

BY RICHARD RENAUD

On the night of Saturday September 23rd a first year resident of Lady Dunn Hall fell down a flight of stairs in what appears to be an alcohol related incident. The timing of this is ironic, last week an article was reprinted in the Brunswickan which told of the death due to drinking of a Guelph University student.

The accident occurred as the young lady was leaving the Lady Dunn/Tibbits Hall social that was taking place in the Ballroom of the S.U.B.. Witnesses say that she landed in a very awkward position as her head was twisted one way and her hips were going another.

According to SUB staff present, when questioned as to how much beer she had had, she slurred out: "SIXTEEN"!!! She complained of a lack of feeling in her upper legs. Fearing a potential spinal injury, an ambulance was called to the scene. She refused the services of the ambulance and decided to wait for her brother to take her home. Eventually she was coaxed into getting herself checked out. She suffered only a knee injury and now claims that she had not had as much to drink, that in fact she was wearing shoes with heels. It seems that she rarely wears this type of shoe and was unable to handle them, which lead to her

She was approached by SUB downfall. staff and CP's immediately.

> Kim Norris, S.U.B. Director, who's staff were on hand only as building supervisors and had nothing to do with the event, allowed me access to their report for that night. It says: "These girls were too drunk, Bar Services should have cut them off." This leads us to wonder where did she do her drinking? Bar Services staff assures us that it would be impossible for anyone to get served that much under the drinking regulations of U.N.B.. One must therefore believe that she "frontloaded" (did her drinking at home), if this is the case, then she should never have been allowed into a social intoxicated.

This was the first social to move out of the residence and into the S.U.B.. Ric Cuthbertson, manager Campus Bar Services and Associate Dean of Residence, informed me that moving the socials out of the houses and into the S.U.B. has been a goal of his for some time. As to minimize the liabilities on the part of the university The civil liabilities in a case like this are enormous. If this girl had been more seriously injured, she could have sucd:

1. the organizers of the event, for allowing her in and allowing her to leave drunk.

2. Bar Services, for providing the alcohol and serving her past the point of intoxication.

3. The CP's, for allowing her to leave when she was not in control of herself.

4. The University of New Brunswick, for providing a location which was apparently unsafc.

As this story goes to press a seminar is taking place, sponsored by the Residence office on Civil liabilities of New Brunswick universities. The outcome of this may have long term effects on campus drinking activitics.

Dr. Alan Morgan spoke to the geology students at the Geology Forestry building on a topic that has become a growing concern around the world, Global Change.

Dr. Morgan is a professor of Geology at the University of Waterloo and co-chairman of the Royal Society of Canada Proxy Data Research.

With use of slides, Dr. Morgan gave an interesting and thought-provoking lecture. His unique blend of humor and explanations on this toic made the lecture interesting to, not just geology students, but anyone interested in Global Change and what Canada is doing about it.

By briefly explaining the first three phases that went on after word, Dr. Morgan reminded his audience "that Global Change is an ongoing activity for the planet earth.

Morgan explained the history of the development of man. He stated that our "big break was the industrial revolution". Through the development of the steam engine man could "excavate canals in oceans of the world." He stated that "Mankind is now moving more material on the

On the 22nd of September surface of this planet than all other natural agencies combined", such as rivers, marine action and glacier action. "And that's," he continued, "a pretty sober thought."

> In only two decades vast changes could be seen on the planet Earth. Dr, Morgan said that in the early sixties astronauts were told to photograph any dust areas they saw while taking pictures of the Earth in space. Today they tell the astronauts to photograph any clear ares they

Through the space flights that started in the late sixties, people realized that the carth was "the home of Mankind." "People could look at the planet differently."

By using graphs, Dr. Morgan showed his audience that, through the increase of Carbon Dioxide and the mixture of CO2 with other gases, such as Methane, there has been a gradual increase in temperature around the world. In the last one hundred and fifty years, five of the hottest years have been during the 1980's. "Something is going on," he said.

One of the major problems of the Earth is the increase in "Nine million population. children are born each year on our planet. Three million die before the age of onc. We have a problem."

Mankind will need more food in order to survive. But according to Dr. Morgan, our soil layer in Canada is lacking and many different sprays are being used to look after crops.

He mentioned one example of a spraying practice in Greece during the early 1960's. Greece was sprayed in order to control the Mediterranean Fruit Fly. People were asked to stay under shelter for three to four days. oil tanker flushing its tanks Very little lived from this before entering the Mediterranean spraying. Wasps, bcatles and Sea. many insects died and birds were sick.

The contamination is also getting in the oceans. Traces of PCB's and DDT's can be found in aquatic life that is "literally thousands of kilometers away the source of from contamination."

"There are 700 communities in Canada with one thousand or more people who do not process any of their own sewage, (it is) dumped straight into the nearest water body."

Dr. Morgan used slides to demonstrate the amounts of pollution that arc in our world. Dust hazes that spread across from Africa to the Pacific, and an

The warming effect, potential riscs of sca levels, disappearances of salt marsh environments will dramatically change the world as we know it.

A Canadian Global program was started around three years ago. Canada views Global Change as a situation that must be dealt with scientifically as well as socially.

Dr. Morgan believes we have an "incredibly beautiful planet," but that we must find ways to handle the problems immediately. The problems that are evident now, and the ones that will come with change in the near future.

OPINION...

The Chief Justice of New Brunswick, Mr. Stewart G. Stratton, in his 25 page judgement of September 8, 1989, in connection with Malcolm Ross, makes reference to subsection 5(1) of the Human Rights Act, which reads as follows:

"No person, directly of indirectly, alone or with another, by himself or by the interposition of another, shall (a) deny to any person or class of persons any accommodation services or facilities available to the public, or

(b) discriminate against any person or class of persons with respect to any accommodation, services or facilities available to the public, because of race, colour, religion, national origin, ancestry, place of origin, age, physical disability, mental disability, marital status or sex."

After reading the Act as well as the judgement, it seems to me that the authors of the Act did not have schools in mind as a possible place of discrimination of the kind they were concerned about, for the obvious reason that in Canada it has not been a problem that a child or an adult had been refused admission to a school or to an institution of learning on the basis of colour, race, sex, etc. At the same time it also seems perfectly reasonable that if there were such cases of discrimination where a child was barred form entering a school, it would be a violation of human rights, as conceived by our society, and any Human Rights Act ought to cover them.

It would appear therefore that Mr. Justice Miller was correct in saying that the Act was not intended to apply to schools, while Chief Judge Stratton is also correct in asserting that if the purpose of the Act was to be served, it should be applicable to schools as well. The apparent contradiction is a result of lack of clarification as to what kind of discrimination is being considered.

The kind of "discrimination" that David Attis of Moncton is alleging is of a very different variety than that envisaged by the Human Rights Act of New Brunswick. He claims that the Moncton School Board is guilty of discrimination against him because he is a Jew with 3 children in the school system, and the Board employs a teacher, who, according to him is "anti-Jewish", although he has not taught any of his children. This kind of "discrimination", if it can be called that, hardly falls under the Human Rights Act. He also asserts that the Jewish and other minority children are denied "equal opportunity", but does not specify as to what kind of opportunity they are deprived of by the Board, when in fact all the children are treated exactly alike?

The terms like "anti-Jewish" or "racist" used by Attis, are not well defined. One can say that the Jews are "anti-Christian" and it will not be devoid of meaning. The Jews themselves can be labelled as "racists" because they are one of the most race conscious people in the world. For example, Israel's doors are completely open to a Jew, but not to a non-Jew, which is certainly a form of discrimination based on race.

All forms of discrimination are not necessarily evil. For example, to discriminate against what one considers to he hateful cannot be considered evil. People should be free to love and hate and express their feelings as long as their expression is not too crude or violent. The Human Rights Act is designed to curb such crude discrimination which can be easily ascertained, like refusal for accommodation or services; it is not designed to control people's thoughts and minds.

What do 75% of students do during class time? No, take notes was not the answer I was looking for (that's the other 25%). Guess again ... you got it - SLEEP!

Sleep is a very interesting topic as it plays a very important part in all of our lives. Did you know that the average person spends (only) about 232,678 hours of their lives sleeping? So, if you're going to sleep that much, you just as might do it well. Some of us do not, however. Do you suffer from insomnia, enuresis, pavor nocturnus or somnambulism? Translated into English, this means, do you experience abnormal wakefulness, bed-wetting, night terror or sleep walking?

The question of how many hours of sleep required by humans has not been answered. The average person sleeps about 7.5 hours but there are some individuals (around 5% of the population) who sleep less than 6 hours (short sleepers) or more than 9 hours (like me, called long sleepers) per night.

Then there is the question of how many hours of sleep you don't get. If you were ever so unfortunate as to have been deprived of sleep beyond 40 hours (like if you didn't do your assignment OR you just started first week of school) you probably would have begun to show increased irritability, lack of perseverance and visual, temporal and cognitive distortions. Sounds like my brother. Even worse yet, after 100 hours of sleep deprivation (because you were a member of the Orientation Committee '89), you probably began to display behaviour resembling paranoid psychosis (???). Ask Bob S. And to think the frosh looked to us for guidance!

The longest recorded period for which a person has volutarily gone without sleep is 453 hr 40 min by Robert McDonald of California in a rocking chair on Mar 14 - Apr 2, 1986. Victims of the very rare condition chronic colestites (total insomnia) have been known to go without definable sleep for many years. Jesus de Frutos (b. 1925) of Segovia, Spain asserts that he has only dozed since 1954.

There are basically 2 types of sleep. There is the first, carlier portion, which is needed for unimpaired biological health and performance and is composed largely of slow wave sleep and may be called obligatory sleep. The second and later portion consists mostly of REM sleep and is called facultative sleep. The REM (Rapid Eye Movement) stage is required for proper psychological functioning and possibly has a role as a reprogramming mechanism. Dreaming also takes place in the REM stage of sleep and is characterized by a low voltage, and changes in the heart rate and respiration.

How many times have you been asleep, really enjoying your dream when suddenly the phone rings. It usually takes about 5 rings to figure out if it's real or just part of your dream, then after you've finally woken up, the phone stops. How annoying.

Judge Miller had concluded that Attis had no specific charge against the School Board, while Chief Justice Stratton says that since Attis has alleged that Ross had made some "anti-Jewish" remarks 12-13 years ago, when apparently his own children were not in the school system, and Attis perceives that Ross's presence in the system creates an anti-Jewish atmosphere, it is specific enough to constitute a complaint. He leaves it to the Human Rights Commission to decide whether the complaint is frivolous or not. Unfortunately the Commission has not proved so far that it is capable of making such judgements.

The Chief Justice Stratton says that "the word 'complaint' as used in s.17 of the Human Rights Act must be given an interpretation which will advance the broad purposes of the Act, i.e., the advancement of human rights and the elimination of discrimination." I agree. For this very reason the Attis complaint should be put aside, because it has the net effect of taking away the human rights of one person, namely, Malcolm Ross, who, under a gag order is not allowed to express his views in any form, he is not allowed to teach, and he lives under the constant fear of losing his job. While the courts, judges and the politicians play with words and the public money and resources, he is punished without any trial or conviction for any crime. How can he match the financial resources of an organization like Canadian Jewish Congress who can afford to launch legal battles interminably to achieve their goal of silencing Ross, which they failed to do through other means?

Then there is the classic dream where you feel like you're falling off a ladder and you wake up just before you hit the ground. I once heard if you did hit the ground, you died in your sleep . . . makes sense? ? ?

Ever had a dream where there was a murderer after you and you fall down as he chases you? The worse part is that no matter what you do, you can't move, you just can't get up and run away, you're totally paralyzed.

Enough of that. Now stand in the place where you live, now face north, think about direction and wonder if REM thought of their name while sleeping in class one day!

SOME BOOZE TALK AND SOCCER

The Brunswickan 5

If I was a bartender or a bar manager, I would find the whole legal scene with regards to the question of culpability in alcohol abuse cases rather daunting and somewhat unfair. I have had the apparently unique experience of being in a bar as a customer at closing time and being at the same time stone-cold sober. Everything moves slower then and emotions tend to shift from extreme to extreme - utter irritability to inexplicable elation without any orthodox rationale behind the shifts. But the most harrowing thing to watch is the "dialogue" between the inebriated and the stolid and stern bouncers who are trying to clear the bar of people who they are convinced are too drunk to deserve politeness. Then there are the dissatisfied customers who are trying to get that last one for the road. They are totally wasted but will not accept no for an answer. They have the money, after all. Legally, it is the bartender's responsibility to judge the state of the drinking and determine whether they are inebriated or not. If they are the bartender should not supply them with more liquor. The decision is never an easy one to make and drinkers tend to make it more difficult by the insistence that they can handle it.

Should suppliers of alcohol be held responsible for the carelessness of drinkers? Surely, the decision as to whether to drink or not is one made with a conscious awareness of the potential dangers involved. Drinkers know that they will have a hard time making it downstairs when they have had too many beers, so shouldn't they be held responsible for that action? But when does a drinker stop thinking about the consequences and at what point can they be expected to understand the complex equations of self-control and drinking amounts? I have seen too many young, inexperienced people jeopardize their health and safety by being reckless about how much they drink, and sometimes there is a vicious streak in me that is tempted to say that they deserve the "breaks" they get. That is quite unfair, however, especially since drinking is an accepted social past-time in this country. In fact, my first taste of culture shock came. when I heard a number of young male and female students bragging about how great a weekend they had had. From what I could observe, the extent of pleasure was gauged by how drunk they got and how much they vomited. "Barfing" is an important part of pleasure for many. One can't barf effectively without being totally "wasted". It's a cultural thing. So the laws, despite their seemingly unfair nature are a necessary feature of this drinking scene. Students should be encouraged that they have a right to sue if they are allowed to enter a drinking establishment when they are intoxicated; and being given too much to drink by bartenders . . . this, of course, is as long as some alcohol related problem occurs.

The growing awareness of the dangers involved in drinking in this province is good to note. To my mind, the more we know about and appreciate the shared community responsibility that the entire social behaviours of drinking demands, the better we are as a society.

I was privileged to see the Red Shirts (UNB's soccer team) beat PEI's team last Saturday afternoon just outside the Aitken Centre. This corresponds with a resolution made by myself to attend as many sporting events on this campus this year as my time will allow. There was a good turn-out but I found it hard to cope with the fact that the crowd was more taken up by the spectacle of its own presence than by the game. I mean when the UNB team was obviously pressuring for a goal during the second half, I was tempted to start a chant of "PRESSURE! PRESSURE! PRESSURE!" to spur the team on, but the crowd was singing some unrelated tune, oblivious to the intensity of the purposefulness of this talented team. Still the goal was a gem and it deserved the ovation received. The centre from the right wing, hard and low, and the sharp diving header from the goal mouth, in. Impeccable time! It was good football (I mean soccer). I left with a sense of campus pride which has eluded me for some time. Really, sports do that to you. Without that sense of school spirit, something's missing from one's experience at university.

While lesbians and gay men make up ten percent of the population, homosexual orientation affects a far larger proportion. By this I mean that there are a large group of people who, though straight, are the close friends or family of one of more gay men and lesbians. It is a very good bet that someone you arc close to is lesbian or gay you probably would not know it, though, unless that person told you.

By and large lesbians and gay men do not discover their sexual orientation in a blinding flash or by accident. Usually the process of self-discovery involves a long period of adjustment through many phases of denial and other negative emotional responses. This has both positive and negative aspects, though. On the one hand we often deal with our feelings internally, thus creating a great deal of stress. On the other hand, however, we are able to develop coping skills in order to help come to terms with our sexuality.

The people we tell, however, often have to deal with the issue of our sexuality immediately. They often have the issue thrust upon them without the time to develop any coping skills because they have not had to deal with the issue on an ongoing personal level. For the most part, though, they are distanced enough that they can deal with the subject. We often begin by telling people who we trust will deal with the issue in a mature and understanding fashion.

The parents of gay and lesbian children are an exception, however. We cannot choose our parents as we can our friends, not can we change the attitudes that they have towards our sexuality quickly. However, in the majority of cases, no matter how much we avoid the issue we

As I wrote last week this can be an agonizingly difficult process. For me it stemmed partly from the fear of rejection, but far more from the fear of disappointing my parents. My mother had often told me that my father was very proud of me, but he had never been able to tell me. I was very must afraid of how his fcclings towards me would change, especially knowing what I did of my father's feelings towards homosexuality.

Before I told my parents, when people would ask if they knew about me I would respond, "They know, they just don't know they know". My parents had had enough clues through the years to bring the possibility of my being gay to their minds, and I remember one occasion when my mother asked me in a roundabout sort of fashion if I was gay. At that time I was still unready to tell her, and I was made no more prepared by my mother's statement that this had been troubling my father. As I recall my answer was, "You don't have to worry". I said it with the idea in mind that it was not a subject to worry about, but I was fully aware of the rather different impression it created in my mother's mind.

My eventual revelations simply confirmed my parents' fcars. Other parents will deny or suppress the clues pointing to the conclusion that their child is gay while some parents have no idea that their daughter or son might bc gay and so the information comes as a complete shock to them. There are as many ways of dealing with the issue as there are parents of lesbian and gay children.

There are a wide variety of concerns which parents of gay and lesbian children have. These can range from the deep moral fcars of parents with strongly held religious beliefs about homosexuality, to practical concerns about employment. violence and discrimination. Sometime parents will mask a more fundamental discomfort under a mask of these practical concerns.

September 29,1989

It is important that parents become comfortable with the lifestyle of their children, rather than creating a mask of acceptance, and lesbian and gay children must play a major part in providing this support. At the same time parents of gay and lesbian children owe it to their children to try to understand.

TIME FOR CHANGE

by Jason Wheaton

On Sept. 26, in MacLaggen Hall, Mr. Stephen Lewis, Honorary Graduate of UNB and four year ambassador of Canada to the United Nations gave a speech on the condition of our world in the past and its present condition.

An amiable man, who received a warm welcome from over 100 people that were present, he opened his speech with a few jokes to lighten the mood. He then explained why our world was in turmoil during the years of 1983 to 1987.

He passionately stated that the UN had a sense of failure as the Superpowers Arms Race went out of control. To make things worse former American President Ronald Reagan was cutting funding to the UN. This left the UN with much anger towards the US

But from 1987 - 89 things changed. Lewis heaped praise on Gorbachev and George Bush. The world stepped forward towards peace and the US was taking new actions to support the UN.

But at the same time, the world economy fell into disrepair, such that now, there exists a chasm between the developed and developing world which is growing larger. The only people holding up their end in foreign aid are countries like Switzerland, Sweden, Holland. Canada and the US foreign aid is actually dropping. "It's a disgrace," claimed Lewis.

"We need these countries economically sound or we'll destroy our own planet." He continued that if we do not aid these countries they will continue using methods that are dangerous to our environment for survival.

Using a quote from Dr. Suzuki, Lewis reinforced this claim. "Without the international community coming it will be gone by the year standing ovation. 2050."

He concluded his lecture by describing how Canada is needed in worldly affairs. "We are the one country with peace bred into Canadians are respected us." worldwide, he argued, and our ambassadors are all well-linked with other countries. "If Canada would take a solid unmoving stand most countrics would follow," stated Lewis, "But, we are pressured by the US not to." He assaulted US policies for their greedy motives and disruption of international aid.

After a brief question period together to aid these countries, the lecture ended with everyone the world will hit a major on the edgy of their seats disaster. The world as we know clapping, ready to give Lewis a

Faith constitutes an understand the form of devotion important aspect of life in a or the cultural practices of others. faith is an important part of cultural pluralism and is a potential force of Canadian unity. However, issues of faith and culture can sometimes lead to problems among groups. How they deal with these problems and solutions to them are the focus of a national symposium on interfaith and multiculturalism that will be held from October 26-28, 1989 under the auspices of the Atlantic Human Rights Centre at St. Thomas University.

Dr. Abdul Lodhi, Director of the AHRC said the purpose of the symposium is to develop a Canadian Code of Etiquette for our multicultural and multifaith society. He points out the symposium will try to bridge the gap of understanding among different cultural and faith groups through workshops and lecture sessions over the two and a half day conference.

Dr. Lodhi concedes that contentious issues do arise priorities in the area of interfaith among groups practicing different faiths because they do not

Lodhi said the symposium will also provide a forum for discussion of interfaith issues. "Interfaith conversation such as this symposium is necessary to promote peace and social justice through understanding and mutual respect, which are the essential virtues in a multicultural society."

He points out that the presentation of ideas at the symposium in an atmosphere of scholarly discussion will increase our understanding of diverse beliefs and practices. He adds it will also help identify research awareness and cducation.

INJUSTICE AND DISORDER IN

By Deogratias Mugoa

South Africa's stance of compulsory racism and total denial of political participation or equality of economic opportunity to the vast majority of its people is a direct challenge both to the Judaeo-Christian religions and moral tradition and to the secular democratic traditions of Western Europe and North America.

Failure to face and act on that challenge over the past century, and especially over the last twenty years, has meant that the storms blow wilder and seas higher, most of all for the African people of Southern Africa and also all of us in the other African States as well as for you in the Western democracies.

By now the lesson of Namibia and South Africa should be clear. I believe that the notion that if one kills time and postpones decisions, something will turn up, is a disastrous idea. Killing time is killing human beings as illustrated by the Sharpeville and Soweto massacres, the murder of Steven Biko and the attacks on Mozambique, the killings in Windhock prison and a thousand barely remembered smaller incidents. Killing time is killing the chance for peaceful change. Killing time is killing, too, the interests of the Western democracics in preserving mutually advantageous economic relationships with Namibia and South Africa.

My appeal is not primarily to the Western conscience. I do put it to you (the West) that far from being the defenders of Western Christian civilization, the Southern African and South African regimes are it's mortal enemies and that by failing to condemn them and to act on that condemnation, the West is endangering its own democracy and moral tradition.

Collaboration with despotism and injustice abroad is not normally conducive to promoting democracy and justice at home. However, my main theme is that it is in the West's own selfinterest, its own political and economic self-interest, to cripple the economics of Southern Africa and her clients, the Namibia struggle. No other action today can protect the West's interests tomorrow as effectively as that.

There are two dominant perceptions of Southern Africa. The first is of a system of organized violence, exploitation and oppression in which local European tribes ally themselves with external firms, states and arms suppliers to sustain a political economy of theft, a politics of exclusion and a society of inhumanity. That is the view of those fighting against the Southern African regimes primarily their won subjects and secondarily other Africans, but, certainly, also including a number of the West's fellow citizens in the Western democracics.

The second view is of Southern Africa as a source of critical minerals, a market for exports, a home away from home for investments, a regional strategic bastion, an area ruled by brothers, erring brothers, yes, but still kith and kin. That is a Western European and North American perception. It is, I think and hope, a perception which is increasingly tinged with doubts and queries. Certainly, the revelation of the endless prevarications and tricks of that rebel, should be indicative of how much longer this perception can be seen to correspond to reality.

Let me venture what I believe is inevitable in respect to Southern Africa:-

(a) Namibia and South Africa will become independent and ruled by their majorities. The question is not whether but when and how.

(b) Liberation will involve violence - the violence of repression and the answering violence of revolution. The question is not how to avoid violence - violence is already there, in the inadequate wages and health facilities that kill our black African brothers and sisters, in the freedom fighters who strike ever deeper in Namibia today and South Africa tomorrow.

(c) There will be African rule. Rule by a small band of minority - tribes cannot continue much longer. The questions are: Who will be considered to be African? How easily can the tribes of European ancestry be accepted as Africans? And how, with what legacy of the earlier domination? (d) The successor states in Southern Africa will engage in international trade. The questions are: With whom will they trade and on what terms?

(e) Namibia and South Africa will have international friends, debts and links. So do all states. The questions are: With whom will the links be? Debts be? And who will be perceived as friends? This is in respect to states emerged from the liberation struggle, in which certain states supported the freedom fighters.

The present Western European and North American perception of the southern African Challenge has been characterized as "The West at Bay". What now exists in the West is a late, limited and unreal attempt to defend it's interests with clear-headed perception of what those interests are or how to defend them.

I recognize fully and acknowledge gladly, the importance of the deeply concerned journalists, musicians, academics and trade unionists who have seen and spoken of the challenge for many years despite ridicule, vituperation and indifference; of those associated with the Programme to Combat Racism; of the World Council of Churches; and of the handful of businessmen who have rejected doing business in Southern Africa because they see it as the "unacceptable face of capitalism". I perceive as my own interests as an African:

First, I believe no man is an island. The bell that tolled for Steven Biko tolled for me. Second, I believe that the price of solidarity in struggle is a high one for countries such as Tanzania, Zambia, Zimbabwe and Mozambique that have taken it seriously. Third, I believe in the peace of the living negotiated in conference rooms and ratified by popular consent and not in the peace of the dead fought in blood on the battlefields and scaled in silent graves. Killing people is not a sacrament.

South Africa's stance of compulsory racism and total denial of political participation or equality of economic opportunity to the vast majority of its people is a direct challenge both to the Judaeo-Christian religions and moral tradition and to the secular democratic traditions of Western Europe and North America.

A South Africa or a Namibia which emerges in twenty years from a holocaust of violence, ringed by seas of hatred and scarred by countless unmarked bu unforgotten graves, will be no friends to the West. Nor, as they gather up their harvest of burnt buildings and broken lives, will they be friends to a world that refused to help them shorten those terrible birth pangs.

It is still in the West's power to halt that cycle of the violence of the repressed, the hatred of the oppressor spawning the hatred of the oppressed. If the West could act, the cycle can and will be broken. "It can be done - play your part". But the West has very little time left. It is therefore imperative to take a genuine first step. Even the longest journey began with a first few steps. Does not

You're not

Je

Today, the choice is yours in the West. By tomorrow it will be too late; the West's choice of today will have determined its future role - or lack of role in Namibia and South Africa. The West, with its Judaeo-Christian tradition, surely cannot pretend not to understand the moral behaviors of life and the moral responsibility to act accordingly. To betray the African people in southern Africa can only mean laying on the West everlasting shame. It is your last chance in Africa.

Well they fought for our foodom so that you could label THEM Nazis, just because their concerned about where this country is headed. I think you owe the veterans of this province an apology! To continue with the French, after twenty years of enforced official bilingualism, we certainly aren't united. The party has no intention of outlawing the French language, like the French have done to the English language in Quebec.

Being educated, as I'm sure you are, you should realize that the ideologies of Joch Andrew are not necessarily those of the C.O.R. party. He has as much right to his point of view as you do Mr. Cardoso. I would like to say that none of the candidates for either the President or Leader stated that the majority of immigrants entering Canada were of French background. The immigration policy would require that people be willing to learn English as their official language, something that can unify the whole country.

You said we blame the French people for the woes of the uneducated and unemployed. C.O.R. doesn't blame the French, but rather the politicians who dictate the English speaking majority must learn French in order to get a job. A highly educated person will be unemployed in this province if he or she can't speak French. THAT'S NOT RIGHT!

There are alot of young people joining C.O.R. Mr. Cardoso, but of course there is a multitude of older members because they understand the situation all to well.

In closing, I would like to say that start, but we are still here and will continue to grow. So before you immediately type stereo us, talk to someone who knows something about the whole concept, All I want is a unified country and province. I think C.O.R. can achieve this.

VANDALISM RCMP MINTO DETACHMENT

This week crime stoppers makes an appeal to you, especially those of you from the Minto/Chipman area.

In the past few years, acts of vandalism (smashing police car windows, slashing tires, throwing molotov cocktails) have caused in excess of $10,000 in damages to RCMP vchicles and to other property at the Minto detachment of the RCMP, in Minto, N.B. This affects all of us and leaves a scar on a community that is certainly not needed.

These acts of vandalism are not committed by people who want to live in safe and respected communities, nor do we believe that they are committed by the most desperate of people. They are done by insecure and immature individuals that the community must identify and deal with accordingly thus preserving your security and making you community a safer and better place to live. It's time to do something about this!

Crime Stoppers will pay up to $2000 for information that leads to the arrest of the person(s) responsible for these acts of vandalism to RCMP and other property in Minto, N.B. If you have any information concerning acts of vandalism, call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS; that's 1-800-222-8477. Remember, we want your information, not your name. Should your tip lead to an arrest, crime stoppers guarantees a cash award. Call now!

RETROSPECTIVE ON IRELAND

Two decades after violence between Roman Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland boiled to the surface in August 1969, at the height of what's known there as the parade season, there is still no solution in sight for the Irish "troubles". The British troops, brought in to keep the rival factions apart long enough for the politicians to reach a peaceful accommodation, still patrol the streets of Londonderry and Belfast. The Irish difficulties will take centre stage at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton on Oct. 13 and 14 as scholars and other from as far away as Australia gather at Memorial Hall for the third annual conference of UNB's Centre for Conflict Studies. Entitled Northern Ireland: A Twenty Year Retrospective, the conference will seek to provide an historical perspective on the events in Northern Ireland over the last 20 years, to identify the key events and issues that have emerged, and to explain why the situation has evolved as it has. The conference's keynote address will be given by Conor Cruise O'Brien, one of the most prominent, outspoken and controversial observers of the Ulster scene. As David Charters, director of the Ceatre for Conflict Studies, explains, "Dr. O'Brien is in the unique position of being a southern Irishman who served in the Irish government, served as an Irish diplomat, but who from time to time is prepared to argue

Mighty Fields

The outlook wasn't brilliant for the Arstville nine that day The score stood fifteen-fifteen with but one more inning to play. There was a minor hope though when young Kevin took the bat, a hard liner he did contribute, but on the bench he sat.

"No Fear" the faithful cried, as trader Phil approached the plate A day of ones and tows for him, but no dingers on this date. He took a might swing and lifted the ball high, but when it landed in a glove, their hopes began to die.

With one out left to spend, steady Doug prepared to hit. The jockeys rode him hard, but he showed his sharpened wit; "Throw the ball with all your might" at the pitcher he jested. But a fly out he made - now the defence would be tested.

"We'll see them in the tenth inning with Mighty Fields on our mound with his knuckle and his sinker, they'll all drive it to the ground" And so the Arrsies took the field awaiting the great czar, for he always came to the mound, with an electric sports car.

Oh, if Fields could keep the science bats from ringing in the air Then Rico and Bob would chance to hit Mr. Spalding long and fair. Thus the task at hand was simple-three up and three down; So the Artsies could have shoeless Gil and Lori bat around.

Mighty Fields was ready - a warm up he did not need; "I'll catch them all swinging late when they realize my speed". Fields threw a ball and strike to batter number one, then got him on an infield fly, so he would'nt have to run.

"Just two more outs is all we need" cheered firstbaseman Ray, "You let us hit again and we'll be champions this day". Four balls to batter number two and a slugger of great might, swung the outfield round to left as the ball sailed into right.

In came Perry charging, all the runners feared his arm. The stop sign went up to third, so as not to sell the farm. The second out came quickly, with the runner froze at third. "Pitch the next one down and in" from Fields' catcher came the word.

There was an ease in Fields manner as he stepped into his place, There was pride in Fields bearing and a smile on Fields face. And when responding to the cheers, he lightly doffed his hat, he stared cold at the hitter, who tightly gripped the bat. EDITOR: JENNIFER DUNCAN DEADLINE: TUESDAY NOON PHONE: 453-4983

The pitch was delivered deftly with barely any spin, the batter watched it dance down and up, then out and in. A feeble swing at the master pitch, and the ball began to chop. It was well within the range of the lefthanded shortstop.

The beauty of this game however is "it ain't over til its over", thus the ball struck the umpire and bounded into center. There was no dispute - they were prepared for their fate, The once proud Artsies lowered their heads as the runner crossed the plate.

Oh somewhere in this favoured land the sun is shining bright, the band is playing somewhere and somewhere hearts are light. And somewhere folks are laughing and somewhere children shout. But there is no joy in Artsville - Mighty Fields passed out.

s the September sun slowly surmounts the surrounding silence over the soon to be cacophonous crowd of the communist and capalist citizens of Seoul, South Korea, the Olympic hopefuls prepare to greet each other in salute to their service, solitude and sacrifice to the ideal of being a rich amateur athlete.

The quiet surrounding the Olympic sites seems to me strange, empty, and foreboding, as if the games had already finished, and everyone had gone home. The crowds one would expect to see, even at this early hour, have failed to materialize. No officials can be seen. Even the security forces seem to be absent or maybe they're just really good at hiding.

I approach someone sitting in a lotus position next to a fire hydrant and a banner on which is written something] just can't understand.

... and from this plumbing nook of quiet repose imagine I am sighted from the road...

You'll never know the bottom line: that I, while closeted here, warmed by this long pink heater below the sill of my spacious cubicle am comforted inside from the outside by nature's movements through these osmotic walls: rain blown from quick-weather clouds and slick-winged grackles slowly rising in noiseless convoys from the grass straining effortlessly in the wind. I've driven past this building often trying to detect my secret window but barely necessary. all the drapes are like the mainstream (some are paper-thin at that). Drapes! A nice convenience but barely necessary. Any one of Professor This, Doctor That or Chairman So and So's private think bowls could be THE ONE; but up there on that wall of faceless facing bricks one of those windows belongs to me. IDENTITY IT IF YOU CAN! I nearly ran another student down peering through the pines as I drove along preoccupied and that would never do: How could I explain to campus police I was trying to identify my secret toilet?

"Go back to your classes. Don't give in to pressure from your fellow students. Beware of the consequences to you and your family."

That was the message that students at Peking University heard over loud speakers each day at the beginning of May. It was an ominous, if understated, warning of events to come that spring - a spring that would leave thousands of Chinese students and their pro-democratic supporters dead and bloodied in the streets of Beijing.

That stark threat from the loudspeakers was repeated regularly as students gathered for their daily pilgrimage to Tienamen Square, in the heart of China's capital. The messages had little effect. Fledgling protests marking the April 15 death of former Communist Party boss He Yoabang, purged from the party himself after allowing similar protest in 1987, soon grew into the country's largest protest movement since Mao's People's Revolution. By late May, more than 3,000 hunger-strikers and one million demonstrators had joined the protest in Beijing.

More were reported in Shanghai and Hangzhou province.

Originally, the students had demanded only dialogue with the Communist Party's Central Committee. Later, demands grew - freedom of the press, freedom of assembly, freedom of travel and freedom to choose their own jobs without direction from the party.

As rumors of a government crackdown persisted, nervous Western media provided hourly reports of the increasingly tense situation in the capital.

Zhao Ziyang 70-year-old moderate party leader who appears to have lost his title.

Unarmed units of the People's Liberation Army attempted to close off the avenues leading to the square, but were gently turned back by pro-democratic supporters bent on protecting the hunger-striking students.

Supporters greeted army trucks with cries, "The People's Police loves the people and the people love the People's Police."

"Since Mao's revolution, there was a tradition that the PLA was there to help the people. There was a strong belief that the army would never shoot on its own people," says Dr. Larry Shyu, a University of New Brunswick bistory, no fees or who was born and raised in China "Will

On June 4, seven weeks after the non-violent demonstrations began, they were brutally crushed. The power struggle between the de facto leader Deng Xiaoping, conservative Li Peng and reformer Zhao Ziyang was over and Deng wanted the demonstrations stopped. Two weeks earlier, he had been humiliated before the world during the Sino-Soviet summit when Mikhail Gorbachev was force to cancel some of his visit to avoid the protests in Tienamen Square.

Troops armed with AK-47's at the ready prepared themselves on the roof of Mao's mausoleum and tanks matter of factly crushed resisters as they rolled up Changan Avenue - Avenue of Eternal Peace.

As the world watched, Chinese troops opened fire on the unarmed protestors, killing as many as 3,600 according to the Red Cross. Later estimates placed the number of victims at 6,000. The televised pictures sent shock waves through every corner of the planet, including Fredericton where Chinese students studying at UNB sat and watched their countrymen slain in cold blood.

"I can't describe what I felt," says one UNB student who asked that his name not be disclosed (called Mr. P.). "It was against everything we believed in. It's something so bad you just can't find the words. I was in shock. At first we were sad, then we got mad. Later we just cried. Many of us have family there and we just can't speak out; but, in private we express our anger."

Almost immediately, the Chinese government began suppressing the truth. Chinese television carried no pictures of the massacre and insisted no blood was spilt in Tienamen Square. According to internal news reports, protesters were simply counter-revolutionaries and hooligans.

Foreign media were banned from broadcasting out of China. In an ironic twist of history, the foreign media who remained, risking their own lives to cover the story, became accomplices of the Central Committee. Pictures from CBS and CNN were used to round up student leaders.

Some of those found were executed; others were exiled to far-flung provinces or thrown into re-education programs.

"Once they killed us, what more could they do? We have seen re-education in the past - during Mao. We are familiar with that. We are not afraid of that," says Mr. P.

But equally as quickly, Chinese students abroad reacted with public anger and private action. Within days, students at universities across North America, including UNB, began to send information to China by way of long distance telephone lines, fax machines and computer mail.

"We immediately set up links to get information in, to counter what the government was saying," says Mr. P. "We couldn't let those people die for nothing."

But it soon became apparent that Chinese receiving the communications could be in danger. Many who accepted fax messages or computer mail in the first couple of weeks later refused as the government continued its crackdown.

"We suspected that these people were running the risk of being discovered so we slowed down the process. These people were risking their lives just by accepting the information we sent. We realized that the movement for democracy is over or has at least finished a certain phase in China."

According to Mr. P., Chinese students in Los Angeles and San Francisco are setting up permanent networks to get information safely into China. They are also establishing a Chinese radio station in San Francisco and a newspaper and two magazines in Los Angeles, to promote the drive for democracy.

"We've begun to organize on a world level outside of China," says Mr. P. "Those of us here have to continue... we're not in the same danger. And we watch the Communist newspaper in China. Already it has had articles saying that we are counter-revolutionaries. That means they are scared."

Soon after the massacre of Tienamen Square, Foreign Minister Joe Clark announced all Chinese students in Canada would have their visas extended indefinitely. Later, he said Canadian officials . would look favorably upon landed immigrant application made by Chinese students.

There was a fear that student who joined the protest in Canada would be punished when they returned to the People's Republic. In Fredericton, dozens of Chinese students braved television cameras and reporters' microphones at demonstrations and memorial services. "We absolutely had to express our outrage," says Mr. P.

And the Chinese government keeps a close watch on its students here. "They've been contacted and told the whole thing was misinterpreted by the West," says Dr. Shyu.

"And there's a distinction made between party members and non-members. Some get information the others don't. It's exactly how the government works. It's repressive. It keeps people nervous."

Indeed, one UNB source says that some Chinese students at Dalhousie University were keeping dossiers on the activities of protesting students in Canada.

Did that happen at UNB? "That's it," says Mr. P. "We don't know. Maybe. Maybe not... but I can't consider my own personal safety. There are those who died."

1. 28 A

UNB History Professor Dr. Larry Shyu

In August, a representative meeting of the Chinese embassy in Ottawa came to UNB and called a meeting of all Chinese students. About 40 of UNB's 70 Chinese student turned out.

"He came and told us the government's version. We didn't believe him but we didn't challenge him," says Mr. P. "Many of us knew him. He had no choice. He couldn't have answered out questions anyway."

According to Dr. Shyu, more than fifty of UNB's 70 Chinese students have applied for landed immigrant status. "I think virtually all will apply when they near the end of their education here," he says. "It's a very unsettling process for them. Landed immigrant status means they'll be in limbo for a year." But it goes beyond that, according to Mr. P. who has yet to decide whether he will stay. "The danger in going back is obvious. They won't come to the airport, but maybe later. You never know. However, we are the same people as those who died. They were our friends, classmates. They died. Maybe you can't live with yourself if you stay. It feels like betrayal. I think I'll stay until the situation changes."

That is the key for many Chinese students - the waiting game. Deng Xiaoping is over 80. His health is reportedly poor. Many students hope his death, the death of the leader who was once their hero and himself purged by Mao in the Cultural Revolution, will again open the door to a way for democracy.

"We have a long fight - a long struggle," says Mr. P.

Welcome to the world of the Pixies, one of the most multi-faceted bands I have ever heard in my entire life. With the release of their fourth masterpiece "Doolittle" (brought out concurrently with the second EP) we are showered with a very diverse array of fantastic tunes. If you are a regular reader, you will remember Steve speaking last week of certain music that sends darts into the back of your neck. Well, this album, like only about three others in a year, sends chills up my spine.

This four member Bostonian band have, throughout the years, proved to be quite ingenious with their song writing and this album is no exception. A well engineered mix delights your ears as you soak in these sound waves and each song presents you with a different meaning and vogue. If you are like me, you are a lover of all kinds of music (with some exceptions) and this album caters to us. The band's use of different styles is so "all encompassing" that it is hard to believe that such writing talent actual exists. The album has an explosive

I am told that the meaning of this piece relates to a Salvador Dali film who's name is hidden within the non-descript lyrics. This raw sound is carried on through to the next song, Tame, which also is the unique style of the Pixics.

Not until we reach songs like Wave of Mutilation, Monkey Gone to Heaven, No 13 Baby and Hey, do we see hints of Bahaus, Psychedelic Furs, Talking Heads and even the ripping rock and roll of Aerosmith (try to find where I came up with that!). Each and

Review by Luis Cardoso

Ziggy Marley has refused to fall into the trap so many other sons-of-famous-fathers have; that is, he has not attempted to distance himself from his father's art, either ideologically or artistically. In recent interviews Ziggy has maintained that it would be silly for him to reject the legacy of his father left behind. Ziggy strongly believes in his father's political and religious views, and has always adopted them as his own. As for the elder Marley's music, well, it is still without parallel in reggae music, so if Ziggy can make music that sounds like his father's, so much the better.

What emerges is music that is unpretentious; more importantly, Ziggy Marley has not contrived his won personality or style, separate and distinct from Bob Marley, a style that is clearly Ziggy Marley's own has developed naturally throughout his short carcer, and the result is Ziggy

Marley's latest release, "ONE BRIGHT DAY.'

On "ONE BRIGHT DAY" the Ethiopian group DALLOL, the studio band used on Ziggy's last "CONSCIOUS album, PARTY," again supply the reggae rhythms right and tight. They are joined throughout the album by Jamaican veteran and ex-Wailer Earl "Chinna" Smith on guitar. The production is again spearheaded by TALKING HEADS and TOM-TOM CLUB members Tina Weymouth and Chris Frantz, and the vocals are all Ziggy Marley and the MELODY MAKERS -- his brother Stephen, and his sisters Sharon and Ccdclla.

The album is difficult to compare to "CONSCIOUS PARTY." (Reviewers always attempt to compare new releases with the previous release by the same artist in order to measure the particular artist's growth.) Both albums are excellent, and rand as the best roots reggae being recorded presently,

One is not disappointed with THIRD WORLD's latest release simply because one no longer expects much from THIRD WORLD. Long a MOR reggae band, THIRD WORLD has always been to roots reggae. "SERIOUS BUSINESS" is no exception. Their biggest hits to date We've Found Love," the Gamble and Huff penned R&B hit, and "Try Jah Love," their own R&B reggae composition. "SERIOUS BUSINESS" will provide them with more such commercial success. Ironically, THIRD WORLD's individual members are some of reggae" best session men: Stephen "Cat" Coore is a foremost reggae guitar player, and Ibo Cooper and Geoffrey Chung are mainstays on many reggae albums.

"SERIOUS BUSINESS" opens with the "Forbidden Love," already released as a 12" single. "Forbidden Love" epitomizes the malaise that affects so much contemporary reggae music, most notably among the latest work by ASWAS, STEEL PULSE, and the WAILERS. "Forbidden Love" is embellished with a rap break compliments of DADDY-O. With so much D.J. talent in Jamaica, one wonders why the band had to go to New York to the D.J. derived rap community to fill out this LP.

"Same Old Song" (the Gamble and Huff composition the was a smash hit for the FOUR TOPS) follows, and it is an interesting mix of reggae and R&B; however, as with so much of THIRD WORLD's "Reggae Ambassador" follows, and it is the album's best track. It is roots reggae with a Music," (the pun being on "herb and music"). Again a very rootsy number, "Urb-an Music" features a Wailer-style wah rhythm guitar that propels the simple yet infectious bass line.

"ONE BRIGHT DAY," as did "CONSCIOUS PARTY," will score big with both the reggae and non-reggae crowd. It manages to remain very roots reggae while incorporating elements from African polyrhythms and funk. The outside elements, however, "unlike so much of the reggae music being recorded today, play a very secondary role to the roots reggae rhythm: they serve Rocker Mitchell hides his balding scalp well, let that bother you, he gives a whakid show! reggae, and never strays. "Love Will Always Be There" is a light reggae number that ranks with the commercial reggae being released by ASWAD, that is, it is a watered-down brand of reggae sure to succeed commercially. "Serious Business" is an improvement from the tracks that precede it. Like "Reggae Ambassador," it is a rootsy reggae track made in the THIRD WORLD mold. The album closes with "Never Say Never," "We The People," and "Theme From the Underdog." All three qualify as filler material.

The dub version of the same song, "Dub Ambassador", is next on the LP./ One would like to see more of this stuff from THIRD WORLD, whom despite their string c disappointed albums, ' Jong the elders of reggae music as a result of their classic reggae session work on both their own and others' reggae albums, and their exciting live reggae show.

"Kcep Your Head To the Shy" is pure MOR funk soul, (yes, that is a negative connotation) complete with a female cosinger. "Take This Song," although more of the same, manages to work, I don't know how. As a reggae purist I "SERIOUS BUSINESS" will be a successful album on both white and black radio commercial charts. It does, however, have its moments of classic THIRD WORLD reggae. Reggae fans are still waiting for another "96 Degrees in the Shade" or "Jah Glory," the classic early songs that the band has never lived up to.

Breathless, this week's film society offering, has been hailed as one of the most important French new wave films to reach this continent. When the film first emerged, in 1959, it established some new rules on movie-making. The film is shot, cut and edited in a fashion which juxtaposes the stylistic camera-work of earlier cinematic ventures over a more progressively fast-paced series of dissolve-less cuts. The director, Jean-Luc Godard, catches his audience off-guard time and time again as the comforting deja-vu of one scene is abruptly interrupted by a shift to

There is something very dreamlike about them despite all the artist's talk about careful study of real objects. The moment you walk in the door of the gallery and behold the series in their garden setting is almost magical. The show runs until October 22. the Art Centre is on the main floor of Memorial Hall.

Kashetshy's search for the emblematic is solved in various clever ways. In "The Fifth Day" the viewer hovers godlike above an array of birds in flight, and directly below them swims an array of fishes over a jewel-like scabed. The composition, in its compression, alignment and technical handling, suggests the birds and fishes are sharing the same element, which brings to mind the theory that all life originated in the sea. Does Kashetshy think that the ages of evolution and the days of the Bible are compatible? It is an arresting image, and again the sketchbook reveals details of the another.

Much the same effect is achieved by the plot of Breathless. Rather than presenting us with a dark underworld of evil killers fearfully forestalling their comeuppance, Godard presents us with a disturbingly bright setting and a disturbingly carefree killer (Belmondo). While it is easy to loathe a vicious killer, it is difficult to loathe Godard's hood, of only because he never seems to be a hardened criminal. He seems bored, directionless, and unmotivated (like so many people you meet), but he is not the sociopath we see daily on television. And oddly enough, when it comes right down to hate, the person we are likely to hate is not the killer, but the girlfriend (Seberg) who turns him in.

Breathless is a rather frighteningly modern scenario in which the audience's compassion is drawn to a man who breaks the law rather than to a woman who obeys it. It is a gangster movie in which the gangster cares little for running away and the moll thinks dead criminal, but unfamiliar enough to make the criminal's death somewhat disturbing. It is, in short, a classic of the French Cinema. Breathless (In French, with subtitles): Friday and Saturday, 8:00 pm., Tilley Hall, Rm. 102.

read the book and live every experience and emotion as if you yourself were Louis. She beautifully blends the observed actions with thoughts. Feelings, and the philosophical questions of good and evil and sensitivity and cruelty of one being to another.

Rice's characters are stupendous. Lestat is an evil, cold-hearted vampire who delights in killing and using people (cspecially Louis) for money. He is the dark shadow clouding the back of your mind throughout the reading of the novel.

Then there is the strange and unnatural character of Claudia the child vampire seemingly innocent and harmless, she is anything but. She is full of deep dark yearnings of a vampire and she is destroyed by her worst enemy, herself.

Louis is my favorite and the strongest character of the novel. In him the reader sees a deep sensitivity, passion, and love which I can honestly say, I have not seen in any human who I have ever met. Louis's character is the deepest and most philosophical. He is accused of thinking and feeling too much because Rice's vampires are insensitive creatures who care not of the humans they kill. And Armand points out his problem(?) is that he dies every time he kills.

Character development of all three major characters is superb. Lestat's weak and "human" side is portrayed at the conclusion. Claudia's true total insensitivity towards Louis is revealed and painfully accepted by him. and Louis realizes he will be forever haunted by the question of why he must be forever damned to be a vampire. And also, he will never loose his sensitivity or have a companion who truly employed by the mental health care system. Group therapy scems to be nothing more than an opportunity for the ward members to launch verbal attacks upon one another. Rules echo of constraint rather than protection, not a form of treatment at all,

While the film is generally a grim depiction of institutionalized mental health care, Mac's madcap forms of social activity do add a truly funny, optimistic thread to the movie. He provides his peers with means and infects them with energy which helps them to creep out of their solitude. A fine scene aboard a hijacked fishing boat ends with the bagging of a fish of which any experienced angler would be proud. This lends support to Mac's conviction that the men could return to "normal": society. When conviction by and inquisitive dock worker, Mac introduces the escaped inmates as doctors from the institution. Each man accepts his new title with wistful dignity. Away from the ward and approached by an outsider, they behave as perfectly sane men . . . until the mooring lines are released and they return solely to their own company.

Certainly, the most positive, and arguably the most important dimension of the film is the exploration of the relationship between Mac and Chief, the huge Indian man driven to silence and institutionalization by a society at odds with his own understanding of freedom. "My papa was real big.", he states. "He did like he pleased. That's why everybody worked on him.". Where it is Mac's persistence that helps Chief to freedom, it is Chief who directly frees Mac after frustration pushes McMurphy to violence and the doctors to employ their most drastic treatment well-balanced ending to a very strong film: as we watch one man run away free, it is impossible to forget the inmates who remain.

Interview With the Vampire is the first in a chronicles of three vampire books written by Anne Rice and her most loved. The novel is written in the point of view of the main character, Louis, telling th story of his life to a twentieth century youth., Rice reminds us of this of her. frequent breaks from the story when she shows an exchange of words, of facial expressions.

The plot is basically that of how Louis becomes a vampire, and learns how to adopt to life as a vampire. He faces many unanswered questions to which Lestat, his creator, cannot or will not answer. His hatred for Lestat grows but must stay with him because he is his only companion-the only vampire he knows. He and Lestat create claudia- the child vampire who serves the role of Louis' daughter and lover. A series of events heads the two away from Lestat and overseas in search of the great vampires of castern Europe in kopes they will answer their many unan incidents they finally discover a coven of vampires in Paris. It is here the climax of the novel is reached. this coven of vampires learns of Claudia's attempt to murder Lestat which has discovered to be unsuccessful and for revenge. . . She is killed.

After several disappointing

Louis is miserable and tearfully flees Paris with a new found vampire friend, Armond, but not after burning down the vampires' dwelling place. conclusion, Louis is alone for he can with no one share his feelings and thoughts because no one understands him, and is distant from all. . . even those such as Claudia who were suppose to be closest to him.

Weak points of the novel were few. In fact, I sit here and can only struggle with what on earth I found negative with this book. The only things I didn't like were that I wish Rice had not presented the vampires of Eastern Europe as mindless and gnarled beasts because that destroyed the romantic image of the good looking suave Dracula type. I also found the few descriptions of the kill caused my stomach to chortle and groan and please, don't ever read this book while going through a soul searching of depressed phase. It can only depress and distort your realities.

Last weckend the UNB Red Shirts Varsity Soccer Team played before a boisterous Varsity-Mania crowd at Chapman Field. The result was a 1-0 victory over the University of Prince Edward Island Panthers in a game dominated by the Red Shirts. This victory pushed the Red Shirts record to a perfect three wins against zero losses. The Shirts dominated the first half of the game but found themselves frustrated by UPEI's five halfbacks who were plugging the middle. As a result the score at half-time was 0-0.

During the half Coach Gary Brown asked his team to concentrate on the far post, sending two players over to that side. In the second half the scoring opportunities opened up for the Red Shirts, culminating in a score for Alex Scholten in the 71st minute (26th minute of second half). The goal came as a result of a short throw in from near the corner followed by a crossing pass from Jamie Pollock setting up Alex Scholten for an easy header. Pollock, who was named CIAU Athlete-of-the-week for his efforts two weckends ago, has not managed a goal yet this season despite his excellent offensive performance. However, shortly after Scholicn's goal Pollock had a clear shot at the net but the UPEI keeper came up with a big stop.

UNB's keeper, Geoff Harvey, came up with his third consecutive shutout. The Red Shirts have not allowed a goal yet this young season, although they have yet to meet the top teams. Coach Brown is concentrating more on the defensive players this year than last and it scems to be showing dividends.

Earlier this weck the Red Shirts took on UdcM at Chapman Field. Unfortunately, the results of this game did not get in by deadline. This weekend the Shirts take on the division leading Mt. GAY BASHING

Dear Editor.

I would like to address the problem of gay-lashing but I would like to generalize first about the problem behind gaylashing, which is also the cause of many more problems in our society today. The cause is immorality and lack of love. To clarify, love is not sex and has nothing to do with sex. Sex has its place, but love exists without sex. If you ask someone what love is, almost everyone will respond saying it is an emotion. Love is an attitude and and behaviour. Love thy neighbour. Love a starving child in a third world country. Love your parents. Love the elderly person or the handicapped who need you help.

Gay-bashing, as with anybody-lashing, shows a lack of morals and a lack of love. Regarding sex (masturbation, homosexual and heterosexual acts), first of all, think of safety. Would someone who loves you tell you it is expedient to do something which hurts you or could hurt you, emotionally, physically etc? What about STD's and unwanted preganancies? Approximately one million Canadians have been .nurdered (aborted); it is a painful, difficult decision, but wouldn't someone who truly loves you not take the chance of hurting you just for an instant of pleasure? Fornication is a sin, not for our own good nor to protect us. Homosexuality is a sin (Romans, Ch.1 vs. 25-27) not to protect us from Aids, etc.

Bashing people does no good. A loving, caring friend who wants to help his neighbour, who loves his neighbour can. Alcohol, fornication, drugs do hurt you. Someone who truly loves you wouldn't do that to you, would FORBID it, wouldn't they?

RESIDENCE REP

An Open Letter to All Residence Residents:

My name is Greg Lutes, and, for better of for worse, I have been appointed to the position of Residence Representative. Now, what this means is that I sit in at Student Union meeting, as a full voting member, and represent your interests. Many of you are probably now wondering, "What the hell does Greg Lutes know about my interest?" which brings me to the point of this letter. I don't know what all of your interest are, but I would like to find out. Let's face it, after living in Aitken House for four years, I don't know what concerns Neill, Tibbets, McLcod, or any other house have. I have heard, in the past, such queries as "Why can't residents of Lady Dunn and Tibbits have their own front door keys/" And of course the usual slew of Bar Services complaints. But there are new issues, too. For example, we seem to be paying more and more for less and less. Two years ago we lost our linen service, this year it was free luxo's and next year . . . who knows? These are just a few issues that always scem to be talked about but never dealt with.

I believe that is should be the responsibility of the Residence Rep. to collect these complaints, and to take them up with the proper authorities, whether that be the Student Union, the Dean of Residence, the Board of Dons, the Board of Proctors, the Residence Representatives Board, or whoever. And that is what I am offering to do. So, get in touch with me. Either call 453-4903 or write Box 53, Aitken or drop by (Room 329, Aitken). Or just stop me if you see me on campus.

Sincerely,

Greg Lutes.

Dcar Sir,

I would like to provide a response to Mr. Cardoso's attack upon the C.O.R. party that was printed in the Brunswickan a few weeks ago. I first have to say that I respect your right to voice your own opinion. That's what this country is all about. But as of late this great country of ours has drifted into a state of constitutional dictatorship. Our elected representatives no longer consistingly and actively represent the will of the electorate. The C.O.R. party wishes to change that.

played six. The team is very healthy as only two of the fourteen girls have injuries. Jill Jackson is suffering from a bad ankle, and Kim O'Hara has a leg problem. These injuries

Even though the girls played tough defensively, they just didn't respond offensively. The team has only been together for two weeks, and they are still adjusting to each other's style of play. According to Coach Slipp, "The girls don't know what each other is going to do." Joyce is still juggling players into different positions to see where the girls are the most effective.

On Sunday, the team almost beat SMU. They had a chance for 2 goals, but couldn't capitalize on the opportunities. Coach Slipp wasn't totally pleased with Sunday's game. The girls weren't playing to their potential. St. Mary's has a good defensive team, but UNB matched them step by step.

Currently, the UNB Red Sticks are ranked second in the AUAA's behind SMU. UNB has only played three games this scason to date, whereas SMU has definitely naven t slowed the two girls down.

Wednesday, September 27, the UNB Rcd Sticks traveled to UPEI to take on the Lady Panthers. The Panthers are playing with much the same girls this year but they have a new coach. This UPEI team is quick and the Red Sticks have some trouble with them.

This weckend the Red Sticks host a double header against St. Francis Xavier. They play Saturday and Sunday at 2 PM at Chapman Field. On of the X-Ettes strengths is their goaltender, who has also had experience as a soccer netminder. With Sheila Bell in net for UNB, these games should be very interesting.

On a different note, Joyce Slipp is looking for some guys to come out and practise against her team. This will begin at the October 4 practice. This will be for Wednesday night practices only. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

By the time you read this the Toronto Blue Jays will have three games left in their season. That's assuming that you are reading this during your Friday classes like everyone else. At this point the Jays are one game ahead of the Baltimore Orioles, and thus the season will hinge upon the final three game series against Baltimore.

As we go into this weckend you can see hordes of people moving towards the edge of the bandwagon so that they can beat the rush. jumping off; and everyone of them is carrying a very large, rubber CHOKE stamp.

I don't see that the Blue Jays will have choked if they don't win the division. The Jays had a horrible start under the late, unlamented Jimy Williams, but since then have posted the best record in baseball under Manager Cito Gaston.

The Jays chased the Orioles for most of the season and finally did catch and pass them. However, the Orioles never did fall more than two games off the pace and thus the Jays have not had the opportunity to blow a big lead, as did the Orioles. People who accuse Toronto of choking should look to the fact that until last weekend the Jays did not lose on a day that the Orioles won for all of this month.

Baseball fans in this area must be forgiven however, as the three cams predominantly follwed in Atlantic Canada (Expos, Blue Jays, and Red Sox) have all demonstrated a penchant for breaking the hearts of their fans. In the fiftcen years I've been a serious fan of the games, these teams have broken my heart eight times: the Red Sox in '75, '78, and '86; the Expos in '79, '80, and '81; and the Blue Jays in '85, and '87. Baseball fans in this area have had more than their fair share of abuse.

Regardless of who wins, either Cito Gaston or Frank Robinson will become the first black manager in post season play at the major league level. This is a shame. It is far more important that this will be Cito Gaston's or Frank Robinson's first trip to post season play as a manager than the fact that they happen to be black. Having a black manager in post season play won't become truly important until nobody notices.

New Coach for UNB Reds

Mark Thibault has been appointed to the position of head coach for the UNB Lady Reds Volleyball team, athletic director Jim Born announced today.

Mr. Thibault is an Oromocto, NB native with seven years of vollcyball coaching experience, who has attained the NCCP level II Volleyball coaching cirtificate.

His first two years of coaching were at the junior high level which were then followed by five years of coaching the Fredericton High School boy's team from 1984 to the present.

His other coaching experiences include being the assistant coach to the Canada Game's Men's team, coach of St. Thomas University Senior Women's tcam, coach of various midget and juvenile boy's teams from Fredericton, and a coach at several UNB Volleyball Camps. As well Mr. Thibault has been actively involved with Volleyball New Brunswick's Athlete Development Program.

It is with great pleasure that the staff of the Athletics Department welcome the arrival of such a qualified individual as Mr. Thibault to the coaching staff.

The UNB Women's Ice Hockey Club will be holding its first meeting of the year in Room 203 of the SUB at 7pm Thursday Oct. 5th. Old and new members should attend. If you wish more information please call Mike Power at 455-7022 or 453-4985.

Varsity Mania

Saturday was yet another victory for the Red Shirts and Varsity-Mania. The Red Shirts beat the UPEI Panthers by a score of 1 - 0. This win was witnessed by an exuberant crowd of over 1250. A record attendance for Chapman Field!

House of the day goes to the Knights from Neill who showed up in their vibrant yellow and green to topple the eleven time winners, Aitken House. Congratulations guys, you did great! Can't wait till next time!

Another surprise was the fine showing from the Ladics of Tibbits Hall. The girls showed tons of UNB spirit as they painted their hair, faces and any other visible body parts! It has taken these girls a while to come-out of their shell but now that they have, it's fantastic! The Red Tide introduced their new school cheer called, what -else, the "Red Tide." This was received with great enthusiasm.

Women's * Soccer

The UNB Women's Soccer Club (the Ycowomen) tied and lost in a pair of exhibition games in Antigonish last weekend. UNB tied the St, FX X-ettes 3-3 in the initial game Nancy Washburn, George Anne Langley and Kate Black scored for the Yeowomen. Injuries from the first match hurt the team and UNB had to play a woman short against Mount Allison. UNB went down to defeat to Mt. A. 3-1. Kate Black scored the lone goal for the Yeowomen.

C. Fury

If you were wondering what that person beside you was singing in class, it was probably the "Red Tide." Awcsome was used to describe these guys as they will play or do anything requested.

Another congratulations to the five "Fans of the Game." This award, sponsored by Moosehead, goes out to the five most outrageous UNB'ers thet day. They received a limited edition "Fan of the Game" T-shirt donated by Coastal Graphics. Hcy, B.M., don't you think it's time that you took yours off? 1 This week, Varsity-Mania hits the road with the Red Shirts. to take on Mount A. I'm sure that all of those UNB'ers who are attending this Varsity-Mania Voyage will have a terrific time. Mount A isn't going to know what hit them!

STUDENT UNION PAGE Student Union Survey Underway

the student population at UNB, the Student Union is presently developing an opinion/attitude survey that will be administered to a student sample later this term.

,1989

er:

dä

The opinion/attitude survey will have as its central focus, the wants and needs of the UNB students. The study will primarily asses students' opinions of the services provided by the Student Union (ie. campus

In an attempt to better serve entertainment, clubs, societies, alcohol awareness, etc). Based on the results of the survey, the Student Union will attempt to modify its present programs to better satisfy the wants and needs of the students.

The survey is being designed, implemented and analyzed by a group of five students in BA 3319, a marketing research course offered by the business faculty. Two of the group members are on student council and the other three are students-at-large.

This is the first time that the Student Union has ever made a conscious effort to ask the students how they would like to see their $96 fee used. It is the hope of the entire student union that the opinion/attitude survey will result in positive changes for the students.

Get Involved With The Student Union

This is your chance! Students have a voice in deciding issues that affect them. instead of being one of those people who sit back and complain, why not express your opinions in an atmos-phere that can get something accomplished? There are a great number of ways in which you can get involved.

Committees affecting all aspects of student life are being formed by the Student Union at this time of year. Your involvement would mean not only personal satisfaction at being able to contribute in a positive way, but new knowledge, new friends and probably a lot of fun.

The following are brief descriptions of committees that need students-at-large. Contact the Student Union office in the SUB or call then at 453-4955 to express your interest in any of them or to get more information. If there are any issues that you are concerned about but don't know what committee they fall under, just contact the office of ask any student union councillor.

Campus media: CHSR and Bruns Publishing are in need of students for their boards of directors. Campus media affects all students, so these are going to be exciting committees.

If you want to contribute your wealth of experience to the UNB Foundation for students, the SUB Board of Directors or the student disciplinary committee, don't hesitate. More information on these committees is available in the Student Union Office.

You can become involved in the Student Union directly, too. There are two very important positions on council that are Notice Board

1. The Student Union is presently seeking applicants . for the position of Recording Secretary. Any student interested in recording the Student Council minutes on Wednesday evenings, while earning some spending money, please apply to Luigi Rocca in the Student Union Office, R. 126 of the SUB.

2. Any student not wishing to have their phone number published in the Student Directory, please inform Gary Clarke, at the Student Union Office, Rm. 126 of the SUB by Oct. 2, 1989.

3. The Biology Society is holding a Wine and Cheese at the University Club on Wednesday Oct. 4. Come meet your profs!

4. The Biology Society is holding a Whale Watch." Where: St. Andrews. When: Oct. 14-15. Cost: $40.00 which includes transportation, accomodations, meals, and a 4 hr boat ride. Everyone welcome. For more information, stop by or call Kevin 357-8863 or Anglea 453-4555 (rm.216).

5. The Student Union is presently seeking studentsat-large to sit on the following committees: CHSR Board of Directors, UNB Foundation for Students; the Library Users Committee; Academic Affairs; Activities and Promotion Constitution; External Affairs; Academic-Planning; Academic Support; Admissions.

6. The UNB Student Union is awarding two scholarships in the value of $500.00 each to students who have demonstrated an outstanding contribution to campus life and the community while maintaining good academic performance. Interested students are encouraged to apply with a resume to the Student Union Office, Rm. 126, Student Union Building by 4.30 PM, Friday, Oct. 6, 1989.

for reform to academic policies and procedures will usually be referred to this committee.

The Activities and Promotions Committee is an action committee which will work on organizing Campus Entertainment events. Occasionally, it will make recommendations to council regarding entertainment policy, etc.

The Awards Committee is a policy committee which will make recommendations for the creation of Student Union maximum honourarium for each position and making recommendations for award of honouraria.

The Social Issues Committee makes recommendations to Council with regard to policies and programmes on issues such as substance abuse, sexual harassment, aggression, etc.

If you've never been involved in student issues before, it's time to start! All that's required is interest in the positions- no experience necessary.

Toshiba Technology Helps You Make The Grade

As a busy academic in the thick of a demanding curriculum, you need quality, versatile computer products that deliver power and performance-from the library to the classroom to the cafeteria.

With the lightweight, powerful Toshiba T1000 Portable Computer, you can use advanced software application programs. A built-in battery provides you with cordless power. And the T1000 fits easily into a Knapsack-just like the FREE Knapsack available with this special offer-so you can take the T1000 wherever you want!

Combine the T1000 with the versatility of a Toshiba P321SL Dot Matrix Printer. It can deliver either exquisite letter-quality at 72 CPS or high-speed drafts at 216 CPS. Even homework becomes a pleasure-especially when you're getting 24-pin quality at a 9-pin printer price!

OR, team up the T1000 with a worthy travelling companion-the Toshiba P301 perfect Portable Printer. At just 4.2 lbs, it's truly portable, and can run on battery power...so you can turn out letter-quality documents anywhere, anytime. Just slip this printer and the T1000 computer into your FREE Knapsack, and you've got the tools you need to go to the head of the class!

From Toshiba... Savings you can Pick up and Carry away!
