CHAPTER VIII.
THE COUNTESS RECEIVES.
"Oh, Mr. Duressa, can you tell us, is that exquisite tree yonder a Cryptomeria japonica? You don't know? Oh, but you can see by the little cones. My daughter does admire it so. I have been wanting her to go down and examine it closely, but my foot is a trifle sprained, and I have to spare it."
"Then will Miss Villiers go botanizing with me?" said the handsome young divine, and with a satisfied blush, and a shake of her delicate greenish plume, the young lady stepped daintily off beside him, over the complete stretch of lawn, vastly envied by most female observers.
"Afraid of exhibiting her triumph in this maneuver by too long gazing, Mrs. Alwyn turned to swell the group of matrons about Lady Avena Massey's chair, thinking placidly, "One is best quietly rid of that Mr. Drayton" (an opinion she lived to repent), while this gentleman, deserted, after watching what he privately dubbed "that extraordinarily elegant pink-and-white piece of empty-headedness," took a couple of steps backward, and was within an ace of knocking Miss Mary Dacie down the terrace slope.
"Ten thousand pardons!" he exclaimed, hat in hand. "What a dolt I was not to look where I was going! I do hope you'll forgive me!"
"Quite easily," replied Mary Dacie, her balance restored, her good-humor never ruffled; "all the more so because I think you are our rector's friend, here he comes."

And Mr. Vaughan joining them, they all fell talking together, and presently, with peals of mirth floating by, Mary made the very original remark that it was hard to remember, in such festivities as this, there was such a thing as trouble in the world.
"Now, don't say that, Miss Dacie," begged Richard Drayton. "It makes me feel what a selfish brute I am for enjoying myself when an old chum of my young days is in a most confounded plight. I've been doggedly keeping the notion at arm's-length all the afternoon. Now you've brought it to the front again. Our friend here," signifying Mr. Vaughan, "knows all about it. It's one of his old Greek class—like me."
"But he has lighted on worse times than you, poor fellow!" said the old tutor, sadly. "It's desperately hard, to be sure, in the very prime of life, to be stranded well-nigh helpless and hopeless. How utterly impossible it is for us to fathom the why and wherefore of such things!"
"Helpless! hopeless!" said Sydney, softly, to Mr. Drayton—a very tender, womanly pity darkening her eyes and trembling upon her parted lips. "Is your friend's trouble so very heavy? Cannot any one ease him or bear it for him?"
Richard Drayton looked kindly down on the young questioner. "If I were ten years younger I'd fall in love with this girl!" he said, to himself; but aloud, "No, I'm afraid even time can't mend this matter. As he used to say in our old school days, 'He's in a muddle now, and no mistake!' But we need not worry you with the tale, Miss Alwyn,

When Choosing the Material for a washable Freck for the growing child—
MOTHER naturally thinks of the possibilities of the fabric shrinking in the wash. It is therefore a relief to her to know that the fabric will not shrink or lose its charm if Lux is used for its cleansing.
Durability, charm of colour, quality of texture, the freshness of newness—these are preserved to all good fabrics washed with Lux. A packet of Lux—a bowl of warm water—and dainty hands can cleanse delightful fabrics in a delightfully easy manner.
The beautiful pure Lux flakes are whisked into a creamy, bubbly lather in an instant. Gently squeeze this cleansing foam through and through the soiled texture—then rinse in clean water and hang to dry. Lux cannot harm a silken thread. It coaxes rather than forces the dirt from the clothes.

for you cannot help him any more than ourselves."
"I wish I could," she replied, wistfully. And what—what chord of memory had been touched? The hand was playing "Auld Land Syne," her father's old song that he never wearied of having her sing to him in the twilight; but it was not that, or not altogether—rather a something very dim, a sound out of a long, long ago past, a ghost of some pain that flitted by and made her turn aside to hide the wave of inexplicable sadness passing over her. The next moment it had to be dispersed. Up came Major Villiers.
"Now, Miss Sydney, I'm commissioned to fetch you, Miss Dacie, are you ready? Mrs. Alwyn is leaving," and, with hand-shakings and farewells, they separated—Richard Drayton muttering as they left:
"Alwyn, Alwyn! I know I've seen that name somewhere lately. Where can it be?"
A tide of adieus followed. In another hour Lady Comyngham was resting from her labors with:
"What a blessed relief that the thing is over! I do trust that we've contented every one!" And the memorable day was done.

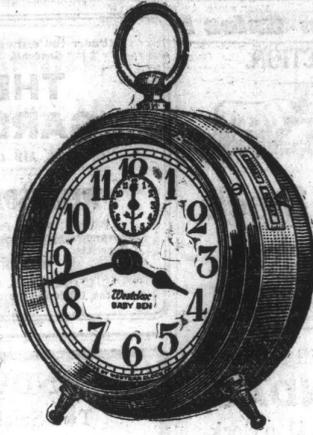

CHAPTER IX. SHADOWS BEFOREHAND.

Done, but not by any means done with!
Curiouser than that now when the tale's history a certain hour stands forth distinct, as a gleaming crystal on some common earthy track, and in it lie the germs of likings, loves, or plains that are to guide us for good or ill to ends as yet undreamed of. But Lady Comyngham's "at home" was ordained to be one of these bright particular spots, little as such was suspected by Richard Drayton, who returned to St. Clair's rectory prodigiously amused by this his first renewal of English society; by Mary Dacie, who, apart from a crowd where she had felt herself a veritable Jenny Wren; by Sydney, though an undertone of pressure ran through that constantly recurring "hopeless and helpless!" or last, not least, by Mrs. Alwyn, who left Oakleigh Place most opportunely supplied with fresh means of attachment to the family with whom she so keenly desired an alliance.
It was the morning after the fete. To her surprise Sydney found herself alone at the breakfast-table. "Miss Leonora had a headache," Phillips said; "a tray was to be sent up to her and mistress in the boudoir." So the tray was duly dispatched, and Sydney unceremoniously made her own meal by the open window, with no voices about her save those of feathered songsters.
But, while watching the fleecy cloudlets speeding over the blue sky, she speculated on questions insoluble and the great mysteries of an ever-vanishing by and by. Minutes were fleeting, Phillips came in, saying, "Please, if Miss Sydney had finished would she go up-stairs? her mamma wanted her;" and hastily finished her cold coffee, she obeyed the summons.
It was a small southern room which Mrs. Alwyn had honored by selection for her boudoir; one of the quaintest, quite the prettiest, in the whole old-fashioned house. Part of it, with a deep bay-window, was over the porch. Another window looked over the rich swaying crops of the Suffolk acres to the billowy green of Oakleigh Woods beyond. Each way the view was charming, and all within matched everything without.
On the walls hung a few choice paintings, oval-framed, small but excellent; on the China-tiled hearth stood a great pink flowering oleander, that reached its rose-like blossoms up to the satin draperies of the mantelpiece above. There rested a dainty time-piece, with a Puck-faced Cupid swinging for a pendulum, and over the glass which shaded this smiling love-god at his labor a shepherd and shepherdess in purple. Dresden pottery offered to each other fruits and garlands. There were Sevres cups, too, and choice bits of Benares brass upon the shelf; mirrors, whose deep-cut edges gleamed and scintillated like ranged to admire their beautiful selves therein; a soft square of deepest crimson Axminster on the polished floor; a rug of restless rich-tinted ostrich feathers in the bay, just meeting one small couch, which, with three most languor-begging easy-chairs, formed the only seats the small apartment could well contain. There was no article, no ornament, which was not choice of its kind, for the entire establishment, as Mrs. Alwyn was fully aware, owed much of its prestige to this boudoir of hers, a feminine sanctum, as entirely different from the slipper-bowered dressing-rooms of well-to-do halls and manors round as it was from the still, much "antimacassar" state of the ordinary rural drawing-room.

Dull red and flame-colored silk and beads are used to embroider a gown of black Canton crepe.
Dresses of silks and serges are featured with flat back and front, with some fullness at the sides.
The petal skirt of black chiffon is worn with a bodice heavily embroidered in blue-and-white, beads and gold thread.
A gown of seru lace and embroidery is worn over a slip of flesh satin and girdled with two-tone blue and rose satin.

Baby Ben — the Westclox midget

BABY Ben is just waist-high alongside Big Ben. He tucks into places where Big Ben would feel crowded. He's at home in your traveling bag and right there in case the train porter or the hotel clerk forgets. He cozies into a corner on your dresser and never gets in the way on your desk downtown. He has all the punctual habits of Big Ben and that same knack of passing those habits along to you.

Baby Ben has friends everywhere. Not merely because he's Big Ben's little brother: the real reason is his Westclox construction. That's why you like him! The wheels turn on needle-fine pivots of polished steel. Friction is thereby reduced to the minimum and the clock keeps better time and lasts longer. Westclox on the dial and tag means this construction inside the case. It is your assurance of quality.

THE STRAIGHT PATH.

It doesn't pay to rob the mails, though profits be enormous; at last the robbers lie in jail, the records all inform us. And if in prison they don't rot, through warrants and subpoenas, they're hunted down at last and shot like war-hogs or hyenas. The bandits flourish for a time, when favored by conditions, and stripplings read the tale of crime, and have some wild ambitions. Why hew the log or till the soil, or stick to labor cheezy, why buckle down to honest toil, when robbing is so easy? In fiction and in movie shows the thieves appear before us, romantic figures, who are foes to all the laws that bore us. We see them there as Robin Hoods, in colors most alluring, fine heroes driven to the woods by wrongs beyond enduring. The strippling sees the lurid screen, or reads the lurid story, and sighs, "I'll get a gun, I'll wear, and harvest coin and glory." And it is well if some one's there to tell him where he's headed, that crime can only bring despair, and sorrow double leaded. In films the bandits wear glad smiles, as though by life enchanted; but they're shot down like crocodiles, and jailed and hanged and planted. Not two in ninety-nine escape the prison or the cleaver, and when they croak there is no crape on any mourner's heaver.

THE LESSON.
You will discover by and by, when you have grown as old as I. That certain men at whom you sneer, with habits strange and customs queer, and sometimes very coarse and crude, and in their conduct often rude, grow rich, while men of finer grain in humble poverty remain.

And no doubt, too, as oft have I, you'll notice this and wonder why—why should the barren intellect, the treasures of the world collect, while pillaged minds from day to day must struggle for a meager pay? If ignorance to wealth can rise, why be a gentleman and wise?
Yet when these thoughts shall come to you, there is one thing I'd have you do—consider this; so rich to be, would you remain as coarse as he? Count up your friends and his right then.
Would you give up the kindly man who stand by you and take his place, almost an outcast from his race?
Would you be laughed at, as is he, the richest man on earth to be? And for—mass gold, so highly prized, would you be pitied or despised? Learn from such men that here on earth money is not the proof of worth. And poor is he whose wealth is told in nothing but a pile of gold.
Beware of business for Burns, Etc.

Fashions and Fads.

Clusters of cording above a hem make taffeta skirts stand out. Gray lace and narrow squirrel hair have been used in combination. A wrap of summer ermine is the with brilliant flame-color crepe. Many frocks show side panels extending below the hem of the skirt. A narrow cherry red velvet panel is used on a dress of gray tulle. The scarf of black tulle is a fashionable accessory to the evening gown.
The newest tennis dress for women consists of knickers and shirt. Dresses of supple fabrics especially claim the irregular-bottom line. Dressy shirtwaists are mousseline, flannel, Val, Irish, crocheted, or Vandyke laces.
A smart sports costume is a white shawl skirt and a blue cloth jacket.

Malignant Diseases Sweeping Europe.

Cholera and Typhus Spreading From Russia--Dublin Now Centre of Interest.

UNUSUAL CONDITIONS ALARMING. PARIS, July 22. The worst epidemic of typhus and cholera in history is sweeping West with terrible speed. Europe woke to a realization that, unless Russia's starving millions are promptly relieved, the whole East-European stands in danger of a few months in the grip of a grim plague. According to an appeal from Maxim Gorky, to Anatole France Gerhardt and Belasco, the situation is beyond belief. Gorky de- clares that 300,000 Russians are dying from starvation and disease, one end of Russia to the other are complete failures. Suicides are reported from the Caucasus, while in Moscow and Petro- grad mothers are slaying their children rather than see them die from starvation. Transportation is paralyzed, practically all industries are down, owing to the lack of work- ers. According to Vladimir Lenin, the famous author now writes, 25,000,000 in the Volga dis- trict are likely to die of famine be- fore the winter is over, failure of the harvest being blamed on the prolonged drought.

THE IRISH SITUATION. LONDON, July 22. The centre of interest in Irish af- fairs was transferred to Dublin to- day with the departure of Eamon De Valera and his cabinet for the benefit of Government. The proposals of the Irish Government, which the leader is taking back with him, were submitted to members of the House and other prominent Republicans, and Mr. Lloyd George will hear from time to time the discussions are proceeding. Mr. De Valera will return to- day for further conversations, and it is considered that he may re-enter negotiations at this time. It is authorita- tively stated that the truce in Ireland will continue for an indefinite period. This is convincing the most skeptical that the factions still are far from dis- couraged. London newspapers this morning take an exceedingly cheerful view of the situation. Meanwhile the Opposition, from extreme Unionists appears to have hardened somewhat, as a result of an interview which sev- eral Ulsterite members of the Com- mons had with Austen Chamberlain, leader of Government forces yesterday. A statement issued by the deputa- tion later in the day, said that Mr. Cham- berlain's explanations were entirely unsatisfactory, and that about forty of the dissenters had met and passed res- olutions "expressing grave apprehen- sion over the Government's Irish policy."

A NEWSPAPER OPINION. DUBLIN, July 22. Belief that conversations between De Valera and Lloyd George will be resumed, are expressed by the Free- man's Journal, in its comments on the peace negotiations to-day. The interview between the two men in Lon- don yesterday, was evidently not their last, the newspaper says. "One thing at any rate seems certain," it con- tinues, "there can be no return to the monstrous unholy condition to which Ireland has been subjected before the truce by the British Government."

UNEMPLOYMENT LESSENING. LONDON, July 22. The last weekly report of the Labor Department of the Board of Trade shows the number of unemployed was one hundred thousand less than dur- ing the previous week.

A RUSSIAN PROTEST. STOCKHOLM, July 22. M. K. Orgonoff, chief of the dele- gation of Soviet Russia to Sweden, yesterday handed to E. L. Crosby, United States Charge D'Affaires, a long note, protesting against the failure to invite Russia to the Pacific Confer- ence in Washington. The note ex- presses astonishment at the omission, considering, it says, that Russia is a Soviet Power and that both the Rus- sian Republic and the Far-Eastern Republic possess territories along the Pacific. It declares that the Rus- sian Government cannot under any circumstances permit other powers to argue with her.

They Get There!

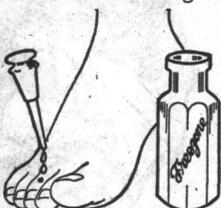

The "Micks" are a Mix-up— There's a Mick in the valley A Mick in the galley, A Mick on the ocean, A Mick on the main; You'll find Mick on a lotion, Mick gets you a potion, I believe, 'pon' me soul, That he'll give you a pain.

Oh why does he obtrude With sincere devotion His person, his pride, And his dear quaint old name. He gets here, he quits there When that is his notion, Regardless of fortune, Regardless of fame.

There's a mix-up in Micks, And there's Micks in a mix-up, Though they're kindly and friendly, For that I'll go bail, But I'll take my sticks up, I'll have no mix-up, If Mick sounds the charge, "Charge" on the Caribou Trail. T. D. C.

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, in- stantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irrita- tion.

Wedding Bells.

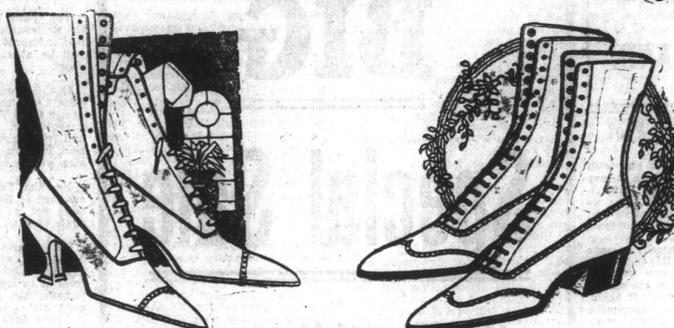

Cavendish House, 3 Military Road, was the scene of a very pretty wed- ding on Wednesday afternoon, 20th inst., when Mr. Alex. Watson, of the firm of Bowring Bros., was united in bonds of matrimony to Miss Nellie Drysdale, fourth daughter of Mrs. and the late H. T. Butt, of Sunnyside, Forest Road. The bride who was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. A. G. Fagan, looked charming in a dress of Harding Blue and car- ried a bouquet of white carnations, sweet peas and ferns, and was at- tended by her sister Miss Florence Butt, while the groom was ably supported by H. K. Butt, brother of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. B. Holden, M.A. After refresh- ments were served and the usual toasts duly honored, the happy couple left by the 6 o'clock train for Kelli- grews where the honeymoon will be spent, taking with them the hearty good wishes of their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Watson was the recipi- ents of many beautiful presents.

On June 26th, Sacred Heart Church, East Cambridge, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Edmund Aylward, son of John and Elizabeth Aylward of Killybegs, led to the altar Helen Doody, daughter of John and Rose Doody, St. John's. The bride looked charming in white charmeuse satin over-draped with silk lace. She wore a veil with a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of sweet peas and roses. The groomsmen were Mr. John Craft of Providence, R.I., the bridesmaid being Miss Mary Burke, of Cambridge. The groom's gift to the best man was a pearl tie pin, to the bridesmaid a sapphire ring. After the marriage a reception was held at the groom's aunt, Mrs. John Woodbridge, where 90 guests attended. The bride and groom received many pretty presents. After the reception, Mr. J. Bowles, of Riverhead, St. John's, drove the happy couple to the South Station amid the showers of confetti and took the train for Providence, Rhode Island, and Newport where they will spend the honeymoon. After their return they will make their home at 862A Somerville Ave., Somerville.

How London Took Carpentier's Defeat.

London—Most everybody in Lon- don spent the day after the fight say- ing "I told you so," regarding the victory of Jack Dempsey over Car- pentier. In general, the English opinion, as reflected in the papers and by con- versations in the streets, hotels and buses, is still that Carpentier, in the eyes of the British, is a more brainy and more scientific box- er, but that he succumbed to the champion's superior strength, height and reach. But even with this admission, if the reports be true—that Carpentier broke his right hand in two places when he smashed Dempsey in the second round—it is likely that the most ardent of the Frenchman's sup- porters here will claim that he should have another chance at the title on the assumption that this injury rob- bed him of what otherwise would have been a victory. The enormous interest with which the fight has been followed here is shown by the fact that each one of the papers had from half to the whole first page devoted to the battle. There was little editorial comment, how- ever. Lord Northcliffe's Weekly dispatch said: "Carpentier's defeat after all is only what might have been ex- pected from the records of the two men, and his friends and well-wish- ers who hoped for another ending were trusting to the unexpected, one might almost say miraculous, one of the greatest and brainiest fighters the modern boxing ring has ever known. The Frenchman has been outmatched by a bigger, heavier man, not less adept in ringcraft than himself and not liable to be taken unawares. Speed and agility were of no avail against a boxer of the calibre of the American champion. One of the most interesting sport- ing results of the fight is the possi- bility of another bout between Joe Beckett and Carpentier for the Euro- pean heavyweight title. Beckett, who prophesied Dempsey's victory, said after the fight: "I've always been willing to meet Carpentier again, and still am. In fact, it is my one ambi- tion to show that Carpentier's vic- tory over me was absolutely a fluke. It was a chance blow that put me out, and I feel that I can and will beat him if we meet again."

Despite the eagerness with which Londoners hoped for Dempsey's de- feat, the crowds watching the fight returns took the result in unexpected, manlike way. At a boxing show in Covent Garden when the result was announced between the rounds some of the spectators booed.

Household Notes.

Delicious sandwich mixtures can be made with odds and ends of meat. Try shirring eggs in a layer of hot hominy. Serve with cheese sauce. For making hot or cold chocolate, keep a chocolate syrup on hand. To test wool for shine, rub hard with a piece of similar woolen goods. Mincied onion and minced parsley may be added to cream of potato soup. In using stale breadcrumbs to make meat patties, soak crumbs in milk first. Cream of tartar dissolved in boiling water is excellent for grass stains. If fudge is beaten with a Dover egg beater it will be delightfully creamy.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Miss Owen Heath, daughter of Mr. Albert Heath, of St. John's, after spending a few days with her uncle, Mr. Arthur Heath and friends, returned to the city by Wednesday afternoon's train. Mr. H. Warren who spent the week-end here returned to the city on Monday.

Miss Gertrude L. Davis left town by yesterday afternoon's train for St. John's and will connect with a steamer en route for Burgeo, on a month's visit to her brother, Mr. Frank Davis, Manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, at that place.

S.S. Sagona arrived in port from Labrador at 5 a.m. Wednesday and the S.S. Sebastopol called here in the evening of the same day on her way there. From letters and telegrams received in town during the week from the various fishing ports along the coast, we learn that in most places the ice has cleared and a good sign of fish is reported to have struck in at most wharves where so far reports have been sent from. We trust this good news will continue to come in from time to time and that we shall have a record fishery this year, which will brighten up matters and improve conditions.

Miss Ebeary and Mr. G. Davy of St. John's are guests at "Hawthorne Cottage" and will be remaining for a week or so longer.

The young lad Peddle who met with the accident at Bear's Cove on Sunday last is improving nicely, and, we hope, will be able to get around again in short.

Mrs. G. Bussey (nee Miss Lottie LeDrew) and child, arrived in town recently from Toronto, on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John LeDrew and friends, who are glad to have her back in town for awhile and trust her stay will be enjoyable.

Mr. Wm. Teitford, (H.M.C.) has been confined to his home for the last few days, but we hope to see him around again shortly.

With regret we learn that Rev. A. A. Holmes, with his wife and two daughters, has taken his departure from us to make his home future in Canada, but he takes with him the good wishes of all who have ever had the good luck to know him. The Rev. gentleman was pastor of the Methodist Church here, just previous to his going to Pouch Cove to reside and while here made lasting friendships, which neither time nor distance will sever. Several motored to Brigus from here on Sunday, to say farewell to him, he having been there to spend that day.

S.S. Sagona en route to Labrador, arrived at 2.30 p.m. Among the passengers to leave by her were—Rev. E. Dwyer for Twillingate, Mrs. E. Simmons and Mrs. C. Pike and child for Styles' Harbor, Labrador.

Mr. W. A. Munn of St. John's is in town to-day.

Engine Testing by Piano.

Have you heard of the novel way in which locomotives are tested in the United States?

Pointing to a piano that was standing in the locomotive shed of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, near Kansas City, an English visitor remarked: "Ah, I see your road supplies you with musical entertainment."

"Not at all," replied the foreman. "That piano is for testing the engine."

The Englishman thought it a joke, but when a uniformed pianist struck a note which harmonised with the notes of vibration in each part of the locomotive as it was tested, he understood that there could be no flax or cracks in the engine.

He was informed that if the notes of the locomotive made a discord with the musical note the locomotive would be proved defective. The method has been discovered to be more accurate than the old way of hammering each part.

Mr. John C. Crosbie on Railway Resolutions.

Present Agreement Will Eventually Bankrupt Colony --- Revenue Cannot Stand Strain Put Upon It.

(Concluded.)

625,000, and now you want to cut the railway in two and ask us for a million and a half. I can't understand it. Frightful stuff, and then we are asked to go to work and deliver over $1,500,000 to the Reid Newfoundland Company. I don't care whether it is to the Reids, it makes no difference to me as far as I am concerned personally. All I can say is that when I was Minister of Shipping, H. D. Reid and R. G. Reid did all they could to assist me, and I know that at that time it cost them money. I know the Government I was associated with gave them so much money to complete contracts that were not adjusted. I always felt that they were entitled to a certain amount and that they should be considered, but you are absolutely gone mad. We can't do this, Mr. Coaker. Are we going to deliberately sell the country out? Are we sitting here to-night with the full intention of passing it over? I made a charge in this House and I repeat this charge now, that there is a Confederation in the Executive Government which will tell you he is an "anti," but his actions prove him a Confederate. You know yourself that you see nothing before this Colony now only Confederation, and you know she has got to go into Confederation, and you think the crowd on this side of the House want to get hold of her when she does go there to get the plums out of it when she does go in. That assertion has been made by you, sir, and I say that you are the gentleman who is sitting up all night to lead Newfoundland into Confederation. But, thank God for one thing. Neither you, nor your Executive, nor the Prime Minister associated with you, can put her in because the voice of the people must speak first. The voice of the people will have to be heard. Canada will not take you in no matter how far down you may get. You will not have the power to put her in till you go back to the people whom you betrayed hopelessly over expenditure and extravagance of the worst type. You will have to go back to them and they will have the final say, and I can see that time ahead now, when every man who thinks his seat in this House is secure, will have to bundle and go. What a pity you have been led astray. What a pity, sir, that you have betrayed the men of the North who stood by you and whom you betrayed, perhaps unknowingly, but it is too late. Yes, Mr. Hallyard, I would hide right behind that curtain if I were you. Hide yourself away now because I can see the day when you will run away.

Hon. Mr. Hallyard—"I would like to do it now."

Sir John Crosbie—"I believe you would."

Hon. Mr. Hallyard—"You are too noisy."

Sir John Crosbie—"It's a pity you are so quiet. It's a pity you have a vote thrown from the front of this colony away. I can understand why Mr. Hallyard and possibly Dr. Barnes will stick to his Government when they know that Government is in jeopardy. I can understand their position exactly. No man can tell me that we are not on the brink of a precipice. You can't tell me that the Reid Newfoundland Company can be saved from the state she now finds herself in, and the final touch is the railway resolutions. Dr. Barnes you are on a high pedestal with some people in this country who have a certain regard for you and I believe that you know right from wrong, and you know that thing wrong is being done they trust you to take a stand for your country.

THE SILENT MEMBER QUESTION.

I want to ask you now to-night do you think you are playing the part of a man when you propose to sacrifice a million and a half dollars to the Reids. It was only a few years ago you denounced the Reids. Have you changed your opinion of them now? I don't ask you that question now, have you really, Sir, changed your opinion of the operation of the railroad to-day any more than you did a few years ago? No you haven't changed a bit, silence gives consent. I wonder what is the price you are being paid for sacrificing your country. I wonder if somebody is not paying somebody else to allow her to go over. That's how it looks now. Last year Mr. Coaker said we are going to run this railroad economically. You Mr. Targett, Mr. Scammell, Mr. Jones, and all the rest of you, no passes for you, none whatever, you can never have a railroad pass. Mr. Coaker was not entitled to give you a pass, neither was he entitled to stop it. That pass was never any compensation from the Reid Nfld. Company, you got your pass because you were a member, but the hon. member for Bonavista wouldn't give you a pass, but he gives $7,500 to Sir George Bury to come down and say "how do you do; good evening." Anything that comes in here with any kind of a hat on it, or a long coat, or a good looking mackintosh, always can be more than the man who is living here in his own country. They always come here empty but they always go away with something from the Government or somebody else. And this is the last touch. We want money for everything but we give Sir George Bury $7,500 for coming down here, and mind you, he was pleased with the railroad, so pleased with his reception here, that he said, "I prefer, now, sailing on the Rosalind, I won't go over the line any more," and I have no doubt the Government bought his ticket for him, and he went by the Rosalind, not by the train. He didn't want to see any more or hear of it. I say the Hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries has only one intention in his mind, no matter what he says on the other side of the House. I assert that he has become a Confederate and this is part of a scheme to put this Colony into Confederation. Now I make an assertion and I defy contradiction of it, because the hon. member talked it over with me on the Adriatic coming and he said to me there was no hope, only Confederation.

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"I didn't say so."

Sir John Crosbie—"Why don't you try and save her from going into it. You are to-night putting her into it, then you must be a Confederate and I brand you now as a Confederate."

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"You said a dozen times to-night that she is going there."

Sir John Crosbie—"Yes, and I say you are doing your best to put her there as fast as you can. I say it emphatically, that you and the Executive Government are out shoving her along as fast as you can, afraid she is not going fast enough to suit you. Instead of a twelve-knot boat not to convey her you would like to have a thirty-knot boat."

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"She is not going as fast as that."

Sir John Crosbie—"Isn't she going as fast as that? Nobody knows better than you how fast she is going."

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"It won't be with my help."

Sir John Crosbie—"Sure you're at it overtime. You don't take the ordinary 12-hour day at it, you are going the 22-hour. Aren't these Resolutions a sample? Didn't you admit to me to-night that you couldn't get a revenue beyond five or six millions and your expenditure is going into nine. What is that but driving her to the wall. What are you going to do about it. Get out and get a constructive policy, get out into the centre of this House and I will tell you something that you can do; how to run the railroad. I am at the stage now when I think it is time something should be done."

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"If we went with you could you run her for less?"

Sir John Crosbie—"Well, with your experience attached to me I might possibly do it. I would not like to go there at all without you. I would not like to attempt it without you."

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"If I thought you could run it on a policy of half a million I would join you."

Sir John Crosbie—"Half million dollars? Easy. Now are you ready to come over? No, you aren't come over because they have you. You aren't come over. You are running the railroad like you ran the F.P.U. You ran the railroad on an unbusinesslike basis and you are running the F.P.U. and anything else you look hold of, like the Fishery Regulations, in the same way, and that's why I am talking to-night. You don't deny any of that."

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"I have my own opinion."

Sir John Crosbie—"Well, that's what I am using. I don't have to use my opinion at all. Facts are facts and you can't get clear of them. There is no need to use my opinion, you know yourself what is happening, you know what is going on, I make that statement; shall I repeat it?"

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"That doesn't prove it."

Sir John Crosbie—"I say that stary,

Now to-night I understand that the statement is being going to be operated in conjunction with the Railroad, that the money is for the Railroad absolutely. We have nothing for our government. This is what I understand from Mr. Coaker. In some of the figures furnished me by the Prime Minister, I understand that on June 30th, 1904, the Reid Newfoundland Co's loss, by their statement to you, was $21,000, statement No. 4, I think. Well the loss that year, according to the audit statement given to this House of Assembly, was $11,136. Then you take the next year, 1905 and it shows $109,000 when it was $119,000. Who is right or wrong. Here is the, official statement.

Hon. the Prime Minister—"The figures that I have given do not include Bank Interest, charges or Depreciation. The point is this, in Railway accounting it is not customary with many lines to charge Depreciation, and it's also a question whether the interest charges on overdrafts on Current Account may be charged. Now that makes the difference in the figures I have quoted. Depreciation and interest charges on overdrafts on Current Account are not included."

NO MANDATE.

Sir John Crosbie—"Well, I would like to pass this over and you examine it. Now, with regard to the expenditure of a million and a half dollars, here's the right thing to do. You come into this House of Assembly here, and you have a manifesto signed by the Hon. the Prime Minister which goes out to the country. The people know nothing whatever about this railroad policy when they were voting for you. The right and proper course for the Government to do was to go to the country on that expenditure and get a mandate from the people to come in here and vote that money. If they wanted it get a mandate from them, go out, and let them know all about it, and if you can possibly find the money you are not to be blamed, but you are embarking on a policy to-day such as they never dreamed of, they never heard of it until now, and I think the proper thing to do, if you are decent about it, is to prorogue this House and go to the country and ask them to decide immediately whether you ought to give that million and a half dollars to the railroad. That's the right and proper course for you to take, before the people are betrayed. At this time, the Hon. the Prime Minister in Committee for some time, I don't intend to say very much more to-night, but as the debate continues I will tell my reasons for so strongly objecting not because of the Reids, that doesn't bother me in the slightest. If they were anybody else but the Reids I would oppose them also. I strongly oppose this railway resolution and I am going to do all I possibly can to stop it. I would do anything in reason to help the Reids out, but when it comes down to deliberate taking $1,500,000 from the people of this country, who are taxed to-day to their limit, I stop. The railway resolution proposed by the Reid Nfld. Company, including subsidies, of between $400,000 and $500,000, or about $5,540 every day, and the service to be cut, is not a fair winter. Now, is it right for us to deliberately throw away this money without the people who sent us here knowing something about it. I don't believe anybody in this House believes it is the right thing to do. I believe the Prime Minister is against it. He doesn't want to do it, but he is driven into a hole.

I would now ask the hon. Chairman of the Railway Commission, Mr. Coaker, if he would tell me, if the General Manager for the railway in the country yet? Do you know a man named Kerr? Is it proposed that he shall be the General Manager? Hon. Mr. Coaker—"No, it is not."

Sir John Crosbie—"Are you quite sure about that?"

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"Yes, no fear of that. He is not a railway man."

Sir John Crosbie—"You assure me that gentleman is not going there."

Hon. Mr. Coaker—"Yes."

Sir John Crosbie—"Thank you. Are you going to deliberately vote this million and a half dollars? I don't think you will. The man who votes for all the resolutions, the man who votes for the coming year, who passes over the million and a half to Reid, passes his birthright away. He may think what he likes and may dream as he likes, but I say that the day he registers his vote for that million and a half to be given the Reid Company he suggests by these resolutions, the condition the country is to-day, he gives away his birthright. There ought to be some other way out. If any man takes a contract with you to do a certain thing and he can't do it, you don't go down and pay him because he says he can't do it. That's what we are doing to-night, exactly. I want to say now that I strongly protest against it, absolutely protest against this money being made over to the Reid Nfld. Company. Not on account of the Reids—I don't care about them—but to anybody. They have no right to take this money from the taxpayers of this country without the Government putting it up to the people and getting a mandate from them, because the Hon. the Prime Minister's manifesto was absolutely contrary to the Reids and he was going to force them to carry out their contract. If we must give this money away, then I say let the people have a chance to give their opinion."

Mr. Chairman, I absolutely oppose these resolutions. I don't intend to vote for them. I don't intend to oppose them because they are utterly impossible—cutting a service in two, taking practically everything from us, and then asking us to pay the bill. Some other arrangement could be made. We know we must run the railroad, but we feel that there must be some other way of doing it. I really make one feel bad to think of the poor old colony, after struggling along like she did, under many a sale and stress, to be sacrificed now in the last stage of the game. One man in this House long ago said what was right. He is gone now, but if I remember rightly, he foresaw what was going to come to us. That was the late Mr. Goodridge, when he said this country didn't want a railroad at all. He said the railroad it wanted was steamers running in and out the Narrows and down the coast, but we have the railroad and we must run it. I know what he said was absolutely right. We have never had a railroad, but we must run it now that we have it, but surely gracious heaven! we haven't got to begin by dumping a million and a half into this thing. I appeal to the Prime Minister to find some other way out of it and see if there is not some other policy possible than handing out a million and a half dollars which we practically have no control over.

The Tower of London.

The Tower of London is a group of buildings, the oldest of which is the central White Tower, built in the time of William the Conqueror on the site of an earlier fortress, dating, according to the authorities, from the rule of Julius Caesar. The Tower, known chiefly for its history as a prison, was also the scene of the courts of some of the earlier kings. Many distinguished prisoners have been led from one or another of its buildings to execution, and a large number of these, including Sir Thomas Moore, Anne Boleyn, Lady Jane Grey and Catherine Howard, lie buried in the Tower Chapel. For sheer dramatic horror there is little to touch upon the storied past of the dungeon of the White Tower. It was called "La Tour Blanche" in the days of the Plantagenets and obtained its name from the frequency with which it was whitewashed. It is ninety feet high, and the walls are from twelve to fifteen feet thick. On each of four turrets is a weathercock. The Tower of London, closed during the war, is now again open to the public.

Origin of Toasts.

Originally, when the ancient Greeks or Romans were at a feast, the custom was to bow before the statue of Bacchus, the god of wine, exclaiming, "Be propitious, O Bacchus!" and pour a little wine on the ground. This was also done to other gods. Emperors being deified, this honor was paid to them. Then wealthy people and beautiful women were thus toasted, and the habit of toasting was established and later people decided to drink the liquor instead of wasting it.

The Real Premier Declares Himself.

Gives Guarantee of Money For Colinet Road -- Prime Minister Accepts Mr. Coaker's Authority.

That the Prime Minister was merely a figure head in the present Government and that Mr. Coaker was the executive head was well known before and was proved beyond all doubt by the fact that Mr. Coaker was the one who gave the guarantee of money for the Colinet Road, and which was the cause of the Railway Bill was not in position, the Railway Bill was not put through the Committee stage, and the debate was adjourned for the consideration of Mr. MacDonnell's amendment.

The House met at 3:15 p.m. Mr. Michael Cashin asked the Prime Minister when the Commission would be appointed to enquire into the "placid Coaker" and other matters and was told it would be appointed shortly.

In reply to the leader of the Opposition, the Minister of Justice said that the Labrador Boundary question will be discussed in Supply. He stated that Canada had a party of surveyors down in Labrador now, going over the place, whilst seven men were employed in seeking evidence and constructing the Dominion's case, in England. The Fishery Supplies Bill and Outlines of Titles Bill were given their third reading.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Railway Bill. Mr. Moore again wished to enter his protest against the Reid's getting the $1,500,000. He referred to the 1500 men working at Badger. In his district, through the bad management of the Government, men were in distress and he wanted money for roads between Cappahayden and St. Mary's. Why the Government had gone up to Badger whilst roads were going to wreck and ruin in his district he could not understand. He objected to money being spent at Badger when Ferryland district could not get its per capita share.

Mr. Jones also referred to the matter of roads. There were 500 men in his district whom the Government had promised to send to Badger, but it would be much better if they were employed at home, particularly as there was plenty of road work to be done in St. Mary's. Their wages of $2.00 per day would be worth far more at home than in Badger.

Mr. Hennessey repeated the attitude he took on the original resolutions and his position in the matter. He stated that the information he had received from the Prime Minister in the matter. The Government's industrial attitude in connection with the railway was the cause of the present situation. He stated that the Government had promised to send to Badger, but it would be much better if they were employed at home, particularly as there was plenty of road work to be done in St. Mary's. home should be given his constituents. Making highways in the wilderness was of no benefit to the country. Mr. Vinicombe brought the Government's attention to the fact that work on Bell Island had practically ceased, and the few men who were employed there received only 3 days per week. Help was being asked for, and it should be given. Referring to the railway resolutions he said that the Reid's should be compelled to carry out the amount allocated for the "newspaper" road. Mr. Vinicombe piled question after question to every member of the Government, and at last turning to Mr. Hibbs said, "I have asked all the other highwaysmen and they cannot give me the information. Perhaps you can, as you and Mr. Coaker promised the member for Placentia that his request for a share of the money would be granted."

Mr. Coaker—"The Prime Minister promised."
Mr. Vinicombe—"Then you must be Prime Minister, as the note given Mr. Walsh was signed W. F. Coaker, witness R. Hibbs. Is that not so?"
Mr. Coaker—"Yes."
Again questioning all the members as to the amount voted for relief work, Mr. Vinicombe said it is apparent that nobody knew.

Mr. Coaker—"We will find out the amount when we go into Supply."
Mr. Vinicombe—"That answer is not good enough."
Mr. Coaker—"Yes it is. It is the only sensible one."
Mr. Vinicombe—"Then how long is the work started?"
Mr. Coaker—"About 2 weeks."

Before concluding Mr. Vinicombe referred to a cut on the front page of last evening's Star and said it reminded him of Coaker and Colishaw trying to sell the country to Canada.

Mr. Fox followed and gave a valdictory on the Railway Resolutions. He said there was reason to suppose that there were grounds for the sudden interest shown by the Government in the Reid, whom the Prime Minister had so often vilified. Every pledge to the people has been forgotten in the Govt. mad policy. Every department of the Govt. was in debt, as was indicated in the case of the Militia Department, where the deficit was over $100,000. This was a clear case of how the accounts have been cooked, said Mr. Fox. The statement had been made by the Opposition, and so far was unchallenged, that the loan of six million dollars was raised on a fictitious statement. This, said he, is a charge of fraud, and made in any other country would not go unchallenged. The raising of that loan was a deliberate fraud practiced on the American people. Referring to the Bill before the House Mr. Fox said there was not the slightest attempt made to compel Reid to carry out a contract which either did or did not exist. As the contract was made and is binding on both parties, it was the logical conclusion, if it were not workable, to make a new agreement. The present arrangement was only encouraging litigation. In speaking of Mr. Warren's apology for the Bill Mr. Fox said he believed that the Minister had been forced into the position of accepting an agreement which he did not believe in.

At this juncture of the debate Sir Michael Cashin rose and drew the Chairman's attention to the fact that there was not a quorum present. "Is it the intention of the Government to abandon the wreck?" he asked. "If it is the Chairman should put up a notice to that effect."

Mr. Fox sat down and asked for a Special Committee to find out if the Government had expired. After returning to their seats, the member for St. John's East castigated the Government followers for their indifference to the affairs of the country, and during his remarks said that they must be afflicted with bacilli of the sleeping sickness; that they had not the courage of a tom-tit, to defend their policy. Twenty-five years ago such actions on the part of the people's supposed representatives would not be tolerated for a minute. He referred to the work going on in Twillingate district and appealed for some share of the funds for St. John's East. He asked Mr. Jennings what amount had been voted for this road from "nowhere to nowhere."

Mr. Jennings would not reply and requested that a notice of motion of question be given. This Mr. Fox gave before the session adjourned. At nearly midnight Sir Michael Cashin rose and delivered one of the most condemnatory speeches ever heard on the floor of the Assembly. He made the most serious charges against every member of the Executive Government, and a defiant contradiction. In his opening remarks Sir Michael said he thought that he was at last to kiss the corpse of Independent Newfoundland, which was being buried by the passing of the railway resolutions. The Minister of Justice and the Prime Minister had delivered half-hearted apologies for being sponsors for the resolutions, and had asked for a way out. The way out was by the same way that the Government came in power—the voice of the people. This the Ministers had no intention of seeking. "I call you blacklegs, selling your own people for what you receive; position and pay for the Prime Minister. Blacklegs is not too strong a term to hand out to men who will in a short while vote for the railway resolutions, without trying to make the Reid live up to their contract. The Prime Minister was sitting contented with the mark of deceiver upon him. The Minister of Justice had written himself down as an incapable." Sir Michael charged that it was the back of the head of the Prime Minister was Canada and nothing less than the prime ministry of that country to boot. "You pulled the wires with W. D. Reid in Montreal and he sent down Sir George Bury to advise you."

The Prime Minister—"That is not correct. Sir W. D. Reid did not send down Sir George Bury."
Sir Michael Cashin—"Is it true that Sir George Bury handed you two or three sheets of a report and left again after four or five days' stay?"
The Prime Minister—"It is not true."
Sir Michael Cashin—"Why did you interfere with the railroad at all? Was your ambition Canada? You stated that."
The Prime Minister—"No, never."
Sir Michael Cashin—"Your reasons for this railway policy will be all too was being built to keep the people from howling. The story of the West Coast had been told and was amplified by a Mr. Howard. Is it true, Mr. Small?

Mr. Small—"It is wrong."
Sir Michael—"It came from Dr. Grenfell's friends."
Mr. Small—"I will make a contradiction in a few days."
Continuing, Sir Michael said that the revenue had fallen off over $100,000 during the two first weeks of July, in spite of tax, surtax, super-tax and sales taxes. Nothing was being done in the Customs Department to safeguard the revenue. The Prohibition Law was gone and no attempt was made to collect the $250,000 due on bonds, nor on the six motor cars imported by friends of the Government, and this was in the face of the fact that the Public Debt was now Fifty-one Millions of Dollars. Mr. Jennings' department was also involved in scandal. The Minister of Public Works had signed the cheques for $7,500 for electioneering in St. John's. The whole Government was practicing hypocrisy and the Minister of Public Works is the greatest hypocrite amongst them. Sir Michael wanted to know how much money was being spent on the road proposition, and gave notice that Supply and Ways and Means would not go through without this matter being explained. The Forney Tariff Bill was also discussed by the Leader of the Opposition who said that only a short while ago haddock was being sold at $10 per quintal and to-day it was being bought by the farmers at $1 per load for fertilizing purposes. Was no attempt going to be made to remedy the American tax. Was nothing to be done except vote a million and a half to the Reid Company?
Mr. MacDonnell in the course of a strong speech in which he asked for some protection for the expenditure of the railway vote, moved the following amendment to the bill in the form of a new section, viz.
"That a Committee of five members of this House be appointed to supervise monthly the expenditure of money on the railway system, and that no money be spent except subject to the approval of that Committee."
The Prime Minister said he con-

Famous H.B.C.
 Captains and Ships.

(By H. M. S. COTTER, Cumberland House, in "The Beaver.")

The Pelican once scraped the sunken ledges near Cartwright, but no H.B.C. ship has left her "bones" to rot on that iron-bound shore.

Little is known of the wrecks that do take place on this coast, but I have heard of appalling disasters amongst the hardy fishermen. On the Nova Scotian coast, collision with ice and subsequent loss of life is not infrequent. Every year there are wrecks of some kind. Ocean-going steamers have been forced ashore and become total wrecks. And so it is remarkable that H.B.C. ships have never met with disaster, especially considering their many ports of call.

In 1908 I was a passenger on the Pelican (Captain Alex. Grey) bound for Fort Chimo, Ungava. From the time we left Quebec till we passed Cape Harrison, North of Hamilton Inlet, Labrador, we had enjoyed fair weather. But the clouds and rising sea denoted a change.

We were then standing off the coast nearly twelve miles and steaming at about seven knots. The wind kept veering between N. and N.E., finally blowing straight down the coast about north. We stood farther out to sea. At nightfall it was blowing half a gale with rain coming down—and mist. Our speed then was not more than three knots and gradually getting less till about 2 o'clock in the morning when the wind increased to a living gale, screaming and howling through the rigging and stopping all progress. It was then decided to run for shelter, but the nearest harbor was forty miles south, a place named Webek. Captain Grey had been in this harbor only once, about twenty-five years before, and no one else aboard had ever anchored there. They turned the ship and we came scudding south in the blackness of night, then lay to till dawn, and picking up the land approached at half speed.

T give some idea of the gale outside, when we finally came to an anchorage about 8 o'clock in the morning, the swell was so great in the harbor with the continued violence of the wind that we kept steaming to the anchors to prevent dragging and as the sailors say we were "rolling" like maggots in an oak apple." Several fishing schooners had run in the day before and even in shelter the crews had abandoned some of the vessels, as they were dragging their anchors and in imminent danger of going ashore.

The captain was on the bridge all night. For hours he stood in the bow of the boat hanging in the starboard davits peering through the gloom and mist, looking for landmarks and the harbor entrance. He had on a black sou'wester and oil-skin coat and great long sea-boots. His face was streaming with the rain and spray—a gigantic, picturesque figure, and on this particular morning, unusually silent.

When the ship was snug and safe he came off the bridge, and all he said was, "Aye, aye, a little wind," and then he turned in.

The entries in the log were quite commonplace—all in the day's work, as it were—and one would never glean from them that a ship and cargo worth a quarter of a million had been safely brought to a haven of refuge through exceptional seamanship and courage.

It was in 1894 that Capt. Grey in the Erik when near Resolution Island at the entrance of the Straits, ran into an iceberg. It happened at night in a thick fog. The ship was moving slowly at the time and before the lookout saw or could give warning she had poked her nose into the 'berg. Her long bowsprit of pitch pine was crumpled up like so much matchwood, and the gear attached to it and one of the catheads was carried away.

Masses of ice came thundering down on her fore-castle head, doing much damage to the workwork. In the meantime the lookout sprinted aft, the watch below came tumbling up on deck and made for safety. The ship was put astern and hove to till daylight. They steamed up next day close enough to see a hole as big as a house which they had punched in the side of the 'berg. All the damage to the ship, fortunately, was done above the water line.

When the Erik returned to Rigolet in October she was sporting a dinky little jib-boom made from one of the spare spars carried on deck for just such an emergency.

Mr. John Ford, a passenger on his way to Georges River Post, told me he never saw Capt. Grey more cool or collected. He gave orders as if nothing unusual were taking place. And at breakfast next morning all he said in reference to it was, "Aye, aye, a little ice."

The Salmon's Wonderful Story.

If, in the month of December, you were to disturb the gravel beneath the clear waters of the upper reaches of a great river, you might come across some soft, pinkish objects, each about the size and shape of a pea. These are the eggs of the salmon, from which, in about two months, will emerge shoals of tiny, almost transparent, fish.

In his earliest days the young salmon is too weak to search for food. He seeks a quiet spot and lives upon a portable supply of food with which thoughtful Nature has provided him. Attached to the under part of his body is a little bag, which contains all the nourishment he will need during the first few weeks of his life.

As he absorbs its contents the bag decreases in size, and when it finally disappears he has grown strong enough to find his own food. The little fish, which is called at this stage a "parr," or "pink," has now only one object in life—to obtain all the food he can. He seizes water insects, flies that float upon the surface, snails, worms, grubs, etc.

A Mystic Impulse.

Though his growth is rapid at first, and though his appetite remains insatiable, he never reaches any great size so long as he stays in the river. Two years after his birth, when he is six or seven inches long, he begins to change his appearance entirely; his brown and yellow coat with its purple stripes and red spots changes into one of silver—he is putting on his sea liver!

As soon as the change is complete the little "smolt," as he is now called, moves down towards the sea. He travels rapidly until he reaches the brackish tidal waters, where he moves more slowly, in order to accustom himself to the change from fresh to salt water. Soon he is in the sea itself, where he will spend some wonderful years.

He leaves the river as a smolt weighing four or five pounds; or he may spend three or four years in the sea, coming back to the river as a mature salmon whose weight may be anything from ten to eight pounds!

During his stay in the salt water he feeds so voraciously that he must be a veritable terror of the seas. He preys chiefly upon herrings, sand eels, young whiting, shrimps, and prawns. No fewer than six full-sized herrings have been found in the stomach of a salmon caught at sea.

But there comes a time when something which he cannot resist urges him to revisit the river where he was born. He moves slowly, making a gradual change from salt to fresh water.

The Marriage Month.

Once accustomed to the water of the river, he swims hard and fast upstream. No rush of water will stop him; even a waterfall ten feet high does not daunt him, for he clears it with a mighty spring, and after a short rest continues his journey. Up and up he must go, for it is only in the shallow gravelly stretches near the source of the river that he can breed. As he goes he selects a mate, and the two travel together.

It is curious that so long as he remains in fresh water the mature salmon never makes a real meal.

As soon as the first frosts come the eggs are deposited on the gravel of the spawning bed. The female fish turns on her side during the operation, and kags up the gravel with her tail. The cock, besides fertilizing the eggs, keeps guard over her, and attacks any other fish that approaches. The eggs are left to look after themselves. Only a small proportion hatch out, for they are regarded as a dainty morsel by other fish.

Instead of being beautiful, the parent fish are now hideous. Dark and slimy, almost eel-like in shape, their scales are bruised and their fins torn by contact with the gravel. They remain for the next few months in the fresh water, gradually recovering a little of their former shape and colour; then they migrate once more to the sea, and the cycle of their life history is complete.—Ex.

Prospectus of
The Newfoundland War Memorial Company, Unlimited.

The object of this Company is to erect a suitable Monument in St. John's in memory of all Newfoundlanders who gave up their lives in connection with the Great War. Although trade conditions are not at present bright, yet in the opinion of the Executive it would be a grave mistake to any longer delay in getting together funds for this purpose, and they believe the project will be viewed with such favour as will ensure the speedy underwriting of all that may be required. Until form of Memorial is decided on and approximate cost ascertained will be difficult to name the sum required, but the Share Subscription List now open and it is the earnest desire of the Executive that every man, woman and child in Newfoundland should hold one or more shares in The Newfoundland War Memorial Company, Unlimited. For their dividends, Shareholders are promised what is of far more value as material benefits in the way of contentment, that a suitable Monument has been erected by them worthy of Our Heroes and in consequence they will be free from the everlasting shame and disgrace that would ensue if little or nothing was done.

The Share Certificates are issued to Subscribers of One Dollar or over and as follows:—
THE NEWFOUNDLAND WAR MEMORIAL COMPANY, UNLIMITED.
This is to certify that (name and address) is the holder of (number) shares in the above named Company, fully paid and non-assessable, for which the subscribers are guaranteed a suitable Monument to be erected in the City of St. John's, Newfoundland, in Memory of their Countrymen who gave up their lives in the Great War, 1914-1918, in the Cause of Freedom and Humanity.
(Signed by the Chairman and Secretary and countersigned by the person issuing the Certificate.)
Applications for Shares may be made to any authorized holder of a Share Certificate Book or direct to the following who comprise the Executive Committee of the Movement: R. G. Rendell, Hon. Chairman; P. E. Outerbridge, Sec.-Treasurer; H. A. Anderson, Mrs. H. A. Anderson, Mrs. John Angell, Eric S. Ayre, David Baird, D. M. Baird, Mrs. S. K. Bell, Frank Bradshaw, Captain B. B. Butler, M.C., Hon. Dr. Alexander Campbell, Sir M. P. Cashin, Mildred Clift, H. E. Cowan, Sir J. C. Crosbie, Lady Crosbie, Francis A. Deas, Miss Maggie Furlong, John G. Higgins, W. R. Howley, H. Jackman, C. Kearley, Dr. Keegan, Mrs. Keegan, J. J. Long, Major J. W. March, M.C., D. Munn, Miss Mary McKay, J. J. McKay, Mrs. W. Angus Reid, Joan Rendell, Miss Mary Rendell, Lieut.-Col. W. F. Rendell, Dr. J. Alex. Sheehan, Mrs. Mary Ryan, Mrs. Scully, Sir E. A. Squires, M.C., Hon. W. E. Warren, Captain G. J. Whitty, M.C., The Editors Telegram, Daily News, Star, Advocate, Trade Review, Plaindealer, Times and Comic Weekly. Subscriptions and communications from the Outports should be addressed to either Mr. Crosbie, D. M. Baird or W. H. Jackman, who are forming Outport Committees.

From persons who are unable to subscribe as much as One Dollar, lesser amounts will be received and acknowledged. It is the desire of the Executive that no one be debarred from subscribing to the Newfoundland Memorial.
THIS APPEAL IS ADDRESSED
To all who did their duty in the Great War:
You parents who gave more than your life's blood need no urging. As you did in the past so you do now.
You women who had no dear ones to offer up and yet worked for the cause all you knew how, also need no urging.
You young people who also did your share, will you not cry halt for a few minutes to your happy, thoughtless lives, in order to help out this movement?
You young people who chattered together in war times to get dollars for many war funds, will you not also help?
You older people who "made hay while the sun shone" and held on to it until a rainy day, will you not also dig down deep and help?
You who were able to invest in War Bonds, will you not now exchange some of these for those in the Memorial Company and which will give you more lasting pleasure and happiness?
You Ministers of the Gospel, who were practically a unit in doing all you could to carry the war to a successful issue, will you not now use your great influence with your people to back up this project?
You friends in the Outports, will you not also join in and help along this great bearing in mind the smallest subscriptions will be acceptable, and then when visiting St. John's you will be able to view with pride what you have helped to erect?
To all Newfoundlanders, to all in the Dominion, to all elsewhere who have an interest in Newfoundland at heart, this appeal is made.
On behalf of the Executive Committee of the Newfoundland War Memorial,
R. G. RENDELL, Hon. Chairman.
P. E. OUTERBRIDGE, Hon. Sec.-Treasurer.

Forty-Two Years in the Public Service The Evening Telegram.

The Harper of Old Ireland.

Wat of fine, winter or summer, he goes his way from street to street, the harper of Dublin, carrying his precious harp, wrapped ever so carefully in its green mantle. One loves to meet him as one goes through the city, for he seems like an old familiar friend. Day by day, he trudges along in his shabby coat, a slight insignificant figure, his face always wearing a look of untroubled calm. He still plays the same old tunes those beloved Irish melodies whose plaintive airs remind one of the long forgotten days. How eagerly as a child, one used to press one's face to the nursery window pane to catch a glimpse of him down there in the square, and with what glee one heard the pennies dropping on to the pavement below. He represented to childish fancies all the romance of ancient Ireland. One could almost picture him playing his harp amidst the splendours of "Tara's Halls" and how one thrilled at the strains of the "Minstrel Boy."
Those days have faded into dim distance. Dublin is no longer the gay city of the past. Signs of warfare are everywhere evident. One sees lorries filled with armed men, their bayonets gleaming in the sunlight. But the harper still goes on his way, and the children still gather at the windows to listen to his old time melodies. Occasionally a coin falls to the pavement and if one glances upward one is sure to see the merry faces behind the curtain alight with childish glee.

Baked in An Oven.

To be baked in an oven heated to 312 degrees Fahrenheit and yet live was the experience of a man named Martinez in Paris.
For a wager of $200 the man entered a huge oven, specially built, after it had been heated to a temperature of 312 degrees Fahrenheit, or about 100 degrees hotter than boiling water. Then the door was closed, and he was left alone for an hour, in company with an uncooked chicken and an unbaked loaf of bread. Candles were also provided, that he might have light during his incarceration—or incarceration, as many people thought it would turn out. When he was released, however, he was found alive and well, with the chicken and loaf cooked to a turn. The candles had become boiling tallow.
Martinez afterward repeated his performance in Brussels, Milan and other cities, but there must have been something abnormal in his constitution, since of several would-be emulators of his feat none succeeded in staying out the full hour, while two, at least, perished miserably. Possibly his success was due in part to the care he took to have every particle of moisture extracted from his oven before he entered it, since it is a well-known fact that hot, dry air does not affect a human being so adversely as hot, moist air.

Carpenter and Gibbons Matched.

New York, July 18.—Tom Gibbons, of St. Paul, to-day was matched to meet George Carpenter, in October for the world's light heavyweight championship.
Articles were signed by Eddie Kane, Gibbons' manager, and Promoter Rickard. The bout will be either in the arena in Jersey City, in which Carpenters lost to Dempsey, or in Madison Square Garden.
The weights will be 175 pounds or under.
Rickard did not announce the other terms.
Kane agreed to have Gibbons on the scene of battle three weeks before the match. The St. Paul boxer is now on a vacation in the Minnesota woods.
Carpenter signed articles two weeks ago agreeing to meet any man Rickard selected, but expressed a desire to fight Gibbons.

A Versatile Minister.

(From the Toronto Globe.)
The romantic career of Jan Smuts, once a Boer General in arms against the British, may be paralleled in some respects by that of the Secretary for War in the new Arab State of Mesopotamia. The Provisional Government will be replaced during the summer by a Government based on an Assembly elected by the people of Mesopotamia, with an Arab ruler acceptable to the Assembly and an Arab army for national defence. The Arab army is already partly formed under Jafer Pasha, who was made Secretary for War, and Mr. Winston Churchill recently gave to the House of Commons this biographical sketch of the new Minister in Mesopotamia:
"He began by fighting against us in the Dardanelles, and received the German Iron Cross. Then he commanded the army of the Senusid against us in the Western Desert. He won two battles against us, but the third went amiss. He was wounded and pursued by the Dorsetshire Yeomanry, and finally he was caught and imprisoned in the Citadel at Cairo. In trying to escape, the rope by which he was endeavoring to descend from the walls broke, and he was precipitated into the ditch. While in hospital he read in the papers that the Sheriff of Mecca had declared war on the Turks and immediately he saw he was on the other side. (Laughter.) As the result of representations to the Arab leaders at Mecca he was given a command, and distinguished himself greatly in the next two years. He was finally given the Commandership of St. Michael and St. George by Lord Allenby in a hollow square of British troops composed almost entirely of the Dorsetshire Yeomanry which had ridden him down." (Laughter and cheers.)

How Barnum Worked It

Of the many frauds perpetrated by P. T. Barnum, the celebrated showman, upon the unsuspecting public, proving his oft-repeated statement that "the people like to be humbugged," none was more popular—or more successful, for that matter—than his royal white elephant of Siam.
Barnum long desired a Siamese white elephant for his menagerie. He commissioned P. T. Gaylord, confidential agent, to obtain one, but the difficulties which the emissary met were insurmountable. Spirits of royalty are transferred to white elephants, according to the Siamese superstition. The animals are maintained in the royal palace, with priests and attendants, for religious ceremonies. Gaylord offered the Government $250,000 for the loan of one, proposing to maintain its complete retinue as well. The proposition was spurned. He gave up the attempt.
Upon his return to America, Gaylord was surprised to find a Siamese white elephant advertised as the feature of the Barnum show. And there it was, bedecked in Oriental trappings, surrounded by dusky priests and attendants, and far more white than any real royal Siamese elephant ever dared to be.
Gaylord investigated. Barnum had taken one of his herd and white-washed it.

Weep to Keep Well.

Everyone should weep once a week. Following the shock of learning that sneezing is beneficial to the nose and throat, people are now advised by a doctor to weep regularly.
"Weeping in moderation strengthens the eyes," declares an eye specialist. "Tears have natural cleansing properties and impart a healthy brilliance to the eyes. The difficulty of deriving benefits from this natural tonic is that few people can weep voluntarily.
"It is quite useless to sit down with a pathetic book because the knowledge that one is expected to weep restrains the tears. The best form of weeping comes from excessive laughter, but few people find much to laugh at in these depressing days."

Are You A Grocery Salesman?

A salesman sells goods, he doesn't fall asleep on the job. He doesn't have to be driven. He works with his head.
Salesmen in grocery stores are pushing Lantic Sugar in packages because Lantic packages save the trouble of weighing, eliminate waste, save bags and twine.
A 2 pound and a 5 pound package of Lantic fills an order for 7 pounds of sugar. 2 2's and 2 5's make a stone of sugar, saving time and trouble.
Now you have an opportunity to show your boss whether you are a salesman or merely a clerk. It's up to you to push Lantic in packages.
The profit on sugar is only a little over 1 cent per lb., and on such a small margin no grocery store can afford to waste time, bags, twine and risk a loss in weight.
Lantic Package Sugar is guaranteed to be full weight of the best granulated white sugar. Tell your customers about it. They'll like Lantic.

Derby Winner Dead.
MR. J. B. JOEL'S LOSS.
Mr. J. B. Joel's horse Humorist, which won this year's Derby by a neck from Craig an Eran, was found dead in his box at Wantage on a recent Sunday morning. It appears that he went out to exercise at his training quarters, at Wantage, Berks, on Sunday morning apparently in good condition, and when he came back was left quite comfortable by his boy. A few minutes later his trainer, Mr. Charles Morton, when passing across the stable yard to see to some two-year-olds, noticed blood oozing from the door of Humorist's stall. On entering he found the Derby winner lying on his side dead. His end must have come like a flash.
Mr. J. B. Joel, the owner of the colt, was at once communicated with at his residence at Childwickbury. Mr. Joel was much upset by the news, for he was particularly fond of Humorist, which he thought a good horse, and one that ought never to have been beaten in the Two Thousand Guineas. Mr. Joel was looking forward with considerable confidence to a Humorist victory in the St. Leger at Doncaster. The real cause of death will not be known until after a post mortem has been held, but there can be little doubt but that the colt burst an important internal artery. The horse was worth about £25,000.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

ESPERANTO BREAKING UP. HALIFAX, July 22. Esperanto, recently wrecked on Sable Island, and her deck beams and decking, with other wreckage, are coming ashore, according to a wireless message received here to-night by the Department of Marine and Fisheries from Sable Island.

THIRTY DAYS OF DROUGHT. LONDON, July 22. London is gasping for breath in the warmest temperature recorded in five years. Wednesday was the nineteenth day of drought in England, and the fresh water supply is virtually exhausted. Crops are as good as abandoned in many places, having been burned up by the sun, and fields and forests have assumed a brown, autumnal appearance. English clergymen have mounted their pulpits, cottages and colleges, after the fashion of Billy Sunday, and Judges have been sitting in negligence to the astonishment of learned council. Although the public health is in an extraordinary good, health officers and meteorologists are equally puzzled and apprehensive. It is suggested that the unnatural heat is due to the spots in the sun or to "the altering path of Atlantic depression." Numerous experiments intended to induce rain, such as bombarding the clouds from the ground and aeroplanes, and the setting off of huge bulbs of liquid acid are being tried.

HUNGER STRIKERS IN PRISON. CORK, July 22. Hunger strikers among persons interned in Bore Inid internment camp in Pantry Bay, as a protest against their treatment, is reported by the chief Republican Liaison officer. He states that letters and parcels cannot be received in camp, and that the four strikers are so bad that bakers refuse to make bread of it.

WHAT DID IT CONTAIN? LONDON, July 22. A meeting of Dominion Premiers was called hurriedly this afternoon to consider, it is understood, a reply received from Washington to-day, to representations made by British Government relative to postponing disarmament and Pacific Conference to some date later than November 11. The late meeting was private and there has been no indication of the nature of Washington's reply.

EXPERIMENT IN SOCIOLOGY. LONDON, July 22. An interesting experiment is going to be made by the Duke of York, son of King George. Two hundred public school boys, students of such institutions as Eton and Harrow, and another 200 lads from the workshops of Great Britain, are to be His Royal Highness as guests for a week at his summer camp in Kent. These boys will meet on a level of perfect equality as the Duke's guests, and it is believed the result will be to foster a mutual understanding between them.

ULSTER CONSIDERS TERMS. BELFAST, July 22. A copy of the Irish peace terms, handed by Premier Lloyd George yesterday to Eamonn De Valera, was placed before and considered by the Ulster cabinet.

TOWED TO PORT. SAN FRANCISCO, July 22. The Pacific steamship company's steamer, Admiral Farragut, which was disabled last night off the coast ten miles north of here, passed into the harbor at nine o'clock to-day in tow of the tug Sea Eagle.

A RUSSIAN PROTEST. RIGA, July 23. Soviet Russia's note of protest against failure to extend her invitation to the Washington Conference on the Far-Eastern question, handed to United States Charge D'Affaires at Stockholm yesterday, declared that the Moscow Government will not recognize any decisions reached at the conference, at which it is not represented. The Soviet note was sent not only to United States, but also to Great Britain, France, China and Japan. It hails with much joy the discussion on disarmament, but expresses skepticism that any guarantees regarding such disarmament can be possible.

IRISH PARLIAMENT. LONDON, July 23. A meeting of Dail Eireann for the purpose of considering the peace offer of British Cabinet, is looked for next week, but Sinn Fein leaders here appear to feel that ten days or more will elapse before notable developments can occur.

GOING IT ALONE. PARIS, July 23. Premier Briand, following a meeting of the Council of Ministers at Rambouillet yesterday, has telegraphed a telegram to Berlin requesting that the German Government take all necessary steps to insure the safe conduct, through Germany, of a new division of French troops, which it is said in official circles, will be ordered to Silesia within a few hours. Instructions were sent late last night to the French Ambassador in London, requesting him to tell the British Government that France considers it useless for Allies to establish a Silesian boundary without providing sufficient troops to enforce its provisions. Several newspapers are inclined to take a more hopeful view of the deadlock this morning, and to believe that Britain will recede from her position.

SMUTS AS MEDIATOR. LONDON, July 23. General Smuts, South African Premier, is expected to leave London for Ireland early next week, probably Monday, to place his services at the disposal of both Eamonn De Valera and Sir James Craig.

FISHING SCHOONER RACES. HALIFAX, July 23. International fishing schooner races for championship of North Atlantic will be held at Halifax between August 2, and 3, and if necessary October 4. This has been announced by the Trustees of the Halifax Herald International Fishermen's Trophy, Nova Scotia elimination races will be held September 24 and 25.

DIAMOND DUST

Nothing But the Truth - Without Fear or Favour.

LAST NIGHT'S FIASCO.

Although well boosted in all the papers and very valuable space devoted to them, the Mount Cashel Series were not played last night, and right here we want to ask President Orr: WHY in great big capital letters? It appears that the League's permission was secured early yesterday to cancel the second game between the B.L.S. and Red Lions until Monday as Umpire Chessman felt that it would likely be too dark to play the double header. Why the Cubs and B.L.S. did not contest we do not know, and no one has been able to inform us. We should think, however, that if some members of any club think they can abrogate the decision of the League (under whose absolute control all games are scheduled and played) then it is about time they were made an example of. What the League wants to remember is that it is the public by their interest and support who make the game possible, and affairs like last night, which incidentally attracted a fair gathering cannot tend to do the game any good.

Our suggestion is that the two defaulting teams be made an example of, by forfeiting their right to play for the Mount Cashel trophy, and the Garden Party to play off. It is clear that discipline must be maintained at all costs. What are you going to do about it Jawn B?

YOU SAID IT, BO! There are cases where a sawbones, by removing ribs and jawbones, may rejuvenate an old and feeble guy. But in all this wide creation there is not an operation which can rejuvenate a faded batting eye.

YOU CAN'T BEAT HARRY. Charlie Cyr, the Montreal runner

who challenged Bell, was out for a spin on Water Street with his manager on Thursday night. Our own A. Harvey, who is looking after Bell, getting wind of this and being naturally desirous to getting in on the inside track to see what the challenger could really do, trailed Cyr yesterday afternoon and was very much surprised to see him amble off with spikes for St. George's Field. Getting behind Engineer Ryan's bungalow, he saw Charlie run off the 5 miles in 27 minutes and 50 seconds, and making no apparent effort at that. Mr. Thomas says that Cyr has a nice easy running stride, something on the style of Lorden, who raced McDonald here some years ago on the St. Bon's Campus. At times he was slipping on the 30 and more per cent. minute. Bell runs about 80, so that their style and stride are entirely different. Cyr is about Shrubbs' height, and build and is quite young. He has powerful legs and there seems ample room in his diaphragm for a goodly sized set of lungs. The best is being arranged for the middle of August, and we would like to see our long distance runners like Butler, Hill, Robertson, Wall, Wheeler, Maunders, Sullivan, Lockey, Thorburn, Murray and young O'Toole (who seems to be the coming champion), line up as well. If at all feasible the race will likely be run under the auspices of the A.A.A. and the winner sent to Halifax to compete in the big road race there the first of October. Now is the time for the runners to begin training so that the best man may be sent to represent Newfoundland.

BILL CALLAHAN SAYS If I don't hit one to-day I'll wallop one to-morrow. Or the next day, I will fill some pitcher's heart with sorrow.

League Football.

SAINTS WIN IN AN UNINTERESTING GAME. The Saints defeated the Highlanders in last evening's League game by goals to 0. With two teams of Scotch descent facing one another, a much more interesting game was expected, and when a mild one-sided game was seen, the spectators were greatly disappointed. It is useless to continue to comment on poor shooting and lack of combination. It has been done too often to no avail. Many otherwise good teams have had their chances ruined by their lack of these two necessary qualifications, if a team is to play good football. The scoring for the Saints was done by Sawyers in the first half and Young in the second. All that the spectators got out of the game was a good laugh at times.

(Before the Chief Justice.) The Newfoundland Steam Tug Co. and the ship Huntley.

Adjourned hearing, L. E. Emerson for plaintiff moves for an order for sale of the ship Huntley. Motion, K. C. for defendant is heard. It is ordered that an appraisal and sale be made. In the matter of the St. John's Daily Star vs. the Newfoundland Conference of the Methodist Church, which was heard yesterday before the Chief Justice. The court ordered that judgment be entered for the defendant, and with costs.

Extending Operations.

We understand that in the near future, the cold storage operations of the Newfoundland Atlantic Fisheries Co. will be considerably extended. The company is making great progress under the capable management of Mr. W. L. Macintosh, and has proven a boon to the fishermen of St. John's and vicinity this year. Over 200 tons of fresh frozen salmon was shipped by S. S. Digby to England on her last trip and further shipments will be sent forward by each succeeding trip.

Made Good Time.

The French Canadian runner, Charley Cyr, a member of the crew of S.S. Manoa, had a try out on St. George's Field last night and did five miles in 27 minutes, 50 seconds. Alfred Shrubbs' time was 28.25. The Cyr-Bell contest will probably take place during the next visit of the Manoa to this port.

Spurgeon's Method.

(From the London Advertiser.) It is related of the late Charles Spurgeon that he once attended the pulpit of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, and to the utter amazement of the large congregation, exclaimed: "It's d—hot!" After repeating the sentence a second time, in order to give it due effect, he continued: "These were the words, my brethren, that I heard from one of your number just before entering this church." Then followed a powerful sermon denouncing profanity. We wonder if Mr. Spurgeon would have any difficulty in finding a similar topic were he alive to-day?

Latest in Typewriters.

There is a new typewriter upon the market which sets up a whole line of type before printing. The impression is made directly from the inked type, without ribbon, and the operation is practically silent. For a fifty-five letter line there are fifty-five perpendicular rows of keys, each containing forty characters, making a keyboard 28 to 10 inches. The operator works from left to right, depressing one key in each column about one eighth of an inch and sometimes setting whole words with one motion. The line finished, a lever is pulled, which lifts the type and presses the platen and

St. John Chrysostom.

John, afterwards known as Chrysostom, or golden tongue, was born at Antioch, about 347, the son of Secundus, a military officer and Antioch a Christian. His father died while he was still a very young man, but his mother gave him excellent Christian training and a splendid education.

He studied rhetoric under the accomplished teacher Libanius, who afterwards, on being asked to name his own successor, replied, "John would be the fittest if the Christians had not stolen him."

For friend he had St. Basil, who wished to retire to a monastery and begged Saint Chrysostom to accompany him. However, as his mother was bitterly opposed to this course, they abandoned the idea but continued a diligent reading of the scriptures and the practice of monastic asceticism.

In 374 Basil was consecrated bishop, but Chrysostom, although he too had been spoken of for the office, managed to evade the burden. He continued to live in cenobitic "tabernacles" and afterwards as a hermit in a cave, until his health gave way, and he was obliged to return to Antioch, where he entered the ministry.

He had not been here very long when the citizens, incensed by an increase in the taxes, levied in 387, rose in rebellion and destroyed the brazen statues of the emperor Theodosius and his wife. Chrysostom in an effort to calm the people preached a memorable set of sermons which he called "sermons on the statues," and calmed the populace. Eventually the Emperor pardoned the people of Antioch and peace reigned once more in the city.

On Feb. 26, 388, Chrysostom was consecrated bishop of Constantinople. Here he found that his work was all uphill for the city had fallen into very bad ways, but soon took on a new aspect under his regime.

At this time, what was known as the Origenist controversy was raging with great acrimony and the Nitrian monks, known as the "Tall Brothers," were expelled from Egypt. They first fled to Palestine, but were not allowed to remain there. Finally they went to Chrysostom and falling at his feet begged him to intercede with Bishop Theophilus powerful at court, to let them live in Egypt, saying that they had never done aught against him or the Emperor's law.

Chrysostom lodged them in the church called Anastasia, allowed them to attend the services, but prudently—to avoid if possible—a breach with his predecessor—debarred them from Communion. He then wrote to Theophilus, praying him to be reconciled to the fugitives.

But Theophilus although he dis-claimed his right to interfere, defamed them as sorcerers and heretics, and further concocted a scheme to punish Chrysostom for what he termed his interference.

All the courtiers and the worldly among the clergy desired it, for their tempers rebelled against John's godly discipline, and the example of his own self-denial, was a protest against their self-indulgence. His great reputation as an orator and preacher had caused a good deal of jealousy. The Empress Eudoxia, angry with Chrysostom because of some sermons he had preached against pride, joined his enemies as did Asacelus, Bishop of Bosphorus, who had been provided with a poor lodging in the city by Chrysostom.

It was finally decided to hold a council at a suburb of Chalcedon, called "The Oak." Thirty-six bishops attended.

Twenty-nine charges were advanced against the patriarch. Some were of open violence, that he had beaten and chained a monk, had struck a man in church so as to draw blood, and then had offered the sacrifice. Others were of evil speaking; he had said his clergy "were not worth threepence"; he had accused three deacons of having stolen his pall. He was also charged with misconduct in his office; he sold church furniture, had been careless in conferring orders; he was unseemly, was irreverent in church, and ate waters while sitting on his throne.

Of course these charges were either gross exaggerations or malignant inventions. The council pronounced him contumacious and deposed him, requesting the emperor, Arcadius, also to punish him for insolence towards Eudoxia. This was in 403.

Chrysostom was dragged from his church and hurried by night into Bithynia. That night an earthquake shook the palace and Eudoxia, frightened at the omen, wrote to the exile, entreating him to return. He was escorted back to the city by a joyous mob, bearing tapers and chanting psalms, which forced him in spite of the irregularity of such a proceeding, to ascend his throne, before the sentence of the Council of the Oak would be annulled.

But new troubles soon began. Chrysostom rebuked the people for heathenish worship of a silver statue of the Empress Eudoxia. The syncretistic Theophilus sent three bishops to Constantinople and persuaded the Emperor to refuse Chrysostom the use of the churches, because of his disrespect to the Empress. But Chrysostom, nothing daunted, held the church's services in the Baths of Constantine and thither all the people thronged, until a band of soldiers was sent to clear the bath about 9 p.m. Chrysostom continued to resist his persecutors, but eventually was persuaded to depart secretly; he called his friends to prayer; kissed them, bade farewell, and desired them to submit to a new bishop.

On June 20, 404, he crossed over to Bithynia, and at the same time a fire broke out which consumed the cathedral and the palace of the senate. Not long after the Empress Eudoxia bore a dead child and expired.

Chrysostom repaired to Cucusus, in Armenia, where, although in poor health and suffering greatly, he continued the work of a good shepherd. Here he remained in exile for three years, when his enemies dreading his influence on the people of Antioch who often came to visit him, procured an order for his removal to Pityus on the shores of the Black Sea, an outpost fortress of the Empire. During the three months' journey the little party halted at the Church of S. Basiliscus, a short distance from Cornovan, in Pontus and that night Chrysostom had a vision in which the martyr Basiliscus appeared to him and said, "Courage, brother John, to-morrow we shall be together." In the morning the suffering saint begged to be allowed to remain in the church until noon. But it would not be, and the journey commenced again when after travelling for about four miles he was so evidently dying that they returned to the church.

There he asked for white garments and exchanged them for those that he wore. He was still fasting and received the Holy Communion, doubtless from the priest of the parish church, offered up his last prayer, added his usual thanksgiving, "Glory to God for all things," and sealed it with a final amen. Then he expired. He was buried in the church.
