For Love of a Woman;

New Romeo and Juliet.

CHAPTER XXXII
"I LOVE HIM STILL."

"Oh, yes, I understand," he said. "I understand more clearly than you guess, dearest. Try not to think too hard of me. Some day—before long, perhaps—you will know how deeply and truly I love you!" and he turned and left her.

Doris remained standing on the bridge, looking at the sleepy river, with a dull pain in her heart and her eyes half-blinded with the rush of emotion that seemed to overwhelm her.

In a fortnight! In two short weeks! Not until this moment had she fully realized what she had done in promising to be Percy Levant's wife; but now—she leaned her head upon her hands, and tried to crush down the rebellious thoughts that rose within her. Tried to wipe out, as it were, the remembrance of Cecil Neville, which haunted and tortured her.

"I love him still!" she moaned. "I love him still, and I am to be another man's wife in a fortnight! Oh, if I were only lying, at rest at the bottom of the river here! In a fortnight! Oh, what have I done, what have I done!" and she wrung her hands wildly.

Then suddenly, with an effort, she fought down the mad remorse and misery, and, in a dull despair, murmured:

"What does it matter? Why should I not marry him—or anyone else? What can Cecil Neville ever be to me, even if I were free? He will be the husband of Lady Grace; he has forgotten that such a person as Doris Marlowe ever existed; or, if he remembers me, recalls me as the girl who served to amuse him for a few days in the country. What a shame it is that I should give a thought to him who has been so base and mean, while this other, to whom I have pledged my word, is all that is good and true! Marry Percy Levant! Yes, I would marry him to-morrow if he asked me!" and, setting her teeth hard, she turned to leave the bridge.

As she did so, a tall, thin old man, with a white, wasted face, from which a pair of sharp gray eyes gleamed like cold steel, came on to the bridge, and she made way for him.

He was leaning on a stick, and, as he raised his hat in courtly acknowledgment, he let the stick slip from his thin, claw-like hands.

Doris stooped and picked it up, and, as she gave it to him and he was thanking her in Italian, his piercing eyes scanned her face with a cold earnestness.

Doris bowed and went on, but some impulse moved her to look back after she had gone a few yards, and she saw him leaning against the bridge, with his hands pressed to his heart, and his face deathly white.

She was at his side in an instant, and had drawn his wasted arm within her firm, strong one almost before he knew of it.

"I am afraid you are ill," she said. He started as her sweet, musical voice sounded in his ears, and raised his eyes to her face.

"No, no," he said, evidently with an effort. "But I have been ill, and—I am a little weak, which," he added, with all the old courtesy, "is my good fortune, seeing that it has procured me the happiness of your assistance. You are English. I took you for an Italian. My eyes are not so strong"—he stopped, from sheer weakness, and leaned upon her arm heavily, if the word can be used in connection with the lightness of his frail form—"not so strong as they were. I have the misfortune to be old, you see," and he forced a smile.

"Let me help you to the seat there," said Doris, gently.

"Thank you, thank you; but I could not think of troubling a lady—"

Disregarding his apologies, she led him carefully to the seat, into which he sank with a sigh of weary relief. Doris looked at him anxiously. It was a striking face, and a vague kind of idea crossed her mind that she had seen it somewhere before to-day, but she could not fix the time or place, and presently she found the keen, glittering eyes fixed in a meditative scrutiny upon herself.

"You have been very kind to me, my dear young lady," he said, in a voice that still trembled a little; "very kind. And you are English? Will you tell me your name? I am an old man, and claim an old man's privilege—inquisitiveness—you see."

"My name is Doris—Doris Marlowe," said Doris, seating herself beside him, and looking down the road, in the hope that a carriage might come up in which she could place him.

"Doris Marlowe? No," he shook his head; "I never heard it before; and yet I fancied your face awakened some dim memories. Do you know me, Miss Marlowe?"

Doris looked at him, and shook her head.

"No," she replied. She did not like to ask his name.

"Ah! perhaps that is as well," he said, with a faintly cynical smile; "I mean that I am not worth knowing. And are you living here, Miss Marlowe? Your mother must be a very happy woman, having so sweet a daughter," and he drooped his head towards her with the old, graceful salute.

A deep red stained Doris's pale face.

"My mother is dead," she said. He put up his white hand, with a pleading gesture.

"Forgive me, my dear! Your father—"

"I have no father," said Doris, almost inaudibly, and with a strange pang shooting through her heart.

"There was one who was father and mother to me, but—he is dead, too," and her voice quivered.

"You are young to have seen so much trouble," he said, pityingly. "But you are living here with some relative, is it not so?"

Doris shook her head.

"I have not a relative in the world," she replied. "I am living with Lady Despard. I am her companion."

"Lady Despard?" he put his white hand to his head. "Lady Despard?—I think I know her. And you are living with her? I envy her her companion, my dear. I will do myself the honour of calling upon her. Tell me your name again. I—I forget sometimes. I am very old, older than you think, because you see I am so strong still. You smile?" sharply.

"No, no, I did not smile, indeed!" said Doris, quickly. "But I do not think you are strong enough—you have told me that you have been ill, you know—to walk about alone."

He sighed, and shrugged his shoulders, with a mirrorth smile.

"Alone. I have only a valet, and I hate to have him with me. I had a wife once"—he stopped and looked darkly before him—"she left me—she died, I mean, of course—and I've no one else. I had a child—a little girl—but she died, too. You see, I am like you somewhat, though I have other relations who, doubtless, wish that I would die also, and be smothered, cynically.

Doris shrank a little, then, ashamed of the momentary repugnance, said, gently:

"That is not true, I am sure. And now, will you tell me where you live? I will come with you if you will let me. Or will you come with me to Lady Despard's, and have her carriage?"

He shook his head and straightened himself.

"I have the Villa Vittoria," he said. Doris knew it. It was the largest, and, after Lady Despard's, the handsomest in Pescia.

"Yes, I know it," she said. "It is too far for you to go alone. When you are rested—but there is no hurry, we will stay as long as you like—I will go with you."

"You are very kind, my dear," he said, looking at her with a gentleness which assuredly was an unfamiliar expression on that cold, haughty face.

"Very! I will rest a little longer, if I may."

He sat silent for a short time, and Doris heard him murmuring her name several times, and then he looked up and sighed.

"No, I don't remember, and yet—"

He passed his hand over his forehead with a wistful, puzzled look in his keen eyes. "I am ready now, my dear young lady," he said, presently. "You see, I accept your kind offer," as he placed his hand upon the arm Doris offered him. "Not so long ago fair ladies were wont to rest upon my arm; now the order is changed. One gets old suddenly!" he added, with a grim smile. "And I have been ill. I think I told you. Yes, very ill. They thought I was dead; but"—with a gesture of defiance—"my race die hard! And you have no father or mother? That is sad! Did I tell you I had a little girl once? She died! Yes, she died!" His head drooped for a moment. "If she had lived and stayed with me, I should have had her arm to lean upon. By Heaven! I never thought of that before!" he exclaimed, in a suppressed voice, and his head sank lower.

They crossed the bridge in silence, and reached the Via Grandis, where Doris saw a man, whom she took for a servant, hurriedly cross the road and approach them.

"I am afraid you are ill, my lord," he said, touching his hat. "I missed you on leaving the chemist's—"

The old gentleman drew his hand slowly from Doris's arm, and took the servant's.

"This is my man, Miss Marlowe," he said, "and I shall not need to tax your kindness and patience any longer. How deeply grateful I am for that kindness and patience I cannot tell you. But for you—" He stopped expressively. "Will you tell Lady Despard that I shall have the honour of calling upon her to-morrow, to congratulate her upon having so sweet and beautiful a friend?"

"Yes," replied Doris, allowing her soft, warm hand to remain in his, which seemed to cling to it confidently. "But you have not told me your name yet?" she added, with a smile.

"Have I not?" he said. "I am the Marquis de Stoyile, my dear."

Doris recoiled, and drew her hand away so suddenly that his thin, feeble one fell abruptly to his side.

"The Marquis de Stoyile!" she echoed, every vestige of colour leaving her face. "Yes, I will tell her, my lord," and she turned and walked quickly away.

The marquis looked after her with knitted brows—looked so long that the valet gently pressed his arm as a reminder.

"Yes, yes, I am coming!" exclaimed the old man, impatiently. Then he said, "Do I know that young lady? You saw her—do I know her? She has been very kind to me—very."

"No, my lord, she is a stranger to me," replied the man.

"A stranger. Yes, yes. And yet—" And, with knitted brows and a troubled look in his eyes, he permitted his man to lead him away.

CHAPTER XXXIII
OUT OF THE PAST.

"So the illustrious visitor turns out to be the great Marquis de Stoyile!" exclaimed Lady Despard, with a laugh of surprise. "The Marquis de Stoyile! And you have been leading him about like a blind beggar? How I wish I had been there to see you! But it seems to have upset you, dear," she added; "you look really pale now, and—Why, you haven't been crying?" and she drew Doris beside her on the lounge.

"No, I haven't been crying," said Doris quietly; then, after a pause she said, gravely, "I have promised to marry Percy Levant in a fortnight's time, Lady Despard."

"Her ladyship started.

"In a—what time did you say? A fortnight! Oh, nonsense! No wonder you look pale! I think it is a shame you should try to impose upon my credulity, Doris; for, of course it is only a joke!"

"It is sober earnest, dear Lady Despard," said Doris; and then she told her of the letter of Spenser Churchhill containing the offer of an engagement for Percy Levant.

President Wilson Stumping the Country.

Petrograd Will be Defended Against Attack--New Zealand Ratifies Treaty--Russian Bolsheviks Propose Peace--Will Vote Against Treaty.

TO ATTACK PETROGRAD.
 HELSINGFORS, FINLAND, Sept. 3. Admiral Cowan, commander of the British squadron in the Baltic, has arrived here in connection, it is understood, with preparations for an attack on Petrograd.

WILL DEFEND PETROGRAD.
 LONDON, Sept. 3. Leon Trotsky, the Bolshevik military and naval commissary, addressing the Petrograd Soviet on September 1st, declared that the Bolsheviks must stand proudly and impenetrably in the defence of Petrograd, according to a wireless message from Moscow.

SOVIETS IN AMERICA.
 CLEVELAND, OHIO, Sept. 3. Three hundred representatives of the left wing faction of the National Socialist party which recently withdrew from the parent body, have organized the Communist Labor Party of America and adopted the emblem of the Soviet Republic of Russia, with the motto: "Workers of the World Unite."

RADICALS' APPEAL.
 CHICAGO, Sept. 3. An appeal was issued to-day requesting all elements of radicals to unite under the banner of the new Communist Labor Party which was organized yesterday.

OCCUPIED KIEV.
 LONDON, Sept. 3. The anti-Bolshevik forces have occupied the southern outskirts of Kiev, to-day, according to a wireless despatch sent out by the Soviet headquarters in Moscow and picked up here. The despatch states that fighting is proceeding.

KOLCHAK CHANGES HEADQUARTERS.
 LONDON, Sept. 3. A wireless despatch from Moscow received here reports that Admiral Kolchak, head of the All-Russian Government, has evacuated Omsk and transferred his headquarters to Irkutsk.

GIFT OF PRIVATE PERSON.
 BERLIN, Sept. 3. The indemnity of one million marks paid to France on August 31st for the killing of Sergt. Paul Mannheim in Berlin last July, was the gift of a private person desirous of seeing the matter settled, according to the Vossische Zeitung. It says the money was paid on an express understanding that it should be handed to the Red Cross.

PROPOSED PEACE.
 BERNE, Sept. 3. The Russian Bolsheviks have proposed peace negotiations following the route of their forces which are surrounded, according to an official announcement received here.

NEW ZEALAND RATIFIES THE PEACE TREATY.
 WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Sept. 3. The peace treaty was unanimously ratified to-day by Parliament, after members of labor party had criticized the pact.

WANTS NATIONALIZATION OF MINES.
 LONDON, Sept. 3. The coal miners adopted in its entirety the recommendation of the National Executive Committee that the Government scheme for dealing with coal mines be rejected, and decided to agitate for nationalization of the mines at the Trades Union Congress at Glasgow on Sept. 3. Robert Smillo, the miners' leader, declared the miners were generally convinced that nationalization of the mines was essential in the interests of the national industry and the poorer consumers.

DOCK STRIKE AT MARSEILLES.
 PARIS, Sept. 3. The dock strike at Marseilles continues without disorder, but serious consequences are feared if a settlement is not reached soon, especially as oil refineries and soap factories will run short of raw materials.

PREMATURE DEMONSTRATIONS.
 LONDON, Sept. 3. Great enthusiastic demonstrations were held at Cairo and Alexandria on Saturday and Sunday, in consequence of the receipt of a telegram declaring that the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate had declared that Egypt should be independent, according to a Cairo despatch to the Daily Mail. It is said that Pasha Seagioni, head of the Egyptian national delegation in Paris, was the author of the telegram to Cairo. No action has been taken by the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate regarding Egypt that would seem to warrant demonstrations in that country.

WILL VOTE AGAINST TREATY.
 PARIS, Sept. 3. Deputy Franklin Bouillon, the fourteenth orator in the debate in the Chamber of Deputies on ratification of the German peace treaty, declared to-day that he would vote against the treaty. He is the first member of the Chamber to make known his determination to vote adversely on the document.

AN AIRPLANE FUNERAL.
 TORONTO, Sept. 3. The first airplane funeral in Toronto took place this morning, when the remains of baby Leonard Allen, son of Martin Allen, were carried by the airplane to Mount Pleasant cemetery, four miles from the child's home. After the service at the child's home conducted by the Rev. Cannon Dixon, the remains were placed in an airplane, driven by Harold Smith, of the R. A. F. A second airplane containing an employe of the funeral director followed the parents of the child, who motored to the cemetery.

STARTS THE TOUR.
 WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 3. President Wilson left Washington to-night for a country-wide speaking trip to tell the American people of his part in the peace negotiations and to make a personal appeal that the treaty be ratified at once without amendment.

Buried Treasure at Torbay.
 For centuries past the reports of buried treasure crop up, and in one instance at least in years gone by, we know that the report was correct and the enterprising seekers were rewarded for their labors, without being disturbed by the mythical "nigger" with his shovel and sulphur being emitted from his mouth and nostrils. The latest occurred yesterday, when an energetic and firm believer in the buried treasure arrived by train, fully provided with plans and bearings of the exact spot in which the treasure was deposited and covered up in the long, long ago. The particulars are as follows:

Twenty-seven years ago a man who is now a resident of Torbay was one of a party of Newfoundlanders on board a steamer at Montreal. An old man of about 75 years of age, hearing they were Newfoundlanders, asked if they knew of a place called "Thorn Bay." They replied they knew no such place, but that some of the party belonged to a place called Torbay. The old man gave them a graphic description of the place he recalled as their own native village. He then commenced to give them the history of buried treasure in Torbay, providing one of the men with plans of the location in which the treasure was placed. He explained that exactly twenty years from the date he was speaking to them two men would arrive at Torbay seeking information about the treasure and would apply to one of the party for the necessary information, and that one of the two could be identified by two birth marks on his right arm, and that if the men seeking information did not speak the truth in answer to the questions put to them by the Torbay men whom they would interview, the buried treasure would not be found.

Exactly twenty years after the occasion in Montreal, two men came to Torbay, and asked one of the residents if he had heard of any treasure having been buried in the settlement. He replied that he had heard stories of such things, but did not believe that such reliability could be placed in such sensational reports. The two men from Montreal reminded him of the conversation that had taken place on board the steamer years previously. The Torbay men then asked them if they had anything by which he could identify them as having been sent to seek the supposed treasure. They replied they had not, consequently the Torbay men refused to go with them in their search. After considerable time the Torbay men told them that one of the two men who was to find the treasure had to be identified by two birth marks on his right arm. One of the Montrealers seeing that the Torbay men insisted upon seeing these marks before proceeding with them turned up his right sleeve and showed him the two birth marks. The Torbay men were satisfied with the identification, but informed the Montrealer that it was useless for them to seek this treasure, owing to the fact that they had not spoken the truth to him at the beginning. Search was made, however, but nothing resulted.

According to tradition after this failure it would be exactly seven years from that date before any discovery of the treasure would be made. This seven year period expired yesterday, Sept. 3rd, and as we mentioned above the searcher after the treasure has gone to Torbay fully prepared to capture the hidden wealth. He is quite confident that the treasure is there, and we shall await the result with much interest. We make no comments, having given the story exactly as it was told by the party who is making the search, fortified by all the necessary marks and references to the exact spot where the treasure lies. The Telegram trusts that no wandering ghost or uncanny sound will disturb the seeker in his endeavors to enrich himself and live happy ever after.

At the Majestic.
 Patrons at the Majestic Theatre this evening are assured of a really good show, when three big features, "The Racing Strain," a Goldwyn production, a Ford Educational film, "The Milky Way," and a rather unusual picture by James M. Flagg, the celebrated American cartoonist, entitled, "The Spoiled Girl." All three are excellently produced, and are sure to draw the unstinted praise of the entire house to-night, when they will be screened for the last time. Mae Marsh has a host of enthusiastic admirers, and when it is stated that she is starred, they will no doubt flock to the Majestic to see her in her latest production. The music by the orchestra—the peer of all Newfoundland orchestras—will be exceptionally good, with Prof. King, David Swedin and Joe Ross.

KOLCHAK ISSUES APPEAL TO RUSSIANS.

LONDON, To-day. Admiral Kolchak, head of the All-Russian Government at Omsk, has issued a stirring appeal to All-Russians capable of bearing arms to join the ranks, declaring that the destiny of Russia is at stake. He declares that his Government will not lay down its arms until victory has been won.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONFERENCE COMING.

OTTAWA, Sept. 3. In the Commons yesterday Borden announced that a constitutional conference would be summoned at no distant date to consider the future relationship of the nations of the Empire. That relationship, the Premier said, would be determined in accordance with the will of the Mother Country and of each Dominion.

ONLY ONE CHANGE IN PEACE TREATY.

PARIS, Sept. 3. Only one change from the original territorial terms of the Austrian Peace Treaty appears in the final draft of that document, submitted to the Austrian Plenipotentiaries at St. Germain yesterday. The alteration is in the case of the town of Radkersburg in Marburg Basin, southwest of Grassadkersburg, remaining to Austria although the Basin is attached to Jugo Slavia.

WILL DEMAND ROUMANIAN ANSWER.

PARIS, Sept. 3. The Supreme Council today again considered the failure of Rumania to respond in writing to the notes of the Council and discussed the sending of high standing to Bucharest to insist upon an immediate reply. No agreement was reached but it is probable that a decision will be arrived at tomorrow. The difficulty encountered by the council was in finding a satisfactory representative who was willing to undertake the task.

A BIG SEAPLANE FLIGHT.

LONDON, Sept. 3. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—The Air Ministry states that the demonstration flight recently carried out to Scandinavian countries by a flying boat of the Royal Air Force proved to be remarkably successful. Starting from Felixstowe and proceeding via Dundee, the machine flew direct to Norway and landed at Christiansand, this being the first occasion on which this journey has been accomplished by a British seaplane. From Christiansand the trip continued by stages to Christiania, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Gossburg, Esbjerg, and back to Felixstowe. A total distance of 2,450 sea miles, which was covered in a total flying time of 40 hours and 40 minutes, the flight was made entirely as a demonstration of the commercial use of flying boats, and it is noteworthy because no mishap of any kind occurred.

DECLARES BRITISH ARMY WOULD GIVE ASSISTANCE.

PARIS, Sept. 3. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—During the debate on the Peace Treaty in the Chamber of Deputies, Captain Andre Tardieu disclosed that France in February last had proposed that the German Geographical Frontier be fixed at the Rhine. He said that President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George had recognized the justice of the request but instead of granting France the occupation of the left bank of the Rhine, they promised immediate help in the event of German aggression. France appreciated this offer, which was unique in history. Captain Tardieu said that he was of the opinion that the British Army, if its services were ever required, would not arrive too late, as the German Army would be unable to conceal its preparations. Capt. Tardieu dwelt on the prodigious strength of Great Britain and her admirable Dominions, and also the United States, and concluded by saying that France had no designs to secure political ascendancy.

DECLARES REPORT WAS UNTRUE.

LONDON, Sept. 3. It has been ascertained that the despatch from Berlin on Tuesday, giving German reports from Riga to the effect that General Gough, British Army, had issued a proclamation to the populace of Petrograd that an attack was about to be made on that city, is untrue. General Gough left Helmsfors August 19 for home, and at the present time is in England. He did not see Admiral Cowan, Commander of the British Squadron, operating in the Baltic Sea before his departure for home.

QUEER THEOLOGY.

LONDON, Sept. 4. A bomb was thrown at Hassenin Rashedi Pasha, Premier of Egypt, at an Alexandria despatch received here. The bomb was concealed in a basket of grapes but did not injure the Premier. The assailant of Hassenin Rashedi Pasha was a theological student.

DECLARES GERMANY SHOULD FLATLY REFUSE.

BERLIN, Wednesday. The Tagliche Rundschau declares today that the demand by the Entente that the German constitution be altered, is hardly calculated to induce the German people to respect their new charter, and warns the Supreme Council of the danger of precipitating new internal disruption. The Vossische Zeitung says that flat refusal is the only possible answer to the demand of the Entente, while the Krues Zeitung remarks that the amateurs of Weimar must now put up with constant intervention by the Entente in Germany's internal affairs.

UKRAINIANS CAPTURE SPOILS.

LONDON, Sept. 3. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—According to a delayed despatch from Kammet Zpodiak, dated August 28, the Ukrainian troops made important captures of war material in their recent defeat of the 12th Bolshevik Army near Smerinka and Berdichev. The spoils included a hundred railway engines, more than a hundred trucks, trucks of grain, shells and oil, five armoured cars, a large number of machine guns and a considerable amount of money.

CONDITIONS IN MURMANSK.

LONDON, Sept. 4. (Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—More interesting details have been received by Reuter regarding the present situation of the Murmansk Expeditionary Force, from a British officer who recently returned from north Russia for demobilization. The troops are now, he says, in excellent spirits and the splendid summer weather, which is so much appreciated after the dreary arctic winter, combined with the general activity consequent upon recent military operations against the Bolsheviks, have had a very encouraging effect upon the moral of the whole force. The east Yorkshire battalions which were sent out last autumn have been relieved by a battalion which did such fine service in the earlier days has been replaced by another battalion of the same corps. Serbian and Polish troops were all repatriated some time ago while the Italian contingent was on the eve of departure when the informant sailed. A new French infantry battalion arrived recently.

The general state of affairs in North Russia appears more satisfactory than last year, while the railway services on the Murmansk front have been greatly improved by the importation of a lumber. Summary vengeance, executed by the British upon murderers of a British officer, whose body was found shot and frozen stiff in a ditch on Murmansk last Christmas Day morning, has had an excellent effect on all lawless elements of the Polyglot civilian population. Three men were sentenced to death. The actual execution was carried out by a joint Russian and British firing party, by the light of electric torches. The bodies were subsequently buried in graves which had been blasted out of the frozen ground.

Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Much of Emerson's philosophy has found its way into many of the modern religions and even into the so-called business literature of the day. His whole basis of thought is contained in one of his short essays, "Nature," but as a matter of general interest and profitable knowledge a reading of his complete book, "Conduct of Life," is suggested. Emerson is particularly rich in simple, strong epigrams, and here are a few taken from the mass of his writing:

Envy is ignorance.
Genius works in sport.
Nature is upheld by antagonism.
Insist on yourself; never imitate.
Thought makes everything fit for use.
All healthy things are sweet-tempered.
No object really interests us but men.
The best fruit of travel is conversation.
Do your work and you shall reinforce yourself.
We acquire strength from the forces we overcome.
There is properly no history; it is all biography.
Whenever we are sincerely pleased we are nourished.
In every work of genius we recognize our own rejected thoughts.
Every spirit makes its house, and we make a shrewd guess from the house to the inhabitant.
The best part of health is a fine disposition—it is more essential than talent, even in works of talent.
Mankind divides itself into two classes—benefactors and malefactors; the second is vast, the first a handful.
The frost that kills the harvest of a year saves the harvest of a century, by destroying the weevil or the locust.
There is a tendency in things to right themselves, and the war and revolution or bankruptcy that shatters a rotten system allows things to take a new and natural order.

YOUR business has more of the life of living. (If one had a dollar every day of the one has the last months, would not worry the H.C. all!)

The latest explanation is the failure of prices to drop is due to the cowardice of the American.

What the American is afraid of is reducing prices; but the retailer is not. He knows his customer is a kick about high prices for few one will think he can't afford. Whether this accusation is true or not, I don't know—though I have my own opinion in certain cases. I have a feeling that if the wholesaler goes cents on any article the retailer doesn't want to bother to come with odd change like he goes up five.

But whether that accusation is true or not, I am sure the truth against the customer is true.

He Hates to Haggle.

The average American does to haggle. It isn't his way of things. He worships the goddess, and he is afraid that "kicks" about prices people think he isn't in the good side that god. It's all right to take the high cost of living in a way—to say "It's awful" and thing's got to break some there is no personal reflection in that sort of "everybody's doing it." But to his grocer, or his butcher

YOUR SHARE OF THE BLAME.

RUTH CAMERON

The latest explanation is this—the failure of prices to drop is due largely to the cowardice of the average American.

What the American is Afraid Of.
Cowardice, let me hastily explain, is not the right word. It is the failure of the retailer to be rightfully challenged in matters financial.

The wholesaler declares this writer is reducing prices; but the retailer, instead of passing on the reduction to the consumer, absorbs it himself. He dares to do this because he knows his customer is afraid to kick about high prices for fear someone will think he can't afford them.

Whether this accusation against the retailer is true, I don't honestly know—though I have my suspicions in certain cases. I have a feeling that if the wholesaler goes up three cents on any article the retailer says he doesn't want to bother the customer with odd change like that and goes up five.

But whether that accusation is true or not, I am sure the accusation against the customer is true.

He Hates to Haggle.

The average American doesn't want to haggle. It isn't his way of doing things. He worships the god, Success, and he is afraid that if he "kicks" about prices people will think he isn't in the good graces of that god. It's all right to talk about the high cost of living in a general way—to say "It's awful" and "Something's got to break somewhere"—there is no personal reflection on his finances in that sort of talk, for "everybody's doing it." But to say to his grocer, or his butcher, whom he suspects of tacking on a cent or two all along the line. "Your prices are getting too high for me; I'll have to trade somewhere where things are cheaper or go without" is too much for him.

Ask the Price Before You Buy.

He even hates to ask before he buys, what a thing is going to cost. There is no question but what prices are often shaded for the person who says, "How much is this going to cost?" before he will give his order for it. I know of two people who went to a certain boarding house this summer. One ordered the same room she had last summer without inquiring if the price had changed. The other said "How much can you give me a room for? I must know before I plan to come." The second got the same accommodations two dollars a week cheaper than the other.

Give Radio News of Fliers.

Flying Club to Establish Chain of Information Stations.

The American Flying Club has inaugurated a radio information service with a view of keeping the general public and newspapers in touch with aerial activities, according to an announcement made yesterday by the club. A set of wireless instruments, in charge of William R. Russell, a former airplane radio operator, have been installed in the clubhouse at 11 East Thirty-eight Street, and with its automatic recorder has been picking up wireless flashes from trans-Atlantic vessels.
In addition to the plant at the clubhouse the club is taking steps, according to the announcement, to establish a chain of radio stations across the country.

"We have arranged to furnish individuals and newspapers in the various cities with all information of aeronautical activities," an officer of the club said yesterday. "Each city is to give immediate reports of aviation events on schedules of every half hour. In this way we hope to stimulate public interest in the development of aviation in this country."

A complete set of 'cross-country maps is kept in the radio room of the club for the purpose of directing fliers who have lost their way while in flight. Communication will be kept with the pathfinding planes, and special bulletins of the progress of the trip will be issued from the club.

GOLD BRICKS.

Some busy fellows in our town are always hunting up and down, intent on boosting things; they want to raise a bunch of kale to put a flagpole on the fall, or build new courthouses wings. They want to paint the country club, or hire some highly gifted-dub to beautify the grounds; and so they come to me and say, "We have an oil well to-day, so cough up seven pounds." But always I have other work for every cent I can produce, some junk I have to buy; I line up with the easy hicks who blow themselves for gilded bricks, or strips of azure sky. I have a gold mine up in Maine, where any man would be insane who dug around for gold; I have an ice plant on a shore where arctic billows always roar, and it is beastly cold. I have a ranch that ought to grow all kinds of grain that moderns know, if it had any soil; I have an oil well on a hill, where high priced workmen drill and drill, and never reach the oil. I'm always buying costly shares that ought to make men millionaires, but never, never do; I'm buying shares in mills and mines, and grizzly bears and pumpkin vines, and remedies for flu. And so I cannot spare a red to help our village forge ahead, to aid the boosters' fads; assessments always coming due, it seems to me I'm never through with shelling out the seeds.

See a Gain for Germany

IN LABOR TROUBLES HERE.

The Hague.—In spite of the pessimistic outlook of Germany's financial situation at present, the New York Times correspondent learns that the Minister of Finance Reckner and other authorities are not so pessimistic as writers in the press, and believe the general situation would be improved by a loan from America on which they would base economic reconstruction.

They are also counting on severe labor troubles in America and England which they believe are now only beginning, whereas Germany, having started under labor troubles earlier, now considers herself at least a year ahead of the Entente countries in this respect.

Labor unrest in Germany is becoming subdued and the people are beginning to work, especially since the authorities convinced them they would not get any food unless they did work.—N. Y. Times.

Just Folks

AN EXAMPLE.

I'm as careful as can be; When I'm round where he can see Tear my pants upon a nail, Maybe stumble on a pall, Or perhaps I bark my shins, I just grit my teeth and grin, I don't rave around an' cuss, Don't rare up an' make a fuss, Coz I know a little lad Wants t' grow up like his dad.

I'm not posin' as a saint, Coz the good Lord knows I ain't, But when he is with me, I try t' put my follies by; I don't work a shady trick, Don't use artful ways and slick, Coz I'm certain I do, Some day he'll attempt 'em, too, I just try t' let him see What a real man-ought t' be, An' I'm careful t' be right Everytime my boy's in sight.

Wouldn't have it said that I Ever taught my boy t' lie, Wouldn't want him t' repeat Any language of the street, Which I'd used in haste, when he Chanced to be around with me; I've got notions of my own For my boy when he is grown, An' I fancy I can see Just the man I hope he'll be, So, when he is near, I plan T' be jus' that sort o' man.

Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor C. T. JAMES, Editor

Thursday, September 4, 1919.

Not Entirely One-Sided.

During the past few days a very noticeable change in the speed of motor cars within the city limits has obtained. The general public appreciates the good sense of drivers and trusts that the reform will hold good.

Now that this side has been remedied, however, the other must be handled. As bad as some of the speeders were, it cannot be said that they were entirely to blame for accidents, as the general public itself was, in many cases, lax in regarding the rules of safety.

All Men Can Err.

And so, it seems, even such a big paper as the London Chronicle can make a mistake! Every reader will perceive, upon reading the subjoined extract, just wherein that great journal has erred:

No Apostrophe in St. Johns. (From the London Chronicle.) It annoys Newfoundlanders not a little to see the mistake which is consistently made in this country in the spelling of the name of their capital city. The city is St. Johns, not St. John's, but the apostrophe is almost invariably used in English newspapers.

Drowning Accident.

Deputy Minister of Customs Le-Messurier received the following message from Sound Island this morning: "William Beazley was drowned here yesterday while out fishing; body not recovered."

The Horse Show.

This interesting event materialized yesterday and presented many unique features. Like Newfoundland port the longevity of the animals was the principal standard of excellence and the youngsters had no chance against the veterans of twenty and thirty summers.

A little difference of opinion between an old exhibitor and the judges in one of the classes was overcome by the "scratching" of one of the animals; but one could not but regret that the services of our genial Magistrate had been dispensed with or such a regrettable incident would not have occurred.

Premier Entertains Paper Town Ball Team.

Motored to Brennan's—Dinner there and Return to St. George's Field to Play Ball. The visiting ballteam from the Paper City was entertained by the Prime Minister, Sir M. P. Cashin, yesterday, being driven by motor to Brennan's hostelry where a spread was set and done justice to.

Boy Meets Serious Accident.

A boy named Shepard, of Spaniard's Bay, met with a serious accident yesterday as the train was coming into the station there. He attempted to board the train while it was in motion and missed his right foot getting under one of the wheels and becoming badly crushed.

Commendable Generosity.

The generosity of Sir John and Lady Croble in treating the little children of the Methodist Orphanage to an outing and other considerations is most commendable and could be followed, without harm by others of our wealthy philanthropists.

Dope Fiend Causes Disturbance.

A man crazed from drinking some vile dope created a disturbance in his house in the West End last evening, and practically demolished all the furniture and smashed out every window pane on the ground floor.

Express Passengers.

The following passengers landed from the Kyle at Port aux Basques yesterday, and are on the incoming express: A. M. Avnow, Rev. and Mrs. Dickie and child, J. Stick, Miss Stick, W. Watkins, E. Chetwynd, J. Clarke, E. E. Chambers, R. E. Chambers, J. H. Scott, Miss K. Thorne, Mrs. J. Hanlon, Miss B. Hanlon, Miss M. McDougall, H. Williams, N. Pretty, Mrs. Halford, Miss N. Pretty, Miss L. Garland's Bookstore Entered and Money and Valuables Stolen Safe Opened and Cash Desk Rifled—Watches, Bracelets and Fountain Pens Also Taken—Safe Old-Fashioned—Mr. Garland Out of Town—Detectives Hot on Trail.

For the third time this summer S. E. Garland's Bookstore on Water Street was broken into last night by some thief or thieves. On the two former occasions the burglars entered by underground back room, and did not venture up stairs to the ground floor, on a level with Water Street.

This time, however, the thieves were bolder and broke into a back window into the office. There is an arch between Garland's and Chaplin the tailor, which leads to a small back yard behind the bookstore. The office window is about 15 feet above the ground, and some bala boxes there were piled up and used for ascension. A small hole was broken into the pane of glass, enough to enable the marauder to insert his arm and turn back the catch that locked the window frame.

Mr. Garland was notified by wire of the occurrence and will probably arrive in town to-night. Only he knows how much was in the safe and his own desk, so that the total of the burglary is not yet known to the police.

It would seem to be conclusive that the robbery was planned out in a systematic manner by one or ones who know the plan of the office and store, and it would also seem as if there were more than one on the job, as at least one would have to remain outside to police for the police or watchman. That they were a cool and bold party is proven by the fact that, after the robberies had been committed, they went upstairs and sitting around, counted the spoils and smoked a quantity of cigarettes.

Inter-Town Baseball.

GRAND FALLS VICTORIOUS.

What was undoubtedly the finest exhibition of baseball ever seen here was that pulled off yesterday afternoon. It was the last game of the inter-town championship series to be played in the city and upwards of 3000 spectators turned out to see the citizens defeated by 4 to 2. The Grand Falls' team work was perfect but the home team fielding at 2nd Base and shortstop was, at times, very loose.

Knight Entertains Orphans.

Sir John Crosbie and Wife Treat the Methodist Orphans—Drove to Bowring Park, Bay Bulls and Brennan's, and Dined—Children Cheer Hosts.

An outing was given to the children of the Methodist Orphanage by Sir J. C. and Lady Crosbie on Tuesday, 2nd, which was in every way a decided success. The very remembrance of it will be sweet and lasting to all who participated. At three o'clock in the afternoon five cars arrived, and soon the children who had been looking forward with great expectancy were comfortably seated and the spin commenced. First we drove to Bowring Park where for one hour the children roamed around admiring the roses and wild flowers so artistically arranged, or sailed in the white boats on the lake. We left there and continued the ride along Petty Harbor Road to the fine summer resort of Brennan's. There the children engaged in swinging and various games to the delight of all. Just before tea another ride to Bay Bulls was given arriving back just in time for what was to the little ones the crowning joy, a table full of good things to which they did ample justice. Just before leaving a large bag of fruit and candy was presented to each child, and then the homeward drive commenced. Reaching town the ride continued down Water St. to Forest Road, around the beautiful Quidi Vidi Lake to King's Bridge Road, up Military Road, across LeMarchant Road to Hamilton Avenue then home. It was not then over, for Sir John and Lady Crosbie came in the Orphanage and chatted to the little ones for a while, and on leaving gave each child a piece of money for ice cream and candy on some future occasion. Loud cheers were given by the children for the kindness of Sir J. C. and Lady Crosbie, and if enthusiasm and applause was any sign that what had been done was appreciated, then it was certainly given. The National Anthem brought one of the best outings, and one of the days that will never be forgotten by all who attended, to a close. To Miss Crosbie, Miss Cashin and Miss Bartlett and all others who so kindly helped to make the outing a success our thanks are given, and we wish them "Long life and happiness." The following are those who sent their cars: Sir J. C. Crosbie (two), Sir M. P. Cashin, Hon. Tasker Cook, Hon. S. Bell.—M.C.H.

Work-Horse Parade Yesterday.

A Splendid Turn-Out --- 30 Prizes Awarded---Horses Were Handsome Ones---Many People Present---Second Parade of Its Kind Held in St. John's.

The second annual parade of St. John's working horses was held yesterday afternoon, when the deep interest taken in it, the handsome horses entered, the favorable weather and the half holiday, made the procession the most successful to date. Nearly a hundred and fifty horses had been entered, and although all of these did not participate, the number there was large and most gratifying to the organizers of the parade. The object is to encourage drivers and owners of the noble animal to treat him with humaneness and consideration.

There were eleven classes in the parade and competition: Heavy draft horses; truck horses owned and driven by truckmen; truck horses not owned by truckmen; express and delivery horses; cab horses; farm horses; ponies used for hire or express delivery; ponies, private and not used for hire; privately owned carriage horses, not used for hire; old age horses, ten years or more in the same service; and pairs of truck horses.

At the Government House Grounds they were drawn up, side by side, to form a square, with the horses' heads facing in. The judges were:—Major G. T. Carty, Mr. M. A. Bastow, Mr. Matthew Butler, Mr. A. Flower Day.

On Saturday, the 6th inst., a Flower Day will be held by the Women's Patriotic Association in aid of the Child Welfare Fund. The W. P. A. through its Child Welfare Committee, is undertaking to finance the Movement during the coming year, and a very large expense will be the defraying of the salaries of the three Community Nurses, so it will be understood that the need for funds is great. The work as at present carried out comprises the distribution of clean milk to needy babies; the visiting of mothers and newly born children the practical instruction of mothers by the nurses in the care and feeding of their children; and the education of the public in the necessity of pure milk and intelligent care for young children. At present the Nurses pay about 1,000 visits a month, and the result of their efforts in lessening the Infant Mortality in this city is remarkable. In August, 1917, there were 21 deaths among babies under a year old; in August, 1918, 6 deaths; in August, 1919, 2. This is very encouraging, and inspires the workers to further efforts. It is intended, as soon as possible, to establish Milk Stations in different parts of the city, so that all needy babies can be supplied with pure milk. The W. P. A. asks the help of the generous public of St. John's to make the forthcoming Flower Day a complete success.

American Humor Lived in Archangel.

Soldiers Write of Peoples, Customs, and Climate in The Sentinel, Published There.
American soldiers, recently returned from service in Northern Russia, have brought back with them interesting impressions of people and things in Archangel and the surrounding country. An idea of what the American soldiers thought of Archangel, its people, customs, and things in general is found in The American Sentinel, the newspaper published at Archangel by the American Red Cross.
Copies of The Sentinel which have reached Red Cross headquarters show that the arctic weather was not enough to freeze the humor out of the soldiers or clog their rhyming apparatus. The following description of Archangel, pronounced by the editor of The Sentinel as "the best pen picture of the place written by an American soldier," proves that one of Uncle Sam's boys didn't permit the job to get on his nerves:
A Description of the Weather.

We are so far north that the doggone sun works only when it feels inclined to do so, and in that way it is like everything else in Russia. The moon isn't so particular, and comes up, usually backwards, at any time of day or night, in any part of the sky, it having no set schedule, and when it will get lost and still be on the job at noon. Yes, we are so far north that 30 degrees below will soon be tropical weather for us, and they will have to build fires around both noses before they can milk them. Probably about next month some one will come around and say that we will be pulling out of here in a day or so, but then the days will be six months long.
Now up here in this tough town there are 269,831 inhabitants, of which 61,229 are human beings, and 208,502 are dogs. Dogs are of every description, from the poodle to the St. Bernard and from the wolfhound to the half-breed douchound.
The wind whistles across the Divina like the Twentieth Century Limited passing Podunk, and snowflakes are as numerous as retreating Germans here in France.

We read in The Stars and Stripes that the boys in Italy had some tongue-twisters and brain-worriers, but listen to this. Centimes and soen and francs may be hard to count, but did you ever hear of a ruble or a kopek? A kopek is worth a tenth of a cent, and there are a hundred of them in a ruble. As you will see, that makes a ruble worth a dime, and, to make matters worse, all the money is paper, coins having gone out of circulation since the beginning of the mix-up. A kopek is the size of a postage stamp, a ruble looks like a cigar store certificate, a 25-ruble note resembles a porous plaster, and a 100-ruble note the Declaration of Independence.
Every time you get on a street car (dramway) you have to count out 60 kopeks for your fare, and most of us would rather walk than be jammed in the two by four busses and fish for money. Before boarding a car each passenger usually hunts up a couple of five-gallon milk cans, a market basket or two, and a bag of smoked herring so that they will get their kopecks' worth out of the ride, besides making the atmosphere nice and pleasant for the rest of the passengers.
When a soldier in search of a meal enters a restaurant he says to the waiter, "Barishnia, zekazetek bifstek, pazalousta," which means, "An order of beefsteak, lady, please." You see you always say "barishnia," which really means "girl," and until a young lady is married she is always addressed in that manner. She will answer the hungry customer with, "Yah

The wind whistles across the Divina like the Twentieth Century Limited passing Podunk, and snowflakes are as numerous as retreating Germans here in France.

We read in The Stars and Stripes that the boys in Italy had some tongue-twisters and brain-worriers, but listen to this. Centimes and sous and francs may be hard to count, but did you ever hear of a ruble or a kopeck? A kopeck is worth a tenth of a cent, and there are a hundred of them in a ruble. As you will see, that makes a ruble worth a dime, and, to make matters worse, all the money is paper, coins having gone out of circulation since the beginning of the mix-up. When a soldier in search of a meal enters a restaurant he says to the waiter, "Barishnia, zekazetie bifstek, pazoulousta," which means, "An order of beefsteak, lady, please." You see you always say "barishnia," which really means "girl," and until a young lady is married she is always addressed in that manner. She will answer the hungry customer with, "Yah ochen sojalayu shtoo nas niet vestnik prepsov stochas," (a simple home cure for lockjaw), meaning, "I am sorry, but we are right out of food to-day."

When a Russian meets another man he knows on the street both lift their hats and flirt with each other. If they stop to talk they always shake hands even if they haven't seen each other for fully twenty minutes. Then they simply must shake hands again when they leave. When a man meets a lady friend he usually kisses her hand and shows how far he can bend over without breaking his suspenders.

"Ah," he will say, "Yah ochen rad vas veedet, kak vui pozavayete?" which in the United States means, "How do you do?" To which she will reply, "Blagadaru vas, yah ochen khoroeshaw," or "Very well, thank you." It is the knockout. A fellow has to shake hands so much that some of us are getting the habit around the company.

Tribute to the Russian Girls.
Russian girls prompted the following tribute from one of the American boys:
I wonder, little sister, as I see you pass me by
With your coarse, ill-fitting garments
And your huge, ungainly feet.
If a lot of things aren't true of you,
The which you looks belle.
If some very minor changes
Wouldn't make you mighty neat.

I know a lot of damsels with twice the chance you've had,
Who are twice as prone to grumble
As you ever seem to be,
Who are twice as quick to anger, and every bit as bad.
As their husky Ruskay sister ever yet appeared to me.

If you could change your clothes for some my Yankee sisters wear,
I imagine they would envy you the roses in your face;
With proper Yankee footgear and a ribbon in your hair,
You would spot them several tailles and give them second place.

It's a weedy row you're hoeing, but the way you hoe is great.
And I'm proud of your acquaintance,
Just as proud as I can be,
It is you in my opinion who will build the future state,
Who will shape the greater Russia as a true democracy.

The Mention of "Going Home."
Another jingle called "A Psalm of Life," was inspired by the daily rumors concerning the home-going of the American forces. Here it is:
Tell me not, to make me glummer,
Going home is just a dream,
For we shall not stay all Summer
And things are not what they seem.

Life is real, life is earnest,
(Though in Russia somewhat slow)
"Yank thou art, and soon returnest"
"Passed the Senate weeks ago."
Not resignation and not sorrow
Is the destiny we face,
But to hope for that to-morrow
When we leave this (censored) place.

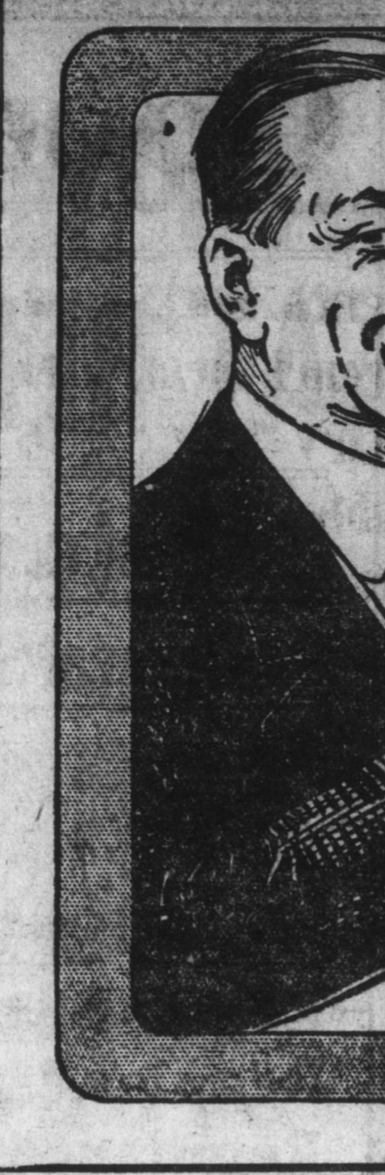

Life is short and Time is fleeting,
And our hearts, though brave and stout,
Often double time are beating,
When it's home we think about.

In the World's broad field of battle,
In this (cut by censor) strife,
Do not trust this piffing prattle
That the sentence is for life.

Trust no rumor so unpleasant,
Let the dead past bury its dead
Act—Act in the living present;
Home is just six weeks ahead.

Regulations oft remind us,
There is no such word as fear;
We shall go and leave behind us,
Room for much home talent here.
Talent that perhaps another,
Sailing o'er Life's solemn main
Who beholds our Ruskay brother,
Seeing may take heart again.

Let us then be up and doing,
Speeding each succeeding day,
Still achieving—still pursuing,
Heaven grant we leave in (deleted by censor).

A Gold Pioneer.

In a modest little home near Washington, Josephus Stephens, miner and pioneer of the California gold rush of '49 and the early '50s, and regarded as the oldest authority on mining and the early west, died the other day.

A native of Green Country, Pa., he went west before the first rush in '42, and rode over Idaho, Montana, Utah, Nebraska and California on horse-back in search of gold mines.

His life was filled with adventure of the pioneer period. Through his advice several men were started on the road to millions. Until the time of his death he was consulting expert for scores of wealthy mine holders and investors.

In 1849, when the east turned its face towards the west in search of gold, Mr. Stephens was working on the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers on steamboats. When the fever struck the Middle West he packed up his few belongings and mounted a horse, setting out for the gold fields of California.

Although his advice was the making of men worth millions to-day, his estate while considerable, is modest as compared to those left by men he aided.

Famous personages of the last two generations in the West were well known to the miner. He met Mark Twain on a Mississippi steamboat, and, realizing the talent of the quaint young writer, induced him to offer his first articles for publication. Joe Billings, another foremost writer of his time, also received his first encouragement from the miner. He was intimate with Brigham Young, of Mormon fame. His acquaintance with John Wilkes Booth, who killed Lincoln, led to his arrest in San Francisco. Later he was released, with apologies. Mr. Stephens had slept beneath prairie schooner top and Indian tepee. Indian Chieftains made him of any woman!—N. Y. Times.

Love and Honor But Not Obedience.

The Episcopal church is wise in omitting the word "obey" from its marriage ceremony. In a measure, doubtless, the idea of wifely obedience derives from the old notion that the woman is the man's chattel; and, in so far as it does so, it is obviously not to be expected that modern women will speak the word seriously, even on the most serious occasion. Men also like to avoid a dubious situation. It is not only the law that was not only the law that was "an ass" when it is assumed that a husband is responsible for what his wife does. Yet historically the idea of wifely obedience has an origin as remote as the poles from the status of goods and chattels. In the code of the Middle Ages obedience was highly among the virtues, the foundation of which society as a whole rested. To obey and to rule, each in its place, was the sum total of public morality. And so in domestic life, each household had a mistress, but each household had a master. What the Middle Ages called obedience we of to-day call service. Where it was once thought "democratic" to volunteer in defence of the nation, we now know it to be more truly in accordance with free institutions to have universal service. The time may come when even women realize that, in its place, the spirit of service is not ignoble. It was a maiden in advance of her sex who said, "Promise to obey a man? I could promise to obey anything, and do it. But to love and honor till death do us part—to promise that is beyond the power of any woman!"

When to Stop Hating Germans.

War-Morality is morally touched by emotion, says a writer in the New Statesman (London), exhibiting a touch of Matthew Arnold. He is desisting on the virtues of hating the Germans while the war was on, and the difficulty, not to say irksomeness, of going on hating men that the war is over. He wonders how we are going to cherish this emotion "now that peace has brought us relaxation." The same problem is taken up by a number of our own papers which are optimistic enough to believe that one day the Senate will allow us a state of peace with Germany. Since the British are always actuated by a sense of duty, they are naturally anxious concerning their present duty in the matter of hating the Germans. Cynics, says the writer, declare to be "an easy-going" man, and that "the history of the war refutes them." "The war neither began nor ended in hatred, in the course of it, British and German soldiers even spent a merry Christmas together till the authorities gave strict orders that such a thing must never happen again. Man is a social animal, and an instinct to fraternize with those with whom he comes in contact. He enjoys, besides, a great variety of moods—sentimental, critical, hostile, pitiful, vindictive, tolerant, cruel, kind. His hatreds last no longer than his grand passions. He does not like to live at such high tension. He leaves such exhausting emotions to the heroes of tragedies. All he himself asks is a little comfort, a little friendly conversation, and to be allowed to live at peace.

"Everybody enjoys an occasional outburst of hatred. To-day one may hate one's grocer; to-morrow, it will be the cook; the day after, it will be the young man who jostles one getting on to the bus; the day after for a good many little hatreds of this kind. They last hardly longer than a cigarette or a sentimental song, and their effect is no more serious. Suppose, however, the Archbishop of Canterbury or some other moralist were to call on you and assure you that it was your duty to go on hating the cook for ever and ever—that you must hate her sitting and hate her standing, hate her by night and hate her by day, hate her in the kitchen and hate her in the street, hate her at living and hate her dead—would you feel that he had let you in for the most terrible punishment. To have to hate the same person all the time is to have an eagle devouring your liver while you are still alive. Hatred is tolerable only if it can find a constant variety of objects. Otherwise, it becomes a monomania, a fixed idea. There could be no sterner discipline for the human spirit than its subjection to such a monomania."

This newer kind of statesman risks the charge of levity in pressing even further a point that we often uppermost during the war in the case of those who saw nothing but folly in wishing to kill a man to whom they had never been introduced. "How much more difficult to go on hating a whole people whom you practically do not know!" The writer finds one Herculean spirit, however:

"Satan, in 'Paradise Lost,' is the only example of immortal hate without compromise that one can remember, and we can not all be Satans. Our good humor betrays us, or our common sense, or some other of the drab regiment of the virtues. We met a British soldier the other day buying chocolate and coffee-beans to take out to the Germans in whose house he is billeted in Cologne. Most of us are like that. We put pleasure before duty, and we abandon the loftiest purpose in order to perform some childish act of kindness. If our Cabinet Ministers were not made of sterner stuff, we should probably by this time be allowing German women and children to be fed. The thought of a child holding out its thin arms and waiting in its hunger, so far from causing us pleasure, almost causes us a stab at the heart. What restraints we are—fably recreants! We are no good at hating.

"None the less, duty must be done even if it is at the cost of our finer feelings. It must be done, even if it is at the cost of our pockets. And we can not expect to go on hating the Germans without our pockets suffering. Obviously, we can not trade with people we deeply loathe, and so we are bound to lose one of the great markets of the world to those less morally advanced nations who are willing to trade with Germany. Our loss will, fortunately, be France's and America's gain. We have no wish to criticize friendly nations, but we are afraid it must be admitted that in every country except our own the passion of self-interest is stronger than the passion of hate. What other nation besides our own will willingly impoverish itself for the sake of an abstract people?"

Papers like the Brooklyn Eagle and the Springfield Republican bid us lay aside our wrath. The British editor who recommends his fellow editors to stop writing of "Huns" and Boches does so on the score of politeness, and The Eagle insists "we can allow no one to exceed us in politeness." The Republican finds it time to begin cultivating good will: "Now that the war has been won,

Dominion Gov. Diver Almost Lost His Breath

Could Hardly Digest Anything—Gains Fifteen Pounds—Tanlac Was a Godsend to Me." He Says.

"Well sir, this Tanlac has overcome my troubles completely, and I have gained exactly fifteen pounds in weight since I commenced taking it a short time ago," said John Gregoire who lives at 4 McDonald street, Halifax, while talking to a Tanlac representative the other day.
Mr. Gregoire is well known in and around Halifax, and for the last thirty-eight years has been employed by the Dominion government as expert marine diver.
"Further about his experience with Tanlac, he said: "For the past three or four years I have suffered something awful with stomach troubles and indigestion. During the entire time my appetite was very poor, and what little I did manage to eat just seemed to form into a lump in my stomach, and would cause me all sorts of pain and suffering for hours afterwards. I would have the worst sort of cramping spells and very often I would be so nauseated I could hardly retain what I ate. Then there were times when gas would form so bad that I would almost lose my breath from it, and often at night I would have to get out of bed and walk the floor in order to get a good breath. I was badly constipated all the time and had to take a laxative nearly every day. All my strength and energy just seemed to leave me completely, and I finally got so weak and run-down I was hardly able to do any work at all."

"Then I decided to give Tanlac a trial as I had heard so much about the good it was doing other people, and it took only one bottle of medicine that has done me any good at all. I have taken six bottles of this wonderful medicine so far, and now I can eat and sleep as well as ever, and I never have any sign of indigestion or sour stomach afterwards. I sleep like a log every night now, and can take as much hard work in a day as the best of them. My entire system has been greatly built up, and I have gotten back all I lost both in weight and strength. These awful cramping spells are a thing of the past, too, and I am never bothered with constipation any more. In fact, Tanlac has put me square on my feet again, and I just feel fine all the time. I never lose an opportunity to say a good word for Tanlac, for it has certainly been a godsend to me."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Comfords, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.—adv.

the prime need is to get rid as quickly as possible of the war spirit. We shall not have a happy or tranquil world till the surplus stock of hatred has been scrapped along with the reserves of T. N. T. and poison-gas. In war hatred has no doubt a function, but even in war time it is a terrible corrosive, and if not carefully eliminated when war is over it is a festering poison. It tends, moreover, to spread. Everywhere in Europe we may see symptoms of violence, unreason, acrimony, and suspicion which are doing harm, and which can not be cured till the bitterness inseparable from a great war subsides.
"At best this is a slow process, but this is a reason the more why it should begin at once. It is a process to be helped on rather than retarded. Fortunately there are points of contact where healing will be rapid. During the war neutrals were roughly used by both sides, and were treated with some contumely; it can now be seen to be a fortunate thing that a few states were able to remain neutral—during the period of slow reconciliation, their services will be of value. It is fortunate, too, that the greater part of the belligerents have but a limited stock of animosity. In some cases an old feud has been erased by the destruction of one party to it. New quarrels in plenty have sprung from the disruption of the Hapsburg Dual Monarchy, but hatred for Austria-Hungary is a thing of the past. It is highly probable, also, that the general hatred inspired by the Germany of William II. will disappear much more rapidly than is now realized. Most Americans would find it difficult long to retain animosity against a well-behaved and thoroughly democratic Germany."

Napoleon Was Offered An Air Service.

The great progress made in aviation during the last few years recalls the fact that as long ago as in 1796 a Frenchman named Campanes drew up plans, which he laid before Napoleon, for the making of an aerial ship to accommodate 200 persons, and which he claimed could be directed to any point of the compass.

The inventor's letter deserves reproduction: "I myself will be your pilot. You can thus, without any danger hover above the fleets of enemies, jealous of our happiness, and thunder against them like a new Jupiter, by throwing perpendicular downwards firebrands made of a substance which will kindle only by the contact and percussion at the end of its fall, but which will be impossible to extinguish. Or, perhaps, you will think it more prudent to begin at once by forcing the British Cabinet to capitulate, which you may easily do as you have it in your power to set fire to the city of London, or to any of the maritime towns of England."

Campanes assured Napoleon his airship could travel from Paris to London, destroy the place, and return to Paris within twenty-four hours.

Napoleon refused to countenance the scheme, however. And it is interesting to note in this regard, that in the early days of the war aeroplanes were used, both by the Allies and the enemy solely for scouting purposes, and the pilots of both sides exchanged greetings when they passed each other. It was not until a German pilot shot at a British that each side took to arming their own aircraft, and battles in the air became inevitable.

Spends Half Hour Among the Babies.

Toronto, August 26.—Babies were the chief interest of the Prince of Wales when he visited the Toronto General Hospital to-day. The tinker the babies, the great was his interest. Time limitations and other engagements went by the board when His Royal Highness looked at the little kiddies. Sir Joseph Flavell, chairman of the board of governors of the hospital who was escorting the Prince, looked at his watch after the heir to the throne had spent his allotted twenty minutes in the institution. Sir Joseph feared that the time was up and gently intimated that fact. But someone had mentioned to the Prince that he had not yet seen the "babies under glass." The little ones prematurely born and being nursed and brought up to normal health and strength by the incubator process. That settled it.

"We have time enough for this and," said the Prince, "at least we'll take time."

The Prince was much interested in a two-pound mite of an infant and learned that it had a good chance of growing into full manhood. The Prince also visited the hospital for sick children, a visit which had not been programmed or announced. There was a pleasing incident in the hospital for sick children. It seems that the Prince had purchased a lot of toys and sent them to the boys in the wards. The little lads were all standing at attention when the Prince entered, and broke out in a chorus of "thank you so much for the toys." Then the Prince seemed to blush a bit under the ruddiness of his cheeks and he replied that he was glad the toys had pleased them.

A New Medical Discovery (?)

Influenza and pneumonia are no more to be feared than a boll on the back of the neck, according to Dr. Charles H. Duncan, one of the founders of the Volunteer Hospital, who, in an address in New York recently before the convention of the Allied Medical Association of America described his method of combating Spanish Influenza by means of "immunizing a patient to his own poison." Upon 246 patients, ill with pneumonia and influenza last winter, Dr. Duncan said he had used the treatment without a single fatality or any complications. Briefly the physician said, "I take one drachm of mucus from the infected area and pasteurize it in one ounce of filtered water, where it remains several hours. One cubic centimetre of this toxine, injected sub-cutaneously, will effect a spontaneous cure of Spanish influenza, pneumonia, catarrh, or any similar localized infection. It will stop any cough except tuberculosis in less than 24 hours." Dr. George F. Laidlow, professor of the History of Medicine and Diagnosis at Flower Hospital, in discussing the Duncan Method, said that "the discoverer had solved a problem that had been germinating in medicine for 2,000 years. Dr. Duncan's work marks the conclusion of Pasteur, Koch and Wright and is a decided step forward in the regular development of bacterial therapy."

Dr. Duncan said that by taking the poison from a boll and subjecting it to his process and injecting the sterilized product into a patient's body, he not only cured him at the boll but rendered him immune against a repetition of such afflictions. —Presbyterian Banner.
