WHEREAS by an Act passed by the Legislature of this Colony, in the 41st year of the Reign of Her Majesty, entitled, "An Act respecting that "The Governor in Council may, after such public enquiry and notice as shall be deemed expedient, from time to time, by order, restrict, or prohibit, either entirely or subject to any exceptions and regulations, the fishing for and taking of Lobsters within any District or part of Districts in this Colony named in the Order, during such period either in every year or in such number of years as may be limited by the Order and may by the Order provide for enforcing the Order and any restriction that "All Orders made, and all alterations or revocations of Orders made such Order, may be recovered with cost of suit, on summary conviction before a Stipendiary Magistrate; and in default of payment of any fine, the same ment."

The Prince of Wales, in proposing the toast of "the Army and Navy," at a dinner in aid of the London Hospital, said: In proposing the toast of the Army one's thoughts are carried to a land where a war is now raging. I allude to the campaign in South Africa, and in referring to that campaign it is impossible for me not to allude to a subject which, painful as it is, is in the thoughts of every one in this room. (Cheers.) I allude to the untimely death of a brave young man, who was the guest of our country, and who has fallen in this war. I know that this event has caused grief and pain to all in this country, from the highest to the lowest. [Hear, hear.] I know that my countrymen look with pride and pleasure to the fact that a young man like the late Prince Imperial should have gone forth to a distant country in order to assist in a war which we are carrying on, and the hope might have existed that he would return to show his thankfulness to our countrymen for the hospitality which we gave him while he was in exile. When I speak of him personally I can only say that a more charming or more promising young man rarely existed. If it had been the will of Providence that he should succeed his father in ruling a great neighboring country, I have every reason to believe that he would have proved an admirable Sovereign, and that, like his father, he would have been a true and great ally of this country. [Cheers.] It is not necessary to allude further to this subject; but I feel sure that all in this room will sympathize most sincerely with that august lady, his bereaved mother. [Hear, hear.] It may be gratifying to this assemblage to hear that it is but a few hours ago that I was at Chiselhurst, and, though I neither saw nor sought to see the Empress, it will be gratifying for us to know that her health was more satisfactory. [Hear, hear.]

The watch found by the body of the late Prince Imperial had doubtless been left by the Zulus under the supposition that it was a charm, which, if taken would render the holder liable to the ill-luck of the previous wearer. It was an ordinary timepiece, and was purchased by Napoleon I, when he was a lieutenant of artillery. He wore it as First Consul, as Emperor, and until his last sickness at St. Helena. Napoleon III, became its owner, and wore it during his attempts at revolution at Strasburg and Boulogne. From the time that he became President to the hour of his death at Chiselhurst he never separated himself from it. The ex-Empress subsequently gave it to her son, who wore it constantly. It often required repairs, even during the time of its first wearer. He looked at it one day while talking with Marshal Berthier, and found that it had stopped. Berthier asked why he did not procure a better one. "What can you expect of a watch?" said Napoleon. "We shall have to stop one day ourselves." The locket worn by the Prince had been brought from Egypt by the first Napoleon, who also wore the sword taken by the Zulus. The gold chain had belonged to Napoleon II.

On Thursday, 17th ult., a pamphlet, understood to be written by a prominent member of the Home Rule party in Parliament, and entitled, "An Appeal to the Liberals," was circulated among the members of the House of Commons. It proposes an alliance between the Liberal party and the Home Rulers, on the ground that they have been and are natural allies, and argues that the policy pursued by the Liberals regarding the foreign administration of the Government justifies them in supporting the demands of the Irish party, and also declares that the Home Rulers can never become the allies of the Conservative policy, but can only support them for Irish purposes, and deals in detail with the Irish question in which an alliance is proposed.

Advices from Hayti to the 12th inst., to British papers, report great riots at Port-au-Prince. The disorders which are caused by a bitter party conflict between the Liberals and Nationals, began on June 30th, during a sitting of the Chambers. A party of the Liberals fired upon General Canal, a brother of the president and member of the Chamber of Deputies. The General was not hurt, but the sitting was immediately suspended. Fierce fighting then commenced in the streets. The Nationals held the palace and the Liberals erected barricades and fired many houses, killing the Minister of War, who was trying to disperse the mob.
President Canal, on July 1st, requested the British Consul to assemble his foreign colleagues to consult with the rebels, but the United States Minister and the French Charge d'Affaires alone complied with the request, the others pleading risk to life from bullets, which were raging around.
Therefore the representatives of England, France and the United States alone entered into a conference with the rebels. President Canal offered the rebels full pardon and leave to embark unmolested to any port they desired, but the rebels stoutly refused the conditions and fighting continued.

On July 2nd the President again had resort to the diplomatic body, but this time the United States Minister refused to interfere and President Canal thereupon sent a letter to the rebels, which they tore to pieces. The fighting was kept up all day, but on July 3rd the patience of the President became exhausted and he determined to act. Cannon were placed a quarter of a mile from the front of the house occupied by the rebels, and the first shell set fire to one of the houses, and immediately all were in a blaze. The rebels scattered in every direction. The finance department with all documents was destroyed. On the July 4th the Liberals had disappeared, and their principal leaders taken prisoners. During the riots in the capitol, Gonaires, Saint Marc and Arcachere rose in the insurrection, and at last accounts were in the hands of the rebels.

An inquest was opened the on 14th ult., at the University College Hospital, London, on the body of George Greigg, aged nineteen, who was stabbed by his father on the Thursday preceding, and died on the same day. The mother of deceased testified that her son was too lazy to work, and was of hasty temper. She heard that he had threatened his father that day. The deceased was often abusive and had assaulted both his father and his mother frequently.
Her husband was very kind.—Mr.
Maxwell said deceased died of a wound inflicted with a knife. A number of medical students who attended were so unruly that they were ejected from court, and the inquest was thereafter adjourned. On Thursday the jury returned a verdict, of "Manslaughter under extreme provocation."

Lord Salisbury, who made a joke last week about the "Circassians" of Lord Hartington's army, will be dismayed to learn that his own friends, the real original Circassian irregulars, are once more in a state of unpleasant activity. The "Times" correspondent at Constantinople reports that the population of Adabazar, on the east coast of the Sea of Marmora, are terrorized by these gentry, who number about 40,000.
Cases of robbery, cattle lifting, and murder are of daily occurrence. The peasants only venture a short distance from their villages when they have bought the protection of a Cir-cassian chief, and even in their homes it is only by paying black mail that they can obtain tolerable security of life and property. Turks and Christians are alike oppressed and murdered by these savage hordes.

How Drunkards are cured in Aberdeen.

During the last few months, says the Aberdeen "Express," a course of intemperance, has been carried on in Aberdeen with apparently most successful results.
About the beginning of the present year a paragraph appeared in our columns narrating the extraordinary success which attended the efforts of a Chicago physician to cure drunkards of their craving for spirituous liquors by the use of a medicine prepared from the red Peruvian bark. Among the persons whose attention was attracted by the story were several gentlemen of influence in Aberdeen, to whom it occurred to give the supposed remedy a particle trial. These gentlemen brought the matter under the notice of Dr. Stewart, of the Heathcot Hydropathic Establishment, at the same time making the proposal which had suggested itself to their minds—namely, that a patient such as would make the case, so to speak, a test one, should be put through a course of treatment at Heathcot. They were gratified to find Dr. Stewart quite as much interested in the matter as they themselves were, and ready to bear a share in the expense of the experiment, for such it was.

Without loss of time the work was commenced, and little difficulty was experienced in finding a suitable patient to operate upon. An inebriate was conveyed to Heathcot about four months ago, and at once put under the treatment, which may be here described.
The remedy is said to have been discovered by Dr. U'Unger, of Chicago, and the sole ingredient used in its preparation is the red Peruvian bark ('Cinchona Rubra,' known among druggists as "quill bark," from the fact that it is obtained from twigs about the size of a quill. The bark is reduced to powder, and soaked in diluted alcohol, after which its bulk is lessened by one-half being strained or evaporated off. On the first and second days the medicine which, it is prepared state, bears the technical name of 'Extractum Cinchona Rubrae Liquidum, is administered to the patient in the proportion of a teaspoonful every three hours, the tongue being occasionally moistened in the intervals between the doses. On the third day the dose is reduced to half spoonful, quarter-spoonful, and subsequently to fifteen, ten, and five drops.
The treatment is continued, on an average for eight days—in extreme cases, for thirty days. Like the well-known preparation derived from the same source—quinine—the 'Extractum' Cinchonae is a powerful tonic, but it possesses the quality which quinine lacks of inspiring those that partake of it with a thorough, and for the time unconquerable aversion to spirituous liquors.

At Heathcot the treatment was in effect, as we have indicated, and almost from its commencement it developed the most extraordinary results. After the few doses the intense craving for drink became less, and gradually disappeared; while in place of it there was manifested a not less marked aversion to the alcohol which shortly grew into positive disgust. The treatment was continued for three months, after a lapse of which period the patient returned to Aberdeen with a color on his cheeks that for years had been absent, and such health and vigour in his movements as could not fail to carry conviction regarding the result of the work. The report gives details of other instances of cures effected.

One of the most remarkable discoveries made in the recently unburied library of Sargor, made at Ninevah about 4,000 years ago, is the fact that the Seventh day "Sabbath" was observed and kept as a day of rest and almost Jewish strictness; the king on it was forbidden to eat cooked fruit or meat, to change his clothes, or wear white robes, to drive his chariot, to sit in judgment, to review his troops, or to take medicine.

The Diamond which adorned the tiara of Pius IX., and was bequeathed by him to his successor, Leo XIII., is one of the finest stones known. It came from the treasury of the Duke of Burgundy, seized at Grandson. It was sold after the battle to a Jew of Berne for three crowns, and then successively for 5,000 and 6,000 ducats, and afterwards purchased for 14,000 by Luigi Sforza from whom it passed into the hands of Pope Julius II for 20,000 ducats.

A Railway Tragedy.

A terrible accident by which Mr. Christian A. Zabriskie, seventy-two years of age, of Paris, N. J., a millionaire, met his death in the presence of his daughter, the Countess Monteban, of Fontenoy, France, occurred at twenty minutes past nine o'clock Wednesday morning, 16th inst., at the Central Morrisania railway station.

MEMPHIS, July 19, 1879.

A negro named Napoleon Bonaparte was hanged at Sardis, Miss., yesterday, for the murder of Tom Butler, colored, on the 6th of last August. The execution was witnessed by 3,000 persons, principally negroes.

A distressing and mysterious double suicide occurred last night at Hyde Park, a southern suburb of this city, the particulars of which only transpired early this morning.

The famous Greenfield murder, case which has already cost Oswego county $20,000, will come to the front again next month.

"Honest Labor—our noblest heritage."

CARBONEAR, N. F., AUG. 14.

Newfoundland and the Bank Fishery.

In a former issue of this journal we made special reference to the importance of the Bank fishery, as a leading industry of other nations, and to the necessity of increased enterprise on the part of our people in the prosecution of one so naturally and legitimately their own, but which unfortunately, owing to apathy or indifference on the part of local capitalists, has up to a very recent date been permitted to become a comparative monopoly in the hands of those, who though distant from our shores, have not failed to profit by advantages to which we would appear to have been so long blind or indifferent.

portance which might be adduced did time and space permit, most unmistakably point to the conclusion that to the re-establishment and extension of the deep sea, or bank fisheries of Newfoundland must we look in the future, if we wish still to maintain the position which we have so long upheld in the fish markets of the world.

Public Improvements.

Since our first arrival at Carbonear we have been forcibly impressed with the total absence of any effective means, or organization for the prevention or checking of the ravages of fire, should the town at any time be threatened with conflagration. That such a state of affairs should for any length of time be permitted to exist in this community, more especially in the face of the very great loss already, from time to time, sustained by its inhabitants, is to us indeed a matter of much surprise, more particularly when we come to consider the superior natural facilities, which abound on every side for the successful accomplishment of an object of such unquestionable necessity and utility to the public interests.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Carbonear Herald," HARBOR GRACE, Aug. 12th.

DEAR SIR,—As one of those forming the excursion party which left here on Friday morning for the purpose of witnessing the Regatta at Quidi Vidi Lake in the vicinity of the metropolis I take the liberty of sending you these few lines in the hope that they may prove interesting to the readers of your widely circulated journal.

of fortifying the inner man, others of proceeding direct to the scene of the day's amusement, namely to the grounds adjoining the picturesque lake before referred to. On my arrival on the ground I found as on former occasions owing to the peculiarly favorable state of the weather the day being one of the finest of the season, great numbers already assembled, all evidently bent upon a day's enjoyment.

The extensive circulation of the "Herald" throughout Conception Bay and the various outport districts of the colony render it a most desirable medium for advertising purposes.

In future issues of the HERALD under the heading "Jottings by the Way," will appear an interesting sketch compiled from notes taken by the Editor during his recent northern tour.

The Consecration of the Right Rev. Edmund Knight as Bishop of Coricum, z. p. t. an auxiliary of Shrewsbury, by his Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster will take place on the 25th July the feast of St James, in the church of Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception, Birkenhead.

Mass is celebrated as even and naturally every day at St. Etheldreda's, Ely place, that it is difficult to believe that there has been an intermission of Catholic worship there for three centuries.

The Presbyterian congregations of Seaford and Harpurhey O are to be formally united on the last Sabbath in his month. The Rev. Mr. Barr, who has been pastor of the latter congregation for twenty years, retires.

Mr. Spurgeon, at the annual supper of the students of his Pastors' College, said that he intended to arrange for training fifty additional students, and that he had confidence in divine Providence supplying him with the funds necessary to do so. The next morning he received by post a letter from a lady in Scotland, enclosing $20,000 for the college, and an additional $20,000 for the Stockwell Orphanage.

The Bishopric of Jerusalem has been accepted by the Rev. Joseph Barclay rector of Stapleford, Herts, a well known author, skilled in Hebrew, Arabic, and German, and the translator of and commentator on parts of the Talmud. He spent four years in close intimacy with the English Embassy at Constantinople before he went to Jerusalem where he remained ten years as a member of Christ Church, and examining chaplain to Bishop Gobai.

Scientific.

At a reception recently given by the President of the Royal Society of London Mr. William Crookes exhibited some gems subject to the action of negative electricity in tubes from which the air had been exhausted. Under these circumstances the diamond is seen to be extremely phosphorescent, and the stones from different regions differ in color of their light. Those shown by Mr. Crookes were apricot, bright blue, bright blue pale green, yellowish green orange and red. The diamonds from South Africa gave out a blue glow. Rubies were also exhibited under like conditions, and whatever their natural shade, all shone with rich red phosphorescence.

The modified blasting gelatine invented by Professor Abel, F.R.S., of the British War Department is the newest and most violent of known explosives. It is a mixture of nitro-glycerine (which is the largest constituent, with soluble gun-cotton and military gun-cotton; and its structure resembles that of a firm sort of jelly. Its destructive action is more than that of any other compound which has formed the subject of experiment of modern time. The original preparation of blasting gelatine must be credited to Mr. Alfred Noble; Professor Abel intensified its explosive power by adding the military gun-cotton. It is curious that there is in fact no gelatine at all in this mixture.

The elephants of all wild animals transported by steamer are conducted in the strongest kind of boxes, and the boxes themselves are secured in the firmest manner. In a storm the lions, tigers and hyenas prove the greatest cowards. They also suffer a great deal from seasickness and whine about it. The elephant utters few sounds when he is seasick, but he sways his great head from side to side and looks "unutterable things." The horse is the most nervous and sensitive animal that goes to sea, and a hen shows the most utter disgust with life when seasick.

Varieties.

Falsehood, both a vice and a crime. Superstition is the creature of guilt and fear.

There is a good wide ditch between saying and doing.

Virtue does not give talents, but it supplies their place.

There is nothing terrible in death but that our life hath made it so.

"Strike while the iron is hot." Many a fortune has been lost by delay.

Wisdom is a pedestal from which envy nor malice cannot hurl the occupant.

As too long retirement weakens the mind, so too much company dissipates it.

It is sad to see so many walk in the dark themselves who carry lanterns for others.

Men usually follow their wishes till suffering compels them to follow their judgment.

Some mourn more the shame which sin brings, than the sin which brings the shame.

Truth and virtue can do less good in the world than false, well-acted counterfeits can do evil.

Every saint is God's temple, and he who carries his temple about him, may go to prayer when he pleaseth.

Most of their faults women owe to us, while we are indebted to them for most of our better qualities.

It is a fact of history that the purest and noblest life on God's green earth has been born of the Christian faith.

Pleasure is sometimes only a change of pain. A man who has the gout feels first rate when he gets down to rheumatism.

My advice is to consult the lives of most men as we would a looking-glass, and from thence fetch examples for our imitation.

Do not go to your hands to work, or to your feet to walk, or to your head to think, before you have gone to your knees to pray.

I do not allow my medicines to be sold in any part of the United States. I have no Agents there. My Medicines are only made by me, at 555 Oxford Street London.

In the books of directions affixed to the spurious make is a caution, warning the Public against being deceived by counterfeiters. Do not be misled by this audacious trick, as they are the counterfeiters they pretend to denounce.

These counterfeiters are purchased by unprincipled Vendors at one half the price of my Pills and Ointment, and are sold to you as my genuine Medicines.

I most earnestly appeal to that sense of justice which I feel sure I may venture upon asking from all honorable persons, to assist me, and the Public, as far as may lie in their power, in denouncing this shameful Fraud.

WRECKED.

LAVINIA RATHURST,

Canto I.

A beautiful ship on a beautiful sea!
What grander sight than this could there be?

Not a cloud flecks the sky, No breeze stirs the sea
The Surge rises and falls So murmuringly.

A lullful diapason fall on the ear, Far away, far away—nearer—more near!
Oh, heart breaking music!
Oh, dirge of the waves!
Mourning sad requiems O'er wat'ry graves.

For vessels as proud have launched on the ocean, Vessels as graceful and swan-like in motion;

Argosies laden from Region of gold Argosies freighted with Treasures untold.

Vessels as stately, with pennons as brave Dashing as gallantly over the wave, Yet, 'where are they now?'
We ask of the sea—
And the foam crested billows Reply mockingly.

As they scatter their brine on the breast Of the deep—
'Beneath our bright waters their treasures we keep,
And their dead lie entombed In the vaults of the sea, Where the mermaids are Makings rare melody.'

Canto II.

A wreck on the Island? Alas, woe to see!
'Tis the wreck of the beautiful ship on the sea!

Closed are the Western gates, Gone is the sun,
Up thro' the twilight Creep stars, one by one.

There, at the feet of life, lays the dead Day,
Oh, why do we linger then?—Hasten away!

A lullful diapason
Falls on the ear,
Far away, far away—
Nearer—more—nearer.

What sound is it, then, your are straining to hear?
It's all over now, there's no more to fear!
Waves ripple and gurgle In glee by the wreck,
And some e'en—the boldest—Dance over the deck.

There's naught then to tell of the wreck on the strand, And peaceful and quiet is the scene on the land.

Is there nothing to tell
Of this terrible strife?
That ship was—a Soul!
That sea was—a Life.

The Little Woman.

Don't talk to me of Olympus' maids, 'Divinely tall and fair,'
Of Cleopatra's imperial form, Of Juno's stately air.
Those 'mighty dames, with redoubt names,

May erst have held their sway;
'Tis the little woman—bless her heart!
Who rules the world to today,

With her wilful winsome ways, Her artful artless smiles—Her airy grace and her fairy face Her wisdom, wit, and wiles, She mocks the pride, and sways the strength,
She bends the will of man,
As on y such a despotic elf—A little woman—can,

Though her pathway may lead through the darkest ways,
She always finds a light; Though her eyes be dazzled by fortune's rays, She's sure to see aright; Though her wisdom be of no special school, Her logic 'just because'—
The first has settled a kingdom's fate, The last has made its laws.

'Tis the little woman that goes ahead When men would lag behind, The little woman who sees her chance,
And always knows her mind—
Who can s'yly smile as she takes the oath To honor, love, obey, And mentally add the saving clause,
'In a little woman's way?'

Would the diamond seem such a perfect gem
If it measured one foot round?
Would the rose-leaf yield such a sweet perfume
If it covered yards of ground?
Would the dew-drops seem so clear and pure.

If dew like rain should fall?
Or the little woman be half so great If she were six feet tall?

Is the band as soft as the nestling bird That grips the grip of steel?
Is the voice as low as the summer wind That rules without appeal?
And the warrior, scholar, saint and sage,
May light and plan and pray,
The world will wag till the end of time In the little woman's way.

Mabel Wiley's Lovers.

Early one June morning, not many years ago, a young couple might have been seen strolling along by the side of a babbling brook a short distance from the village of North Conway, New Hampshire.

Harry Fletcher, although a late riser when at home, had determined to be up betimes this morning and catch a mess of trout for breakfast. Not for his own breakfast, however, but for that of Miss Kitty Gibbon, who, like himself had come to pass a few weeks at the Kearsarge House.

'Twill please her,' thought Harry, 'to hear how I left my comfortable couch for her sake, at an hour when only farmers are stirring.'

But Miss Gibbon, who had seen him the evening before making ready his fishing tackle, had said to herself: 'I'll be up early, too, and go with him.' And she kept her word, nay she was down before her admirer. And when the latter discovered Kitty seated on the piazza reading 'Middlemarch,' he of course invited her to accompany him, which invitation Kitty accepted, but not until he had asked her a second time; and then she closed the book slowly, lingering a moment over the last line and exclaiming: 'What an interesting tale this is!' So that Harry was half tempted to apologize for thus interrupting her reading.

'The truth is, Miss Gibbon,' he said, as they wended their way toward the stream—'the truth is, I know that you like fresh trout. For no other human being would I have risen at such an unearthly hour.'

'Indeed!' returned Kitty with an air of perfect indifference. Yet, accustomed as she was to receiving attention and to hear flattering words, she could not prevent a tiny rose from blooming on her pallid cheek when Harry went on to assure her upon his honor that this was the truth.

In our opinion Miss Gibbon is an attractive young lady. But most people might not agree with us; and not a few of her rivals declare it is only her money that makes her so pleasing to the gentlemen. There is, indeed, a slight cast in one of her eyes, and her forehead is too broad for a woman's. But then she is gifted with a melodious voice—a rare gift among American women—and has exquisite teeth, which she knows how to display to the best advantage by a merry laugh practised before the mirror. Her hair, too, wonderful to relate, is all her own, and despite the care which she bestowed on her toilet, one glossy ringlet always manages to escape from its thrall and fly hither and thither. But the best feature Kitty possesses—at least so think we—is her nose. It is a bold Roman nose, which proclaims her to be a girl of character, and we are convinced that, however spoilt she may be by fortune, there is a solid groundwork of worth in Kitty which would reveal itself if the occasion demanded.

Her mother, who is a rich widow, has been living five or six years abroad, most of the time in Paris, and Miss Gibbon only came home this summer because she thought that a trip across the ocean would be good for her daughter's health.

Harry Fletcher, Kitty's companion this June morning, is the son of a prominent New York banker, and as it seems to be one of the laws of nature that wealth should attract wealth, we cannot wonder if he and Miss Gibbon have very soon become known to each other.

'He will be as good a catch for you' child, as you will be for him,' spoke the watchful mother. 'And if you play your cards right we may be back in Paris before October, bringing Mr. Fletcher along with us; and, considering his prospects he will do almost as well as a count.'

It would be untrue, however, to say that there was no love between this youthful pair. Money may indeed have first drawn them together; but now after only a fortnight's acquaintance, we doubt, if one of them were suddenly to be stricken with poverty, whether poverty would separate them.

'How charming this walk is!' exclaimed Harry as he took Kitty's hand to help her over a fallen tree.

'In Paris such a delightful walk would not be impossible,' answered Kitty. 'Do you really enjoy it?' said Harry, 'It must seem so different from the Champs Elysees and the Bois de Boulogne.'

His companion was silent a moment, and 'twas not until he repeated that the pine woods and stony fields of New Hampshire must appear very rugged and unpleasant to her that she said:

'Well, but here, sir, I do for once in my life feel that I am free. Why at the fashionable pensionnat where mother put me I was not allowed to walk out alone even with my cousin Arthur.'

'Oh! you can't imagine how I long to see Paris,' continued Harry.

'Well, despite what I have just said,' answered Kitty, 'it is a most fascinating city—the queen of cities, and there is a large colony of Americans there, who have made up their minds to die in Paris, and who look upon their countrymen here as semi-barbarians.'

In a few minutes they reached the brook and Harry cast in his fly. But no fish rose, and presently he gave another throw. This time it was not skillfully done, or rather it was most skillfully done, for the fly as it went circling round his head, got caught in Kitty's truant curl, who laughed and said: 'You have hooked a big trout now Mr. Harry Fletcher.'

'Well, I came purposely to catch a mess for you,' returned Harry, 'But may I crave leave to keep this one dear fish all for myself?'

'What do you mean?' laughed Kitty; as he tried to disentangle the fly.

'I mean—' here his fingers stopped working and his voice trembled. 'I mean—' Kitty, who understood him well enough, in another moment gave the happy response, and Harry was so overjoyed that he wound up his line and did not fish any more.

But they did not return immediately to the village; they felt drawn nearer to each other in the lonely woods, with only the trees and the brook to watch them; and so on and on they wandered, until by and by they emerged from the forest and saw before them an old farmhouse with moss-covered roof, on which the morning sun was shining, and round about the homestead the stream made well-nigh a circle—a bright, silvery circle, murmuring sweet music to those who dwelt there.

The lovers paused a moment and gazed upon the scene without speaking. There presently Kitty said: 'I could live in such a spot all my life.'

'So could I,' said Harry, turning his sparkling eyes upon her. 'With you I could live anywhere.'

'Let us draw nearer,' continued Kitty, and speak to the young woman who is feeding the turkeys by the door; and quite a pretty girl she is,' Kitty added in an undertone, as Mabel Wiley turned towards them.

'Yes, if one admires a dark complexion,' said Harry.

'And buried among these hills,' continued Kitty compassionately. 'But I forgot what I said a moment ago; if I could be happy here with you, dear Harry, why, she may have a lover too, and not pine one bit for city life.'

The genial way in which Mabel returned their greeting quite won Kitty's heart, while Harry inwardly confessed that, although he did not like brunettes, she was the handsomest one he had ever seen. And when presently he glanced down at her bare feet she did not blush, but quietly remarked:

'I have been gathering lilies, sir, at the pond, and I had to wade in after them.'

But Harry thought no excuse was needed; for Mabel's foot was as perfectly shaped as her hand—a sculptor might have chosen it for a model.

'What a sweet home you have!' observed Kitty. 'And the swallows love it, too; how many there are skimming over the grass!'

'Tis not my home,' returned Mabel. 'I am here only on a visit to my grandfather.'

'Indeed! Well, may I ask where your home is?' continued Kitty.

'In Illinois. My parents settled there twenty three years ago, when they were first married, and I was born there, and I like it much better than New Hampshire.'

'Do you? And what part of Illinois are you from?'

'Lee County; and we live on the bank of the river called Rock River which is full of black bass and pickerel, and in autumn its covered with mallard and teal. O! I love Rock River.'

'Well, if your home is a more delightful spot than this it must be exquisite indeed.'
