

ELEVENTH YEAR.

PELLEY IN TOWN

He Thinks He Is the Luckiest Man Alive

IN ESCAPING THE FATE OF BENWELL

Government Detective John Murray's Chain of Circumstantial Evidence in the Accused Will Have Hard Work in Breaking Down—He Thinks the Woman Also Had Guilty Knowledge of the Crime—Brakeman George Ray's Daring Evidence Against Burchell—He Appears to be a Second of Benwell.

WHEN the Grand Jury met this morning at 9:30 last evening from Hamilton, Ontario, the Government Detective John Murray and a well-dressed young man stepped off the cars and walked briskly to the Hotel Metropole, where they registered. The detective's companion was none other than Douglas R. Pelley, who considers himself one of the luckiest young Englishmen in the land of the living to-day in that he did not share a similar fate to poor Fred Benwell. Mr. Pelley and the officer had just come from Niagara Falls, where the first chapter in the examination of J. Rex Burchell and his wife Florence in connection with Ben-well's murder has concluded and the prisoners are remanded for eight days. Burchell was taken to Woodstock and his wife was allowed to remain at her boarding house pending the efforts of her solicitor, Mr. P. F. Hellmuth of London, Ontario, to obtain bail for her. Mr. Hellmuth also came on to Toronto to confer with the Crown Attorney, Mr. J. G. Macdonald, and the courts to-day. Corner McLaughlin will be reopened at 11 o'clock this afternoon with Miss Benwell in the witness box. Even if Mrs. Burchell had been granted bail by Magistrate Hill on the charge of being an accessory to the crime before and after the fact, she would have been immediately re-arrested on a warrant, which was sworn out yesterday by County Crown Attorney Ball of this city, on a charge of being an accessory to the crime.

Mr. Pelley converted freely with the world at the Metropole. He is highly respected and polite to degree, showing unmistakable signs of his gentlemanly breeding. He is just 35 years of age, tall, dark, with wavy hair and a mustache. He was dressed in a suit of gray English tweed and beneath the coat a handsome fancy-cambricked waistcoat. He wore a pocket scarf with a small pin in it. He is one of a family of nine, his father being Rev. R. Pelley, vicar of Bedford, in Essex. His aunt is a maid of honor in the household of the Princess Louise and the family is well known and highly respected in the county of Essex. He asked many questions about Canada, and Toronto in particular. Mr. Pelley is firmly convinced that Burchell is guilty of the murder. He said that he was fully informed of the facts of the case, and that he was fully convinced that Burchell is guilty of the murder. He said that he was fully informed of the facts of the case, and that he was fully convinced that Burchell is guilty of the murder.

says that the principal operators are Ford & Robinson and Scott & Jackson. He himself was trapped by these people, and Burchell, he thinks, is one of their agents or runners. The names of these operators, which he answered in The London Standard was "Mellor." And this man, he observed, appears at the bottom of several of these fraudulent affairs, as he has learned since he is a much wiser and more cunning young man than he was three months ago. He has been able to get through with Burchell as well as a second and a third, he believes, as he learned from Mr. Pelley. He had a bottle of liquor in his pocket. It was a white glass flask. It was in his hand when he was taken to the station. He took it out of his pocket and looked at it and put it back.
