Plot That Failed;

Love That Would Not Be Denied.

CHAPTER V.

Perhaps such great personages as the Earl and Countess of Lackland were too exalted to possess those emotions of affection and tenderness which fall to the lot of commoner people.

If they did not possess them they managed to conceal them with infinite art, and no one could accuse them of the common folly of wearing their hearts upon their sleeves.

Assuredly Lady Ethel must have had a warm heart and a generous nature or the coldness of her exalted parents would have chilled her and rendered her cold likewise.

That she was not, the reader will soon perceive.

Thousands of persons envied my Lord and Lady Lackland. Never did their carriage roll through the streets, or their names appear in the paper among the fashionable intelligence, but hundreds exclaimed: "I wish I were a Lackland."

But not one of the envious many knew what they were really envying.

There is a skeleton in every house; there was one ever present in all the great and small houses of Lackland. Sometimes he kept discreetly to his cupboard; at others he stepped boldly out and rattled his bones, and grinned in a manner horrible to see.

Oh, yes, reader, other people besides yourself have a skeleton, and there are some persons unfortunate enough to have two.

If we entered the Grosvenor Square mansion, say on the morning after that memorable little dinner party at Midway Park, far away in Penruddie, we might perhaps have caught a glimpse of that skeleton starting out of the cupboard.

Lord Lackland was seated at the morocco-lined writing table in his own room, with a few newspapers, a decanter of light wine, and a box of biscuits before him.

The door opened, and a young man, no other than Lord Fitz Plantagenet Boisdale, entered.

There was a flush on his fair face, and a look of doubt and distrustful nervousness in his rather simple blue eyes.

"Good morning, sir," he said, holding out his hand.

"Good-morning, Fitz," said the Earl, extending two fingers and glancing coldly at a chair which stood near the table ready for any visitor on business. "You are ten minutes behind your time."

"I am very sorry, sir," said the boy, for he was little more in years or appearance, "but I'd promised to ride with Ethel this morning, and I forgot it until after I left you, so I went down to the stable to tell Markham to saddle the two boys, and he kept me to talk about that chestnut—"

The earl interrupted what promised to be a lengthy explanatory excuse with his cold, little bow, and glanced at the ornate timepiece on the table.

"It is of little consequence to me; I am obliged to leave at the half hour to meet an appointment, therefore I shall only be able to give you the time I promised to give you. You wished to speak to me."

"Yes, sir," said Lord Fitz, looking down at his boots nervously, and then up at the ceiling. "I wanted to ask you if you could let me have a couple of hundred pounds beyond my allow-

Vigorol A SPRING TONIC.

The latest medicine on the market is the Great French Tonic VIGOROL. Every home should have it. VIGOROL tones the whole system. Rundown men and women can be made strong and healthy. It tones you at once. That tired, dragging, sleepy feeling is removed, and you become bright and cheerful. The blood is purified, pimples and blotches are removed and a clear skin is the result, and life becomes worth while. Do you need toning up? Well, then get a bottle of VIGOROL at all drug stores.

ance to—to pay a few debts, which—which, of course, I could not help running into while I was in Paris."

Lord Lackland walked to the bureau, and took out a bundle—a very small bundle—of banknotes; from this he counted out a hundred pounds worth, and, holding them in his hand, said:

"Here are a hundred pounds; I cannot give you any more, for a very good reason, I cannot afford to do so."

Lord Fitz looked up with a simple stare which extended his mouth as well as his eyes.

"I cannot afford to do so," said the metallic voice. "It is quite time that you should be placed in possession of the truth as regards my—I may say our—pecuniary position. I ought, perhaps, to have informed you of the condition of my affairs long earlier, but consideration for your feelings deterred me. Fitz, the estates in London, in Italy, in England, are mortgaged to their fullest extent. The revenue is nearly swallowed up by the interest, and there is so little ready money in the house that if the servants were to demand their wages I should not be in a position to pay them."

Lord Fitz stared, pale and aghast.

The skeleton was out grimly walking before him. For the first time Lord Boisdale learned that he was heir to a rich crop of embarrassments, and that the great Earl of Lackland, his father, was a poor man.

"Great Heaven!" he exclaimed. "You don't mean to say that, sir!" unlike his father, showing his emotion unmistakably.

"I have said it," replied the earl, "and now you know my—our—real position. Credit, Fitz, has kept our heads above water for a great many years—credit alone. How much longer it may do so I cannot say, but I can estimate if your bills for necessities amount to the sums which they here represent."

"What's—what's to be done?" asked Lord Fitz, staring at his calm parent with bewildered horror. "We must sell some of the places, the horses, the diamonds, by jingo!—the—everything!"

"We cannot sell what is sold or out of our hands already. You do not understand business matters, unfortunately, or you would at once comprehend that the houses, the land, being mortgaged, and the diamonds at the—ahem—pawnbroker's, it is simply impossible to make further money of them."

The young man jumped up and took three paces up and down.

"But," said he, suddenly, and with incredulity upon his face, "I saw my drawing-room."

"Not exactly," said the earl, "paste imitations only; the real are in the possession of a pawnbroker. But if you have any taste or inclination for an investigation or examination of our finances, you have my permission to examine the documents which you will find in this case—"

"Great Heaven, no!" said young

Fitz. "I don't doubt your word, my lord; I'm only stunned, knocked all of a heap as one may say. It seems so incredible! Why, by jingo, the fellows are always asking me to lend them money—and—and saying how rich we are; and you say that—"

"That I cannot afford to let you have the other hundred pounds," said the earl, replacing the bundle in the bureau. "While we are upon this subject, which is too painful to be renewed, I will remind you that you are heir to the estate, and that it is in your power to clear it of the encumbrances."

"In mine!" exclaimed Lord Fitz.

"Exactly," said the earl. "By a judicious marriage. You must marry an heiress, Fitz. There are a number of them to be met with; and a great many are extremely anxious to purchase position with their money. I speak plainly because the matter is too serious for mere insinuation. You must marry well, and—ahem—so, of course, I must your sister."

He glanced at the timepiece significantly.

The young lad rose at the hint and took up his hat.

"I won't detain you any longer, sir," he said. "I am very much obliged for—the money, and, of course, I'm very sorry to hear such a bad account of the estate."

"Exactly," said the earl, with a cold smile, looking out of the window.

"You are riding that bay, I see, and I trust you will take care of it. I had to pay a heavy bill for the mare whose knees you cut last month. Let me beg of you to be careful with the bay."

"Certainly, sir," said Lord Boisdale, and with a very uncomfortable air he left the room.

As he passed into the corridor a sweet, clear voice rose from the hall.

"Fitz, are you coming?"

Fitz smothered a sigh, and as cheerfully as he could, replied:

"All right; here I am," and ran down the stairs.

In the hall stood Lady Ethel Boisdale.

"How long you have been!" she said, with a smile. "Are you not ashamed to keep a lady waiting? Well I think brothers imagine they are privileged to take advantage of a sister."

As she spoke her eyes noted the disappointment and embarrassment on his countenance, and when they were mounted and turning out of the square she said:

"What is the matter, Fitz? Will not papa give you the money?"

"No," said Fitz, with an uncomfortable laugh, "no; and supplies an excellent reason for not complying with my modest request. Oh, dear me, I'm very miserable. There! don't ask me what about, because I shan't tell you. It would only worry you, and you're too good a fellow—I mean girl—to be worried. Let's put these lazy animals into something sharper; I hate this square and these streets."

Lady Ethel touched her horse gently, and in silence they cantered into the park.

"Look," said Ethel, presently, "who is that lifting his hat?"

"Eh? where?" said Lord Fitz. "Oh, it's Bertie Fairfax and Leicester Dodson—capital fellow, Bertie. Let's pull up a minute, Ethel."

And with a smile of welcome he steered his horse near the rails, upon which the two gentlemen who had raised their hats were leaning.

One of them, Leicester Dodson, we know, the other was a tall, splendidly built fellow, with a frank, genial face, and a noble yet peculiarly free and graceful bearing.

"Hello, Bertie! Good-morning, Mr. Dodson. Delighted to see you, Ethel. You will let me introduce my friends, Mr. Dodson, Mr. Bertie Fairfax, Bertie, Mr. Dodson, this is my sister, Lady Ethel Boisdale."

Both the gentlemen raised their hats; Lady Ethel bent her beautiful head with her rare smile.

She always liked to know any friends of her brother whom he chose to introduce, for with all his simplicity he was too wise to fall into the mistake of showing her any but the most unexceptionable of them.

Bertie Fairfax looked up at the lady and then at the horse. He was a connoisseur of both.

"It is a beautiful day," he said, opening the conversation with the usual weatherwise remark. "Your horse looks as if he enjoyed it." "Which he does," said Ethel. "I am sure I do. It is delightful—walking or riding."

"I should prefer the latter," said Bertie Fairfax, "but my horse is lamed temporarily and I am compelled to pedestrianize."

"What a pity," said Ethel, adding, with her sweet smile, "perhaps the change will be good for you."

Bertie Fairfax looked up at her with his frank eyes to see if she was quizzing him, then laughed musically.

"Perhaps he thought so and tumbled down on purpose. It doesn't much matter—I like walking, but not here; I like more room. My friend, Mr. Dodson, however, insisted upon this promenade. He is an observer of human nature—a cynic, I regret to say—and finds material for bitter and scornful reflection in the gay and thoughtless crowd. Are you going to Lady Darefield's ball to-night?"

"Yes," said Ethel. "I presume you, also, by your question, are going?"

"Yes," said Bertie Fairfax, "I am glad to say."

Five minutes before he had sworn to Mr. Leicester Dodson that he wouldn't go to my Lady Darefield's ball for five hundred pounds, and five hundred pounds were of some consequence to Mr. Bertie Fairfax.

"It is very hot for balls, but one must do his duty. I hope I may be able to persuade you to give me a dance?"

"I don't know," said Ethel, with a smile.

At that moment her horse walked on a little. Mr. Fairfax moved farther up the rail, and then conversation, no more confidential than that we have already given, continued until Lord Fitz was heard to exclaim "Good-by," and then joined his sister.

Both the gentlemen on foot raised their hats, Bertie Fairfax with his cordial, pleasant smile, Leicester Dodson with his grave and also pleasant grace, and after a return of the salutations the four young people parted.

"Well," said Lord Fitz, from whose mind the recent meeting had expunged the unpleasant remembrances of his morning interview, "what do you think of them?"

Ethel was silent for a moment.

"I don't know which was the handsomer," she said, thoughtfully.

"That's just like you women, Eth; you always think of the graces first."

"Well," said Ethel, "there was no time to know anything more about them. I think Mr. Fairfax is very pleasant—he has a nice voice and such frank eyes. There are some men with whom you feel friendly in the first ten minutes; he is one of them."

"You're right," said Lord Fitz. "Bertie's the jolliest and dearest old fellow going. Poor old Bert!"

"Why poor?" said Ethel.

"Because he is poor, deuced poor," said Lord Fitz, muttering under his breath, with a sigh, "like some more of us."

Mother! the Child Is Costive, Billious.

Don't Hesitate! A laxative is necessary if tongue is coated, breath bad or stomach sour.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grownups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

It is an actual fact that the new skirts are having their hems stiffened. The smartest colors are the short, upstanding effects of pleated mull.

1132—A VERY SIMPLE BUT PLEASING MODEL. Girl's Dress with Long or Short Sleeve.

This design will readily appeal to the busy thoughtful mother, who is mindful of her little girls' comfort. Dresses that "hang from the shoulders" as this one piece model are best for growing children, for they give freedom of movement and do not hamper or bind. The style in its simplicity, will be easy to develop. The front is shaped at the closing, and the sleeve in either length has a neat cuff. A simple round collar finishes the neck edge. Galatea, Devonshire cloth, gingham, chambray, seersucker, percale, cashmere or serge are good for this dress. It will be so charming in any pretty inexpensive wash materials, or in the novelty plaid or striped wool and cotton goods. The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. It requires 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for an 8 year size. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

1133—A SIMPLE FROCK FOR MOTHER'S GIRL. Girl's Dress with Long or Short Sleeve and with Collar or In Round Neck Outline.

The Pattern is splendid for all wash materials, such as galatea, kindergarten, cloth, poplin, percale, gingham, seersucker and chambray. Also for velvet, silk, cloth or novelty woolsens. A Narrow Escape

A little girl, who was down Carter's Hill last night, narrow escape from being crushed death by a street car. She fell from about midway up the hill on the slide, in which position she was unable to control the speed. The car came in sight. Fortunately, she shot across the path just between the car and fender, and was safely in a snow bank. Hon. M. Power's residence, was coming down the hill at good speed at the time, and the man, on seeing the coaster, the brakes, but his action would have been too late, as the little girl came from death was nothing miraculous. A second later she would probably have been crushed.

The girl escaped without injury, was very frightened. She has a lesson that will also be of benefit to other youthful coasters, unconscious of the great risk continually sliding on the steepness of the city.

THE WAR SURPRISES.

New York Herald:—At the beginning of the war it was said that one of the nations had surprise stores for their enemies and the other.

There were wonderful military inventions that had been kept in a closely guarded secret and that were sprung on the foe when least expected.

Five months of war have now passed and the one supreme surprise of the world is that highly civilized nations do not seem to have realized the losses of men that would be involved in the 42-centimeter gun that reforts thought almost impregnable.

few days is as nothing compared to the loss of more than 3,000,000 men in killed, wounded and missing, according to apparently conservative estimates, the German Austrians have suffered up to time.

A Narrow Escape.

A little girl, who was coasting down Carter's Hill last night, had a narrow escape from being crushed to death by a street car. She started from about midway up the hill, lying on the slide, in which position she was unable to control the speed when the car came in sight. Fortunately, however, she shot across the track, just between the car and fender, landing safely in a snow bank opposite Hon. M. Power's residence. The car was coming down the hill at a pretty good speed at the time, and the motor man, on seeing the coaster, applied the brakes, but his action would have been too late, as the little girl's escape from death was nothing short of miraculous. A second later and she would probably have been crushed to death.

The girl escaped without injury, but was very frightened. She has learned a lesson that will also be of much benefit to other youthful coasters, who unconscious of the great risks are continually sliding on the steep inclines of the city.

"The Kiss" Song

Is Perfectly Rendered by Miss Margaret Ayer.

Margaret Ayer, the Nickel vocalist, is winning new friends at every appearance. Last night she sang the beautiful waltz song "The Kiss" and it made a big hit. It is a charming number and Miss Ayer gave a perfect rendition of it. She will repeat it this evening and those who have not yet heard it should attend as it is well worth hearing. There will be a new programme of pictures to-day, including a Gaumont special in three reels entitled, "Who Killed George Lambert?" There is also a western melodrama, "A Decree of Justice," and a reel of Mutual Weekly. The comedy is by the Keystone Company, "A Barn Yard Flirtation."

This is a classy programme and will afford pleasure to all who see it. The Nickel is the best place to spend the leisure hour as it is always cosy and comfortable, and the pictures are of the best.

Marine Notes.

The Mongolian is supposed to have left Liverpool yesterday for here. The Queen Wilhelmina sails from Liverpool to-day for this port. The Tobasco leaves Liverpool on the 16th. The barq, Gaspe sailed yesterday for Pernambuco, fish laden by James Baird, Ltd.

At the Crescent.

J. O'Neil Farrell, the popular baritone, is singing a first class ballad at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. Read down the list of pictures advertised in another part of this paper, then go to the Crescent and see the show, you will certainly be charmed that you went.

THE WAR SURPRISES.

New York Herald:—At the beginning of the war it was said that every one of the nations had surprises in store for their enemies and the world. There were wonderful military and naval inventions that had been kept involuntarily secret and that were to be sprung on the foe when least expected. Five months of war have now passed and the one supreme surprise for the world is that highly civilized nations do not seem to have realized the awful loss of men that would be involved. The 42-centimeter gun that reduces forts thought almost impregnable in a few days is as nothing compared to the loss of more than 3,000,000 of men in killed, wounded and missing, which, according to apparently conservative estimates, the Germans and Austrians have suffered up to this time.

STEPHANO'S PASSENGERS.—The following passengers came by the S. S. Stephano yesterday.—H. M. Dix, N. Ryan, E. Gosse, R. Baker, A. Mouton, J. B. Orr, E. Dickson, G. Brookfield, C. O'Flaherty, J. C. Channing, J. Sinclair, A. Hollett and H. de Liege.

A Visit to Our Contingent.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—I had the privilege last week of visiting Salisbury Plain and meeting some of our boys there, and I thought a few notes of my impressions might be acceptable to your readers.

The name signifies the location of the "Plains," adjoining as it does the old English town of Salisbury, and a quaint, interesting old place it is. Its Cathedral, of course, is the outstanding feature and its grace and beauty must be seen to be appreciated. The fine old trees and great expanse of green sward surrounding it form a fitting setting for this gem of architecture, and the complete quietude pervading the place accentuate the antiquity with it. The Plain is about 12 miles out and is reached by motor car and extends over a vast area of country. It is an ideal camping ground barren of trees and consists of miles and miles of pasture land. The term "ideal" perhaps should be qualified by good weather conditions as just now owing to the rainy season being on, the mud is very much in evidence. Big steam lorries, motor cars and transport wagons have churned the roads into rivers of mud and the soft boiling of a soft nature sticks to one like a plaster. The Newfoundland Contingent is at present located at "Bustard Camp" in company with the Canadian troops and living under canvas, but I understand are shortly to go into winter sheds or as they are called here "huts" and some of our men are at present constructing those. There are some 32,000 Canadian troops on the Plains as well as our boys, divided in different camps about 5 or 6 miles apart and the scene in them is a very busy one. The life is a strenuous one. Up at day break, an hour's drill before breakfast, doing any necessary work of all kinds, drilling and marching through the day in all kinds of weather makes them pretty tired at nightfall.

And Glad of Their Supper, and at 9.30 o'clock they turn in pleased to rest after their arduous day.

This life, however, makes for physical and moral fitness and strengthens and hardens a man for actual warfare. Our men are in splendid condition, hard as nails, and eager for the fray, and are anxious to get to grips with the enemy, and I am confident when they do, they will give a good account of themselves, "do their bit" for the Empire and do credit to the land of their birth. I understand they are already winning golden opinions from the War Office for their exemplary conduct while on parade and sentry duty, which is a good augury for the future. On presenting my credentials to the Major of the Company, I was given in charge of Lieutenant Alderdyce who brought me to his tent and did all he could to make me comfortable and where I met Captains Ayre, Tait and March who brought me to lunch with them where I saw the Colonel and some of the others. It was a great delight to me thus to fraternize with my compatriots and find them in such good health and spirits, and I regretted that my time was limited and that I could not further prolong the pleasure and meet others whom I longed to see. Those lines are mainly to assure the friends at home that they are in good health and spirits, acquitting themselves under rather difficult conditions as "good soldiers" and ready and eager for the day to come when they may play their part and acquit themselves like men for King and Country and for all we hold dear under the British flag.

Yours truly,
EDWIN MURRAY,

West End Theatre!

There will be a complete change of pictures at the beautiful little new theatre in the west end, to-day. Mr. Rossley is making arrangements to bring out a first class lady singer from England—a singer who will give her audience and sing her best to please all parties. While the pantomime lasts Mr. Rossley is sorry he can't be at the west end to personally superintend matters, but will be there in course of time.

Twenty-Five Days Overdue

FROM HERE TO BRIDGEWATER.

A recent exchange says that much anxiety is felt for the safety of the schr. Bradford C. French, which left this port for Bridgewater, N.S., on Nov. 28th last and has not been heard from since. The Bradford C. French is a three-masted schr. of 968 tons register, built at Kennebunkport, Maine, in 1884. She was commanded by Capt. A. W. Clarke, of Lunenburg, Maine, and carried a crew of seven men beside the captain. The vessel, it will be remembered, was here discharging a cargo of timber consigned to the Hicwood Lumber Co. Under ordinary weather conditions the run to Bridgewater should not have occupied more than 15 days, and as the vessel is now 24 days overdue, it is feared she has foundered.

M. C. L. I. Debate.

The forty-eighth annual session of the Methodist College Literary Institute will be held at the Institute room in the College to-morrow evening. The 1915 session promises to be one of more than ordinary interest, since the syllabus has been arranged in accordance with the times. The questions selected for discussion will deal with many subjects now agitating the public mind. These debates will include questions of local importance as well as those dealing with the war. Many of those who took part in last season's debates are now in the service of the Empire. To-morrow night's debate will be, "Is the war the result of economic or military pressure?"

Niobe Met by Stephano.

The day after the Red Cross Liner Stephano left New York for Halifax, she was met by H.M.S. Niobe. Capt. Smith stopped his ship while a lieutenant and quarter master came aboard and asked if they would oblige those of the Niobe with newspapers, as it was a long while since they had left the shore and were anxious to hear the news of the war. Capt. Smith "cleaned up" all the papers and periodicals he could get and handed them over.

HOCKEY.

Much interest is being evinced in the coming hockey matches. Last night at the Prince's Rink the St. Bon's and Terra Novas had a practice, the former at 6.30 and the latter at 10.30. Both these teams have a deal of young blood in their ranks and should prove close runners up.

B. I. S. DANCE.—Twelfth Night. Tickets may be had from Miss L. Higgins and members of the L. & A. Committee.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—In the published list of donations to the Belvedere Orphanage, the name of Mr. W. O'D. Kelly (Alderdale Road), a barrel of Butter Blacuit, was inadvertently omitted.

Schooner in Peril.

CREW LANDED WITH DIFFICULTY CAPTAIN STILL ABOARD.

The Minister of Fisheries received two messages telling him of a schooner in distress. One from King's Cove said the schooner was caught in a hole off Tickle Cove and that it was supposed to be the St. Elmo, Capt. Donny. She was drifting near a sunken reef and her position was dangerous in case of heavy sea. The other, from Open Hall, identified the schooner as the St. Elmo. She was being hauled through the surf. Assistance was asked and the Minister dispatched the s.s. Prospero to her aid.

Pantomime, 21st Performance!

There's a record for you, twenty-one times the same performance and still they come, and still charmed and delighted. Running now better than ever. What other talent has ever given the same show twenty-one times? It takes the Rosseleys to provide such a clever talented performance, innocent, clean and refined. Every night sees our most prominent citizens enjoying the season's treat. His Excellency Governor Davidson and Lady Davidson, were delighted with the show, presented each performer with candy on their visit, and personally complimented the Rosseleys. Robt. in Hood and his merry men will be the next big venture and will be just as good as Santa Claus and the Fairies' Sword.

Here and There.

FOR RED CROSS ROUTE.—On her return from Havre, France, the S.S. Perenna will be engaged on the Red Cross route, replacing the Florizal and running in conjunction with the Stephano.

SHORT OF COAL.

The S.S. Perenna, Capt. Mitchell, bound from Palermo to New York in ballast, put into this port at 12.30 day, short of coal. The ship reports having experienced boisterous weather crossing the Atlantic. The Perenna belongs to the Anchor Line, Bowring Bros. are the Agents, and Mr. Tasker Cook is supplying.

FINED FOR GIVING CREDIT.—A licensed publican was summoned to court to-day by Constable Forsey, charged with giving liquor on credit to an outport man, who "blew the coast." In view of the evidence disclosed a minimum fine of $10 was imposed. This is the first case of its kind ever heard in our Court since the credit system was stopped.

Household Notes

- Always boil new ironware before using.
- A waste basket in every room is a necessity.
- Medicine stains can almost always be dissolved by alcohol.
- Use paper bags for covering pitchers with food in them.
- A milk bot in the kitchen.
- Grown-up stockings will make excellent lights for little girls.
- Chocolate stains can be removed by washing in soap and tepid water.
- When breakfast muffins are left over, split and toast them for lunch.
- Always have the food served to a sick person spotlessly clean and fresh.
- White of egg for an invalid may be mixed with lemon, orange or grape juice.
- Loaf pans for bread should be narrow to insure thorough baking of the bread.
- Some coffee needs boiling and some does not—one must experiment to find out.
- Extra deep pudding pans, pie plates and the like are preferable to shallow ones.
- Worn table napkins should be saved to dry lettuce in when preparing the salad.
- A glass measuring cup and glass lemon squeezer should be found in every kitchen.
- To remove tar stains apply kerosene, then wash with warm water and naphtha soap.
- Milk and cream stains should be washed out in cold water, followed by soap and water.
- A measuring cup and flour sifter should be kept in the flour barrel to save time.
- Uncooked fats, such as butter, cream and olive oil, are more wholesome than cooked.
- When boiling meat put a wire tea-pot standard in the kettle and the meat will not burn.
- If you use cleaning powder for saucepans, be sure to wash out the pan afterwards with cold water.

THE ROBBERS IN BELGIUM.
It is hard to see how Belgium can pay a war tax of $70,000,000 to Germany in addition to the war levies exacted from various Belgian cities. A people that is destitute and starving and whose cities have been laid waste and fields ravaged by war has enough to do to keep soul and body together without contributing enormous sums to the war chest of a hostile army of invaders.—N. Y. World.

"Let's Pretend" and "Some Day."

By RUTH CAMERON.

"There, that's my house," I heard a young girl on the trolley say to her companion, eagerly leaning forward and pointing out a pretty little brown frame house with a pretty garden. "Y o u r house?" blankly, from him. "Yes, you know, the house I chose. We girls have to take this long ride every day and we amuse ourselves by each picking out our favorite house. We pass through several towns and I have a house in every one. It's great fun. We take such an interest in them."

The girl's companion listened to this outburst with an air somewhat superior, somewhat amused, but not at all interested. When he spoke it was to change the subject. Without knowing one thing more about those two people I felt assured from that scrap of conversation that they were not meant for each other, and I hoped that I was not witnessing a budding romance. For it was plain to see that she was the citizen of a country that he never could and never would care to enter—the beautiful land of "let's pretend."

If all the happiness in the world comes from real pleasures and all the happiness that comes from anticipation and from just pretending could be compared, I wonder which would be the larger accumulation. Not to know the way into the land of "let's pretend" or "having once known it to have forgotten it as one travels 'farther from the east' is one of the greatest tragedies in life. The lack of money can rob you of some pleasures; the lack of health and vitality or of congenial companionship of many more, but nothing can rob you of all the happiness to be found in the land of "let's pretend," if you keep the key to the gate of that wonderful country in your heart.

Journeys That Cost Nothing.

I know a girl who is passionately fond of travel and cannot afford half enough of it to satisfy her craving, yet she is not unhappy or dissatisfied, for she is a citizen of the land of "let's pretend" and during the long stretches that elapse between her trips she keeps herself happy by collecting time tables and steamer schedules and Beechdecks and planning wonderful trips. She may take them some day and she may never take them, but the happiness of planning and pretending and anticipating is hers, and nothing can take it away.

Again I know two young folks who can find infinite diversion in poring over their catalog of musical records and compiling fascinating lists of the records they are going to buy when their "ship comes in."

A child without toys is considered a pathetic sight, but to me he is no more pathetic than the grown man or woman who does not know how to play with the wonderful playthings of "let's pretend" and "someday."

NOW TIME TO TAKE PART OF BURDEN OFF BRITISH TAX-PAYER.

London, Dec. 30.—Speaking at a civic reception given in his honour at Auckland, N.Z., Premier Fisher, of Australia said that the question of defence of the Pacific had now become an urgent necessity. Some thought that at the close of the war there would be peace for many years. This was too uncertain a foundation on which to build their security.

The national development of Australia and New Zealand would be stimulated if they relied on their own resources by maintaining a naval force which was a direct part of the British navy, but was under local executive control. Experience showed that local control was the best.

The day had already come when self-respect should persuade Australia and New Zealand to abandon their policy of reliance upon British taxpayers. The two countries were not more rich in financial resources, but they were much richer in productive power and their condition demanded that they should bear at least their full share in their own defence and co-operate in the maintenance of the Empire.

ITALY UPSETS VON BUELOW'S PROPOSALS.

Venice, Dec. 30.—Italy's expedition in Avona, which she occupied several days ago, appears to have produced considerable irritation at Vienna, according to advices from the Austrian capital.

It is thought that this possibly the suddenness of the Italian move may have disturbed plans attributed to Prince von Buelow's mission at Rome, which is said to have included an offer of southern Albania to Italy upon her agreeing to certain conditions.

AS USUAL.—We are pleased to learn that the Hon. George Knowling is continuing his bonus to his employees as usual.

COMMITTEE WILL STUDY GUN-DEAFNESS.

London, Dec. 29.—The announcement that the British Government is to appoint an emergency committee to consider measures for the prevention of gun deafness among soldiers and sailors calls attention to an added terror of war which has been much discussed recently in military and medical circles.

Several officers who recently returned on furlough from the French front were called up for examination and found to have suffered more than a 50 per cent impairment in hearing, owing to the incessant ear-splitting reports of their own guns.

The Prophet.

WALTER MASON.

The weather man says "Snow," and then all people know it will be fine, the sun will shine, and warm up things below. The weather man says "Fair," and people everywhere their slickers don't put gumboots on and for a rain prepare. The prophet does his best; he seldom takes a rest; all day he scripps with charts and maps from North and South and West. He toils and never tires; he reads expensive wires from Hudson's Bay and far Carthage, and from the British shires. And still his guess is punk; his prophecies are bunk; one time in eight he gets it straight, and seven times it's junk. His system's not O. K.; it leads him all astray; 'twere best, perhaps, to burn his maps, and throw his charts away. He ought to study well the groundhog of the dell, which knoweth more of weather ere than human sharps can tell. A goosebone he should get, 'en though he goes in debt; for that will show if we'll have snow, or weather dry or wet. Let him observe the wrens, the wise old cackling hens, the toads and frogs, the barnyard hogs, the bullsnakes in their dens. And then when he foretells the storm that whoops and yells, the storm will come and freeze us numb, and he'll be wearing bells.

Have You an Itchy Spot?

Somewhere on your body? If so, attend to it at once. In Eczema—and Itchy spots, whether dry and scurfy, or moist and inclined to "weep," are generally eczematous—delays are foolish, allowing the disease to spread and affect more of the good skin. Your best chance for a cure is to use Zylex, which will give almost instant relief, and if used in the earlier stages of the trouble will almost certainly bring a cure, and in any event will greatly ameliorate the trouble. Ask your druggist about it. Price 50c. a box. Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

A NOTABLE PROTEST.

Professor Martin Rade, of Marburg University, a Protestant Liberal Theologian and a man well known in his own country on account of his literary and political activities, writing in the Christliche Welt, a widely circulated magazine, of which he is the editor, speaks thus of the violation of Belgian neutrality, "says the Modern Churchman:—

"I can only deplore the manner in which the Chancellor, in his speech of August 4, has treated the question of neutral countries, for there was no need for him to have recourse to the proverb, 'Necessity knows no law.' With that proverb, I cannot convince those who behold in the existence of neutral States a triumph of the rights of man. That is why it is a pity—for which it is hard indeed to make reparation—that the German Empire should not have abstained altogether, at the very outset, from the sin of violating rights which it has committed against Belgium. Whoever accuses my view of being unpatriotic I challenge, by whatever test he likes to show that he loves his Fatherland better than I do."

FRENCH OFFICER WINS IRON CROSS ON BATTLEFIELD.

New York, Dec. 31.—The German press bureau in this city makes public the following despatch from Paris:

"Reports have been received here of the winning of the German Iron Cross by a French officer under most tragic conditions during a night fight around Ypern. The story is given in detail by a French soldier.

"The night had passed, the morning was dawning and we were able to see the territory where the fight had been going on," he says in his statement.

"Undoubtedly the Germans, after the battle, had returned to get their wounded comrades. However, the field appeared to be clear and we saw no dead or wounded except one wounded German soldier. He rested half way between the trenches of the fighting forces. Our people continued to shoot, but did not fire at the unfortunate man.

"Suddenly we beheld a German officer arise from the German trenches and attempt to reach his wounded countryman. A shot from us struck him down. Then our commanding officer ordered 'Stop firing!' We obeyed and noticed much to our surprise, our commander advancing toward the German trenches. A bullet fired by the Germans struck him, but, undaunted, he arose and with firm step came to the side of the wounded German soldier.

"Shouts of applause were heard from both sides and for nearly an hour no shots were fired. The French officer raised the German soldier, supported him and led him to the German trench. Then he made ready to return to the French side. But he was rewarded. A German officer rushed forward, tore from his own uniform the iron cross and fastened it on the breast of the chivalrous French hero. Loud cries of 'Bravo! Bravo!' were heard from the trenches of the two fighting armies.

"The Strassburger Post says the French officer is Capt. Detweiler, the son of a merchant who after the Franco-Prussian war, with his family, had left Strassburg and settled in France. He is now in a field hospital in Cherbourg.

STRIKE INDUSTRIAL GERMANY.

The principal business of the allies, Mr. Belloc rightly says, is to defeat the German armies in the field; but if they can strike at the manufacturing provinces they will be dealing a vital blow at German capacity for continued resistance. We think this view is so sound and so important that it must take a prominent place in any speculations about the future course of the war.—London Times.

WARNING TO GERMANS IN AMERICA.

The "Sun" has no desire to advise the German Government, but it feels constrained to admonish in a friendly way the representatives of that Government here that any attempt to create discord between the United States and Great Britain will be resented. The "Sun" yesterday in a Washington despatch gave ample evidence of persistent activity on the part of a group of Germans in Shanghai. We feel that there are some Germans nearer Washington than Shanghai, who can profit by this advice, for if they do not the "Sun" from a patriotic sense of duty may deem it necessary to be more explicit.—N. Y. Sun.

John Galsworthy Speaks Out.

HE ARRIGNS THE MOCKERY OF RELIGION—EAST END POVERTY—ADMITS THE DEFEAT OF THE UTOPIANS AND DEFINES WHAT CULTURE IS.

"THIS MONSTROUS MOCKERY."

"Three hundred thousand church spires raised to the glory of Christ! Three hundred million human creatures baptized into His service! And war to the death of them all! I trust the Almighty to give the victory to my arms!" "Let your hearts beat to God, and your fists in the face of the enemy!" "In prayer we call God's blessing on our valiant troops!"

"God on the lips of each potentate, and under the hundred thousand spires pry to the glory of Christ! Three hundred million human creatures baptized into His service! And war to the death of them all! I trust the Almighty to give the victory to my arms!" "Let your hearts beat to God, and your fists in the face of the enemy!" "In prayer we call God's blessing on our valiant troops!"

"No creed—in these days when two and two are put together—can stand against such reeling subversion of its foundation. After this monstrous mockery, beneath this grimacing skull of irony, how shall there remain faith in a religion preached and practiced to such ends?"

"PRICES HAVE GONE UP."

"Three weeks before this war began I was in one of those East End London parishes, whose inhabitants exist from hand to mouth on casual employment and sweated labour; where the women, poor, thin, overworked souls, have neither time nor strength nor inclination for cleanliness and comeliness in person or in house; where the men are underfed and underdressed, with faces of those without a future; where pale and stunted children playing in the gutters have a monopoly of any mirthless gaiety there is.

"In one household of two rooms they were 'free of debt, thank Gawd!' having just come back from fruit-picking, and were preparing to take up their existence again on the wife's making of matchboxes at a maximum of six shillings a week, the husband not having found a job as yet. In another, of one room swarming with flies and foul with a sickly, acid odour, a baby was half asleep on the few rags of a bed bereft of bedclothes, its lips pressed to something rubbery, and the flies about its eyes; dirty bowls of messes stood about; an open heap lay in the empty grate; and at a table in the little window a pallid woman of forty with a running cold was desperately sewing the soles on to tiny babies' shoes.

"Prices have gone up. What is happening to such as these?" "You emperors and militarist bureaucrats! There is only one national aspiration worth the name: to have from roof to basement a clean, healthy, happy national house. 'War the cleanser!' Without war no sacrifice, no nobility! I refer you to that mother, slaving, slaving without hope and without glory, starved and ill, and slaving in a war with death that lasts all her life for the children she has borne.

DEFEAT OF THE UTOPIANS.

"This is the grand defeat of all of us utopians, dreamers, poets, philosophers, idealists, humanitarians, lovers of peace and the arts; bag and baggage we are thrown out of a world that has for a time no use for us. To the despot, the bureaucrat, the militarist, the man of affairs, we have the militarist, the of affairs, we have always been hateful. If they had the whole of their way, as they have had before now in history and—who knows?—may have again, we should be lined up against a wall and shot. We are soft, yet dangerous, because we venture to hold up little flags in the face of the big flag of force; venture to distract men's attention from dwelling on the beauty of its size.

"I believe solemnly that we English have had to join this bloody carnival of force to guard democracy, honour, and the sanctity of treaty rights. It is sacred necessity; let us keep it sacred, without the loathsome rock of a satisfaction that peace, humanism, and the arts are down, and the country once more showing the stuff of which it is made, a tusk lover of a fight, as jealous and afraid of a rival as ever.

WHAT CULTURE IS.

"Culture! You wreckers of Louvain! Culture! There are stores of knowledge in your Prussian brains, but there is no culture in your blood. Culture is not scientific learning; culture is not social method and iron discipline; culture is not even power of producing and appreciating works of art—though in these days you have not much of that! The Assyrians, the Persians, the old Egyptians had all these qualities—they, like you, had little or no culture.

"Culture is natural gentility—a very different thing. Culture is a quality of some races, inborn or passed into the blood by generations of conformity to humane ideals. You may persist another thousand years, but you will not be cultured at the end. There is a harshness in your blood; there is an arrogance, a thickness of sensibility. Try as you may you will never strain it out of your natures. Culture, forsooth!

THE CULTURED PEOPLE.

"The Hindoo is cultured, the Burmese, the Jew, the Irish cottager, the Pole, the Russian peasant, even the Englishman; for deep in them all is a live humanity, a far-down kindness, proof against the ranker instincts. You Prussian supermen of Nietzsche's cult have no use for this; it is a quality for slaves, you say!

"Culture! If you knew what true culture was, you would be the last to claim it. No, no! You have great qualities, no doubt; but do not claim the apostleship of culture, or you will make the nations laugh! Culture is spiritual, not material, salvation; the spiritual salvation of the world will never come from you. Sooner, far sooner, will it come from that Russia whom you despise and dread.

"Culture! You wreckers of Louvain! Water the fern dish at night in the bathtub and leave it there to drain.

Canada Hoping for Agreement

SAYS SIR GEORGE FOSTER.

Ottawa, Dec. 30.—The international situation which has so unexpectedly developed between the United States and Great Britain over the note presented by Washington to the British Government is being followed with the keenest interest.

There is a decided disposition, however, to refrain from mixing in the discussion.

Asked this morning how Canada would fare should such an embargo be imposed, Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce and acting Premier, expressed the view that it would be well for Canada to stand aloof while the question is pending.

"Speaking personally and not for the Government," said Sir George, "the situation is a delicate one and the less we say about it the better."

"I might add, however, that what has happened is one of those almost inevitable questions which arise in war times as between belligerents and neutrals. In this case, it is fortunately between two friendly nations, and this fact would lead us to hope very strongly for a satisfactory adjustment."

German Orders at Liege

BORE THE DATE OF 1906.

Brussels, Dec. 3.—I walked out to the University of Liege, which was all knocked to pieces and I ran into something that convinced me beyond doubt of the responsibility for this war.

Yellow German military orders were pasted up in a good many places. They had the German arms at the top, and were dated from the city of Liege, "1906," printed on the orders had been crossed out and "1914" written in with pencil.

The posters were all the same color, a kind of dark yellow, and of different shapes and sizes. I saw them principally around the Place de l'Opera. They were on regular bulletin boards and in some cases pasted to the walls of buildings. Some were long and narrow, some broader than they were long, and some were about the size of a sheet of paper for typewriting. The posters included orders, such as that no drinks other than beer and wine should be sold. I remember one that said persons having horses for sale might bring them to a certain place. Every one of the posters was headed, in German, "City of Liege." And everyone had the printed date "1906" crossed out in blue pencil and "1914" written with the same pencil.

The Kaiser was eight years late in getting to Liege.

When I got into my compartment I found myself with a Hanoverian sergeant of cavalry who was going to Brussels for an operation. He had a healing sabre cut from over the right ear to the point of his chin and a wound on his left forearm that he didn't know how he got, but it had developed blood poisoning and he was afraid of losing his arm. It seems that the sergeant had worked in Chicago for a harvest company and spoke as good English as anybody. He told me a story that is worth putting down, for it's worth remembering.

"I got mine at Mons," he said, "but I killed the British cavalryman that did it. I'll take off my hat to the cavalryman every time, and to the French cavalry, too."

"We were all big men on big horses, and when we lined up at Mons my captain rode out in front and said:

"We're going to meet some British cavalry in a few minutes and I want you to stamp 'em out! We'll show these big-mouthed English what a German cavalryman can do!"

"Well, we looked over at the English line and laughed. They were not heavy men and their horses, which they managed like polo ponies, were lighter than ours. They shortened their stirrups and we laughed some more. None of them had on tunics. Some wore Glangary caps, some hats and some were bareheaded. A good many had their sleeves rolled up.

"Then came the charge. At first the English rode close, but before they struck us, they spread out, and came on, bent over like jockeys, with their sabres up in front of their eyes. "Those devils rode right through us, and then rode back and went through us again. They're blue devils. They cut with the sabre and then cut back, and I actually saw the heads of our men go off."

A New "Tipperary"

The Quebec Chronicle, the editor of which is Col. David Watson, who is now at Salisbury with the first Canadian contingent, publishes the following version of "Tipperary" as it is now being sung by the Canadian boys in khaki:

Back to Tipperary started Paddy on the run,
But when half way he heard them say the fighting had begun,
He wrote to Molly, saying, "Dear, although I love you so,
My country's callin', darling, as I'm Irish, I must go."

CHORUS:
It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to go,
It's a long way to Tipperary,
From the sweetest girl I know,
Good-bye, sweetest mine,
I'll come back to you in Tipperary,
When we've crossed the Rhine.

Now Paddy's in the trenches, fighting like a lion bold,
And Irish Molly's waiting with a heart as true as gold;
But when the Kaiser's down and out,
And Belgium's free again,
He'll start for Tipperary town a-singing this refrain:

It's a long way to Tipperary
It's a long way to go,
It's a long way to Tipperary,
To the sweetest girl I know,
Good-bye Kaiser Billy,
And "Die watch am Rhine,"
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
To sweet Molly mine.

BERLIN LANDLORDS LOSE $3,000,000.

London, Dec. 29.—The Landlords' Association, of Berlin, states that in the months of August, September and October alone, unpaid shop, house and flat rents in Greater Berlin totalled $3,125,000, representing 10,819 buildings.

"Take a good look at the above cut. If you are suffering from a Cough or Cold, don't make any difference how slight it is, go to Stafford's Drug Store and ask for a 25 cent bottle of Phoratox Cough Cure, take it according to the directions on the bottle and you will find it a good preparation. If you keep neglecting a slight cough or cold it will gradually develop into the 'Cough' that you will not very easily get rid of. Thousands of people are dying every year from neglecting what they called a slight cough or cold.

Newfoundland as a German Colony.

We Newfoundlanders have been accustomed to freedom for so long that we take it now as a matter of course. Not understanding what we owe to England, some of us feel no gratitude to her and recognize no debt. It may help those who ask why we are called upon to offer our lives or our money for England, if we consider what the effect upon Newfoundland would be if England and her Allies were defeated in the present war.

England's defeat would mean the loss of her control of the sea, and the victory of the German navy, Germany if she conquered England would take possession of several of the British Colonies. She would not attempt to take possession of Newfoundland, for what she needs is an outlet for her surplus population, and England is already thickly populated. She would take possession, in all probability, of South Africa and Newfoundland, both of which could make little or no resistance. If Germany can conquer the mighty navy of England, neither the United States nor any other power could hope to conquer her at sea, for the U. S. navy hardly counts in comparison with that of England. It is evident, then, that nothing could save Newfoundland if Germany were first able to conquer England. That it would be worth her while to possess Newfoundland is clear, since from our island she could control the Atlantic and its enormous traffic, this and we could not expect to have a lighter burden placed on us than Germans themselves have to bear. From this burden we should have no possible chance to escape. Has England placed such a burden as this upon us? And if not, have we no cause to be grateful to her?

Again, in Germany the taxation for the upkeep of the Army and Navy is very heavy. Not only do Germans have to give three years of their lives but they also have to give a large portion of their earnings to the Government. This is altogether in addition to other government expenses such as we have to pay now. It would mean from $5.00 to $10.00 per head of population, at least. Up to the present we have paid about 5 cents per head, and even this we have paid of our own free will—for our Naval Reservists. Have we no reason to be grateful to England seeing that she has protected us all these years at her own expense?

Lastly, in Germany itself the people have very few political rights such as we have had for many years. The German Emperor and not the German Parliament decides what shall be done and how the people's money shall be spent. The Parliament can only advise, and its advice may or may not be followed as the Emperor chooses. We in Newfoundland have been accustomed to spend our own money as the Government we elect chooses. England gave us this right long ago. Have we no reason to be grateful for this generosity of our Motherland? Do we want to live under German rule?

We Newfoundlanders may either help England to save the Empire and our own freedom, or we may, if we choose, look on and not lift a hand to help. There are still over 10,000 young men in this Colony who are without family ties and who have not yet enlisted. Are they waiting to be called cowards, or do they understand the Empire's need? If they have not understood, the facts given above may help them to realize that they owe a debt of gratitude that they may now pay. A thousand of our bravest have already come forward, but if ten thousand cowards stay at home while Frenchmen and Russians fight for them, then God help Newfoundland. The men of Newfoundland will show themselves this winter.—The Mark.

U. S. NOT SECURE.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.—There is no reason why the United States should be any more secure than the rest of the world from German attack. On the contrary, a Germany dominating Europe must inevitably seek expansion in the new world. Only by opposing sea power to sea power could the United States hope to maintain the Monroe Doctrine and keep the German flag from being raised in some of the countries south of us.

SHELL RIPPED OFF COAT!

The reason why the Marquis of Anglessey, one of the wealthiest peers in England, suddenly returned from France, a few days ago, and after remaining in the Ritz Hotel 24 hours, hastened back to rejoin his regiment, was revealed to-day.

Anglessey was forced to apply for a brief leave because he actually did not have a coat to his back. The wear and tear of campaigning frayed the fragile quality of khaki designed by a fashionable tailor, and a piece of shrapnel ripped the whole back out without wounding his lordship.

The Marquis had two uniform coats made during his brief visit. It is curious to note that the last holder of the title of the present Marquis was chiefly famous as the possessor of the most extensive wardrobe in England, which included more than 300 coats.

The Marquis did the right thing, visiting his tailor, as we have always advised customers when a garment is badly torn to have it replaced. Dry Cleaning will not remedy such defects.

BAIT

Or rather the want of it, is one of the principal drawbacks to the fisheries of Newfoundland, and as it is tolerably certain that we shall have good markets and high prices in 1915, now is the time to prepare to capture BAIT fishes.

As a means to this end we are making CHEAP LIGHT CAPLIN SEINES, that will be easily handled, and as one good haul will pay for the outfit, every schooner should have one.

We are making SQUID TRAPS, which will be most effective.
