The Largest Private Zoo

Englishman Has Teams Of Queer Kinds, from Pigs to Lambs—Ostriches are Unreliable on Public Highway.

Not only has Anthony H. Wingfield, of Amphil House, Bedford, England, the largest private zoo in the world, but it is a unique one, too, inasmuch as it is the only zoo that may be called a riding zoo, for Mr. Wingfield has trained every animal in it to riding and driving, and he may be seen about his estate riding his big fat pigs, shaggy sheep, camels, zebras, llamas, sacred Hindoo cows, reindeer, ostrich, Barbary rams, etc. The creatures are so perfectly trained that they are ridden daily along the main roads and are unmoved by motors and carriages. They carry Mr. Wingfield or the keepers with ease and willingness, and are as docile as horses. Mr. Wingfield, according to the Columbus Dispatch, prefers a zebra to a horse any day, and when he wishes he mounts a llama, which passes everything on the road. The ostriches are equally swift, but Mr. Wingfield finds that they are unreliable on the public roads and rides them only in his grounds. The ostriches are, however, amazingly well broken to bridle and carriage, and are far more tractable than those creatures usually are; in fact, he has them so well trained that women can ride them safely, and Lady Moya Campbell rides one of his ostriches frequently.

SPECIAL CARRIAGES BUILT.

Mr. Wingfield not only rides but drives his sheep and hogs. He has special carriages built for the different animals, and so confident is he in his hogs steeds that he permits children to drive them in a little wagon, not only about the estate but on the public roads. The hogs are droll-looking creatures in harness, and create a genuine sensation on the road.

In winter Mr. Wingfield drives a reindeer sledge and also rides his reindeer cross-country. Another favorite winter team is dogs, which are northern dogs, powerful in strength and very beautiful in form. They are harnessed to either sledge or cart, according to the weather, and are capable of making great speed.

The animals of Mr. Wingfield's zoo are all tame and gentle and may be handled by women and children. Most of them have been bred on the place under Mr. Wingfield's care and are hardy and perfect. He has made a close study of their diet and habits and thus is enabled to keep them in perfect condition. He has ten keepers on the place, including Hindoos, Africans and Arabs, who are experts in their knowledge of caring for certain native animals.

The animals are given a great deal of freedom and exercise and are turned out into the vast park every day to wander where they will to graze freely.

THIS REMARKABLE ZOO, is the outcome of Mr. Wingfield's agricultural ambitions. He is an ardent lover of farm life in its most scientific aspects and started in at first to breed and domesticate pedigree goats and donkeys. From this he made other endeavors with other animals and found the work so engaging that he has kept on adding one kind of animal after another and putting into practice his theories of domesticating them. He believes that we unnecessarily limit ourselves in our useful domestic animals and that a much wider field to usefulness and pleasure is open to us by domesticating various strange beasts that heretofore have been employed only for exhibition purposes. So far as he has proven his theories to be correct, for he not only rides and drives his animals for pleasure but many of them are used for service on the farm and show great strength and endurance and adaptability. The reindeer are powerful creatures for drawing loads, as are the Northern dogs also, and they are quick and eager in their movements.

Mr. Wingfield has made an especial study of the Shetland pony and has been very successful in breeding and raising them. The common mistake that people make with the diet of these ponies is to feed them too highly. They require the most hardy fare, and anything but such fare is detrimental to them. In their native islands their diet is extremely frugal, being chiefly of seaweed, and they are forced to rough it nine months of the year unsheltered from the cold and wet. And in view of this fact the slightest pampering upsets them and destroys their health.

Mr. Wingfield has bred toy Shetlands and has reduced the size of even the smallest of native ponies to a considerable degree. Mr. Wingfield has exhibited these little ponies at many shows and has WON INNUMERABLE PRIZES. He also exhibits many of his other trained animals at various agricultural shows and especially his farm animals at work. These have created a great deal of interest. His fancy animals, such as his zebras, have been very interesting to people, and zebras will doubtless become the fashion. His ostriches have been greatly admired also. His great successes at leading shows with his rare knowledge of animals in general, made him an invaluable member of the London zoological council.

Lord Walter Rothschild has a private zoo at Twining Park, in Surrey, but with the exception of his team of four trained zebras, which he drives about the country hitched to a four-in-hand coach, he has not subjected any of his animals to a system of training for riding or driving, and Mr. Wingfield is unique in the world at this sort of thing.

Army Worm Occupies Military Camp Ground

Devours Fields of Rye, Oats and Barley.

St. Catharines, July 24.—Notwithstanding the belief that the numerous watercourses in the Niagara district would keep the army worm, the pest has arrived. It has become evident in large numbers in the vicinity of Niagara-on-the-Lake, and is now heading away on the military camp grounds. In Louth township it has so far done the greatest amount of damage, a field of rye being wiped out in a short time. Its operations in Louth are being conducted chiefly on the farms of Ulysses Tuftord, Edwin Brett and Walter Laidman.

EXTENSIVE IN HASTINGS.

Belleville, July 24.—The army worm has made its appearance in many parts of Hastings County. Reports from different sections show that its operations are very extensive. Considerable damage has already been done, but some are hoping that this is the end of the pest which has come upon this community. The main object of attack is corn, the leaves of which it strips with great rapidity. The worm has also invaded a number of barley fields. The pest has been discovered as far north as Madoc. Reports have been received here from Sidney, Thurlow and Tynding townships and the vicinity of Shannonville and the neighborhood of Belleville.

DURHAM NOW HAS IT.

Newcastle, July 24.—Durham County, it is now announced, is also infested by the army worm, the pest having been located there by the County Department of Agriculture.

SIXTEEN YEARS SINCE LAST VISIT.

Comber, July 24.—The army worm has made big inroads in the field crops of this district, especially on the farm of Mr. J. S. Ainslie, a mile north of the village, one of the largest in the Comber district, and what is true of Mr. Ainslie's farm is true of many other farms in the same neighborhood. It is about sixteen years since the last visitation of the army worm in this district.

UP IN GREY COUNTY.

Owen Sound, July 24.—Millions of army worms in Derby township and spreading rapidly is the latest from the farms in the vicinity of Kilsyth, where they have already devastated several oat fields. The original body on Thompson's farm divided into two separate bodies, one going north, one east and the other west, and the invasion of all the neighboring farms is now under way. The farmers are using lye and Paris green to check the inroads of the hordes. Vast numbers have been destroyed, but there seems to be no visible diminution.

Exports of Pulp Decrease

More Pulp and Paper now Manufactured in Canada.

According to the annual bulletin on pulp-wood consumption issued by the Forestry Branch at Ottawa, the consumption of pulp-wood by the Canadian pulp-mills has increased by 28.1 per cent in the past year. The manufacture of pulp has increased and the exports to the United States, Great Britain and China have decreased. While the imports have also so far exceeded the export of raw timber part of the total consumption of pulp.

Canada still exports almost half of the pulpwood she produces in the raw state, although these exports are being checked by regulations enacted in the different Provinces which forbid the export of raw, or unmanufactured, timber cut on Crown lands. The recent legislation in the Province of Quebec which also forbids the export of raw timber from lands granted to railway companies will tend to further decrease this economic waste. Altogether, 48 firms operate 65 pulp-mills in Canada. Quebec has 34 of these mills; Ontario, 17; Nova Scotia, 4; New Brunswick, 4; and British Columbia, 3. In addition to these active mills, reports were received at the Forestry Branch from 10 firms whose mills were idle and 5 firms with mills under construction.

To Make Hudson Bay And Strait Safe

Marine and Naval Departments Locating Wireless Stations, Charting the Waters and Planning Lighthouses and Harbors.—One a Rally Port.

Ottawa, July 24.—The Marine and Naval Departments are engaged on a big program of work this summer trying to make Hudson Bay and Strait safe for navigation. Three wireless stations in the Strait and at the entrance to the bay are being located, so as to give a continuous line of communication from Port Nelson and Port Churchill to the Atlantic. The actual construction of the stations, however, will not be begun until next year.

The charting of Hudson's Strait is being done by the Steamer Acadia, while other Government vessels are taking soundings and mapping the harbors at Port Nelson, Port Churchill and at the mouth of the Nottaway River. The Government Steamer Minto, which left Halifax yesterday for Hudson Bay, carried materials for lighthouse construction. Two lighthouses are to be commenced this year, one on each side of the entrance to Port Nelson, while another one will be built on a newly-charted shoal some miles out in the bay.

The charting being done at the mouth of the Nottaway River is preparatory to the construction of the proposed railway from there southeast to the National Transcontinental, in connection with the alternative route from Port Nelson across the northern end of James Bay and thence by rail to Montreal.

The Government plans to build the southern half of this line from the National Transcontinental to Montreal, and an appropriation of $1,000,000 was passed last session for preliminary surveys. The Clergue syndicate had originally planned to build the whole line, but according to present plans the Government itself will shoulder the cost of the portion between Montreal and the National Transcontinental.

Cab Driver Fined For Obstructing Auto

First Prosecution of its Kind Under N. S. Motor Vehicle Act Results in Conviction.

The first case of its kind under a section of the N. S. Motor Vehicle Act dealing with obstruction of auto vehicle on a public road came before Stipendiary McLeod, in Halifax, last week and resulted in conviction and fine of the defendant a hack driver. The complaint was made that a party of three men in an automobile coming in the St. Margaret's Bay road and having business engagements which required their early presence in the City was obstructed and delayed by the actions of the hack driver, who, it was charged, contrary to the provisions of the Act, did not as soon as practicable turn to the left of the road so as to allow free passage on the right for a certain motor vehicle having then and there overtaken said two horses and vehicle, but on the contrary, wilfully and persistently, and contrary to the provisions of said statute for a distance of over seven miles wilfully and deliberately obstructed the said highway, preventing the automobile from passing by the horse and vehicle on such roadway.

The evidence of the three gentlemen who were in the auto sustained the charge complained of and the magistrate convicted the accused and fined him $7.50 and costs, about $12.50 in all. Counsel for the Automobile Association intimated that it was the intention to prosecute hereafter parties violating the law by interfering with automobiles on the road.

Ottawa a Manufacturing City

Mr. Editor:—It has been some time since I attempted to write anything for "The Monitor," but today I thought I would send you a line.

This time I will attempt to show that Ottawa has claims to recognition besides being the centre of government. I shall attempt to show how we stand as a manufacturing city. To begin with, Ottawa is the fifth largest manufacturing city in Canada, and new industries are springing up from time to time. We possess some of the largest manufacturing industries not only in Canada, but in the world. For instance, the Eddy paper and pulp factory is the largest in the world. The J. R. Booth Lumber and Pulp industry is also the largest in the world. He employs about 2500 men in his mills and this year he will send over 4,000 to the lumber woods. Of course Ottawa is famed as the seat of Government of the Dominion of Canada and as one of the most beautiful cities on the continent, but it has other claims that are often overlooked.

The output of Ottawa's many busy factories is very varied. Fianos that are known from coast to coast, and that have a place in the majority of the homes in the towns of the Ottawa Valley are made here. Glass and chinaware, that is famed for its quality is manufactured in Ottawa for distribution throughout the continent, and the citizens of many of the towns and cities of Canada ride in street cars, made in the Ottawa Car Companies' shops, one of the largest in Canada.

As a direct result of the many power industries there is a large output of electric incidentals. Ottawa plants are extensively operated for the manufacture of electrical fixtures. There is a ready market for these materials in the outside world, and the activities of these companies have heralded Ottawa far and wide as a power centre and distributing station for electrical appliances.

Among the factories Ottawa has many foundries and kindred industries. It is a city prolific in these adventures. Much now might be written re this subject, but sufficient for the present.

I think I mentioned in a previous letter ere the Provincial elections were run that one of the main planks in Mr. Rowell's platform was "Abolish the Bar," and I think I mentioned in that letter that I did not pin much faith in it, and it resulted as I thought then, I verily believe had he stood out boldly against bilingual schools, he would have done much better. He may know better next time.

The war scare is causing much uneasiness among our citizens and we cannot gainsay the fact that the outlook is ominous. It is impossible to form the faintest idea what the result might be should all those great powers become engaged in a life and death struggle. It is to be earnestly hoped that it may be averted in the interest of humanity.

The weather in this part of Canada is ideal for gathering in the crops and outside the Ottawa Valley where there has not been sufficient rain and where there will be quite a light hay crop. The crops in the other parts of the Province will be good. Am glad also to learn the crop prospect throughout Nova Scotia is excellent. Ottawa at the present time has a large number of tourists, both from the Old Country and the United States.

Now Mr. Editor fearing I am making this article a little too long, I will cease scribbling.

Yours,
H. W. M.

A Native of Paradise Passes Away at Hyde Park

WILLIAM MELBOURNE SAUNDERS

(Hyde Park Gazette Times, July 23)
William Melbourne Saunders, aged 67, who had been a resident of Hyde Park for 25 years, his home being at 73 Arlington St., died last Thursday evening at the home of his sister, Mrs. Herbert Daniels, Belmont, N. H.

He had been ill for several months and on Saturday, July 11, went to the home of his sister to recuperate. He began to grow worse and notified his family that he would start for home on Thursday morning, but was unable to do so on account of his condition, being afflicted with acute indigestion. He failed rapidly during the day, mention of which was telegraphed to his family. A son, Bernard M. Saunders, immediately started for Belmont and arrived about a half an hour after his father had passed away.

Mr. Saunders was born in Paradise West, N. S., Dec. 23, 1846, and came to Hyde Park, Sept. 21, 1889, previously living in Boston. He was a public accountant, his office being at 15 State St., Boston. He was a member of the Saunders-Sanders Family Association, of which he was the first president, holding the office for three years, and the treasurer at the time of his death.

He leaves a widow, three sons, Frederick W., Bernard M., and Ernest H., and a daughter, Miss L. Maude Saunders. He is also survived by two brothers, Samuel Rufus Saunders of 81 West Glenwood Ave., and Wallace Saunders, of Paradise West, N. S., and a sister, Mrs. Herbert Daniels, of Belmont, N. H.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at his late residence, many friends of the family attending. The officiating clergymen were Rev. Arthur Ketchum, rector of Christ Episcopal church, and Rev. William H. Dewart, a former rector.

There was singing by Miss Margaret I. Townsend, the selections, being "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me." The floral tributes were numerous and handsome. Interment was in Fairview cemetery. The pallbearers were Harlan Chesley of Lynn, cousin of Mr. Saunders; Geo. L. Reynolds, O. P. Margeson and William Flett.

King George has conferred the honorary knighthood of the Grand Cross of the Royal Victoria order upon William Marconi, the wireless telegraph inventor.

A Night in the British House of Commons

(By Lindsay Crawford)

To anyone with a sense of intuition, the atmosphere of the British House of Commons breeds premonitions. One could feel something was in the air when Parliament reassembled after the Whitsuntide recess. Some of the leading spirits had cancelled Parliamentary and press engagements at Walton Heath, where the nimble Chancellor of the Exchequer plays with fate in bunkers that serve to remind him of the political obstacles which, hitherto, it has been his good fortune to surmount. Long before the House resumed business members were to be seen in twos and threes in lobbies and smoke-rooms, seeking by the clash of the individual hopes and apprehensions to lighten the impenetrable darkness beyond. Call it what you will—magnetism or intuition—the highly-sensitive or parliamentarian to gauge with unerring accuracy the drift of public opinion, to interpret signs and portents on the political horizon, and to translate these elusive, indefinable impressions into definite policy and action, is a gift from the gods that distinguishes superman from man, statesman from politician. There was a magnetic atmosphere in the House on the Monday of which I write. Groups were meeting in conference in private committee-rooms, and the faces of leaders wore an anxious expression as they walked up and down. Something was brewing.

THE ULSTER KEY TO IRELAND.

An old friend in the Press Gallery had just arrived from Walton Heath. His partner, a prominent Irish member, had to cancel an engagement with him on the golf links. I had met this member during the Easter recess in Belfast, and now sought him in the House. Looking much younger than his years, possessed of a most attractive personality, I was again shaking hands with Mr. Joseph Devlin, the member who had driven a wedge into the centre of Unionist homogeneity in Belfast, and who at this crisis is the man toward whom the eyes of all Irishmen turn. For it is this forceful personality who holds the key of the political situation. No move can be made without consulting him. He represents the unconquerable hostility of Nationalist Ulster to exclusion.

A DAY OF EXCITING INCIDENTS.

Rarely has it been the good fortune of visitors to the House to hear on the same day so many front bench men taking part in debate. There was a tense feeling inside the Chamber. Every seat was occupied in expectation of the statement by the Prime Minister. Outside, Londoners were indulging in an orgy of enthusiastic demonstrations as the King and Queen of Denmark drove through the flag-festooned streets to the Guildhall. No sign of this enthusiasm was visible at the Parliament Buildings.

FROM ULSTER TO WESTMINSTER

As I took my seat I recognized in the well-groomed individual leaning over the clock the familiar figure of the Marquis of Londonderry. On the front Opposition bench, resting his feet on the table sat Sir Edward Carson, dark and inscrutable of countenance. The Tory fight against the Parliament act had been transferred for the moment from Ulster to Westminster. In serried ranks the Tories had mustered all their forces. Mr. Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson were engaged in earnest conversation. Later, other front-bench men—Mr. Balfour, Mr. Walter Long and Mr. Austen Chamberlain—sat down beside the Ulster leader and discussed the situation, Balfour, despatched, emphasizing his observations with clenched fist. The storm was gathering. Opposite, with feet resting on the table, sat Mr. Lloyd George, hated and feared as few men have experienced since the days of Hampden and Cromwell. The Prime Minister, Mr. Winston Churchill and Sir Edward Grey were the only absentees on the Government bench. The Guildhall banquet to visiting Royalty claimed their attendance elsewhere. Mr. John Redmond occupied his customary seat, a smile of triumph flickering across his strong face, as of a man who after many reverses and disappointments was at length coming into his own. In front of him "Honest John" Dillon—one of the greatest parliamentarians in the House—sat with crossed legs and folded arms, his melancholy caste of countenance forboding disaster as he and Devlin and the Irish leader engaged in earnest consultation.

PEACE OR WAR?

The Prime Minister took his seat a few minutes before Mr. Speaker called upon him to move the resolutions in his name, the gist of which was the refusal of the Government to consider suggestions during the last stages of the Irish, Welsh and spurot voters' bills. Mr. Asquith spoke in much lower tones than usual, a fact officially recorded in the Hansard report. His references to Government intentions regarding the Home Rule bill were almost inaudible in the Press Gallery. Opposition leaders were discussing the new situation that had arisen. Sir Edward Carson leaned forward, his head resting on his hands, in deep thought. Was it peace or war? The House anxiously waited.

MR. BONAR LAW AS A DEBATER.

Mr. Bonar Law followed. As a debater he has few equals in the House. Without a note of any kind, he leaned indolently on the despatch box and made a most fortuitous, logical and telling speech, concentrating his attack, not on the bills before the House, but on the Parliament act. His supporters cheered his telling points. The great issue was joined—Peers, Pri-leige, Church Army Landlordism arrayed against Democracy. There was no concealing the joy of the die-hards as the real object of the Opposition, of the Carson campaign in Ulster, of all the attacks on the Government, was revealed in all its brazened nudity by Mr. Bonar Law.

BALFOUR'S SCOTTISH BLOOD.

Mr. Balfour fought a rear-guard action with the dogged determination and unscrupulous contempt for the voice of the electors for which he was noted in coercion days at Dublin Castle. His willow form swayed rhythmically to the encouraging cheers of the back-benches. Not peace but the sword! It is said a Scotsman never forgets nor forgives. Mr. Balfour has not forgotten that he was responsible for a policy which aimed at killing the demand for Home Rule in Ireland. The mere mention of Home Rule is to suggest defeat. And defeat to a Scotsman is a word that has no place in his vocabulary.

Mr. Balfour will go down fighting. It was an unstatesmanlike speech, as events proved. A generous attempt on the part of the Prime Minister to effect a peaceable settlement of the Ulster difficulty was met with the report that the proffered amending bill was an admission by the Government, not only of the failure of the Parliament act, but of the imperfections of a home rule bill which the House was called upon to pass. The dishonesty of this line of argument was ruthlessly exposed by Mr. Lloyd George in a speech which led to uproarious scenes.

LLOYD GEORGE AND THE CECILS

Alert and confident, the Chancellor of the Exchequer advanced briskly to the table, and without preface opened fire on Mr. Balfour and the Opposition. Couched upon a back bench, with hat tilted over his nose, sat one of his noisiest and most aggressive interrupters. "The noble Lord is more than usually offensive," interjected the Chancellor, as he pointed his finger at Lord Robert Cecil. Then was revealed the true spirit of the Opposition—the insolent ar-

Siberian Feudences

On the lower Amur River in Eastern Siberia, and along the Channel of Tartary, the cold in midwinter becomes intense. A temperature of sixty degrees below zero is not uncommon. When the Russians came to occupy the country they were confronted with the serious problem of protecting themselves from such inclement conditions. Now, especially in cities and larger towns, brick and stone are utilized to a considerable extent, so that the frost can be kept out; but even yet, the peasantry and villagers must depend on wood, as was the case with all at first.

BALFOUR IN ANGRY MOOD.

The storm again broke loose on the back bench. Mr. Lloyd George charged Mr. Balfour with making a speech which was a direct incitement to civil war in Ulster. Who could doubt the truth of this who had listened to Mr. Balfour's bitter threats and invectives? But who was Lloyd George that he dared to brand the Cecils? For at least three minutes pandemonium reigned supreme. Mr. Balfour, Sir Edward Carson, Mr. Bonar Law—all the leaders and back-benches—yelled across the table at the unyielding Chancellor, who, to the crushing burden of an equitable gradation of taxation that loughed the pockets of the feudal families, now added insult by a scathing exposure of the dishonest tactics by which the noble lords and village squires hoped to destroy the power of the Commons through the defeat of the Government on false issues. Mr. Speaker restored quiet, and calmly expressed the opinion that were the Chancellor permitted to finish his argument it would be shown there was no infraction of Parliamentary rules.

CHANCELLOR STANDS TO HIS GUNS.

Did the Welshman yield? Not an inch of ground did he concede to his angry opponents. Three times, amid hostile interjections from the Opposition, he pressed home the charge that Mr. Balfour's speech had endangered prospects of that amicable settlement of the Irish question which Tory leaders had led the Government to believe they were anxious to secure. But that was when public opinion in England demanded the punishment of two Ulster M. P.'s for gun-running! The poor deluded volunteers in the Ulster villages may drill and sweat and fight and die for what they believe to be a just cause, but their leaders sue for mercy in the Commons when the shadow of the jail menaces their freedom.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS.

There were two touching incidents during the debate. On one side of the House the Chancellor of the Exchequer exulted in the knowledge that after generations of hard, persistent struggle inside and outside, of Parliament—"without any threats of civil war, either," exclaimed Mr. Lloyd George, amid resounding cheers—the Welsh people were at last to be freed from the domination of an alien Church. On the other side, below the gangway, Mr. John Redmond, in a voice faltering with deep emotion, recounted the sacrifices and hardships endured by the Irish people for their rights. They also were about to enter upon the threshold of a hard-earned victory.

RAMPANT DIE-HARDISM.

Threats to re-endow the Welsh Church and to repeal home rule rang in my ears as I passed out. The poverty of constructive thought on the Tory benches is as fatal to Unionist success at the polls as divided leadership.

CROMWELL'S SWORD UNSHEATHED.

As I emerged into the outer lobby I caught a glimpse of Gladstone's beetling brows and inflexible mouth as from his marble pedestal he turned to catch the sounds of the dying conflict within. Outside in the gathering gloom of a London night the stern figure of Cromwell seemed to lean more heavily upon his sword. As I glanced back I noticed that the sword which the Protector wrested from the nerveless grasp of the usurping Stuart was unsheathed. Was it an omen?

Generous in Another's Trousers

Two curates, one good-natured, the other opposite lived together. The good-natured one went out for a walk and met a poor man who asked him for assistance. The curate said he was only a poor man himself, but if he had a coin in his pocket the man should have it. Lo and behold, when he pulled his hand out of his pocket he showed half a crown which he did not know about, and gave it to the man, thinking he had done an act of kindness. When he got back to his lodgings he told his fellow-curate of his experience. His fellow-curate heard the story and then said, "You need not be surprised at all; you have got my trousers on!"—Western Mail.

Siberian Feudences

In building houses of wood, sawed lumber is seldom used except for floors and casings. Most buildings are constructed of solid logs, as large as can be conveniently procured. The lower side of each log is hollowed out to fit the natural convex upper surface of the one below. As each log is placed in position an inch or two of moss is spread along its top before the next one is laid on. This prevents any air from passing between them. As the timbers are put up green or freshly cut, there is considerable shrinkage; but the moss effectually excludes the entrance of air.

Two sets of sashes, about four inches apart, are framed in each window. The space between them is packed at the bottom with cotton or ashes, and strips of paper are pasted over all the cracks. The floors are made of boards, sawed or split out, usually loosely laid and not nailed down. In coldest weather the only ingress for fresh air, aside from what may get in when doors are opened, is through cracks where these boards have shrunk apart in drying. Outside the windows are shutters made of heavy boards. At night these are secured by iron bars, one end of which hinges to a rod passing through the wall and clinched on the inside; the other end is fastened by a large bolt which also passes to the inside and is firmly clamped. Such precaution is necessary as a protection against escaped convicts, who hide during the day in the brush, especially in the vicinity of towns and villages, and prowl around at night on the search for a careless fastener or a person apparently turning their backs who is so incautious as to be out alone.

Heat is obtained from a brick or iron structure at one side or in one corner of the room. This has two doors; one at the bottom, where wood is put in and ashes taken out; the other, very small, at the top, opened when the smoke has escaped through the chimney and the first is reduced to a mass of glowing coals, to allow the heated air to pass out into the room. Some of these stoves, of modern manufacture, are of iron, resembling in appearance upright boilers; they take up but little floor space and extend to the ceiling. Most of them, however, are of brick, not more than four or five feet high, but occupying sometimes fully one-fourth of the room in which they are placed. Those of the latter style are always flat on top, and in the poorer houses the entire family pile up on them to sleep away the long winter nights.

The aborigines do not adopt Russian methods of building. For a winter dwelling, a space is marked off as large as may be needed for the requirements of the family. The earth within this area is cleared out to a depth of about two feet, perhaps a little more or less, according to the nature of the soil. Heavy posts are set closely around the margin of the excavated area, with poles lashed at right angles to them to form a wattle; mud is thickly plastered over this, inside and out. The roof is similarly wattled, and covered with mud on top. Earth is then banked up against the wall, almost to the eaves, and spread quickly to the roof, to exclude the cold and prevent water from seeping through. So long as a fire is kept up, the interior is warm and dry.

As the earth on top and around the outside yields to the weather, it is renewed, so long as the timbers resist age and moisture, or until the people decide to move elsewhere. In time the wood disappears and there is left only an embanked pit. These house-pits abound all along the rivers. Every stage may be found, from the building recently erected to the timber-covered, trash-filled shallow holes where a house stood, possibly a thousand years ago.—Gardner Fowler, in Harper's Weekly Advertiser.

Friends frequently do not disappoint you as much as you do yourself—if you only know it.

One Hundred Years of Peace

The Canadian Peace Association has appointed several of its members to represent it on an International Committee, whose work it is to forward all necessary arrangements for the forthcoming celebration of a hundred years of peace between the United States and Great Britain.

The treaty of Ghent was signed by the representatives of these nations on Christmas Eve, 1814, and went into complete operation on Feb. 17th, 1815.
As Feb. 14th, 1915, will be the Sabbath nearest to the last mentioned date, it has been decided to set apart this Sabbath for special Thanksgiving services in all the churches of the United States and the British Empire, commemorative of the blessings which have come to these two nations from a hundred years of peace.

It is proposed to erect in each of the three Capitols, London, Washington and Ottawa, a monument suitable to the occasion; also an Archway at the border of British Columbia and the state of Washington; also a bridge or bridges across the Niagara River, Water gates between Windsor Ont. and Detroit, also monuments on the international boundary at other selected places.

All the Departments of Education in Canada have promised to assist in bringing the Centenary to the especial notice of the children and youth of the schools. Recitations and patriotic songs will be prepared for their use, also pamphlets dealing with various Treaties with the United States, with tableaux and masques depicting the signing of the Treaty of Ghent and other historic events and intended for every school in Canada.

Where towns or villages of the United States and Canada have the same names it is proposed to exchange memorial shields between them; and that competitive essays be prepared among the different grades of the schools.

It is also proposed to select in Canada about one hundred places where special festivities will be held at different times beginning with May 1915 and ending with Sept. 1915. The places selected in Nova Scotia are Amherst, Annapolis Royal, Halifax and Truro;
and if the Councils and citizens so desire, these festivities may also be conducted in Bridgewater and Lunenburg, combined, Glace Bay and Sydney, and New Glasgow, including Stellarton and Westville.

As the town of Niagara is so closely associated with some of the principal events of the war of 1812, and as the location is so favorable for the purpose, it has been suggested to the Committee of the United States that the final celebration might be held there.

His Royal Highness, the Duke of Teck, the Governor General Designate of Canada is Honorary President and the Right Honorable Earl Grey, late Governor General of Canada is the President of the British Committee which is charged with the preparation in England of the Centenary Celebration. In a meeting in the Mansion House, London, Mr. Asquith, Prime Minister, who was the principal speaker, referring to the Educational aspect of the celebration, said, "What could be a better, and more human and fruitful way of celebrating this great centenary than that we should establish in both countries a systematized, organized teaching of these common traditions and this common history, which will lead us both by reverencing and appreciating the examples of the great men whom we share in common, to realize more fully what is the depth and breadth of our common heritage, and our common responsibility in the history of the world. I earnestly commend to you and to the larger public outside the opportunity which this centenary so appropriately provides of commemorating not merely by statues and by other outward memorials, valuable and important as they are, but by the persistent teaching of the essential unity of the British race, the greatest security which history has yet afforded to any two sovereign communities to contribute their share to the permanent pacification of the world."

The British Council has already purchased for £10,000 Selgrave Manor, erected by Lawrence Washington, an ancestor of George Washington in the 16th century, the land covering ten acres having been a gift to him by Henry the VIII.

This property is being converted into a museum and park the charge of which is vested in a Committee to be held in trust for all time.
Sir Robert Borden has intimated the purpose of the Government to set aside $25,000 towards defraying the preliminary expenses incurred in the work of organization.
The Emperor of Germany, the President of France, the Emperor of Austria, the Queen of Holland, the King of Spain, the King of Norway, the King of Sweden, the President of Portugal
the Czar of Bulgaria, the King of Belgium, the Emperor of Japan, the President of China, the King of Montenegro, the President of Chili, the President of Nicaragua and the President of Panama have all sent words of cordial approval and appreciation of the purpose of the centenary.
The desire of those who are at the head of this movement is that it may not only bind the two nations especially interested in the bonds of perpetual peace, but that it may also prove an attractive and potential example to all the nations of the earth.
As the time of the celebration draws nearer fuller information will be furnished of all the different features of this interesting and important event.

Lecture in Methodist Church

A large audience assembled in the lecture room of the Methodist Church on a recent evening to greet the Rev.
W. H. Langille of Annapolis, as an old pastor, and to listen to his address on "How we got our Bible."
Beginning with the Canon of the Jewish Church, the lecturer traced the history down to the Bible as we possess it today in the Authorized and Revised Versions; that history seems clearly to indicate a special Divine Providence protecting from persons who sought to destroy it, and also from others who did not value it, the Book whose leaves, like those of the tree of life, are for the healing of the nations. The information conveyed in the lecture is well calculated to increase our reverence and affection for the Book of Books.

The War Cloud hangs heavily over the whole of Europe. What the issue will be, it is impossible for anyone to predict, although strong hopes are entertained that actual warfare will be confined to a small area of Western Europe. It was reported last week that in view of the alarming conditions, and the fear that Great Britain would be drawn into the vortex of war, the parliamentary leaders had agreed upon a solution of the Ulster difficulty satisfactory to all parties. The report, however, has not been confirmed.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

A despatch this morning gives the information that England and Germany have had a naval engagement.

Rev. Father Grace will celebrate Mass in St. Alfonso's Church, on Sunday morning, August 9, at 11 o'clock.

Rev. Mr. Taylor, of Weymouth, will conduct the service in the Church of England, Lawrence town, Sunday next at three o'clock 3 p. m.

All the students in the eleventh grade of the Lawrence town School, who took the recent Provincial examinations were successful in obtaining their "B" certificates.

The C. P. R. steamer St. George, runs evening excursions in the Bay of Fundy from St. John. On these trips she carries a band, which furnishes music for dancing.

A number of settees have been contributed to be placed on the park adjoining the school grounds. These will be found convenient for those who attend the band concerts. Still there is room for more.

Grocerymen in town have had an unusual demand for flour during the past week, in some cases delivering three and four barrels to a customer. The price has advanced twenty-five cents per barrel in the local market.

Western Chronicle: On the property of J. D. Bennett, Blomidon, may be seen a couple of Deer, which have taken up their abode for the past two months, and just now are making their home in Mr. Bennett's out-field where they spend the time browsing around and having good time generally. Mr. Bennett says they can scale a seven foot barb wire fence as easy as rolling off a log.

While engaged in business at the wharf last Wednesday afternoon, Captain W. R. Longmire noticed a large fish going down the river which was doing a great amount of floundering in the water. The Captain called the attention of some boys to the fish. The boys secured a boat and gaff and started in pursuit. The fish was soon secured, which proved to be a twenty pound salmon. Evidently it had become disabled in some way, which was the cause of its keeping so near the surface of the water.

"Sixty Years a Queen" or the life of Queen Victoria, is the title of a seven-reel film that will be thrown on the canvas at the Primrose Theatre, tomorrow, (Thursday) evening. To see the picture is to refresh one's memory of the great events in the reign of our late great Queen and to bring out in reality what is now famed in history. Mr. Leavitt, who has given more than fifty years to theatrical life, and had retired, was attracted by the real life scenes in this great film, which cost $100,000 in production, and is now travelling the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland showing this picture only.

Miss Eva Mylott, the noted Australian contralto, made her second appearance before a Bridgetown audience last Wednesday evening at the Court House. Miss Mylott was undoubtedly in better voice than when she made her first appearance here last year, as it will be remembered she was somewhat indisposed at that time. All her numbers last Wednesday evening were beautifully rendered and called for encores. She was assisted by Master Oscar Wasserberger, the fourteen-year-old violinist, who is indeed a wonder, and who completely captivated the audience with the manner and ease in which he rendered his part of the program. Miss Rita Narelle was the accomplished accompanist.

Sad Drowning Accident at Clementsvalle

The community of Clementsvalle was shocked and saddened on Friday, July 10, when word was received that Mr. Hallette Trimper, who had been working two miles from the village, was drowned in what is known as "Trimper's Mill Pond," while getting logs.

Mr. Lowe, who was helping him and who lives in the only house nearby, had gone to dinner, and when he returned nothing was to be seen of Mr. Trimper. Mr. Lowe at once came to the village for help which was immediately volunteered and it is supposed that Mr. Trimper must have been made unconscious by striking a log, or been seized with cramps as their was only about four feet of water where the body was found.

The deceased was fifty-six years of age, a member of the Methodist Church, which he had joined a few years ago with his wife and family, and a kind and peaceable man in the neighborhood, having a friend in everybody. He was a loving, kind and affectionate husband and father, and his home-life and life as a citizen of Clementsvalle truly testify to his christian character.

He is survived by a wife, Mrs. Margaret Trimper, and three daughters, Catherine and Lydia, who were in attendance at the Rural Science and Physical Training Schools at Truro, and Mary Lee, who was at home. He also leaves four brothers, and many other relatives and friends all of whom mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband, father, brother and friend. He will be greatly and sadly missed by all who knew him.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon, July 12, by Rev. M. O'Brien, the Methodist minister, assisted by the Baptist minister, Rev. O. P. Brown. Much sympathy is felt for the sorrowing ones who had their trouble brought upon them so unexpectedly, but it teaches us how uncertain this life and the things of this world are and that there is a higher power over and guiding all.

PORT WADE

Willard Hayes returned to Boston on Saturday last.

La Grippe of a mild form is quite prevalent here. It seems to be contagious.

Mr. Wm. Jehrs, of Boston, arrived here Saturday, Aug. 1st, to spend his vacation with his wife and parents.

Mr. Sonia of the H. & S. W. R. R., is here with a gang of men repairing the water tank at the station.

Mr. and Mrs. James Johns, of Brighton, Digby County, are spending a few days with Mr. John's parents.

Mrs. A. B. Kendall, who is visiting her children in Lynn, is very ill of bronchial pneumonia at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Holmes.

A new market for fish has been found. Two young trawlers of this place, Saturday afternoon, after hauling the trawl turned their boat homeward, when it was found they could not stem the northerly gale which had sprung up quickly, so were blown to Clementsvalle. There they sold their catch of three chicken halibut to Mr. Hicks, merchant of that place for 10c per lb., netting them the sum of 65c. Friends were found who resuscitated the two juveniles with bed and board and they rowed happily over in their frail craft Sunday morning.

Whiskey and Long Life

Some unknown person has sent me a newspaper clipping, telling of an Irishman who lived to be 108 years old although he was fond of his glass. Yes, we occasionally hear of men of such wonderful vitality that they can withstand the injurious influence of drink and live to a good old age. When such cases are investigated the facts are almost invariably found to be very sad. Their children, if they have any, are generally condemned to lives of suffering for the ignorance or the selfish indulgence of the parents. The great Charles Kingsley said that the children of such parents are "damned from their mother's womb." Dr. McNichol, appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate this question from a scientific standpoint says, that for every child of total abstaining parents that dies before it reaches two years of age there are five children of drinking parents that die before that age. Statistics show that while 82 children of abstaining parents grow up into good useful citizens only seventeen children of drinking parents do so. Of course there are exceptions where the mother has been sober and of a powerful constitution but they are rare. Our own experience confirms that.

I know of a man who lived to be nearly ninety years of age. He was a constant drinker, but never was drunk. Out of a family of ten children only three lived to mature life and of these three only one could be said to be fairly healthy. The others were nervous weaklings. That is only one of many such cases that I have known.

How greedily some people pounce on one isolated case where a drinking man has lived to be old but seem to be perfectly blind to the many examples all round them of men who have gone to an early grave or worse through drink.

First Railway Ride at Eighty Years

Truro Sun.—Conductor McCully, of the Midland Railway, had a somewhat distinguished visitor on his train Wednesday afternoon.

There boarded it at Charlsville, en route to Windsor, Mrs. Samuel Caldwell, of Somerville, Hants County. What gave her distinction was that, though 80 years of age, it was her first ride on steam cars, or for that matter, any other conveyance propelled by either steam or electricity. She was accompanied by her son.

Rushing Transcontinental to Completion

OTTAWA, July 24.—Work on the completion of the Transcontinental Railway is being rushed forward; 11,000 men are now engaged at this work, chiefly train filling, etc. The expectation is that the whole line will be ready for operation by October. The big car ferry will be ready to carry trains between Quebec and Levis, thus providing a through communication over the whole line of the Transcontinental.

CRUDE MINING IN COLOMBIA.

Natives Used To Pan the Streets of Quibdo For Platinum.

Under the primitive mining conditions of to-day the Choco district of Colombia stands second only to Russia as a producer of platinum.

Most of the gold and platinum exported are obtained by native women, working two or three hours per day. They use the antiquated ground sluicing process as a preliminary to get rid of the coarsest material.

Another method of mining that is extensively employed by these women is diving into three or four feet of water for the sand and gravel containing the metals and bringing it up in the bateas. This method is usually more remunerative than the sluicing process.

The gold workings have existed for centuries, but little has been done in the development of the district. The river gravels were being washed by the Indians long before the advent of the Spaniards, and this region furnished much of the gold that was carried back to Spain.

Large finds of this discarded metal have been made recently in Quibdo, and frequently the earth excavated for foundations has yielded sufficient quantities of platinum to pay for putting up the building. The natives were beginning to pan even the streets, thus uncovering large amounts of mud, which was injurious to health.

Silent Auctions. Japanese auctions are noiseless affairs. In many parts of Japan an odd little booth serves as a market room. The auctioneer holds aloft the object offered for sale in order that all may see it.

Town planning, let it be understood, is not a movement to make towns beautiful in a superficial sense. Its purposes are fundamental. It aims consciously to provide those facilities that are for the common good, that concern everybody; it seeks to save waste, the almost incalculable waste due to unskillful and planless procedure.

Outraging Reason. Little Raymond's mother had told him that she should put him to bed if he disobeyed her command in a certain matter. Temptation overcame him, and when his mother proceeded to fulfill her duty with a quip, he said: "But, Raymond," said the mother, "I told you I should punish you in this way if you disobeyed, and mother must keep her word, you know."

Between muffled sobs Raymond managed to say, "You needn't break your word, mamma, but couldn't you change your mind?"

MINARD'S LINDMENT used by Physicians.

A Change Of Program

A Story For Memorial Day

By CAPTAIN F. A. MITCHEL

General Hassett, commanding the 4th division of the 4th corps of the Army of the Cumberland, was a military man from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot.

It was the general's personality that insured obedience to his orders. He was born to command. He was nearly twice the age of those to whom he gave orders, and this, with the double star on his shoulder strap, insured him great respect from them.

Captain Garland of General Hassett's staff was twenty-two years old and handsome as a picture. Moreover, he was a favorite with all who knew him. The country girls along the line over which he passed, who had never seen anything above those indigenous to the soil on which they lived, vied before him like flowers under a hot sun.

Within half an hour the captain was riding along the turnpike headed southward, the two orderlies riding at the regulation forty paces to the rear. General Hassett selected for his general's headquarters a vacant lot on the southern extremity of the town next to a residence. But before appropriating it he dismounted before the house to ask if it would be agreeable to the occupant.

"HOLD YOURSELF IN READINESS TO ACT AS BRIDEGROOM."

Garland had a camp there. He was received by a middle-aged lady, who heard his request—made simply through politeness, for he could camp where he liked—and seemed uncertain what to say in reply.

"We are to have a wedding here before long," she said at last. "Do you suppose that a camp on the lot beside us will in any way interfere with it?"

"Not at all, madam. On the contrary, the presence of the general commanding the troops which are to occupy this point will be a protection to you."

"In that case you have my consent." The young man rose, bowed and was about to leave when the lady asked him when the troops would arrive. He replied that they would come in a few days. When she asked where he would stay in the meantime and he replied that he would bivouac on the lot he had chosen she was moved with compassion and invited him and his men to stop at her house.

"During the chat Garland asked if music had been provided for the wedding, whereupon Mrs. Rutledge informed him that no music was to be supplied. There had been an amateur orchestra in the town before the opening of the war, but the players were now all in the Confederate armies.

"In that case," said Garland, "our general will, I have no doubt, be pleased to direct the band of one of his regiments to furnish music for the occasion. One of our bands, that of the 4th regulars, is the best in the service, and if you prefer an orchestra composed of the players can easily be made up by the bandmaster."

DAINTY SANDWICHES.

They Are the Popular Thing to Serve at Afternoon Tea.

A cup of tea and a sandwich or two constitutes quite enough of "a bite" to tide one over until dinner-time, and the dainties are so popular, and less and less do bridge hostesses feel compelled to offer elaborate lunches in the way of salads, ices and sweet cakes so late in the afternoon.

Tea and buttered rolls always offered by a certain hostess after the bridge meeting at her home make her afternoon socials so popular. Coffee and sandwiches are also relished, but sweets are better avoided, for few women really want to eat them just before dinner and are sorry when they do, though the keen appetite of late afternoon makes sweets especially palatable.

Celery stalks chilled and stuffed with cream cheese and chopped nuts is a toothsome delicacy for after-bridge serving. Coffee and tiny rolled sandwiches may accompany the stuffed celery. To make rolled sandwiches cut the bread in thin slices in the morning, having first shaved off all the crusts.

Cooked sausage meat put through a chopper makes delicious filling for sandwiches. So does chopped apple and celery. Cream cheese with chopped onions cannot be excelled. Chopped onions and green peppers are relished by some people as a sandwich filling, but there should always be other sandwiches without the onion filling.

He Fooled Them. Mrs. Odell had a caller one afternoon and invited her to remain to dinner. The invitation was accepted, and the hostess said: "I am so glad you can stay, Mr. Parker. There is to be a joke on Mr. Odell. He is always criticizing my ideas, and I would like to make some cakes. Won't it be funny when he finds fault with the cakes and I tell him that his mother made them herself?"

When the cakes were served at dinner the caller exclaimed: "Dear Maude, you are certainly becoming a perfect cook. These cakes are as fine as my mother makes."

Brides and Wet Weather. A Breton bride rather likes to have a wet wedding. It is held to signify that all her troubles are now shed and that she will therefore have a happy married life.

The Ezra of Simbirsk call the day before the wedding the weeping day, and the bride and her friends weep all day long. The bride would seem, of getting the mourning of life over so that only joy may remain.

A Tiny Farm For a Dime. Land is cheap. For easy figuring let us say it is worth $160 an acre. A square rod, then, is worth only $1. A little more than twenty-seven square feet, or a little farm slightly more than five feet on a side.

How often a boy will waste a dime and think nothing of it. For he can buy a bed, four bills of clover or a peach tree! The boy who can save a dime can become rich. Make a dime look like a tiny farm. The boy who learns to save a dime and to know values will some day come into his own.

The Cricket's Chirp. The variation of speed in the chirping of crickets depends so closely on temperature that the height of the thermometer may be calculated by observing the number of chirps in a minute. At 50 degrees F. the rate is eighty chirps a minute, at 70 degrees F. 120 per minute, and the rate increases four chirps to the minute with a change of one degree. Below a temperature of 50 degrees F. the cricket is not likely to make any sound.

What He Was Looking For. "I do wish, Edward," said the lady of his choice, "that you wouldn't stare at other women so much. It's very rude and is certainly no compliment to me."

"On the contrary, my dear," replied the resourceful benedict, "I was looking to see if I could find a prettier face than yours, and I confess I really cannot."

Justifiable. "Why did you beat Dobson so terribly?" said the judge, indicating the bearded figure of the plaintiff. "I asked him why a horse had run away, your honor," explained the prisoner, "and he told me that it was because an animal had lost its equanimity."

Concession. "Don't you think men ought to have a voice in a political campaign?" asked Mr. Meekton. "Certainly," replied his wife. "Every glee club should have a few bass voices in it."

A Safe Background. A man rather untidy in his personal habits was discussing the question of a new waistcoat with a friend. "What color would you advise?" he asked the friend.

ROYAL YEAST MAKES PERFECT BREAD

FACED FOUR LIONS.

boldness and Daring of a Plucky Kaffir Herdboy. Four lions attacked a herd of cattle on a farm at Rounsey, South Africa, says the Rhodesia Herald. The herdboy was standing on an ant heap overlooking a pair of lions he had got the day previous, when he heard a low growl near him.

The boy pulled off his boots and threw them at the nearest lion, and then made a rush for them with a stick, shouting at the same time at the top of his voice to another herdboy to bring a gun.

In the meantime two lions had got their crows down, but, nothing daunted, the Kaffir made a rush for them, and the lions moved away from their prey. The boy then rounded up his cattle (he had 108 head), and while he was doing so had to chase the lions away several times. When he was at one side the lions would try to catch the cattle on the other. However, he brought all his cattle safely home, though one of the cows had nearly died, the claw of a lion having penetrated her hump.

LEARNING HOW TO UNLEARN.

Modern Scientists Marking Back to Thales of Miletus.

When we were young and knew without doubt that the molecule was composed of two or three ultimate parts, called atoms, we listened complacently to the statement that "science progresses in a straight line, philosophy around in a circle, or at best along a helix."

We believe, with the alchemists, that the so-called elements are fundamentally the same. Whether we will transmute one to another remains to be seen, we follow the alchemists in attempting it.

One of the Greek philosophers, Thales of Miletus, for instance, to stroll into a modern assembly of physicists and chemists, the language would be more troublesome than the ideas. He would hear the physical chemist remarking carefully that there is no matter, for that which we call matter is only energy, and Thales would remark, "Plagiarist! The disciples of relativity, the ultra modern physicists, would tell him that space and time are one, and Thales would sigh to think of his boyish debates."

John Locke. John Locke, whose "Essay on the Human Understanding" was the first work that attracted attention in England during the riotous rebellion in the northwest. She was in the region of trouble, and on a day when she happened to be alone in her home "in walked a strapping Indian, all war paint and feathers. She thought the best thing she could do was to feed him. She cooked everything in the house—potatoes, meat and bread.

When all was consumed—and these Indians will eat at a meal enough to last for three weeks—he had grown to a very large size. As he could not speak a word of English or French, he evinced his gratitude by patting his protuberant stomach, with a guttural "Ha, ha, ha," and left.

Plague of the Black Death. That terrible plague of the black death, originating somewhere in the east, passed by way of Armenia into Asia and thence to Egypt and north Africa. Reaching Sicily in 1346, it spread over Italy, France and nearly all of the countries of Europe, including the British Isles. The mortality was appalling, some 25,000,000 of people dying from the dread epidemic.

City of the Dead. Close by Canton, China, is the hill called Queen of Heaven mountain, on the lower slopes of which is the famous city of the dead. Their bodies wait in their coffins sometimes several years before the priests are able to determine an auspicious day for interment.

Lucky Will. Amateur Actor (who has just concluded a performance of the part of Hamlet, to a friend who has been one of the audience)—Well, old fellow, don't you feel inclined to congratulate some one? Friend—Indeed, I do. Amateur (with vainglorious mien)—May I so far infringe on modesty as to ask his name? Friend—Certainly. His name is Shakespeare, and I heartily congratulate him on his unavoidable absence.

Potential Incentive. Nell—Do you think you could love him if he were richer? Belle—I would try harder.

Lucky at That. Man wants but little here below and seldom gets more than half of that.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. Today they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to

Cure Common Ills

REED'S WITTY THRUST.

It Silenced For the Time the "Great Objector," Holman.

There are many stories of the caustic wit of Thomas B. Reed, the famous speaker of the house of representatives. One of his most amusing thrusts was delivered at William S. Holman, a member of congress from Indiana. It was perhaps the keenest witticism ever uttered in debate on the floor of the house.

Holman was a constant objector to the expenditure of money by congress and had honestly earned the title of "Watchdog of the Treasury." One day, when the committee was perfunctorily putting through a number of bills for the erection of government buildings in various cities, Holman was constantly on his feet, objecting to their consideration. But when Indiana was reached and the committee began to propose appropriations for buildings in the towns of that state Holman's objections came with much less spirit and finally ceased altogether. When at length a bill was offered that carried a generous appropriation for a building in Holman's own town, he rose and expressed hearty approval. Hardly had he taken his seat when Mr. Reed was on his feet. "Mr. Speaker," he shouted; and then, in gently sentimental tones, he recited Byron's familiar lines: "Tis sweet to hear the watchdog's honest bark. Bay deep-mouthed welcome as we draw near home!"

And the "great objector" forgot to object any more that day—YOUTH'S Companion.

THEY PLAYED MARBLES.

One Street Game in Which Lincoln Took a Hand.

An elderly gentleman now residing in Washington tells this story about Abraham Lincoln: "I was about ten years of age and being violently to the game of marbles. One cold March day my companions and I were playing on the sidewalk before my father's shop when I slipped on a piece of ice and fell, cutting my chin. The other boys seized as many of my marbles as they could and made off. Wild with anger, I started after them, calling their names and threatening to annihilate them, and on suddenly a hand on my collar stopped me, and a deep voice said: "We've got enough ill feeling going on in this country these days without you boys catching it!"

"A big man swung me around and wiped my wounded chin and then went on: "I saw what they did, son. Have you any agates left? Good! I'll put up three chinny alleys, and we'll see who'll win."

"He drew from his pocket three marbles. "I got them from my boy Tad," he explained, and then I knew who he was.

"There on the street I played marbles with the president for five minutes, and he let me win. Here are the marbles—a precious possession"—Exchange.

Fed the Brute.

Sir Charles Tupper in his book, "Recollections of Sixty Years," recalls an experience of his daughter in Canada during the riotous rebellion in the northwest. She was in the region of trouble, and on a day when she happened to be alone in her home "in walked a strapping Indian, all war paint and feathers. She thought the best thing she could do was to feed him. She cooked everything in the house—potatoes, meat and bread.

When all was consumed—and these Indians will eat at a meal enough to last for three weeks—he had grown to a very large size. As he could not speak a word of English or French, he evinced his gratitude by patting his protuberant stomach, with a guttural "Ha, ha, ha," and left.

May be the dough had forgotten to rise.
Or had risen quickly overnight and fallen again—
To rise nevermore.
Twas weak flour, of course.
Meaning weak in gluten.
But FIVE ROSES is strong, unusually strong.
With that glutinous strength which compels it to rise to your surprised delight.
Stays risen too.
Being coherent, elastic.
And the dough feels springy under your hand.
Squeaks and cracks as you work it.
Feel the feel of a FIVE ROSES dough.
Note the wonderful smooth texture—soft, velvety.
Great is the bread born of such dough—
Your dough!
Try this good flour.

Picking Pebbles

It Is Now a Recognized Industry Along Lake Superior.
Pebble picking came into existence nearly four years ago when a company put into operation a plant on the granite pebble beaches of Lake Superior. In the great cement mills of this country part of the process of turning out the flour-like product is the scientific grinding of the burnt mixture of marl and clay. This is done in large, hollow, cylindrical drums, partly filled with hard, smooth, flinty pebbles. The drums are swiftly rotated on their axes, and the constant friction and grinding, as they are whirled about, mixed with the burnt cement clinkers, quickly reduces the latter to a grey, powdery substance—the finished product of the plant. The pebbles, to perform their functions to the best advantage, must be smooth and of an adamantine hardness so as to resist abrasion, for one quality of good cement is the absence of impurities or foreign matter in its composition. They must also be able to resist extreme changes of temperature without flying apart. It is not essential that they be nearly spherical in shape so long as they have sufficient body or mass. Their size is variable, ranging from that of a small hen's egg to the size of a person's fist.
For some years after the growth of the Portland cement business in America all pebbles used were imported from the distant shores of Norway. The flinty granite strata of Norway's hills became advertised as the formation producing the best cement pebble, and her fords and beaches soon furnished the world's supply.
The importation was not an expensive one and the transportation rates were low. As the cement industry grew manufacturers here began to look about them nearer home for a substitute. One concern drew a considerable supply from the farms in Michigan, a dollar a load being paid. The farmers considered themselves well paid, getting rid of a troublesome pest, but the pebbles were of a base nature and did not produce satisfactory results. On the Pacific Coast pebble picking has been carried on for some years past, but only to a small extent, and few other than the local mills are furnished from that source.
Five years ago a number of Port Arthur men interested themselves in the problem, and they prospected the beaches of the north shore of Lake Superior. On the pebble beaches near the Canadian Pacific Railway port of Jackfish they found a product answering their requirements. A pebble company became incorporated and shortly afterwards commenced commercial operations. On a small scale at first, the pebbles were picked by hand. In the mills where they were tried as an experiment they stood the test. They compared very favorably with the best imported ones, and proved even better in some cases, for in one of the cement-making processes, known as the "wet," the Canadian pebbles with- stand the treatment, while the Nor- way imports flew to pieces.
The pebble beaches of Lake Superior are not numerous and the company's prospectors quickly staked the valuable ones.
To meet all competition in the section the sites and claims were bought from the Government, and, free from opposition, the company settled down to engage in more extensive operations. Hand picking was superseded by a steam shovel, operating on rails along the beach. The staff of employes and the laboring crew were doubled. Today a completely equipped camp, with an electric- lighting plant and pumping station, accommodations for a crew of over one hundred men, a railroad siding and a loading wharf, adds to the natural surroundings of "the beach."
