"A GOLD LADEN DERELICT" OR The Impecunious Adventuress.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE LAWYER AND THE MAN.

"Don't talk rot, Ackersley," said Kenneth, relighting his pipe. "It's only a matter of ordinary deduction, one way or the other. Here we have certain undentable facts. Sir Arthur met Mrs. Lillias Ashley by accident. She had been his first, and, as he actually states in his will, his only love. He was in—well, the state of health that I have described to you. He asks her to marry him and nurse him back to health. She refuses to marry him at once, but she and her aunt consent to do their best to nurse him back to health, provided he is willing to place himself under the care of Doctor Mathews, who is an old friend of the family."

"I don't altogether like the idea of that said Doctor Mathews," said Ackersley, lying back in his chair and blowing a long stream of smoke up toward the ceiling.

"Then that can only mean one thing," replied Kenneth, getting up from his chair and standing with his back to the fireplace, his hands deep in the pockets of his coat, "and that is exactly the hypothesis that I imagined when I constructed the other story. You have a wonderful imagination, Jack, for chemistry and mechanics and all that sort of thing, but, honestly, I didn't think you would hit on that."

"Oh, didn't you? Why not?"

"Your supposition implies neither more nor less than a deliberate scheme of murder concocted by these three people. I admit, as a lawyer, that it is a possibility! but as a man, I absolutely deny that it could be a reasonable probability. Where does the object come in? If she wanted to secure his money, why didn't she accept his offer of marriage and marry him, as she might have done, and as most women would have done? Then she would have been Lady Ashley, and could have taken a position in society which she could never hope to occupy now? There would have been none of this bother about the will, because she would have succeeded to everything in the ordinary course of law, and her whole course would have been absolutely clear. Then there is another thing. Arthur Ashley, Sir Arthur's cousin, who stood to lose a lot by the will, actually went with Sir Arthur to his solicitors when he made the will; he knew every word in it, and yet he has told me himself he would have witnessed himself if he had not been a legatee."

"Which," replied Ackersley, after a few moments' silence, "if the other story that you say you have thought out might happen to be true, would make it all the more suspicious as regards Mr. Arthur Ashley."

"Good heavens, man, what can you mean by that?"

"Has it never struck you, my dear Kenneth, during your vain imaginings about this affair, that Mr. Arthur Ashley might want to marry this beautiful client of yours, and his cousin's fourth thousand a year?"

"I never thought of that!" was Kenneth's surprising answer, and he said this, Ackersley noticed that he had suddenly flushed and turned pale again.

CHAPTER XV.

LOVE, THE MIRACLE-WORKER.

Lillias Ashley went home after her interview with Kenneth, in a somewhat peculiar state of mind. Something had happened to her, and she found her thoughts constantly straying away from the subject which ought to have occupied them most exclusively.

"Just Because"—

ly. She drove back in the doctor's brougham, which he had loaned her for the afternoon, but instead of going in she started off, scarcely knowing why, for a walk over the heath. Everything seemed to have been suddenly changed for her. So far she had pursued the course which she had laid down for herself with absolute determination. She had seen the chance of becoming sole and undisputed mistress of a great fortune at the expense of a single crime, and she had deliberately committed it without a qualm of conscience.

In fact, she had always trained herself to ignore the existence of such a thing as conscience. She had looked upon it as an annoying inconvenience which was better ignored than recognized; but now she suddenly became aware that she was trying to persuade herself, and trying very hard, too, that she was not really responsible for Sir Arthur's death. After all, she had done nothing—which was absolutely true—and yet the fact remained that he was dead, and that if he had not her that day in Regent Street he would be alive still.

The fact she could not explain away, strive as she might; and, using all the sophistries of which her keen and subtle intellect was capable, she could not rid herself of the acute consciousness that a few hours ago she would not have given a thought to the matter, and yet now the whole thing seemed ghastly to her in its hideous sordidness.

"What has happened to me?" she said aloud to herself when she had reached a lonely part of the heath. "If any one had told me this morning that I had either a conscience or a heart, I should just have laughed, and said that a woman who has had to live the life I have lived couldn't afford such luxuries. And now—"

She looked about her for a moment, and then laughed. It was not the sort of laugh that one would have expected to come from such lips as hers, for it was harsh and mirthless; yet that laugh marked the beginning of a new life for her, a life of penance and suffering, such as she had never even dreamed of. She did not believe in forgiveness of sins, and as far as she herself was concerned, she had done her best not to believe in the punishment of them. But now had come a sudden shuddering fear, and with an almost agonizing desire for forgiveness. Why?

A sudden sense of loneliness and self-humiliation had come over her, and as she walked on with her hands clenched behind her, staring blindly at the grass and heather through which she was walking, she felt irresistibly that strange primitive desire which is experienced by all mortals in keen mental or physical distress, to throw herself on the ground, to lay herself on the breast of earth, the old mother, just as a little child in trouble seeks the breast of its human mother.

She reached a little dell thickly grass-grown and almost surrounded by gorse and heather. She sat down on the little knoll, and then, with a sudden instinctive movement, she flung herself whole length into the sweet, fresh grass, and the next moment she was sobbing quietly and tearlessly, as a little child might sob itself to sleep.

She was roused by the quick rushing of feet through the grass, and by the sound of Arthur Ashley's voice.

"Why, Lillias, what on earth is the matter? Have you been taken ill, or—no, surely, you are not crying, you!"

Nature's Greatest Washers

The sea washes the world—Pears' Soap washes its inhabitants!

For over a century, Pears' has been making its way round the world. Ask for it in your local store; it is there! From the Cape to Cairo, in the bazaars of India, throughout Australia, Canada, the U.S., and South America Pears' has made its way with civilization,—on merits!

Pears' Soap is transparent because it is pure; it is the most economical soap because it wears but does not waste. It cleanses and purifies the skin and freshens up body and mind.

"Pears"

is not heavily scented. Its delicate perfume comes from pure natural ingredients; the difference is important,—it means again that Pears' soap is pure.

I'd just as soon expect tears from a graven image. You are not mourning the death of the late lamented, I suppose?"

She raised herself with a swift, sinuous motion, which somehow reminded him of the spring of a beautiful snake, and faced him with eyes blazing, cheeks glowing, and lips trembling.

"You hound! you scoundrel!" she whispered, in a sibilant tone, which also reminded him somewhat unpleasantly of a snake. "Why have you been following me?"

"My dear Lillias," he began, taking a step back and looking at her with a frank, almost brutal admiration which was not altogether unblended with a sense of fear, for he knew at least some of the qualities which lay hidden behind the mask of her loveliness.

"Don't speak to me like that, you scur, you hanger-on of one of the great scoundrels in London!" she interrupted, in the same low, hissing voice. "Keep your place and your distance. I have had to tell you my opinion of you before now. Your dear Lillias, indeed! I'd sooner kill myself!"

"As you did the late lamented," he sneered, giving a turn to his mustache.

"You're a liar!" she said. "I didn't!"

"Well, if you didn't do it yourself, you must have arranged the tragedy pretty well," he answered, and then he assumed a sudden change of manner.

"Look here, Lillias, this won't do at all, you know," he said threateningly. "It's not the slightest use for you to go in for these heroics, and it would be perfectly ridiculous for us to quarrel just now. I came to see you on business. When I called at the house, the coachman told me that you had come out in this direction for a walk, and so I followed you, because we naturally wanted to know the result of your interview with the virtuous Kenneth Markham."

"The virtuous Kenneth Markham!" The words spoken in his sneering tone hit her as so many blows in the face might have done. That was the explanation of her unwonted mood. She saw it all instantly, as she might have seen a midnight landscape lit up by a vivid flash of lightning. She had gone to this man to deliberately use the intoxicating force of her beauty and personal charm to tempt him away from the honorable course which he had laid down for himself. She had succeeded, and then the unexpected, even the unknown, had happened. Arthur Ashley; her accomplice in one of the most skillfully executed crimes of the century, had revealed it to her. She had gone to make a dupe, and had found a master. She had found her soul as well, and, for the first time in her life, she was honestly in love.

Without replying, she turned away from Ashley and walked quickly out of the little hollow and ascended to a piece of rising ground from which she could overlook the gulf in which London lay under its pall of blue, smoky haze.

Ashley saw her put her hands to her head and stand with her slender, perfectly shaped and gowned figure swaying a little from side to side. He thought that she was going to faint, and he rapidly went toward her, saying, with real concern in his voice:

"Lillias—Mrs. Ashley, you're ill. Let me take you back to the house."

"You can go back yourself and wait for me if you like," she answered, without turning her head, "and you can tell Aunt Gerty for her satisfaction and yours that Kenneth Markham has promised to undertake my case, or ours. I will be back in half an hour or so, but I shall not come now. Perhaps then I shall be able to endure your presence a little more easily; but now, for Heaven's sake, go and leave me to myself."

"Oh, very well," he said; "you must have your way, as usual, I suppose, and it's not much good my stopping here to be insulted. I'll wait for you. I hope you'll come back in a little better temper."

He raised his hat mechanically, from mere force of habit, and walked away, muttering to himself.

"What the deuce has happened to Lillias?" he wondered, allowing his thoughts to drift back to the stormy interview on the heath. "It's the first time I ever saw her show any emotion. I never thought she had a soul, and yet she was sobbing like a broken-hearted, love-sick schoolgirl. I hope she isn't going to make a fool of herself with that fellow Markham. Great Scott, that would be a pretty kettle of fish!"

"Black Rod."

ALL ABOUT THE DUTIES OF A PICTURESQUE AND POWERFUL POLITICAL OFFICIAL.

One of the most imperious of Parliamentary officials is the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, a Crown appointment which fell vacant through the death of Admiral Sir H. F. Stephenson, and is now to be filled by Lieut.-Col. Sir William Pulteney, D.S.O.

Black Rod derives his title from the wand, surmounted by a gold lion, which he carries instead of the mace, and this is the outward symbol of all the authority he exercises, not only in the House of Lords, but in the House of Commons as well.

The Door is Barred.

One of his duties is to summon the Members of Parliament whenever their attendance is required in the House of Lords. For this purpose he proceeds to the House of Commons, carrying his staff of office, and as he crosses the Lobby the watchful attendants give warning of his approach by crying aloud, "Black Rod!" Thereupon the doorkeeper rushes within the passage leading to the House, and closes behind him the heavy oak door, which he bolts and bars.

When Black Rod reaches the entrance he knocks thrice at the door, and then finds himself confronted by a face peering through an aperture made by drawing a slide.

Having announced his name, the door is opened, and amid strained silence Black Rod, with due obeisance, advances to the table.

No matter who is speaking when Black Rod enters the precincts of the Commons, business is at once suspended, and, having delivered his message, he bows and retires backward, as gracefully as possible.

Besides having some of the accomplishments proper to the stage, the ability to wear rather a dazzling uniform without seeming conscious of it, and to bow gracefully while walking backward, the occupant of the office of Black Rod must have a memory which will retain a form of words which, if not very long, is highly involved in style.

When His Memory Failed.

Admiral Sir H. F. Stephenson was not very well endowed with these gifts when he took up the office. The summons he had to deliver to the Speaker when he walked up the floor of the House of Commons gave him not a little trouble, and the first time he attempted it the tingling silence at the critical moment frightened the words out of his mind. "I desire," he began, "to acquaint this Honourable House—" There he stopped short, and remained mute. The pause was painful, and the tension was only relieved by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, who came to the rescue with dexterous, but quite audible, promptings from his seat on the front Opposition Bench.

Black Rod was heard murmuring, "That the Lords who are authorized by virtue of his Majesty's Commission to—" And then came the final collapse.

The situation was saved by Mr. Gully, then Speaker, who, nodding with friendly recognition of Black Rod's intention, said: "We understand that you have come to signify that the Lords Commissioners desire the immediate attendance of this Honourable House in the House of Peers to hear the Commission read." Black Rod indicated that that was his intention, and the awkward incident ended.

After this, Admiral Stephenson took the precaution of writing out in full the words of his message, and ever afterwards he kept them for ready reference in the lace of his cocked hat.

Other Important Duties.

In addition to his duty as "messenger" between the Lords and the Commons, Black Rod takes a share in the complicated ceremony which attends the introduction of a peer. He has also duties of a constabulary nature to perform, for he can arrest any peer guilty of a breach of privilege, and if the practice of bringing a Minister to book for high crimes and misdemeanours by impeachment were ever revived, the personage accused would find himself in the custody of the Gentleman Usher until he was admitted to bail.

For the dignity and traditions of the House of Lords Sir Henry Stephenson had a most jealous regard, and it will be remembered that on one occasion he incurred the displeasure of the House of Commons by refusing admission to a Celt who appeared in the Peers' Lobby attired in a kilt.

Physician Murdered While Making Sick Call.

New York, March 26.—The bodies of Dr. Vincent J. Campisi, wealthy physician and a patient to whose bedside he was hastily summoned, were found last night in a tenement house in Brooklyn—the physician stabbed to death and the "patient" strangled.

The police, who at first were unable to identify the "patient," learned later that the physician had been hastily called to the house by an unidentified man. The police advanced the theory that the physician was lured into the tenement for the purpose of robbery, and, that attacked when he entered the room, he strangled the "patient" while fighting off his assailants, and then was stabbed by the man who lured him into the trap.

The murderer apparently lost his nerve, the police believe, and failed to carry out the robbery, for a large sum of money and a gold watch was found on the physician's body.

Frank Ambrose, a roomer in the house, told the police he saw Dr. Campisi enter the house with another man who seemed to be greatly agitated. Shortly after the physician arrived, Ambrose said, he heard the noise of breaking glass. A few minutes later the man who accompanied the doctor left the house hurriedly and ran down the street. Becoming suspicious that something had happened, Ambrose said he called a policeman and investigation revealed the two bodies, the physician's on the floor and the other in bed.

Examination of the body on the bed showed the man had been choked to death. No wounds were found. The physician was stabbed in the neck and mouth.

Mrs. Dorothy Parker, who conducts the rooming house, said the strangled man rented the room a week ago without giving his name and she had not seen him in that time. Nor had she ever seen, she said, the other man described to her as the one who brought the physician.

"The room in which the murders were committed is tiny and small, about nine feet by five feet, with a single bed, a table and a window, which had been broken in the death struggle the physician made for his life. A dirt and razor, both rusty, were found in the room.

Dr. Campisi was 35 years old and married. His brother, Samuel Campisi, said he knew of no enemies of his brother's who might have had cause to seek revenge.

WORLD WAR PREDICTED.

Frank H. Symonds, the famous newspaper correspondent, is not a firm believer in the bona fides of Bolshevism. He is of opinion that behind it lurks a threat at the world's freedom, and that before the arrival of the summer of 1920, nothing is more probable than that Europe will find itself suddenly face to face with a new war on a grand scale, and that nothing is more likely than that the nations which have conquered Germany may have to turn to the Germans and seek in them allies against a Bolshevik peril, against which, eventually, the whole world will have to take up arms. In the liberation of many millions of subject races, by the Allies, and the creation thereby of new political states, a new problem has been produced, a problem more dangerous than that which brought about the isolation of Austria at the beginning of peace after the great war. By the new process of erection of so many different entities in international life, Central Europe has been "Balkanised" and thrown into utter confusion, which chaotic condition of affairs arises from the fact that all normal communication between the different parts of the continent, dependent upon international trade for their supplies, has been practically brought to a standstill, and the economic situation is therefore of peculiar and dangerous complexity.

"The situation in Middle Europe," says Mr. Symonds, in the "American Review of Reviews," "cannot be saved by sending food or by sending money, however necessary it may be momentarily to send both. The states, created at Versailles out of the old Hapsburg Empire, are incapable in several instances of supporting themselves—that is of separate economic existence. Unless some system of co-operation can be found, Middle Europe will be either Boche or Bolshevik within the next decade. And it may be both. The pathway of Germany southward; of Russia westward must lie through regions in which every semblance of order is disintegrating. It is a great triumph to have rescued millions of men and women from tyranny, to have established equality between races. It was not possible to preserve the old system. But the great single circumstance in our recent victory will be vitiated unless we can now find some method of restoring economic equilibrium." Failure to restore this economic equilibrium will mean that millions of women and children will perish of starvation, and upon the heels of such a tragedy will follow closely political disasters of no uncertain magnitude. The Bolsheviks have threatened that it is their intention to spread their domination and domination over Europe, and so far to all appearances this threat is being made good. Military resistance to the advances of Bolshevism is gradually breaking down, and victorious Bolshevik armies have reached the Black Sea, taken Odessa, are overflowing into Persia and pressing southward toward India. The Baltic States in Russia have surrendered to their leaders: Rumania is willing to enter into a separate peace with them, and there are left only those forces of the Poles and Japanese to contest the progress of the armies of Bolshevism in the West and in the Far East.

Mr. Symonds declares that, unless all signs fail, the coming of summer will see an enormous attack on Poland by well equipped, elated-with-victory armies of the Bolsheviks, and that this peril has arisen while the Paris Conference "has struggled over the making of frontiers and the adoption of principles designed to promote peace, while the enemy in the meantime has consolidated his hold upon one of the greatest Empires on this planet." Bolshevism has as its most characteristic feature the practical methods it adopts for the realization of its own Utopia. This method is the armed conflict of the classes and war to the death against all who possess. From the standpoint of consistent materialism this is, beyond doubt, the one certain means of causing the strongest to prevail. Thus the Bolshevik creed: War to the death against those who have. Is Europe in its present weak state strong enough to resist and combat this creed, or will it be overthrown by the irresistible forces coming from the East, whose threat to dominate the whole world and exercise control over all humanity appears to be ready to put into execution? Will Symonds' prediction of a new world war be verified and will society, as we know it, go down before the steadily increasing hordes and disciples of Bolshevism?

Medals Presented to Footballers.

The 1919 Football Champions—the Saints—received their medals at the hands of Vice-President R. G. Ross, of St. Andrew's Society, at last evening's meeting. The medals, made by T. J. Duley & Co., are of a very pretty design. The officers for the team in the coming season were elected: L. Munn, Captain; J. Irvine, Vice-Captain; R. Innes, Secretary; and Major R. H. Tate, Delegate of the team. Messrs. Brown, R. Mars and H. Sawyers committee. Arrangements were made for practice grounds, uniforms, etc.

As the North Sees It.

(Twillingate Sun.) Quite a mild disturbance has been raised recently over the question of training for discharged soldiers, and there seems to be efforts on the part of some St. John's newspapers—unfortunate and ill-timed efforts—to make the matter into a political one. Certain soldiers claim that their applications for admittance to vocational schools were not fairly treated, that pull existed and there was discrepancy in the matter of gratuities. Lieut. Garland, who happens to be employed at the Daily News office, is fighting for the soldiers case, and he is opposed strenuously by the Daily Star, which is supposed to be the official organ of the Premier. The Star even went so far as to publish the Military Records of the soldiers in question—a grave breach of confidence, and has been upbraided by Lieut.-Col. Bernard, President of the G.W.V.A., who points out that there has been a breach of faith somewhere, and that the Military Records of soldiers are not nor should be public property. No matter what a soldier's record in the army, it is always understood that he is given a clean sheet on being demobilized into civil life. It is very unfortunate that the matter of re-establishment of soldiers into civil life, cannot be kept out of politics entirely. So far the new Government has shown little more consideration towards putting soldiers into the civil service than their predecessors, and in the case of a position in the Finance Department, a civilian was given the preference over a soldier.

'Longshoremen Turn Down Offer.

CLAIM 15 P.C. INCREASE INSUFFICIENT.
At a largely attended meeting of the Longshoremen's Union last night the offer of an increase of 15 per cent. in wages, made by the merchants in response to the recent request for an advance, was unanimously turned down. The following scale was presented by the employers to show that the cost of living had increased only about 15 per cent. since last year, or approximately the same amount as the advance offered:

Flour, 3 stones	1919	1920
Pork, 6 lbs.	$3.50	$4.20
Butter, 3 lbs.	1.32	1.80
Tea, ½ lb.	25	30
Molasses, 1 gal.	1.20	1.60
Potatoes, 4 gals.	1.00	1.00
Cabbage, 4 lbs.	48	80
Fish, 4 lbs.	48	56
Milk, 7 pints	70	84
Kero. Oil, 3 quarts	30	38
Coal, ½ ton	2.25	2.90
Rent	1.00	1.00
	$14.23	$16.85

This is supposed to do family of six for a week, and as will be noted takes into consideration only the bare necessities. Out of their average wage the longshoremen claim this would leave them about 50 cents per week to provide clothing, which was listed as follows:

Man	1919	1920
Suit of Clothes	$20.50	$26.00
Suit of Underwear	1.90	3.20
Pair Boots	7.50	9.00
Woman
10 yards Flannel	17.50	15.00
10 yards Calico	3.50	5.00
Pair Boots	5.00	6.00
2 Children
Boys' Suit	15.00	21.00
Underclothes	1.50	2.25
5 yards Flannel	8.75	7.50
5 yards Calico	1.75	2.50
2 pairs Boots	10.00	12.00
	$92.90	$109.45

The merchants will be given till the 15th inst. to further consider the matter, and if no better terms are offered by then, the Union will meet and decide what action will be taken.

To-Day's Messages.

UP IN THE AIR.
WASHINGTON, April 6.
Barred from the streets surrounding the British Embassy, Irish pickets to-day took to the air, and from a flying machine they rained down packages of leaflets espousing the Irish cause, and challenged the police to come up and stop them. There being no "sky cops" in the national capital, no arrests were made. Four land pickets, however, who ventured out earlier in the day, were arrested and held in the house of detention.
TAKING PRECAUTIONS.
LONDON, April 6.
There are grave rumors current in Cairo, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from the Egyptian capital, regarding the situation in Palestine. The despatch asserts that all permits to Palestine have been stopped, and troops are being recalled to their stations on the western bank of the Suez Canal. No letters are arriving from Palestine.

METCALF SENTENCES STRIKERS.

WINNIPEG, April 6.
Sentence was pronounced on six convicted strike leaders by Justice Metcalf, at the Assize Court to-day. William Ivema, George Armstrong, W. A. Pritchard, John Queen and D. J. Johns, were sentenced to one year each on six counts of seditious conspiracy, on which they were convicted, and to six months on account of a common nuisance, the sentences to run concurrently, making the term to be served by each in the provincial jail, one year. R. E. Bray, found guilty of a charge of common nuisance, was sentenced to six months in the provincial jail.

PRISONERS RIOT.

DUBLIN, April 6.
There have been riots in Mount Joy prison, where close on one hundred Sinn Fein prisoners are on a hunger strike. They demanded better treatment, and receiving an unsatisfactory answer, smashed furniture in the cells and broke down the walls between the cells. These were rebuilt but they tore them down again. The men are now manacled with their hands behind their backs, and strong military guards have been installed within the prison.

WITHOUT INCIDENT.

MAYENCE, April 6.
The only incident in the occupation of North Frankfort by the French, consisted of a few shots fired. According to reports by aviators German gun detachments fired two or three shots on the French cavalry patrol, before which detachments of Reichswehr and security police were retiring. The latter, although knowing yesterday that the occupation had been decided on, believe that it would not be carried out, one of the officers saying that the British would not let the French come in. At Darmstadt the reception of the French troops was almost cordial, and the population at Frankfort was also inclined to be friendly to the French.

A GERMAN WHINE.

BERLIN, April 6.
Chancellor Mueller declared to-day that M. Millerand, French Premier, at first formally consented to Germany's present military action in the Ruhr district on the assumption would consume only two or three weeks, and alleged that influenced by French generals, he decided to make political capital out of Germany's international condition. The Chancellor also asserted that present French procedure was bound to give aid and comfort to German Spartacists, who continue to flaunt their lawlessness wherever they are given the opportunity. Herr Mueller asserted that besides aiding the Spartacists, the French action certainly would swell the numbers of those who declared that since France is more than ever bent on achieving Germany's complete annihilation, Germany will be compelled to prepare for a death struggle. If the Allied Govts. in the recent opinion of mankind, should plainly tolerate this act of French aggression, concluded the Chancellor, then the occupation of Frankfort will mark the beginning of an era of international anarchy the like of which the world has never before witnessed.

Makers of Music.

Jarnovick, whose real name was Giornovich, was of Polish origin, although born at Palermo (1745.) He was the hero of his day, and one of the most eminent violin players of the eighteenth century. He was a most eccentric character, and many amusing anecdotes are told of him. He made his debut in Paris in 1770, and in Paris, as elsewhere, he became the rage with the musical public. He was continually getting into trouble wherever he went, and on account of some misbehavior in Paris he had to leave that capital. He then went to the hand of the King of Prussia, but disputes with the famous Dupont caused him to be driven from the Court band. He was a great wanderer, and in the meantime visited Austria, Poland, Russia and Sweden, ultimately arriving in London in 1781. In London he soon became famous, but his natural violence and conceit with his bad temper, and his quarrels with both Viotti and J. B. Cramer. This was not all, however, because he was guilty of gross misconduct in the presence of the King and Duke of York. After a roving life, and visits to every city of importance in Europe, he went to St. Petersburg, where he died, unlamented, on November 21st, 1804. In his moral character he upheld the traditions of his master, Lulli, and this is what is written of Lulli: "Lulli was a most extraordinary performer on the violin; but he certainly appeared to have been the type of an unmusical, empty-headed, cold, and in addition, a combed virtuoso, and in addition, a combed fool! His compositions were poor and his violin part only, the corections and accompaniments being brought into shape by another hand." The same has been said of Jarnovick regarding his compositions, some of which were composed by his friend, St. George. Eccentricity had a firm grip on Jarnovick, but his name was great while it lasted. At Lyons, he, on one occasion, announced a concert, at six francs a ticket. No audience appearing, he resolved to be revenged on the stinginess of the Lyonsese, and postponed the performance to the following night, reducing the price of admission to three francs. A crowded audience assembled; but while they were in vain waiting for the performer he

Wide Awake Germany.

Germany is as wide awake as ever, and Britons had better look to their laurels. Our ex-enemy is now trying to flood our land with toys—yes, there are a good many on sale to-day—and cheap German bicycles are on the market. The latest Board of Trade returns show how rapidly Germany is recovering her lost trade in certain commodities. She has, for instance, already almost reached her pre-war level of exports of clocks to the United Kingdom. For the first two months of this year Germany sent us 260,000 clocks, while during a similar period of 1913 the total was 298,790. In view of, of course, there is an actual increase. A man's dyspepsia is sometimes due to the fact that a woman has been trying to reach his heart through his stomach. Women don't run after men, any more than the mouse-trap runs after mice. They don't need to. A man's dyspepsia is sometimes due to the fact that a woman has been trying to reach his heart through his stomach. Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria. EVERYWHERE.

FRENCH TROOPS CROSS THE RHINE.

MAYENCE, April 6. French troops entered Frankfurt at 5 o'clock this morning, finding only a small German force left there to afford protection for the people. The occupation of the city was more a military march and was not attended by any fighting. Darmstadt was entered shortly afterwards by French troops. The German Government garison of that city had left at midnight to avoid contact with the French and its morning was six miles out of the city. General De Coute has issued a proclamation to the cities and towns within the area to be occupied, declaring that French troops have crossed the Rhine to compel the Berlin Government to respect its agreement with the Allies and asserting that there is no hostile intent towards the people of that region. The proclamation says the French troops will withdraw as soon as the German Government forces have evacuated the neutral zone, and declares no one will be affected by the presence of the French as long as order is maintained. Frankfurt, Darmstadt, Offenbach, Hochstadt, Koenigstein and Gieburg as well as all towns and districts within the circles of Gross Geran, Langschwabach and Wiesbaden with the exception of Biebrich are declared under a state of siege.

Only German troops encountered in Frankfurt by the French were Sichtswehr or volunteers who surrendered. They probably will be simply disarmed and released. The French occupation force is estimated to number from fifteen thousand to eighteen thousand men. It is composed largely of cavalry with detachments of infantry for the occupation of various centres and artillery merely as a precautionary measure. The neutral zone occupied presents no interest whatever from the point of military strategy, and hence the force has been limited to a number for occupation alone.

JOSEPH A. YORK, well-known business man of Portland, Me., who says he feels twenty years younger and has gained sixteen pounds on four bottles of Tanlac. Declares he can now eat three square meals a day.

"I am now able to eat three square meals a day for the first time in two years," was the emphatic statement made recently by Joseph A. York, well-known business man of Portland, Maine.

"I am now sixty-nine years of age, and in all my life I have never run across a medicine that I consider in a class with Tanlac. I have just finished my fourth bottle and this medicine has benefited me even beyond my greatest hopes. Besides gaining sixteen pounds in weight, I have been built up and strengthened until I feel all of twenty years younger."

"For the past two years I have been in a miserably run-down condition, and was compelled a short time ago to give up all idea of business as I was too weak to look after anything. I was nervous, worn-out, had no appetite, and suffered most all the time with indigestion. Some days I would eat scarcely anything; in fact I was afraid to eat because I knew I would suffer afterward. Sometimes I had such severe cramping pains after eating that I would almost die. My nerves were all unstrung and the least thing would worry me and I never could get a good night's sleep. In fact I just lost interest in everything and was greatly discouraged over my condition."

"The ordinary treatment failed to do me any good, and as I had read so many statements from people I know here in Portland who had been benefited by Tanlac, I decided to give it a trial. And now I know for myself what it will do for I have simply taken a new lease on life. I am now able to look after my work as usual, and never felt better in my life. I am able to eat three hearty meals a day and everything agrees with me perfectly. I eat anything I want and never feel a touch of indigestion. I never thought there was a medicine that could do me so much good, and I am only too glad to have the facts about my case given to the public."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and by the leading Druggist in every town.—adv.

Young-Adams Co.

Presents "THE GAMBLERS" To-night To-night the Young-Adams Company will present "The Gamblers," a powerful drama of high finance. This marks the opening of this company's second play in our city. Judging from the success of "The Butterfly on the Wheel," their stay will be a lengthy one, and we are also glad to extend a cordial welcome to a troupe of ladies and gentlemen whose acting is of recognized ability. "The Gamblers" is from the pen of two of America's leading dramatists, Charles Klein and Arthur Hornblow. Klein, it might well be remembered, is the author of that great drama with a world-renowned reputation "The Lion and the Mouse." "The Gamblers" deals with the financial district of New York, and has to do with the efforts of a young and progressive banker, who controls a chain of banks, but who is being forced to the wall by the unscrupulous methods of the big moneyed interests who wish to put him under, as far as banking is concerned, and take over and control the few banks he holds into their already overflowing number. Such plays, in these days of graft and "get rich quick" schemes are an important factor in preserving the general balance of the money market in all parts of the world. Mr. Young and Miss Adams both have excellent parts to play, and the remainder of the company are all well cast. New and high class vaudeville will be given between the acts, and a rare treat is in store for all.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

CAN YOU DO THIS?

RUTH CAMERON

Did you ever think that you would like to be able to see your house, or your town, or your college, or your friend, or your husband, or anything which has been yours for so long a time that you have ceased to look at it in a detached way, just as a stranger sees it (or him or her)?

One of Her Three Wishes.
A friend of ours who has been gradually remodelling an old house, told me the other day that if a fairy godmother should grant her three wishes that would be one of them,— to be able to enter her house as a stranger and see just how effective it really is. "I've been working over it so long," she said, "that I can't really tell what it does look like. I see the chair I've just bought, or the space where I'm going to put my wicker tea table when the war is over and I feel that it is right to buy it; but I don't get the effect of the rooms or the house as a whole."

It certainly does seem as if accustomedness and the suggestion of many associations drew a sort of film over one's eyes.

You Don't See the Man Other People See.

Unquestionably, when you walk up the familiar street and pause at the familiar gate and go inside, you do not see the same street or the same house or the same rooms that a stranger sees. You do not see the man whom a stranger meets, though he is your own husband and sits opposite you every morning of the year.

But I do not think this film is entirely impenetrable. Sometimes you can catch fugitive glimpses of all these things if you will throw yourself into the proper mood. Deliberately try to detach yourself. You know the old poem:

"Just stand aside and watch yourself go by—Think of yourself as 'he' instead of 'I'."

Well, try that with your house for instance. Think of it as "his" instead of "mine." Enter it as a stranger. Separate yourself from all sense of ownership. Try to see the house and the people in it, just as a stranger would. Understand that I do not mean with the idea of criticism, but just for the interest of the thing.

If you can accomplish it, it gives you a very queer, interesting feeling. Something like the funny start you get when you find that the woman whom you saw coming towards you in the shop was really yourself in a mirror. And I always love to have that happen. Don't you?

The Deadly Jordan.

Bathing in the River Jordan, famous in sacred history, has lost its popularity as the result of the discovery by United States physicians, that it is a dangerous disease-germ carrier.

One of the first steps taken by an American Red Cross unit reaching that region was an analysis of the river water. It was found to be laden with the germs of skin diseases and other maladies.

There have never before been restrictions on bathing in the stream, regardless of the physical condition of the bathers, but the revelations of the danger lurking in the Jordan's water caused the local authorities to place a ban on the unrestricted bathing.

I SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Paris, Ont.—"For five years I suffered from pains caused by displacement of my organs and in my back. All of this time I was unfit for work and was taking different medicines that I thought were good. I saw the advertisement in the papers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it faithfully. I am now in perfect health and do all my own work. I recommend it to others, and give you permission to publish this letter in your little books and in the newspapers as a testimonial."

—Mrs. D. CASSADY, Box 461, Paris, Ont.

Why women will continue to suffer so long is more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound!

For forty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Lord Mayor's Diamonds.

The most costly badge of office in England is worn by the Lord Mayor of London.

It contains diamonds to the value of £120,000, and each holder of it during his term of office is called upon to enter into a bond for its safe custody before he is sworn in, and thus becomes entitled to its possession.

The jeweled collar worn by the Lord Mayor of London is of pure gold, made up of a series of links, each formed of the "S", a united York and Lancaster rose and a massive knot. The ends of the chain are joined by the portucullis, from the points of which, suspended by a ring of diamonds, hangs the jewel. The centre collar contains twenty-eight "S's", fourteen roses, thirteen knots, and measures sixty-four inches. The jewel contains in the centre the City arms; surrounding this is a garter of blue edged with white and gold, bearing the City motto in gold letters.

The whole is encircled with a costly border of gold "S's", alternating with rosettes of diamonds set in silver. The jewel is suspended from the collar by a portucullis, but when worn without the collar is hung by a broad blue ribbon.

Pithy Pars.

In the records of the Corporation of Boston, under the date 1578, is found the following entry:—Agreed: "That a Dictionary shall be bought for the schoolers to be tyed in a cheryne, and set upon a deske in the scoole, whereunto any schooler may have access, as occasion shall serve."

One of the earliest known occasions on which the drop was used in hanging was at the execution of Earl Ferrers in 1760. The family of this nobleman had a drop made in the scaffold so that his lordship might not swing off from a cart like a plebeian culprit. The new arrangement did not seem to act very well, for the earl did not die for four minutes.

Quite a number of large buildings have been built in Eastern cities with hollow bricks. They are said to stand the same pressure, up to 30,000 pounds, that the best solid brick will stand. They cost one-third less than the solid form, and make the wall proof against fire, moisture, and frost, being warm in winter and cool in summer. The bricks are set on end, thus making a wall hollow from top to bottom.

A cheap and simple remedy for rheumatism has been found by a Canadian doctor—total abstinence from food. He declares that many cases of acute articular rheumatism have been cured by fasting in from four to eight days, while chronic rheumatism was also alleviated. No medicines whatever were given, but patients might drink cold water or moderate quantities of lemonade. The doctor states that rheumatism is after all only a phase of indigestion, and therefore can be cured by giving complete and continual rest to all the digestive organs.

Brick's Tasteless Cod Liver Oil.

Dr. F. Stafford & Son wish to say that they have been appointed Sole Agents for "Brick's Tasteless" in Newfoundland and are prepared to take orders for any quantity.

No other medicine will restore lost weight so quickly as "Brick's Tasteless." The one who takes it must eat. It purifies the blood, makes the weak strong. It is specific in throat and lung diseases, it is so prepared that it can be assimilated without the least digestive effort. Weigh yourself the day you commence to take "Brick's Tasteless", then weigh yourself two (2) weeks later and note the increase. "Brick's Tasteless" is sold in large 17 ounce bottles for $1.20. Postage 20c. extra. Write us for prices in large quantities.

A Savage Old English Pastime.

"Cock-throwing," which used to prevail at Shrovetide, seems to have had its origin in the brutal superstition of the people.

"Cock-a-doodle-doo, 'tis the bravest game,
Take a cock from his dame
And bind him to a stake,
How he struts, how he throws,
How he swaggers, how he crows,
As if the day newly brake.

How his mistress cackles
Thus to find him in shackles,
And tied to a packthread garter;
Oh, the bears and the bulls,
Are but corpulent gulls
To the valiant Shrovetide martyr."

The poor cock, tied to a stake with a cord allowing it some space to spring aside and avoid the wooden pins that were hurled at it by the players, was generally trained to the sport by its mercenary owner, who gave it up to be tormented to death. Three shies were allowed at the bird for twopence and if it was active in avoiding the blows, it was a source of great profit to the owner. It was attempted to palliate this practice as a religious one; because the cock crew thrice at the betrayal of our Saviour, therefore was the custom of cock-throwing instituted at Shrove Tuesday, says tradition. It is impossible to discover any reason for this tradition. A more applicable origin is to be found in the following: "Galled by oppression the Saxons conspired to murder their Norsemen enemies by night, and had actually commenced the work of destruction when the numerous cocks that the conquerors retained about them burst forth with divers loud crows and awakened them in time to crush the revolt. When the Saxons gained their freedom it is said that they wreaked their vengeance on the cocks at Shrovetide, for the old grudge they owed them.

Wise Men Say—

That actions speak louder than some people talk.
That is a man is obliging he is apt to be popular, because he can be imposed upon.

That the unfortunate thing about good resolutions is that they are often made too late.

That he is not worthy of the honeycomb who shuns the hive because the bees have stings.

That often are the very faults in which they resemble ourselves.

That politeness is like an air cushion. There may be nothing in it, but it eases the jolts wonderfully.

That it is so easy to find fault that self-respecting persons ought to be ashamed to waste their energies in that way.

That the men with pasts and the men with futures have their admirers. But the men with presents are the real winners.

ALBERT AND THE BELGIAN TRIBUTE.

Albert, it is hoped, will contribute to unveil the monument to be erected in London on the Thames Embankment by the Belgian community in his country as a tribute to the hospitality shown to their citizens during the war. The ceremony is likely to be of much importance, as apart from the large attendance of Belgians that may be expected the gift will be accepted on behalf of the British Government by either the Prime Minister or the Foreign Secretary, both of whom will probably be present. The beautiful piece of statuary is the work of M. Rousseau, the distinguished Belgian sculptor, who executes much work for the Belgian sovereign, Sir Arnold Blomfield being responsible for the other portions of the monument.

RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA.

The decision of the Allied Councils to take a step further towards the recognition of the present Russian Government, but it was too much, of course, to expect that they would face realities so far as to take full stride. The commerce between Russia and the rest of Europe, which has been "encouraged to the utmost degree" means inevitably unofficial negotiations and acceptance of things in Russia as they are. French opposition to the present course was understood to have been all along much stronger than that of the British Government. The losses of her vast loans to Russia have been enormous and widespread, and it is in nature that France should be the last to accept the new regime and all that it implies.

since the "first set" went out of popular favor. The second figure of the quadrille taught people how to get out of one another's way. In his view there is not enough exercise in the dances now in vogue, and he thought them ugly to look at.

WEALTH IN LOST SHIPS.

During the war there were published many notes about the wonderful salvage work done at sea by the Admiralty's special department under the control of that remarkable resurrector of ships—Captain Young, of Liverpool. The experience gained was invaluable, and it is interesting to know that our commercial marine salvage work is going to be developed to the furthest degree. Germany was as prominent in this work before the war as she became during the war, in creating the need for it. A hint of the possibilities was given at a little demonstration of up-to-date salvage methods by the Maritime Salvors, Ltd., which has made Newhaven their permanent basis of operations. Equipped with highly improved gear and pumping appliances modern salvage vessels are, in the opinion of experts, able to recover at least a very appreciable part of the cargoes in the ships torpedoed round the coast by the German submarines. Raising entire vessels is of course ticklish and expensive work—though it has been done in many brilliant instances. But it is possible with the aid of skilful divers to bring large quantities of valuable cargo to the surface, and it is at this smaller objective that salvage enterprise is likely to find its best results.

BLOW TO HIGH CLOTHING PRICES.

Mallaby-Deeley, M.P., the financier who startled London some years ago by purchasing the Covent Garden estate for several millions, is launching a new enterprise on an equally bold scale. He proposes to apply mass production methods to men's clothes. Three factories are ready and a fourth is standing by to cope with an overflow of orders. The scheme was launched on February 27th by means of full length double-column advertisements in all the well circulated newspapers in the country. People were advised to write to Mallaby-Deeley's Strand offices for samples of the clothes and self-measurement forms, whilst those who could attend personally would be measured free on the spot. Within a short time of the first advertisement being read queues began to assemble for measurement and orders and a new Strand sensation started, which still continues. For a start Mallaby-Deeley is prepared to turn out 5,000 to 10,000 suits a week. They will not be made of Government surplus or derelict material, but of high grade cloth already bought and on order and made to measure. Prices will vary from £2.17s. 6d. to £4.17s. 6d. for a suit. Sports jackets will be offered for £2.6s. 6d. and flannel trousers for £1.1s. 6d. These prices practically cut current tailoring charges in half. Mallaby-Deeley had better be prepared for a human avalanche, for at these prices he is likely to be called upon to clothe nine-tenths of the nation within a year.

THE COLOR LINE.

This spring women who wish to be in the fashion will still be able to choose between ornamental and simple skirts. In their design the tightest possible accordion pleats vie with severity of line for popularity. The severe skirts are cut straight, narrowing to the ankles, but are rather longer than those of a similar pattern which were worn some years ago. Some of the newest skirts have a band about half an inch wide of brightly-colored material round the edge of the hem. A smart dark blue skirt will be finished with a border of the brightest cerise, with a knot of ribbon of the same shade displayed on the blouse of dark blue made to be worn with it. Another skirt will have a line of vivid green, emphasised by the bright green plumes on a soft black hat. Such a single line of color rather relieves the severity of plain serge, and looks very trim.

The Food Controller's Latest.

Mr. G. H. Roberts has been retailing for the benefit of his friends a story concerning a young man who entered a village shop and complained to the owner that a ham he had purchased there a few days before had proved not to be good.
"The ham is all right, sir," insisted the shopkeeper.
"No, it isn't," protested the other, "it's bad."
"How can that be," continued the shopkeeper, "when it was cured only last week?"
The young man reflected a moment and then suggested:
"Maybe it's had a relapse."

Are "Dry" Nations Doomed?

Alcohol "A Divine Gift"---What Happens When It Is Dropped?

By Colonel Sir Ronald Ross, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., F.R.S.
(In the Liverpool Weekly Post.)

The experiment now being made by the United States is certainly the greatest social experiment of recent times. It is a scientific experiment as distinct from the numerous political experiments to which men are so much more addicted—such as experiments in autocracy, democracy, centralism, devolution, and so on, in which I for one have little faith because they show very small results as regards real enhancement of prosperity, which is the main point. The States have set out to determine by trial whether alcohol increases the total happiness of a nation or not. In the first place, a nation which possesses the self-discipline to stop its drink and its smoke when it pleases is, like an individual who can do the same, capable of going further than those with less will-power; and secondly, if the answer to the question is decisive, that nation will have done a service, not only to itself, but to the whole of humanity.

The Subtle Effect of Alcohol.
Personally, I am by no means clear as to what the answer will be. Like other men of science I hope that I have always listened to both sides of the question. I have allowed myself alcohol and tobacco off and on for more than forty years, and certainly wish that I now had the money I have spent on them. But I can stop my alcohol with ease, whenever I like; have often discontinued it experimentally for months at a time; and generally drop it during my holidays. On the other hand, when I was a young man in India I did as the other young officers there did—drank what we pleased. I have never seen young men so fit and competent. Up at daybreak, parade at 6 a.m., work all day, polo or tennis at 5 p.m., three or four drinks before dinner, billiards or cards (with stout) and bed near midnight! I am now shocked at the memory; but the fact remains that I for one did my best work under these conditions.

What do I observe in myself when I stop alcohol? Simply that teetotaling gives me the placid contentment, let us say, of a cow. There is no fret in my engines. Everything works smoothly. Nothing matters. I do not mind losing umbrellas or trains, or having my pet scientific theories controverted, or books reviewed. I am like the "dry" Hindus who will wait peacefully for days at a country railway station for the next train which will provide room for them. And, if I have really hard, fixed continuous work to do, I drop alcohol immediately and absolutely. But—there is a difference. Without alcohol I have little of that "divine discontent" which, after all, is the great originating and impelling masculine force in life. It is, of course, not mere temporary stimulation of wine that I am talking of, but the general and subtle effect of it on the whole habit of the body—produced in me by so small a dose as one glass of claret a day. It loses for me the placidity of the meadow and drives me into the activity of the city. Personally, perhaps I prefer the former; but I am not sure that it is the only state in which men should live.

Docile and Active Nations.
Let us compare wet and dry nations in the mass. I strongly suspect (though I am not sure) that alcohol has the same effect on entire nations as it has on my humble self. To-day nearly the whole of China, India, and the vast semi-savage tracts of the tropics are dry, while Europe and the Children of Europe are wet. Yes, but for the stimulus of Europe the former nations would probably have been at the present day in precisely the same state as they were in thousands of years ago. It is the wet nations that have made the really great philosophies, sciences, and arts of the world. Probably even India and China were wet in their great and progressive epochs. Now they have become like the cows in the meadows. The "pathetic contentment" of the Indian populations which Mr. Montague innocently ascribes to their political condition, is much more probably due to the fact that they seldom touch alcohol. Even after taking race and climate into account, I think that the non-alcoholic nations are more hard-working but less inventive, more docile but less vigorous, than the alcoholic nations. Similar differences are apparent among individuals, and the drunkard is generally by nature a strong man until indulgence ruins him.

A scientific study of the effect of alcohol on civilization would be interesting, but we can get little information from the anthropologists as to the date when alcohol probably came into use. It has possibly been drunk in northern Europe for hundreds of thousands of years—not only for itself but for the vitamins contained in fermented liquors; and "wet" votaries may argue that such drinks have almost become a part of the food of northern Europeans. These great relics of unwritten history, the Greek and other mythological tales, record the introduction of alcohol as a divine gift. Dionysus appears originally to have been the god of genius; and the wise and great picture by Velazquez on the Prado, showing Bacchus and Mars drinking wine with the peasantry, contains only benign suggestions—though it is true that the old man in the right hand corner of the picture looks on doubtfully! But the gods always send their gifts to men by the hand of the Nemesis named Excess; and however beneficial a little pure wine may be to temperate persons, the prohibition of Mahomet seems to show that the decision of his time was that, on the average, alcohol is bad for the mass of the people, at least in warm climates. The American experiment will most probably lead to the same conclusion for temperate climates.

When Alcohol Should Be Used.
From results of experiments on myself I entirely disagree with the finding of a recent commission, and conclude that the effect on my own health is certainly very largely "drink." All spirits disagree with me—medicinal spirit least of all and alleged Highland whisky most. Beer and cider give me "liver," and light wines suit me best. But above all, I find that the habitual use of alcohol at meals, even in small doses, is the worst thing for me—it gives me too much of the "divine discontent." On the other hand, after a week or more of abstinence, a bacquet (especially with a City company) does me "a world of good." That is the proper way to approach Bacchus. Do not worry him with diurnal libations. He is a god only at festivals. If used at all alcohol should be used only occasionally.

The teetotaler will have something of a case if he argues that the fact made by German beer, that Bolshevism is vodka, and that the Irish question is whisky. I do not go so far; but I think that national over-indulgence in these drinks may quite possibly produce pathological conditions of national opinion, which may lead to very grave results. When intemperate the nation may be annoying or dangerous to the whole world, just as the individual may be to his Salvation Army's Jubilee.

The present year marks a jubilee genuinely golden; it is the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Salvation Army, by the late Rev. Wm. Booth, (afterward more widely known as General Booth), with the assistance of his wife, Catherine Booth. Both were possessed of remarkable organizing gifts, and began by preaching in the streets of London in 1865. Five years later they had succeeded in forming a definite organization to carry on the work of reaching a class of people, many of whom were degraded and only by the remotest chance were ever lured into a religious convention. At first the organization was called "The Christian Mission," and it was not until 1878 that the idea of organizing its work on the military model and making it universal in scope was put into effect. The picturesque title "Salvation Army" dates from 1880.

It is singular how many religious communions, including the early Christian Church itself, have had their beginnings in street preaching. Like most other religious societies, the Army also experienced its baptism of persecution—and flourished under it. Many readers will recall the ridicule bestowed on its pioneer members in Canada—a ridicule which they in some measure invited by the extravagance of their methods and utterances. All these crudities have since been cured, and the Army has become a vast and beneficent agency of practical Christianity. The genius for organization did not depart from its counsels with the deaths of the elder Booths, and the fact that it has 308 corps in Eastern Canada alone is evidence of sound and remarkable growth.

To-day there is no religious society that enjoys quite so much of the good-will of all classes of the community as the Salvation Army. The reason for this is that its members no longer criticize the older churches but refrain from religious controversy. The greatness of the Army's influence for good is based on the fact that it aims to cure the body as well as the soul, and to ameliorate the sufferings inflicted on innocent people by vice and poverty. Its greatest merit as a charitable institution in connection with its benefactions,—almost a new idea when first adopted by the Salvation Army, and now universally recognized as the true theory of charitable energy. Of its services in connection with the late war it is hardly necessary to

Life of a Gun.
Sooner or later the progress of erosion is certain to impair the accuracy of fire, and upon this the life of a gun depends.

Erosion is caused by the action of the explosive gases at high temperature and pressure. The hot gases cause a thin film of steel to absorb heat. The film expands and becomes set. Upon the release of the pressure it contracts, which action causes minute cracks that grow larger with every discharge. As they increase in size they form passageways for more hot gas, and that tends to enlarge them still further. The inner surface thus becomes roughened and the bands begin to corrode.

Finally, the bore becomes so enlarged that it allows the gases to escape. The shell does not then acquire its proper rotation, and its flight becomes erratic. All guns, except small ones, are now constructed with linings in the tube, which, when the bore is worn out, are removed and replaced by new ones.

The cost of relining a gun is approximately 30 per cent. of that of the gun. There appears to be no limit to the number of times the gun can be relined.

Small naval guns can be relined 1,000 times before they are regarded as worn out. Large 12-inch and 16-inch naval guns are considered to have a life, on one lining, of from 200 to 250 rounds. Low velocity guns, such as howitzers and mortars, correspondingly longer lives than velocity guns of the same caliber, because of the pressures they develop and hence the lower temperatures.

Slander and libel have much in... common. They both mean defamation... character; but while slander can... be by word of mouth, libel has... to be printed or written.
In a slander case one has to prove... "special damage"—that one has suffered... pecuniary loss. If you are in... business and you hear that someone... has been saying slanderous things... about what you put on the market... you need not prove special damage... the reason is that this would concern... your character and your business, and... would be serious.

At the Casino.

The H. Wilmot Young and Marjle Adams Company made their second offering last evening, scoring another tremendous hit. Their wonderful reproduction of "The Butterfly on the Wheel" was unanimously acclaimed to be one of the finest entertainments ever seen in this city and much credit is due the popular manager, Mr. J. P. Killy in securing such a talented company. The play is a difficult one, keeping each actor and actress on their mettle, as it were, to sustain the respective roles assigned them. "The Butterfly on the Wheel" is written by Edward G. Hermides, a famous English K.C., and Francis Nelson, a member of the British Parliament, dealing with a Society Butterfly who was found in a compromising position in Paris, much to the surprise of her husband. Although it was a perfectly innocent affair, yet the husband thought the worst and sued for a divorce. Mr. Young was particularly clever as the husband, whilst the role of Peggy, the "Butterfly" was portrayed by Miss Marjle Adams, whose acting was characteristic, clever and sympathetic. Her greatest work, however, was in the third act, as her cross-examination on the witness stand will long be remembered. The vaudeville between the acts was very good, as every member of the company is an artist. Other members who also deserve much praise are Mr. D. Mack, Miss Gladys Butler, Mr. P. Norman, Miss Vivian Mayo, John J. Gregory, John Simmonds, G. Denton, George Carruth and Miss Marguerite Young. "The Butterfly on the Wheel" will be presented at this afternoon's matinee, while to-night that strong drama "The Gamblers" will be staged. The C.C.C. Band will discourse sweet and popular music between acts, in addition the vaudeville.

Good for Father and Good for Son.

MR. C. ROY PRAISES DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

He States That They Relieved His Son of Bed Wetting and Himself of Bladder Trouble.—Ask Your Neighbors About Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Thibierge Office, Bonaventure Co., Que., April 6th.—(Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills have been successfully used by both old and young as a remedy for kidney ills is again shown by the statement of Mr. Clement Roy, of this place.

"I am glad to be able to state," Mr. Roy says, "that Dodd's Kidney Pills relieved my little boy of bed wetting. They also helped my bladder trouble. I cannot say too much in praise of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are a kidney remedy pure and simple. But bladder and urinary troubles come as a result of weak or diseased kidneys. The natural way to treat such kidneys is to strengthen or help the kidneys.

Mr. Roy acted on this principle when he used Dodd's Kidney Pills for his own and his son's troubles. The satisfaction he got is voiced by his statement.

"If you have not used them yourself, ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the remedy for kidney ills."

Why the Delay?

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Would you allow me space in your valuable paper to make a few remarks concerning the medals won by the C.E.I. in 1918. I notice by this morning's paper that the St. Andrew's team were presented with their medals which they won last year. Now, Mr. Editor, it is two years since the C.E.I. won the championship, and it was their first year for a good many. I would like to know who is responsible for this and why the medals have not been presented to them. I understand they are made and waiting to be purchased, and I think it is up to the Secretary of the League to get busy. I will look for results, and if not forthcoming I will have more to say concerning this matter. Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor,
I am, yours truly,

Not Popular.

The plain truth had better be told. The English are not popular in France, because the French consider Mesopotamia is far more valuable than Alsace-Lorraine, though they cannot colonize. They grudge our recuperative powers, and at present the French lower class will neither work nor pay direct taxation. Our labour troubles are nothing to theirs, and Bolshevism is preached in many a cabaret. The private conduct of some prominent Englishmen in Paris has not created a good impression. It is a pity that "Nach Paris" is selling in such thousands, for perusal of its horrors—which out-Zola de Manpassant—can only increase the racial hatred of the Germans.

TO THE TRADE!

WELCH'S GRAPE JUICE.

We have received a small shipment by the "Rosalind" and can fill orders as long as this supply lasts.

Owing to advance in prices and the high rate of American exchange it will be necessary to retail Welch's Grape Juice at the following prices during the season of 1920:

4 oz. "Nips", each 20c.
Half Pints, each 35c.
Pints, each 55c.
Quarts, each $1.05
Half Gallons, each $1.60

Even at these prices Welch's Grape Juice is the most wholesome drink, the most popular beverage and the best value for the money of all the imported drinks on the market.

Sales have increased from 15 cases in 1913 to 1,035 cases in 1918, it having been impossible to get enough to supply the demand during 1919.
