SPLENDID ACHIEVEMENT OF CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT

Conquered a Wilderness in Preparing for Hudson Bay Railway and Terminals—Liberals Busily Engaged in Bitterly Attacking Government for Carrying Out a Great Work.

Ottawa, Nov. 15.—The Liberals have adopted apparently a policy of deliberately knocking the Hudson Bay Railway scheme, and the Liberal press recently has been deluged with malicious stories which are nothing but a fabric of falsification.

During its fifteen years of power the Liberals made pledges in regard to building the Hudson Bay Railway. Before every election there was a fresh promise and the western voter was appealed to vote for Laurier and the Hudson Bay Railway.

In 1908 just before the election Sir Wilfrid made a big speech in which he promised the road would be rushed to completion. The West was placarded with appeals that the return of the Liberals would mean the immediate construction of the road. After the election the promises and pledges were conveniently forgotten.

Election Scheme Only

After fifteen years of repeated pledges all that was done was to start a bridge at Le Pas. Ten days before the election a contract for political purposes only was let for a small section of the road. When the Conservatives came into power, an investigation was very evident that the Hudson Bay Railway policy of the Liberals was for election purposes only.

No attempt had been made to secure information in regard to the feasibility of the route, in regard to the terminals of harbor. There was little information as to the best harbor. Nothing indeed had been done in regard to the question of terminals. Their policy, even if pursued, would have found a road with no outlet. Even after it reached water, it would have taken several years more to build terminals, docks and wharves, and to construct a harbor.

Cochrane Changed it All

Hon. Frank Cochrane energetically set to work to investigate the whole question of the route, harbor and terminals. An expedition was sent north to inquire into the feasibility of the route, to study the aids to navigation needed, and to decide upon the best harbor. In addition Mr. Cochrane made by canoe an overland trip, so as to inspect Port Nelson and Port Churchill.

As a result Mr. Cochrane chose Port Nelson and without delay set energetically to work to construct a harbor and terminals. He is carrying on two works, the railroad and terminal construction, concurrently, and when the road reaches Port Nelson there will be ready a harbor dredged, docks and wharves and transfer facilities equal to the trade.

Conquering a Wilderness

To accomplish this the government has had to undertake a work never before attempted—the construction of a harbor and harbor facilities in a country far from civilization and with not even telegraph or wireless communication.

The obstacles and difficulties have been almost innumerable, yet Mr. Cochrane has boldly set himself to the task, and with splendid success.

Stories have been sent out by the Liberal press that the work at the terminals have been marked by bungling and mismanagement, that stores have been lost and the men poorly housed. The very contrary is the fact. Ten ships were sent north this year and two have made two voyages. Although one boat through carelessness was wrecked at Port Nelson, not a pound of provisions has been lost, and the men have all been comfortably housed for the winter. Good progress has been made on the work of constructing the terminals, and altogether a splendid start has been made. One Liberal story has been that several steamers could not be unloaded for lack of lighter facilities, and had to return with their cargoes at immense loss to the government.

The facts are that one steamer broke its contract with the government, the captain fearing he would be caught in the ice, and returned before his contract permitted. There will be no loss to the government.

Big Dredge Safe

The Liberal press also spread another story that the dredge Port Nelson had been wrecked through carelessness at Port Nelson with big loss to the government. This is apparently another Liberal canard, as no word has been received from Port Nelson, and there is no way of word getting out for a long time. Capt. Saunders, one of the best known navigators in the continent, and regarded as an expert, brought the dredge north and reported that it is safely placed for the winter, resting on a mud bed and fully protected and ready for next season's work.

Photographs brought down by the captain show the position of the dredge on perfectly even ground with out rock and beyond any possible harm. Altogether the government is well satisfied with the progress at the terminals.

Here's the Reason

A comparison of this progressive work with the sham Liberal policy rounds so much to the credit of the government that Liberals to conceal their chagrin have allied themselves with the hostile influences, and are now bitterly knocking an enterprise which they repeatedly promised to carry out and just as often failed to do so. Their failure to carry out their own promises seems to have given way to the most bitter hostility.

Work on the railroad itself from Le Pas has been proceeding with equal speed. One hundred and fifty miles of grading, or more than a third has been done, and before winter sets in there will be 130 miles of steel laid. Arrangements are being made to complete the road next year.

STEEL WORK HAS ARRIVED

Work on The Giant Steel Tower at The Wireless Has Begun

The remainder of the steel work for the steel towers at the wireless having arrived from England, work on this structure has been partly begun. A number of men from the Upper Provinces are here to erect this giant tower, which will reach a height of 500 feet.

The four wooden towers, of the six under erection, which are now to a height of over 200 feet, in their skeleton form, make one dizzy to scan their length, but will look small alongside of the main steel tower.

The work is progressing very rapidly, despite the cold snaps lately. The power house, which is being built of concrete and steel, is also nearing completion.

Messrs. Baird & Howie, the contractors for the substructure of the new I. C. R. bridge across the Nashwaak River at Penniac, have commenced operations on their work with Mr. Gordon McCaffee, lately of Foundry, Limited, as superintendent. The substructure consists of five piers and two abutments.

The death of Mrs. Elizabeth Copp, widow of the late James Copp, occurred at the home of her daughter Mrs. William Craig, Mitchell St., at an early hour Saturday morning, aged eighty-one years. The deceased had been in failing health for some time, and although her death was not unexpected, it has been heard with much regret, by her many friends.

She was formerly Miss Sheasgreen, of South Esk, and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Buckley, of Mathew, Mass., and Mrs. William Craig, with whom she resided, and one son, Wm. Copp, of Newcastle. Two brothers Mr. Isaac Sheasgreen, caretaker of the Government fish hatchery at South Esk and David in the west and two sisters, Mrs. James Keating of Monroe, Wash., and Mrs. Jane Sheasgreen, of Lawrence, Mass.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon to St. Mary's R. C. cemetery, where interment took place. Messrs. J. D. Creaghan, Patrick Wheeler, John Dalton, W. J. Lawlor, David J. Buckley and William Wright acted as pall bearers.

An Italian was taken to Victoria Hospital Sunday from the construction camps on the Gibson & Milto Railway. At the Hospital it was said that he was suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism. A report was circulated that the man had been stabbed.

DOOMED VESSELS WERE HEADED INTO STORM

Sarnia, Ont., Nov. 14—Capt. A. May of Port Huron, master of the Hawke, released from Wood Beach last night and now lying near Miller's coal dock, is probably the last man who saw the ill-fated Charles S. Price, Regina and the Isaac M. Scott. He saw these three steamers and the Northern Queen as they were endeavoring to save his own boat.

Capt. May said it was impossible to proceed further up the lake with the Hawke and turned about 45 minutes north of Sand Beach, just north of there at 11:30 a. m. Sunday, he sighted one of the boats of the Hanna Line.

"She was heading into it and was certainly buying herself," said Capt. May. "She was making very bad weather, but was flying no distress signals. It was just beginning to blow hard at that time." The Regina, with seas breaking over her, but still heading into the storm steadily, was passed at 1 o'clock. She was making pretty good weather and was, apparently getting along all right," commented the master.

Was Dimly Seen

The Northern Queen was the next boat encountered. She, like the others, was heading into the storm. By this time the seas had increased to such an extent that to quote Capt. May, "We couldn't see her half the time." Then came the Scott. She was seen only five or six miles north of Fort Gratiot light, heading into the storm. "I thought she was up-bound, and I thought to myself her captain was certainly a fool to leave the river," said Capt. May.

"I would have given my head to have been inside. The wind and the seas kept increasing and the snow got thicker. We couldn't tell how hard it was blowing, but I should judge it was about 75 miles an hour from the north-northeast.

"After a while it got so thick we couldn't see the smokestacks. If we kept on we would have struck the beach. I wanted to save the boat, so we dropped the anchors. Although I couldn't see, I knew within a mile or two where we were.

"If you got out where the wind would strike you fair, if you weren't blown overboard your brains would have been smashed out on a stanchion.

Feared for Crew

"My worry was that the crew would be washed overboard. The seas went over the pilot house. The anchors didn't hold and we went on the beach. We went on so hard I almost went through the pilot house. That was about 10 o'clock Sunday night. As soon as we were on I knew we were all right. As I said before, if I hadn't tried to save the boat, I could have saved myself a couple of hardships."

Capt. May stated that the Haw-

INDIAN JUMPS FROM SWIFT EXPRESS TRAIN

Cot Cross at His Wife and Jumps off the Sussex Express, Below Norton with Train Running 40 Miles an Hour

An Indian and his wife, who had been to St. John on Saturday and were returning to their home on the Sussex express, got into an argument while the train was running at a rapid rate, some 35 miles an hour or more, about a mile below Norton.

The argument which came pretty nearly ending in blows was brought to a close by the husband in the case getting mad and leaving the car, and it is supposed jumped off the train.

When Norton was reached it was found that the Aborigine, either by accident or design, had left the train while it was running at full speed and it was decided on the solicitation of his wife to back the train up a ways and see if any trace of the missing man could be seen.

He was found lying with his head pointing down hill near where the old tank used to be located, bleeding profusely and apparently badly hurt. He was placed on a stretcher and put on board the express and brought to Sussex where Dr. L. R. Murray rendered all possible medical assistance. With the exception of a broken shoulder blade no internal injuries could be located and unless some internal injuries have been received of a serious nature he is liable to recover from the effects of his mad leap. Too much of the ardent that made Holland famous was the cause of all the trouble.

After his wounds had been attended to as well as could be under the circumstances, he was taken to a friend's near Plumweep. His escape from instant death was very narrow. —Sussex Record.

OF GREAT INTEREST TO THE FARMERS

St. John, Nov. 14—An important conference was held here yesterday afternoon between representatives of the agricultural societies in St. John and Kings Counties, and Dr. Landry, Minister of Agriculture for the province, and J. B. Daggott, secretary of the Provincial Department of Agriculture. The matter discussed was that of the Provincial Government giving assistance to the farmers in organizing co-operative associations for buying fertilizer. This question has been discussed at the annual meeting of the Farmers' and Dairyman's Association for some years.

It is said that the farmers of this province use about 45 per cent. of the commercial fertilizer sold in Canada, and that with the development of intensive farming the use of commercial fertilizer is likely to increase. The farmers who attended the conference formed the idea of a central organization, buying under Government supervision the various ingredients of commercial fertilizer by wholesale, and then distributing the ingredients to the farmers in different localities in the proportion they deemed necessary for their particular purposes.

It is said a federal regulation fixes the proportion of the nitrates, phosphates, etc., which companies handling commercial fertilizers may sell, though farmers in different districts may want the elements of fertilizers in different quantities, according to the condition of the soil and the nature of the crops they intend to raise.

Dr. Landry, the Minister of Agriculture, told the delegation his department was anxious to help the farmer in this matter, but that before making any definite promise he would like to see a plan mapped out that would be applicable to the whole province. He suggested that the farmers should form local co-operative societies, under a central organization, for the purpose of providing the money to buy the various ingredients of fertilizers in large quantities. If this were done, the department would provide an expert to act with the central organization in buying and distributing the fertilizers.

TO RUSH WORK ON HUDSON BAY RY.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—The Government in its endeavor to rush the work of the Hudson Bay Railway will likely start construction next spring from Port Nelson, so that work can be going on from both ends. If it is found feasible a ship with rails, supplies and men will be sent north early in the spring.

Engineer McLachlan, who is in charge of the terminal work at Hudson Bay, will send to Ottawa overland a list of the necessary equipment for next season.

MAKE NAVIGATION ON THE GREAT LAKES SAFE

Dominion Government will Appoint Commission to Investigate Recent Disaster—Will Come Under Hon. J. D. Hazen's Supervision—The Question of a Canadian Lloyds up Again.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—The marine disaster on the Great Lakes will likely be made the subject of a thorough inquiry by a government commission, the duty of which will not be only to assist in probing certain aspects of the recent wrecks but to determine upon some future line of action on the part of Government in order to make navigation on the Great Lakes more safe. The Government is receiving reports hourly, claiming that the failure of captains and officers to give a proper regard to official storm signals was in a large sense responsible for some of the catastrophes, while it is further claimed that had some of the steamers been equipped as are ocean liners with apparatus for sprinkling oil upon the troubled waves, the disaster could not have been so great.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, is at present in St. John, N. B., but upon his return to the capital he is expected to take the question into consideration, and while it is too late to take any definite action this fall, the matter will come up in parliament this winter and a big commission appointed to look into the whole question.

A Canadian Lloyds

Another question which has been revived by the big disaster is the formation of a Canadian Lloyds. At present and for years past the Canadian Government has taken the position that British North America is being discriminated against by the big British insurance institutions. The Borden government took the matter up in earnest when it came into power, and Hon. J. D. Hazen actually took up the task of organizing a Canadian Lloyds. This resulted in a compromise, by which Lloyds practically agreed to cut the rates on the St. Lawrence. Then came the wrecks of the Prince George and a number of other mishaps on the St. Lawrence route, and the Lloyds practically withdrew their offer of lower rates. The whole question has been in abeyance since.

The prospective opening of the Hudson Bay Railway within a few years makes it imperative that some definite independent action be taken by the Government, as it is felt that Lloyds would practically place prohibitive rates of insurance plying that route.

The question of Government insurance was already receiving serious consideration on the part of the administration, but the catastrophe on the Great Lakes and the probabilities of an early opening of the Hudson Bay have brought the matter to the foreground of the big questions engaging attention.

Victims' Bodies Recovered

Port Huron, Mich., Nov. 17.—Information was received here this forenoon that forty bodies of sailors who lost their lives in last week's storm disaster on Lake Huron, were on their way to Sarnia, Ont., (opposite this point from Kincardine, Ont., where they had been washed ashore. Many of the bodies are still unidentified.

No further details were available here this morning in connection with the discovery yesterday of a pilot house and taxas supposed to be from a wooden steamer, which were found on the Canadian shore a few miles above here. All of the vessels here before reported lost were said to have been of steel construction, and if a wooden steamer went down in Lake Huron her identity is a mystery.

CURLING CLUB ANNUAL MEETING

Treasurer's Report Shows Club in Good Financial Standing—Officers Elected

The annual meeting of the Newcastle Curling Club was held in the Town Hall Monday evening. Mayor Merriss presiding and a good attendance of members.

The treasurer's report showed that the club was in good financial standing having a balance of $212.17 on hand.

The President reported that a North Shore League had been formed with Mr. P. J. Burns of Bathurst, as president and they are to play for a cup which has been purchased by the different clubs in the league. The first Bospiel will be held this year at Chatham and thereafter at the home of the winners.

The annual fee for 1913-14 was fixed at $5.00.

Officers were then elected as follows:

President—Mayor C. J. Morrissy.
Vice-Pres.—A. A. Davidson.
Chaplain—Rev. S. J. MacArthur.
Sec'y.—J. E. T. Linden.
Treas.—G. G. Stothart.

Managing Com.—J. R. Lawlor, Ald. Charles Sargeant, John Russell, Percy Russell and C. M. Dickson.

Mr. Lawlor gave notice that he would move at the next meeting to amend the bye-laws so as to place the election of the skips for foreign matches in the hands of the managing committee instead of the whole club as at present.

The next meeting of the club will be held on December 8th when skips will be elected for the season.

Friends of Capt. William Steeves have since Saturday received word of his safety and fears that he was a victim of the recent big storm on the Great Lakes have thus been appeased. It was known that he was taking his steamer, the Port Colburn, from Cape Breton to Kingston, Ont., whence he was to go to Fort Williams, Ont., but a telegram from his wife to Miss Evelyn Steeves, of Fredericton, her sister, conveyed the information that Capt. Steeves had reached home before the storm.

About two o'clock on Saturday morning the store of Mr. Charles Ross, a Carleton, St. John grocer, was entered and several dollars worth of tobacco stolen.

ESCUMINAC FIRE SUNDAY NIGHT

Freezer, Barn, Cookhouse and Ice House Gone—Origin of Fire Not Known

Chatham, N. B., Nov. 17.—The fire at Point Escuminac last night destroyed the freezer, barn, cookhouse and ice house belonging to A. & R. Loggie. It is not known how the fire originated as the buildings were not in use. They were filled with stores of various kinds and the loss will be considerable. As the ice house would be utilized in another month the company is setting about rebuilding it without any delay.

VITALITY REGAINED KIDNEYS CURED

Health Restored By "Fruit-a-tives"

HAGERSTOWN, O., Aug. 24th, 1913. "About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys and liver were not doing their work, and I became all run-down. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the results all that could have been expected. My liver and kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old time vitality. Today I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever enjoyed, and I unhesitatingly give my testimonial for publication if you wish."

James J. Munray, a farmer of Jewesville, Ill., has died at the age of 70 after having spent the last 15 years in bed, although he was physically well. Physicians could find no bodily ailment and express the opinion that he died just because he was weary. Munray evidently was the champion tired man.

A. E. Cameron, a well known flour and feed merchant, of Brockville, Ont., accompanied by Alonzo Charlton, drove to the Brockville Cemetery the other afternoon. Arriving at the gate Charlton got out to open it, and when he returned to the rig he found Mr. Cameron unconscious, and he died in the buggy before assistance could be summoned. Deceased was a prosperous man of middle age and leaves a wife and family.

What is a "sealed package?" In Nashville, Tenn., saloon keepers are interpreting it to mean a bottle with a cork in it, and since Judge Reil is sued an order restricting sales to be sealed packages a thriving trade has been done in four ounce bottles, of which one store sold over 20,000 in two days lately. They sell, when filled, for 15 cents, and the purchaser is requested to "step just outside into an ante-room," where the customer finds sugar, fizz and other fixings.

There was a wild scene in the Glasgow High Court when two Suffragettes were sentenced to eight months imprisonment each for breaking into an unoccupied house and attempting to set it on fire. Loud cries of "Shame" were raised in the court, the "Marseillaise" was sung, and several articles including apples were thrown at the judge. Lord Salvean was not struck, but a jurymen received an apple on the face. Three women were arrested. The accused were Dr. Dorothea Smith, the wife of a Glasgow minister and Miss Margaret Morrison, an Edinburgh artist. They refused to plead and this was treated as a plea of "Not Guilty." After the case for the prosecution was heard both addressed the jury, who unanimously found them both "Guilty." The Judge was proceeding to speak of the seriousness of the charge when Miss Morrison shouted, "We have heard enough; just give us our sentence." The Judge ordered her removal for contempt of Court.

A locomotive engineer, writing to the editor of the Railway Age Gazette observes that the "heavy equipment has increased so rapidly that it is now about ten years in advance of track." He also recommends that the speed of all fast trains be reduced to from 55 to 60 miles an hour. He believes in the steel car, but he rightly says: "Track is the foundation, and it should be the first thing to consider before increasing the weight of equipment." These words should be heeded in the minds of all, particularly by those who would introduce hasty legislation in the supposed interest of safety.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine so good. I suffered from ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont.—"I heard you medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble. "My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated. "I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial."—Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

You Can Make Better Foods For The Children With "Beaver" Flour Than You Can Buy

Next to a returning Arctic Explorer, the hungriest mortal on earth is a growing boy. He is always ravenous. "He will eat anything". But why should he? Right now is the time when his parent should be most particular about his food—to prevent injudicious eating and to protect him against unsuitable food.

Good, home-made bread, made of "Beaver" Flour—light, flaky biscuits made of "Beaver" Flour—these are real foods for growing children. "Beaver" Flour is a blended flour. That is, it is made of exact proportions of nutritious, beautifully flavored Ontario Fall Wheat and a smaller proportion of the stronger Western Spring Wheat.

Sheep Notes

The most sought for breeds of sheep are those combining mutton and wool productions in the highest degree.

Sheep sorrel grows most abundantly in thin or worn out meadows. Breaking the meadow and raising corn or some other cultivated crop will usually subdue the weed. The land should be enriched with barnyard manure before re-seeding to grass, and an effort should be made to secure a thick stand. O meadows or pastures that cannot be plowed, top dressing with manure and sowing additional grass seed will be beneficial. The addition of lime to the soil is also said to aid in thickening the grass and crowding out the sorrel.—Andrew Boss, University Farm, Et. Paul, Minn.

Winter Protection of Young Apple Trees

Precautions must be taken to prevent injury from mice, rabbits, etc. Many failures in apple growing here and elsewhere are caused by these pests and a large annual toll in the form of dead trees is annually exacted by them. As far as possible crops harboring and attracting such pests should be avoided and the accumulation of litter, trash, weeds, long grass, etc., which furnish suitable winter quarters for these animals, prevented. Mice work under the snow and damage from them may be prevented by tramping the snow solid round the tree after the first few snowfalls. This method of protecting is however some what dependent on the weather. The cheapest and safest protection is secured by wrapping the trunks in cylinder fashion with paper, wood veneer or some such material. Good strong building paper, as light as possible in color gives good satisfaction. This may be placed round the trees in the fall, not tightly, but leaving an inch or so of space between the inside of the paper and the bark of the tree. The soil should then be mounded up around the bottom of the paper to a height of six inches or so. Veneer tree protectors, made of thin material one-eighth inch thick, 12 inches high, 12 inches wide, and costing about 1/2 cent each will last two and three years and afford good protection. The paper or veneer as the case may be should be removed in the spring about the middle of April.

Sun Scald

This form of damage is very common in some localities, so common, in fact, that a tree which escapes it is a rarity. The greater part of the damage occurs in late winter, or during the warm spring days when the snow is going off. During the warm afternoons the sun, reflected from the snow against the south-west side of the tree trunks, becomes very warm. The trunks are thoroughly warmed on that side. They are thawed out, and the bark becomes soft, sappy and pliable. Then, when the sun goes down and the temperature falls again to zero, the bark is again frozen tight. The next day the same thing happens, and so day after day the young bark freezes and thaws, and by this means is torn to shreds. When spring arrives the bark is killed and broken open. Then various kind of fungi get in and the damage which begins by freezing and thawing ends with spread of canker and other troubles all round the trunk of the tree. The

An Important Item

Available plant food upon a dairy farm is an important item. It means a much larger production of various farm crops and a consequent increased value of the farm. In older farmed sections where land has been unwise robbed of its fertility the purchase of concentrated feed is often made with a view to its value in restoring the land.—Maritime Farmer

Dairy Thoughts

The droppings from the cattle will benefit the pasture more if they are spread or broken with a spike tooth harrow. This prevents the grass from being killed out and weeds coming in where the droppings have lain. The most important business of the dairyman is to increase the amount of manurial substances and apply them where they will do the most good to the growing crops. He is no wise public benefactor who keeps two cows to do the work of one.

A poor milker is one of the surest ways of diminishing the milk flow. Too many dairymen are conducting their business as a side issue when they should be making it the leading feature of their farming.

The new cow has an individuality of her own and the feeder should become acquainted with her as soon as possible after she is brought into the herd. Go your limit on a good bull. If your cows are deficient in the flow of milk, buy a sire that will make up the quality. If their milk is deficient in butter fat, breed from a sire whose tendency is to build up along that line.

Feed records are just as essential as milk records. It is the profits we want rather than the phenomenal milk yields that are made by feeding large quantities of expensive concentrates.

Proper feeding determines the amount of gain in the dairy business. Milk records and feed records make knowledge definite. If we are to make a success of the dairy business we must put thought behind and into our everyday work. A cow will never do her best unless she has perfect confidence in you.

The modern dairy cow must be handled with understanding and her owner must have a knowledge of her wants and make every effort to supply them.

Holding Back the Milk

Pateley Bridge, a noted English writer on dairy subjects writes as follows on this subject in the Farm and Home, an English agricultural Journal: "Cows will sometimes refuse their milk to strangers, and a rough milker will often upset a herd. The remedy in these cases is to get rid of the offending milker, for among dairy cows gentleness and kindness should always rule. If a cow evinces a dislike for one milker or a preference for another, it is best to humor her and hand her over to the care of the favored individual entirely. The superiority of women as milkers is generally admitted by all experienced cowkeepers, and the obstinate retainer of her milk will often prove tractable with a woman while obstinately refusing to a man. Unfortunately female milkers are scarce, and year by year become more difficult to obtain.

"A common remedy is to attempt to distract the attention of the cow from her milking by providing some tempting food. The question of feeding at milking time is a debatable one, and we are familiar with the arguments against it, but nothing makes cows so much at home in the milking shed or brings them home to it so cheerfully as what the Yorkshire man calls a 'bit of licking.' As a general rule, the relationship between cow and milker is good in dairies where feeding at milking time is an institution. In some cases with a strange cow patience wins, and if the milker sticks to his stool and keeps rubbing the udder and stroking the teats, he will tire out the most willful of cows. In other cases it best preventives of sun scald are low heads and veneer and paper cylinder protectors. High headed trees, which are of doubtful value anywhere are altogether undesirable in places where sun scald is bad. The protectors of paper or wood veneer recommended above for mice and rabbits will also give practical immunity from sun scald. This trouble is a very serious one. It is not uncommon to find entire young orchards ruined by it. In sections where this trouble is prevalent great pains should be taken to protect young orchards from it. For the benefit of the fruit growers, the Fruit Growers' Association has secured, about 3,000 veneers and will fill orders for them at cost price. Apply to: The Secretary, N. B. Fruit Growers' Association, Fredericton.

Farmers and Poultry

Some idea of the market for poultry products and the pressing need for developing the poultry industry in the western province may be gained from the following figures in a recent address to the Edmonton Poultry Association. Mr. A. S. Ducloux, president of the Alberta Produce Association, stated that the city of Edmonton imported annually 75 carloads of eggs, of a total value of $250,000 and ten carloads of poultry valued at $66,000. There are 450 thirty dozen cases in a car which gives 1,025,000 dozens, or 12,150,000 eggs in the 75 carloads.

Why should those eggs have to be brought into a city like Edmonton from outside the province. Is it that the country around the city is not suited to poultry raising? We do not think so. The reason for it seems to be that in the rush of settling these new lands the hen has been looked upon as somewhat insignificant, and where she has been kept the treatment she received was not conducive to the production of eggs. The time must come, however, when even in the mighty west, the importance of poultry keeping will be considered by the farmer. That time cannot come too quickly. It is not a thing to be proud of or to boast about that a country like Canada, with all her acres, and all her feed, has to be an importer of eggs.

It is for the farmer to correct this state of affairs. The land is available there is more grain wasted on the average farm than would keep a flock of hens in feed, and all farmers or members of their household, can find the time to attend to a few hens.

Poultry Notes

Indian Runners are good foragers and light eaters.

Have some way of telling the old eggs and keep them sold.

Ducks are never troubled with lice; neither do they have cholera or croup.

Duck raising is one of the most profitable branches of the poultry business.

It costs no more to feed a hen that lays 150 eggs a year than one that lays 60.

Good house, good feed, good tools and cleanliness are four essentials of poultry keeping.

Poultry should be kept off feed 24 hours before being killed and dressed for market.

The poultry like fresh straw now and then just as well as the cow likes to be well bedded.

A hen is not lazy by nature and will surprise you in what she can do if given the right chance.

For market purposes the Pekin duck is best. For eggs the Indian Runner takes the lead.

A poultryman that is too careless to keep the hen house free from vermin does not deserve to succeed.

If whitewash is strained it can be applied in the hen house with a force pump which will drive it into the cracks and crevices.

The Indian Runners grow very rapidly and begin laying early. They lay a large white egg. These eggs have a very fine flavor.

Poultry raising is what you make it. Lots of people make it drudgery by the attitude of mind rather than the amount of work they do.

Watch that the ducks have suitable attention and regular feed. A few well cared for pay better than too many that the slighted.

Give the ducklings plenty of air and stuff them with feed. Sprinkle sand over their feed as this will be a sure way of them getting as much as they need.

A hen that is, constantly fighting the other hens should be disposed of, for even if she lays well herself, which is unlikely, she will cut down the production of the rest, by constantly nagging them.

A varied ration, including corn, wheat and oats and beef scraps and green food, will produce eggs in winter if the stock is in the right condition.

It never pays to keep weak or sick hens in the flock and the sooner they are disposed of the less danger there will be that their diseases will be communicated to the rest of the fowls.

Among the cockerels you will find some that are more vigorous and that grow faster than the others and those should be kept for breeding next Spring. The others should be disposed of as early as possible.

If you do not like your breed change as soon as you can, for you will never be successful with a breed you do not like. Do plenty of good thinking before you make the change as it is expensive not only in money expended but in the experience you have already gained with the breed you have. Give the flock you have a square deal and be sure that the fault lies with them and not that you just want a change.

DEMONSTRATION COWS

Are your dairy cows making good profits? It is necessary to find out, for at the famous National Dairy Show held in Chicago the last week in October, the authorities had gathered nine demonstration cows to prove for one thing how easy it is to lose good money feeding poor cows. All feed was weighed, all the milk was weighed and tested, the results of each day were placarded in bold figures above each cow. These two furnish the extremes for one day. A 7 year old grade Jersey consuming 21 cents worth of feed produced only 13 cents worth of fat. This means that she incurred a loss of 8 cents for that day, that the feed cost of one pound of fat was 52 cents, that the feed cost of 100 lbs. of milk was $2.53, and that for every dollar's worth of feed given to her she yielded only 62 cents worth of product.

Close to her was a 7 year old grade Guernsey that on the same day consumed only 26 cents worth of feed, but notice what she did with it. She produced two and a quarter pounds of fat worth 79 cents showing therefore a profit of 53 cents. Her pound of fat cost under 11 cents to produce, while other dollar's worth of feed gave three dollars' worth of product. It has been demonstrated to Canadian farmers over and over again that similar conditions exist in each province. Just as soon as the keeping of dairy records becomes general the profits from feeding cows may be expected to increase rapidly.

The Dairy Division, Ottawa, gladly supplies feed record forms and a herd record book; apply for them to-day, and make sure, by systematic records, that each cow in your herd makes a good profit on her year's work.

Use it for both internal and external use. Sold everywhere in 2c and 50c bottles.

HOME BUTTERMAKING

Market reports invariably quote creamery butter higher than dairy butter which is the designation given to that which is made on the farm. It is unfortunate that circumstances at times make it impracticable for dairy farmers to patronize a creamery. When this can be done not only are the profits as a rule, increased, but much hard work is taken away from the overburdened members of the family.

There is no good reason why butter made in the home dairy should not be as fine as that made in a creamery where cream produced under all manner of conditions has to be made up. All that is necessary is the carrying out of a well established system in feeding the cows, caring for the milk and cream and the churning and putting up of the butter. In order to teach the proper method of carrying out these various operations there has been prepared, under the direction of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner at Ottawa, a bulletin entitled "Buttermaking on the Farm," written by Mr. Geo. H. Barr, Chief of the Dairy Division.

This work, which may be secured free from the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, explains the common defects of dairy butter as well as the conditions that are necessary to produce fine flavoured cream. It then deals with churning, washing, salting, working and packing butter, and considers the modern necessary utensils and their care. These are shown in clear illustrations.

This bulletin, which is No. 17 of the Dairy and Cold Storage series, concludes with the following recommendations: "Keep good cows, feed them liberally, keep them comfortable and clean when in the stable, skim a rich cream and keep it cool, churn at a temperature that will give a flaky granule in the butter; use clean pure water for washing butter; not more than three degrees colder or warmer than the buttermilk. Put the butter up in neat, clean, attractive packages, and keep everything in and about the dairy clean and attractive."

Early maturity is just as advantageous to the producer of sheep as to any other stock in the world.

The largest potato grown in Wyoming this year weighs four and three-quarter pounds and was raised by Edgar Vance near Encampment. Vance's big spud is the finest entered in the first Wyoming potato show, which is being conducted there by the State Board of Immigration. The big potato is one of an exhibit of six which weigh eleven pounds, twelve ounces. Second prize in the weight division was won by W. S. Pinkerton, of Danville, with one potato weighing four and one-half pounds and six weighing eleven pounds and one-half ounces.

THE NEXT CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE

We notice our Liberal friend, (The Chatham Commercial) states in its issue of the 18th inst., that according to the best informed circles Mr. R. A. Lawlor of Chatham, will be the Conservative Candidate at the next Federal election.

Evidently our contemporary has not travelled very far afield through the County in his search for information.

It is rather surprising that while regretting the existence of sectionalism, he should almost in the same breath, nominate a man from his own town.

Our Liberal friend may rest assured the great Conservative Party of the County of Northumberland will choose a good standard bearer who will lead them to victory at the next election.

We deprecate the statement that "a spirit of sectionalism" is abroad throughout the County. We see no evidence of it in our own town and surrounding districts. Our motto is to work for the interest of the whole County and not for any particular section and encourage enterprise and thrift wherever we find them.

New industries are being established. Important public works are in course of construction, the erection and improvement of various public institutions are in contemplation and the building up of a progressive and prosperous County will be the result of a few years of well directed effort on the part of our citizens.

Our young men are coming back to us from the West and elsewhere and we welcome them. They will greatly assist us in a progressive policy which will mean so much for the future prosperity of our County. We feel satisfied that the great majority of the citizens in our sister town of Chatham condemn spirit of sectionalism and are in favor of a broad and generous policy having in view the best interest of the whole County.

MISS KANE'S APPOINTMENT

Our contemporary Brother Stewart of "The Chatham World" makes the following statement in his paper of the 5th inst.:

"Miss Kane's Appointment—Miss Lottie Kane has been appointed a stenographer in the Public Works office to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Salter, and has entered upon her duties. Mr. Morrison and his committee recommended another young lady, and are much chagrined because their nominee was not chosen. Miss Kane was recommended by Old Guard Conservatives who consider that the Chatham members of the party and not a man in Newcastle and the committee of his selection, should rule in such matters. It is said that the Newcastle protest against Miss Kane's appointment covered seventeen pages of foolscap. Poor Mr. Hazen!"

The above statement by Mr. Stewart is only one of many in which he has endeavored to prejudice Mr. Morrison, the Conservative Party's Representative for this County, in the eyes of the public. Mr. Stewart poses as a good Conservative, while at the same time he endeavours by his misrepresentations regarding Mr. Morrison and his Chatham Committee to undermine the interest of the party in this County. We would not mind so much if he would only stick to the truth. However, the County has him pretty well sized up by this time and his misrepresentations will serve to place him in a proper light in the eyes of the electorate. Mr. Morrison has done much valuable work in improving the Public services during the past two years and instead of undermining him the "World" should approve and endorse his good work. Since the above mentioned article appeared in "The

A Popular Appointment

HON. DONALD MORRISON

The Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, is to be congratulated in his selection of the Hon. D. Morrison, as Fisheries Inspector.

It would indeed be difficult to find a more suitable person for this important position.

Mr. Morrison has an intimate knowledge of the fisheries and the Government recognizing his ability have increased the salary attached to the position from $1,300 to $2,000 per annum.

World" Mr. Morrison has received a letter from the Hon. J. D. Hazen to the effect that his attention had been called to an article headed "Miss Kane's Appointment" in the Chatham World of the 5th inst., and that the statement contained therein was incorrect and unfair to Mr. Morrison. He further states that the statement that a protest against Miss Kane's appointment covering seventeen pages of foolscap is not correct and that no protest has been made by Mr. Morrison or anyone else in Newcastle. He regrets very much that such an incorrect report should have found its way in to the Public Press. The above statement from Mr. Hazen proves conclusively, Mr. Stewart's continued attitude of misrepresentation. What he expects to gain, either from the Government or the electorate by such action, it is difficult for us to see.

GOOD ROADS, AND A TOWN MARKET

One of the strongest arguments usually advanced in favor of road improvement is the great benefit to be derived by the farmer in hauling his produce to town. This argument is somewhat incomplete in itself. Hand in hand with the need of better roads goes the necessity for better marketing facilities in the various cities and towns about which good roads systems usually centre.

A few enquiries will suffice to show that the cost of living is lowest (other things being equal) in towns which have the best conducted markets—where the farmer and consumer can meet and do business with each other, where prices are not lowered to the producer nor raised to the consumer by the middleman, where produce can be secured literally direct from the farm, where prices are regulated by the good old-fashioned law of supply and demand.

The ideal condition for the farmer (and for the housekeeper also, who has to worry over the cost of living) is a good road to town with an up-to-date market at the end of the road. To secure the maximum benefit from any system of road improvement, agitation for such improvement should be accompanied by an agitation for a market in each town included in the system. In all small towns where regular days have been set for "market days," a marked increase in business has been noted.

It brings more farmers than usual to town, who sell their produce for cash, and patronize the merchants with their cash. The merchant, the farmer, and the housekeeper would all benefit by a town market or regular set market days, the market to be held at some central and convenient site.—Sussex Record.

SPEND YOUR MONEY AT HOME

From time to time a great deal has been written and published in the different papers throughout the province on the matter of home buying, and

It is the intention of the Marine Department to introduce many radical reforms in the service and Mr. Morrison will be the right man in the right place in carrying out these reforms.

We join Mr. Morrison's many friends throughout the Province in heartily congratulating him on his appointment, but at the same time we regret to lose from the fighting ranks, such a loyal supporter of the party.

local merchants, who are entitled to all that a local paper can say, against the increased patronage given to the big department stores of Upper Canada.

We are frequently confronted with the remark that goods can be purchased cheaper in Toronto than the same goods can be purchased from the local merchant. We grant the fact in some instances. But Mr. Purchaser, do you realize the fact that the more money you send out of your own locality, the hard earned money you have made in your own locality, makes your chances all the less for being able to buy cheaper here? Do you realize that you are making your own town all the poorer and the big upper Canadian cities all the richer by the fact of your money going there instead of circulating in your own town?

How many would enclose five dollars in an envelope and mail it to a local merchant in exchange for a piece of goods casually seen in a display window, granting that it is an article you are looking for? Well, you would be very much inclined to think you were losing your reason. And still you will send as high as $25.00 and $50.00 to Toronto for goods of which you only see a picture with a well-worded description accompanying it.

This is not a new defence. It has been put forth before, and it is not too old to be brought up again. Now that the Christmas season is close at hand, let us all think well of this important matter to our local merchants, and show them that the efforts they put forth in selecting goods to our tastes are appreciated. And let us also take into consideration the amount of their time we take up when making purchases, when in some instances we make no purchases at all. Surely they are entitled to some recompense from us. The obliging clerks do not lose anything on a no-sale, but the merchant does, for a clerk's time might be more profitable to his employe if given to a waiting customer.

Spend your money in your own home town and help in the building up thereof, is a motto we should always have before us.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

CELEBRATED ANNIVERSARY OF POPE'S CORONATION

Rome, Nov. 17—Officers of the American battalions were present on Sunday at the ceremony in the Sistine Chapel in connection with the anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius X. Reany, of the Utah, and Chaplain C. R. Dickens of the Florida.

Among others who attended were members of the diplomatic corps, many of the Knights of Malta, and a large sprinkling of the aristocracy of Rome. A large number of American sailors stood in line in the halls leading to the chapel to witness the passage of the Pontiff, who was escorted by twenty-five cardinals. Following in the procession were patriarchs, archbishops, bishops, the members of the congregations and the heads of religious orders. Contingents of the various guards added to the picturesqueness of the scene. The Sistine choir, conducted by Father Lorenzo Perosi, the noted composer, furnished magnificent music.

The Pope sat in the throne, afterwards returning to his apartments in his chair. Cardinal Merry Del Val celebrated pontifical Mass and imparted the benediction.

The Pope was crowned on August 9, 1903. The anniversary celebration was postponed to Nov. 16.

FOUND GUILTY OF A TERRIBLE CRIME

Montreal, Nov. 16—Guilty of manslaughter was the verdict returned Saturday night by a jury in the Court of King's Bench against Pierre Valade, charged with causing the death of 13 year old Ida Robertson on the 9th of September last. The prisoner will be sentenced some time this week. The crime for which Valade was found guilty was one of the most revolting in Montreal's criminal history. The Robertson girl either jumped or was thrown from the fourth floor of Valade's boarding house and the medical testimony tended to show that a brutal assault had been committed upon her.

SCHOOL TEACHER'S ENTERPRISE

One of the most interesting letters recently received by the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, is from a school teacher in Alberta who asks for milk record forms and literature on the subject of Cow Testing, because—now listen: Some of the boys in the school are starting a contest in recording the production of individual cows to last one year. This opens up a most promising field for every school teacher and for thousands of boys in our country schools. In this we would be following somewhat slowly in the wake of many schools in the United States and New Zealand where the use of the Babcock milk tester has been taught for some time. In a dairy country like this, we should be outblazing trails for other teachers and boys to follow.

No better work could be taken up by such lads, for any record work of that kind must infallibly lead to better, vastly better, conditions on dairy farms. Probably these Alberta lads will soon be excellent dairymen obtaining seventy five or one hundred dollars per cow.

Needless to say the Dairy Division will be only too ready to supply blank forms and instructions in all such cases.

DEPARTMENT STORES BUY DAILY PAPERS

(From The Dry Goods Review)
The big department stores continue to extend their interests in or control of the daily newspapers in Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg. A large interest in, if not the control of, another Toronto daily has just been acquired. This makes three dailies in Toronto in which these mail order houses are financially interested. In Montreal it came out in legal proceedings recently that one of the chief owners of a rising mail order house which aims to monopolize the trade in Eastern Canada. There are now nine dailies in Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg, which are known to be owned, or controlled by, the big store and financial interests, and while posing as the mediums of public opinion are the organs of these interests. The trade of these houses has grown enormously in these cities where these dailies circulate, but in the other cities and smaller places where there are good local newspapers, they have not made the same gains, because the local newspapers are well edited and are loyal to their local merchants and refuse to carry the advertising of the big city store. The only way in which the big mail order houses can make headway is by cutting their prices. They get $3 to $5 a year in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, but sell in other cities at 50c to $1 a year. This does not pay for the white paper on which these newspapers are printed, but the heavy deficits are made up by subsidies through big advertising contracts and in other ways, and by the low postal rates. The merchants and newspapers outside of these three big centres should get together and insist that no newspaper should have the privilege of the mails which has a lower subscription price outside than in the centre in which it is published or which sells at less than the cost of the paper used.

An Ottawa despatch to The Globe says: "New Brunswick will likely be the scene of the next federal by-election. It is understood that Mr. O. S. Crocket, of York, will be appointed to the Supreme Court of New Brunswick shortly after parliament meets."

Harry, the young son of Mr. Lawrence Comfort, was badly injured on Thursday last, as the result of being kicked in the face by a horse owned by Mrs. S. A. Demers. Five stitches were necessary to close the wound, and his face was very badly bruised, but his injuries are not considered dangerous unless blood poisoning sets in.

Messrs. W. J. Johnston, and J. W. Ritchie, of Dayton, Ohio, who have been hunting with Guide Benjamin Norrad for the past few weeks, secured two of the best moose heads brought to this city. Mr. Johnston secured a beautiful moose with antlers spreading 60 inches, while Mr. Ritchie's moose had antlers spreading 58 inches. They also secured one caribou and four deer. Mr. A. Sossier of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has been with Guide William Griffin at the latter's hunting camps secured a moose, two deer and a bear.—Fred Ericson Gleaner.

A WOMAN'S HELPLESSNESS

Cured Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make

Thousands of women suffer from headaches, backaches, dizziness, languor and nervousness. Few realize that their misery all comes from the bad state of their blood. They take one thing for their head, another for their stomach and a third for their nerves. And yet all the while it is simply their blood that is the cause of all the trouble. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure because they actually make every organ and every nerve in the body, carrying with it a new health and new strength. Mrs. Wm. Acorn, Charlestown, P. E. I., says: "Before I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was one of the most miserable women living. For more than three years I lived a life of constant dread. I was taking weak spells so that I could not be left alone. If I walked from one room to another my heart would palpitate so violently that I feared I would die. I was constantly sending for the doctor, who told me I had no blood and that my nerves were shattered. Notwithstanding his treatment I did not get any better. I could not keep anything on my stomach, and the least thing would make me sick. Then my trouble was complicated with rheumatism, which became so bad that I had to be lifted like a child, and the pain was almost unbearable. I was in this deplorable condition when my husband read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and got me a supply. When I had taken half a dozen boxes I felt much better, and could go about the house. I kept on taking the Pills until I had used twelve boxes, and I can truly say they made me a well woman. Indeed I do not think I would be living now but for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I wish I could persuade every woman who is sick to follow my example, for I have proved they will cure the most desperate cases, and consider myself a living witness of this fact."

You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

James Richard Graves, an aged colored man, who is said to have come from Chatham, and who was on his way to Barabois was found dead on the C. P. R. train from Halifax Thursday afternoon. It is thought that death resulted from heart failure. In the dead man's pocket was found a letter of introduction from Rev. Mr. Forsythe, of Chatham. The only baggage carried by him was a suit case and two parcels. The remains were buried at Sussex.

One engine man was badly injured and great damage was done to rolling stock and the right of way when two of the new time card freight trains, Nos. 235 and 236 met, at 8.15 Friday morning, in a head-on collision on a hill on the I. C. R. main line a few hundred yards west of London-derry station. Engineer James Wiles, of Truro, driver of east-bound 235, is reported to be badly scalded about the arms and legs, but it is understood that the other members of both engine-crews escaped without serious injury.

Death came with startling suddenness to Wm. Sheppard, one of the best known residents of Sunny Corner, early Thursday morning. The deceased who was working in Holmes camp on the Mullin stream retired in his usual good health on Wednesday night, but when he failed to appear for breakfast next morning his fellow workmen went to his bunk to see what was keeping him, and were surprised to find that he was dead. Death was due to heart failure. He was 32 years of age and is survived by a wife and two children, Sake and Teresa at home.

The deceased is mourned by four brothers, Ben and David of Begun Road, Allan of Superior, Wis., Samuel of Chelmsford and two sisters Mrs. Fred Whitney of Whitteville and Mrs. Moses Whitney of the Royal Hotel here.

Rev. Dr. H. T. Cousins, last Sunday night preached the second of his sermons on the question: "Can a person live a Christian life in Newcastle?" His subject was besetting sins, the most prevalent of which, in a powerful address, he pointed out to be avarice—the desire to get something for nothing, to get other people's property dishonestly, which is the cause of all our commercial disturbances; the spirit of revenge—of getting even with those who wrong us, the love of strong drink, that is dragging down so many, even in this town, jealously, caused by suspicion of others and grieving at their promotion, and selfishness—the trying to get the best of the bargain rather than thinking of the other fellow's interest.

At the close, according to his promise of the previous Sunday, Dr. Cousins answered questions that have been sent in to him as follows:

Q—Why do men die?
A—Because of sin. Without sin there would have been no death.
Q—When I am converted must I give up the world?
A—It will not be necessary. If you give a true testimony for Christ the world will soon give you up.
Q—What good will it do me to become a Christian?
A—Nothing is more clearly taught in Scripture than that punishment follows disobedience and reward follows obedience. The Christian gains eternal life.

Dr. Cousins invited further questions which he will answer next Sunday if he can. His next Sunday evening's discourse will be in answer to the remaining question which he withheld last Sunday night.

Girls! Try It! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glitters with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and it not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fanish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it!

For Baking Success —This Oven Test

Success on some baking days can be expected no matter what flour you use. But constant success is rarer. It can be assured in only one way. The miller must select his wheat by oven test.

So from each shipment of wheat we take ten pounds as a sample. We grind this into flour. Bread is baked from the flour.

If this bread is high in quality, large in quantity, we use the shipment from which it came. Otherwise we sell it.

Constant baking success comes as a matter of course from flour bearing this name

Our

Job Printing

Department

There is a difference between plain Job Printing and the kind of Printing that draws business. At one time any kind of a printed letter-head or envelope would do so long as the work was done by a printer. Good paper and high priced ink, the customer did not know enough about to be fussy. It is not so now. The customer today figures these items into his contract for printing the same as he does the quality of the goods he purchases to carry on his business.

This is the class of customers who have their printing done at The Advocate Job Dept. Only the best lines of writing paper are kept in stock and the highest grade of inks used for all work. There is not a CHEAP line in our office, for experience has taught us to carry only the best and the most serviceable.

People who leave their order for printing with this office, have that inward feeling of assurance that they are going to get just the kind of a job they want. They do not speculate—they know, and they are never disappointed. We spare no pains to give our customers just what they want, and that is one reason why this office has gained the reputation it has for turning out the highest class of Job Printing only.

If you are not yet a customer, join our list and have your letter heads and envelopes, or whatever nature your work may be, printed in an artistic manner. It does not cost any more for good printing than it does for the cheaper kind, and a small order is given as good care as a large one.

We are now in a position to handle all kinds of

and would be pleased to quote prices for this class of work at any time. We guarantee strict satisfaction in all cases.

Remember that this office is in better shape to handle your Printing than it has ever been before, due to the fact that only competent printers are employed and the most modern machinery used.

WOMAN AND MOSES

The entrance of Mouché, all golden curls and white frock, did a good deal to enhance Doreen's position in Mrs. Farquharson's eyes.
"If she were a bad woman he wouldn't let her have the child with her," she said to herself. The child seemed to justify her presence in the room, to excuse the parents' wish that George could have shared Doreen's million.
"You must come and see us, dear," Warm-hearted Mrs. Farquharson kissed Doreen lightly as she said good-bye.
Doreen smiled gratefully, but Mrs. Farquharson could not interpret her words or the expression of her face as she said:
"Thank you so much, Mrs. Farquharson, but I never go anywhere now. Mouché and I are quite happy alone, but I shall be so grateful to you if you will come some times and see me. I shall love to hear how George gets on."

"What a thousand pities she is a divorcee," Mrs. Farquharson said to herself, as she re-entered the family laundry, which was so soon to fall beneath the hammer. It was not often that she had time to think. There were generally two or three daughters in the big carriage, but today she had thought it wiser not to bring them.
She quite forgot as she bemoaned Doreen's position that had she not been divorced she would still have been Mrs. Trefusis, and quite as unattainable to her wonderful son.
"Poor dear George, he does seem unlucky."

"Ce que c'est que l'argent tout d'emme!" Rosalie was watching the big carriage rolling away from the door. "Volla le monde oui commence a revenir. Je l'avais dit."
"If only I knew what I ought to do," murmured Doreen. "I feel such a brute no marrying him, yet if I did I should feel a still greater one."
One thing she could do, and she did it. She wrote to her solicitor to buy Killisnochy when it came into the market.
"They can't help my doing that, and I know he feels the old house going more than anything."

Dear old Mrs. Farquharson talked so much and so unselfishly that it soon got about London that George was going to marry Doreen. One or two acquaintances called on her and said they didn't mean to be unkind, but they hadn't if she would care to see them.
"Yet how empty it all is," Doreen said to herself. "What a make-believe of happiness. I feel as if I did as a child when I was tired of dressing up and pretending to pay visits."

She realized that she had got beyond the state of caring whether people were nice to her or not. She craved for something solid in the way of happiness.
"I would rather be a good old Irish labourer's wife," she said to herself, "with ten hungry children sitting round the table, and yet to feel that everything was all right."
"How I hate being a woman with a story," she said over and over again to herself. The peaceful pleasures of Bourgeoisie, the respectable commonplace habits of the middle classes, she saw it all now. She was beginning to piece together the world's puzzle, to see how the most unlikely pieces were fitted in defile.

"And all this I would have if I married George." It was just that simplicity of the Farquharsons that appealed to her. Yet she realized that she would bring into their midst an uncomfortable element of "notoriety" that would be as incongruous and unsuitable as a ballet dancer's dress would be becoming to Mrs. Farquharson's matronly frame.
After all, there is something to be proud of in a record of undisturbed dullness.
"To think that after all these years I am dying to be a frump! and even that is impossible," she added bitterly to herself. "I shall always be that notorious Mrs. Trefusis, that dreadful woman, that divorcee. That woman one doesn't know." The old hurt pained again, and with it came the wonder whether human beings had the right to brand their fellow-men for life like this. To set upon them the mark that would make all men flee that saw it.

"For ever and ever," she murmured to herself, while Mouché slept in her little white bed by her side, and then she did what she often did. Lay still in bed with her arms folded on her breast and wondered when she would be likely to die. If it would be very dreadful, and whether she would go to Heaven, and what Mouché would do, and whether Arthur would be sorry. Yet the last thought was always Arthur, Arthur to whom she would never again stretch out her arms in the wakeful moments of the night.

CHAPTER XIX
"Such a pretty little girl!" The nurse's voice was apologetic in answer to Avril's feeble inquiry as to the sex of her offspring.
"I knew it would be," she said to herself, which did not look as if she had placed much faith in the efficacy of her prayers. She had counted on the arrival of a son and heir, as the linking of a closer chain between herself and her husband. For a year and a half she had been, as it were, raking her husband's heart towards her, but there was always something left that slipped between the teeth. She knew how he longed for a son. If she had had one Arthur might have learnt to forget. It was the old story of Hagar and Sarah. She took the child very coldly in her arms and tried to kiss it. Arthur was very kind and tender to her, yet his expression as he looked down upon the sleeping "God is against me," she thought in those weary days before she was allowed to see anyone, and once more the thought that hardly ever left her mind for many minutes returned. A thought that was gradually moulding itself into a resolution.

Doreen wrote very sweetly about Mouché's little sister, and Avril wondered how she could.
"I believe she is a much better woman than I am," she said to herself.
Two or three days later Arthur came in with the news he had heard—that Doreen was going to marry George Farquharson.
"Are you sorry?" Avril could never get away from sifting his thoughts.
"Why should I be? What difference can it make to me?" I struck him through, unpleasantly, that his former secretary should possess at once his former wife and his Groben Mine.

"Do you think that she will be reconciled now?"
"I don't suppose so."
When would she understand that he hated discussing Doreen, he asked himself. Women have not so much tact as they are supposed to have. She began wondering whether Doreen had any of the scruples she had had. It seemed to her that the Bible gave clearer evidence in Doreen's case than in hers.
"He that marries her that is putting away, causeth her to commit adultery." Yet it would be hard indeed if Doreen Trefusis could marry and divorce not. It seemed clearer to her daily now. She had broken one of God's commandments and he was punishing her. Mr. Hardine had been right. Marriages were indissoluble. The link which the Divine has created to make the foundation of human intercourse is a link which makes our hearts a reflection of the eternal and the loosening or disregarding of which, places men and women on the same footing as beasts.

During the first days of her convalescence Avril seemed absent-minded, wrapped in thought. The doctors prescribed change, and Arthur took her and the baby to Brighton, but there still remained about her a sort of feverish concentration Arthur Trefusis could not penetrate, and which he ascribed to ill-health. Avril too, to go to church constantly, and there hung about her a melancholy which depressed him. He hardly ever left her. His conscience often pricked him when he thought of the long hours in which Doreen had been left to herself.
"How differently he treats his new wife," people said, ascribing his insensitivity to devotion, and little imagining that his behaviour was one long apology to Doreen.

But the crisis came at last, for it is a merciful dispensation of providence that vague uneasiness never goes on long either culminating in disaster or merging into satisfactory delusions.
One night Arthur Trefusis found Avril sobbing in her room. He knelt down beside her.
"What is it, what is it? I must know, you must tell me." As he spoke, she turned her face, wet with tears, and looked into his, as if searching for something. Then she held his face with her two hands and looked into his eyes.
"Do you love me, Arthur?"

The voice was despairing in its entreaty for him to answer as she wished.
"Love you, of course I do, have I ever given you cause to think I didn't?"
She was feeling better now she had begun to speak. Her voice grew steadier.
"Tell me, tell me one thing, Arthur. I can't bear it unless you tell me the whole truth. Don't fear to answer me. Do you ever regret our marriage?"
Arthur was about to protest, but she stopped him.
"Don't tell me half-truths. I want to know. It will kill me if you don't tell me the truth. Oh, Arthur, I am so miserable."

He got up and paced the room. How close their thoughts had been beneath the great silence.
"You have, you have," she said, raising herself on the cushions of the sofa. "I know it."
"Regret having married you? That I never have, I swear it," he said. "I adore you. No one on earth could have suited me better. I idolize you as a woman." He paused.
"But? There is a but?"
"Why try and analyze so much? Are we not perfectly happy together?"
"You think we were wrong to marry while Doreen lives," she said, disregarding his words.

"I can't tell, I have tried to think it out, but I can't. Sometimes it seems to me awful that there should be two women on earth at once whom I have sworn to love and cherish till death."
"Ah, that's it, that's it," interrupted Avril.
But he went on talking passionately for he was glad to unburden the doubts and uncertainties of months. "I have told myself that to repeat twice the same words before God must mean a mockery somewhere and yet I have asked myself how I could have acted differently. Surely I could not be expected to sacrifice myself and you for her? It is absurd." Then in another tone he added: "When she is married the whole position will be easier."
Avril got up from the sofa and went near to him. Presently she leaned against him. "Nothing can ever change it, Arthur." Then throwing herself into his arms.

"Oh, Arthur, I cannot give you up. Yet that is what we ought to do. We ought to part."
"Part? What do you mean?" He had heard of women whose minds had been affected by the birth of a child. Was this the case with Avril?
"Can't you see, darling, that we are not married? Not legally in the eyes of God. That in His eyes we are no better than Doreen? She cared for Captain Lancaster and never thought of you, and you and I cared for each other and never thought of her. We cared for each other before you divorced her even. What is the difference between her and me?"
"Every difference. You and I could not help caring for each other, but we did our best to conceal it, we never wounded her. We did no harm. Oh, she is absurd—absurd to compare our behaviour with hers. One cannot help one's thoughts, but one can one's actions."
"That is just it," Avril was looking away out of the window.
"We control our actions, yet in cold blood we married, just because we cared for each other. It was just that same feeling that tempted Doreen to you, and you and I cared for each other and never thought of her. We cared for each other before you divorced her even. What is the difference between her and me?"

"I know that I am not married in God's eyes. In God's eyes I am just as bad as any poor wretched woman in the streets, worse a thousand times than Doreen, for she was unhappy and sought love and happiness."
She little knew how she wounded him when she reminded him of his treatment of Doreen.
"So did we. Do you think that I was happy?"
"I know you weren't, my poor darling, but who knows whether happiness would not have come to you in another way. You are not happy now."
She waited breathlessly for his reply.

"Who is happy?" he said, evasively.
"I am far happier than I was with Doreen."
"Yet I would do anything to make you happy."
"I know it. It is not your fault, it is—I can't explain what it is."
"Oh, I know just how you feel." There was a hopeless ring in her voice. A ring that seemed to announce that all her worst fears had been realized. There was a muffled moan in it that sounded like the death knell of all earthly happiness.
"Haven't I been feeling just the same?"
"Yet you care for me?"
"Care for you!" Her whole heart was laid at his feet in those words, and he threw his arms around her.
"Little woman, we may have done wrong, but we can't undo it. We must make the best of our lives now. Regrets are useless. We cannot undo the past."
"But we can, we must undo it," she said fiercely. "We must part. While Doreen lives we must part. Every moment that we are together like this is a sin. We went to church, but the Church held no blessing for us. There was nothing sacred in our marriage. When we invoked God's blessing we were playing at holiness. God did not listen or look our way. And every day seems to repeat: 'I never bless ed you.' You are not married. Your husband's wife lives and will be his till death."

"Do you feel like that?" Arthur's voice was full of horror and awe. She was describing his feelings.
"Do I feel like that? Yes, and have felt it ever since our marriage and before. Before I knew that I was doing wrong, I was warned. Mr. Hardine told me that I should not be happy. The Vicar—so many friends— and he pressed her close to him for never had he understood 'till then how great her love had been. Her act seemed justified by the intensity of her love, but this? Had he not acted in cold blood, more from a wish to revenge himself on Doreen than from passionate love for Avril?"
"Yet what can we do?" he said, stroking her soft hair. "Surely, we love each other truly till the end, we shall be doing right now. Think of the child."
"Oh, don't think of her," said Avril bitterly. "Don't think of the future when she will have to know that I was not really married to you, that in the eyes of God she is illegitimate."
"You exaggerate, Avril, legally we are married and we love each other. Do not create complications that do not exist. It is pleases you I will confess I have had misgivings of late as to whether divorced people should marry, but I feel that now there is nothing to be done, and that to repile or to make ourselves miserable would be useless. Doreen herself is going to marry. We shall feel quite different when she is Mrs. Farquharson." He tried to speak cheerfully, but Avril shook her head.

"We have merely put temptation in Doreen's way. She too, will be committing a sin."
Perhaps she does not feel like us. "She doesn't know what it's like." Avril said sadly, and her words and tone showed the anguish of mind she had gone through.
"I have been wondering whether I ought to go away somewhere."
"That you shall certainly not do," he said, gravely.
Once more Avril turned the knife round in her own wound. "If I went away somewhere, would you go back to Doreen?"
It was very dark in their room, yet by the glow outside, she could see the expression of his face as he answered slowly:
"I don't think so."

CHAPTER XX
A few weeks later Doreen was sitting in her boudoir, the brightest thing in a room radiant with flowers and birds, and all things lovely, when "Mrs. Trefusis," looking thin and pale but very pretty, was announced. Her visit startled Doreen as much as it had surprised the parlourmaid who admitted her, for Doreen, notwithstanding her wealth, kept no man-servant. My house is like a discarded harem," she had said in her quaint way.
For an instant the old pain returned. She had, of course, come for Mouché. That was the greatest trial of all in those days. The feeling that she only had Mouché with her by favour, and must give her up at the word of command.
Avril kissed her affectionately. Then held her at arms' length with her two hands on her shoulders, for she was taller than Doreen.
"Can you ever forgive me for not having come near you all this time?" Doreen could not quite understand the Groben Mine sild silently through her brain, then disappeared at once.
"What will he say? Does he know?" "He doesn't know, but he would say nothing."
"Is anything wrong?" Hearsely, Doreen hoped he wasn't unhappy again. "Don't tell me you have quarrelled."
"Quarrelled, no," replied Avril sadly. "We have not quarrelled, but we are going to part."
"What nonsense!" It struck Doreen oddly that she should be remonstrating with Avril. It was indeed the reversing of positions.
Then Avril told her what had passed between them, of the shadow that haunted her footsteps. The shadow of herself—Doreen.

Doreen would not have been human still less a woman, had she not felt one swift passing shiver of gladness that it had been so. But the new Doreen brushed it away from herself as unworthy.
"My poor child," she said, "and I had thought you were so happy." Then she added, "But what good can you do by leaving him now? It would be cruel."
"I feel that it is the only right thing to do." The voice was charged with bigoted fanaticism, the bigotry and fanaticism of the newly awakened. There was about her whole being a feverish want to act at once. To hurt herself to the quick, so that from the quivering should arise fresh impulses. There was a hurried fear about her as if she dreaded to fall back into apathy or sluggishness, or to be lulled to sleep in the arms of Arthur.
"How utterly absurd!" Doreen's voice was quite cross. "How can your leaving Arthur wipe out the past?"
"Ah!" Avril sighed her reply. "Anyhow, it would atone."
"Not a bit of it. It would do nothing but make us all more wretched and miserable than we are."

"You are not unhappy." Avril looked almost with envy. "You are going to be married."
"Is not Samaria as Damascus?" quoted Doreen sadly. "I am not happy, only perhaps beginning to emerge from great horrors. Life will always be pretty much the same for me, I expect."
Suddenly Avril seized Doreen's two hands.
"I wish you wouldn't marry him, Doreen."
"Why?" There was a tone of irony almost in her voice. Was everyone to have everything except herself?
"I feel, I know it is wrong, you won't be happy. Look at me. Besides—" Avril's voice grew unsteady. "Perhaps if I went away he would come back to you."
Doreen was silent, and the two women listened for an instant to the dull roar of the distant traffic.
For a few moments Doreen tried to picture herself again with Arthur, but the vision would not be conjured up. Had she then ceased to care for him? No, the Arthur of those old days she loved still, but he belonged to the Doreen of those same days. The new life she proposed to herself with George Farquharson would be nipped at birth.
"He would not come back," she said presently. "If he did, it would not do."
"Yet it would be all right again, morally speaking."
"Do you feel it as strongly as that?" Doreen had no religious scruples. The new episode of life on which she had entered was more the outcome of great suffering, from which an intuition of right had sprung.
"So strongly, Doreen, that I want you to help me."
"And the child?"
"The child must bear its parents' sins." Avril's voice was cold.
"You take it too tragically," said Doreen. "The time is past. If, indeed, you and Arthur have done wrong, the punishment rests with me, since I was your stumbling block, and sometimes I feel as if I had suffered enough punishment." Her lips trembled.
"Yet if Arthur returned, you would not send him away?"
Doreen's heart stiffened. She would not have him back at Avril's bidding.
"I think I should," she said.
Avril gave a sigh of relief. It was what she wanted Doreen to say. Yet it seemed to her wonderful that any woman should feel like that towards her husband.
Presently Doreen burst out: "I wish you would get him to take the money. I hate it so."
"He never will."
"Why?"
Avril hesitated. "I think he's glad to think you have it. It seems a little compensation."
"Do you mean to tell me that he thinks like you? That he regrets?"
"I think so."
"How the world would laugh at us!" Doreen's voice reminded one of her old flippant days.
"No doubt; the world has many wrong ideas, wrong institutions. Divorce is one."
Then, with a wonderful effort, Doreen pronounced the words that had never left her lips.
"And, you know, I was unfaithful to him."
She watched Avril's face to see the effect of her words.
"That is not the point." Yet Avril was glad that Arthur Trefusis's action in divorcing her had been justified by Doreen's own lips.
"We have talked for an hour and we have come to no conclusion," she said presently.
"There is none to come to. We have all done wrong. We are all paying for it. We must live our lives now. You must not leave him. Promise me you won't. You will only be punishing me more. Surely, surely, I have suffered enough."
"Don't tempt me." It was Avril spoke almost fiercely. "It is what I wanted you to say, what I want to do, and I must not."
Doreen was about to interfere.
"You do not know all, Doreen. I was no better than you were. I longed to marry him, long before you were divorced. Afterwards I forced him to marry me, because I loved him so. I could not do without him. Had you not been divorced, and had he asked me, I should have done anything he wanted. I want you to know this, Doreen." As she spoke, she came close to the other woman.
"Doreen, how can I blame you when I am just as wicked?"
"That is all over," said Doreen. "We have both done wrong, but we have suffered."
"And yet you won't let me put it right."
"And he, what does he say?"
"Nothing, but I know that he thinks as I do. What can he do or say? We have rendered him powerless, we women who care for him so much."

Steamboat officials have under surveillance one man who is alleged to have in his possession $800 found on shore, and the names of men who are believed to have even gone so far as to rob the dead. The ghoulies found three victims of the storm in or near a lifeboat of the Regina. Two of the men were visible, but one body lay in the bottom of the boat under water and this fact saved his body from being desecrated. The latter was the man identified as Lawson, of the Regina, and is a native of Chatham, N. B.

The above league in connection with the United Baptist Church, Newcastle, met together last Friday evening for their half-yearly entertainment. The Rector Rev. ENTERTAINMENT IN TEMPERANCE HALL

Address Tendered Mrs. Atkinson—A Good Programme Carried Out

The Frances Atkinson Band of Hope, Sons of Temperance, gave an entertainment in the Temperance Hall last Thursday night. A good programme was provided under the direction of the superintendent, Mrs. F. N. Atkinson. At its close the following addresses were tendered Mrs. Atkinson, who left on Thursday for her new home in Truro, N. S., one by Miss Ella O'Donnell in behalf of the directors of the Band of Hope, and one by the Misses Jessie Black and Muriel Atcheson. The latter was accompanied by a handsome silver baker.

From the Directors of the Band of Hope, presented by Miss Ella O'Donnell:
Dear Mrs. Atkinson, I have been asked by the Board of Directors of the Frances Atkinson Band of Hope to express to you our sincere regret at your departure from our midst.

Before you were initiated a member of our order we saw the great need of some one to fill the office of Supt. of Young People's Work, and train our young people. The importance of the task appeared to every thoughtful member of our Society but among us there seemed to be no one combining on the one hand the necessary qualifications for the work, and on the other hand the zeal and leisure to devote to its performance. How gladly then we welcomed you as one experienced in such work and with such musical talent as proved a most valuable asset. Time has shown you a worthy and competent leader. Many leaders might have done good work but few would have taken the exceedingly high standard you have set.

You have put the work of the Board above the level usually striven for. While not neglecting to teach, that alcohol hurts the body and mind you have more especially emphasized the fact that the soul life suffers, that those who drink are unfitted for doing the work God meant them to do here. You taught the little ones to look to God for strength to meet every temptation and for guidance in every difficulty. They will not forget those lessons, and they a few years hence will be men and women stronger in character because of the good seed you have here sown in their young hearts.

While you have been Supt. several of the members of our Directing Board have become partially trained as leaders, so that with their help to assist whoever may be appointed as immediate Supt. we hope that the work that has been carried on need not be suspended. We know that your best wishes will accompany every effort put forth as the best wishes of Newcastle Division, No. 45, Sons of Temperance, accompany and follow you to your new home, where you will soon find a new sphere of labor and usefulness. Thus shall your life be full of joy, to others, and when your own star shall set at life's close may it set as the morning star, which goes not down behind the darkened west, but fades away into the brightness of eternity.

From the members of the B.N.T. read by Jessie Black, a handsome silver baker being presented by Muriel Atcheson:
Dear Mrs. Atkinson: Our meeting this evening with the parent society of our Band would afford us nothing but pleasure if it were not for the fact that it is also our last meeting with you as our leader.

From the time of our organization last April until now you have not missed a meeting except when absent on your vacation. Many of our Band have not such a record of faithfulness, but all agree that the time spent under your direction was profitable. You have taught us well. You have shown us that you love us, and the little gift we now offer you will remind you every time you see it that we love you in return. Use it often for our sakes. Let it speak to you of your boys and girls here in Newcastle, and we know that you will not forget to send messages to God in the wireless telegraphy of prayer, that every boy and girl enrolled in our Band may stand true to his pledge, and use his influence to help others to abstain from the use of that which brings nothing but sorrow to the one who drinks, to his family and his friends.

We wish you every success in your new home. We hope you may soon be surrounded with a host of loving friends and among them some boys and girls like us.

On behalf of the Frances Atkinson Band of Hope.
