comparison with the benefit derived.

His worship submits this proposal at the next meeting of the board of works.

CHANCES OF MAYOR WENIGE SUPPLANT WORLD'S PEACE

It happened last night in a Greek cafe. They were all arguing with healthy festivities; two persons of obvious Greek extraction; one individual, of undoubted Italian parentage, and two others whose origin could not be determined offhand.

Were they quarrelling about the latest development in the Balkans? Not much. They were debating with considerable emphasis, Mayor Wenige's chances for re-election in December.

MORE CANINE CLASS
THAN IN OTHER SHOWSWestern Fair Dog Show Declared To Be One of Best in City's History.

One of the finest dog shows ever held in London is now in process at the Western Fair, where animals from all over Western Ontario are competing for championships in the various classes.

That London has a good proportion of dog lovers among its population was evidenced this morning, when the building was packed with visitors from the time the doors opened, despite the fact that an additional 10 cents is charged for entry.

Several famous canines are entered in the show, dogs that have captured prizes in the biggest shows held in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Toronto, Montreal and other cities of similar size. These are all labeled, so that the casual visitor will know that he is looking at the ultimate in the dog world.

International officials are acting as judges and handlers, the show being under the auspices of the Canadian Kennel Club, among them being Norman K. Squire of Toronto, who acted as judge at the last show held in New York, and Bert Swan of Toronto, one of the best handlers in the dog show game.

Noticeable among the dogs are the Russian wolf hounds, or Borzoi, of which there are several entered, two of them being Champion Ostrand, owned by E. M. Burke, city, and Ch. Nazimova, from the Romanoff Kennels, Brantford.

Several splendid animals are to be seen in the section devoted to English bulldogs, where Ch. Warfield, Sensible Fred, American champion, owned by Thomas Grindal, New York City, and Lady Stewardess, winner at the National Exhibition, watch the passers-by with dignity.

Vanity Fair, a wire-haired fox terrier, owned by W. H. Short, city, has won prizes at shows in New York, Boston, Toronto, Philadelphia, and many other cities, and is endeavoring to add to her laurels here.

Boston bulls are numerous. Ch. Globe League of Nations being probably the most important and well-known in its line. It is owned by The Globe Kennels, London.

An imported champion is Ch. Lem-bach, a Yorkshire terrier, who has not been on this side of the water long. The owner, J. Edgar, Toronto, stated that the dog was one of the finest he had ever seen, and that he hoped for good fortune with it. Another Yorkshire, Kitty of Galt, owned by Mrs. J. W. Weidman, Galt, won in her class at the exhibition in Toronto.

Several Belgian police dogs are on exhibition and attracted much attention. Notices to the effect that pups of some of the animals on show were for sale brought many inquiries to the different owners.

The judging, which started yesterday afternoon, will not be completed until either tonight or tomorrow morning, according to Miss Short, secretary, who stated that it was the best show she had ever seen in London.

PLANS TO UTILIZE ASHES.
Ashes make good fertilizer, Mayor Wenige has learned, and he suggests that the city councilors should consider a system followed with satisfaction in other communities—the ashes are sold to farmers for that purpose and the municipality reaps a substantial profit. In this city the ashes are spread on the banks of the river and in sundry places, the mayor points out.EIGHT CONVICTED MEN
TAKEN TO GUELPH FARMMajority of Prisoners Sent Down For Violations of the O. T. A.

Eight convicted, seemingly undisturbed by the prospect of spending from one to two years at the Guelph Prison Farm, were paraded up and down the C. N. R. station at 11:30 this morning in handcuffs.

They came from Chatham and Sarnia, and were accompanied by two constables. Most of them were young lads, who were being sent to jail for offenses such as stealing motor cars and other varieties of thefts. Several bootleggers were among the group.

"I'm down for a year," a boy of 18 informed The Advertiser. "They caught me stealing a car."

"They got me with some liquor," another captive explained. "I was peddling it in a car, and we were raided."

"I got drunk and smashed a friend in the face," another declared. "When I got out again, I'll never get drunk any more."

Cigarettes and tobacco was distributed among the men, and they appeared quite unbothered. Two men were carrying a stretcher on which lay the figure of a man seriously injured in a Detroit motor accident last week. He was being taken to another car.

"We're better off than that chap, anyway," one of the handcuffed men observed.

ONTARIO'S SUCCESS WINS
COMPLIMENTS OF VISITORS

E. V. Buchanan, general manager of the public utilities commission, who has been attending the public ownership conference in Toronto, said this morning that the success of Ontario in her efforts towards public ownership was the subject of universal admiration on the part of all the members in attendance.

"It was unanimously agreed," he stated, "that of all the various places in the world, where public ownership has been the theme of political and financial discussion for years, Ontario has best translated them into practical, every-day effects."

Mr. Buchanan declared it was remarkable how members from the other parts of Canada and also from the other side agreed with this province in the way they had handled the question of public ownership.

Behind the Scenes At Midnight, Freaks of the Midway Are Human Beings

Rex Reveals Human Side of Band of Happy Mortals
The Western Fair FreaksFat or Skinny, Midget or Giant, Lion-Faced Lionel or Hajo the Ape Man, All Have Their Aspirations, Jealousies, Petty Passions and Worthy Motives.

FREAKS PHYSICALLY BUT MENTALLY NORMAL

By REX.

The last sight-seeer had departed from the multi-colored lights of the Western Fair, and heterogeneous noises of the day and night had given place to an almost uncanny silence.

The midway, which half an hour before buzzed with the hoarse announcements of barkers and the incomprehensible babble of five thousand voices, was now deserted. The clatter of tom-toms, the din of hoisterous visitors commenting volubly on this show and that, the nasal solicitations of spicers—all were gone, and stillness reigned.

That is, comparative stillness reigned. The few grotesque shapes which appeared magically from under the large show tents whispered observations to one another. Fifty yards to the west the lights of an improvised restaurant still burned, and the pungent odor of frying onions and sizzling hot-dogs proclaimed that supper was being served.

The bizarre figures approached the eating emporium with all haste. Like famished stragglers they flocked to the lunch counter: lilliputians and giants, mountains of flesh and emaciated wisps of humanity; pigmies, wild men, human oddities of every sort and description.

The freaks of the Johnny J. Jones exposition were making ready for their midnight meal.

Like Children Together.

Freaks! That is what they are called by the outside world. Physically, perhaps, they are freaks, and they accept the designation complacently. But in all other respects they are capable of the same human antics, the same sorrow and laughter as ordinary human beings. They have hearts, love, sympathy, avarice, selfishness and altruism as are readily kindled to action as in normal persons.

Hojo, half ape and half man; Millie, the longest, leanest, skinniest, most emaciated woman in the world; Hanson, the strong man; Prince Denison, the dwarf; Lionel, the lion-faced man; Susie, the fattest girl in the world, and a score of other human peculiarities, together in the Johnny Jones cafe and ate with all the abandon of healthy children.

Last night, when a representative spoke with them they were only too willing to talk about themselves. And their conversation revealed that they are an extraordinarily intelligent aggregation of human misfits. They know they are freaks, and are rather proud of the fact.

Freak bodies do not necessarily imply freak dispositions. If there is one thing that impresses the observer it is their utter lack of the inferior spirit of comradeship and the optimistic philosophy with which they regard life. They eat everything, even the fat ones, and their most nourishing diet is the milk of human kindness—a substance all too frequently denied them by those more fortunate individuals who gaze at them with tolerance across the rail which separates the freaks from curious crowds.

Mites of Humanity.

Among the biggest attractions on the midway are the French and Belgian midgets, which include the smallest man and woman in the world. Like large dolls, they are immaculately dressed, stylish and good-natured. Prince Denison is the giant of the midget family, weighing 33 pounds. He is 30 inches high and 25 years of age. Princess Marguerite, Lady Little, Duchess Leona, Baron Raymond and Baroness Simone comprise the remainder of the tiny, towering colony. Baroness Simone is 27 inches high and weighs 20 pounds. She and her sister midgets are all dainty little creatures, vivacious, and charming conversationalists.

"Of course we are in the business to make money," Prince Denison admitted to "The Advertiser." "Some day we will retire and live on our earnings. One of my brothers was killed at the Battle of the Marne and another was captured by the Germans. They were both big men. My parents were large too. They had five children, three of whom are midgets."

"All except one of us are French. Duchess Leona is a Belgian. We are as happy as we can be, except perhaps when a little disagreement crops up, but that doesn't happen often."

"Are any of you married?" Prince Denison was asked, laughing merrily. "Not yet," he said, laughing merrily. "I've got enough women to look after as it is. Two of the girls in this show are my sisters. It's all I can do to look after them without getting married."

Has No Use For Barbers.

Escorted by Ed. Salter, genial publicity manager of the Johnny Jones show, "The Advertiser" next conversed with Lionel, the lion-faced freak.

Lionel is one of the headliners of the show. He is one of the rarest of nature's peculiarities in the world. Lionel was born with a head so strongly resembling that of the king of beasts that he was named after him. His face is covered with lion's hair, and a lion's mane actually grows on the back of his neck. His body is covered with the same growth.

Curiously enough, this freak is a cultured, well-informed man. The story of his arrival in the world, covered with hissing fringe the color and gloss of which is exactly like that of a lion, is interesting.

"I am a victim of pre-natal influence," he said. "Five months before I was born my mother saw a father, who was a lion tamer, eaten alive by many lions whom he accidentally irritated. The sight so preyed on her mind that when I was born I was covered with lion's hair."

Lionel offered a picture taken in Germany when he was 8 years old.

It showed a child with a lion's face. He said his skin had always been like that, he said, and G. W. Nicholas, ten years ago the theory of pre-natal influences was generally accepted by medical men. Today, after much experiment, the idea is scouted as being without foundation. Like other freaks, the hairy visage of Lionel is probably an atavism. However, he remains one of the most interesting oddities of the circus world.

Fat Man Is Happy.

Henry Boston Burnett, who weighs 694 pounds, and is 5 feet 2 inches tall, could give no explanation for his mammoth proportions.

"I only eat three light meals a day," he said, and G. W. Nicholas, another fat man standing by, substantiated his words. "My father sent me to doctors, but I've always been fat. If diet would do any good, I would diet."

"I am not fond of sweet things or starchy foods. Most people think we fat freaks eat a great deal, but we don't. We're born this way."

Henry's girth is the size of a young mountain. The Advertiser asked him why he didn't wear corsets.

The 694 pounds of flesh commenced to heave. The shoulders wiggled and a ripple of convulsive shivers passed over the great body, giving the impression of an elephant trying to shimmy. Henry was in a fit of screaming laughter. The reference to corsets had tickled his sense of humor.

"Corsets! Ha! Ha! You said it," he gasped. "Well, well—I do like to laugh. I'm always laughing. Can't help it. I believe in being happy. If I'm fat, I'm fat, but I'm happy. Yessir!"

Della Weise, who only stands five feet, ten inches, weighs 565 pounds while Susie, the fat girl from York-shire, gets the world's record for weighing 703 pounds. She is five feet, eight inches in height.

"Feel my back," she asked The Advertiser. "See how muscular I am."

Complying with the fat lady's request, her back was subjected to a mild massage. It felt like the soft surface of a chunk of dough that has just been put in the oven and was coming that develop a crust.

"I don't mind telling anyone my measurements, but I reserve a woman's prerogative and refuse to disclose my age," she said. "I wear a number four shoe; my waist is 34 inches around, and my hips 90 inches."

Always Travel Together.

Rose and Muriel, the Honolulu twins in the next booth to Dr. Woods, each other, just above the twins, are human peculiarities, of the same type as the last Siamese twins. They Sunday took a trip by themselves to Niagara Falls, which had never seen before. Some day, perhaps, the twins may be separated by an operation, but every attempt to separate the twins with the knife has proved a failure, and Rose and Muriel are quite content to go on living in their present condition rather than take the chance of dying on the operating table.

They possess a wealth of gorgeous hair and, but for the accident of birth, would today be just like any other good looking young girls—fond of life and all the pleasures and privileges which good looks and pleasing appearance bring.

One of the most interesting of all the human exhibits is Dr. J. C. Woods, the "bee" man, but his name is not a freak by any means. For he has studied the habits of bees and knows them by heart. He can sit surrounded by millions without being stung. He never burns without cause for anger. Millions cling to his face and head, giving him a "beard" of bees. He is the biggest honey maker in the world.

No animal is really ferocious," Dr. Woods said. "It's the human animal that makes bees fierce. A bee is the most harmless insect in the world if you treat him right. He is also the most intelligent. Man can do feats of engineering man couldn't attempt."

Hojo, the Ape Man.

Advocates of the Darwinian theory of human descent will view the antics of Hojo the ape-man with pleasure. Hojo is an African monkey, with the face of a child and the habits of a gorilla. He climbs a pole with

PEANUT PURVEYOR
DISPUTES CHARGE OF "BUSTING" LAW

Jim Lambertis May Dispute
Magistrate and Chief's Evidence.

CASE ADJOURNED

The goddess of ill-luck has surely been flapping her black and shining wings over Jim Lambertis, London's lone purveyor of peanuts through the medium of a pushcart. James was "pinched" for an alleged flagrant breach of one of the city's many by-laws. This particular "nick" meaning in both Greek and English that "monkey" nuts shall not be sold on Dundas street, even if pushcarts are parked closer to the curb than two feet.

James appeared in court this morning with a sunny smile, and was apparently not worrying over the outcome of his case nor that of his compatriots on the island of Corfu.

However, stern and trying reparation loomed ahead of Jimmie. He intimated through his counsel, Thomas Coleridge, that he had about seven witnesses to prove that he was "within the law," but it will avail him nothing when the case comes up for trial on Friday, for no less a personage than the magistrate himself saw the head of the house of Lambertis "busting" the law by doing a land office business at the corner of Dundas and Cornwall street in front of the Ontario garage.

"I'm appearing for Mr. Lambertis," announced Mr. Coleridge when the case was called today.

"The usual appeal of 'not guilty,' I suppose," opined Mr. Graydon.

"Mr. Lambertis says he had the authority and can bring witnesses," continued Mr. Coleridge.

"He doesn't need to bring them, for I saw him myself at that particular corner."

"He wasn't selling peanuts, was he?" asked Mr. Coleridge in horrified tones.

"I don't know; maybe it was bananas," smiled the court.

"Yes, he had no bananas," hummed Mr. Coleridge softly.

"Well, I saw him, too. He was selling peanuts," stated Chief Birrell.

"Lambertis has been a constant pest to the police for years. He has tried every device to evade the by-law," declared Mr. Graydon. "However, I'll adjourn the case till Friday if you say so, so that Jim may get his witnesses. He might just as well plead guilty and pay the fine."

However, Jim believes that every cloud has a silver lining, and he will appear in court on Friday with a small army of witnesses, who will all swear that he never broke the law in his life, and never will.

ONE OF NATURE'S ODDITIES

This is Lionel, the lion-faced man, who is covered from head to foot with the yellow, silky hair of a lion. Lionel is one of the Johnny Jones exposition's big attractions. He was born with a mass of lion's hair covering his features—a victim of ancestral recurrence, or what in scientific circles is known as "atavism."

gazed hesitatingly at the numerous canvas paintings depicting the freaks doing their tricks. Some went inside, while others strode on. No doubt they were telling themselves the side-shows were fakes.

But the freaks themselves know that no actual fake is tolerated by the successful showman of modern times. When so many wonders of human nature are available, it is the height of un wisdom to exhibit anything other than the real thing. They know all the shows with which they are associated are genuine.

As Baron Paucel, the world's smallest man, observed:

"We are all a great big family here and we don't think any more of being abnormal than you do of being a Canadian. We are freaks, but remember, if the human race was composed of hunchbacks, a straight-backed man would be a freak. We are odd physically, but we are not odd mentally. We have the fancies, aspirations, likes and dislikes of a normal human being. In some respects we are better mannered."

"For one thing, we have learned not to ask foolish questions, because our patrons are always asking us foolish questions. We have also learned to be kind and considerate to a normal person is unkind and inconsiderate to us."

"When you think of it," he concluded, as his pigmy face brightened up, "there are many advantages to being a freak."

As a test of Madame Vada's extraordinary power, The Advertiser representative asked her to tell what he was reading. Unfolding an afternoon paper, he read an extract from the financial page to himself. Madame Vada repeated each word as the reporter read silently.

"How do you satisfy?" she asked smilingly after she had survived the experiment to the satisfaction of everyone.

The reporter had to admit he was.

COUNT FOR CREDITS

A special series of evening courses in English, economics, commercial law, and business finance will be given under the auspices of the University of Western Ontario during the coming winter. Col. W. J. Brown, executive secretary of the university, said this morning: "This course, apart from its usefulness, has the benefit of credits to degrees. That is, anyone taking the complete course will receive a credit toward obtaining a degree in the university. The lectures take place in the evenings, and will be held in the College of Arts Building on St. George street."

Lecturers will include Professor Tamblin and Prof. Spenceley in the English course; Frank H. Curran in the commercial law, and probably two other members of the faculty. Professors Morrow and Freeman, in some of the courses.

The first meeting will be held Oct. 8.

Takes Full Year.

The course runs along for the full university year, which is until May. Colonel Brown pointed out that the English part of the course will be based on the plays of Shakespeare or on the modern school of novelists of choosing between the two.

In connection with medical post-graduate work at the university, the secretary stated that the course leading to the diploma of public health is in advance of the course outlined by the British Medical Association this year.

Standard Higher.

The course in Ontario calls for ten months' work as compared with five in the British universities, and has compared with 700 in the old country colleges. Those taking this post-graduate work are required to be those already holding degrees in medicine. The standard of the course is also, he said, in advance of many of the large American medical centers, such as Johns Hopkins, Yale, Princeton, Detroit College of Medicine, and some others.

at Sessions.

The Workers' Educational Association, inaugurated by the University of Western Ontario for the benefit of men and women unable to attend a university course and who want information along the lines of political economy, English, social and economic history and other allied subjects, will carry on its work this year and expects to have a large attendance for the long and complete list of lectures.

The committee of the association will meet in the next few days and decide on the lecturers and rooms in which they will conduct the course.

Last year the public library was used, and the Labor Temple may be used this year if possible. Grants towards the work have been received from the Trades and Labor Council and from the Railway Workers' Union. Arthur Little is president of the association, Prof. Spenceley vice-president and Richard Crouch, librarian, is the secretary.

BOBBED HAIR AND COLORED WIGS TO REMAIN IN STYLEDame Fashion's Latest Mandate Is That Wigs Must Match Dress in Color.

NEW JOB FOR "HUBBY"

"What wig shall I wear this evening?"

This startling query will be heard in every up-to-date household within a year from now, according to hair-dressers. Instead of the infernally feminine command, "Button me up the back, John," local husbands will be confronted with the daily obligation of adjusting wife's red wig, or purple wig, or orchid wig, depending on the variety of milady's assortment.

This morning when a despatch from New York announced that wigs and transformations were to be the vogue for the coming year the ranks of London beauty specialists were plainly aghast. In older days (the spring of 1923), fashion decreed that dresses must be worn to match the hair. Now the situation is reversed. Hair must be worn to match the dress.

It is said, too, the new style will apply to men as well as women. And this raises the interesting question: "If clothes must be worn to match the hair, what about bald-headed men?" The answer is pregnant with possibilities.

To bobbed-hairings, fearsome that long tresses might suddenly pop into style again, leaving them "passed" or frumpish, the statement of the National Hair Dressers' convention will come as a relief. Bobbed hair, say coiffure magnates, shall remain fashionable. Only in the evenings will it become obligatory for women to conceal their abbreviated locks, and this will be done by "transformations" and wigs.

Indorses Bobbed Hair.

Madame H. A. Boyce, local beauty expert and cosmetologist, believes that the latest fad in connection with wholesale application of green, yellow, crimson and periwinkle to the feminine cranium may be a great success. It has already been used in France, and some of the effects are sensational.

Madame Boyce indorses the decision of the National Hair Dressers' convention to keep bobbed hair fashionable.

"It is so comfortable and convenient," Madame explained. She doubted, however, if the fashion of wigs would adhere to the provisions which make the wearing of colored wigs to match the dresses almost compulsory.

Madame Boyce suggests that perhaps London is too orthodox to follow the dictates of American style autocrats. She did not think there was any local woman with sufficient courage to start the ball rolling.

Ears To Be Worn Bare.

Among other ordinances passed by the assembled cosmetologists was the compulsory use of earplugs. The female auditory apparatus, so long in seclusion that the male element had begun to doubt of its existence, must in future be bared to the eyes of the world. They will be adorned with tinkling little earrings. It is predicted these things will be transformed from the ear to the nose next year.

Anything to achieve individuality! It has already been recommended that women wear different colored wigs to match the weather. For instance, if the sun is clear they would wear yellow wigs; if a storm does up they would wear less gaudy colors.

If wife were on a picnic and the sun was sultry, they would wear a big black cloud, the proper command of wife to husband would be: "Get my mauve wig. Can't you see it's going to rain!"

Quick! "Hm!" "Get my mauve wig. Can't you see it's going to rain!"

STATES CITY IS READY TO BUILD BREAKWATER

Mayor Reports Only Signatures of Front Street
Residents Needed.

There is absolutely nothing to prevent improvements to the street breakwater, other than the signatures of the residents along that street, Mayor Wilson reported today.

"All these people have to do is to sign the agreement with the city," the mayor pointed out. "This city engineer has had it ready for months, but some of the ratepayers interested evidently want something more definite. They wanted to know just where the city would dump the ashes on their property. I told them that there should be no trouble in that respect. The engineer's men would use judgment in this. It is not to be supposed that the ashes would be dumped on their doorsteps."

The mayor thinks that the agreement is sound and says there is nothing to do now but for Front street property holders to step up and affix their signatures to the necessary documents.

FRED YOUNG DECLARES
NEVER WAS TREASURER

Fred Young, who until a few weeks ago was regarded as the "resourcer" of the trades and labor council, made the interesting declaration to The Advertiser today that he has never occupied that position. Therefore, he did not have to resign as was reported, and generally understood by the members of the labor organization.

"I was never actually the treasurer," he explained. "I never took the oath of office. In fact, I refused to take it."

Delegate Young predicts the real of his adversaries in the Labor Temple, who also propose to oust Secretary Burke before many weeks have passed along.

"They dare not put that resolution to have him out," Mr. Young challenged.

Discusses Marriage, Love, Business-Contract Angle

Suppose That Marriage Contracts Were Renewable After a Certain Space of Time and That Time Was Nearly Up—Would Your Wife or Husband Want to Renew the Partnership?—Ask Yourself Honestly.

Do you ever ask yourself if you give satisfaction as a husband or as a wife? Do you ever wonder if your husband or wife would pick you out as a life companion if he or she had a second choice?

Could you give a good reference if you were looking for another matrimonial job?

Every married man and woman are acutely aware of how far the poor, weak, blundering creatures they married are from the angels and heroes they thought they were espousing. There is nothing like domesticity for turning the spotlights on the faults of those with whom we live, and there is not a husband or wife who could not bring an indictment a yard long against his or her life partner without stopping to make a new inventory.

So much for the other fellow, but how about yourself? Suppose, Mr. Man, marriage was a business contract, entered into for a definite space of time, and the time was nearly up. Suppose you had found the arrangement profitable and agreeable, and were anxious to renew the contract. Do you ever wonder if your wife would sign on the dotted line again?

Of course, no man comes up to a girl's dreams. There isn't any such animal, but there are certain things every woman has a right to expect of her husband. Companionship. Consideration. Fair play. A fifty-fifty split on the perquisites as well as the penalties of family life. How do you check up on these things?

Do you think your wife would let herself be in for twenty years more of your society if she could help herself? She is human, you know, and has the usual human reactions. When you come home surly and glum, and sit through the whole evening in a frozen silence that sends the domestic atmosphere down below zero, or when you vent on your wife all the temper and irritability you dare not display to your customers or clients, do you imagine that she is passing a happy hour, and thinking how perfectly delightful it is to be assured of such cheery companionship the balance of her life?

You've seen many a lucrative business partnership broken up because one member of the firm was so disagreeable that the other would not put up with him at any price, and, believe me, Mr. Man, the same thing would be true of the domestic partnership, oftener than you think, if it could be terminated at will.

It is because men think they can't lose them that many husbands knock everything their wives do, and treat them with a rudeness they would not dare to show the cook. They would mend their manners if they knew that their wives would quit cold if things were not made pleasant for them.

And how about money? When you got married you founded the firm of Benedict & Co. Your wife put everything she had into that, body and brain and heart. She has worked harder and longer hours than you have to make the company a success. She has sacrificed more than you have.

Have you given her her share of the profits? Does she draw down a certain amount of money of her own every month, the just pay for her labor, or do you keep all the profits of the concern, and make her come to you like a beggar, for every penny she has? Would any man partner be satisfied to be treated the way you treat your wife? Would he renew a contract on such terms? And if he wouldn't, what makes you think that your wife is satisfied and desires to continue such a bad bargain?

Do you think you give satisfaction as a husband? A woman wants a husband to show her daily that he loves her. She wants tenderness. She wants appreciation. She wants her husband to give some sign that he still takes an interest in her, and looks upon her as something more than a kitchen adjunct.

How about it, Mr. Man? Have you kept the love fires burning in your wife's heart, or have you let them go out because you ceased to feed the flame? Do you pay your wife delicate little courtesies? Do you remember anniversaries and surprise her with some little thing she wants? Do you tell her she is prettier than any of the flappers, or are you one of the men who never take another look at their wives after their wedding day, or show them any little attention, and whose wives would drop dead with surprise if they paid them a compliment?

Take it from me, Mr. Man, there is many a husband who considers himself a good husband because he doesn't beat his wife and pays the family bills, whose wife wouldn't marry him again on a bet if she was given a new matrimonial deal. She would take a chance on a neomeister because she would figure out that she couldn't do worse than she did with number one.

And how about you, Mrs. Woman? Do you think your husband is satisfied with you? He is a human being, too, and he has a right to be married, with good food and cooking and the kind of physical mother used to make. He expected to have a wife who would be thrifty and economical and a helpmate to him.

When he comes home at night to an ill-kept house and sits down to a dinner that would give an ostrich indigestion, do you think that he thinks that you are playing fair with him, or wailing on your part of the bargain? When he comes home to find you extravagant bills and he sees himself being sold into slavery to shopkeepers, don't you know that he wishes he had the courage to break up the partnership at once, and that he feels like having you prosecuted for having misappropriated the firm's money?

Do you suppose any wife gives satisfaction who is a neurotic creature full of morbid fancies; or who is a high-tempered shrew whose tongue keeps her husband in perpetual fear; or who is a whiner and a complainer, or who is dull and stupid; or who is too lazy and inert to even keep herself properly dressed?

No man marries to get that kind of a wife, and every one of those ladies would be out husband-hunting if matrimony was a time contract instead of a life job.

What is the sort of "character," as they say at employment agencies, would your present husband or wife give you, Mr. Man and Mrs. Woman? It is a salutary problem to ponder.

MR. AND MRS. MOORE MARRIED SIXTY YEARS

Celebrate Diamond Wedding At Home of Mrs. Wm. Shipp, Palmyra.

An interesting event of last week was the diamond wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Moore, held at the home of their daughter, Mrs. William Shipp, Talbot road, Palmyra.

Henry Moore and Maria Montgomery were united in marriage in 1863 in Dumfries Township, Brant County, by Rev. Mr. Miller. A few years later they moved to Newville, Talbot road, where they resided until ten years ago, when they sold their farm and retired from active life.

To this union were born five children, four of whom are still living. They, together with eleven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, were present at this gathering. Although of a quiet nature, Mr. and Mrs. Moore were the recipients of several telegrams and greetings from old friends. Despite the fact that Mr. Moore is 82 and his wife 81, both are enjoying good health and are very active for their years.

Those present included: Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bell and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Watts of Shelburne, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McDougall and family of Southport, Mr. and Mrs. William Eberle and family of Palmyra, Mr. and Mrs. William Shipp and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Shipp of Ridgeway, and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Moore and family of this city.

Fashions by Wire

Special to The Advertiser.

Copyright. Paris, Sept. 11.—Evening blouses are trimmed with fur at present, and most elaborate materials, such as brocade velvet, are used for some of the restaurant costumes.

Everything Rebuffed.

Paris, Sept. 11.—There is almost no end today of the variety of fashions. One of the newest ideas, however, is to have the topknot on a skirt run slanting upwards to meet an ornament on the hip.

Skirts Are Shorter.

London, Sept. 11.—As it is today, if you want a normal waist line you may have it. If not, your waist may continue as low as you wish. As for the length of skirts, they are shorter if anything.

Fantastic Bandeaux.

London, Sept. 11.—Bandeaux are growing more and more fantastic each day. There is the bandeaux of velvet shirred and set, like a crown low on the head. There is also the bandeaux of satin black velvet ribbon, widely plaited to show its two colors.

Puffy Under Sleeves.

New York, Sept. 11.—The sleeveless gown has given rise today to the under-blouses of crepe de chine or chiffon, of puffy, balloon-like sleeves. Thus, one may be both sleeveless and sleeved, and in style on both counts.

Hosiery Is Striped.

New York, Sept. 11.—Hosiery is taking unto itself a multiplicity of stripes. These stripes vary in width and in color. One stocking is gold, shown here today in a shop window, is finely striped with lavender. A green is striped with gray and tan with black.

Slippers Are Ornate.

New York, Sept. 11.—Evening slippers remain as ornate today as before, frequently matching the brocade dress of evening cloaks. But street shoes are inclined to cling to three colors—black, brown and gray.

EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETS.

The regular meeting of the Wellington Street Epworth League held this week was in charge of the missionary department, with Albert Dent presiding. The topic, "The Growth of the Canadian Methodist Missions," was given by W. Boyce. Miss Eleanor Hodgins was appointed recording secretary, to fill the vacancy left by C. Hodgins, who is leaving the city shortly. An executive meeting will be held Sept. 13 to draw up the program for the coming year. Following the meeting a social hour was enjoyed. The Hyatt Avenue Society will be guests at the next meeting, and the program will be presented by them.

A new Grand Rapids ordinance requires a 70-degree minimum temperature for apartments, factories and office buildings.

ENGAGEMENTS

A charge of 75 cents for one insertion, or $1 for two insertions is made for notices under this heading. Orders for insertion of engagements must bear the name and address of sender and will not be taken over the telephone.

Final arrangements for the big fall convention of Western Ontario Women's Institutes were made yesterday morning at a special meeting of the executive held in the Chamber of Commerce board room, Tecumseh House, Mrs. George Edwards, president of the Canadian Women's Institutes, presiding. A new feature of the program this year will be the reservation of a full half-day for shopping in the London stores. The convention is being held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, November 6, 7 and 8, in the Masonic Temple.

Outstanding speakers of the sessions will be Dr. Mary of Toronto, the first woman school inspector, her subject to be "The Part That Women Play in the Community"; Dr. Madge Macklin of the Western University staff, who will speak on "How the University Can Co-operate With the Women's Institute"; and George A. Putnam, superintendent of institutions for Ontario. Special musical numbers are also scheduled for the evening sessions. An interesting visit for will be Miss Ethel M. Ranch Life With No Frills Will Make Up the Vacation Well Planned For Prince

Special to The Advertiser.

High River, Alta., Sept. 12.—Next week the Prince of Wales will be one of those folk who live "up in the hills," which is the way the plains dwellers of the district immediately around High River describe the ranchers who come from the more romantic section of the foothills of the Rockies. Already the E. P. ranch up in the valley of the Pekisko Creek in the foothills is all prepared and ready for its royal owner. Incidentally people out here in Alberta always speak of the owner of the E. P. ranch as "The Prince." They do not put very much stock in this technical change to the title of "Lord Renfrew." The Prince of Wales is to them, and so he will remain. And if a town ever springs up on the sight of what is now the E. P. ranch the name of the town will be "Princetown." The ranch house is the telephone central for that neighborhood, and in the phone book the station is listed as "Princetown." So if a straggling western town springs up, there is the name for it all ready. Some day next week the Prince of Wales will probably take an early morning climb to the top of the foothills which rise to the east of the E. P. ranch house. From there he can look down on his own ranch, a fairer jewel than which no man could wish. Hundreds of feet below him he will see the ranch buildings, small in the distance, and nestling among the cottonwoods and balsam of Gilead trees which line the banks of Pekisko Creek; also known as the Middle Fork of the High Wood River. Three miles to the south, two miles to the east, will stretch his own domain, dotted with trees and covered with a beautiful green. His own sheep, his own horses, his own sheep, will be seen grazing contentedly beneath him. Twenty miles or more in the distance, with the snow-capped peaks of the second range gleaming white in the morning sunlight.

Getting House Ready.

Thus the Prince of Wales may well say to himself, "Where in all Canada, nay, in all the world, could I find a more beautiful spot, one that would delight the heart of man or prince?" When he sees that sight he will be thankful that he bought the E. P. ranch, and more thankful that he is able to take his place among his own fellow ranchers for a holiday. For nearly two weeks painter and paper hangers have been getting the ranch house ready for the prince.

Mrs. Carlyle, wife of the manager, has been at the ranch supervising things just as if it were her own son who was coming. The house is a low rambling structure, giving little hint at first sight to the fact that it contains a dining-room, a good-sized living-room, a kitchen, eight bedrooms, three servants' bedrooms, and three baths. When the visitor enters from the east, he notices first the vine-covered veranda with its pop vines and wild clematis passing along a gravel path lined with geraniums.

and other plants on green-painted pots. Then the visitor is at the dining-room door. Inside is the room where the prince will take all his meals while staying at the ranch. Like the dining-room, the walls are finished in a maize color, with the woodwork white. Heavy green curtains stretch across the window; on the walls is a sepia print entitled "A Tug-of-War," and a calendar of the common colors. An upright coal stove and several china cabinets line the walls. Perhaps the prince will be eating lunch to no orchestra, for no orchestra plays during meals at the ranch. There is though a phonograph in the dining-room, one of the old style with a brass horn. The prince will be seated in one of the oak chairs, with high backs and leather-covered seats, which are about the table in the center of the room. No expensive cutting of chinaware is on the table. Just what one would find in thousands of homes throughout Canada, as "Jimmie" Shimbashi, the Japanese cook, has announced that all meals are to be just ordinary ranch meals. Perhaps the prince's lunch will be like the one served at the ranch house yesterday—barley and carrot soup, cold roast beef with potatoes, and baked beans; a dessert of bread pudding, tea and lots of homemade bread, or perhaps Jimmie will be serving well cutlets, home-grown, with cauliflower, and a variety of place of baked beans. Any way it will not be an ornate meal of a dozen or more courses. After his lunch, the prince may want to smoke his pipe for a while before the great fire. In the sitting-room, which is immediately to the south of the dining-room, it is just an ordinary brick grate, such as one would find in many a ranch house. The prince may use any one of half a dozen chairs of miscellaneous types, a big comfortable cloth-covered chair, wicker chairs or Morris chairs, or if he is tired he can stretch out on the couch, which is alone one wall.

Will Rest in Quietness.

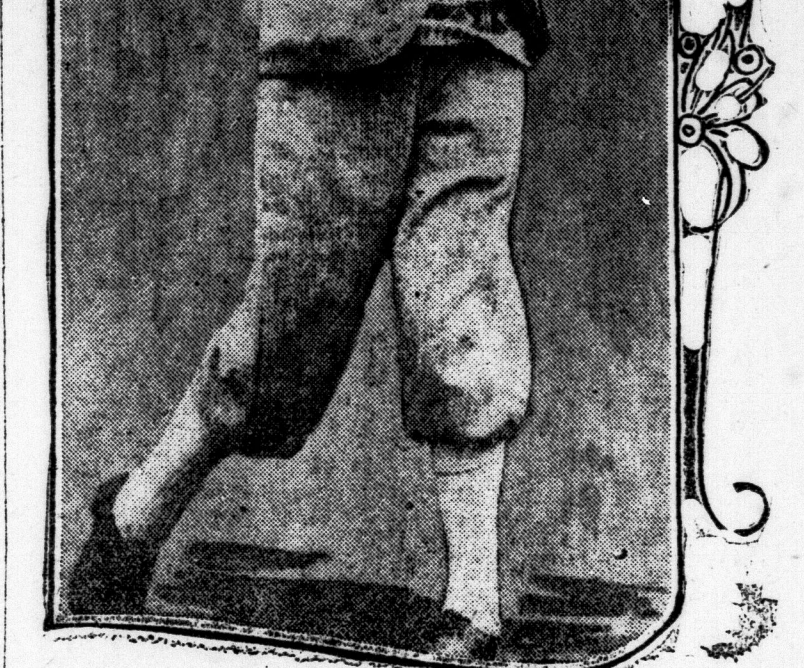

If a rainy day should make the prince stay in the house plenty of reading matter is provided in the four bookcases and the one writing desk which is in the room. There are sixty odd volumes of Coates' Herd Books, a number of volumes of the Dominion Standard, and a number of other books containing ranching lore, horse, soil, fertility, sheep farming, the growing of alfalfa. One shelf contains lighter reading matter, novels such as might be found in any rancher's home.

Up in one corner of the room is a picture of the prince himself, in his army uniform. Over the fireplace is a picture of his father, King George, and on the other wall a steel engraving of a couple of horses owned and raised by the late King Edward. The hardwood floor is covered with the skin of a young deer and a large rug made from coyote skins, from coyotes shot on the ranch. If the proposed hunting party for the prince up in the forest reserve is successful, possibly the prince will bring back the head of a mountain sheep or a big deer to make the furnishings of the living-room complete.

To the right of the living-room, with its window facing south, is the red room which the prince will occupy. It is a fairly-sized room, with the walls covered with wallpaper with a chifftone and dressing table across the room. If the prince is cold at any time, all that is to be his is a fire in the tiny coal stove. Then in the morning the prince may hop out of bed and go into his bathroom, for the ranch has its own water system as well as its own electric light system. Then the prince will be ready for his breakfast of porridge and bacon and eggs, which Jimmie, the cook, says will be given him.

The E. P. ranch is much the same as other ranches in the district, and probably the Prince of Wales will conduct himself on it much as other ranchers do. He will probably ride around and view the stock and take note of a variety of interests of the ranch. He may have a little duck shooting or partridge shooting on his own ranch, or a regular hunt up in the mountains. Anyway the three weeks or so the prince will spend on his own ranch will be a complete change and a rest, away from the strains of always being before the public. High River people at least will respect his wishes, and allow Canada's Prince Charming to rest in solitude and in peace.

SELMAN—HOLT.

MRS. CALVIN VOOLIDGE SHREWD PURCHASER

Prefers Footwear Less Expensive Than Twenty-Five Dollars.

By ROBERT A. V. BRADSHAW, Special to The Advertiser. Copyright.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Twenty-five dollars is a trifle steep for footwear, maybe. Anyway, although the natty little bronze slippers that had been trotted out fitted her just so and the silver gray ones that followed fitted just as well, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge "shopped some more," and got what she wanted for less money the other day when she made the rounds of the downtown stores in quest of evening footwear.

Ever since she came to Washington the new first lady has done much of her shopping here, and the astute psychologists behind the counters of more than one store know the likes and dislikes of the president's wife to a T. Likewise, they can give you off-hand a sketch of her chief characteristics.

Not long after she came to Washington as the president's wife, Mrs. Coolidge went all alone into one of the downtown shops of the popular price type. She was looking for a frock. Out of the display put before her she picked a fairly inexpensive model of good lines and substantial material. Slender and girlish of figure, the frock suited her admirably. Only when she gave her name and address did the saleswoman know she was serving the "first lady."

TEEL STOCKS ABSORB INTEREST AT NEW YORK

United States Steel Common Shares Selling One Point Down.

By STUART P. WEST.
Special to The Advertiser.
New York, Sept. 12.—Interest in the steel market today was centered pretty largely by the action of the steel stocks and their reaction to less favorable reports from steel mills.

The iron age states that new buying of steel products so far this month has not been up to expectations, and that both the U. S. Steel Corporation and the Carnegie-Iron Works have reduced their rate of output. The market for steel shares was discounting these reports of the slackening demand, and the curtailment of operations at the mills. United States Steel, common, sold down more than a point before Tuesday close, and Bethlehem Steel, common, and Gulf States Steel, common, also declined.

The heaviness of the steel stocks was depressing the entire market, and the list and retarded the advance of the upward movement. Stocks at the high of the day had been in many cases exceeded their best prices since the August advance and gave promise of reaching new high points for the season. Upgrading of individual stocks and the general trading was taken as an indication of the market's confidence, and to inspire confidence.

Speculative favorites, the American Iron, Continental Can, Baldwin Locomotive, Studebaker and Corn Products, all eased off, but the latter two were suggested as they had been during the last two days.

The steel stocks were more prominent, leading issues, such as Cuban-American, common, and the Cuban, and Punta Alegre, reaching their highest prices for the current movement. Their advance was due to the better feeling in the sugar trade and the raising of quotations on both sides and refined sugar.

The oil stocks continued irregular, but further heavy dealings in Coudon, and the market was considerably higher. The sharp advance which was coming in anticipation of their meeting soon would pay their dividends. The general oil list appeared to show little concern over a cut in crude oil, announced by the oil companies.

Copper stocks were quiet, but the technical was the outstanding feature of this class, again touching a new low for the current movement.

"One-Third More Heat" Pease "ECONOMY" FURNACE

If you are looking for a well-made furnace and also one that will "go easy" on the coal, you cannot make a mistake by choosing the Pease "Economy." It is now nearly fifty years since the first "Economy" was placed on the market and many of the originals are still being used.

As to the question of economy of fuel, read the following letter from Mr. John Sanger of Brampton. It is but one of many on file.

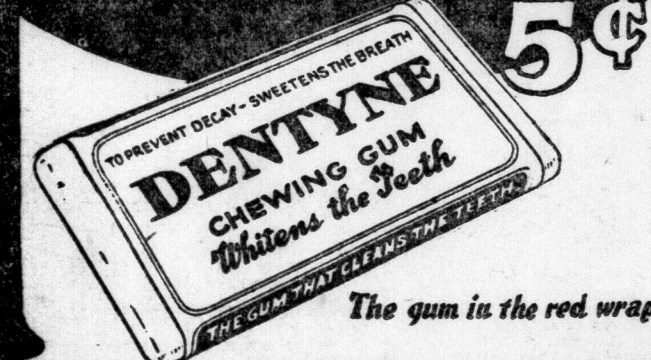

"I find the Pease Economy Furnace very satisfactory. While it burns as much coal as my old furnace, I get one-third more heat with the same amount of coal. We are heating eight rooms now, whereas we only heated four with the old furnace."

If you are interested in the question of heating get in touch with us today. Prices and literature are yours for the asking.

98 OUT OF EVERY 100 WOMEN BENEFITED

An Absolutely Reliable Statement
Important to Every Woman

Remarkable Results Shown by a Nation
Wide Canvass of Women Purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. 50,000 Women Answer

For some time a circular has been closed with each bottle of our medicine bearing this question: "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

Replies, to date, have been received from over 50,000 women answering that question.

98 per cent of which say yes. That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take the medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This is a most remarkable record of efficiency. We doubt if any other medicine in the world equals it.

Think of it—only two women out of 100 received no benefit—98 succeeded out of a possible 100.

Did you ever hear anything like it? We must admit that we, ourselves, are astonished.

Of course we know that our medicine does benefit the large majority of women who take it. But that only two out of 100 received no benefit is most astonishing.

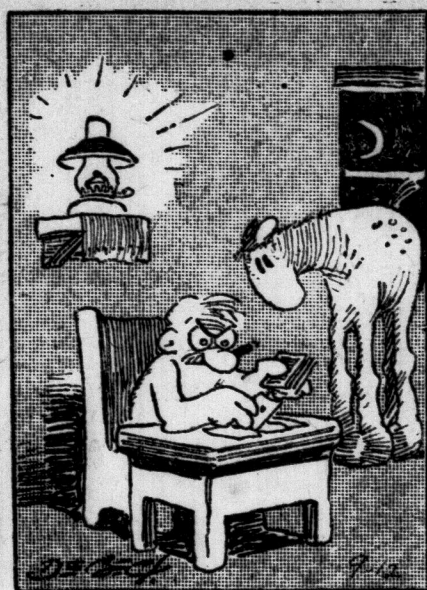

It only goes to prove, however, that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure all—one that is made by the most scientific process; not from drugs, but from a combination of nature's roots and herbs, can and does do more good than hastily prepared prescriptions.

You see, we have been making, improving and refining this medicine for over 50 years until it is so perfect and so well adapted to women's needs that it actually has the virtue to benefit 98 out of every 100 women who take it.

The reliability and recognized efficiency has gained for it a sale in almost every country in the world—leading all others.

Such evidence should induce every woman suffering from any ailment peculiar to her sex to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and see if she can't be one of the 98. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cohasset, Ontario.
