Local Hockeyists Play Campbellton

The Ladies' Team and Boys' Team Played Fast Games Friday Night.

On Friday last the local hockey team, accompanied by the ladies team and the Newcastle band journeyed to Campbellton, where a double header game was played with the North Shore team, the ladies opening up the night's sport, followed by the local team against the Campbellton champions.

Besides the teams and musicians, a score of enthusiasts accompanied them, and a most enjoyable trip was made, everyone speaking in the highest terms of the hospitality accorded them by the people of Campbellton. Immediately after their arrival, in fact, the girls were only on the ice about five minutes when Referee Fraser blew the whistle, and the ovation that greeted the contesting ladies teams by the nine hundred spectators, as they drew up for instructions fairly shook the rafters of that immense building.

The manner in which these girls handled their sticks, and their bumps and thumps they got and took in real sport fabrica was such as made the male teams look agast. Considering the small amount of practice the home ladies team has had, they showed up splendidly against their more experienced sister players, and even though the score stood five to three against them at three fifteen minute periods, they have every reason to be proud of the showing they made by their skill in stick-handling.

The game was not by any means free from rough playing, although we are pleased to state that the Campbellton ladies also led in that. They however, met good matches in Newcastle's sturdy little team, who showed them that they would not stand too much tramping on.

We have not the Campbellton line up before us, but we have been informed that Miss Keane was an exceedingly clever player and fast skater. The following was Newcastle's line up:

- Jean Robinson, goal.
 - Mrs. W. Ferguson, point.
 - Cannie Armstrong, cover point.
 - Laura Williston, rover.
 - Hedge Morris, centre.
 - Nan Craighan, right wing.
 - Pinkie Ingram, left wing.
- While much praise was given to Campbellton's star player, the home team did not return without a few words of comment in their favor, for Miss Williston was looked upon as a fair champion of Miss Keane.
- After this exciting game, the spectators were treated to another between the Newcastle regular team and Campbellton's fast male team. While our boys had no thought of defeating the Campbellton boys, they played a good game and took defeat manly. The score stood 9 to 3 in Campbellton's favor. Both teams that went from here were loyally treated and given the time of their lives. After the games a dance was held in the hall, the music furnished by the Geikie-Cassidy orchestra, and a most enjoyable time was spent.

Diabolical Scheme To Kill and Destroy

Public Institutions of Every Description Threatened by Tools of Kaiser.

Ottawa, March 5.—Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith, Toronto, Inspector of Prisons and Charities for the Province, has sent out the following warning to all institutions under his control: "I am instructed to advise you that notification has been received from high authorities that agents have been instructed to call on engineers and plumbers at different institutions and factories throughout the Dominion of Canada, asking the institution or firm to try a lubricant, of which they will leave a sample in a box. It is said that this box when opened will explode with great force, and do damage to persons and buildings, as instead of a lubricant it contains a very high and powerful explosive. "You will inform your officers, engineers and staff of this fact, and if such agent should call at your institution, offering such sample you will endeavor to have him detained and at once notify the police department and this office by telegraph or telephone."

The Place of the Church in the Community

An Able Paper by Rev. M. S. Richardson, Followed by Warm Discussion.

In the Newcastle Men's Union meeting Monday night the principal speaker was Rev. M. S. Richardson, who gave a most excellent paper on The Place of the Church in the Community. Mr. Richardson spoke in part as follows:

The place of the church needs to be emphasized today. The disinterested and suspicious ask "to what purpose does the church exist?" They regard the church much as men usually regard an undertaking establishment, a something handy in case of necessity but to be avoided as long as possible.

There are others somewhat friendly but who do not esteem the church enough to find membership there. If they are right in their attitude then God is wrong and Jesus Christ made a mistake and good people are wasting their energies. If the church can be shown to be indispensable to the community and nation, then who has a right to neglect her? Why should anyone shirk the responsibilities that she places upon mankind? We want such people to think and to see that they are leaving out of their calculations, the plan of God for a lost world.

Again, there are many Christians who have a small conception of the mission of the Church and are doing little or nothing in the way of church work. Daniel Webster's father once left home, leaving Daniel and his brother Zeke to do some very necessary work. Upon returning home and finding the task not accomplished, he asked Zeke what he had been doing. He replied nothing. The father then asked Daniel what he had been doing and he replied, helping Zeke. We have too many church members "helping Zeke," and that is why we have so many unsolved problems and existing wrongs in the community and nation.

As a reply to those who are indifferent and belittle the church, I wish first to speak of her value to the community. These values are so many and great that it is even impossible to outline them or describe them. The influences are so subtle, so widespread, and so powerful that no human mind can measure or value them. Who can measure the joy, inspiration, hope, comfort, life, uplift, love and consolation that the church gives through Christ her Head and Founder? Take these away and we live in a howling wilderness or as Carlyle has said, "a vast Golgotha or mill of death."

Let us begin with the very lowest valuation, the FINANCIAL VALUE OF THE CHURCH. Real estate agents in advertising land speak of the churches in the town. No one wants to live where there are no churches. No churches means no morality, Godlessness and all evils. The Churches are a civic asset and their support brings as direct returns as other civic expenditures.

Social value—The church is the best, the safest social centre of the community. When our young people leave us and go to strange towns or cities we want them to get acquainted with church people. There are many other social centres in the community which stimulate vanity, extravagance, frivolity and viciousness. The social life of the church is neglected too much and as a consequence our young people drift to these other centres. Many of us owe the best social privileges we have ever had to the church. Many of us could obtain very little social recognition if we had to dance for it or become expert in bridge whist and parlour gambler.

Church attendance is a means of social culture. It is no small thing for a man who has been all the week in the grime and dust of the factory, to make himself clean and put on his best clothes and meet in the house of God one or two hundred others who have done the same thing. It has a civilizing, humanizing, refining effect. To lounge around the house all day Sunday in workday clothes a brutalizing and fatal to the highest faculties of the soul.

EDUCATIONAL VALUE — The church is the mightiest educational value in the community. The pulpit is like staunchest friend of both general and higher education. Furthermore the themes discussed there pertain to the highest education, and are the greatest that can engage the attention of the human mind. Gospel truth, the doctrine of sin and redemption, the Bible system of morals, the true principles of life, history, biography and themes that grow out of Bible subjects are there dwelt upon. Without the interpretation of God's Word, all life's happenings and earth's history past and present and future become a chaos and mockery.

"Earth is blackness to the core And dust and ashes all that is." MORAL VALUE—Daniel Webster said that "free institutions could not long survive the loss of the American Sunday and the neglect of moral instruction in the church once every week."

Goldwin Smith said that "when religion and worship so morality will soon follow."

John Ruskin said that "the issues of life and death for modern society are in the pulpit."

Have you ever tried to picture our land without churches. Every pulpit closed, no inviting bell calling the people together to seek God in the midst of pain and strife, trial and sorrow and death, no voice summoning the people to kneel before the Unseen. We shudder to think of the result in our land. One has said, "I have seen more than one New England village go back to Paganism because a little church no longer maintained religious worship. The obligation to support the church rests equally upon all. How dare one man shirk his responsibility? A man is doing the worst thing for himself, his children and the community when he neglects the house of God and the service, worship and instruction it gives."

SPRITUAL VALUE—"Man is a religious animal," and his abilities for communion with invisible powers. God is a Spirit and man is a spiritual being created in the image of God. He is not all body and being akin to God in nature, can commune with Him, wants to commune with Him. Man cannot be satisfied with bread alone but must hear the words that proceed out of the mouth of God. And the church dispenses the Bread of Life, speaks to men of true life here upon earth and eternal shadow of death. Surely such a message is worth while in a community. Tell a man there is nothing beyond the grave and he will shout to his fellowmen in a frenzy of despair "let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die!" and the community will become a cess pool of uncleanness, a hell of iniquity.

Having considered some values of the church to the community, let us, secondly, consider her mission in the community.

How many have a one sided view of the church in regard to her full significance as an institution. Some think of the church in a selfish way as a place where they are to receive something all the time, ministrations, attentions, distinctions and Christmas candy. The very definition of the church shows us that we are to give as well as receive. To give a comprehensive definition we might say that the church is the sum of these organizations which have been formed to serve as the organ of Christ for the expression and promotion of His religion and for the establishment of His Kingdom.

The church has not fulfilled her full mission when she has administered the sacraments, buried the dead and collected the tithes of the faithful. She has not finished her programme when she has cheered the lonely, comforted the sorrowing and described the bliss of heaven. Her work is as comprehensive as Christ's communicable qualities. He that "worketh righteousness," or "worketh good" has a large field. Our primary task is to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling, but we are also introduced to activities beyond ourselves, manifold and innumerable. You can no more limit church activities and life than you can put a frame around the sunshine. The church asks for the whole realm of human life. She is not a vendor of passive and emotional experiences suitable for woman and children alone but stands for militancy, appealing for the

Regular Meeting of Patriotic Fund

Co-operation in Work of Relieving Need in Town and District.

The regular monthly meeting of the Newcastle patriotic fund, postponed from the 2nd, was held on the 3rd instant. Those present were Mayor Morrissey, president; H. Williston, vice-president; H. H. Stuart, secretary; E. A. McCurdy, W. A. Park, and Revs. W. J. Bate, P. W. Dixon, Wm. Harrison and S. J. MacArthur.

On motion of E. A. McCurdy, seconded by Rev. Father Dixon, Mrs. John McCullam, one of whose sons is absent at the front, was granted $5 a month relief to date from January 1st, last.

On motion of Rev. S. J. MacArthur, seconded by W. A. Park, the secretary was instructed to apply to the Government for separation allowance, for Mrs. Mary Gifford, whose son is at the front.

Rev. S. J. MacArthur reported that Mrs. E. H. Sinclair, president of the Red Cross Society, had told him that that Society had appointed ten of its members as a committee to co-operate with the Patriotic Relief and Local Relief Committees in the work of investigating and relieving need in the town and district. He himself had seen and heard what made him believe there was great need of such a committee. There were men of means ready to subscribe to the funds of such a committee. Such a committee mapping the town into sections and appointing a visitor for each section would do a lot of good. At present no one knew just how much distress there was in the town and what cases of alleged need were or were not deserving.

Messrs. McCurdy and Harrison and others heartily endorsed the idea.

The Secretary read communications from:

The national secretary of Canadian Patriotic Fund, notifying of the acceptance of the division of Northumberland county into Newcastle and Chatham districts; re administration expenses; re assignment of soldiers' pay to wife or dependant parents; re British army separation allowances; from the South East and Blisfield councillors re organization, etc.

After April 1st, one-half of the pay of non-commissioned officers and men except in certain cases, must be assigned to those who receive the separation grant from the government.

The British government allows the families of British reservists living in Canada, as follows:

- Wife only—All ranks up to Sergeant, $13.66 per month; color sergeant, $13.52; Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant, $19.06; Warrant Officer, $20.29.
- Wife and one child—The above figures become $15.38; $15.90; $17.81; $23.31; and $24.57 respectively.
- Wife and two children—$19.06; $20.29; $22.10; $27.65 and $28.86.
- Wife and three children—$22.86; $24.56; $26.29; $31.93; $33.19.
- Wife and four children—$25.78; (Continued on page 5)

St. Patrick's Day Annual Concert

A Chorus of Fifty Voices Will be Heard in "Sylvia" A Pleasing Operetta.

St. Mary's church choir, which last year made such a decided success of their annual St. Patrick's Day concert, have been busy with rehearsals and other preparations for this year's entertainment.

With a chorus of fifty voices they will stage "Sylvia," an operetta in two acts, in the Opera House on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 16th and 17th, and which will be intermixed with specialties both patriotic and entertaining. The actors, too, will be elaborately dressed in 18th century costumes.

This capable organization, which in the past has earned for itself the reputation of being first class performers, will no doubt, this year win for itself a continuance of public favor and be greeted with bumper houses on the above dates.

Tickets will be on sale at Morris' and at Durick's drug stores, the general admission being charged. Read advertisement in this issue of The Advocate.

Splendid Entertainment
St. James' new hall was crowded to the doors last night to hear the famous Canadian Jubilee Singers. It was indeed a rare treat to those who attended, being one of the best organizations of its kind to visit Newcastle.

W'll Command, Battery Major Randolph Crocker, of Millerton, has been provisionally appointed Major Commanding the 28th Overseas Battery of Field Artillery, which will be mobilized at Fredericton.

Straight Talks to Women

About the Home and Other Things

EDITED BY Dorothy Richmond
FOR THE UNION ADVOCATE

I have a letter signed "A Mother," in which she says:
"My son is twenty-one years of age and wants to enlist, to go to the front, but says he will not go without my consent. He is our only son, in fact he is our only child, and I can't bear the thought of letting him go. Will you tell me if I am doing right?"
As this question is one which is facing thousands of other Canadian mothers, I think it is a very suitable subject for this week's Straight Talk, and my answer is this:

Your love for your son is SENTIMENT—indeed it is the deepest instinct within us, and while the world could not last long without sentiment; neither would it last long under German rule.

As against sentiment, there are the duties of manhood, which, like the duties of citizenship, must take precedence over every other consideration—that is, if National Honor and the Peace of your friends are to be upheld and guarded. It is better to die in honor than to live in dishonor. It is better to lose your son than to suffer the double dishonor of turning a deaf ear to the Mother Country's cry for help, and the horrible thought of living under military rule.

In letting your son go to the front, you do make a great sacrifice—the greatest sacrifice a mother can possibly make—but you must remember that all the millions of men under arms today have mothers, too, and all those mothers are making the same sacrifice, and you must also remember that SACRIFICE, FOR DUTY'S SAKE is the highest earthly function which the human soul can perform.

Yes, you must let him go. If he returns, alive, and you see him marching home, with his victorious comrades, great joy and high honor will be his—and yours.

Should he not return, the honor that will be yours will be none the less, for you did your duty—and he knows it. Should you still refuse to let him answer the call to arms—to aid his country in her hour of need—it will be but a question of time, when shame will fill his heart, and yours too. HIS son may some day ask "Father, you were able and the right age, why did you not go?" What will his answer be?—and what will YOUR answer be?

I am glad that you sent me your letter, and I sincerely hope that my answer may help other mothers, as well as the great numbers of able-bodied young men in this community who apparently seem more than willing to stay at home and enjoy their peace and SAFETY at the cost of the lives of others.

"Canada! Canada! Wake from thy slumber! Britain is calling for aid in the fight. Foes are besieging her; rush to the rescue. Hast thou forgotten the debt that thou owest? Dost thou remember how much she has done. To make of this people a truly free nation. Counting as nothing the conquest she won?"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Dear Miss Richmond:
Could you give me a real good recipe for Irish Stew, and oblige,
Mrs. P. C.

Answer—Cut two pounds of mutton into cubes, and saute in a frying pan. Add the following vegetables, cut into slices: 1 carrot, 1 onion, 1 stick of celery, 1 turnip and two cups of potatoes. Now put the meat and vegetables into a stewpan, season with salt and pepper, cover with cold water and stew gently for two hours; thicken with a tablespoonful of flour mixed in a little cold water, before serving.

Dear Madam:
Will you please give me a recipe for chicken salad and tell me if this is suitable to serve at a supper, after a skating party.
Miss L.

Answer (1)—Take two cupfuls of cold chicken—white meat only—cut into cubes, add 1½ cupfuls of blanched almonds and two cupfuls of diced celery, mix well and serve in lettuce, with French dressing.
Answer (2)—Yes; it is quite correct to serve salads of any kind, at supper parties.

Dear Miss Richmond:
Please tell me how to whip thin cream.
"Subscriber."

Answer—Cream, so whip properly, should be thick (xx cream) if it is thin, add a few drops of lemon juice or the unbroken white of an egg, before you begin to whip.

Can you let me know how I can get rid of dandruff as I am very much bothered with it.
Nellee.

Answer—Wash the hair thoroughly, in warm water and castile soap, and apply sulphur ointment. If there is a crust, almond oil may be rubbed in at night, to soften the scalp, and the hair well washed in the morning. It may be necessary to repeat this for two or three days before the head is free from scurf.

Dear Miss Richmond:
When a near relative dies, how soon afterwards may I pay formal visits.
"In Mourning."

Answer—Six months is the conventional time.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS
To remove mildew stains, boil the garment in water, to which cream of tartar has been added, and lay in the sun to dry.

Lemon juice will remove match scratches from paint.
Spirits of camphor will take out peach stains.

All traces of mud spots will disappear by rubbing the goods with a raw potato.
When embroidering initials on handkerchiefs or table napkins, sew the corners of four together. This not only saves time, but the hoops fit better.

To mark linen easily, dip the article in cold starch and let it dry. The pen will then write without scratching.
When cutting out clothing, you can do away with pins and weights on tissue paper patterns. Lay the pattern on the material and press it lightly with a warm iron. The pattern will cling to the cloth, and the cutting will be more accurate.

CRITICISM LEVELLED AT "MADE-IN-CANADA"

Who is Most Loyal—the Man Who Pays the Duty or the Man Who Provides Work?

Nothing succeeds like success! The "Made-in-Canada" appeal has been so all-pervading during the past few months that it has stirred up criticism here and there among some Canadians. This is perhaps the best tribute possible to the compelling force of the movement, which has swept over Canada since the war began. If the propaganda for the purchase of products made by Canadian workmen in Canadian factories was lacking in strength or logic, if it was not meeting with a ready response from the great majority of Canadian consumers, no one would pay any attention to it. It would perish of neglect. It becomes interesting, therefore, to note some of the isolated objections that have been raised against it.

Not a Huge Monster
The commonest criticism runs something like this: That the purchaser who buys a foreign-made article pays a certain sum of money in the form of customs duties on it. This money goes to the National Treasury, helps run the country and helps keep our soldiers on the firing line. Whereas if the purchaser buys "Made-in-Canada" product no duty flows into the National Treasury, and according to the theory of the critics an amount corresponding to the customs duties is pocketed by the manufacturer in the form of increased profits. These who take this position cannot see beyond the manufacturer. That is their difficulty. To them the Canadian consumer has in his pocket and thinking nothing of the welfare of Canada or her citizens as a whole.

The Case of Plows
One Western farmer has written a letter to a prominent Western farm paper explaining that he bought an American-made plow because the duty on it would go to the Government. Has this correspondent no regard for the thousand workmen or so who would be employed in the Canadian plow company, whose goods he rejected in favor of the foreign article? Do they do nothing for Canada? Are they of no value to the community in which they are working and spending their wages? Are they not contributing through their daily purchases just as large a portion of our national revenue as is the farmer?

In the transaction in question this particular farmer paid, we will say, $8 to the Dominion Government in the form of duty. A Canadian plow factory the writer has in mind in a Western Ontario town would probably average 1,000 employees, whose average wage would be $60 per month, or $720 per year. Every dollar of this income is spent in Canada. It is spent for food and clothing, house furnishings, etc., some of which will necessarily have to be imported, and on which duty will be paid. Assuming that the average employee only pays 2 per cent. of his income out in the form of customs duties or $15 in round numbers in a year, we have a contribution from the employes of this factory alone of $15,000 to the national exchequer.

A Bad Example
If every farmer followed the example of our correspondent and bought a plow made in United States there would be no plow factories in Canada, and not only the $15,000 contributed to the national revenue by this one firm's employes would be lost, but also thousands of dollars by the employes of other plow and implement factories, which would be forced to close down through lack of business. And what of the tradesmen who supplied these Canadians with the necessities of life, and the mechanics who built their homes, paved their streets and operated their transportation systems? What of the doctors, lawyers, school teachers and clergymen who minister to their social and spiritual needs.

It is a peculiar strain of patriotism that would impel a Canadian to-day to send his money to a foreign country for a foreign product, to build foreign workshops, to develop foreign towns and cities, and increase property in a foreign country at a time when his fellow citizens are suffering from lack of employment, when there are breadlines in some of our cities, and when we are straining our national resources as never before to keep the wheels of industry turning and the Ship of State on an even keel. This is not a time for individual choice and action. It is a time for national co-operation. Keep the workmen in Canadian plow factories employed. Busy workmen will keep our national revenue buoyant and achieve the object which our Western friend had in view when he bought the foreign plow.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM

The Disease is Always Rooted in the Blood, Which Must be Made Rich and Pure

There are still many people who imagine that rheumatism can be cured by liniments and rubbing, overlooking the medical fact that the trouble is rooted in the blood. Rheumatism can only be cured by cleansing and enriching the blood, thus driving out of the system the poisonous acids which cause the rheumatic pains. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure the most obstinate cases of rheumatism because they go straight to the root of the trouble in the blood. Every dose helps to make rich, red blood, and this new blood expels the poisonous acid, bringing health and comfort to the tortured victim. Do not waste time and money in liniments and outward applications. Give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and thus drive the disease out of your system. Here is proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can do in cases of this kind. Mr. Richard Palmer, Wroster, Ont., says: "For months my life was made miserable through a combined attack of rheumatism and sciatica. The rheumatism seemed to settle in all my joints and the sciatica pains were so great that I could scarcely hobble about. I am a farmer, and so you can understand that in my condition I was unable to do my ordinary work. Neither doctors nor various remedies I took did me any good. Finally I was induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and for this I have much to be thankful for, as after taking a few boxes the pains began to disappear, and by the time I had taken nine boxes every twinge of both the rheumatism and the sciatica had disappeared and I was able to go to work again as usual, and have not lost a day through illness since. I am thoroughly grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me and hope my experience will benefit some other sufferer."

It is the curing of just such cases as these that has given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills their world-wide popularity. You can get the Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT'S DECLARATION TO PARLIAMENT

A bulletin of information of "Facts about the War" published by the Paris Chamber of Commerce, under date of January 5th, contains the following:
"The Prime Minister, M. Viviani, has made on behalf of the Cabinet an important declaration to the Chamber of Deputies, and we quote the most remarkable passage on the causes of the present war, and the spirit in which France is carrying it on:
The Premier said: 'Germany has been disturbed in her rapacious dreams of victory by this wave of patriotic feeling, unforeseen by her. From the first day of the struggle, she ignored Right, appealed to Force, despised History, and to violate the neutrality of Belgium and invade France, she pleaded the rights of self interest alone. Since then, her government has understood that the opinion of the world had to be reckoned with and has frequently attempted a justification of its conduct by endeavoring to lay the responsibility of the war upon the allies. But above all the gross misrepresentations which no longer deceive even the obligingly credulous, Truth has appeared. All documents published by the nations concerned in the war, and even the striking speech made just lately at Rome by one of noble Italy's most illustrious representatives, bear witness to the fact that our enemies had long since determined to array their forces against us. One of these documents, if required, would alone suffice to enlighten the public; for instance, when at the proposal of the English government, the nations now at war, were to put a stop to their preparations for an outbreak and arrange for peace-parleys in London on July 31st, 1914, both France and Russia consented to the plan and Peace would have been insured at this eleventh hour if Germany had done likewise.
But Germany cut matters short by declaring war against Russia, on August 1st, rendering a call to arms unavoidable.
And if Germany 'nipped Peace in the bud,' diplomatically, it was because the last forty years, she has had but one aim and object in view which she has unceasingly worked for, and that was: the crushing of France in order to obtain the mastery of the world.

All these disclosures have been brought before and will be judged by History, in whose tribunal no room for bribery or corruption is found—moreover since in spite of their desire for Peace, France and her allies have been dragged into war, they will carry it through to the bitter end, cost what it may."

"The gripping story of a strange poker game, a stranger bond between two men, a stolen drama and the double regeneration out of which springs unexpected happiness for the wronged sinner, is not the best kind of a story to take up late in the evening, but it is a jolly good tale by aid of which to shake off the blues." It reads rather like a play itself, being full of action, and abounds in dramatic situations and human interest."

WEDNESDAY MARCH 10TH, 1914

ON DOLLAR DAY

As a result of the organization of the Merchants' Association, the merchants of Newcastle met and have decided to hold a dollar day sale on Thursday, March 18th, when the buying public of town and county will have an opportunity of getting a good dollar's worth of the many different lines of goods that will be offered on that day.

It will pay every reader of this paper to read over the advertisements in today's issue, then take advantage of the many bargains that are here given. By the introduction of the above association here, one of its chief aims will be to make Newcastle a better town to live in and a more profitable town for the people to spend their money in.

It is an acknowledged fact beyond dispute that Newcastle is one of the very best towns in the Maritime provinces, whose resources are such that with the proper enterprise this town could be made second to none in Canada.

The great boom cry now is "Buy in Canada." That is good, but let it be refined down to Buy in Your Own Town. If Newcastle is good enough to earn your money in, it should be good enough to spend it in, and to bring this about only requires time and patience to educate the buyer into buying at home by convincing him that every dollar he sends out of town makes his own town that much poorer and less profitable to live in.

It is no wonder big cities are big cities. It is towns like Newcastle that is making them thus. If the thousands of dollars that are annually sent to the mail order houses were circulated in our own town, the far-reaching results would be astonishing. We should believe more in live and let live. We are too selfish in thinking that the other fellow is prospering too much.

It is expected that the 18th will be a busy day in Newcastle. Try and make it one, anyhow. Visit the different stores and see what they have to offer. This sale is the beginning of what is to follow, and now that our merchants have made the initial start in a general campaign to boost this town to the highest notch, they naturally expect that the buying public will give them their very best and heartiest support.

Spend your money at home. Buy every thing you possibly can at home, and do all you possibly can towards making NEWCASTLE the best and busiest town on the North Shore to live in.

OUR TOWN BEAUTIFUL

Now is the time to think about flowers in earnest if we want to raise plants for the garden, for March is the month to plant the seeds in boxes, if we wish them to bloom early. January was really the time for searching the seed catalogue to choose what you would like best, still it may not be too late yet; but having made your choice for this year, how would you like to get your plants and seeds, etc., free next year? Well this is how it was done in one town.

The idea originated at a meeting of the Town Improvement Association. One of the members said he knew of many persons who wasted good plants each spring because he knew of no way to dispose of them. He further said that plants in a hardy garden, increase rapidly and their roots must occasionally be separated. As a rule the garden cannot be enlarged and the surplus plants and bulbs are thrown away. After thoroughly discussing the matter, it was decided to have a Plant Exchange. So a committee was appointed to put the plan into execution. Early each spring the Executive Board of the Improvement Association calls a meeting for the purpose of appointing a committee to take charge of the Exchange.

Any society or even an individual with the assistance of a few friends may have a Plant Exchange. Contributed.

The Place of the Church
In the Community

strongest men to fight the evil of the world to the last ditch, to drive out injustice, abuses and ancient wrongs. Jesus calls to action "The Son of God goes forth to war," to cast out devils, to remove mountains.

Here is found a work so varied that all talents can be employed. Each one can know that his daily activities can be so ordered that they will hasten the coming of the Kingdom of God, the end for which the church exists and for which Christ worked. This view is attractive because every man has a chance to contribute his share. It enables the physician to magnify his office, the mechanic, the laborer to work with more sky over his head, the town official and town council to take as a model the New Jerusalem which is to come down from God.

In order to be more specific, let us consider the church's work under the following heads: Evangelistic emphasis and Social emphasis.

It is here that we find confusion in the ranks of church workers, some placing all emphases upon evangelism while others place all emphasis upon social work. Let us see if there is not a place for both in the church and community.

We must all admit that the church's principal work is in man's regeneration, and redemption through the effectual renewal of the Holy Ghost and the vicarious sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ. Apart from that her force to elevate man would be no greater than anyone of the ethical clubs now in existence. Reduce the Church to the level of merely human institution deprive her of the supernatural and she would at once be disqualified to accomplish anything higher than man-made institutions. You may as well tie flowers on dried stems and call that growing plants as to talk to men about social betterment unless you get them related first to Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord of their lives. The reason we have so many national and community evils is because of the unregenerated men in office who have no love of righteousness and no visions of the coming King to reign in justice and love.

SOCIAL EMPHASIS—There ought to be no conflict between the advocates of personal evangelism and the advocates of social service. It has been well said that "the soul of improvement is the improvement of the soul," yet we must at the same time agree that attention must be given to the improvement of social conditions also. The new born soul should have a healthful atmosphere. Those born spiritually and struggling to live the new life, as well as those physically born, should not be placed in ruinous environment. How many weak babes in Christ mean well but are overcome by their environment.

Moreover, social emphasis is but a substitute for individual emphasis. The time is usually the first week in May. As soon as the date is fixed, the committee put posters in prominent places, and an appeal for donations is made through the local papers.

Early in the day of the Exchange a man with a horse and wagon collects the plants, bulbs, etc., and takes them to the place of distribution, where they are put in order to await the opening of the Exchange at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. There are shrubs, vines, roses, golden glow, hollyhocks, asters, peony roots, geraniums, lilies of the valley, pansies, etc.

It is a great day for the town this meeting together through a common bond—the love of flowers. Rich and poor, young and old, with the fever of planting upon them come from all parts of the town, bringing baskets, express wagons, wheelbarrows, anything that will hold a few plants.

The Plant Exchange, in the town referred to, has been held for five years and the results have been far reaching. In unexpected places gardens have sprung up, bringing pleasure to the owners and adding fresh beauty to the town.

It is short sighted to ask whether one is to work for the individual or his surroundings. You cannot work for one without working for the other. Individual emphasis and social emphasis are two sides of the same shield. You can scarcely have a soul in a lost body. You find it hard to have a saved life survive in unsave surroundings. When men are made good they ought to make the surroundings better and when we make the surroundings better we certainly help to make good.

Again, the church must inculcate conceptions of social morality as well as individual morality. She must stir individual conscience and then do something even more difficult and that is stir and keep alive national and town conscience, and clamor obedience to existing laws that make for order and well being. The church should strive for law enforcement. Ah, but you say, you cannot make men moral by law. You are getting far away from your regenerating process, church of God! Is it not true, however, that the chief function of law, so far as morals are concerned, is to prevent people from being made immoral? For instance, take our white slave laws and liquor laws.

Killing flies in our swatting campaigns does not make sick people well but it has kept a lot of people from getting sick. And so law may not make men moral but it can do much to prevent them from being made immoral. It can, for instance, drive out of business those parasites of society, rum sellers, who live upon the blood and tears of their fellow beings. Get after the man who is making money out of this thing, Church of God, destroy the works of the devil! Destroy those things which systematically prey upon the body, mind and character in church and home.

Those ministers of Frederickton, who the other day took off their coats and smashed the rum bottles never did a better day's work in their lives. They were as much blessed of God as if they had been preaching an evangelistic sermon. Would to God I had a like opportunity in Newcastle! I would like nothing better than to preach salvation on Sunday and then make it easier for men to be saved and kept saved by smashing whiskey bottles on Monday.

Church of Christ, you are the light of the world. Send forth your light. Don't keep it under a bushel. Our electric plant by the power of its engines sends out light to save our town from darkness. Our churches should be mighty engines of power, filled with the power of the Holy Ghost, throbbing with the saving and compassionate love of Christ, and then we should wire the whole town, running the wires into every alley and street, throwing light into homes, amusement halls, council chambers and political meeting places.

We want Christian politics, politics which fulfill the law of Christ. We want Christian politicians, politicians and officials who will not be bought and hobb-nob with law breakers. A man who professes citizenship in heaven and then votes and uses his office as a citizen of hell is too much of a hypocrite to live! How dare a man profess to labor for the Kingdom of God and then vote for hell? When God's Kingdom comes do you think the hotels and drug stores of the country will sell that which causes tears and shame, poverty and murder, adultery and blasphemy? No, every store and business will sell only what Jesus would have them sell.

Church of Christ, you are the salt of the earth. But where is the salt? It is all in bond or perchance, it is rolled out upon the sidewalk in barrels for exhibition on the first day of the week. We are not mixed up with that which needs saving. We are not touching life as we should.

Awake, awake, put n thy strength O Zion! Our triumphs in reform and regeneration have been glorious in the past, but we are just entering into the usefulness of our possession. This whole world with all its interests is to be taken for God. The church is today the hope and saving of the world through Christ her Lord and Head. God has not failed. Christ has not grown weary, but the human part has failed. We have not used the power that God has placed at our disposal. When we do awake, we shall go forth, into this darkened world, this sin-entrenched world, "as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners!"

The paper was warmly complimented by all who followed:
Rev. Dr. Harrison said that all churches should stand up for enforcement of good laws and enactment of better ones. The time had gone by when Christians could hold slaves as John Newton, and acquiesce in the liquor traffic, as Geo. Whitefield.

Frank Curran, Rexton, said there was no time and place Christian men were needed than at the polls. Geo. N. Clark, Liquor License Inspector for Kent Co. had been dismissed for doing his duty.

Mr. Grant, Pictou, N. S., gloried in the thought that the church's vision is widening every day. An association of voters pledged not to vote for non-temperance men had purified politics in Nova Scotia.

Rev. S. J. Macarthur said the church was returning to her rightful place in the community. All Christians must unite to attain best results.

Ald. S. W. Miller wanted the clergymen and other good citizens to visit the Town Council to enquire how the Scott Act was enforced.

Rev. Mr. Richardson—Are we satisfied with the enforcement of the Scott Act here?
Ex-Ald. James Falconer—No.
Rev. Mr. Macarthur—No one imagines we are.

Rev. Dr. Harrison said that he had been informed by a person that the Chairman of the Police Committee had told him directly that an arrangement had been made with several hotels.

Ex-Ald. H. H. Stuart said he had heard the same person at a public meeting state that the chairman of the Police Committee had told him that an arrangement re hours of selling, etc. had been made with certain places in town. Rev. Dr. Harrison, B. W. Hutchison and H. C. Stothart had attended same meeting.

Rev. Dr. Harrison—Yes; I was there and heard it.
Ex-Ald. Falconer gave a startling statement to the effect that he had heard the same thing from a town meeting.

Rev. Mr. Macarthur said that an arrangement with law breakers was an outrageous and abominable thing. C. T. A. Inspectors were paid such a small salary as Inspectors, that dismissal as policemen ended their usefulness as inspectors. John Ashford had been dismissed without good cause.

The meeting resolved to visit the Council.

"A DOLLAR BILL"
A farmer came to town to spend some of his hard-earned dough. And in a merry jest, and just to show his printing skill, he printed his initials on a brand-new dollar bill. He spent that dollar that same day. Down in the grocery store, he thought 'twas gone forever then, and he'd see it no more. But long before the year rolled by One day he went to fill A neighbor's order and received That same one dollar bill. Once more he spent that dollar bill In his own neighborhood, Where it would do himself and friend The most amount of good. Four times in two years it came back As some bad pennies will. And each time he'd go out and spend This marked one dollar bill. Had he been wise that dollar might Be in his own today. But just two years ago He sent it far away. The person who received it then I know have got it still. For 'twas to a mail order house He sent his dollar bill. No more will that marked dollar Come into the farmer's hands, And nevermore will help to pay The taxes on his lands. He put it where it never can Its work of life fulfill. He brought about the living death Of that one dollar bill.

Everybody can do a little. Every man should do what he can. Every woman should do what she can. Improved production means increased production. Canada's future depends upon our actions of today. In serving the Empire we are serving ourselves. Markets are not created, won and held in a day. Now is the time to prove ourselves the Granary of the Empire. We have the soil, we have the resources, we must have the energy to use them to the greatest advantage. As we acquit ourselves at this crisis, so will be our prosperity and pride in the years to come.

163,267,000 bushels and Roumania 45,643,000 bushels in the same time. How far is Canada going to help to make up the deficiency? Great Britain imported from Aug. 1, 1913, to July 31, 1914, 54,307,000 bushels of oats. Russia exported 34,750,000 bushels, Germany 25,077,000 and Roumania 17,195,000 bushels. March 8—The double funeral of James O'Leary and Placide Gallant was held Tuesday morning from their late homes on two adjoining farms, to the Catholic Church where high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. P. Hebert. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery. Mr. O'Leary's pall-bearers were three of his cousins, Alex. Robert and Frank Fraser, Hazen Martin, Robert Harding and Patrick Whalen. Those who carried the remains of Placide Gallant were: Lionel Robichaud, Henry Daigle, Frank and Charles Hebert, Percy Durrant, and Phileas Cormier. In the funeral procession were about 130 sleighs besides the two hearses. Mrs. Thomas Cantwell of Campbellton and Thomas Fraser of Fredericton Junction, were in town Tuesday to attend the funeral of James O'Leary.

Mr. and Mrs. Robichaud of St. John have been in town this week attending the funeral of Placide Gallant. Mr. and Mrs. George Jardine went to Fredericton this morning to visit Mr. and Mrs. John D. A patriotic organization meeting was held in Whitneyville Public Hall Thursday night. The large hall was well filled. Councillor Alfred Sinclair presided. Mayor Morrissey of Newcastle, gave an address explaining the objects of the Patriotic Fund, and how to organize. Stirling speeches were also delivered by Rev. Dr. Harrison, Rev. S. J. MacArthur and Howard Williams, all of Newcastle Patriotic Fund Central Executive, and by the chairman.

The meeting organized a Branch of the Newcastle Patriotic Fund for that part of North Esk Parish included in Strathadam, Whitney and Allison school districts. The following officers were elected: President, Councillor Alfred Sinclair, Whitneyville; Vice-President, John McColm, North Esk Boom; Secretary, James McColm, North Esk Boom; Treasurer, Wm. Sherrard, Strathadam.

The following were appointed collectors: Strathadam—Misses George Hutchies, Roberta Adams and Julia Hutchinson. Whitneyville—Harold Whitney and Misses Ora Sinclair and Lyle Forsythe. A subscription list opened in the meeting was largely signed. A meeting will be held in Allison Settlement next week at which collectors for that district will be chosen. Councillor O'Shaughnessy, who was present at the meeting, will begin to organize his end of North Esk in a few days.

PERSONAL

Mrs. Beryl Watling is visiting friends in Chatham. Mr. J. Y. Mersereau of Chatham, was in town on Monday. Mrs. Mary McPherson of Chatham, is spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. J. Harry Brown. Mr. Gordon Rae of St. John, is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rae. Mrs. John McGrath of Chatham, was called to town on Monday, owing to the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Wm. McGrath. Mrs. Owen Sullivan has returned to her home in Moncton, after attending the funeral of her brother, the late Edward MacKay. Messrs. Donald and Wilbur McCullam and Herbert Stewart of Tabusintac, who have enlisted with the 3rd contingent, were in town on Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jeffrey. Mrs. Wm. McGrath, whose life, in consequence of a serious illness, was despaired of, is, we are pleased to state, gradually improving. Her many friends hope for her complete recovery.

Volunteers Gordon Leslie, James Welsh, James Craik, Wm. Craig, Alvin Doucet, and Patrick Doucet, of the 26th Battalion at St. John, were in town the past few days, returning to St. John Tuesday. They expect to leave any day.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Thomas Jeffrey very pleasantly entertained a party of friends who drove up from Chatham. The time passed quickly with games and music and was enjoyed by those present. A dainty lunch was served about midnight.

Word has been received here by Mrs. J. W. Miller, of the death on Feb. 12th of Lillian, the beloved wife of Daniel Elder Miller, at "Fairstead," Windletia, London, England. The late Mrs. Miller's son Maurice will probably be remembered here, as having visited Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Miller some ten years ago.

GOOD STORY OF STAGE LIFE

"Gripping" is a Mild Term Applied to "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," Says Ithaca Journal.
The Ithaca (N. Y.) Journal says of "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," by Isabel Gordon Curtis, which is to be published serially in this paper: "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth" is a story of the New York stage with a touch of newspaper life thrown in once and awhile. A star comedian and a newspaper man and the latter's sister play the three big parts. The two men in the opening chapter play a game of poker, the stakes being the future of the men. The comedian loses and then follows so much of interest that it is with regret that the last page is reached. It is such a story that if much of the plot is told a great deal of the enjoyment would be taken from the reader. It is enough to say that the loser of the poker game afterwards wrote a wonderful play, but because of the wager he had to make he was compelled to give the play to the other man, who, for a time at least reaped the glory of being the most successful playwright of the day. Gripping is a mild term to apply to this story.

MERCHANTS CAN HELP

Points For Retailer to Bear in Mind in His Purchases
A man out of a job, or only partially employed, is a poor customer. You much prefer, don't you, to deal with customers whom you know are earning good wages, in thriving local industries? Their credit is good—they pay their bills. Did it ever occur to you that, out of every dollar's worth of Canadian-made goods you buy, from 25 to 50 cents goes to the Canadian workman living in Toronto or in some other Canadian city, and enables him to buy from 25 to 50 cents' worth more goods from his tradesman? Did it ever occur to you that, out of every dollar's worth of foreign-made goods you sell, about 75 cents or more disappears from Canada forever, and the buying capacity of the Canadian workmen is correspondingly reduced? The wages that should be in his pocket have been paid to the foreign workman. In 1913, over $692,000,000 of Canadian money was spent for foreign goods. Think of it—six hundred and ninety-two millions! Half of these goods could have been made in Canada, and Canadian workmen and Canadian retailers would have been $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 better off than they are to-day.

A New Questions and Answers Department of Interest to Shooters

Readers are reminded that this column is open to questions which should be sent to me in care of the Sporting Editor, and to discussions by the readers on anything connected with hunting or target shooting.—A. P. L.

The "Arsenal."
Just about this time of year, when old man Winter is beginning to feel his age, the dyed-in-the-wool sportsman decides that the "arsenal" needs a going over.

From mysterious closets, drawers, and cupboards appear firearms of various kinds ranging from the little .22 repeater to the powerful big-game rifle and the graceful shotgun. Clearing rods, rags, bristle brushes, and the necessary nitro-solvent oil next make their appearance and then a regular revel of cleaning, oiling, and polishing starts in.

What a flood of pleasant memories the handling of I might almost say fondling, of a well liked rifle or shotgun calls to mind! The supreme moments of the hunt which repaid a thousand fold the energy, time, and money expended!

L. W. McJ., Chicago, Ill.

I. Through inheritance, I have come into possession of a fine shotgun. It has been little used for a number of years. The barrels are very foul and apparently considerably rusted. What cleaning preparation and process would you recommend?

Ans. I would suggest that you take the matter up with the manufacturer and see if they can refinish inside and out for you.

2. Is it likely that a gun would be ruined by rust if fired occasionally during several years and not cleaned?

Ans. The chances are about one hundred to one that such treatment would ruin a shotgun barrel beyond redemption.

H. T., Decatur, Iowa.

Will you kindly inform me as to the standard range for twenty-two calibre rifle and revolver shooting? Also the diameters of the respective bullet-eyes.

Ans. The standard range for indoor .22 rifle shooting is twenty-five yards. The bullet-eye is one-half inch in diameter. Add one-half inch for each succeeding ring. For revolver shooting, the standard range is twenty yards, the bullet-eye being one and one-tenth inches in diameter.

R. C., Chicago, Ill.

1. Kindly tell me the correct name for the hell-diver, and are hunters allowed to shoot them?

Ans. The "Hell-Diver" is a popular name for the dabchick or grebe. The scientific name of the most important species is Podilymbus podiceps. I am under the impression (better look this up in your state, to be sure) that this bird is classed with the water fowl in the Game Laws. It is hardly a pleasing morsel to eat, however, as I understand it is almost as tough as the loon.

2. Kindly tell me which shotgun is most suitable for duck shooting, the hammerless pump gun or the double-barrel hammerless?

Ans. Both types are suited to the work. It is simply a choice based on personal preference.

3. Are hunters permitted to shoot kill-deer?

Ans. The "Kill-deer" is a species of ring-necked plover. The open season on plover is September 2nd to December 16th.

4. Kindly tell me the location of the Chicago Gun Club, and are strangers permitted to watch the contestants.

Ans. The Chicago Gun Club is located at Kensington. Spectators are permitted at open cortests. At other times, telephone the secretary for a permit.

A. C., Kendall, Ont.

1. Which would be the best, a .22, .25, .32, or .38 calibre rifle for farm use?

Ans. The .22 calibre rifle handling the .22 Long Rifle cartridge is the most popular for farm use where it would be used mostly for shooting small game and exterminating pests.

2. From whom can rifle tubes be bought to fit a 10 or 12 gauge shotgun?

Ans. I do not know that they are made in this country at present. You might try some of the larger hardware and sporting goods jobbers.

3. Can you shoot accurately with a rifle tube?

Ans. A properly constructed rifle tube should shoot with a fair degree of accuracy.

4. How far will a .32 bullet carry?

Ans. You do not state which one of the numerous .32 calibre cartridges you wish the range for, so I cannot answer this question.

A. G., West Chicago, Ill.

Kindly inform me as to the law relative to spring shooting in Illinois?

Ans. The Federal Game Law permits shooting ducks and other water fowl from September 2nd to December 16th. The Illinois State Law has been changed to conform to the Federal Law and there is therefore no spring shooting in Illinois.

G. P. S., Brooklyn, N. Y.

As the Sullivan Law of N. Y. State prohibits one from keeping a revolver in the house, and as there is no ban on rifles and shotguns, I would like to find out which rifle comes nearest to being a revolver; that is, in regard to length of barrel and number of shots fired. What I would like to get is the shortest and lightest magazine rifle made and still not come under the ban of the Sullivan Law as a revolver. I would prefer one with a safety device. I want to use it as a protection against porch climbers.

Ans. I would suggest that a shotgun with short barrel, loaded with buckshot would be more effective for home protection than a rifle, as it has a spread of shot which does not re-

IS PRAISED BY REVIEWERS

Our New Serial Enthusiastically Indorsed by Critics of Prominent Newspapers.

"The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," by Isabel Gordon Curtis, one of the most gifted of American fiction writers, will be published serially in these columns, and will prove a rare treat for every reader. The following are but a few of the hundreds of enthusiastic comments on the story from the reviewers:

It holds the interest to the end.—Dallas News.

This novel, which has a well-thought-out plot, is strikingly dramatic in its developments. The story is a strong one, the action rapid, the characters exceptionally well portrayed. Tense to the end, it holds the reader's interest.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A dramatic and exciting romance.—Hartford Courant.

A story well worth reading.—Boston Times.

It is a story written solely for the diversion of the reader and it achieves its purpose; no one is likely to go to bed and leave its serial half completed.—Toronto Mail.

The story has a high moral purpose. Montreal Star.

A vital, lively story of the drama and the stage. Of high purpose and of skilful, enthusiastic inspiration. It is a bright, fascinating story, told with a thoroughly admirable skill and dash.—Salt Lake City Tribune.

A story which does not let interest lag for one moment.—Savannah News.

Originality of conception is the strongest characteristic in this novel.—Des Moines Capital.

It is an extraordinarily unreal sort of plot, which works itself out into very real situations.—Chicago Evening Post.

We have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in our home for a number of years and use no other Liniment but MINARD'S, and we can recommend it highly for sprains, bruises, pains or tightness of the chest, soreness of the throat, headache or anything of that sort. We will not be without it one single day, for we get a new bottle before the other is all used. I can recommend it highly to anyone.

quire such careful aim.

L. A., Luda, Miss.

Does the calibre of a rifle or pistol have reference to the area of the bullet or the diameter? When you speak of a .50 calibre rifle, does that mean one-half inch in diameter or one-half inch in area?

Ans. The calibre of a rifle or pistol is the diameter of the bore expressed in inches. Thus, a .50 calibre rifle has a bore the diameter of which is one-half inch. There are of course many slight variations.

R. D. H., Chicago, Ill.

Would you please tell me about hunting license. How old do you have to be to buy one, and how much are they?

Ans. As far as I can determine, there are no restrictions as to age limit in Illinois. Resident hunting license costs $1.00.

E. E., Chicago, Ill.

1. What is the calibre of the 30-30 rifle?

Ans. .30 calibre.

2. What is the range of the Savage Arms Co.'s 30-30 and 303. cartridge when used in a 26 inch barrel Savage rifle?

Ans. The ranges of these two cartridges are about the same. They are good for about 500 to 700 yards.

S. T., Danville, Ill.

A. J. E., Jamestown, N. Y.

I intend to buy a repeater shotgun and would like to know if you would kindly advise me as to what you consider the best make.

Ans. This is a matter upon which I cannot give an opinion in this column. I would suggest you write to the manufacturers of standard American makes and secure their catalogue.

Life is very miserable to those who suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach and Biliousness. This letter from Captain Swan (one of the best known skippers on the Great Lakes) tells how to get quick relief from Stomach Trouble.

PORT BURWELL, Ont., May 8th, 1913.

I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. ON PRINTING

FINE PRINTING IS AN ART

Do you know good printing?
Do you like good printing?
Do you know that it always pays to have the BETTER kind?
Perhaps you have been used to the one class of printing and know no other.
If this is so, it is time for you to have a look around and investigate and see what's what.

Do you know you do not have to go any farther away than Newcastle to obtain the BETTER class of printing.
Perhaps you have not given it a thought, but a great deal depends on the stock used in order to get a BETTER job. Investigate this.

Last, but not the least, do you know that The Advocate Job Department turns out only this BETTER class of work. If you will read on a little further, we will tell you how and why.

1st—We cater to that class of people who use only the best stock, and who know what BETTER printing is.

2nd—In order to give these customers the class of work they want, we have to keep in stock only the best grades of material. We do not handle cheap lines.

3rd—In order, again, to be able to turn out that BETTER class of printing, we employ only experienced and competent printers, who keep abreast of the times and watch the styles.

4th—What is as important as the above is equipment. If The Advocate Job Department was not fitted out as it is, with the most modern machinery and the very latest in type faces, it could not handle the fast growing trade, that has developed in the past year, of turning out that BETTER class of printing. Only the best inks are used, because this is necessary when high grade stock is used.

Now, Mr. Business Man, if you will read the above over carefully, see how your supply stands, then get in touch with this office, we feel sure you will become a customer. Give up that old-fashioned notion that first class printing comes only from the large city printing offices. As a matter of fact, the reverse is the case, and prices are invariably lower.

REMEMBER THAT DO WE ALL KINDS OF PRINTING

For commercial use, we have superior grades of Letter, Note and Bill Head Stock, at prices and quality to suit any business and any purse. Our prices range from $2.50 to $4.00 per thousand for Letter Heads, and from $2.50 to $3.25 per thousand for Envelopes. Our Envelopes are the same material as our papers, and therefore match. We are always pleased to submit samples of stock, and prices, on application.

More Business IS WHAT WE WANT

You want the work—we want to do it for you. We have just the grade of paper you want, so why not let us get together in a co-operative way and make a strong pull for increased business—more business than usual.

The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth

Into a fairly decent career there comes occasionally a moral lesson. Temptation comes, and the man, therefore honorable and honest, falls as though his backbone were of gristle.

CHAPTER I

The Bond.
Of course the game ended with a consolation pot. Merry and Wentworth, each with his last chip in the middle of the table, called for a showdown. All but Singleton dropped out, and he, the big winner of the evening, took the pot. Wentworth and Merry broke.

The game had been played in Wentworth's library. Before its close the gray light of the morning began to steal past the curtains and the glow of each electric lamp took on a murky hue. Enoch Wentworth, acting as banker, cashed in the chips of the winners. Three of the men put on their hats, said "Good morning," and went out. Andrew Merry sat beside the baize-covered table with its litter of chips, pulling slowly at a cigar and staring into vacancy.

"Do you mind if I open this window?" asked Wentworth. "There's a chill in the air outdoors that will feel good. I've swallowed so much smoke my throat feels raw."

"Open every window in the room if you like, old man. I'm going home."

"Hold on a minute," cried Wentworth unexpectedly. "I'll go you just one more hand. Let's play one big stake and then swear off forever."

"I tell you, Enoch, I haven't a cent. Heaven knows how I can tide over these months until the season opens. It's a good thing I'm not a married man." Merry laughed mirthlessly.

"One last hand!" pleaded Wentworth. "What do you want to play for?" Merry turned up a corner and stared at his cuff buttons thoughtfully. "I have nothing left but these. I don't think I'll put them up."

"We've thrown away enough money and collateral tonight," Wentworth replied. "Let's make this stake something unique—sentimental, not financial. Why not make it your future against mine?"

"That's a great stake! Sha'n't I throw in my past!"

"No, let each of us play for the other's future. It is a mere fancy of mine, but it appeals to me."

"Are you serious? What in God's name would you do with my future if you won it—what should I do with yours?"

"I tell you, it's a mere fancy of mine. All right. Carry out your fancy, if it amuses you. I ought to be willing to stake my life against yours on any hand, if you say so."

"Do you mean that?"

"Yes, if you want to call me."

Andrew Merry smiled and blew a flurry of smoke rings into the marble face of the Shakespeare, while he watched Wentworth's pen hurry across a sheet of paper. The newspaper man handed it to him with the ink still wet.

"There," he said, "we'll play for that document, the winner's name to be written at the top, the loser to write his name at the bottom."

Andrew Merry read it aloud:

I hereby pledge myself until death to do your every bidding—to obey your every demand—to the extent of my physical and mental ability—to furnish me with support.

"Will that hold good in law?"

"Just so long as the loser is a man of honor—no longer. Are you going to waken?"

"I'll be damned if I am. I'll put this bit of paper in my scrapbook."

"The man who wins, keeps that bit of paper," Wentworth answered with a whimsical smile.

He tossed the unsigned bond into the center of the table and shuffled the cards with grave deliberation. Merry lit a fresh cigar and puffed it meditatively. Upon each listless brain began to dawn the realization that this was a stake of greater import than the rolls of bills which had grown lighter and lighter till the last greenback vanished.

"Who'll deal?" asked Wentworth.

"We'll cut," Merry spoke quietly.

"Low deals, ace low."

Enoch Wentworth cut a tray, Merry a seven spot. Wentworth shuffled the cards again and held them out to his opponent.

the card on the table face up, "and a jolly king to follow it."

"King for me, too," Wentworth's face flushed and his voice grew impatient. "What's your next card?"

"A ten," Merry replied tranquilly, too tense to wonder why Enoch awaited his declaration.

"Ten here. My God! are they all alike?"

"Seven next."

"And mine's a seven!"

Both men paused, each with his eyes on the other's card.

"And a four," cried Wentworth irritably. He passed his hand across his forehead; it was moist and cold.

"You win." When Merry tossed down his hand a tray turned over—it was the same tray which gave Wentworth the deal.

Wentworth had drawn to an ace and Merry held up a king. The younger man lifted a pen, dipped it in the ink, and scrawled Enoch Wentworth across the slip of paper. At the bottom he wrote with grave deliberation, Andrew Merry, and handed the paper to Wentworth.

The news-stander, Andrew Merry, then dropped it on the table, laid his cheek on the palm of his hand, and, looking straight in the face of the actor, asked: "Merry, do you realize what this means?"

"Not yet, perhaps; still I wish you more luck of my life than I've had. Now, since I'm to look to you for support, could you spare up a nickel? I've got to ride home, you know."

Before Wentworth could reply, the curtains parted, and a girl's figure showed itself for a brief moment.

"I beg your pardon, Enoch, I thought you were alone," she said, and the figure vanished as suddenly as it had appeared.

"Who's that?" Merry demanded.

Wentworth's only answer was to pull out the lining of his pocket. From one he produced a quarter and handed it to the actor. Merry pocketed it without further questioning, and pulled on his gloves.

"Good night," he said, "or good morning, whichever you choose."

"Say, old man," Wentworth held the door for a moment half closed while he spoke. "Say, if you don't mind, let's keep this transaction to ourselves."

"I'm willing," Merry paused to strike a light for his last cigar, then he laid his hands solemnly across his breast. "Cross my heart," he added in a sepulchral tone.

Wentworth started at the sound of an opening door. A girl entered.

"For heaven's sake, Dorry! What are you doing up at this unearthly hour?"

"I've had my sleep, you haven't," she answered with a laugh.

"Dorcas, sit down," said her brother. "Do you see that fellow on the bench under a tree?"

The girl leaned a hand on Wentworth's shoulder while she turned her head in the direction his finger pointed.

"Yes! What's the matter with him? Is he anybody you know? Is he in trouble?"

"He's an old friend of mine. It's Andrew Merry, the comedian."

Wentworth sat for a moment gazing into his sister's beautiful face. There was a child in spite of her eighteen years. He felt like an ancient, sin-battered, soiled, city-worn bulk of humanity as he returned the straightforward gaze of her gray eyes.

"Tell me about him, Enoch."

"I ran across him when I was doing dramatics on the Pittsburgh Union. He was a genial lad, but there wasn't much for him to tell an interviewer. He had been born and raised in a western town and then apprenticed to a country bank. He hated figures and loved the stage. He stuck to the ledgers for a while because he was all his mother had, I guess she worshiped him."

"How did he happen to go on the stage?"

"Come on to New York, as they all do sooner or later, and began with a turn in a vaudeville house. He had a r.ched a salary of fifty a week. He was perfectly happy except for one thing—he couldn't get the mother's loneliness out of his mind. They wrote to each other every day."

"I think I should like him," suggested Dorcas.

"I gave Merry all the space next morning instead of the dancer, and he wrote me a grateful letter. I didn't see him again until two years later, when I came to New York. I found his name in the cast of a light opera company on Broadway. He was pretty far down the list, but before the thing had run two weeks he was moved up to second place. His work was unusual. He's the funniest Merry Andrew I ever saw, yet once in a while there's a touch of whimsical, tearful pathos in his antics that makes a man-wink."

"Take me to see him," cried the girl eagerly.

"We'll go tomorrow. It's his signing

AUTHOR OF A GREAT STORY

Isabel Gordon Curtis.

Isabel Gordon Curtis, author of "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," is one of the best-known literary women of America and for years her name has been familiar to readers of household and farm periodicals and of fiction. She was born fifty years ago in Huntley, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and after receiving an academic education in that country, came to the United States in 1886. For several years she did general literary work, and then she was successively literary editor of the New England Homestead and Farm and Home, dramatic editor of the Springfield Homestead, associated with her husband, Francis Curtis, as editor of the Binghamton Chronicle; associate editor of Good Housekeeping, and editor of the woman's department of Success Magazine. In addition to all these activities, she has found time since 1903 to do a great deal of general magazine work and juvenile story writing, and in recent years has written several novels that proved highly successful and popular. Some of these deal with official and social life in Washington, with which Mrs. Curtis is thoroughly familiar and which she portrays with vivid reality.

The greatest work Mrs. Curtis has produced, "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," is a story of the New York stage and New York newspaper life. It is a story with a high moral purpose, and one which holds the interest of the reader to the end. The reviewers generally have pronounced it one of the greatest of American novels.

It is with considerable pleasure that we are able to announce that we have arranged for the serial publication rights on this story, the first installment of which will appear soon. We earnestly advise all readers to watch for it.

great in "The King at Large." He's a bigger favorite than several of the big stars, yet—it is the queerest thing—in all the years he's never taken the step that would bring him to the top.

"Why?"

"The Lord knows. One manager died, another went under. It's the uncertainty of stage life."

"She died suddenly last season. A fool usher gave Merry the telegram in the middle of a performance, when he went off the stage. He dropped as if he'd been shot. They rang down the curtain until the understudy could get into his toga. He didn't act for two months. I thought he would never brace up. I had him here half the winter trying to cheer him. He gave me the dumps."

"Poor fellow," cried Dorcas. "I roused him through his pride. He hadn't a cent to his name, so I shamed him into going back to work. He earns lots of money, but it gets away from him."

Wentworth's gaze turned to the litter of chips on the table. His sister's eyes followed.

"Is it that?" she asked.

"Partly."

The girl rose to her feet. She put her hands on her brother's shoulders and gazed down into his face.

"Enoch," she said hesitatingly, "I wish you wouldn't. You could help your friend if you would turn over a new leaf yourself."

"We both swore off tonight for good and all, little girl." Wentworth took her hands between his own and looked into her eyes with a resolute look. "I want you to help both of us—Merry and me. The evil of the world was never whispered inside convent walls. You've left a quiet, simple life—for a very different world. There's more mission work waiting you right here than you had taken the veil."

"Eno," the girl's face was grave and earnest, "Enoch, nothing would ever make me take the veil. I have only one ambition—I want to go on the stage."

"Good Lord!" cried Wentworth, "I never dreamed of such a future—for you."

"You don't know stage life as I do," he continued seriously. "There are women—and men for that matter—who go into the profession clean skinned, clean souled. They spend their lives in it and come out clean; but there are experiences they never forget."

"Is life as bad as that?" the girl asked simply.

"Life is as bad," her brother answered slowly, "and yet I would as willingly see you go on the stage as into society—I mean fashionable society, as I know it here in New York. A newspaper man sees the under side of life."

"It would not hurt me." The girl tossed back a heavy braid of hair which fell over her shoulder, and knelt at Wentworth's knee.

"I have you always to turn to, big brother," she whispered. "She laid her cheek fondly against his hand. 'Don't you remember that used to be the only name I had for you? You were so big."

me—wasn't he a young colt. The thought was so absurd that he smiled; any colt awkwardness must have disappeared with short frocks! Merry stared at the girl with bewildered admiration, wondering now why he had never felt the mildest curiosity about Wentworth's sister. He became conscious that he was making a mental analysis; she had black-fringed gray eyes; warmth and dancing blood glowed in her face, for she had the coloring of a Jack rose; a mass of auburn hair was coiled in a loose knot at the back of her head; she wore no hat; a band of dull-blue velvet was tied about her head and fell in a loose bow over her ear, but strands of hair, which glowed like copper in the sunshine, had escaped and blew about her face; she had the tender mouth of a child. In the straightforward eyes was sweet womanliness, gentle determination, and a lack of feminine vanity which Merry had seldom seen in the face of a beautiful woman. He even forgot to drop her hand while he gazed into her face, half admiring, half perplexed.

"I've brought Mr. Merry down to stay with us till we go home," Wentworth announced.

"I'm delighted," cried Dorcas cordially.

Next morning after breakfast Enoch and his sister rowed out to deep water with their fishing outfit. Merry still was in bed; he was tired, he pleaded, and could not immediately acquire the habit of early rising.

"What do you think of Andrew?" asked Dorcas abruptly. He lifted his head after the task of baiting a hook and looked into his sister's face.

"I think he ought to be waked up."

"To join our fishing trip?"

"I mean waked in his ambitions. He seems to me like a man who has no goal in sight. He needs something to work for. He spoke last night of one ambition he has—"

"Sort of moonlight confidences?" queried her brother.

"No—not that. He's determined to jump straight into a part that will bring the heart out of his listeners."

"That's foolish. The public wants just so much versatility. You can't kill off a beloved comedian to resurrect a new emotional actor, no matter how good he may be. People won't stand for it."

"He isn't satisfied." The girl pulled up her line and tossed away a morsel of nibbled bait, covering the hook with a fresh clam.

"Some greedy fish had a square meal of your bait and never got the hook in his gullet. He'll come back for more, then get caught. It's the same way with human beings."

"Philosopher!" laughed Dorcas. She dropped her line again into deep water and waited for her brother's prediction to come true.

Merry had breakfasted before their return. He sat upon the vine-grown piazza, gazing at the sheen of the ocean, when the two agile figures stepped across his vision.

"Well, Sir Lazy, so you're up!" cried the girl. "You should have been with us to find an appetite. See our fish! Here's a dinner for you!"

"I'm going to turn over a new leaf," said Merry. His eyes were fixed on the girl's glowing face, and for a moment he shared her intense enjoyment of life.

"Will you turn it over tomorrow morning at sunrise?" she demanded.

"Even so soon, most gracious lady." He swept her a stage bow, his soft hat trailing the ground as if it had been a cavalier's cap loaded with plumes.

Matching his grace, the girl turned to him, laughing, with the mock dignity of a queen.

"When the tide goes out, ye big three to you fads and dig claims for our savory meel."

"I shall obey, most royal highness," answered Merry solemnly.

"I believe he is waking up," thought Dorcas as she ran upstairs to dress for the noon dinner. "If he does that I'll believe he has some backbone."

When Dorcas and her brother came down next morning for breakfast, Merry had disappeared.

"I'm glad I'm not your victim," said Dorcas with a note of sympathy in her voice.

"Enoch," the girl turned to him gravely, "I told you he needed waking up, and this is a good start. It won't hurt him a bit."

"Poor Merry! What a sight!"

"We're waked him come tramping over our beach. He wore Farmer Hutchins' overalls rolled up to his knees and a flapping cow-breakfast that he carried a clam fork and occasionally shifted a heavy basket of clams from one arm to the other."

CHAPTER III.

Cassiopea's Chair.
Dorcas Wentworth, stepped on the crest of a cliff and looked down. A few feet below her, on a ledge like a wide shelf, Merry lay watching the waves as they broke against the jagged walls of a narrow cove.

"Day-dreaming, Mr. Merry!" cried the girl.

He sprang to his feet. "Why, I never heard you. Do you wear velvet shoes? Let me help you down." He began to climb the uneven steps.

"The idea of helping me down, after I have made my way alone over these chasms!" She pointed to the wall behind her. Then resting one hand on his shoulder, she leaped past him lightly.

"What a heavenly retreat!"

"Yes," answered Merry, dreamily. "I found it several days ago. I've called it Cassiopea's Chair."

"Who was Cassiopea?"

"I've forgotten. Some satellite creature, I believe. Her name has a restful sound, and this place is restful and lonely."

The girl laughed. "Were you day-dreaming?"

"I suppose so. I was watching these waves. Most of them break without a splash; then once in a while, away out as far as your eye can reach, you see one roll up, gathering force from you can't imagine where, and it comes tempestuously through a calm sea, to crash against the cliffs. Sometimes it throws its spray up here." He pointed to a wet line on the rock just below them. "Then again, one which promises to be a ripper amounts to nothing when it breaks."

"Yes it is fascinating," she agreed. "Yesterday I spent an hour watching them. It makes me think of people."

"What people?" he demanded, not understanding.

"All sorts. People who never do anything, who saunter through life and are the failures, and the few who live after their work is done."

"Merry," in her intensity the girl addressed him as her brother did, "they make me think of you. You could make a towering big wave of your life. You don't!"

The man turned quickly and looked into her eyes with flushed face. He did not speak.

"I wish—oh, I do wish—Dorcas's voice was like that of an ardent child. 'I wish I could rouse you to make the best of yourself. There is so much you could do!'"

"Do you really think so?"

"No, I don't think it, I know it. You are two people; one is lazy and indifferent, with just ambition enough to do the work you have to do. You can't help doing it well—you could not do it badly. Then there is the other—a man with vivid imagination, feeling, emotion, and ability; but it is so hard to wake him up!"

Merry jumped to his feet and stared down into the girl's face. "How did you learn this—about me? Has Enoch laid my soul bare to you?"

"Enoch told me something of your career, that was all. I know you better than he does."

Andrew pulled the soft hat over his eyes and sprawled out on the rock ledge.

Dorcas began with a nervous laugh. "It sounds like—presumption, I know so little of the world, only I have been studying you—"

"Am I worth the trouble?" he interrupted.

"Worth the trouble! I don't believe you know yourself yet. You have a wonderful imagination and such knowledge of human nature. You could write a great play, many of them possibly. You know men and women. You have laid bare the souls of some of them when you talked with me. After you bring a being into life, this how you could make him live again on the stage!"

Dorcas jumped to her feet. "Andrew Merry, go to work! Show them what you can do, if for nothing else than to please me and prove that I haven't made a mistake."

"Miss Dorcas, sit down."

The girl looked at her companion curiously.

"Let me shake hands on a bargain," he laughed. "That's a foolish little ceremony I used to go through with mother when I was a boy. If I promised faithfully I would do anything, I shook hands on it."

Merry Stared Down into the Girl's Face.

Dorcas held out her hand cordially. Her clasp was magnetic.

"Sit down again and listen," he begged. "For years and years and years I've had a play crystallizing in my mind. It's all blocked out. Let me tell you about it."

Dorcas sat leaning forward, her face between her hands, her eyes glowing with interest.

little daughter. The love between the father and the child is beautiful. The man, trusting to luck to see him through, steals for years, covering his deflections in the cleverest way. He had to get money, for his wife denies herself nothing. The father-in-law discovers the crime, exposes it to his daughter, then drops dead. She gives her husband up to public justice. His trial comes off and he is sentenced to twenty years. The child is told that she is fatherless. The wife takes her father's fortune and goes West. When the second act opens she has divorced the husband and married again. The child is a lovely, true-hearted woman. She is engaged to the young mayor of the city, and preparations are afoot for the wedding, when she receives a letter from the one man who remained loyal to her father—an old janitor at the bank. He tells her the story which had been hidden from her. The father, penniless, broken down, hopeless, is to leave prison in a few weeks. She confronts her mother, who denies the story, but later confesses. The girl breaks her engagement, leaves home, and goes East. The old janitor takes her to live near the prison where her father is released. Every day she watches the convicts at their lock-step tramp and sees her father. The closing of that act, when she meets him leaving prison, can be tremendous in human interest."

He turned to look at Dorcas.

"Go on," she said.

"The act is laid in a New England village, among simple country people. The girl and her father are living on a little farm. Her lover comes, having searched for her everywhere. She tells him the story. He marries her and takes the father home with them."

Merry paused. The sun had dropped below the horizon and the western sky glowed in red, gold and purple.

"When," cried Dorcas in a flush of enthusiasm, "when will you begin to write?"

"At once, tomorrow. I'll go away somewhere; I can't do it here."

"The act is laid in a New England village, among simple country people. The girl and her father are living on a little farm. Her lover comes, having searched for her everywhere. She tells him the story. He marries her and takes the father home with them."

Crowded Out

Owing to so much extra space being taken up with the advertising of the Dollar Day Sale on Thursday, the 18th, some interesting items had to be held out.

Held Till Later Date

The Advocate's serial "Fedora" is being held till a future date, and a very interesting illustrated story, "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," by one of the best-known literary writers of today, Isabel Gordon Curtis, begins in this issue.

The Trey O' Hearts

The opening chapter of the above big serial photo-play production, will be shown at the Happy Hour tonight. This is to be followed by a weekly installment (for fifteen weeks) of two reels each, until the whole is complete. The author of the story Louis Joseph Vance, has a host of followers by his stirring novels, and this will, we feel safe in predicting it, be the best picture yet seen in this town. It gives a good melodramatic romance, but full of the new quality the times demand and with fresh liveliness of action and color that only a born spinner of yarns can give. It invites the closest attention, and when the installment is done leaves just the state of mind that ensures another call at the theatre on the date set for the next installment, if not sooner. It is an exciting adventure story full of suspense and the first chapter gives entertainment in good measure. That's what it started out to do, and so it is a big success. This picture has had more followers than any other serial picture produced, and the Universal Company has neither spared time or money to make this a serial of serials. The first installment is in three reels, and with a good comedy and drama, making altogether five reels the patrons of the Happy Hour will see one of the finest programs of pictures seen for a long time, if not the best.

"The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," an illustrated story of the New York stage and New York newspaper life, begins in The Advocate today. Be sure and read it.
