Mr. BRODEUR. The hon. member for St. John (Mr. Daniel) on a former occasion asked for some information as to the site of the Drill Hall. I understand the decision of the Department of Militia is that the drill hall will be erected on the government property?

Mr. DANIEL. Can the government say whether they will commence the construction this season or not?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes; plans are being prepared.

Mr. DANIEL. Are they the same plans that were prepared once before.

Mr. BRODEUR. There are general plans.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. TAYLOR. What business will be taken up to-morrow?

Mr. FIELDING. There is a Railway Bill, and then we will resume the discussion of the estimates of the Minister of Public Works.

Mr. TAYLOR. Not the Autonomy Bill?

Mr. FIELDING. I think there is an understanding with the leader of the opposition as to that—I do not expect the Autonomy Bill will be taken to-morrow.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, June 15, 1905.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Mr. FOSTER. I have received a communication from the Toronto District Labour Council in reference to two matters. The first portion of it is in reference to the Alien Labour Act. The statement is made on behalf of the council that an officer was duly appointed when the Act was passed, that deportations were made from time to time on the report of that officer, that a request was then made for an extension to enable a private individual to take action in addition to any powers which the government had, and an amendment was made. But the Dominion government, it is said, take the position that its powers to act are gone as a result of the amendment, and that a conviction ought to be obtained at the suit of a private individual before it can order deportation. The council has always maintained the opposite view, namely, that the power of the government is intact, notwithstanding the amendment made as I have stated. Now, they contend that their view has been proved correct by the action the Dominion government has taken in ordering deportations upon the report of Judge Winchester in respect to aliens upon the Grand Trunk Pacific and recently in respect to the Père Marquette employees or officials. They state that Judge Winchester, while making such an investigation, seemed to be acting practically as an alien labour officer, and that the evidence taken goes to prove that the Grand Trunk Railway Company, which has refused to honour the award of the arbitrators in favour of the Grand Trunk telegraphers, and the Canada Foundry Company are at present flagrantly violating the provisions of the Alien Labour Act.

Then they say that :

> Certain amendments were introduced by the government at the last session of the House of Commons that would have had the effect of making the Act something more than the farce it is at the present time.

And it is resolved by the council that the Dominion government be requested to appoint a commission to at once investigate the charges made by them against the Grand Trunk and the Canada Foundry Company of violating the Alien Labour Act.

There is a further resolution that :

> This council further request, inasmuch as it has been publicly charged that the amendments of last session were introduced simply because a general election was then impending, and as the council, in union with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, expressed its faith in the sincerity of the government in this regard, that the government reintroduce at the present session the amendments desired to make the working of the Act both expeditious and effective.

That is the case they set forth and that is the request that they have laid before the government. It is that, in so far as the Alien Labour Act is concerned, a further investigation take place in reference to two of the charges that they have made, and that the government introduce again and pass this time the amendments which were introduced last session, but which, as I understand, were not passed. They think it is wise to do this, both in the interest of the government and in the interest of labour organizations. They seem to be anxious that the government shall demonstrate its good faith that these amendments, as introduced last year, were not introduced simply for a purpose before the general election, but were meant to become a part of the law, and that therefore they should be made part of the Act during the present session.

The second complaint which they wish to be preferred here is with reference to complications which they say have arisen in the old country, and which no doubt have arisen wherever certain classes of emigrants are induced or encouraged to come to Canada by certain agents, with the promise that ready employment will be found, and, going further, with actual recommendations to certain parties, and with the assertion that they will be employed immediately on their making application to them. In some cases I believe these agents have gone so far as to make a form of contract and give it to the emigrant, with the suggestion that it will be implemented as soon as he arrives at the proper place in this Dominion. They contend that Mr. Preston, who after some discussion of the subject gave over doing this, did it of his own accord as Dominion immigration agent, and that the matter is effectually done through the agency of one Leopold, who, it is alleged, has an office in the same building in which the Dominion immigration quarters are, or near by. They say that the modus operandi is that when applications are made to the Dominion officials there, they are sent with the parties making the applications to this man Leopold, and that consequently he is assisted in carrying out his part of the business under what seems to be the patronage or auspices of the Dominion authorities in the immigration office. They feel very strongly upon that point. As a result, either through Leopold or others following out the same plan—because they themselves make something out of it—they say that skilled immigrants have been sent over with these letters and these forms of contract, that they have come to different cities of Canada—to Toronto as one—and that, going to the persons to whom they have been directed, they have found neither any employment, contract nor any employment, and have been left stranded and at the mercy of circumstances ; and that there have been many cases of great hardship. They append and have sent to the government statements made by certain of these immigrants—among them Colin A. Gunn and William A. Moore—as corroboration of what I have said and of their charges. These statements, if true—and we have no reason to believe that they are not true—show a state of affairs which is very undesirable and very unfair to these skilled artisans themselves, and which ought to be remedied, so far as the government can do it. More especially I think it will be admitted that the government itself ought to keep free of any possible suspicion of a connection between its agents in London or in Europe, and these parties who act as employing agencies, who get fees from these men, and who send them to a far-off and unknown country, where they are put at very great disadvantage in the way just stated. What they want is an immediate investigation into the charge which they have made in this respect. I do not see why that should not be granted. If the circumstances are as the Trades and Labour Council say they are, they have a grievance on behalf of their fellow workmen in Great Britain and a grievance on behalf of their workmen in this country. I think I have done my part in presenting simply and solely their point of view at the present time, so that it may be before the House and the government. Any further discussion on the subject will be had after the government has made its statement, and it may have another side to it.

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER. Mr. Speaker, in reply, first of all, to the hon. gentleman's statement in regard to the question of an amendment to the Alien Labour law, I may say that within the last few days, since the departure of the Minister of Labour (Sir William Mulock), the representations in question have reached the government, that they are under consideration, and that the action of the government will be announced in a short time. In regard to the other matter which my hon. friend has brought up, as to what are called immigration bureaus or offices in England, this matter was brought to the attention of the government more than a year ago. It was then gone into by the minister in charge, and the information was put before the country to a very large extent. I have in my hand at the moment the file in connection with this, and I may say that the condition of affairs is this. There is in the same building with the Canadian immigration office in London an office which is in the name of a certain Mr. Leopold. It has no connection whatever with the Canadian immigration office.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the Canadian immigration office occupy the whole building?

Mr. FISHER. No, it does not. This gentleman, with some others, occupy some offices in the same building.

Mr. FOSTER. We rent simply a part of a building?

Mr. FISHER. We rent a part of a building, and this gentleman is a tenant of the same proprietor. The Canadian office is on the ground floor. I do not know whether it occupies any other portion than the ground floor.

Mr. FOSTER. It goes below the ground floor.

Mr. FISHER. But this gentleman apparently occupies a portion of an upper floor. The accusation is that immigrants applying to the Canadian office are referred to him. Now, the Canadian officers have direct instructions from the department here that the class of immigrants they are to encourage to come to this country are agricultural labourers, people wishing to go on the land, and domestic servants; and when other people come for information, they are not in any way encouraged to emigrate to this country. Those people sometimes insist on getting information, and on certain occasions apparently some of them have asked where they could get the information, and I think probably some time ago, not recently, officers in the Canadian office did say to them, 'You can get information on that point at Mr. Leopold's office.' More than this does not seem to have been in any way established as to anything suggesting that people should go to Mr. Leopold's office. There is, however, one letter on the file, in which a certain person applied to Mr. Preston personally, saying that he had had communications with Mr. Leopold's office, and he wished to know what its standing was; and Mr. Preston's reply acknowledged his letter, and stated that he believed that Mr. Leopold's office was an office of good standing, and was able to carry out anything that it undertook to do. So far as I have examined the files, I see that there is no other proof of connection of any kind whatever between Mr. Preston or any other officer of the Canadian immigration office and this Mr. Leopold. In consequence of similar representations being made last year, Mr. Smart, then deputy minister who was in England, published in the British press a warning to the people, and that warning was also published in the 'Canadian Labour Gazette.' It was as follows:

> The government of the Dominion of Canada have been informed that certain persons conducting labour agencies in London and elsewhere in the United Kingdom, have been promoting the emigration to Canada of mechanics and other skilled workmen; have been giving false information respecting labour conditions in Canada, and have represented themselves as agents of, or as having the sanction and endorsement of the Dominion government; notice is hereby given that the Dominion of Canada has no such agents in the United Kingdom, has not authorized, sanctioned or in any way given its approval to any agency in the United Kingdom for promoting the emigration to Canada of mechanic or other skilled labour.
> (Sgd.) JAMES A. SMART,
> Deputy Minister of the Interior of Canada.

This was a positive announcement that the Dominion government had no connection with these different agencies. It came to Mr. Preston's knowledge that he was accused of being in league or in collusion with this Mr. Leopold, and Mr. Smart discussed the question with Mr. Preston and he reported to the minister that the Canadian government had no means by which they could interfere with Mr. Leopold's occupation of the office as he held it under lease and was paying his rent. Mr. Smart seems to have had an interview with Mr. Leopold and to have investigated his business to some extent, and Mr. Smart reported apparently that nothing could be found which would go to throw discredit on the business. At the same time it was evident from circulars which had been issued by Mr. Leopold and probably by other agencies of a similar character, that representations with regard to the labour conditions in Canada were made to the English people, which the facts would hardly justify.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Is this office of Mr. Leopold's over the flat which is occupied by Mr. Preston for the Canadian Emigration Department ?

Mr. FISHER. It is in the same building.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Within the last four or five months Mr. Preston has received instructions to report to the High Commissioner instead of reporting direct to the department here; has this business which he was apparently mixed up in had anything to do with that ?

Mr. FISHER. Nothing whatever. I am informed by the emigration branch that this question has not been discussed lately at all. In consequence of the action of Mr. Smart last year and of the categorical statements of Mr. Preston to the minister that he had absolutely no connection, personally, pecuniarily, or in any other way with Mr. Leopold's business or office, the minister seems to have decided that nothing further could be done in the matter at the time, and nothing has arisen since which required any other action. The proprietor of the building leases the office to the Department of the Interior just as he leases an office to Mr. Leopold, and although this government would be powerless to deal with Mr. Leopold's lease or occupation, apparently Mr. Smart did try last year to see if Mr. Leopold's presence could not be got rid of, but he failed in the attempt. Mr. Preston denied explicitly any connection with Mr. Leopold, and he went so far as to say that he had even tried to see whether Mr. Leopold could be induced to leave the office but without success. In addition to the advertisement published in English newspapers by Mr. Smart, and which I have read, he also made representations to the Colonial office :

> That designing persons were apparently making use of bona fide emigration movement to Canada for the purpose of defrauding and deceiving people in the United Kingdom, and sending them to Canada under false representations, and that the Colonial Office were asked to communicate the substance of this despatch to the Home Office, with a request that steps be taken to prevent the continuance and recurrence of these frauds.

These representations were made to the Colonial office with the view of seeing if the authorities in England could put any machinery in motion to prevent these false representations. I think it will be seen that the Interior Department is absolutely cleared of any disregard or neglect in this matter, and I think it is also clearly shown that there is no connection officially or personally of any kind between the department or its officers and this particular agency or any other of these agencies in Great Britain. It is undoubtedly unfortunate that an agency of this kind should have offices in the same building as our Canadian offices, and no doubt that fact may frequently give them an advantage and may result in inquiries, instead of going to the Canadian emigration office, getting into the wrong hands and false information supplied.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Did I understand the minister to say that they had distributed Canadian government literature from Leopold's office ?

Mr. FISHER. There is nothing to indicate that.

Mr. BARR. How long has Leopold's office been in the same building with the Canadian emigration office ?

Mr. FISHER. It was there in June, 1904, and it probably has been there for a year and a half, or may be longer.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. Would the minister lay this correspondence to which he has referred on the table of the House ?

Mr. FISHER. I see no objection ; it will have to be copied of course.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. This matter was brought before the House last session and the facts were gone into very much as they have been gone into to-day by Mr. Puttee, then member for Winnipeg, and by the late Mr. Clarke, member for West Toronto. On that occasion especially the minister seemed to have been actuated by a desire to find out if possible some connection between the officers in the government department in London and the Leopold people. Let me quote from the debate last year, page 7330 of 'Hansard' :

> Mr. CLARKE. Is the minister aware that the officers of his department send men up stairs to this man to book their passages ?
> Mr. SIFTON. I do not think that is the case. If my hon. friend has any information to that effect, I would be very much indebted to him if he would send it to me, and I will promise, if he so desires, to regard the source from which it comes as confidential. The instructions which I have given have been most explicit, and there can be no possible excuse for any officer of the department, either directly or indirectly, in any shape, form or manner, being connected with or encouraging the traffic these people are carrying on.

The matter seemed to have rested there on that occasion, and in the correspondence to which the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) has referred we find statements by two men, presumably first-class mechanics. One of them, Colin A. Gunn on the 16th May, said :

> We went to the emigration office. They told me they could not guarantee work for machinists, but there was a man up stairs who would do so. That was Leopold.

Mr. Gunn is speaking of an interview he had at the government offices in London. He says he was instructed to go upstairs and interview Mr. Leopold. Then there is the statement of Mr. William A. Moore, of the 15th May, 1905, in which he says :

We asked for Mr. Preston, the commissioner of emigration for Canada, but he was too busy to see us. However, one of his numerous staff plied us with questions, and when we stated our occupation, he said : Well, we do not cater for men of your particular craft, we are only interested in farming, but we have a gentleman up stairs who will give you all the information you require. He then called the office boy and told him to see if Mr. Leopold was in his office. We saw Leopold.

These are statements made by persons who saw Mr. Leopold and who came to this country as the result of their interview. In pursuance of the policy declared by the ex-Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) it is only right the government should have an investigation into these matters.

Department of Labour—printing and stationery, including printing of 'Labour Gazette,' allowances to correspondents, administration of Conciliation Act, Railway Labour Disputes Act, travelling expenses, &c., and $500 each for an accountant and French translator, which sum may be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $29,900.

Hon. H. R. EMMERSON (Minister of Railways and Canals). This is required to meet the general expenses of the Department of Labour for the year 1905. It is less than it was in the previous year—$7,000 less.

Mr. BERGERON. What are the attributions of this new office ?

Mr. EMMERSON. It covers the 'Labour Gazette' and the Conciliation Act.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the circulation of the 'Labour Gazette' ?

Mr. EMMERSON. About 10,000.

Mr. INGRAM. What was it during the London election ? I understand there was an extra issue for that election.

Mr. EMMERSON. No, there was not.

Mr. INGRAM. Then there was an extra circulation. What was the object of it ?

Mr. EMMERSON. There was not even any extra circulation.

Mr. INGRAM. Some persons received them by the half dozen rolls.

Mr. EMMERSON. That does not prove there was an extra edition.

Mr. INGRAM. It proves there was an extra circulation.

Mr. EMMERSON. If there was, the deputy minister knows nothing about it.

Mr. INGRAM. I know that there were rolls of half a dozen circulated in London, and the object evidently was to cover a point under discussion in that election, namely, the alien labour difficulties that occurred on the Père Marquette Railway at St. Thomas, out of which the government were endeavouring to make political capital. The object of the circulation was to influence the electors, although we were given to understand that the Labour Department is non-partisan.

Mr. EMMERSON. There is nothing in the 'Gazette' that could improperly influence an elector. It gives simply a statement of facts, and no expression of opinion. No addition has been made whatever to its circulation but it may be that private parties secured copies and mailed them.

Mr. BERGERON. Where is it printed ?

Mr. EMMERSON. At the King's printing office.

Mr. BERGERON. Then what we pay for printing goes to the Bureau ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. What has been the result in the way of conciliation ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Upwards of thirty-five of the largest strikes in Canada were settled during the operation of that Act.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In spite of the interference of the Labour Bureau ?

Mr. EMMERSON. It has done a very excellent work, and this is recognized throughout the country.

Mr. BLAIN. How is the 'Labour Gazette' sent out ? I understand, of course, that a large circulation is sent out to members of parliament, public libraries and so on, but I would like a detailed statement as to the circulation and at the same time I think the minister should clear up the statement of the member for East Elgin that to his own personal knowledge half a dozen rolled-up copies of this gazette were sent to private individuals during the recent election in London.

Mr. EMMERSON. The 'Gazette' can be purchased at 3 cents a copy. It is possible for any one to order a dozen or half dozen or more copies. The same edition is being published as prevailed during the past year, there have been no extra copies issued nor any special circulation from the department. The total circulation is about 10,000 ; there are about 7,000 paid subscriptions and there are 3,000 copies for distribution to boards of trade, labour organizations, members of parliament and the public libraries and newspapers of the country.

Mr. BERGERON. What is the subscription ?

Mr. EMMERSON. 20 cents a year.

Mr. BLAIN. Perhaps the minister would give a list of the correspondents of the 'Gazette' and the manner of their selection and appointment.

Mr. EMMERSON. I fear my friend does not read the copies that are sent to him, because this information is furnished in each issue of the paper. They have a correspondent in every city, practically in Canada.

Mr. BLAIN. I am asking how these are selected ?

Mr. EMMERSON. By the Labour Bureau ; they are paid $100 a year. The names are contained in each number of the 'Gazette' and are as follows :

Sydney, Nova Scotia, John Moffatt ; Halifax, Nova Scotia, F. W. Smith ; Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, J. F. Nash ; St. John, New Brunswick, W. H. Coates ; Quebec, E. Little and P. J. Jobin ; Sherbrooke, Quebec, H. Loggie ; Three Rivers, Quebec, John Ryan, sr.; St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, Victor Phaneuf ; Montreal, Quebec, Gustave Audet and T. J. Griffith ; Hull, Quebec, Rudolph Laferriere ; Ottawa, T. W. Quayle ; Kingston, Wm. Kelly ; Belleville, H. C. McDiarmid ; Peterborough, W. J. Johnston ; Toronto, Phillips Thompson ; Niagara Falls, Ernest Green; St. Catharines, James A Wiley ; Hamilton, S. Landers ; Brantford, J. C. Watt ; Guelph, O. R. Wallace ; Berlin, Harry Peters ; Stratford, Joseph C. Carlin ; London, A. Woonton ; St. Thomas, A. Roberts ; Chatham, John R. Snell ; Windsor, D. Mitchell ; Sault St. Marie, Edward Barry ; Winnipeg, J. A. Appleton ; Brandon, S. P. Springer ; Calgary, J. Gillespie ; Nelson, A. B. Docksteater ; New Westminster, J. George Hargreaves ; Victoria, British Columbia, J. D. McNiven ; Nanaimo, A. E. H. Spencer.

There are 38 correspondents in all.

Mr. DANIEL. What are the qualifications required of the correspondents ? Are they members of labour organizations or working men or on what ground are they appointed ?

Mr. EMMERSON. They are men in the first place who have some literary ability who are capable of furnishing correspondence. They must of necessity be familiar with the industrial conditions prevailing in their districts ; they must also have the confidence of the employers as well as of the employees, that is to say those who are hiring and those who are hired.

Mr. INGRAM. The minister seems to repudiate the idea that this is a partisan gazette. This department is partisan. I can state why these copies of the 'Gazette' were circulated in London. We had an election there and the success of the Liberal candidate on that occasion largely hinged on how the labour vote could be swung in his favour. I find here a letter from the Hon. Mr. Hyman to the Postmaster General and Minister of Labour calling his attention to the fact that a certain railway company in that district were importing aliens from the other side and urging upon the department the necessity of taking action and having these aliens removed. What did the government do then ? They employed a gentleman named Marks to go to St. Thomas and inquire into the difficulty brought about there by the importation of these aliens. Then Judge Winchester was appointed as commissioner. He went there, made inquiries and through the inquiries and the report which he made these officers were ordered to leave the country, some of them within 24 hours, others within 7 days and others forthwith. The purchasing agent of the Père Marquette Railway left and went back to Detroit and the next day we find Mr. Marks, who is supposed to be a leading and shining light in the labour movement, employed by the government to assist the commissioner in his duties in investigating the difficulties in connection with these alien labourers.

Next we find this Mr. Marks, who is supposed to be a labour leader, who is supposed to be engaged by the 'Labour Gazette,' performing duties for labour, we find him charging the Conservative candidate with being an enemy to labour. Mr. Marks prepares an affidavit in which he charges that the Conservative candidate is an opponent of labour, and as a result of that charge the labour men of the city of London were requested not to vote for the Conservative candidate but to vote for their true friend, Mr. Hyman, who is said to be the friend of labour in the city of London. Now in an ordinary sense that is all right enough in a political campaign, and I have no objection to it ; but when this non-partisan Labour Department lends a hand and takes part in a political contest, then the sooner it ceases to declare itself non-partisan the better it will be for the labour interests of this country. That is the charge I make, and it is perfectly true. Why did Mr. Marks, in the 'Labour Gazette,' take part in the political discussion, take a partisan part in this election, charging the Conservative candidate with things of which it was positively proven he was not guilty ? If the Liberal party in the city of London chose to take that stand I have no fault to find, the Liberal party has a right to take whatever line in the contest they chose ; but when the 'Labour Gazette' and the Labour Department take a hand in a political contest, then they must not come down to parliament and pretend to be a non-partisan department.

Mr. EMMERSON. Mr. Marks is in no way connected with the 'Labour Gazette,' he is in no sense connected with the Department of Labour. Long before the recent election in London, in fact some time before the death of the late lamented Mr. Sutherland, Mr. Marks was appointed to hold a certain investigation. He is editor of the 'Industrial Banner,' is a very capable man, familiar with the industrial conditions, and because of his qualifications he was selected by the department to hold an investigation. Now that investigation was held before the vacancy in London, or before a vacancy could be anticipated ?

Mr. INGRAM. Not at all.

Mr. EMMERSON. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) will not say that the investigation was not held previous to the election altogether.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. gentleman said this was done before the election was anticipated. There is not a member in this House who does not know perfectly well that for the whole of last year an election was anticipated in the city of London.

Mr. EMMERSON. Will the hon. gentleman give me the date of that letter of Mr. Hyman.

Mr. INGRAM. 2nd of March.

Mr. EMMERSON. Now there could not have been any preconcerted action on the part of Mr. Hyman or anybody else; this investigation was not organized and entered upon in anticipation of any possible election in London. I think my hon. friends are straining overmuch in endeavouring to show that.

Mr. BARKER. Does the minister tell us that there was no anticipation on the part of the government in March last that there would be an election in London? Does he assert that as a fact?

Mr. EMMERSON. The point is this: The action that was taken was not and could not be in anticipation of any possible election. True, there might be an election in the distant future; but investigations are not held simply with a view of influencing some election that may possibly arise in the future. Now the question is: Was the action taken proper? Did not the facts revealed by that investigation justify the department in holding it? All that there is revealed by the 'Labour Gazette' is a calm statement of the facts, given simply for information, with no expression of opinion, no argument of the case, simply a bald statement of what had transpired. And surely that is proper, surely it was proper in that paper to record those facts and to give the people interested in such matters all that information. It appears there.

Mr. BARKER. It never appeared in March.

Mr. EMMERSON. Because the investigation had not been held then. It came on in the regular way; this report in the paper appeared in its natural order, and as soon as it could be prepared. It may be a coincidence with the election, but certainly nothing can be twisted in any shape to show that there was a preconcerted action on the part of any one with a view to affecting the election. Surely the hon. gentleman will not say that the mere statement of facts affected the election. I venture to say to my hon. friend that there is no statement in that 'Gazette' to which he can properly take exception.

Mr. INGRAM.

Mr. INGRAM. Now, Mr. Chairman, I know probably as much about the facts of the case as the minister does. I live in that district, and I think I may say that I know more about the actual facts than the minister. I have no fault to find with the hon. gentleman in his endeavours to defend the department, though I think he will find it a difficult thing to do. The 'Labour Gazette' has this report:

> On the 2nd of March the Honourable C. S. Hyman, M.P., Acting Minister of Public Works, in a communication to the Honourable Sir Wm. Mulock, K.C.M.G., Minister of Labour, pointed out that strong representations had been made to him in reference to the continued violation by the Pere Marquette Railway system of the Alien Labour law, and that if such a state of affairs existed as he had been informed of, he thought that immediate action should be taken by the Department of Labour to remedy it. In his communication the Honourable Mr. Hyman further said:
> I may explain that some time since the Pere Marquette system of Michigan obtained control of the Canadian portion of the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway (Erie and Huron), and that they have now added this to their American system.

Then he goes on to give the information he has received. Then Mr. Marks of the 'Industrial Banner' went and inquired on the 31st of March. So you see there was a period from the 2nd of March to the 31st. Then after the progress of the inquiry commissioners were appointed on the 5th of April, and on the 21st of April, His Honour Judge Winchester received the commission. Then the communication ends up in this way:

> It is expected that the commissioner will submit his report, together with the evidence, to the hon. the Minister of Labour during the month of May.

And it has already been received and laid on this table.

Mr. EMMERSON. It naturally came in this month's 'Gazette.'

Mr. INGRAM. And it was naturally circulated among the workingmen of London. Now, I want to point out the fact that there was an alien employed in the city of London by this railway company, and that one alien was ordered to leave the country forthwith, and he did leave and went to Detroit. But the other aliens were employed in St. Thomas and west of St. Thomas. Mr. Hyman was advised, no doubt, to take this action, and I presume that he did so for political purposes. I am not finding fault with him for that. That is not the phase of the question that I am finding fault with. Mr. Hyman had a perfect right if he felt disposed to do so. I do not quarrel with him or with the department for that, but what I am quarrelling with the department for is that they employed Mr. Marks, who is the editor of a labour paper called the 'Industrial Banner.' They had a perfect right to employ Mr. Marks if they chose in a non-partisan way. Mr. Marks was instructed to assist the commissioner in making this inquiry, but the Labour Department had no right to allow Mr. Hyman or anybody else to make use of this non-partisan official for the purpose of carrying the London election. Would the Deputy Minister of Labour take part on the political stump? Dare he do it and come down to this House and say that the department is not a partisan department? The government have claimed that this is a non-partisan department, and it is on the strength of being a non-partisan department that they have sought credit for themselves for having established and carried on that department, but the government used a non-partisan officer connected with a non-partisan department for the purpose of carrying the London election. That, in a nut-shell, is what I am complaining of. I want to tell the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, the hon. Minister of Labour and the Deputy Minister of Labour that they cannot go to the city of London and say to the labour men that they are conducting a non-partisan department after the shameful conduct of that department in the London election. More than that, I want to refer the hon. gentleman to the fact that in the very district in which the workingmen of the city of London are employed they had more faith in this man who was charged with being against the interests of labour than they had in Mr. Hyman, and, as a result, the people there polled their votes in favour of Mr. Gray, who was their candidate on this particular occasion. Therefore, the intrigue that was attempted did not succeed in so far as humbugging the workingmen of London was concerned. I have never on any occasion charged the Department of Labour with being a partisan department, but in view of what took place in London in the recent election I think words cannot be used too strongly to show that the department is not the non-partisan department that it has claimed to be.

Mr. EMMERSON. I think my hon. friend, in his remarks, has been indulging in too violent language in connection with the facts presented. He is relying upon violence of language and upon a very fervid imagination. It is very easy to make the assertion against the department that it is partisan, that it is run in the interest of a political party, but I will put it fairly to my hon. friend: Has he demonstrated one single fact that would in any way prove that assertion? I venture to assert that he has not. In the first instance, this gentleman, Mr. Marks, before any election is in sight, before it might properly be anticipated, is called upon to hold a certain investigation. He is qualified. He holds a very responsible position. He has the confidence of the labouring element, and has the confidence of those who are interested in the industrial life of that city. He is chosen to hold this investigation, he does so, and he does it well apparently. An investigation is held, the facts are brought out and these facts justify the investigation. In the first place, it is brought to the notice of the department that there are questions that should be investigated. They do not rush headlong into it. They simply hold an ex-parte inquiry; they satisfy themselves that an investigation is necessary, and thereupon they hold an investigation. Mr. Marks, having concluded that investigation, and having made his report to the department, discharges his duty. He is no longer a servant of the government. He is not in any way connected with the department by virtue of his appointment to that position. He is selected to act in a judicial way. He performs his part, and his connection with the department ceases. Anything that transpired since then is simply a matter of individual responsibility on the part of Mr. Marks. Any action he has taken is the action that any free citizen of this country is justified in taking if he so chooses, and I am sure the reflections of my hon. friend are entirely unwarranted in so far as he has produced any facts. He has certainly not produced a scintilla of evidence to show that the department should be condemned for its action in this matter. There was an alien in London. He received his notice the same as the others. He voluntarily and of his own motion left. There was no action taken as against him that was not taken against the others. That gentleman left voluntarily when he need not have done so. He could have taken the attitude taken by some others who were in a like situation. Perhaps it is too near the result of the election to condemn my hon. friend for his very strong language. There is some justification for it. It is merely a coincidence that there was an election. The machinery was put in motion long before that. It was put in motion because there was a necessity for it. It went through in the regular order, and the facts were published in the 'Labour Gazette.' There can be no reflection cast upon the 'Gazette' for doing that. The labour element in London wanted the information. It was important that they should have it. Any action of Mr. Hyman in connection with the matter shows that he simply performed the part of a prudent representative of the city. He brings to the attention of the Minister of Labour certain facts that are alleged. That is done on the 2nd March. The department, without hastily jumping to a conclusion in the matter, without plunging into it, inquired, and finally, on the 31st March, the Department of Labour takes action in respect to the investigation, which seems to have been justified by all the facts disclosed. This was an investigation for which, I think, the department should receive credit, and an investigation that has certainly reflected some credit upon the gentleman, Mr. Marks, who was engaged in it.

Mr. INGRAM. My hon. friend seems to be a little vague on this question. If I did use very strong language, evidently it did not seem to strike him as being very serious.

Mr. EMMERSON. I forgive you.

Mr. INGRAM. At the general election in November this Mr. Marks seems to have let the Conservative candidate, Mr. Gray pass without objection. But when Mr. Marks was employed by this non-partisan Department of Labour—and I would like to impress this non-partisanship on the minister and the deputy minister—Mr. Marks had to do something for his money. He was sent down to St. Thomas to investigate and report, and then he was called in to assist Judge Winchester to make an inquiry and Mr. Marks had to make some return to this non-partisan department, and so he made this affidavit:

I, Joseph T. Marks, of the city of London, in the county of Middlesex, editor, do solemnly declare that during the recent street railway trouble I made a visit to the London Old Boys' Association in St. Thomas as the official representative of the London Trades and Labour Council and the Street Railway Mens' Union.

That I went there with the object of securing their sympathy and to induce them to refrain from going to Springbank. I used every argument in my power to plead the cause of the men who had the active sympathy of the majority of the citizens of London. At that meeting Mr. William Gray, the present Conservative candidate, was present although not a member of the St. Thomas association, and he used every argument in his power to have the St. Thomas association go to Springbank.

He stated that but for a few interested agitators the strike would have been settled long ago, and that I was a curse to the city of London. For nearly two hours there was a very heated controversy between Mr. Gray and myself, and a great deal was said that would take up too much space to repeat here.

There were members of trade unions present at said meeting who can also testify if necessary to the truth of the above statement.

The remarkable feature of this whole thing is that what Mr. Marks complains of in this affidavit seems to have occurred five years ago, and it is peculiar that Mr. Marks would seem to have forgotten it at the general election, and to have remembered it at the last by-election. The truth is that Mr. Hyman discovered on the 3rd of November that Mr. Gray was the friend of labour men and got the labour vote, and then Mr. Marks the employee of this non-partisan department put his brains to work to see if he could not find something which would depreciate Mr. Gray in the eyes of the workingmen of London. That was the sole and only object of his so-called non-partisan department employing Mr. Marks to do this non-partisan work. I charge that against the Department of Labour, and I say that if this non-partisan department should commit a few more acts like this the sooner the workingmen of Canada realize that they are contributing to a partisan Department of Labour the better it will be for them. Let me give you another sample. There is in St. Thomas a good honest Liberal, but a mighty independent one, who for years has voted as he thought his conscience required him to do. I refer to Mr. Roberts, who acted as correspondent for this 'Labour Gazette' and who was dismissed. Why? He was dismissed because he refused to vote for the Liberal candidate; he reserved his right as an independent Liberal and workingman to vote for the candidate of his choice, and as a result Mr. Roberts, who was a good, honest, and highly respected citizen of St. Thomas, was removed and Mr. Killingsworth, a very active partisan, was put in his place. Every workingman in the city of St. Thomas, Liberal and Conservative alike, knows that my statement is correct. Mr. Roberts was removed because he was acting in a non-partisan spirit, and this non-partisan department discharged him and put an active Liberal worker in his place. I have no objection to an out and out Liberal fighting the Conservative party if he wants to, but if he does so I object to his putting on the cloak of non-partisanship, and I object to have this supposedly non-partisan department coming to the House and telling us that they are conducting the Labour Department in a non-partisan way.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. Did I understand the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) to say that this Mr. Marks was in the employ of the Labour Department when he made that affidavit?

Mr. INGRAM. He was in the employ of the Labour Department when he made these investigations, and this whole matter was arranged, cut and dried at the time.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. Does my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) state that when Mr. Marks took the action he did in the recent election, he was in the employ of the Labour Department in any sense whatever?

Mr. INGRAM. I am not in the confidence of that non-partisan department; I do not know whether he was or not.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. My hon. friend seems to have no information on that point; if I say that Mr. Marks was not in the employ of the Labour Department would he dispute that assertion?

Mr. INGRAM. I say positively that Mr. Marks was in the service of the Labour Department and performed work for that department, for which I presume he was well paid.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. I would remind my hon. friend that I could tell of a personal grievance which I might have against the Department of Labour if I were thin skinned enough to notice it. I could point out that employees of the Labour Department and men employed on the 'Labour Gazette' took a very active part in the last election in opposition to some of the government candidates. My hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) has singled out one instance, although he is not able to verify it, and perhaps when the whole story is told it may be revealed that this man was not at the time in the employ of the Labour Department.

Mr. INGRAM. I am very thankful to my hon. friend (Mr. A. Johnston) for proving my argument. He has cited another case in which a partisan employee of this non-partisan department took a partisan part. If the minister and the deputy minister do not pay attention to what I have said, I trust they will believe their own supporter that they have partisan employees, and the sooner they get rid of them the better.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. Will my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) name one single partisan employee of the Labour Department?

Mr. INGRAM. Yes, sir, I will. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Johnston) has named one, and I can state that there is a partisan employee in my own city.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. I made no charge whatever. I have absolutely no complaint to make. I am perfectly satisfied with the course he took. He took the course of an independent man who differed with me, and up to this moment I have never expressed any difference of opinion with him; I never brought it to the notice of anybody, and I state most positively that I have no fault to find with the attitude he assumed on that occasion.

Mr. BLAIN. In respect to this being a question of partisanship, I rather think my hon. friend has made out a very good case. The hon. minister does not just see it in that way, and we are sorry for him. A letter comes to the minister with reference to some people employed on the Père Marquette Railway, and what happens after the letter arrives? Here is the statement of the 'Labour Gazette':

> Upon the receipt of the Hon. Mr. Hyman's communication, the hon. the Minister of Labour appointed Mr. Joseph T. Marks, the editor of the 'Industrial Banner', of London, Ontario, to inquire into the matter and prepare a confidential report for the consideration of the government.

This is a communication to the government from one of its own members. Another member of the government appoints a partisan to investigate the matter.

Mr. EMMERSON. Who is the partisan?

Mr. BLAIN. Mr. Marks, who just the other day took an active part in the London election. What then happened? On the same page I read this:

> Mr. Alfred O. Jefferys, K.C., of London, Ontario, was appointed counsel to represent the government of Canada for the commission, and the commissioner was required to report his findings to the Minister of Labour with all possible despatch. Mr. Marks was retained to assist the commissioner and the government counsel during the inquiry.

Here is another strong partisan, an active Liberal of the city of London, appointed to take care of the government's interests. That is the way it goes. It is a well known fact that that investigation was made by active partisans; there is no question about that; the minister will not deny it. In reference to the question whether these correspondents are politicians or not, it would be useless for me to occupy the time of the House in giving many instances. Let me give the minister one. The correspondent in the city of Belleville receiving $100 a year from the government is Mr. McDiarmid, a strong and active partisan, a gentleman who takes part in elections, a sub-editor of the leading Reform newspaper in that city. Does my hon. friend suppose that the people of Canada will believe that the Labour Department is free from partisanship if the minister selects Reform editors in the different cities and towns throughout Canada to act as correspondents? What would happen? An election comes on and the Reform editor, who is interested in the success of his own paper, supports the candidate of the Reform party, and is on the pay roll of this government. The salary, of course, is not very large; but if the minister wants the people of Canada to believe that there is no politics in the Department of Labour, he should find somebody in the city of Belleville to act as correspondent of the 'Labour Gazette' who is not directly interested in the success of the Reform party or of a Reform newspaper in that city. This is an example to show that there is some politics, after all, in the selection of these correspondents, and I rather think that somebody outside of the Labour Department of the government has some say in their selection.

Mr. EMMERSON. Every one of these correspondents is required to send his material in over his own signature. I challenge any hon. gentleman on the other side of the House to point out one single paragraph in the 'Labour Gazette' during the past year from any city in Canada that would be characterized as the partisan utterance of a Liberal. That is the test.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman undertake to say that the documents appear in the 'Gazette' as sent in by the correspondents; or will his deputy say so?

Mr. EMMERSON. Of course, they are edited. Necessarily all manuscript coming into newspaper offices must be edited and corrected; but the reports are kept in the department for a year, and can be laid upon the table of the House if necessary. For my hon. friend to make the bald assertion that there is partisanship in the Labour Department may satisfy his mind, but it cannot satisfy the people of this country, or even the labour element.

Mr. BLAIN. Would the minister regard a correspondent who is a sub-editor of a Reform newspaper in the city of Belleville, as a man fitted to leave the impression that there is no party politics in the 'Gazette'?

Mr. EMMERSON. Certainly, I would appoint the man. The question is, does the character of his work show that he takes his partisanship into his official position? The city editor of the Ottawa 'Citizen' is the Ottawa correspondent of the 'Labour Gazette'; perhaps my hon. friends would not characterize him as a partisan. As to Mr. Marks, I am informed on excellent authority that he is not only not a partisan in the strict sense of the world, but that he is a strong supporter of the Hon. Adam Beck, and supported him very strongly in the recent local election in London. Mr. Marks is at liberty as a citizen to support whomsoever he chooses; he is not responsible to the Labour Department. This investigation commenced in March, and it was all concluded, so far as Mr. Marks was concerned, on the 30th of April.

Mr. INGRAM. On the 13th of June. He did not deliver the goods until then.

Mr. EMMERSON. He had none to deliver; it was not for him to deliver any goods. These vain imaginings of my hon. friend surely do not satisfy even his own analytical mind as respects the general charge which he has made. My hon. friend says Mr. Marks took part in the recent election against Mr. Gray. Not many months since he supported the Hon. Adam Beck, and I am informed that in the election in November last he was active against Mr. Gray. I do not know of this personally.

Mr. INGRAM. How did the hon. gentleman get this information?

Mr. EMMERSON. I have been informed of the fact.

Mr. INGRAM. By your deputy?

Mr. EMMERSON. Not by the deputy at all. He has not given me any information with respect to the political features, but I have information from very authentic sources, just as likely to be as reliable and well informed as my hon. friend.

Mr. HENDERSON. A short time ago my hon. friend for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) made the statement that to his own knowledge there was an increased distribution of copies of the 'Labour Gazette' made in London during the late election. It is a well established rule in this House that when an hon. member makes a statement of his own knowledge, every other hon. member is bound to accept it. In violation of that rule, a young gentleman, who has been granted a seat within the walls of the chamber by the courtesy of this House, chooses to prompt the minister and tells him that the statement was not true, and he did this although as a matter of fact he had no personal knowledge. When a deputy minister is permitted to come within this chamber, he is here by the courtesy of the members of this House; and if the gentleman in question should be guilty of such conduct again, I will call the attention of Mr. Speaker to the fact that there is a stranger in the House and have him ejected. Any man admitted into this chamber by the courtesy of the House has no privilege not accorded to the members of the House. This young gentleman had no right to prompt the minister because he knew nothing about the facts and was not in a position to contradict what the hon. member for East Elgin said. You talk of partisanship in the 'Labour Gazette,' what an exhibition we have had of it during the last three quarters of an hour. Here is the Deputy Minister of Labour keeping up a running conversation with his minister and prompting that minister when he had no right to do so. His duty is simply to answer questions put to him by the minister. He has given an exhibition of partisanship unworthy of any man occupying a position in the civil service. He had better be more guarded in the future because he is not occupying any position of privilege and must limit himself strictly to his duty.

Mr. EMMERSON. We have just had a splendid exhibition of valour. The deputy minister is here in the discharge of his duties, and he is the only source of information I have, as I am not connected with the Department of Labour. An hon. member says that the edition of the 'Labour Gazette' for the recent month had been increased.

Mr. INGRAM. I did not. Do not put words in my mouth which I did not say.

Mr. EMMERSON. My hon. friend said that there had been an increase in the circulation of the 'Labour Gazette' during the recent election. I asked the deputy minister whether there had been an increased number of copies issued, and he said most distinctly there had not. The circulation was not increased and the number of copies had not been in any way added to. He must have personal knowledge of that, and I may tell my hon. friend that the orders to the King's Printer and the accounts from him will verify every statement made by the Deputy Minister of Labour in that connection. My hon. friend seems to take exception to the fact that the 'Labour Gazette' was circulated in London during the recent election. I have already explained that the 'Labour Gazette' is on sale at three cents a copy. Any one can purchase copies and send them to London or elsewhere. Would that be any crime? Is it political literature? In no sense can it be so characterized. It contains statements of facts, and surely my hon. friend is not afraid of the facts. Apparently he is. Any one could send these 'Labour Gazettes' out, and surely that would be no charge against the Department of Labour? When my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) calmly reflects he will feel that his words had been better left unsaid.

Mr. HENDERSON. I have been calmly reflecting for the last three quarters of an hour waiting an opportunity of drawing to the attention of the minister the most unseemly conduct of the Deputy Minister of Labour. I made the statement I did after the most calm reflection. We have had this afternoon an exhibition of political partisanship from the deputy minister such as I have not seen in the last 15 or 16 years. There was no necessity for his keeping up a running conversation and taking the minister's attention away from the hon. member who had the floor, merely for the purpose of prompting him with reference to matters that were not at all directly before the House, but that had come out perhaps in the newspapers. All the deputy had to do was to remain in his place until some question was put to him by the minister about the work he is here to perform. He is here with the courtesy of members of this House and had no right to prompt the minister to say that the statement made by the hon. member for Elgin was untrue. The minister has given the whole case away by admitting that there might have been a very large increase of distribution because these gazettes are on sale and may be purchased in large numbers.

Mr. EMMERSON. What harm would that be?

Mr. HENDERSON. I am not saying there is any harm, but the point I wish to make is that the minister's deputy had no right to prompt the minister to say that the member for Elgin had made a statement which was not true. The statement of the hon. member for Elgin should have been accepted without contradiction, and much less contradiction made by a minister at the prompting of his deputy. The fact is they were afraid. The word of the member for Elgin ought to have been accepted and no contradiction should have been made whatever, much less should a contradiction have been made by the minister after being prompted by the Deputy Minister of Labour.

Mr. ALEX. JOHNSTON. Before this item finally passes I desire to say one or two words. A deputy coming on the floor of this House and supplying the minister with information is not a new system. I am sure that the member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) has seen this plan carried out for many many years. I have seen it in operation for five years, and this is the first time in my experience that such an attack, I may say such a violent attack—an attack which I am sure the member for Halton in his quiet moments will regret—has been made upon a gentleman, let me tell my hon. friend from Hamilton, who occupies a splendid position throughout the length and breadth of this country, and who is not in a position to defend himself from the attack. Let me remind the hon. gentleman that he is making an attack upon a gentleman who has endeared himself to the workmen of this country. I am in a position to speak for the workmen of this country as perhaps even the member for Halton is not; I have a great army of workmen in my constituency who have made the acquaintance of my friend the Deputy Minister of Labour who occupies a seat on the floor, as my hon. friend says, by the courtesy of this House. Members of this House have extended courtesies like this to deputy ministers on former occasions; is there any reason why special attention should be drawn to the fact that members of this House have extended such a courtesy to the Deputy Minister of Labour? Is it because he chances to be Deputy Minister of Labour that the soul of the member for Halton is disturbed on this occasion, because the House has extended permission to him to appear on the floor of this chamber? Let my hon. friend be disturbed as he may be; it may be that the presence of my friend the Deputy Minister of Labour is a serious menace to the conscience of the member for Halton, but let me assure him that the presence of the Deputy Minister of Labour is not a menace to the great body of workmen and citizens of this country. He has supplied the acting minister with information, that is all he is doing here, and all he has done. He did not seek to contradict any statement made by any person in this House; he sought only to give to the minister information which the minister was seeking and which was necessary in order to put this committee in full possession of the facts. That is all he has done, all the crime that has been committed.

Reverting for a moment to the discussion which was in progress, what are the facts of the case, in reference to the work of the various correspondents throughout the country? As the minister has said the test of their work is the items they supply to the 'Gazette.' My friends who have found fault with the work of these men have been asked to submit for the consideration of this committee any items sent by these various correspondents published in the 'Labour Gazette,' which could in any way be construed as being of a partisan character. These hon. gentlemen have not seen fit to produce for the information of this committee the items that in their judgment were of a partisan character. I must confess that I am not perhaps a very close reader of the 'Labour Gazette,' but I do read it. There is scarcely an issue published that I do not read, although perhaps rather hurriedly, but I am bound to observe that in no issue of the 'Gazette' have I any recollection whatever of reading anything that could be construed as being in any way of a partisan character. Now that, after all, is the important matter for this committee to determine. As I said before, as the minister has very well stated, the test of these correspondents' work is the items they send to the 'Gazette.' It has not been shown to the committee that their work is of a partisan character, and therefore there is no very good reason why this committee should find fault. It is, I am bound to observe, a very great pity that this gentleman mentioned by the member for Peel (Mr. Blain), who happens to be editor of a Reform paper in Belleville, does not abandon every other calling in life and confine himself strictly to the earning of this $100 salary in Belleville. It is a great pity and I hope that some official connected with the department will bring the matter to his notice and ask him to abandon every other means of livelihood, and endeavour to convince him that the proper way for him is to live hereafter on the $100 salary furnished by the 'Labour Gazette.'

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not propose to follow the member for Cape Breton through his rambling remarks outside the question to which I referred. The hon. gentleman seeks to make a point against me, and I was surprised that so many hon. gentlemen behind him cheered. Evidently they did not know what they were cheering. He said I was making an attack on a gentleman who could not defend himself.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is there an hon. gentleman in this House who has never made an attack on persons outside of this House who could not defend themselves here? If there is, let him cheer.

Mr. A. LAVERGNE. They can get back.

Mr. HENDERSON. They are silent, even our cigarette friend. I exceeded no privilege, I did not go beyond my rights, I did not go beyond what any member of this House does and does day after day, criticising the actions of men outside the House. Now I think the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. Alex. Johnston) will see how silly his statement, how extremely silly his argument was, and that the members of this House behind him will see how silly they were when they cheered and applauded the statement that he made when practically there was nothing in it. There is but one other point. The member says that he spent five years in this House and never heard a charge of this kind made before.

I have been here seventeen years and I never saw the necessity for it. That is my statement and my reason for making the statement I made. When I see an impropriety carried on in this House I am going to call the attention of the minister in charge to it. I am not afraid; my friend may throw out his threat, it is nothing to me; when I think anything in the House is improper I am going to draw public attention to it, and I will stand by the result. I say that I never before saw an occasion for making such a charge as I have made to-day; otherwise in all probability I would have done so. I hope and trust we will never again have an exhibition in this House such as we have had to-day.

Mr. INGRAM. In connection with the circulation of the 'Labour Gazette,' I knew it to be the case that they were being delivered to parties in London by the half-dozen and I asked for information whether the department were sending them out in that manner. I said that they were being circulated at the time of the election and the minister denied it and said that was not so which in effect meant that the statement I had made was not a true statement and the member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) had certainly good reason to complain, because I think the deputy minister prompted the minister that such was not the case.

Mr. EMMERSON. All I said to my hon. friend was that the department was not circulating these papers. If there was any point in his remarks with respect to the issue and circulation of the 'Labour Gazette' as against the department it would be that the Labour Department was circulating copies. I asked the deputy minister and he told me fairly and very promptly that they were not being circulated by the department.

Mr. HENDERSON. Oh, no.

Mr. EMMERSON. That was very fair, and I am sure my hon. friend will take my word for it. I have been here in this House for some years and I will say that the Deputy Minister of Labour shows that he is well informed as to his department. I have had occasion to ask him for this information, he has given it to me in a gentlemanly way, in no uncertain way and I am sure there must be some ulterior motive that would prompt a statement to the contrary.

Mr. INGRAM. I am not going to allow the minister to get away from the point. I made this inquiry, and the minister answered, no, they were not being circulated But on rising this last time he has added 'by the department,' a statement which he did not make on the first occasion. Now the statement I make is a fact. If they were circulated by some person it was done with an object, and the object was, as I have shown, to draw the attention of the workingmen of London to certain acts of the member for that city with a view of influencing votes. There is no doubt about that. Now with respect to the correspondence for this non-partisan department. I want to impress the minister again with those words 'non-partisan.' The object in organizing the Labour Department was to obtain information on non-partisan lines, to obtain statistics in order to promote the interests of the workingmen. They felt the need of a department of that kind, and the object was to obtain information that would be reliable. The workingmen wanted it to be conducted on non-partisan lines. Now, would it not be the part of a non-partisan department to employ such men as are considered independent labour men, men who could get statistics unbiased by party considerations or outside influence ? If that is so, let me ask if the workingmen of Canada are so driven that the department cannot find among them independent workingmen sufficiently capable to act as correspondents for the department, without going out and getting, if you will, the editor of the Ottawa 'Citizen,' for instance, or the editor of a Belleville paper, for another instance ? Are there no independent workingmen in the city of Ottawa capable of furnishing correspondence to this 'Gazette,' no workingmen in Belleville who are capable ? Take my own city of St. Thomas. Mr. Roberts is a very competent and capable man, recognized as such by Liberals and Conservatives. Mr. Roberts was performing his duty well and faithfully by the workingmen of the district of St. Thomas. He is a man that will vote against me, but I do not care for that. Now why was he discharged ? He was discharged because he would not vote for the Liberal candidate, and I make that statement on the floor of the House frankly and above-board. Who was appointed in his place ? Mr. Killingsworth, who is associated with the Liberal organ of St. Thomas, is appointed to take this man's place ? Why ? Because Mr. Roberts refused to act the part as a partisan, that is the reason he was dismissed. There is no question about that, because I can prove my statement from the files of the Liberal paper in St. Thomas. Now the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. A. Johnston) asked : Is a man going to give up his independence for the sake of a paltry salary ? I say, no. But, whoever expected that the editor and proprietor of the Belleville Liberal paper would give up his independence in the interests of labour in furnishing correspondence ?

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. Has my hon. friend any evidence to submit as to the impartiality of this correspondence from Belleville ?

Mr. INGRAM. I have already asked the minister if the correspondence that is sent here by the various correspondents appears over their signatures when sent into the department. I say, no, it does not, and let the minister and his deputy deny it if they can.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. That is not an answer to my question.

Mr. INGRAM. It is an answer. Now, I have no fault to find with any other department of the government, except this one, acting in a partisan manner. They have a perfect right to do so. A Liberal has a perfect right to defend the government, he has a perfect right to support the government candidate. Liberals have a perfect right to take any measures they choose so long as they comply with the law of the land. But when this government runs a department which they tell the people is run on non-partisan lines, and if I can show that it is not run on non-partisan lines, I say the sooner they abandon that contention the better. Mr. Marks was employed by this department to do certain work. Now if the department was running this paper on non-partisan lines would they tell this man to prepare an affidavit in the heat of a political contest, digging up something imaginary that occurred five years ago, in order to defeat the Conservative candidate ? Is that the part of a man who is selected because of his independence ?

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. Is it true ?

Mr. INGRAM. It is not true. Let me tell the right hon. premier that this question involves serious consequences to the Dominion of Canada. It involves the welfare of a prominent railway in the Dominion of Canada. This American railway company has purchased a certain railway in Canada, and they are operating it. They have sent into Canada certain employees for the purpose of managing the affairs of that railway, and the Labour Department, for the purpose of influencing the votes of labour men in the city of London, appointed a certain gentleman as commissioner to take evidence and report to the government. He did so, and the government, in pursuance of his report, issued an order, and some of these alien labourers were given twenty-four days to leave the country, others were given seven days to leave the country, and others were ordered to leave forthwith. As a matter of fact the railway company is resisting in the courts the order of the government, and the question may become an international one between Canada and the United States. So I say to my right hon. friend that this is too serious a question to be kicked around as a football in a by-election. It is not a new thing for Americans to come into this country and work on railways. Every man knows perfectly well that the Grand Trunk Pacific has brought in large numbers of aliens for the purpose of working on that line. The civil engineers of Canada have complained month in and month out to the government about large numbers of these aliens coming in. This non-partisan department, that is supposed to look after the interests of labouring men of this country, appointed Judge Winchester to inquire into these charges against the Grand Trunk Pacific. He made a report, which has been printed. Has there been any order issued for the arrest of these men ? Have any of them been given twenty-four days to leave the country, others seven days, and have some of them been ordered to leave forthwith ? No. Why has that not been done by this non-partisan department ? Why is this one particular railway selected instead of the Grand Trunk Pacific ? Why is discrimination exercised against the smaller company and the larger one allowed to go free ? Is it because there was no election going on in the country that could be influenced ? Was it not for the purpose of influencing workingmen's votes in the city of London that this smaller railway company is discriminated against ? I want to tell my right hon. friend that in the administration of this department all that has occurred recently has been sufficient to cause this government a good deal of trouble. Now one word more to the minister. I recognize that my hon. friend is now performing the duties of the Minister of Labour, and that he does not know the details of the department we are discussing. He must of necessity rely on the information given him by his deputy for the moment. Then, I want to know from the minister or his deputy, either of them for that matter, how it is that the minister is so familiar with the free working of the Liberal and Conservative party in London during the last general election and this recent by-election ? How does it come that my hon. friend is so familiar with the workers in the contests in November and in the contest which has just closed ? Was he prompted by the deputy ?

Mr. EMMERSON. I had a note placed in my hands coming into the House so that my hon. friend need not waste any breath on the deputy in connection with that.

Mr. INGRAM. If the hon. gentleman was not furnished with this information by the deputy I am very glad to hear it.

Mr. EMMERSON. It came from outside altogether.

Mr. INGRAM. It certainly did not come from the hon. gentleman himself, because he possibly could not know it, and if he were furnished with that information by the deputy, it would be an evidence of the partisanship of the department. The partisanship of the department is already proved by the hon. member for Cape Breton, because he says that there are partisan officials in connection with the department, and that is all I am complaining of. We do not care if other departments are conducted upon partisan lines so much, but we do want this to be a department conducted on non-partisan lines.

Mr. BLAIN. The hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. A. Johnston) was very anxious to inform the committee about the $100 paid to the correspondent of the 'Labour Gazette' in Belleville. My hon. friend wished to leave the impression upon the committee that I was anxious that this gentleman should give up every other calling in order to earn $100 as correspondent of the 'Labour Gazette.' Surely the hon. gentleman could not gather that from any statement I made in the House. It was surely imagination on his part.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. I was simply curious to know what charge the hon. member had to make in that connection.

Mr. BLAIN. I had nothing to say against Mr. Gillespie, but I made the statement that I did not think the minister could expect that the country, and the House would form the impression that this is a non-partisan department when this Belleville correspondent is one of the editors of the Reform newspaper in that city.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. Unlike my hon. friend from Elgin, I am sure that, having made that statement, my hon. friend from Peel will be prepared to submit for the information of the committee some evidence to justify the assertion that he is a partisan.

Mr. BLAIN. In answer to that I am free to say that I cannot pick out of this 'Gazette' anything from the correspondent at Belleville that would lead me to believe that he is a partisan, but I will make this statement that if the hon. member will lay on the table of the House the correspondence as it comes from these men and allow the committee to make a complete examination of it, I think I will be able to produce evidence of partisanship.

Mr. EMMERSON. We are perfectly willing to do that.

Mr. BLAIN. However, that matter is unimportant. I make the statement that in my opinion in the city of Belleville men could be found who do not take an active part in politics as Mr. Gillespie does to act as correspondents of this 'Gazette.' My hon. friend will not differ from that statement.

Mr. EMMERSON. I suppose it would be all right to take a mild-mannered man and one who happened to be a friend of my hon. friend.

Mr. BLAIN. When I make application for a friend of mine to get such a position as that I will inform my hon. friend in writing so that he will know it and be able to deal with it in a proper way. But, that is not the point. We make the statement that the Department of Labour is surrounded by political partisanship. The correspondent in the city of Belleville is an active politician, the sub-editor of one of the Reform papers in that city, a gentleman who attends political meetings and who writes political reports, and we say therefore that another man who does not take this active part in politics would be better if my hon. friend comes to the decision that this should be a non-partisan department. Then we have another gentleman in the city of Chatham by the name of Snell. I would like my hon. friend to take his name down and make an examination of this case as well. Mr. Snell is a very active partisan in the city of Chatham in West Kent.

Mr. CAMPBELL. No, he is not. I have known him for twenty years.

Mr. BLAIN. That is all right. My hon. friend (Mr. Campbell) has forgotten since he left West Kent. He has come down into what was formerly West York, but which was fixed up in the redistribution, and called Centre York. I have a better informant than my hon. friend, a gentleman who has been more recently in the campaigns in West Kent, and I am sure my hon. friend would think that he would be a better informant. I make the statement and I have no fear of contradiction that Mr. Snell is an active partisan, and takes an active part in every political contest up there. Yet, he is the correspondent of this 'Labour Gazette.' If my hon. friend will wait a moment I think I have some evidence that is a little more recent and perhaps a little more startling. In Calgary we have Mr. J. Gillespie, correspondent at $100 a year of this non-partisan 'Gazette.' Who is Mr. Gillespie? Mr. Gillespie is a gentleman who takes a very active part in every election. After the election is over what does Mr. Gillespie do? He signs the protests against members sitting on this side of the House for Calgary and he does this in the Liberal interest.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. Is Mr. Gillespie still in the employ of the 'Labour Gazette'?

Mr. BLAIN. My hon. friend from Cape Breton should not ask information from me that he has at hand. Ask the minister. I will just stop to find out whether that gentleman is the correspondent of the 'Labour Gazette,' because I am rather interested in that myself. I will ask the minister. Perhaps my hon. friend from Cape Breton is well informed?

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. I follow these things.

Mr. EMMERSON. This gentleman has resigned.

Mr. BLAIN. When?

Mr. EMMERSON. Last month.

Mr. BLAIN. Oh, yes. He discharged his duty while he was correspondent. The election was in November, but the protest was signed in December. May I ask the hon. minister if Mr. Gillespie was paid for his December work by the department, because in that month he signed the protest against my hon. friend (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) who represents Calgary in this House.

Mr. EMMERSON. He would naturally be paid down to the time of his resignation.

Mr. BLAIN. Well, there is the condition of things. We have brought a little to light. We could present samples of a great many other cases to the committee if we wished to take up the time of the House. That is the position of the Labour Department. We find that they have in their employ active politicians and men who are not satisfied with being active politicians, but who must go even further. In this case we have a man who puts his name to the protest against the election of my hon. friend from Calgary.

Mr. A. LAVERGNE. Why should he not?

Mr. BLAIN. I have nothing to say about a gentleman putting his name to a protest if he sees fit to do so, but he should not be the correspondent of the 'Labour Gazette' and at the same time be an active politician.

Mr. A. LAVERGNE. I know that some of my friends on the other side of the House are very sore, but I want to argue this in a very quiet way.

Mr. BLAIN. After I get through.

Mr. A. LAVERGNE. Does my hon. friend expect, amongst all the labour men in Canada, to find men having no ideas relating to politics in order that they may be the correspondents of the 'Labour Gazette' and receive $100 each? This is the most ridiculous discussion I have ever heard in this House. How could you expect a man to abdicate every political idea he has ever had for a position worth $100 a year? How can you expect a man to shut his eyes to the prosperity of the country, which is so evident all round him, and refuse to mention it in his correspondence to the 'Labour Gazette'? A man need not necessarily be partisan in this correspondence, because he is Liberal or Conservative; you may find men in this country who have strong political ideas, and who would make impartial correspondents; but it would be an insult to the workingmen of this country to think that you can find amongst them men who have no interest in the welfare of the country, and who are ready to sacrifice their political opinions one way or the other for a trumpery $100 a year. This discussion is ridiculous.

Mr. FOSTER. We had better go home after that.

Mr. BLAIN. I am glad I gave way so as to give an opportunity to my young friend to present his contribution to the debate. I never said anything which would lead one to believe that a correspondent of the 'Labour Gazette' should give up every avocation in life to get $100 a year. That would be a ridiculous contention indeed.

Mr. A. LAVERGNE. Even if a man does accept that position at $100 per year, why should he not retain his political ideas like every other citizen?

Mr. BLAIN. Why, of course, he should. It may not be good policy for the government to appoint politicians to this non-partisan Labour Department, and I do not object to them employing supporters of their party, but I do complain that not only do they select politicians who take part in elections, but that they select men who, after the election is over, sign petitions and prove themselves partisan. It is said that this man signed the petition on Sunday, and I have been told that the petition was dismissed because it was signed on Sunday, but with that I have nothing to do. At all events, we have quoted enough from the 'Labour Gazette' itself to show the minister that if he selects Liberals as contributors, he should not select active politicians.

Mr. A. LAVERGNE. Does my hon. friend believe that because a man is a Liberal he cannot write an honest report for the 'Labour Gazette'?

Mr. BLAIN. I certainly believe that a Reformer might be a good contributor to this 'Gazette,' although my hon. friend (Mr. A. Lavergne) may think a Conservative could not be.

Mr. A. LAVERGNE. Oh, no.

Mr. BLAIN. I do repeat that if a man is going to be a contributor to a non-partisan journal, printed under the direction of the Labour Department, he should not be an active politician.

Mr. FOSTER. We have had an interesting discussion.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Opinions will differ as to its being interesting.

Mr. FOSTER. I think probably a moderate man may point a lesson which the Minister of Labour might take to heart. If there is one department that has been formed by the government under the idea that it should be entirely disjointed from party politics, it is the Labour Bureau. It is not the best way to give a non-partisan character to the Labour Department by making active political partisans correspondents of this paper and this bureau. The question is not whether it is not possible for a partisan to write a reasonable and fair article on occasions, but to prove that he could do so would not remove my objection. The Labour Department will take its character from its published press and its inner spirit and work, which is shown by its compilations and publications. I appeal to members on both sides of the House if it is the best outside dress to give this non-partisan department, that heated partisans of either political party, and especially heated partisans of the party in power, should be appointed to office in connection with it? The men who know these appointments in the different localities will come to the conclusion that the Labour Department is partisan just the same as other departments of the government, and they will lose confidence in it. That you should take the subeditor of a Liberal paper and appoint him to be a correspondent of the 'Labour Gazette' is not a crime, but there was no necessity to appoint such a man. The hon. gentleman who said you could not expect him to give up his other employment for the sake of $100 a year, would not exercise any great intellectual effort if he took the other side of the argument, and said that it would have been better to have avoided appointing such a man in the first place. If you want to get this department into a position in which it will do the most good, you had better give up employing correspondents who are active political partisans. It is no compliment to the great labour organizations of this country to say that you cannot find a reasonably fair-minded man who could do this work for you a mighty sight better than a newspaper editor. The particular class of information you want can be better given by a labour man who is versed in the work of the organization than by a newspaper reporter or editor. No answer has been given to the statement made here that a gentleman in the city of St. Thomas, who had acted as a correspondent, was removed because he was not partisan enough for the government. Unless there is a fair answer given to that, it is a pretty strong condemnation of the Labour Bureau. If the dismissed correspondent were competent, why were his services dispensed with—although he was a Liberal and a non-partisan—and a heated partisan put in his place? If it can be shown that the first man did not perform his duties fairly well, there would be good ground for his dismissal, but there would be no fair ground for putting an active partisan in his place.

I want to say a word or two with reference to the 'Labour Gazette' itself. It is a little difficult to criticise this paper on the cursory knowledge a member of parliament is able to get of it. I read it occasionally, I note some things in it, but what is the object of this publication? Is it to make a readable magazine for labouring men in this country? What number is printed and distributed?

Mr. EMMERSON. Ten thousand.

Mr. FOSTER. Then, to what proportion of the hundreds of thousands of labouring men in Canada does this magazine go? There are magazines and labour papers which go into hundreds of thousands of labouring men's homes in this country, which have all kinds of information. Is it the purpose of the 'Labour Gazette' to compete with these publications ?

Mr. EMMERSON. It is a statistical record.

Mr. FOSTER. I myself think that is what it should be, and therefore I have a criticism to make of it, which is that a large proportion of the space of this magazine is taken up in chronicling scissorings from the newspapers which go into the homes of the labouring men in ten thousand cases where this goes in one. I could show you page after page of these. Take the issue for May. It has a general summary of the industrial and labour conditions during April, which is helpful, and a fair thing for a publication of this kind to give ; but in addition it gives a lot of items in respect to all kinds of things under the sun which have nothing to do with a labour publication of this kind. For example :

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Dominion Coal Company, held on April 17, it was decided to issue $7,000,000 of thirty-five year five per cent gold bonds with $3,000,000 preferred cumulative 7 per cent stock.

Why should that be in a publication of this kind ? Of what earthly use is that to a labouring man ? That is a scissoring from a newspaper, put in here for the purpose of padding out this journal or making it readable. As the minister says, the purpose is not to make this a readable and competitive journal for the workingmen. I could give dozens of these, which are good enough in their way, but have no bearing whatever on the labour of this country. Here is another :

Shares in the Hudson Bay Company have risen by nearly £20 at London, England, within the past few weeks, as a result of the proposed new transcontinental railway——

—that may be debatable—

—being quoted at over £70 during April. The capital of the company is now divided into 100,000 shares at $10 each.

Imagine the thrilling news, and how it brought comfort and added hopes of sustenance in their declining years to the large numbers of workingmen of this country who hold as an investment Hudson Bay Company shares, to be told that they had this enormous rise in the British market. This is very good for the few of a certain class who hold that kind of shares, but it is rather poor comfort to the poor workingman who has to depend on his day's labour. I could read, I was going to say nearly one-fourth of this magazine to show that it is made up of stuffings and paddings of this kind. I think that is useless surplusage ; it is expensive, and it does not serve the purpose for which this labour bureau was organized. It seems to me that what we want to get at by means of this bureau are the conditions, the wages, the betterments, the prospects of the working-people of this country, and whatever may be helpful to them. There are some things in this book that are excellent. What I want is to cut out the padding, and confine it to the real object in view. I do not know but you would do better to put the publication in the form of bulletins dealing with special labour subjects, and giving them a circulation of hundreds of thousands, in place of issuing a magazine of 130 pages once a month to a very small number of labouring men. These are some of the considerations that impress themselves as we look through these pages. I think we could keep down the expense very much and make this labour bureau much more effective if we adhered solely to the idea that it is for the purpose of digging out, examining and putting before the labouring men facts which they are not in a position to obtain for themselves, and left all these other matters to the newspapers, which attend to them more effectually, and which go into hundreds of thousands of workingmen's homes where this magazine goes into none. I wish to add emphasis to my first suggestion, that it will be better for this commission and the minister who has it in charge, if they will keep from it these outside traces of political partisanship, which prejudices it in the localities where it is known immediately, and which cannot help having its effect on the publication and on the thoroughly good aims of the department itself.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I do not think many of the workingmen of this country will agree with the sentiments just uttered by the hon. member for North Toronto and the other members of the opposition who have spoken. I think the workingmen of this country feel that the 'Labour Gazette' is filling a long-felt want. They have desired for many years to have some medium by which they could learn the conditions of labour in the different parts of this vast Dominion. It is true, we have labour papers. We have one in the city of Toronto, but its circulation is confined largely to that city. The 'Labour Gazette' was started principally for the purpose of giving the working classes of this Dominion the news as to the conditions of trade, the scale of wages and the thousand and one things that interest them very much ; and I believe that it is accomplishing the end aimed at. The hon. member for North Toronto, with all his ingenuity, could only find two items to which he took exception. One was a report of the Dominion Coal Company. I would like to know if the men working in the mines of Nova Scotia are not interested in the condition of the Dominion Coal Company. I would also like to know if the men all over this Dominion, many of whom own stock in the Hudson Bay Company, are not interested in the affairs of that company. What are we doing for the manufacturing classes of this Dominion ? We are publishing monthly returns of the exports and the imports to enable these classes to get an accurate knowledge of what is going out and what is coming in, and where the best markets can be found. We are publishing these at great expense. My hon. friend has no objection to that ; but when we publish a 'Labour Gazette' for the purpose of giving to workingmen all over this Dominion the information they want, hon. gentlemen opposite find fault with that, and try to make out that the Labour Department is a partisan department. These hon. gentlemen have been challenged here to-day, and they have not been able to show one single article in this paper that is of a partisan character. It does not matter who sends in the articles, whether they are by the city editor of the Ottawa 'Citizen' or the city editor of a Belleville paper, if they are partisan articles and are published in this 'Labour Gazette,' the department is to blame ; but unless hon. gentlemen opposite can show that these articles are partisan, they have brought no charge against the department at all. The name of Mr. Snell, of Chatham, has been mentioned. I have known him for thirty years, and he is a most competent man for this work. He is a workingman ; he votes Liberal, of course, as nearly all the workingmen of this country do, and they are doing it more and more all the time. He could not do anything else. He understands the manner in which the government are conducting the affairs of the country. He knows that the country is prospering, and being intelligent he votes for what is good and best for himself and the country. I defy the hon. member for Peel (Mr. Blain) to take up Mr. Snell's articles during the last twelve months and find one word in them indicating partisanship. But what is all this fuss about ? The acting minister must make considerable allowance for our friends opposite. They are not in very good humour and require an outlet for their indignation. They went up to London and told the whole world that all the workingmen there were going to support Mr. Gray and that Mr. Hyman had no chance at all. They challenged us to open a seat in London. The hon. member for South York (Mr. W. F. Maclean) and the whole outfit went there and boasted they would carry London without fail. But their hopes were dashed to the ground, and Mr. Hyman's majority is sixteen times what it was last November. No wonder they feel sore.

Mr. BLAIN. What about Centre Toronto?

Mr. CAMPBELL. There is where we made the mistake. If we had gone there, we would have carried it, and it was against my judgment that we did not contest it. We would have carried it as we did North Oxford and London and Edmonton and Levis and how many more ? No wonder these hon. gentlemen are irritable. They made a vicious attack on the deputy minister. The hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) is going to invoke the rules of the House and have him turned out. I must say that I have never seen such an exhibition of ill-temper and chagrin as we have just witnessed. I would advise these hon. gentlemen to crawl into a hole and then draw it in after them. That would be much more dignified than wasting the time of this House and making a travesty of parliamentary government by trying to make a mountain out of a mole hill. They will no doubt learn by experience. Let them take Peruna or some other of these patent medicines, which will cure everything.

Mr. INGRAM. I am very glad the hon. gentleman has at last some courage. Only a few weeks ago he was challenged to resign his seat, but he took mighty good care not to.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Why should I resign my seat and go to all the trouble and expense of running another election just to gratify my hon. friends. Would my hon. friend resign his seat ? His majority was only 16 at the last election.

Mr. INGRAM. The chunk you cut off just gave 529 of a Tory majority, but still I pulled through all the same. The workingmen have evidently very little use for the 'Labour Gazette' because only 10,000 copies of it are issued.

Mr. EMMERSON. They get it in their unions and associations.

Mr. INGRAM. I congratulate the hon. gentleman upon being so well informed. But the total number is only 10,000, and therefore the labouring men evidently do not find it necessary to get it. Nor is that surprising. Associated with this department are certain men who were associating with the Ontario government for years, and when such men were brought down to this non-partisan department and when they were sent out through the country, and acted in the partisan manner they did, the workingmen lost what little faith they might have had in the Labour Department or 'Gazette.' I want a little information from the minister with respect to the difficulty on the Père Marquette Railway. I find that Mr. Hyman wrote to the department on the 2nd March. Had the minister received any other correspondence previous to that date or since in connection with this matter?

Mr. EMMERSON. There has been no other complaint laid. Hr. Hyman's was the first.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand the department had another letter.

Mr. EMMERSON. I will bring all the correspondence down.

Mr. INGRAM. Was there another letter from Mr. Hyman previous to the 2nd March in connection with this matter, and was there any other letter previous or since ?

Mr. EMMERSON. I am informed by the deputy that, as far as his memory goes, Mr. Hyman's was the first letter. Several hon. members spoke to Sir William Mulock on the subject, but the first formal complaint came from Mr. Hyman.

Mr. INGRAM. Was that made on March 2?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes, on March 2.

Mr. INGRAM. That was the first complaint and the first letter to the department?

Mr. EMMERSON. Except that there had been some verbal communications previous to that by an hon. member of this House.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman tell us whether there was not other correspondence since the 2nd of March from any other quarter?

Mr. EMMERSON. No.

Mr. INGRAM. Then I understand there was no correspondence with any person except Mr. Hyman in connection with this matter.

Mr. EMMERSON. A number of persons communicated with Mr. Hyman; Mr. Hyman then communicated with the Minister of Railways both verbally and by written communication. That is practically all there is in the department.

Mr. INGRAM. I would like to state to the minister that during last winter, when there was a good deal of difficulty on this railway, and some changes were made in the officers of that road, I understood a number of men complained and had written to the Department of Labour in connection with the changes that were being made on that railway and that this letter of the 2nd March is the outcome of the complaint then made. Does the minister say that there was no correspondence making these complaints?

Mr. EMMERSON. The deputy does not recall that there was, although he will have a search made in the morning and if there is any correspondence copies will be furnished.

Mr. INGRAM. That ought to be satisfactory. Then again I would like to know, because I live in the place, why Mr. Roberts was dismissed. I know of no reason.

Mr. EMMERSON. The information I have is that because of the gentleman's very active political partisanship it was thought that he would be doing an injury to the 'Gazette' and his services were dispensed with.

Mr. INGRAM. I have this statement to make, that Mr. Roberts did not act in a partisan spirit as a Conservative, and did not act in a partisan spirit as a Liberal. Now how was he acting in a partisan spirit? I make that statement as a member of this House.

Mr. EMMERSON. I am only giving the reasons assigned. Of course I must accept the hon. gentleman's word anyway, but I am not familiar with the circumstances in any sense; I am only giving the reasons assigned by the department.

Mr. INGRAM. I cannot understand who would complain of a man who is not a partisan. How did he show it? As an active Liberal or as an active Conservative?

Mr. EMMERSON. The Minister of Labour was satisfied that on account of the attitude taken by that gentleman his services to the 'Gazette' could best be dispensed with. Of course it all depends on the point of view. We are very apt to look through coloured glasses occasionally, and possibly what would seem to be a very inoffensive action in the eyes of my hon. friend might in the eyes of some one else be very offensive partisanship.

Mr. INGRAM. I will make the statement to this House that if ever there was a correspondent who carried out what the aims and objects of the 'Labour Gazette' should be Mr. Roberts was doing it. In that constituency there were three candidates, my hon. friend from West Elgin (Mr. Wm. Jackson), the Liberal candidate and a third candidate who was largely a labour candidate. Mr. Roberts, instead of supporting the Conservative or Liberal candidate, supported the labour candidate, and that is the reason why he was dismissed. I am very sorry that this non-partisan department should adopt the plan, when they found a loyal, true supporter of a non-partisan department, a loyal and true correspondent on the principles which ought to be laid down in this department, of dismissing from his office. It is very discouraging for those who desire to act in a non-partisan spirit.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. I observe that the item covers expenditures for outlay in connection with the Railway Labour Disputes Act. Proceedings were taken under that Act, as I understand, in connection with an arbitration between the Grand Trunk Railway and the telegraphers. Arbitrators were appointed, a reference was had and an award was made by a majority of the arbitrators, Judge Teetzel and Mr. Harvey Hall joining in the award, and Mr. Shepley, for the railway, dissenting. That award was made some months ago, I am informed, but up to the present time the Grand Trunk Railway has not in any way recognized the award or agreed to it or carried out the provisions of the finding of that award. The situation has grown so acute as the result of the railway company not complying with the findings, that I am informed a second strike is now threatened by the telegraphers or at least that trouble is threatened between the telegraphers and the company. I desire to bring this matter to the attention of the government and to ascertain if possible the attitude of the government in regard to the administration of that Act, the enforcement of its provision, whether it is to be allowed to be a dead letter, or whether, when a reference is made under it and an award found in accordance with its terms, a party to the award is to be at liberty to utterly repudiate the findings and treat them as though no reference had been made. The matter is of great importance to the labouring classes and to the telegraphers. The Act was said to be a solution for the troubles of railway disputes, but the railway men as yet have not received any of the benefits that were predicted at the time of the introduction of the Act.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Before the minister explains I would like to read to the House the attitude of Mr. Hays. The member for South Toronto (Mr. A. C. Macdonell) has anticipated me in bringing it up, but in the Montreal paper this morning, Mr. Hays puts himself on record in regard to it. Mr. Hays stated to the Committee of Telegraphers who waited on him yesterday :

> That as he had already explained to them in his letters on the subject, the Grand Trunk was in favour of the principle of arbitration, but such arbitration, to be effective and equitable, must be voluntary on both sides. This was not the case in the instance of the arbitration between the Grand Trunk and the telegraphers. The company had protested, in writing, to the Minister of Labour against being forced into the arbitration, but notwithstanding the protest, it was compelled to acquiesce to the proceedings being taken under the statute, which, however, does not give the findings of the arbitrators any power of enforcement.
> 'Since this arbitration,' remarked Mr. Hays, 'has resulted in a disagreement on the part of the arbitrators, the company, in view of its previous notice to that effect, does not consider itself in any way committed to abide by the findings of the arbitrators, which are not in the nature of an award, as claimed by the telegraphers, but merely a report or recommendation.

Now, here is the Grand Trunk, as the member for South Toronto has pointed out, objecting to the jurisdiction of the Act, and saying they are not compelled to abide by the decision of the arbitrators and do not intend to carry out the findings. He states this to the representatives of the telegraphers who are now in Montreal trying to obtain a settlement of it. It does seem that this great and powerful corporation located in Montreal, which is in close alliance with the government, can defy the labour laws of this country, and that the smaller railroad finds these laws enforced against it. Therefore it is in order to ask the government why this law is not enforced, and why the finding which has been made by these arbitrators is not complied with by the Grand Trunk.

Mr. EMMERSON. The best evidence of the wisdom of that legislation is found in the fact that a strike has been averted. During the past twelve months that matter has been under consideration. A strike that was imminent was prevented, and today, as I understand it, the representatives of the telegraphers' union are negotiating with the Grand Trunk people in Montreal. The Act is not enforceable except in the sense that it compels an arbitration, compels the facts to be presented and an award to be given. That award is largely subject, so far as its enforcement is concerned, to public opinion. I feel that sometimes the Act does not go as far as it should. But it is a great step in advance, the greatest that has ever been taken in Canada. From the information I have the likelihood is that this matter will be settled amicably. Not long ago I met the chief of the Telegraphers Union of Canada, and at that time he seemed to think that the matter would be adjusted satisfactorily. We had some difficulty with that order a year ago, on the Intercolonial—not a difficulty, but we had some negotiations with it, and reached a conclusion that was satisfactory, both to the order itself, and to the railway.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. When Mr. Hays says that the company does not consider itself in any way committed to abide by the findings of the arbitrators, does the minister consider that under the law the parties are not bound to accept the findings?

Mr. EMMERSON. If it did, it would be in defiance of public opinion.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. I am not talking about public opinion, I am asking the minister his view as to the legality of a law.

Mr. EMMERSON. What law does he refer to?

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. I refer to the law of arbitration passed by the government. Under this law a reference was made to arbitrators to settle certain labour disputes, and both parties consented. An arbitration was had, a finding was made and an award was handed in. The telegraphers were simple enough to think that what had been found in their favour would be enforced. Mr. Hays says he is not bound in any way to observe the findings of the arbitrators. I ask the minister to say whether that is his view also.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think it is quite correct to say that both parties consented to the arbitration, it was forced upon one of them. We pointed out, when the Minister of Labour insisted on passing this legislation, that ridiculous results of this kind would inevitably ensue, and they are most ridiculous, absolutely absurd. The government of this country forces a great corporation to go into arbitration, an arbitrator is appointed, a hearing is had before three arbitrators, one of whom is a judge, and a majority of those arbitrators, as is always the case, makes an award which ought to be binding. Then one of the parties to the award simply snaps its fingers in the face of the government, as it can do under the law, and says it will deal with the situation exactly as if no award had been made. Can any one imagine a more ridiculous situation than that in which the government of this country is placed at the present time under legislation passed by itself? It insists upon an award, a hearing is had, witnesses are called, an award is made, and the Grand Trunk says, We will deal with the situation exactly as if that award had not been made; and the Minister of Railways, acting for the Minister of Labour, says, Well, this will be enforced by public opinion. What steps are the government taking at the present time in order to have this award enforced by public opinion? What are they doing about it? If that is the ultimate court of appeal to which you must look for enforcement of this award, what steps are being taken to arouse public opinion on the subject? It seems to me the best thing is either to repeal the statute or go further, and provide that any such award shall be enforceable, because it is a mere mockery to have an award made and have it treated in this way.

Mr. EMMERSON. I may say that the railway company has not so far refused to carry out that award, when a decision is reached; and they informed the department that action can then very well be taken.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. They can refuse, however, can they not, under the law, it is not binding upon them?

Mr. EMMERSON. The law, as I understand it, does not enforce an award, but you can enforce the investigation that is made under the Act, you can have a public investigation, all the facts can be brought out, and the arbitrators can render an award.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the use of it all?

Mr. EMMERSON. Only in so far as the facts developed by the investigation can influence the company to enforce it.

Mr. MACDONELL. Is the government in a position to compel compliance with the award?

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Harbours and rivers—Ontario—Amherstburg harbour—improvement of channel, &c., including purchase of land, $30,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. Tenders for this work were called for and the contract awarded to the Chatham Dredge Company. The total amount of dredging contemplated is $28,700.

Mr. INGRAM. What land did you purchase ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We did not purchase any land yet ; we may require to purchase some water lots.

Belle Rivière—dredging entrance channel, &c., and renewing close pile protection work, $4,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is in North Essex. The total cost is $6,500 and the dredging is to be done by contract.

Mr. INGRAM. When was this work first undertaken ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It was originally undertaken many years ago.

Mr. INGRAM. When did this particular work commence ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Last year.

Mr. INGRAM. Why was it not included in the report of the Public Works Department for last year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. That report is for the end of the previous fiscal year and this money was only voted last year.

Bayfield—repairs to north pier and dredging, $2,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is in South Huron. It is proposed to increase the dimensions of the channel and to get 14 feet depth at low water. It will be done by day labour and the total cost will be $2,500.

Mr. BLAIN. What volume of business is done at Bayfield ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is a fishing village.

Mr. INGRAM. If you are going to dredge for the purpose of accommodating the fishermen, this amount may be sufficient, but I know the place very well and if you want to get 14 feet of water you will have to spend more money.

Beaverton—harbour improvements, $8,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is in the county of North Ontario. It is to cut a channel 60 feet wide and for the construction of close pile protection bank and breakwaters 150 feet in length. The total cost is $11,000.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. It is a very necessary work.

Blanche Rivière—improvement of, $9,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is in the county of Nipissing. The vote is to provide for the removal of snags and other obstructions; the total cost will be $15,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Has this work been commenced ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Not yet.

Mr. BLAIN. Has there been any government money expended there ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; the department is building a small snag boat to do the work.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. This is not navigable water in the sense of being connected with the sea. With the exception of a few little favoured places in the province of Quebec, the custom hitherto has been that no public money in the Dominion has been expended on this class of work. I am not opposing it ; I am in favour of it, but I want to know if the minister is introducing a new policy, and if so, we will give him lots of inland waters on which the snags require to be removed.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am not sure that the statement is correct, that this kind of work has hitherto been confined to Quebec, but at all events we are extending it to Ontario and I suppose that is all right.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. It has not been done on Ontario inland waters, except up here between Ontario and Quebec.

Mr. BRODEUR. It has been done in Temiskaming.

Bracebridge—wharf, $3,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to complete payments in connection with this work which has been built under contract ; the total cost will be $9,000.

Mr. BARR. Will this finish the work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is under contract now.

Mr. W. WRIGHT. I call the attention of the minister to the fact that this work is in a rather peculiar position. The wharf which has been in existence is some little distance down the side of the stream from the falls and is in a very accessible place. The present wharf is being built in an inaccessible place, and whether by the action of the falls or otherwise, a sandbar has been raised just below it, which will make it practically of no use for the larger boats unless a sufficient amount of dredging is done to enable them to reach the wharf. I would like to inquire whether it is the intention of the government to make provision for dredging across the sand-bar so as to allow the larger boats to reach the wharf.

Mr. BRODEUR. I may say that the wharf has been located where it is at the request of the business men of that locality. The hon. member says that another site was advocated by some persons in the locality, but it was found on survey that the present location would be more suitable. If some dredging is required to enable vessels to reach the wharf, it will have to be done. There is no vote for that, but I will take a note of the hon. member's suggestion.

Mr. WM. WRIGHT. The information I have from persons who have some knowledge of the locality is that it will be practically useless without dredging. It is inaccessible to a large majority of the business men ; they are opposed to having it placed there, and they say that they will not use it.

Mr. BRODEUR. Is it not near the business centre of the locality ?

Mr. WM. WRIGHT. There is practically very little difference between the two sites, so far as that is concerned ; but it is right at the foot of the falls and is inaccessible for teams taking anything to or from the wharf. But I am not raising an objection so much to the location of the wharf, because that is a matter for the steamboat people and the town, and if both are satisfied, I am. I would like to know if any provision is to be made for dredging in order to make this wharf of practical use to the public ?

Mr. BRODEUR. If some dredging is absolutely required, we have a general vote for dredging, and the money for the work will come out of that vote.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I must compliment the government for carrying out this work. This is one of the promises made by the Postmaster General during a by-election up there. On that occasion he selected the site for this wharf, and made a very extravagant promise, and I am glad to see that it is being carried out.

Mr. PATERSON. It was a proper promise, then ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. In the wrong place.

Bronte—harbour improvements, $8,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to complete the repairs to the east and west piers which were commenced in 1904-5. This is in the good county of Halton.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think this work was commenced as far back as four or five years ago. Will this vote complete all the work that the government propose to do in the Bronte harbour, as regards both dredging and the construction of docks ? It is desirable that the work should be completed as early as possible.

Mr. BRODEUR. The chief engineer informs me that this will probably complete the work.

Cobourg—repairs to piers, $5,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is to make repairs to the piers in Cobourg harbour where they are mostly needed ; 300 feet of the superstructure are to be rebuilt and filled with stone. The total cost will be $5,000. Nothing has been done yet.

Mr. BLAIN. How much has been expended there up to date ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $216,349.22. Even before confederation $62,000 was expended.

Mr. BARKER. The $3,000 voted last year is not marked as a revote.

Mr. BRODEUR. These estimates were prepared in January, and it was expected that a certain amount would be expended before 30th of June, and therefore we did not mention it as a revote.

Mr. INGRAM. In the year 1903-4 you expended about $5,000 on this harbour. Was that done by day labour ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. And you purchased about 50,000 feet of lumber. What is your system for purchasing lumber for harbours of this kind ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The engineer in charge asks for quotations, and makes the purchase from the lowest tenderer. That is the general practice of the department.

Collingwood—harbour improvements, $60,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make provision for further improvements required for Collingwood harbour, to complete the widening of the channel and improving the approaches to the dry-dock. The contract has been awarded for this work.

Mr. INGRAM. What will the total expenditure amount to ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $660,000.

Mr. BARR. Who are the contractors ?

Mr. BRODEUR. C. S. Boone for the dredging, and Joseph Battle for the construction of the wharf—the lowest tenderers.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. With regard to Collingwood harbour, my hon. friend from East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett), who is unavoidably absent, would like to have it stand over or to have an opportunity to discuss it on some other item.

Mr. BRODEUR. There will be an opportunity on the supplementary items for next year.

Mr. INGRAM. Will they be brought down soon or only a day or two before prorogation ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Probably during next week.

Mr. BARR. Where does this dredge come from ? I was not aware that there was more than one in that northern region.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is a Canadian dredge which has been working for three or four years at Collingwood, and which is owned by Mr. Boone.

Mr. BARKER. Is this the 'General Meade' ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The chief engineer thinks it is the 'Kingsford.'

Mr. INGRAM. Did it do any work in Sarnia ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. BARR. Then it has been in Collingwood some years ?

Mr. BRODEUR. So I am informed by the chief engineer.

Mr. BARR. And other places ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; not during that period.

Mr. BARKER. Is the hon. gentleman quite sure the name is Boone and not Bowman ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is Boone, and it is his own dredge. As far as the department knows, he is the owner of three or four dredges.

Mr. INGRAM. I notice that the department did pay Mr. Boone for towing a dredge from Sarnia to Maitland.

Mr. BARKER. You paid Mr. Boone, the year before last, $15,000 for towing his dredge from Sarnia to Port Maitland.

Mr. BRODEUR. That policy has been dropped.

Mr. BLAIN. How was the $50,000 expended which was voted for the Collingwood harbour last year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $42,219.80 were paid to Mr. C. S. Boone for dredging with dredges Nos. 10 and 14. The price was $2.30 per yard.

Mr. INGRAM. And hard-pan $1.40 and mud 35 cents ; rock $2.30 per cubic yard.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. To ask this item to stand would involve the standing of them all. I am content to let this pass on the understanding that an opportunity will be given to discuss it on some other item within reasonable time, or that there will be no objection to reopen the item, if the hon. member for Simcoe so desires.

Mr. BRODEUR. There will be no objection to that.

Mr. BLAIN. When will this part of the work be finished and the expenditure cease in this harbour ?

Mr. BRODEUR. In the season of 1906.

Mr. BLAIN. Is this new work or a continuation of last year's work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is a continuation. The total cost will be $60,000.

Mr. BARR. Do you expect to spend it all this season ?

Mr. BRODEUR. This summer or next. If we can finish before the 1st July next we shall not require another vote, but if not we shall require a revote next year.

Mr. BARKER. I understand you have not spent a dollar yet ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; we have paid to Mr. Boone $42,219 from the 1st July, 1904, up to date ; and to Mr. Coghill, $6,540, for dredging with dredge No. 7.

Mr. BARKER. Therefore, the whole $50,000 is spent ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. BARR. And this additional $60,000 will make the total $110,000 ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. BARR. Will that finish the work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We expect it will.

Mr. BLAIN. I notice last year that the minister told us that the $50,000 then voted would complete, and now you are asking $60,000 more. Yet it is the same contract.

Mr. BRODEUR. Since then there has been a contract let for an addition to the town wharf at the upper end, 75 feet by 40 feet, and besides it has been decided to improve the approaches to the dry-dock.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the price for the new work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The same prices as in the original contract.

Mr. INGRAM. Supposing the season closes, have you a continuation agreement by which the work is renewed by the contractor in the spring ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There is a contract and it goes on in the spring until completed.

Mr. INGRAM. So no tenders are called in the spring ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Some new tenders were called for this spring because the method was changed ; it was decided to call for tenders in all cases for dredging and the contract was awarded to the lowest tenderer.

Mr. INGRAM. Where a contract for dredging is given to the lowest tenderer at so much per cubic yard for each class of material, do the department keep a record of the time the dredge is at work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We require some officers on hand to classify, because the price is not the same for clay, sand or boulders, and at the same time to see how much dredging is done.

Mr. INGRAM. So that you have so many cubic yards of rock, &c.

Mr. BRODEUR. The inspector measures the scow. I do not think it is absolutely necessary they should keep a record of the hours, because when the contract is given by the cubic yard there is no necessity for keeping the hours. That is only necessary when it is by the day or the hour.

Depot Harbour, $20,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to complete payments for 1905-6 in connection with the breakwater for the prolongation of the elevator wharf and the landing pier which are being built under contract at Depot Harbour. The total cost of the work will be $237,000. The contractors are Messrs. Davis, Haney & Miller.

Mr. INGRAM. Has the railway contributed anything towards the construction of the work at Depot Harbour ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the contract price ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The price is $157,500, and additional riprap foundation $37,500.

Mr. INGRAM. So that since 1904, when the contract price was $106,000, some new contracts have been added ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. INGRAM. In 1903-4 your contract price was $106,000 ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The original contract was for $195,000. That is to say, the two amounts I have just mentioned. Then there was some riprap foundation and the construction of an addition to the elevator wharf extending from the outer end, 1,350 feet.

Mr. WM. WRIGHT. As this is of use to nobody but the Canada Atlantic Railway do they pay anything to the government for the use of the wharf ?

Mr. BRODEUR. They do not pay anything for this.

Mr. WM. WRIGHT. This wharf is vested in the Crown and in the event of the government acquiring rights over the Canada Atlantic, would they have the right to use the wharf ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is to be used by all companies. At the present time there is one corporation using it a little more than any other company, but it is for the general use of the public.

Mr. INGRAM. Does the government anticipate any large expenditure by reason of the Grand Trunk Railway taking over the Canada Atlantic ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There is nothing decided yet in reference to the government taking the Canada Atlantic.

Mr. INGRAM. Is there anything being considered ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I thought my hon. friend had reference to the government taking running rights over the Canada Atlantic. There is nothing decided yet as to that.

Mr. INGRAM. Nothing has been decided, but there is some amount under consideration evidently by reason of the Canada Atlantic being handed over to the Grand Trunk. Am I correct in that ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. INGRAM. No items are being considered at all ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. INGRAM. And there is no anticipation of the expenditure of a largely increased amount at Depot Harbour ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Goderich harbour improvement, $70,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is to complete improvements which have been undertaken in the harbour at Goderich. It is to renew a superstructure 111 feet in length on the old original part of the north pier, which is much decayed, clearing the entrance channel of drifted sand, completing repairs to south pier, and the construction of the breakwater. The total probable cost of these works will be $99,000. This is under contract.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the hon. gentleman state the total expenditure on Goderich harbour up to the present time ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $767,617.

Mr. INGRAM. I suppose the hon. gentleman has no idea as to the trade being done there ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I understand there is a large grain trade there ; it is one of the important ports of the lake.

Grand Bend breakwater—pier, &c., $15,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to complete a breakwater being built under contract at Grand Bend ; the amount of the contract is $21,388. This will complete.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. When was the contract let ?

Mr. BRODEUR. March 26th, 1904.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Was there not one let before that ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, that was the first contract.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. This is in my own riding and I was there last year. The work was not being carried on. I asked a question early in the session and was given to understand that the contract had been abandoned. I was anxious to know whether you had let another contract. I see you have spent $8,400, and I would like to know where that money was spent ?

Mr. BRODEUR. That was the estimated expenditure, but it was not expended. The chief engineer informs me that it is not likely the contract will be abandoned.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. How much of the work is completed ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We do not know.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Has any of it been done ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There is no late report, as a matter of fact.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Is any work going on ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Could you give an idea of the nature of the work that is being carried on.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed that the work that is being done now is dredging.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Is it being done by contract ?

Mr. BRODEUR. That is part of the contract.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. When was the work to be completed ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The contract should be completed June 30, 1905, but I would be surprised if it was completed at that time.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The contract, as I understand from the reply to my question early in the session, was not under way at all and no work was being carried on. I would naturally think he would know whether the work was being carried on or not.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is not the information now given to me by the officers of the department. But we will look into the matter more closely and see how it stands.

Mr. INGRAM. The $21,000 includes the building of a wharf at Trenton?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. That work was given out in March, 1904, to be completed in 1895, and no work has been done yet although I think we have spent about $298.

Mr. BRODEUR. I understand that when the contract was awarded, this being a very exposed part of the coast, the contractor could not get his material before it was too late in the season to begin.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I realize the importance of this work, and am anxious to see it carried on as rapidly as possible. But I am a little afraid there has been some carelessness since the time is about expired and nothing practical has been done.

Mr. BRODEUR. All the necessary means will be taken to have the work carried on.

Harbours, rivers and bridges—general repairs and improvements to, $20,000.

Mr. BARKER. You took $15,000 last year, how much of that was spent?

Mr. BRODEUR. $14,594.24.

Mr. BARKER. Of this $20,000 asked for this year will any portion of that under any circumstances whatever be applied upon works for which a special vote is taken?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, this is for other works. The Auditor General will not permit, where there is a special vote, that we should take anything out of this vote.

Mr. BLAIN. On this general item for dredging harbours, rivers and bridges, I wish to draw the attention of the minister to the Port Credit harbour on Lake Ontario. We have had several promises from the government in respect of that. It is a harbour that should receive some expenditure upon it. There is a small amount of ship-building done. It has a large and important starch factory, and recently a large brickmaking establishment is operating. The surrounding country is rich in agricultural products, fruit growing, &c., and there is a considerable production of building stone which is sent into Toronto. A good many bricks are also sent into Toronto and a great many more could be sent in by boat, if a small sum of money was spent upon the harbour. Some years ago the department sent an engineer, who made a report, and the acting Minister of Public Works of that day stated that as soon as a dredge was available it would be sent up to do some dredging in that harbour. That promise was repeated from year to year, and I have a promise this year from the Minister of Public Works that something would be done. A part of the year has already gone by and I have not heard anything about a dredge. I would like very much to hear the minister state that something will be spent on that harbour. I am sure the policy of the government will not be to overlook altogether those counties that are not now supporting the government, surely the minister will not apply that stern rule to the province of Ontario. I hope he will look into this question and see if it is not possible this season to send a dredge up there to dredge out a harbour, which is an immediate public necessity. I may add that it is a harbour where a large amount of coal will be brought in on Lake Ontario to supply the farmers of that section, as it is done at other harbours along the north shore of Lake Ontario. A large petition has been presented to the government containing the names of many supporters of the hon. gentleman, and I am sure the minister is neglecting his own friends when he fails to give attention to this matter. I hope the old excuse, that ought to be worn out by this time, that no dredge is available, will not be heard this year, and that the minister will see to it that a small amount, a reasonable amount, of money will be expended there in order that the residents of that village and of that southern section of Toronto township may have such an outlet for their products as is necessary in this growing time.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not know anything about the merits of this case which has been brought to our attention, but I have no doubt that the facts which have been presented by the hon. member will receive careful attention at the hands of the Minister of Public Works when he arrives, and I will call his attention to the remarks of the hon. gentleman.

Haileybury (Lake Temiskaming)—wharf, $2,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for building an enlargement of the outer section of the wharf by adding a block of 100 feet by 20 feet.

Hamilton—harbour improvements, $30,000.

Mr. BARKER. This is a revote of $30,000; why was that not spent last year?

Mr. BRODEUR. Nothing was done, because there was some question of the purchase of a wharf or of the city giving a wharf.

Mr. BARKER. I think the engineer is mistaken if he says that is the reason the work was not begun last year. That is a new excuse. This money was voted a year ago, and was the subject of a lively discussion in the press up to the month of November when the elections came off. We had about once a week the statement that $30,000 was going to be expended for this work in Hamilton and about every five or ten days an officer of the government would come up and there would be a discussion with the municipal body. This would be heralded through the press. Then, later on, Major Grey would come up with plans. This went on and on until the elections were over and that was the last of it. It began again this spring and we were told that the government would go on when the city bought a wharf. That was not contemplated last year. I am not objecting to the money. If we got ten times as much we would not be getting in proportion to other places. Localities in the neighbourhood of the hon. minister's constituency and other places get far more than Hamilton. I repeat that I am not objecting to the money, but I want to know why the promise was not kept. There were most faithful promises made week after week all that summer that this work would be begun. We all knew what it meant; the government wanted to get a Liberal in for West Hamilton. West Hamilton has delivered the goods and the city wants the money. Usually the government pays the money and does not get the goods, but this time the city of Hamilton has delivered the goods. Now pay for them.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. This work in question is not in West Hamilton but in the constituency of my hon. friend for East Hamilton.

Mr. BARKER. But, it was used for the whole city.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. You got the benefit of it. The reason the government did not go on with it last summer was this: It was intended to build a slip about 200 feet in length, but they found when they came to ask for tenders that they would be encroaching on a wharf property adjoining and that they would be held up for damages. The question resolved itself into this: It would be a great saving to the city and it would give them a much greater frontage if they bought the adjoining wharf. They have done that and they can now start their sheet piling right from the wharf now in existence and save 250 or 225 feet of work. We will have a very much better work and it will be better for the city in every way and give them a more complete property. I may say in regard to the plans that were brought to Hamilton last year that they were brought in good faith.

Mr. BARKER. How do you know?

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. It was a great disappointment that the work was not gone on with last year, but it was in the interest of the city of Hamilton that the work was delayed until this year.

Mr. BARKER. Does the hon. gentleman say that the city of Hamilton requested the delay in the interest of the city?

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. Unquestionably it is.

Mr. BARKER. The hon. gentleman means to assert that?

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I mean to say that the delay has been in the interest of the city of Hamilton.

Mr. BARKER. That is not the question. I asked the hon. gentleman if the delay was at the request of the city?

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I say that it is in the interest of the city, most decidedly and as far as benefiting West Hamilton is concerned my hon. friend is very much mistaken. It was in East Hamilton and he got the benefit of it. He stated at the polls that it was perfectly absurd to expend $30,000, that the amount should be ten times as much and that the government was not doing justice to Hamilton.

Mr. BARKER. I said a few minutes ago. If we got ten times as much we would not get what we deserve. Does the hon. gentleman dispute that? What I say is this and the hon. gentleman knows it: The government professed to be expending $30,000 last year in Hamilton but it was for the purpose of influencing the election, and it was used as he knows by the Liberal paper in Hamilton for the purpose of influencing the election. It was so used deliberately and openly a very few weeks before the election, and we had a government engineer there with plans to show that the work was going on immediately. It was all bosh; they never intended to go on with the work then, but they held it over until this spring, and when the work was to be gone on with this spring they wanted the city to buy the wharf.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I am satisfied the government acted in good faith.

Mr. BARKER. How do you know the government acted in good faith?

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I know they did. I know it was in the interest of the city of Hamilton and the hon. gentleman knows very well that had that work gone on perhaps it would have been worse for himself.

Mr. BARKER. Do you mean that I would have lost some votes?

Kincardine harbour—repairs to piers and dredging, $2,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is proposed to apply that sum as follows: Widening and deepening the entrance to Kincardine harbour, $1,500. More or less filling takes place in the spring freshets. Second, repairs, $1,000.

Mr. BLAND. I would like to ask the hon. minister when he expects the dredge will be at Kincardine harbour. It is very important that the dredging should be done.

Mr. BRODEUR. The contract has been let for dredging and it is expected that the work will go on immediately.

Mr. BLAND. I understand that a year ago the government engineer was there and recommended that the pier be extended further out into the lake to keep the wash from bringing the sand into the entrance.

Mr. BRODEUR. This question is under consideration.

Mr. BLAND. Some four or five years ago or probably more there was an undertaking instituted by the government—I do not know whether the present government or the former government—to construct a dam across the river 40 or 80 rods farther up. The river comes down, runs through the harbour and brings the wash down in the spring of the year and it is from there that most of the sediment is deposited in the harbour. It is believed by the people of the district that this would be a good move, and I would like to ask the minister if it has ever been contemplated since?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, the diversion of the river has never been contemplated.

Mr. BLAND. It was not the diversion of the river but the building of a dam.

Mr. BRODEUR. No, it has never been considered by the department. The officers will note it.

Mr. BLAND. It was a few years ago, but I do not know by what government.

Lake Temiskaming—wharfs, $3,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is asked to cover the cost of completing a wharf commenced at Dawson's Point to provide landing and shipping accommodation. This will complete the work.

Mr. W. WRIGHT. We have already voted a sum for the Haileybury wharf. At what point is this wharf to be constructed ?

Mr. BRODEUR. At Dawson's Point.

Mr. W. WRIGHT. Where is Dawson's Point ?

Mr. BRODEUR. On the Ontario side.

Mr. W. WRIGHT. Where on the lake is it ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I understand it is at the head of the lake. It is between Wabbey's bay and the head of Lake Temiskaming.

Mr. BARKER. Why do you say 'wharfs' ? Are you building several ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is a mistake ; it should be 'wharf.' We are only building one because we could not build many with this sum.

Mr. BLAIN. What will be the total cost?

Mr. BRODEUR. $3,000.

Mr. INGRAM. How far is that from Haileybury ?

Mr. BRODEUR. About 4 miles.

Mr. W. WRIGHT. Is is near New Liskeard ?

Mr. McCOOL. New Liskeard is between Haileybury and Dawson's Point and about 4 miles from Haileybury. Haileybury is in a deep bay and Dawson's Point is the point beyond that. I suppose it is about 4 miles from New Liskeard. Going around the bay it would be about 8 miles from Haileybury, but straight across it would be about 4 miles.

Mr. BLAIN. What business is done here ? I suppose this is an important place and that there is no provision for business.

Mr. BRODEUR. The country is being opened up and there is a very large exportation of lumber and agricultural products on Lake Temiskaming.

Little Current—improvement on Northern steamboat channel in Georgian bay, $50,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is under contract and the total cost will be $190,000.

Mr. INGRAM. What will be necessary next year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $75,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Can the minister give any idea as to the number of vessels that will use this channel ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is the highway for all the boats passing through the north channel, and is a very important place.

Mr. BARR. Who has the contract ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Boone, at $2.60 per cubic yard ; it is all rock.

Mr. INGRAM. Where did the demand come from for this large expenditure ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The municipality of Manitowaning, Victoria Harbour Lumber Company, the mayor of Little Current, the Liberal Association of Little Current, the Collingwood Board of Trade.

Mr. BARKER. Has the contract for the whole work been let to this contractor ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Only for the present work ; it can be stopped at any moment.

Matchedash bay—improvement of channel between Fesserton and Wabashene, $8,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. The contractor is Mr. Prendergast, the lowest tender.

Mr. INGRAM. We should like to know more about this vote.

Mr. BRODEUR. The work is to secure 11 feet at low water on the Georgian bay for a minimum width of 100 feet ; the depth now available being only 7½ feet.

Mr. INGRAM. Who made the demand for this work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There is a petition in the department of the 8th of April, 1904, from the residents of the townships and a number of villages in the vicinity.

Meaford harbour—improvements, $66,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is to make provision for building a new pier at the north side of the harbour, and dredging in front of the pile work. It is under contract and the contractors are Kastner and Porter of Wiarton. The contract price is $59,800.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the total estimated cost ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $74,000, including dredging.

Midland harbour—improvements, $7,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is asked for dredging slips and $7,000 pile wharfs in Midland harbour, and making most urgent repairs to the approaches to these wharfs. The estimated cost is $7,000.

Mr. BARKER. Was the $20,000 voted last year all spent ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, mostly in dredging.

Mr. BARR. Who has the contract ?

Mr. BRODEUR. A. Macdonald.

Newcastle—repairs to pier, $3,300.

Mr. BRODEUR. The total cost will be $3,300.

Mr. BLAIN. When will it be completed ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It will be done by day labour during this season.

Oliphant wharf, $1,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. I move that this item be struck out ; the work has been done.

Mr. INGRAM. How does it come that it appears in the estimates ?

Mr. BRODEUR. When these estimates were prepared in January last we did not think the work would be done during the present fiscal year but it has been done.

Ottawa—wharf at foot of Rideau canal, $5,000.

Mr. BARR. What about this work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The Ottawa Improvement Commission is about to do some work which may have an effect on this wharf, and it has been delayed in order that we may know what the Ottawa Improvement Commission may do.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. How is it that you did not know about that before you prepared this estimate ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The intention of the department is to combine plans with those of the Improvement Commission.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I suppose when this estimate was prepared the department was expected to do all the work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is expected that the work will be done by the department, but we will combine the plans of the Improvement Commission and those of the government.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What change do you expect to be made ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is very hard to know at present, because we are awaiting the decision of the Improvement Commission in order to make our plans.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Is that going to increase the expense of the work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; it is simply to combine the plans.

Owen Sound harbour—dredging and pile protection works, &c., $10,000.

Mr. BARR. Who is doing this work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. E. F. Bowman.

Mr. HENDERSON. This is in Mr. Bowman's district, I understand ?

Mr. BRODEUR. He was the lowest tenderer.

Mr. BARR. Is the work done by contract, or is it at so much per cubic yard ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is at 15 cents per cubic yard for clay, sand, gravel and boulders.

Mr. BARR. Will this finish the work in Owen Sound ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; I am informed that some more dredging will have to be done.

Mr. BARR. Then this is not a contract ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is like all the dredging contracts, at so much per yard for the season.

Mr. HENDERSON. I suppose, as a matter of fact, this is a sort of hardy annual ? It comes up every year.

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the total expenditure up to date on the Owen Sound harbour ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $379,000 up to the 31st of December, 1904. Prior to confederation $13,000 was expended.

Mr. BARR. Can the hon. gentleman give us any idea of how much it will yet take to complete the Owen Sound harbour ?

Mr. BRODEUR. So far as the piers and wharfs are concerned, everything is finished now ; but there is always some dredging to be done.

Parry Sound wharf, $8,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is under contract. The vote is to make provision for the construction of a pile wharf, 30 feet wide and 500 feet long, on the north side of Parry Sound harbour. The amount of the contract is $8,935. The total cost is estimated to be $9,800.

Petewawa wharf, $4,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make provision for completing a pile wharf, with a view to affording sufficient accommodation for steamers plying between Pembroke and Des Joachims. The total estimated cost is $6,000.

Pembroke wharf, $20,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is under contract. The contractors are Messrs. Poupore & Company. This wharf is at the foot of Albert street, which leads to the market square and the centre of the town. It is 1,720 feet long, and will reach a depth of 10 feet at low water on the Ottawa river.

Penetanguishene—dredging and other improvements, $10,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is for dredging in the main channel in order to meet present requirements, and also for repairing the reformatory lighthouse pier. The total cost will be $32,000. The dredging is under contract to the Owen Sound Dredging Company, the lowest tenderer.

Mr. BARR. What are the names of the people in that company ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We do not have the names of the shareholders.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Do not the hon. gentleman's officers know ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. BARR. Is this the same company that has the Owen Sound dredging ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Point Edward—dredging, $17,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is under contract. It is for the dredging of a channel of a minimum width of 200 feet to a depth of 21 feet, extending for a distance of about 3,000 feet. The contract has been awarded to the Sarnia Bay Lumber Company, the lowest tenderer.

Mr. INGRAM. Where is that dredging done ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Near the Grand Trunk Railway freight sheds, and a new grain elevator to the south of those sheds in a southerly direction to deep water. This is to remove the shoals from the sides of the channel.

Port Burwell—harbour improvements, $50,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is asked to construct the following works, which are recommended by the chief engineer : A substructure of ballasted woodwork and a superstructure of concrete, to protect effectually the entrance to the harbour formed by the Dominion government at Port Burwell at an expenditure of $220,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Who is the chief engineer of the work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Mr. Lafleur. Mr. Friel is the engineer at the work.

Mr. INGRAM. There is no change in the engineer at the works ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Port Bruce—wharf, $5,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. The estimated cost is $11,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Is that intended for dredging purposes ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There will certainly be some dredging to it.

Mr. INGRAM. Will that be taken out of the $11,000 ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Port Dover—harbour improvements, $5,200.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for completing the renewals and repairs commenced in 1904-5 at Port Dover piers.

Mr. MACDONELL. Has any successor been appointed to the late Major Gray, engineer in charge ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, Mr. Pink, who was resident engineer in London, has been transferred to there.

Port Hope—repairs to piers and dredging, $5,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for the estimated cost of the repairs necessary to the harbour works. The total estimated cost is $4,913.

Port Stanley—harbour improvements, $70,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for carrying out the works during the fiscal year on the two breakwaters, let by contract, in order to afford protection and greater accommodation and facilities called for by the present and prospective large increase of traffic at that port, particularly the landing of large quantities of coal from the United States for consumption in western Ontario. Total probable cost $115,000.

River Otonabee—dredging at Peterborough, $6,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is done by the government dredge.

Mr. BARKER. Are the $1,000 voted last year spent ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Rondeau harbour—improvements, $70,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for carrying on the work during the fiscal year 1905-6 on the breakwater at Rondeau. The construction work on the breakwater is to be let by contract ; and there will be day labour on the repairs as well which are required on the entrance to the piers. Total cost estimated $111,000.

Sarnia—dredging, $10,800.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is under contract to the Sarnia Bay Lumber Company at 17 cents per yard.

Mr. INGRAM. Is that the company which is dredging at Point Edward ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. How much will the dredge earn per day at that price ?

Mr. BRODEUR. That dredge will do about 1,000 yards per day and earn $170.

Mr. BARKER. Is this the company which has a lumber yard where the works are being done ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is probably the same company.

Mr. BARKER. Did not this lumber company get work done by Mr. Boone at the expense of the government.

Mr. BRODEUR. The engineer does not know.

Mr. INGRAM. Mr. Boone had the work at Sarnia at $12 an hour. Are you quite sure he has nothing to do with the work at this point ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We are ; it is not he.

Saugeen—improvements at mouth, $10,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to carry out the works necessary to afford safe landing and shelter for shipping. It will require $9,750 to complete.

Mr. BLAND. I was talking to Mr. Bowman the other day and he told me the channel had changed.

Mr. BRODEUR. It was awarded to Mr. Bowman.

Mr. BLAND. What is the price ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Twenty-five cents per cubic yard. It is hard pan.

Spanish river—dredging, $10,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is a revote. We could not do anything last year because we could not find any dredge to do the work.

Mr. BARKER. What is the depth at Spanish river ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Not more than five feet and we shall make it nine or ten feet.

Mr. BARKER. That will mean a very deep dredging. I thought that Spanish river was really not a harbour at all and you are constructing a harbour where there is none.

Mr. BRODEUR. We are dredging the channel. There is a shoal there.

Thessalon—breakwater, $8,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to complete the works in connection with the breakwater and pier. It is under contract. The amount of the contract is $19,000, and the contractors are Boyle Bros., of Sault Ste. Marie.

Thornbury—dredging, $6,750.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is under contract to H. W. Prendergast at 14 cents per yard. It is clay and sand.

Toronto harbour—eastern entrance, $28,000.

Mr. MACDONELL. I have to call attention to a matter of considerable and immediate importance to the shipping interests at Toronto, and I regret that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is not here. I refer to the inadequacy of the alarms or fog signals or bell buoys at the eastern piers, and the entrance to Toronto harbour. The fog-horn instead of being, as marine men claim it should be, on the southeastern extremity of the pier, that is out in the lake is far inland, practically in very nearly the centre of Toronto bay. The fogs of the month of June are upon us and there is a serious menace to navigation at Toronto, because of what I have mentioned. The matter was brought to the attention of the House about this time last year by the late member for West Toronto (Mr. E. F. Clarke) who spoke on the matter in the House on June 13, 1904, and explained the condition that existed from the fogs. That condition exists to-day because of the fogs prevalent on the north shore of Lake Ontario at this season of the year. On June 15 of last year the government's attention was again called to the matter by the late member for West Toronto and the Minister of Marine in answer to Mr. Clarke's question admitted that complaints had been received by the department because of the insufficient equipment of bell buoys and bells at the eastern gap at Toronto. Complaints he said had been received from the following navigation companies : Lake Ontario, Richelieu and Ontario, Niagara and St. Catharines and Niagara Navigation Company. As was pointed out on that occasion, numbers of excursion parties, composed principally of women and children, are carried on the vessels of these lines at this season, and the absence of proper fog signals certainly was an absolute menace to life and property. The minister then promised he would rectify the matter, and said :

> Before the receipt of these complaints the department had already taken steps to establish a powerful fog alarm operated by compressed air at this place, and it is expected that the same will be in operation this summer.

That was last summer, but nothing has yet been done. The matter is one of urgency, and I call the attention of the minister to it, and urgently appeal to him that something ought to be done at once to have a fog horn placed in proper position. It must not be overlooked that these piers extend far into the lake on one side and into the bay on the other, affording a very narrow channel for this entire distance and it is almost impossible to make this channel in foggy weather unless there are proper lights and signal equipments. It is a matter of importance to the marine men of Toronto and along the north shore of Lake Ontario as well as to the people of Toronto. It would not involve much expense but simply a rearranging of the fog signals which are necessary for the protection of life and property.

Mr. BRODEUR. My hon. friend knows that this matter does not come under the Department of Public Works, but under Marine and Fisheries. The Department of Public Works is simply looking after the construction of wharfs and harbours ; the equipment referred to appertains to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. I shall certainly call the attention of the Minister of Marine to these facts.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. I wish to speak of the expenditure for the eastern entrance to the harbour.

Mr. BRODEUR. I will explain what it is. It is proposed to apply this amount in driving sheet piles 25 feet long along the north end of the eastern pier at the eastern entrance of the harbour for a length of 1,400 feet. The estimated cost will be $28,000.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. Has the contract been let?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, the contract has not been let.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. Can the minister say when it will be let? The work is urgently needed. Tenders were called for in November.

Mr. BRODEUR. Not for this work. No tenders have been called for because the money was not voted.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. You do not always wait for that to award the contract?

Mr. BRODEUR. We have to wait until we have the money from the House.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. It is not always the custom I understand?

Mr. BRODEUR. Oh, yes, it is.

Toronto harbour—extension of island breakwater, $60,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make provision towards the protection of the lake shore of the island at Toronto harbour by extending the present breakwater in a westerly direction, 1,500 feet. Two rows of sheet piles will be driven 8 feet apart from 6 feet to 18 feet, the tops remaining 6 feet above water level. I cannot give the estimated cost because we are calling for tenders now.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. If I am correctly informed tenders for this work were called for and received, and after having been held by the department for some considerable time were returned to the tenderers without any explanation for their return and without any contract being awarded. The same thing occurred in January. Tenders were again called for and after having been submitted to the department with the usual deposits, they were again returned without any contract being awarded and without any explanation. This work is urgently needed and I would like to have some statement from the minister as to the reason why tenders were called for on these two occasions and returned without the work being awarded.

Mr. BRODEUR. The specifications call for steel piles. I understand the tenders put in gave different qualities of piles which rendered it impossible for the department to judge which was the best or even the lowest tender, and so they had to return the cheques and tenders. We have called for new tenders.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. Does that explanation cover both occasions?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. I would again like to bring to the notice of the government the fact that although these estimates are brought down for this special work this does not attempt to cover the necessary work at Toronto harbour. These are works connected with the outskirts of the harbour, the breakwater and the island, but the real work of the harbour of the city of Toronto is being neglected and has been for many years past. That harbour is filling up rapidly from the sediment and deposit made by the Don river. That deposit and silt is coming down that river to an alarming extent each year, and is rapidly filling up the entire bay or what is called Toronto harbour. The government have had engineers from the department there, in fact recently, to endeavour to arrange some scheme by which that harbour could be protected. The harbour is filling up according to the estimates of the government's own engineers, at the rate of about five acres of silt to a depth of about 10 feet every year. The result is that about one half of Toronto harbour to-day is not navigable. Only the parts that remain navigable are those that are taken over at the expense of the harbour commissioners and the City of Toronto, who dredge at their own expense the various piers where steamboats and vessels land. I hope the government will see fit to make some appropriation in the estimates for the work of dredging the harbour proper, and also for diverting the course of the River Don. I would ask the minister to see if something cannot be done with regard to this matter, and to make an appropriation in the supplementaries for that purpose.

Mr. BRODEUR. I will be glad to call to the attention of the Minister of Public Works the remarks of my hon. friend with regard to Toronto harbour. But he must admit that a good deal of money has been expended on that harbour in late years.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. The money has not been spent in Toronto harbour proper, but upon breakwaters. I would further point out that about four years ago the city spent about $100,000 on this particular work, on the distinct understanding with the then Minister of Public Works, that for all time thereafter the city of Toronto should be relieved of any further expenditure regarding this particular work, and the government at that time took upon its own shoulders and took off the shoulders of the city, the work of maintaining for ever Toronto harbour, the breakwaters and approaches thereto. The city has done its share, and now we think the government should do their share. Toronto harbour is one of very great importance, practically the only harbour of refuge and shelter on the north side of Lake Ontario the whole way up. It is not only a matter of local interest, but of provincial interest. Toronto harbour is just as much a government harbour as that of Quebec or Halifax. The shipping is very extensive, and we think the city is entitled to more consideration than the government has given it, or than these estimates provide for. We hope that in the supplementaries some provision will be made for dredging the harbour proper. It is a work that must be done sooner or later.

Mr. BRODEUR. As regards the treatment of Toronto harbour, I do not think the hon. gentleman has any reason to blame the government. If I were to make a comparison between Toronto harbour and Montreal harbour—I do not see any appropriation for Montreal, but there is an appropriation of $88,000 voted this year for Toronto harbour.

Mr. A. C. MACDONELL. Does the minister consider the freight sheds recently erected in Montreal harbour ?

Mr. BRODEUR. They are not erected by this government, but by the city of Montreal, the government is not paying a cent for these sheds and all these improvements. But some years ago the government built a wharf down the river at a cost of $500,000 or $600,000.

Wiarton—dredging, $9,000.

Mr. BLAND. Where is the dredging to take place in that harbour ?

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to dredge the harbour to a depth of 16 feet at low water between the town dock and the breakwater.

Mr. BLAND. Will the minister inform me whether any dredging is to be done at the new cement works that have been started there ?

Mr. BRODEUR. That is not contemplated now.

Mr. BARR. Who has the contract for dredging ?

Mr. BRODEUR. E. F. Bowman.

Lake Dauphin—lowering of, $2,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is called for by the resident engineer in Manitoba for the use of commerce, and for clearing the bed of the river of boulders, gravel, &c., below the entrance.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. How much has been spent on that work altogether ?

Mr. BRODEUR. From confederation to date the total amount spent there is $32,000.

Mr. STAPLES. When was this work begun ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Four or five years ago.

Mr. STAPLES. I understand that a petition has been sent down asking for some other improvements on Fairford river.

Mr. BRODEUR. The deputy minister does not remember having received a petition.

Mr. STAPLES. I think it would be well to know the nature of that petition before this item is passed. I would like to have the item stand over.

Mr. BRODEUR. The petition has no connection with the Fairford river.

Mr. STAPLES. I think it has a good deal to do with the place where this dredge is working and the railway.

Mr. BRODEUR. There will be something in the supplementary estimates for further improvements in Manitoba, and we will then have the information.

Mr. BURROWS. I am perhaps more familiar with this locality than the minister. Unfortunately there is only one dredge that has been employed on Lake Manitoba for the last four years, on different parts of the lake, principally at the Fairford river. The whole of Lake Manitoba is in my district, and I am confronted with this difficulty, that there is only one dredge on the lake, although dredging requires to be done at different points. I have been pressing the department myself to have works undertaken in other places. My hon. friend from Macdonald is interested in Oak Point, but the difficulty is that the department has not sufficient equipment to do all this work at one time. I do not think the work at Oak Point is as necessary as it is at certain other places on the lake, but I can quite understand the hon. gentleman raising the objection he does, because this is in his own constituency. While I am on my feet I just wish to ask the hon. acting Minister of Public Works to see that the dredging work which has been started on Lake Manitoba is continued as vigorously as possible, because it is beyond the power of one dredge to carry out all the work that is needed at the present time. The difficulty is that each locality asks that its work shall be done first.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Was there not a new dredge purchased a year or two ago ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes; there was a dredge purchased, but it was purchased more than two years ago. I may say in regard to what my hon. friend (Mr. Burrows) has said, that the department is considering now the question of providing further equipment for Lake Manitoba. I do not think it can be done this year, but the government is seriously considering the question.

Mr. STAPLES. I had occasion last fall to go up to Lake St. Francis, and there was a dredge working there a mile or two from Lake Manitoba. It was landed there last winter.

Mr. BURROWS. That was on Lake St. Francis ?

Mr. STAPLES. It was only a short distance from St. Laurent. I know that the people sent a petition to the government.

Mr. BRODEUR. When ?

Mr. STAPLES. Since this session began. That petition is in connection with this particular piece of work that I spoke of. I might also ask the hon. acting Minister of Public Works what has been done re certain claims that the people are making up there for damages occasioned to certain property by work done by the department ? I have received several letters from Mr. M. J. Mulverhill asking for compensation in connection with this particular piece of work.

Mr. BRODEUR. The deputy minister is not very sure, but he thinks these claims for damages have been referred to the engineer for consideration and report.

Mr. STAPLES. I know they have been referred to the engineer several times, but still the claim is being made.

Mr. BRODEUR. The chief engineer informs me that he is now considering the question of these claims.

Mr. STAPLES. When may I expect an answer as to what is going to be done ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Probably when the supplementary estimates are brought down he will have completed his report, and the minister will be in a position to give the hon. gentleman the information.

Mr. TAYLOR. And when the supplementary estimates come down the hon. gentleman will be able to give some information about the petition ?

Mr. BRODEUR. These claims are now engaging the attention of the chief engineer and the department, and we will probably be in a position when the supplementary estimates come down to give the necessary information and findings.

Mr. INGRAM. Have the department purchased a tug in connection with this work yet ? Representations have been made, I understand, that it was necessary to have a staunch tug to handle this dredge.

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes; we have purchased a tug.

Mr. INGRAM. Where was it built, and from whom was it purchased ?

Mr. BRODEUR.

Mr. BURROWS. The tug which was bought by the government was one which had been used on Lake Manitoba for a series of years, a tug called the 'Carberry,' and operated by the quarry company. This quarry company went out of existence and they sold the tug, I think, at a cheap rate to the government. The government bought the tug instead of building a new one.

Mr. INGRAM. For what price ?

Mr. BURROWS. I could not say the price.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed the price was $9,500.

Mr. INGRAM. Then it must have been a pretty staunch tug.

Mr. BURROWS. It is a good tug.

Lake Dauphin—lowering of, $2,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is a revote.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. This is an item that has appeared for several years. Has there been any expenditure thus far ; and if so, how much ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes ; in 1902-3 there was an expenditure of $470, and, in 1903-4, an expenditure of $224.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE. Has the government received any letters or petitions protesting against the damage resulting to the settlers in that neighbourhood because of this work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The officers are not aware of any complaints.

Lake St. Francis outlet—construction of guide piers and dredging, $6,800.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is asked to provide for the dredging of the channel through the basin excavated at the inner end of Lake St. Francis outlet.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is it under contract ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; it is being done by the government dredge.

Mr. INGRAM. Is this the same dredge ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Quarry channel at Narrows, Lake Manitoba—dredging approach to landing and harbour, $1,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for improving the approach to the landing and harbour of Quarry Channel, at the Narrows, Lake Manitoba.

Mr. TAYLOR. Has there been any expenditure ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The resident engineer states that owing to the fact that the dredge 'Manitoba' was fully employed on Lake St. Francis, it was found impossible to touch the work at Quarry Channel during the first six months of the fiscal year, nor can it be done during the remainder of the fiscal year.

Selkirk—extension of wharf, $1,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is called for by the resident engineer to provide for repairs.

Mr. INGRAM. There has been some money expended on this already ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes ; we built the wharf, and there has been an expenditure of some $17,713.

Mr. TAYLOR. By contract ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; these are repairs.

Mr. INGRAM. By day's work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Wharf on Lake Winnipeg at Gimli—repairs, $5,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. They are not very high.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the total estimated cost of this ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It will require about $10,000 more.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the total cost ?

Mr. BRODEUR. This is expected to complete the work.

Columbia river below Revelstoke—improvement of navigation to Arrow Head, $5,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to improve the Columbia river where it enters Arrow Head lake by constructing a wing dam. The object is to confine the waters to a narrow channel in order to give sufficient strength of current to remove the silt at the foot of the island and allow logs to pass at any state of the water. It is done by day labour.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there an inspector on the work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There is a local inspector.

Mr. BLAIN. What is he paid ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I think we pay $125 per month.

Mr. MACPHERSON. It is for the accommodation of the farmers along there.

North Thompson river—improvements, $5,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is for the removal of obstructions to navigation in the river.

Mr. BLAIN. Is this a new work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No. We had a vote last year of $5,000, which was expended.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is the river navigable ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the traffic on that river ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There are now two steamboats plying on both branches of the river.

Salmon river—removal of driftwood and other obstructions, $1,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to complete the work ?

Mr. HENDERSON. This is not for the purpose of promoting navigation, but rather for the purpose of enabling mill owners to float logs. Is that the usual policy of the government ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes. Not only navigable rivers, but other rivers are under the control of the federal parliament. It has been the policy of the department for many years to do this kind of work in British Columbia, and also in Quebec.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think some of the men engaged in the lumber business in Nova Scotia will be glad to know of that policy, because they have been doing this work themselves at their own expense.

Mr. HENDERSON. Some of the lumbermen of Ontario will also be glad to know that they can have the rivers cleaned out for them, so that they can float their logs down.

Victoria harbour—dredging and removal of rocks, &c., $25,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is required for continuing the work of deepening the inner harbour to a uniform depth of 17 feet.

Mr. BLAIN. Is this done by contract ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, by the government dredge.

Mr. BLAIN. What does it cost per day to operate a dredge in British Columbia ?

Mr. BRODEUR. About $125.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the total cost of this work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The total amount expended in the harbour so far has been $330,000. This is simply to carry on the dredging of the harbour which is required every year.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is this to continue for ever ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We shall have to continue it for several years to come.

Mr. BLAIN. Does any of the removed material come back or is new material removed every year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. New material is removed every year.

Williams Head quarantine station—improvements, $10,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is required to complete the renewal of 7½ miles of service pipe. 4½ miles of it is already placed. This is done by day's work.

Harbours and rivers—generally, $8,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is the usual vote. The amount expended last year was $8,547.

Dredging—dredge vessel repairs, $75,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make provision for defraying the cost of the general repairs required to all machinery, dredges, tugs, scows and barges of the government in the different provinces in the Dominion, namely : the maritime provinces, $25,000 ; Quebec and Ontario, $29,800 ; Manitoba, $7,000 ; British Columbia, $10,000 ; and unforeseen expenses, $2,800.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the life of a dredge that works every year ?

Mr BRODEUR. We have a dredge in British Columbia which has been in existence about twenty years. It is getting old, but it is still giving good service.

Mr. BLAIN. How much would be expended on it every year for repairs ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I have no figures of the cost of the repairs for each dredge.

New dredge and scows for Prince Edward Island, $40,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Give us some information on this.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make provision for the construction of a steel dredge that will carry a two-cubic yards steel dipper hoisted by a single wire rope from the main engine, and will be able to dredge from 6 feet to 28 feet deep. It is intended to work in both fresh and salt water. It has been made by contract, the amount of the contract being $49,550.

New dredging plant—Ontario and Quebec, $65,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is to provide new dredging plant in Ontario and Quebec called for by the chief acting engineer, namely: New dredge to replace the dredge 'Challenge'; new hull for dredges No. 6 and 'Nipissing'; new tug for dredge 'Nipissing,' new tug; new hull and boiler for tug 'Sensation'; two sets of swinging engines; two pull backs; new locomotive boiler, and unforeseen expenses.

Mr. HENDERSON. Why were those new scows and other implements required? What became of the former ones?

Mr. BRODEUR. The former ones were too old.

New dredging plant—Manitoba, including self-propelling snag boat.. .. ..$10,000
New tug for dredge, Manitoba.. 10,500
$20,500

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for the construction and purchase of the following new dredging plant to be operated in the province of Manitoba namely: A properly equipped self-propelling snag boat for work in Assiniboine and Red rivers; a staunch tug to accompany the newly acquired dipper dredge in Manitoba, which is operating on the lake of the same name.

Mr. INGRAM. How much is that to cost?

Mr. BRODEUR. The estimated cost is $25,500.

Mr. INGRAM. Will that mean any additional boats?

Mr. BRODEUR. A tug and snag boat.

Mr. INGRAM. Who made the boats?

Mr. BRODEUR. They are not made yet.

Mr. HENDERSON. Why not ask for sufficient money at once?

Mr. BRODEUR. The contract for the snag boat has been given to the Polson Iron Works, and the chief engineer thinks the price is $29,000. The contract has been given since the estimates were prepared.

Mr. HENDERSON. How are you going to pay for all this plant when you only ask $25,500?

Mr. BRODEUR. There was money voted last year.

Mr. HENDERSON. Has any portion been paid?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, we pay only on delivery.

Mr. HENDERSON. That vote will lapse the 1st July.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is provided in the contract that some amounts may be paid on progress estimates, and a part of the estimate for the current year will be paid.

Mr. BARKER. Provided some work be done?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

New dredging plant—British Columbia, including new snag boat to replace 'Sampson,' and new dredge to replace 'Mudlark,' also an additional dipper dredge, &c., $150,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make special provision for the following dredging plant urgently needed in British Columbia. Amount of contract for the construction of a new snag boat to replace the old worn out 'Sampson,' $22,500; amount of contract for the construction of a tug with steel hull to attend the dredge to be built to replace the dilapidated worn out 'Mudlark,' $24,750; two new dredges, one hydraulic, $120,000 and one dipper, $70,000; four new hopper scows, 300 cubic yards capacity, $32,000; new snag boat for Skeena river, $25,000; to cover unforeseen expenses, inspection, &c., $5,750.

Mr. TAYLOR. Who is building this plant?

Mr. BRODEUR. William Turpin of Victoria is building the two first items under contract.

New dredging plant generally, $150,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is proposed to apply during the fiscal year this money in the construction of new plant urgently needed to meet the exigencies of the government dredging service throughout the Dominion.

Mr. WILMOT. With regard to the new dredging done, I would like to refer to the dredging being done in the harbour of St. John. I understand it requires a special dredge and would like to know what kind of a dredge is required.

Mr. BRODEUR. There is nothing decided as to that yet, but the matter is under consideration.

Dredging—Maritime provinces, $155,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is required to operate during the fiscal year the government dredging plant of the maritime provinces, namely, the 'St. Lawrence,' the 'Canada,' the 'New Dominion,' the 'Prince Edward,' the 'George McKenzie,' the 'Cape Breton,' the 'New Brunswick,' tug 'Critic,' tug 'Roma,' 'W. S. Fielding,' new sand pump dredge, hire of tugs for long tows, &c.

Dredging—Quebec and Ontario, $150,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for the working expenses of the dredging plant and stone lifters, the property of the Dominion government, and operated by the Department of Public Works, and to pay for work to be done by dredging plant owned by private individuals. Working expenses of dredge 'International,' tugs and scows; dredges 'Progress,' 'No. 6,' 'Challenge,' Nipissing,' 'Lake Nipissing,' 'Ontario,' 'Queen,' 'St. Louis,' 'Richelieu,' 'Sir Richard,' 'Nithsdale,' tugs 'Montmorency' and 'Nora.'

Dredging—Manitoba, $20,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to cover working expenses of the dredge 'Winnipeg,' tug 'Sir Hector,' dredge 'Manitoba' and other attendant vessels employed in Manitoba, especially in the Red river at the mouth of Lake Winnipeg, and also dredging required on Lake Manitoba.

Dredging—British Columbia, $40,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is required to provide for working expenses of the dredging plant owned by the department in British Columbia which consists of the dredge 'King Edward,' the snag boat 'Sampson' and dredge 'Mudlark,' the tug 'Princess' and the dredge 'Nakusp' with attendant vessels.

St. Maurice district—improvements to boom works to facilitate the floating and storage of logs, &c., $40,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for heavy repairs, improvements and new works required, in addition to ordinary repairs provided under the head of maintenance, so as to establish facilities for the descent of timber on the St. Maurice, required by the extensive pulp mills and other large manufacturing establishments.

Mr. HENDERSON. We were informed by the right hon. the First Minister the other night that he thought the time was close at hand when the employment of cullers by the government to measure timber could be dispensed with. It seems to me this is a kindred question. I think the time has arrived when our lumbermen who are engaged in a profitable business, could do without this increased expenditure from year to year by the government in the way of improving facilities for the purpose of floating and storing their logs. We might as well pass votes to furnish horses and ploughs for farmers to do their work as to furnish booms and slides for a lumberman to get his logs down. I do not see the difference; I think there is as much in one case as in another.

Mr. LANCASTER. He is a richer man.

Mr. HENDERSON. Possibly as my hon. friend suggests the lumberman is a rich man, a man of wealth and influence and in that way he can command a little more attention, but it does seem to me that the government are simply adopting the policy that was adopted 30 or 40 years ago when the lumbering industry was not so profitable as it is to-day. There was a time when it was necessary for the government to do something to aid in getting out timber and logs, but now that logs and timber are practically worth five times as much as they were 25 years ago, perhaps more than that, I will undertake to say more than five times as much, and it does not cost any more to take a log down the river, I do not see why we should continue to foster this infant industry. It is a species of protection to which I would think the minister would object very much. He is opposed to granting a little protection to a man engaged in manufacturing the wool produced on Canadian farms; he insists on opening the door and allowing foreign blankets to come in and monopolize the markets of this country. He has no regard for the farmer who wants to sell his wool, but when a poor lumberman whose product has increased in value five times what it was 25 or 30 years ago, wants a river cleaned out, or booms and slides prepared, he is ready to bring down his estimate for $40,000 on a single river in order to allow a poor lumberman to get his logs out. There is a great deal about this that will not bear inspection, and a great deal that will bear very strong criticism. I must protest against this and I hope the minister will take it into consideration and see if it is a vote that the government can really justify. I assume they have put it into the estimates without much serious consideration simply because there was a similar vote last year and the year before, without considering the changed conditions in the country. We are told it is a growing time, values have increased, and lumber has become worth five times as much as before without increased cost of production, but the government have gone on increasing the assistance to the rich lumberman when he has actually made his fortune out of the increased price of the timber. I think instead of putting slides and booms in we ought to put a duty on timber so that the government could recoup the country for what they have expended in bygone years in the construction of slides and booms. This is one instances where the finances of the country can be served and guarded. It is a vote for which I can see no use and is one of those things that get into the estimates and remain there, I fear, without due consideration or thought as to their necessity.

Mr. BRODEUR. If I may rely upon the information given to me by the chief engineer I do not think this is a bad investment because we have just received a report to the effect that the slides and booms on the River St. Maurice are giving 3 per cent on the money invested. These investments have been made many years ago and my friend perhaps thought no revenue accrued to the government. There is no money expended properly speaking, because the money was invested many years ago, and now gives a revenue of 3 per cent. I do not think he can complain. If we left the works there the lumbermen might not keep them up and we would lose our money.

Mr. HENDERSON. Would the minister give a statement of the money expended in the St. Maurice district in the construction of slides and booms since confederation? I doubt very much if we are getting 3 per cent on the investment or even one-third of one per cent.

Mr. BRODEUR. These works were begun in 1851, and for keeping in repairs and for construction from 1851 to June 30, 1867, they cost $269,000, and for staff and repairs from 1855 to 1867, $118,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. From 1867?

Mr. BRODEUR. The total construction was $1,430,850.

Mr. HENDERSON. What revenue did you derive from them last year?

Mr. BRODEUR. The gross revenue so far has been $458,015.50. We received last year 1902-3 $29,232 and the estimated revenue for the next year will be $42,000.

Mr. KENNEDY. I think that the hon. member for Halton has been making wild statements. I understood him to say that lumber is worth five times what it was a few years ago.

Mr. HENDERSON. My hon. friend, I think from Cape Breton (Mr. Johnston), was making a wise statement; I did not catch it.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. I would not mind characterizing it as a wild statement.

Mr. HENDERSON. I said a wise statement. What did the hon. gentleman understand me to say, because I think he did not repeat me correctly?

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. My hon. friend beside me (Mr. Kennedy) understood you to say that lumber had increased in value five times in recent years.

Mr. HENDERSON. The hon. gentleman did not quote my words, I made no such statement as that.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. I did not say you did.

Mr. HENDERSON. I said 25 or 30 years ago, and I will undertake to say there is a great deal of lumber worth to-day five times as much.

Mr. KENNEDY. I have been 37 years in business, and the price of lumber has never increased to that extent.

Mr. HENDERSON. The hon. gentleman may be correct, where he lives, I am speaking of Ontario and Quebec. I am satisfied that in the province of Ontario, 25 or 30 years ago, you could buy good lumber for about one-fifth of what you pay for it to-day. Lumber which was practically unsaleable then brings a good price now. I think my statement was not far afield. It may be that in British Columbia where they had no facilities 30 years ago for cutting lumber except the old fashioned whip-saw, lumber was costly; but now, with their large mills and improved machinery, the cost has been much reduced. Now, let us see whether we are getting three per cent on this money because I want to see how profitable this investment is, and whether the government ought not to consider the propriety of changing their policy. Has the minister made a calculation as to how much three per cent on $1,430,850 would amount to?

Mr. BRODEUR. I have not made the calculation.

Mr. HENDERSON. He will hardly find he is getting three per cent on the money.

Mr. BRODEUR. If we get $42,000 next year, it will be three per cent.

Mr. HENDERSON. You only got $29,332 last year. Is there going to be a bigger run of logs? Bear in mind that the capital is being increased. I am merely inquiring whether we are making a profitable investment of the people's money. I think honestly that we are not bound to keep up those works to the extent that we have been doing in the past.

Mr. BRODEUR. But what can we do with those works?

Mr. HENDERSON. Allow somebody else to keep them up.

Mr. BRODEUR. No one else will keep them up.

Mr. HENDERSON. Then they are not required. Why should we keep up expensive works that even those engaged in the lumber industry do not require? I leave the matter to the minister and his colleagues to consider seriously.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it not a fact that you lose money by reason of some people not paying their dues?

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not think so. I am informed by the deputy that some years ago we lost money, but now the department is more strict in collecting the dues.

Some resolutions reported.

ADJOURNMENT—AUTONOMY BILL AMENDMENT.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. MONK. I would like to give notice that when the House goes again into Committee of the Whole on Bill (No. 69) I will move as an addition to clause 2 of the Bill, the following paragraph :

Either the English or the French language may be used by any person in the debates of the legislative assembly of the province and in the proceedings of the courts, and both these languages shall be used in the records and journals of such assembly, and all laws made by the legislature shall be printed in both languages : provided, however, that the said legislative assembly may by law or otherwise regulate its proceedings and the manner of recording and publishing the same and the regulations so made shall be embodied in a proclamation which shall be forthwith made and published by the Lieutenant Governor in conformity of the law and thereafter shall have full force and effect.

What business will be taken up to-morrow ?

Mr. FIELDING. We will proceed with the estimates of the Public Works Department, to be followed by those of the Interior if time permits.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.05 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, June 16, 1905.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We are not ready to go on with the estimates for a few moments, and in the meantime we will take some Bills.

Progress reported.

INSPECTION AND SALE OF SEEDS.

Consideration of amendments made by the Senate to Bill (No. 7) respecting the inspection and sale of seeds.—Mr. Fisher.

Mr. FISHER. These amendments are merely verbal. The first one is that before 'ergot of rye' the words are inserted 'and from the sclerotia known as'; the second amendment is to leave out the word 'screenings' and insert the words 'not absolutely clean.'

Amendments read the first and second times, and agreed to.

GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS ACT—AMENDMENT.

House in committee on Bill (No. 132) to amend the Government Railways Act.—Mr. Emmerson.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What Bill is this ?

Mr. MONK.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is the amendment to the Railway Act which provides running rights for the Intercolonial Railway over the Grand Trunk Railway from Montreal to Coteau, and over the Canada Atlantic Railway from Coteau junction to Parry Sound.

When this Bill was up for consideration before, it was suggested that possibly a claim might be made against the government for the right that we are now taking to run over the Canada Atlantic, without reference to the fact whether we used that right or not. It was suggested that that point ought to be made absolutely clear. I therefore move to reconsider section 5, and to amend it by adding the following proviso :

Provided that no compensation shall be payable for such running powers unless and until the same are actually exercised, and then only for such exercise.

Mr. BARKER. I would suggest the words 'so far as they may be excused' instead of the words 'for such exercise.'

Amendment agreed to, and Bill reported as amended.

Mr. FITZPATRICK moved the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think the amendment which has been moved by the Minister of Justice answers the objections which were raised on this side of the House.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That was the intention.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think it does fully answer the purpose, and that the amendment is an important one.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the third time and passed.

SUPPLY.

Mr. FIELDING moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The Minister of Justice mentioned the other evening on the motion to adjourn that he proposed to make some statement with regard to the Kentville rifle range. I do not think that has yet been made.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I thought I ought to wait for the hon. member for Victoria and Haliburton (Mr. Sam. Hughes) and the Minister of Militia to be present, because I want to refer to the matter from the point of view of the Department of Justice.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Perhaps the Minister of Justice would have no objection to sending me a copy of his statement if it is prepared.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Not at all.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Ottawa city—bridges over the Rideau river, the slides and the Rideau canal and approaches thereto—ordinary repairs, $7,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is to provide for the usual necessary repairs to the bridges of the city of Ottawa and the approaches thereto, the maintenance of which was assumed by the government under authority of an Order in Council passed in 1885. This is the usual sum.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What are the bridges?

Mr. BRODEUR. The union bridge between Ottawa and Hull, the bridge over the timber slides at the Chaudiere, the Maria street bridge, Sapper's bridge, the Dufferin bridge and approaches thereto, and the maintenance of Wellington street between Bank and the Dufferin bridge.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. What is the nature of the repairs?

Mr. BRODEUR. The ordinary maintenance of these bridges.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How much was spent last year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $7,101.37; divided as follows : Chaudiere bridges, $2,553.53 ; St. Patrick streeet, $60.48; Wellington street, Dufferin and Sapper's bridges, $4,783.43 ; hardware, stone, lumber and cement, $253.93

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. One would suppose that after the bridges were put in thoroughly first-class condition, so large an amount would not be necessary yearly for repairs. I am speaking, of course, without any special knowledge of the subject, but merely from the impression I would have with respect to such a matter.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed by the officers of the department that this is generally the sum that has to be expended every year on these works.

Ottawa city—Dufferin and Sapper's bridges over the Rideau canal, Hull slides and Union bridge and roadway approaches, repairs, additions, &c., $11,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is asked to make provision for continuing the works of alteration and addition to Dufferin and Sapper's bridges, the roadway, approaches, and sidewalks, the estimate being submitted by the chief engineer. The amount expended last year was $7,000.

Bryson bridge—reconstruction of bridge and approaches, $15,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is towards the work of reconstruction and repairs of bridge over the North Channel of the Ottawa. The work will be done on condition that the Quebec government and the municipalities interested will maintain the bridge at their sole expense.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is that agreement expressed in some document or is it a mere understanding ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The work will not be let unless the municipalities and the provincial government undertake to maintain it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It would be desirable to have that agreement expressed formally in a document or communication, so that there will be no question hereafter as to the obligation.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is the intention. Nothing will be done unless that agreement is made.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Is the government responsible for the repairs of all these bridges should any accident occur ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, that is not the policy of the department.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But it might be the policy of the courts.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed that the question has been before the courts and that the position taken by the department was sustained.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The government is liable by statute for the negligence of its employees on a public work. The question would be whether this is a public work in the meaning of the statute. That statute has not been repealed, so far as I am aware.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It was decided three years ago in the case of McHugh and the Queen.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does that depart from any previous line or decision ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No.

Mr. HENDERSON. What bridge in the vicinity of Ottawa is known as the Aberdeen bridge ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is the bridge under the control of the Improvement Commission and not under the government. I think it is the bridge which goes to Rideau Hall. There are three of these bridges, and one of them is called the Aberdeen bridge.

Mr. HENDERSON. I understood that this bridge is not properly lighted and is a menace to the travelling public. As a contributor to the Ottawa Improvement Commission, could not the government bring some pressure upon that commission to cause the bridge to be properly lighted. Perhaps I was mistaken in speaking of the Aberdeen bridge. The bridge I mean is the Alexandra bridge.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is a Canadian Pacific Railway bridge. It was built by a private corporation which was operating the Ottawa, Gatineau and Pontiac Railway and the Pacific Junction Railway. Afterwards those two roads and the bridge itself were transferred to the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. HENDERSON. The bridge I refer to is the bridge from Nepean Point, which was constructed by a private corporation, but to the cost of which the parliament of Canada contributed very considerably, and I think also the city of Ottawa. Could the government not urge the people in charge to make that bridge perfectly safe by having it properly lighted ?

Mr. BRODEUR. This is a matter which does not pertain to the government at all, because it is entirely under the control of the Canadian Pacific Railway, subject to the regulations of the Railway Commission.

Mr. HENDERSON. But it is not purely a railway bridge. It has carriage drives and walks for pedestrians, so that the railway practically does not make use of the entire bridge. It is for the protection of pedestrians and others, who have occasion to cross during the night, that I appeal for better lighting ; and as the government has put a very large sum into that bridge, it should have some control, if not over the railway portion of the bridge at least over the portion which accommodates the general public. The government is sufficiently interested to ask those in charge to have it properly lighted and made suitable for the purposes for which the government intended it when it granted a large sum of money in aid of its construction.

Mr. BRODEUR. The bridge is not at all under the control of the government. The government voted the usual subsidy for its construction, but the accommodation for pedestrians and vehicles was one of the conditions exacted by the city of Ottawa, and it would be for the city of Ottawa to see that the pedestrian and carriage ways are properly lighted. I have no objection, however, to present to the Canadian Pacific Railway authorities the criticism of my hon. friend.

Battle river bridge at Battleford—new concrete substructure and protection of approaches with close piling, $13,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for the reconstruction of the new southern abutment. The work is under contract. The amount of the contract for placing the bridge in serviceable condition is $38,426, and we add 10 per cent, or say $4,574 for superintendence and contingencies, making a total of $43,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is this an old bridge that you are re-modelling, or are you erecting a new concrete substructure ?

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to replace the old, decayed timber with concrete.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is it the repair of an old bridge, or the demolition of a bridge and the construction of a new one ?

Mr. BRODEUR.

Mr. BRODEUR. The demolition of the existing substructure and replacing it with a concrete substructure.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The contract has been let ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, to John Foley, of Ottawa, after tenders publicly called for.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is it intended that this bridge shall be maintained by the Dominion, or will it pass into the control of one of the new provinces ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is intended that the new province in which it is situated shall maintain the bridge.

Mr. BERGERON. I often hear it stated, in the course of ministerial explanations in supply, that a certain work is under contract for a certain amount and 10 per cent is added, apparently for supervision. What does that mean ?

Mr. BRODEUR. When a work is decided upon, an estimate is made of the cost, an allowance of 10 per cent being made for superintendence and contingencies. Then tenders are called for. In this particular case the tenders had been called for and a contract has been made, and the 10 per cent for superintendence and contingencies is calculated on the contract price. But this 10 per cent does not form part of the contract ;—it is work to be done by the department in seeing to it that the work of the contractor is properly carried on. This is not paid for by the contractor but by the department.

Mr. BERGERON. So, when a contract is for $40,000, that means that the public must pay $44,000 ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Do contingencies and superintendence really cost 10 per cent ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Not always, but that is added in order that there may be enough to carry on the work.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. In public buildings constructed by the Department of Public Works is the same allowance made ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I understand that private individuals get this work done for 5 per cent, including preparation of the plans and supervision of the work.

Mr. BRODEUR. In these public works the item of contingencies and superintendence usually costs less than 10 per cent, but my hon. friend (Mr. Uriah Wilson) will see that it is better to estimate 10 per cent than to be obliged to come back to parliament for a vote of a few dollars to make up for a short estimate.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. But I do not see why this item should cost double in the case of a public work than what is costs in the case of a work done for private parties. And I should think that large public works should cost a smaller percentage for superintendence and contingencies than a smaller works do. I should think it would be better for the department to estimate nearer the actual cost and not ask parliament for more money than is necessary. I know of one building for which the architect asked only 5 per cent for drawing plans and looking after the work. And in another case the charge was only 2½ per cent.

Mr. BRODEUR. I cannot dispute the facts within my hon. friend's (Mr. Uriah Wilson's) knowledge. But I will call his attention to the fact that the fees ordinarily charged by architects in the supervision of works is 7½ per cent.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. For drawing the plans ?

Mr. BRODEUR. For drawing the plans, making specifications and supervising the work. But this does not include travelling expenses for such a work as this, and 2½ per cent does not seem to be excessive to provide for that, especially when the work is at some distance from the home of the resident engineer.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. My information is that 5 per cent is the ordinary charge made by architects for this work of making plans and supervising work, and I should think that for a great public work, the percentage should be even less. I can understand that something would depend upon where the work is to be done, as it would be more difficult to oversee works at a distance. But, as I understand it, the Public Works Department have on every job of this kind a clerk of works, an officer who seems to be an ornamental addition to the staff. A public building was constructed in a riding near my own, and the clerk of works got $1,500 for overseeing, and there was an architect besides. This, it seems to me, is a sheer waste of money and ought not to be continued.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I had not supposed that the ordinary fee of an architect was so large as the minister states. I have not had very much experience, but I was under the impression that the fee for supervision, including the preparation of plans, was not more than 5 per cent.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed that it is 7½ per cent, for drawing the plans, making the specifications and supervising the work—that is the ordinary tariff.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Has it always been so high ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The deputy minister informs me that Mr. Ewart, the chief architect has always told him that it was 7½ per cent—that is, 2½ per cent for supervision and 5 per cent for drawing the plans and making specifications.

Mr. BARKER. I have had something to do with works within a few years and have never known more than 5 per cent to be charged by an architect for preparing plans and specifications, and supervision; and it is very frequently done at 4 per cent, though I admit that 5 per cent is the usual charge. I know that in general specifications it is quite usual to allow 10 per cent for architect's work and contingencies, that is, to cover any possible errors and oversight; but I never knew that more than 5 per cent was taken from an architect's fees.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Has the board of works not an architect in the department who is capable of undertaking this work ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There are officers in the department here, but they are not supposed to go and attend to the execution of the work itself. In the case under consideration, for instance, it would be impossible to send a man from here to Battleford to supervise the work.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I understand that the architect's fees on the public library being erected in Ottawa are 5 per cent for plans and superintendence, 2½ per cent for the preparation of the plans, and 2½ per cent for superintendence. I am so informed, I have no personal knowledge. If that is so, it is certainly not in accordance with what is understood to be the practice of the department, and it might be worth while for the minister to make some inquiries and find out whether or not there is some misapprehension.

Mr. BRODEUR. There is no doubt that 5 per cent is charged in some cases. Doctors charge some people higher than they do others, and the same with lawyers. But I was speaking of the tariff of fees charged by architects, which I am informed, is 7½ per cent. But I will call the minister's attention to that.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Is it the custom of the department to have a clerk of works, and a local architect besides to supervise the erection of public buildings ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There is a resident engineer who is supposed to look after the execution of a work; besides, there is a local inspector who is there every day. The resident engineer has a certain district under his supervision in which he has to look over the construction of all public works. But we have to employ the services of a local inspector in each place.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. In this case, I presume, it is the local official of the department who has a certain district, to look after. But is it not the custom to have a local architect as well ? I have a case in my mind where there was a local architect and a clerk of works, and I fail to see the need of a clerk of works there at all. The local architect is paid to look after it, and he should suffice if he gives proper attention to his duties. I am afraid that the government take advantage of these occasions to give local friends a job.

Mr. BRODEUR. According to my information, the department finds it necessary to have a resident engineer to direct the work generally. He has under his charge all the works in his district, possibly ten or twenty. Besides, he has occasionally to draw plans and make reports to the department. Moreover, we require to have on the ground a man to supervise the work from day to day.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. It seems I have not made myself clear to the minister. The gentleman he is talking about has a certain district to look after. I asked if there was a local architect in each place to look after a building in course of erection, besides the clerk of works.

Mr. BRODEUR. No, we have no local architect in each place.

Mr. BERGERON. Who is the resident engineer at Battleford ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Mr. Paul Paradis, who lives at Calgary, 300 or 400 miles away. He has charge of all the public works in the Northwest Territories, including colonization roads.

Mr, BERGERON. How much do you pay this supervisor of works ?

Mr. BRODEUR. From $2.50 a day to $3, according to the local prices.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What qualifications has he ?

Mr. BRODEUR. He should be a competent man for the class of work he has to supervise.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Does the minister always succeed in getting men who know something about the business ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It sometimes happens that we do not obtain the most competent men.

Mr. BERGERON. Then do you have some one else to supervise the local officer, to see whether he does his work well ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The resident engineer. He goes and visits all these works occasionally, once a month or twice a month.

Mr. BERGERON. Is there not a danger that he may become too friendly with the contractor ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I suppose the law governs those cases.

Shellmouth bridge over Assiniboine river, $10,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for the erection of a new bridge at Shellmouth in the province of Manitoba. No work has been done yet, the plans are being prepared.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. This is an ordinary bridge over the river ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes. There is an old wooden bridge built in 1887, which is now in a dilapidated condition and beyond repair.

Mr. BERGERON. Should not that be done by the local government ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is an interprovincial bridge between the province of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories.

Dominion traffic bridges throughout Canada, including approaches, $5,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to know what these bridges are referred to in this item, whether in the Northwest Territories or elsewhere.

Mr. BRODEUR. The bridges under the control of the government in Ontario and Quebec are : Des Joachims bridge, Ottawa river ; Moisie Post Road, north shore St. Lawrence ; Ottawa, Maria street (Laurier) bridge ; Chaudière bridges ; Sappers' and Dufferin bridges ; Portage du Fort bridge, Ottawa river ; York bridge, Grand river. And in the Northwest Territories : Battleford bridge, Battle river ; Edmonton bridge, Saskatchewan river ; Calgary bridge, Bow river ; Lethbridge, Belly river; Macleod bridge, Old Man's river.

Mr. BARKER. What bridge have you on the Grand river ?

Mr. BRODEUR. At York.

Mr. BARKER. Why do you build across the Grand river ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I understand that the river was dammed at Dunnville by the Department of Railways and Canals. This bridge has been considered as being part of that work.

Mr. HERRON. What is the nature of the repairs on the Belly river bridge ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The department has no information that any repairs will be needed this year. I was simply giving the names of the bridges to which these sums can be applied in case of necessity.

Mr. HERRON. The three bridges referred to are all practically new steel bridges.

Mr. BRODEUR. They require some painting, and I think it is important that these steel bridges should be painted occasionally. This is to provide for any works that are needed.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I am still in the dark as to the principles governing the action of the government in this matter—what streams shall be built over by the government. I asked the policy of the government in reference to this the other night, and the best answer that I got was their predecessors used to do it. I think there ought to be some definite policy as to what rivers you should build over and for what reasons. It certainly is not because they are navigable rivers, because I know navigable rivers over which the municipalities have to maintain the bridges. I cannot understand why in certain localities you build bridges and in others you do not.

Mr. BRODEUR. These are interprovincial bridges and bridges in the Northwest Territories.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I refer to ones that are not interprovincial.

Mr. BRODEUR. In some cases these rivers are under the control of the Dominion government.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Are not all navigable streams under the control of the Dominion government?

Mr. BRODEUR. The municipalities have a certain control over rivers which are entirely in one province, but when we come to build them over interprovincial rivers the rule is different.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I suppose if there has been any system in the past it is that the Dominion government build interprovincial bridges, and besides that has constructed bridges in the Northwest Territories, because there is not a sufficient sum placed at the disposal of the territorial government for that purpose. These bridges were built by the Dominion government because that portion of the country was in a territorial condition. There will be a modification of that no doubt now that the new provinces are established. My friend (Mr. Uriah Wilson) desires to know whether, apart from these two principles upon which the government has been proceeding, any other bridges have been constructed partly or wholly by the government; and if so, on what principle the government has acted in assisting in the building of any bridges that do not fall within the two categories to which I have referred.

Mr. BRODEUR. There are no other bridges except the ones I have mentioned in the Territories or those who are interprovincial. Besides these there might be some other bridges which are necessitated by works of the Dominion government, as the bridges over canals. These bridges have to be kept up by the Dominion government, because they have been necessitated by the work of the government.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I remember one instance that came within my own observation where the government had altered the course of a stream by works connected with the Rideau canal, making necessary a very much larger and more expensive bridge than would have been required if the stream had been left in its old position. Apart from that, is there any other principle?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Colonization roads—Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, $25,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is proposed to be used towards opening or improving colonization roads for the purpose of enabling settlers to take lands which they otherwise could not reach. A road is to be opened up and improved from a point near Sprague, on the southern boundary line of Manitoba, a few miles north on the line followed by incoming immigrants; one between Lake Manitoba and Lake Winnipeg; one from a point on the Prince Albert branch of the Canadian Northern Railway, west of Erwood; and one is to be constructed from the head of Lesser Slave lake to the Peace river. The latter is the most expensive. The total estimated cost of these works will be $25,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Why is not the usual practice carried out of handing the money over to the territorial government and allowing them to spend it? That is what the minister agreed to do last year, if I am not mistaken.

Mr. BRODEUR. The chief engineer does not remember such a promise being made. Take the case of Athabaska; I do not think the territorial government has jurisdiction over Athabaska. I think it is entirely under the control of the federal government.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Is it the intention of the government to continue building colonization roads in these Territories after they become provinces?

Mr. BRODEUR. Not after they are erected into provinces. Then they will have to padle their own canoe.

Mr. INGRAM. Last year the objection was that if the government has any money to expend in an improvement of this kind, they should hand the money over to the Northwest Territories government as they do with other moneys, and that was understood at that time.

Mr. HERRON. One of the bridges referred to in this estimate was built in the last two years by the Northwest government. The money is supplied from here to the Northwest government. That applies also to the bridge at Lethbridge, which, I suppose, comes under the same heading.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not know whether that would be advisable with respect to all of these, although, of course, there would be a change as soon as these provinces are erected. I do not know whether it would be advisable when the parliament votes money for a special work that this money should be spent by a body not under the control of this government. In my opinion, it would be very much better for this parliament to control the expenditure of its own money, especially when a particular work is mentioned in the vote, as in this case. In my opinion, it would be against the principle of responsible government should we hand this money over to be expended by a government over which this parliament has no control.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think there is any question of responsible government about it. Suppose you increased the provincial subsidy by $20,000 and let the province deal with its own roads, there would be no violation of any principle of responsible government. The minister says that when the new provinces have been established there will be no further grant for colonization roads, but if that be so, why is it that you apply part of this grant to the province of Manitoba? The difficulty is that the government by retaining control of the lands which ought to be the subject of provincial legislation, is led into expenditure of this kind. The building of colonization or other roads is a purely local work which ought to be carried on by the provincial government. If assistance is to be given it will be better to make a grant to the province for that purpose, because it seems beyond question that the provincial authorities would be in a better position to judge of the best mode in which to expend this money than would be the department at Ottawa. Is the minister still of opinion that aid to colonization roads in the Northwest Territories will cease after the new provinces are established, or will it be continued as in the case of Manitoba?

Mr. BRODEUR. The information in the notes before me shows that in the province of Manitoba two sums of $5,000 each were expended, and this expenditure was for preparing roads to enable immigrants to enter the country. It would seem that this expenditure was on account of promoting immigration, rather than for the purpose of building colonization roads in the general sense of the word.

Mr. HENDERSON. When we discussed this vote last year, my recollection is that the Minister of the Interior promised this side of the House, that so far as the province of Manitoba was concerned, any part of this money which was expended within the province would be handed over to the provincial government. It is the duty of the local government to provide roads and bridges within the province, and the Manitoba government would be in a far better position to see that even $5,000 was properly expended on roads than would this government at Ottawa, 1,500 miles away. Even if the expenditure is to assist immigrants to get into certain sections of the province, the provincial government is at least just as interested in that matter as this parliament could be. If we are going to construct colonization roads in Manitoba let the local government do the work and regulate the expenditure, and let the same thing be done in the case of the new provinces. I believe the minister would be perfectly justified in handing this money over to the province, especially as he has said that this vote is not to be continued after the new provinces are created.

Mr. BRODEUR. My own personal opinion is that it would not be advisable to give to a province the control of this expenditure.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. On their own roads.

Mr. BRODEUR. On our own roads. This money was expended for the special purpose of enabling us to sell Dominion lands, and why should we hand it over to the local governments over which this parliament has no control? For my part I do not agree in the view that we should hand money over to those who are not responsible to the Dominion parliament or to the people of the country. The provinces may be perfectly reliable, but they are not responsible to this parliament for the expenditures.

Mr. HENDERSON. Judging by the sarcastic smile which crosses the minister's face, he is not very strongly impressed with his own argument. Is there any reason to believe that the Manitoba government would make any more unwise expenditure of this money than they do of the large subsidy which we hand over to them or of any other moneys which they get for the purposes of government? Surely we can trust them with the expenditure of this small sum of money to improve their own roads. On what authority does this government go on to the highways of Manitoba and construct roads? That is a duty assigned to the provincial government, and I question if we have any constitutional right to expend money on the highways of Manitoba.

I am perfectly willing that the grant should be made, but it should be expended through the proper channel. The construction of colonization roads has been a standing grievance for a long time in the province of Ontario, and we all know there what it meant. It has been used for a great many years for election purposes, and I have no hesitation in saying that this grant of $5,000 is to be used along the same line. That was brought out in the debate last year. My impression is that there is more politics than construction of public roads in the whole grant, and that is a good reason why the work should be put into the hands of an honest government. I think the minister should divest himself of all suspicion of wrong-doing by agreeing to hand it over to the provincial government, whose duty it is to see that these roads are constructed and maintained; but, as we want to see that immigrants are provided with roads to go into these different sections, we might supplement the work of the provincial government with a grant of $5,000. Then we shall not have one set of men constructing one portion of a road and another set another portion. Who is going to maintain these roads after they are constructed? In years to come the Dominion government may stop this grant, and then what is to become of this road which was constructed and is practically owned by the Dominion government? Let the work be done by the provincial government, or by the municipal authorities under the control of the provincial government, who are interested, every man down to the pathmaster on the highway, in seeing that a dollar's worth of value is obtained for every dollar of expenditure. Men fifteen hundred miles away have not the same interest. I think all the arguments are in favour of handing the money over to the province of Manitoba, and letting the local authorities spend it.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. The proportion of the grant for Manitoba is about $5,000?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. That is a very meagre sum.

Mr. BRODEUR. One of these roads is to facilitate the travelling of settlers from Minnesota into Canada where it is now hard to travel. The road between Lake Winnipeg and Lake Manitoba is to enable settlers to get into that country. These are the only two sums required for Manitoba. I suppose the Manitoba government are looking after the roads in the province, but it is necessary to expend $5,000 for these two roads to carry out the immigration policy of the government.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I do not think the minister gave the true reason why this grant should be made. It is very clear that it should be made, if made at all, because we own the land. That shows the folly of continuing to hold the lands instead of handling them over to the provinces. We have to bring in immigration, and in order to do so, we have to make roads. If this is the policy of the government, we ought to control the roads everywhere. I think the proper course would have been to give the lands to the provinces and let them take care of them. I think the people of those provinces are as able to take care of the immigrants as we are. It looks as if you were spending a great deal too much money belonging to the Dominion of Canada, in view of the fact that the older provinces have not so much interest in keeping the lands and building the roads as in giving the lands to the provincial authorities to use them as they see fit.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Whose constituencies are on both sides of the roads which are being built?

Mr. BRODEUR. I could not tell.

Mr. HERRON. I would like to draw the attention of the minister to the fact that we have in the Northwest what is known as a bridge gang, consisting of an engineer and a gang of men who go all over the country repairing bridges. I think we would get very much better value for our money if we handed it over to the Northwest government to spend and to see that the bridges were properly repaired. That is the way to have the work done well and cheaply, as these men are on the ground. I would like the minister to take that into consideration.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What amount has been expended in Manitoba up to date for colonization roads by this government?

Mr. BRODEUR. The deputy thinks we have spent about $25,000.

Mr. INGRAM. This is an entirely new departure in the spending of money. Never until last year was this idea carried out.

Mr. BRODEUR. No, I think it has always been the policy of the government to look after that work.

Mr. INGRAM. I have a statement here of the Minister of the Interior that it was a new departure altogether.

Mr. BRODEUR. The deputy informs me that three or four years ago, $20,000 or $25,000 was spent at Athabasca Landing, on the Peace river.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) asked the government whether they intended to keep in repair these roads which they are building. Would they not be compelled to keep them in repair?

Mr. BRODEUR. I suppose the provincial or municipal authorities would look after that, as they do in the older provinces.

Mr. SCHAFFNER. This road in Manitoba from the boundary line connects, I suppose, with the Canadian Northern or the Canadian Pacific?

Mr. BRODEUR. My hon. friend knows the locality better than I do. I could not say exactly with what roads it connects but I believe it must connect with some other road.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Under the English law, which is in force in Manitoba, a public body constructing a public work is responsible for its maintenance, and no other evidence is required except evidence as to construction. It would be well to have a more definite idea as to how matters are going to work out in that regard. We have a statute in this country which imposes liability upon the government for the negligence of its employees upon public works. You are constructing these roads as public works, and by that very fact you are imposing upon yourselves the duty of maintenance and the responsibility for maintenance, in the absence of some arrangement by which the provincial government or the municipality will take over that duty. That particular consideration is worthy of attention by the government before they spend very much money in this way. You may be undertaking a greater responsibility than you have any idea of at present. I did not gather from the minister any answer to the question which I put him a moment ago and which was this. He said it was not proposed to continue the construction of colonization roads in the Territories because we are now organizing them into provinces, and that obligation will devolve upon the provinces. But we have not followed that policy in Manitoba. Is the hon. minister able to state what the future policy of the government will be in that regard? Do you propose to construct colonization roads in the Territories or leave that matter to the new provincial government? In the latter case, you should carry out a similar policy in Manitoba.

Mr. BRODEUR. I understand that the policy of the department will be not to build any more colonization roads in the Northwest Territories which are to be erected into provinces. As to the maintenance, I suppose the contention of the hon. gentleman regarding our liability is correct. But it must be remembered that those roads are being built in sections of country which have no population to-day. But in the ordinary course of events they will become populated and form municipal organizations, and then, if there be any doubt as to the liability of the government, the government will have the option of either closing the roads or handing them over to the municipal authorities.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The principle to which I allude is one that applies to public bodies, but whether it would have the same application to the Crown is another question, because sometimes different principles prevail with regard to the Crown.

Mr. BRODEUR. The deputy informs me that the government has never been condemned to pay.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. As the government have expended $25,000 in the last year or two in the province of Manitoba on colonization roads, would not the province of Ontario be justified in asking them to do as much for that province?

Mr. BRODEUR. We are not the owners of lands in the province of Ontario but we are in Manitoba, and consequently in the latter province it may be necessary that we should open some colonization road in order to sell our lands. Suppose the provincial government were not in a position to make those improvements, and it was necessary they should be made in order to sell our lands, would it not be good policy for us to make them?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That hardly seems consistent with what the hon. minister has just said, namely, that he proposes to discontinue building colonization roads in the Territories.

Mr. BRODEUR. It might happen in some cases that we would have to do it. This is a very small item so far as Manitoba is concerned.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the principle upon which you are proceeding is that because you own the land you must provide roads, it will be difficult to carry out the policy mentioned a moment ago, namely, that you will cease building these roads when the new provinces are established. You will still own the land, and if any necessity to build roads exists now, that necessity will continue.

Mr. BRODEUR. It may exist in some particular cases. Suppose we had an application for the opening up of a section of the country and the provincial government refused to build these roads, would it not be good policy for this government to do that work in order to sell its lands?

Mr. INGRAM. Then we are to assume that the local government of the Territories have refused to spend money on their roads?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, but the same thing may happen there as happens every day in the other provinces. In the province of Quebec, sometimes settlers ask for colonization roads and their request is refused for one reason or another, and no doubt the same thing happens in Ontario. Suppose that settlers told us they were willing to settle on certain government lands provided we built them a road, would it not be good policy to grant their request?

Mr. INGRAM. In that case all you need do is put an item in the estimates to be expended in a certain way and let the local government spend it in that way. That however would not suit this government because it wants to control the expenditure for reasons of its own.

Mr. BRODEUR. I think it is good policy that we should control our own expenditure.

Mr. INGRAM. If the hon. gentleman were the owner of lands and the lands adjoining belonged to some body else, surely if he were offered money to improve the lands alongside his own, it would be in his own interest to spend the money on that object and thus increase the value of his own property. What would apply to an individual would equally apply to a local government.

Mr. BRODEUR. I would not be in favour of voting money to be spent by a local government. I think we had better keep the control of our own expenditure. Even if the local government were the best in the world, we have always recognized the principle that we should keep control of our own expenditure and not hand over the money to be expended by any other body. Some allusion has been made to the fact that we are giving subsidies to the provinces. But if we do, it is because we are bound to do so by the Confederation Act. Over these moneys we have no control. But there is no reason why, if certain works become necessary in our own interest, we should not expend the money on them ourselves.

Mr. INGRAM. I do not see the force of the hon. gentleman's reasoning. This is an expenditure which is likely to be improperly used. The government is reserving the right to expend the money itself on colonization roads, and it may send the money in two or three different constituencies, under the patronage of gentlemen who are more interested in carrying elections than in improving their roads.

Mr. BRODEUR. If you discuss the question from that point of view, very well, but I am discussing it from the point of view of principle.

Mr. INGRAM. We had that principle in Ontario, and the settlers in new districts suffered because of the improper method in such expenditure by the local government. There may be the same thing here.

Mr. BRODEUR. All the greater reason why expenditure on colonization roads should be controlled by this government and this parliament.

Mr. INGRAM. Then, the hon. gentleman had better withdraw the subsidy he is giving to the local legislature in the Northwest Territories.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is a question of contract.

Mr. INGRAM. It is a question of degree in the hon. gentleman's mind. He thinks it is improper to entrust the government of the Northwest with an expenditure of $25,000, but that it is all right to entrust them with an expenditure of $1,000,000.

Mr. BARKER. I can assure the minister that the experience in the new districts in Ontario, as shown by the public accounts, was that, where the provincial government expended money on colonization roads, it frequently happened that more money was spent in paying the salary of the inspector of a bridge than was spent upon construction of the bridge itself.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not deny that money might be expended in a wholly useless way. But that makes all the stronger the argument in favour of our keeping control of our own expenditure. Why should we vote money for a provincial government to expend? Doing that, we have no control over the expenditure. This money should be spent under the supervision of our own officers. If anything is done wrong, these officers can be blamed and the government held responsible.

Mr. BARKER. The difficulty in Ontario was that votes such as this were often spent for political purposes. Here the government proposes to spend money at points fifteen hundred miles away from the point of supervision. But, if you leave it in the hands of the local government it would be properly expended for the benefit of the public.

Mr. HENDERSON. Possibly I was astray in my reference to the statement of the minister last year as to the Manitoba government being permitted to expend the Manitoba portion of this money. I find, on looking up the debate, that so determinedly opposed was the minister of the Interior of that time (Mr. Sifton) to allowing the province of Manitoba to expend this money that he struck the item out of the estimates. If his government could not expend the money in their own way for their own purposes, then he would not agree to its being spent at all. It seemed that this vote to construct roads was quite an unnecessary vote. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sifton) practically admitted last year that it was unnecessary for road construction by asking to have it struck out and the item reduced from $25,000 to $20,000. Rather than allow the people of Manitoba to expend this sum of $5,000 in the improvement of their roads the hon. member for Brandon, then Minister of the Interior, in a trantrum, in a pet, moved that it should be struck out. I am not afraid that the minister (Mr. Brodeur) now in charge of these estimates will make such a suggestion. No doubt the minister will get the vote, but we think that he ought to concede to the people of Manitoba, who are more deeply interested than we are in the opening of that province, the right to expend this small sum. On going hastily over the debates of last year, I find that very strong arguments were advanced in favour of handing over this appropriation to Manitoba. And the Minister of the Interior of that time felt so keenly that he could not meet the argument, that rather than allow the committee to have its own way, he succeeded in having a motion carried to reduce the item and refuse anything for expenditure in Manitoba. That is a dog-in-the-manger way to proceed.

Mr. BRODEUR. I think the money was voted last year—so it would appear from the estimates.

Mr. HENDERSON. The motion made was that the item be reduced from $25,000 to $20,000 and that 'Manitoba and' be struck out—leaving the vote $20,000 applicable exclusively to the Northwest Territories.

Mr. BRODEUR. Then, there is a mistake in the estimates.

Mr. HENDERSON. The result in the committee was as I have given it, as the hon. gentleman will see if he will refer to page 9048 of 'Hansard' of last year.

Mr. BURROWS. Was not that amendment introduced on the ground that certain objections were taken to the vote based on the contention that Manitoba did not require new roads and the minister (Mr. Sifton), rather than vote unnecessary money threw out that portion relating to Manitoba?

Mr. HENDERSON. No, the reason was that it was strongly urged in the committee that the Manitoba government should be allowed to expend the money.

Mr. BURROWS. I represent a constituency in Manitoba where the people look forward to expenditure on roads as an aid to immigration. There is a large district in the northern part of Manitoba that requires public roads, and I think it is necessary to expend a certain amount of money in opening up such a country, to be settled afterwards by the immigration department. This applies to Manitoba as to the Northwest Territories. I would like to see an appropriation for the construction of colonization roads in Manitoba.

Mr. HENDERSON. I have gone very rapidly over the debate to which I referred, and it seems quite clear that the vote was struck out practically because it was contended in the committee that the money should be expended for the improvement of roads by the province of Manitoba. The minister (Mr. Sifton) seemed desirous that it shall be spent not so much for making roads as for election purposes. He said that the Manitoba government must not have the expenditure of this money.

Mr. BURROWS. I don't blame him knowing that government as I do.

Mr. HENDERSON. I have no doubt the hon. gentleman (Mr. Burrows) agrees with the ex-Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton), and that if he could not have the money spent for election purposes he would not have it spent at all. I have no doubt that is the view of the hon. gentleman, as a follower of the ex-Minister of the Interior. but the strong contention of the opposition was that, under the Dominion government the money would not be properly expended.

Mr. HENDERSON.

Mr. BURROWS. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Henderson) tell me of a single case of a vote by this parliament of money to be expended by any province for immigration purposes?

Mr. HENDERSON. Can the hon. gentleman (Mr. Burrows) state that his government has not voted money for the improvement of roads in New Brunswick?

Mr. BURROWS. For immigration purposes, I say.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am not speaking of immigration, but of the improvement of roads. I believe we have on the records of this parliament a vote such as I speak of. I believe we have on the records of this parliament a vote of that kind. I have heard a reference made to it, so there would be a precedent for anything the government might do now, and a very good precedent. This matter was very fully discussed last year, from all standpoints.

Mr. BURROWS. On what page of 'Hansard'?

Mr. HENDERSON. The hon. gentleman will find the debate commencing on page 9042 of last year's 'Hansard.' The whole tenor of the debate was the right of the province of Manitoba to expend this grant, the various reasons why it should be done by the province rather than by this government; and the pressure executed by the opposition was apparently so strong that the minister was unable to resist it, and refused to allow the item to pass at all, and had it struck out of the estimates. I do not want the matter to end that way this year. I would rather see it go through and let the Dominion government expend it rather than not have it expended at all, because I think the settlers there need the expenditures. But I do think it is hardly treating the province right, when they have road money given to them, to say that they shall not expend it on their own highways.

Mr. BURROWS. The hon. gentleman ought to be aware of the fact that when the Dominion government takes an appropriation to be expended in the immigration department, it is not the local government who has the handling of that money. I do not see by what argument the hon. gentleman can support a contrary theory. Why should not all the other provinces of the Dominion have an immigration department as well as Manitoba? This money comes out of the immigration vote, as I understand.

Mr. HENDERSON. Not at all, it is coming out of the item for roads and bridges.

Mr. BURROWS. I understand it is in the interest of immigrants. I may say that I live in a district in Manitoba that requires colonization roads more than in any other district, a northern district, a large portion of which is not yet opened up, and a portion in which I would expect this money to be expended if anywhere ; yet I have no hesitation in saying that I would not vote for an appropriation to be handed over to the local government for that purpose.

Mr. HENDERSON. No doubt the hon. gentleman would rather have this government spend the money, because doubtless he would have control of the expenditures, or it would be expended by men whom he nominated. But I still stand by my contention, that the men whose duty it is to make roads and bridges in the province of Manitoba, whether they be the municipal councils or pathmasters, are the proper men to expend money of this kind, and I would rather have it left in their hands than that the patronage should be handed over to the member of the riding. In the province of Ontario it became a very serious matter to leave patronage of this kind for colonization roads in the hands of the member for the district. The consequences were ridiculous, the money was simply frittered away to the neglect of public works. I would not say that the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Burrows) would be so neglectful of the interests of his own district ; but it is better not to put the danger in his way, there may be too much temptation.

Mr. INGRAM. I would like to add to what my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) has said, the opinion of the late representative of one of the Manitoba constituencies on this matter, which will be found in last year's 'Hansard,' page 8019 :

It seems to me that so far as Manitoba is concerned, the hon. minister has made the explanation very nicely. It is a rather unusual departure on the part of the government to commence building colonization roads in a province such as Manitoba, and I think the government are establishing a dangerous precedent when they begin colonization roads through an organized province. The information that has been given to me is that in three cases each one of these amounts is to be expended in a way that is going to be a benefit to the candidates of the government who are now in the field. The information I have is that there is a certain foreign vote in the localities which are to be traversed by these roads and that the object of spending the money is for the reason I have given. It is a most extraordinary departure to undertake to spend the money of this government in that way, and we ask that if you are going to spend money, spend it in some proper way.

He would hand it over to an organized government and let them expend it.

Mr. BURROWS. Who said that ?

Mr. INGRAM. That was Mr. Boyd.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Do I understand the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Burrows) to say that he would oppose this government granting an appropriation towards building roads in the provinces ?

Mr. BURROWS. What I say is this : This is an appropriation by the Dominion government over which they have absolute control, and I would rather see it expended by the officers of the Department of the Interior than by the officials of the local government in Manitoba.

Telegraph lines—Maritime provinces—Mabou, Cheticamp, Meat Cove line—extension of Bay St. Lawrence, $3,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Could the minister tell us the total number of miles of telegraph lines which are owned by the Dominion government at the present time, giving a statement of the revenue and expenditure in connection therewith ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We have 6,270 miles distributed as follows : In Gaspé, 28 miles; Anticosti, 226 miles ; Magdalen islands, 83½ miles ; Pelee Island, 25½ miles. All the rest are in the Northwest, British Columbia and the Yukon. The revenue for the year 1903-4 was $147,391.34 ; the expenditure was $327,917.65.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Can the minister state what the policy of the government is in regard to the development of this very important system of telegraph lines ? Is it proposed to extend that, and in what portions of the country ? We had some discussion as to this two years ago. It was then mentioned that there was a proposal to extend in the Gulf of St Lawrence eventually to make communication with the island of Cape Breton and with the land cables.

Mr. FIELDING. They have a line to Cape Breton.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Probably that has been completed since the discussion two years ago.

Mr. BRODEUR. The policy of the department is to build lines where the ordinary telegraph companies would not like to establish lines, and where they are necessary for the development of trade.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There has been a good deal of complaint in Prince Edward Island as to their lack of telegraph communication or rather as to the high charges they are compelled to pay.

Mr. BRODEUR. A new contract has been made.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I should like to have the particulars of that contract.

Mr. LEFURGEY. The particulars were brought down in answer to a question. I wish to ask the minister why the Canadian Pacific Railway was not a party to that agreement along with the Great Northwestern ? The Great Northwestern is the only line we can use to the island ; apparently there is no mutual arrangement with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. FIELDING. My recollection is that the agreement was made with the Anglo-American Company which is the owner of the cables between the mainland and the island. What the government did was to make an additional grant by way of inducing the company to give a more favourable rate. The grant was placed at $7,000. The company controlling the lines in Prince Edward Island agreed to make a lower rate and to give better facilities to the public in the way of office hours. These are the main features of the arrangement. I think the arrangement was made with the Anglo-American Company which happened to be in closer touch with the Great Northwestern than with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I think that must be the case. Many points are reached by the Canadian Pacific Railway and not by the Great Northwestern. I was talking to some Canadian Pacific Railway officials and they can give no reason why a similar arrangement should not be made with their line for a lessening of their rates.

Mr. FIELDING. That would be a matter for the Anglo-American Company. The complaint was as to the double toll across the strait, and the Anglo-American Company being in closer touch with the Great Northwestern than with the Canadian Pacific Railway would be inclined to make the arrangement with their own connections. The difficulty I suppose would be in bringing about the co-operation of these two companies.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Might I suggest that the minister take this matter up and see if some such mutual arrangement cannot be made with the Canadian Pacific Railway ? I believe the Canadian Pacific Railway would not object to the same arrangement as is made with the Great Northwestern.

Mr. FIELDING. I am not sure that we can control that. I know the Canadian Pacific Railway was communicated with and offered every opportunity of offering terms to Prince Edward Island if they desired. An official of the department had communicated with representatives of the two companies, the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Great Northwestern, but I think the Canadian Pacific Railway did not regard the business as very attractive to them.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Four or five years ago, Sir Louis Davies, when in the House, had an offer from the Canadian Pacific Railway practically the same, the 30 cent rate to Prince Edward Island with certain emoluments to be paid outside, which would practically be the same contract as they have with these people now. I only suggest we might have some mutual arrangement with the Canadian Pacific Railway now.

Mr. FIELDING. I am quite sure if there was such an offer from the Canadian Pacific Railway four or five years ago, it would have been very gladly accepted. I cannot imagine that if the Canadian Pacific Railway made such an offier it would be refused, because we were very anxious to get better rates to Prince Edward Island. The Canadian Pacific Railway had no cable across to the island and their relations with the Anglo-American Company are not as close as those of the Great Northwestern.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If you are paying an additional subsidy why would it not be a proper thing to have the reduced rates apply to the Canadian Pacific Railway as well as the other companies ?

Mr. FIELDING. They certainly will apply so far as the cable rates are concerned.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would think so.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. How many lines of telegraph are there owned by the government in each of the provinces ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There are in all 6,270 miles of telegraph line, distributed as follows : Quebec, Gaspé, 28 miles : Anticosti, 223 miles ; Magdalen Islands, 83 miles, and on the north shore about 1,300 miles ; 1,600 and odd miles in Quebec. In Ontario there are 25 miles ; in the Northwest about 800 miles ; in British Columbia from 700 to 800 miles ; in the Yukon nearly 2,000 miles ; in Nova Scotia between 300 and 400 miles, in New Brunswick about 80 miles.

Mr. FIELDING. I think this system began with the construction of telegraph lines in sections of the country which were placed at a disadvantage owing to their sparseness of population and isolated condition, so that for ordinary commercial reasons the telegraph companies were not disposed to establish lines there. The matter of affording communication in cases of shipwrecks had a good deal to do with the foundation of the system, the desire to get communication with distant points where vessels were in distress. Then the system was extended. For example when it came to the Yukon no ordinary company was willing to take up the business on commercial principles, and the government thought it important for national reasons that there should be a telegraph line. In some parts of the Northwest the same reasons existed. It would be difficult to lay down any principle governing the whole matter, but the system has grown up under these conditions. Telegraph lines were established where it was desirable, for many reasons, there should be communication and where the profit would not induce commercial companies to undertake the enterprise.

Telegraph lines—Quebec—mainland, north shore of the St. Lawrence, Bersimis to Godbout, land line, $6,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to substitute a land line 83 miles in length for the present cable communication between Bersimis and Godbout. It is recommended by the government superintendent of telegraphs in order to prevent interruption of several months duration which has been experienced in the past.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. What was the total deficit on all the government telegraph lines throughout the Dominion last year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The revenue last year was $147,391.94 and the expenditure $327,917.65.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the total length of all telegraph lines in Canada ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I cannot say, but I will make inquiries.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I asked the question with a view of getting the proportion of government owned lines to the entire mileage in Canada. In the same connection I would ask the minister whether there has been found any practical difficulty in the operation of the government lines. I quite understand that the government has selected portions of the country where such an enterprise would not be expected to pay commercially, and hence we have a deficit of about $180,000 a year. Have you been in the habit of making connections with private lines ; what has been the experience of the government generally operating its telegraph system ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed by the deputy minister that we experience no more difficulty in operating our lines than is experienced by private companies. The fact is that we lose money every year, but our telegraph system is not expected to pay. For instance the line on the north shore of the St. Lawrence is erected for the benefit of navigation. At first there was some difficulty in operating the Yukon line but lately it has been working fairly satisfactorily. As to the maritime provinces I am informed that no difficulty is experienced.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How do the rates charged on the government lines compare with rates charged by private companies ?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The rates on government lines are higher because of the fact that the business is less.

Cable connection between Pelee Island and the mainland, $6,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make repairs and to lay down a new cable between Pelee Island and the mainland. The total cost will be $6,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. Has the old cable given out.

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, it is of no use.

Kamloops—Lower Nicola line, $5,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is for the construction and equipment of a telephone line as recommended by the general superintendent. Sometimes it is found easier to have a telephone service than a telegraph service.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Are these new lines ? I did not know there was any government ownership of telephones.

Mr. BRODEUR. Originally they were built for the telegraph service but it was found less expensive to use them as telephone lines and so long as they work satisfactorily they will be continued.

Mr. A. MARTIN. Is there a special night service over the government lines ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. A. MARTIN. Is there a special night rate on any part of the government lines ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Has the government under consideration the purchasing of the profitable telegraph lines in Canada ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I am not in a position to give any information on that subject.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Are these the only telegraph lines which the government owns or are there others ?

Mr. BRODEUR. These are the only ones. They are built for telegraph service and are operated in this way for the convenience of the service.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Do they connect with the lines of any private company ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes. This one connects with the long-distance telegraph line of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. They do not connect with the telephone lines of any private company ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No. They may touch points where there are other lines, but there is no agreement.

Vancouver Island to Salt Spring Island—telephone line extension on Salt Spring Island, $1,050.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is to make provision for a further extension of this telephone line.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What is the reason you are building these telephone lines ? Is the country sparsely settled, or are there important interests requiring them ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is simply to connect the island with the mainland. I understand that there are a certain number of persons on the island who have no means of telegraphic communication, and therefore this telephone service is provided.

Arbitrations and awards, including payments authorized, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act, $5,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What does that mean ?

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote corresponds to a similar yearly grant made by parliament to the Department of Railways and Canals under the heading of miscellaneous. Previous to the subdivision of the Public Works Department in 1879 the annual grant for arbitrations and awards amounted to $10,000. In 1880 it was divided into two amounts of $5,000 each, one placed at the disposal of the Department of Railways and Canals, and the other left for the use of the Department of Public Works.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How much was spent last year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $1,480.12.

Surveys and inspections, $50,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make provision for surveys and inspections to be made in connection with slides and booms, bridge work, and other services under the control of the Public Works Department. The estimate is as follows : maritime provinces, $12,000 ; Quebec, $16,000 ; Ontario, $13,000 ; Manitoba, $2,000 ; the Northwest Territories, $2,000 ; and British Columbia, $5,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Are not these surveys and inspections made by officers of the department, and if so, why do you require this vote, outside of their salaries and travelling expenses ?

Mr. BRODEUR. This is in case they require some assistance, in connection with these works, and for their travelling expenses when visiting the works.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How much was expended last year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. $50,651.12.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How much of that was expended in employing outside assistance ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I have not that information.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The vote is couched in very general terms, and I should think we ought therefore to have definite information upon it. I do not pretend to understand very much the working of the departments, but it would seem to me to be a curious way to vote money for salaries—to put it in an item under the heading of surveys and inspections. I think salaries should be provided for under some other item.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is for extra work. It is not for salaries of officers of the department ; but sometimes some of the officers are required for extra work, and they are paid out of this vote.

Mr. BRODEUR.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I thought there was a certain amount charged to every public work for the officials in the department attending to it.

Mr. BRODEUR. That covers work for which appropriations are made ; but when applications are made for new works for which there are no appropriations, we have to provide for their inspection and survey.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. How can you have the work if there is no appropriation for it?

Mr. BRODEUR. These expenses are made before the money is voted. Suppose that my hon. friend asks for a public work in his county. The department will have to send somebody to look into the matter and to make an inspection and survey. He makes the survey and reports how much it will cost. He submits the matter to the minister, the minister submits it to the government, and the government to the House. The cost of that inspection and survey comes out of this vote.

Surveys of head waters of Ottawa river and tributaries, with a view of devising a scheme for the regulation of the water levels of the upper regions of these streams, so as to afford increased facilities for navigation purpose, the descent of timber, &c., $15,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is called for by the chief engineer of the Public Works Department to make provision for defraying the probable expense of making surveys of the head waters of the Ottawa river and its tributaries, and for regulating the water levels of the upper reaches of these streams, so as to afford increased facilities for navigation, the descent of timber and the development of water power.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Do you mean the development of water-power by the goverment or by private individuals?

Mr. BRODEUR. We are the owners of the water-power on the Ottawa river. This is for the purpose of regulating the descent of the water. A report is being made.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How long has the survey been going on?

Mr. BRODEUR. About a year.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When do you expect the report?

Mr. BRODEUR. There are some other points to be surveyed before the final report is put in. We expect the report during the course of the summer.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Who is making the investigation?

Mr. BRODEUR. Mr. Brophy, the engineer in charge.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Is this water-power to be utilized here?

Mr. BRODEUR. This is in order to regulate the water and get a larger revenue if possible and for navigation purposes also.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. But you have water-power going to waste. Why should it be necessary to spend money to get more ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed that the water-power, excessive as it may appear, is not regular. Sometimes there is too much and sometimes not sufficient. This is in order to regulate the power because if the government undertook to lease a large quantity of water-power, it might be impossible at times to supply the quantity leased.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Does the minister say that at any time during the year there is a shortage of water-power on the Ottawa?

Mr. BRODEUR. So I am informed.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Has the department had under consideration the putting in of plant to supply light to the buildings owned and controlled by the government?

Mr. BRODEUR. Some time ago the department had a system of supplying the government buildings with light from government plant, but it did not work satisfactorily and the existing system is considered preferable.

Cement testing laboratory—improvements and equipment, $5,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to cover the expense of procuring the latest and most approved appliances for testing the strength of cement.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. How many officials employed?

Mr. BRODEUR. Four.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. What is the total cost of the works?

Mr. BRODEUR. $5,000.

Mr. INGRAM. This is a new departure?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, since we have been doing concrete work this testing and experimenting has been going on.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Are you testing simply for the purposes of the government?

Mr. BRODEUR. For our own works.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. No inspection of the manufacture of cement?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. INGRAM. The manufacturers of cement are very eager that inspection of cement imported into Canada should be made. Has any thing been done towards that end ?

Mr. BRODEUR. That would not fall under the control of the Public Works Department but would be a question for the department of Trade and Commerce.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. gentleman is Minister of Inland Revenue, and I would draw his attention to the importance of testing the cement imported from the United States.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I would suggest that as the manufacture of cement is one of our most important industries, the cement made in our own country should be tested for the benefit of the people.

Mr. BRODEUR. We are testing it now for the public benefit.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Are these tests to be published?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, they are simply made for the government.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. If you are making tests of the value of cement, they ought to be published. I have in my mind a building in a small town, built on cement bottom, at a cost of $20,000 or $30,000. It would be to the advantage of this country if we had the views of experts on the value of cement for that purpose.

Mr. BRODEUR. The policy of the department is simply to see that the cement used in these works is perfect cement. If we were to give certificates as to the quality of the cement sold by private industry, they could be used as an advertisement, and I do not see why the government should undertake to do that.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Why should we not fix a standard and grades?

Mr. BRODEUR. We might fix a grade or a standard but that is another question.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. If it is necessary for the government to have four officials to take care of the cement used in their work, how much more important would it be that the people should know the quality of the cement they purchased and that a standard should be fixed.

Mr. BRODEUR. There is a standard specification provided for in the contracts made with the government, but I do not know whether it would be advisable or not to provide for an inspection of the cement imported.

Mr. HENDERSON. It would be rather dangerous for the government to interfere with this industry by giving a certificate or opinion that a particular manufactured cement is superior to all others. No doubt the hon. minister is perfectly right in having a thorough test made of the cement being used in our public works. I think myself, from all we know about the business, we can make just as good cement in this country as anywhere for the purposes of our public works. We make in this country just as good a quality of cement as we can import. In bygone years we imported too much cement. I am glad the government have adopted this plan, and think it would inure to the benefit of Canadian industry and result in more Canadian cement being used than hitherto. The minister will find that we can make in Canada a cement as good as can be obtained elsewhere.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is provided in all the contracts made by the Department of Public Works that we shall use only Canadian cement, and it is found by tests that it is just as good as any other cement.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. It is with great pleasure that I learn that the government have decided to put in their contracts that only Canadian cement shall be used. I know something about the cement industry in Canada, and I can affirm that we are manufacturing the best cement in the world to-day both in fineness and in strength. I am very much pleased to learn that the government have adopted the system of using Canadian cement only.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am 'delighted to know that we have another convert to the national policy. I am sure that the citizens of Hamilton will highly approve of what the hon. gentleman (Mr. Zimmerman) has said. For they are an industrial people and believe in Canadian manufacturers. What the hon. minister has said will go throughout the length and breadth of Canada and will most materially help Canadian industry. It will draw the attention of builders generally to the fact that in the opinion of the government by whom a thorough test has been made, Canadian cement is superior to the imported article. We join our new convert to the national policy in rejoicing that this statement has been made.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Many good statements are made on this side.

Mr. HENDERSON. And we are pleased to hear them all.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Is any examination made of cement coming into Canada ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Does not the minister believe that, in the present condition of our cement industry there should be such an inspection ?

Mr. BRODEUR. That is a broad question. If we were to inspect cement, I suppose we should be called upon to inspect all the other goods that come into Canada.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The hon. minister has thought it wise, through the department of Inland Revenue of which he is the head, to inspect fruits and other goods.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is food inspection, and is carried on for the protection of the public health, and not to test the quality of goods coming into the country.

Mr. HENDERSON.

Mr. INGRAM. Canadian cement manufacturers find that American cement brought into Canada is not of the quality represented. This inferior quality of cement can be sold at cheap prices, and so it is the means of unfair competition with our manufacturers.

Mr. CHRISTIE. Do the government make a test of cement from different manufactories ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, we simply test cement used in carrying out our work.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I believe that this question of the importation of inferior cement is a very serious one to our manufacturers, as this competition undermines our cement business.

Mr. BRODEUR. Our tests have nothing to do with the inspection of cement, they are simply made in connection with the construction of public works.

Mr. CHRISTIE. But should not there be an examination of the cement sold by different manufacturers ? In my riding many farmers use quantities of cement, and sometimes they get a brand that gives very poor satisfaction. The farmer has no means of knowing the quality of the cement.

Mr. BRODEUR. It would be a very serious thing for the government to undertake to declare whether a certain cement was good or not. It seems to me that it is better to leave that matter in the hands of the trade. If our cement is, as I am informed, equal or superior to that imported, I suppose our business men will buy from our own manufacturers.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The suggestion, as I understood it, was along a little different line from that of the minister's remarks. The suggestion is that cement sold in Canada should bear a certain stamp indicative of its quality as a protection to the purchaser. If I were buying cement, for instance, I would be unable to distinguish between the good article and the bad. And farmers buying cement are apt to buy under a false impression as to quality. I do not know whether the suggestion can be carried out, but it seems to me that it would be only following in this matter the line we have taken in others. We have insisted, for example, on certain marks upon fruit packages. This is not for the public health, but to enable the purchaser to know what he is buying. That is the nature of the suggestion, and I think it might be worth consideration at least.

Mr. FIELDING. What reason can be urged for doing that in the case of cement that would not apply in the case of other articles ? It appears to broaden very greatly the field of public inspection. We do sometimes broaden that field, but I cannot see why this should be done in the case of cement more than in that of other articles in regard to which one is apt to be deceived. It is supposed that in purchasing certain goods the purchaser will satisfy himself as to the quality.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But the same argument might be made in regard to fruit.

Mr. FIELDING. That has something to do with the public health.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think that in that case we looked at it from that standpoint. The object was to so mark the package that the purchaser would know what quality of goods he was buying, or, in case of misrepresentation, to give him recourse against the seller or to impose a penalty upon the seller. I concede that there may be great difficulty in making a general application of this principle, but we certainly have made a start in the direction of its general application. All our legislation with regard to fruit is exactly along the line which has been suggested here to-day, and it may be desirable for parliament at some time to extend it.

Mr. MILLER. Our Canadian cement manufacturers have not only to compete with foreign competition but with an execss of home production. I would like to see any remedy adopted or any plan taken that would improve the condition of the manufacturers of Canadian cement. I would like to point out that the inspection of cements with the idea of grading them would be difficult, because of the fact that any Portland cement increases in strength as its age increases. Therefore you might inspect a product of one factory and compare it by testing with the product of another factory and come to incorrect conclusions because of a difference in the age of the products. It seems to me that any system of inspection or grading, to be of any value, would be very difficult, and not so simple as the inspection of most other products.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does the strength increase with age or decrease ?

Mr. MILLER. Portland cement increases up to one year, or more than a year. And cement will keep on increasing in strength.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And decreases afterwards ?

Mr. MILLER. No, I do not think so.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The remarks of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Miller) have brought to mind another article, illuminating oils, which are tested. Every barrel, practically every gallon, that is sent out has to be tested for public safety. Now is it not possible that we could have cement tested in the same manner, for public safety ? My hon. friend realizes the importance of the cement industry in our country, and how extensively it is being used among farmers and builders. Is it not reasonable to expect that justice would be more likely to be done people if a certain standard was placed on the barrel of cement, and the date on which it was placed ?

Mr. INGRAM. Some manufacturers, both Canadian and American, wish all barrels to be graded and stamped so that they may all be placed on the same level.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not think it is possible.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. In the United States every barrel or package of cement is tested and the result is marked on the barrel. The manufacturer tests it himself. The contractor insists on having a certain strength and fineness in the cement employed in some particular work he is engaged on. Some works require a lower grade of cement than others, so that where the manufacturer tests the cement himself, he can furnish the contractor with the quality he requires.

National Art Gallery, Ottawa, including the purchase of paintings on the advice of a committee of artists, $7,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This item covers $540 for a caretaker, and $6,700 for the purchase of pictures. The gallery is on O'Connor street. This is an annual vote.

Chief Architect's office—salaries of architects, draughtsmen and clerks, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $73,200.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to defray the salaries of architects and others whose services have to be retained from year to year in the construction, maintenance, repairs, heating and lighting of public buildings under the control of the federal government throughout the Dominion.

Mr. HENDERSON. This is a very large item. I notice the same item was voted last year. Can the minister tell me if that amount was expended last year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There has been a mistake in entering this item. I have information from the chief architect's office that when the estimates were prepared the amount asked for was $42,200. The present item should be reduced by $31,000.

Mr. INGRAM. The government are paying large amounts every year to different architects to draw up plans. I think all that work should be done by the department at headquarters.

Mr. BRODEUR. In some cases plans have to be drawn up outside, but most of that work is done here.

Mr. INGRAM. I can show the hon. gentleman in the Auditor General's Report several items that are paid to outsiders, which together would make up very large sums.

Mr. BRODEUR. I think the hon. gentleman must be mistaken.

Mr. INGRAM. I know in my own city a case where the superintendent of public works, who is an architect, performed work for which he received so much per day, and he went on extending the work for months and months. There are other instances where architects draw up plans, and as they get so much per day they stretch out the work for months.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What is the chief architect's salary, and the salaries of others ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The chief architect, Mr. Ewart, gets $3,500 ; Mr. Billings has $1,550, Mr. Routhier, $1,200 ; Mr. Marquette, $1,460 ; Mr. Lamb, $1,200. The average salary of the draughtsmen is between $900 and $1,100.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. It seems to me it would be possible to get men to do that who would come under the Civil Service Act.

Mr. BRODEUR. There are some officers there who can only receive $400 if we do not insert these words, and my hon. friend knows we cannot get draughtsmen, technical men, for that sum.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am not sure but that the government is quite justified in employing young men who have not passed the civil service examination or entered the service in the regular way. Young men graduate from the School of Practical Science in Toronto, for instance, and it is a boon to these young men to be able to get an appointment in some way in the civil service until some permanent position turns up. I know some young men, I have one young man in my mind, who took this course and is employed by the government at a fair salary. He was considered a remarkably clever young man, and I was glad when he was given employment in the department ; and if he was worthy of it, I do not see why he should be required to pass the civil service examination for the work the government was giving him to do. It is encouraging to these young men, and I am not one of those who decidedly object to the employment of a young man simply because he has not passed the examination.

Mr. BRODEUR. That is precisely what the department is doing. These men have technical knowledge, and it is impossible to get them for the price paid under the Civil Service Act—$400 a year. We could get men, but not competent men.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. It is not because they could not pass the examination, but because you cannot get them for the salary ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is because the salary provided is not sufficient.

Mr. HENDERSON. They could get more outside ; $900 to $1,100 is not very high.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is not.

Mr. BRODEUR.

Telegraph service—salaries of staff, $6,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make provision for the salaries of the staff of the government service at headquarters, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.

Mr. INGRAM. How many are employed there ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Four—Mr. Keeley, general superintendent ; Mr. R. Keeley, the clerk ; Mr. Parr and Mr. Hardcastle, the stenographer.

Temporary clerical and other assistance, inclusive of services of all persons required who were first employed after 1st July, 1882, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $44,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to pay such persons as are required from time to time in the Public Works Department to render clerical assistance of one kind and another, in the capacity of clerks, &c., as exigencies require, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act. These are employed in the Public Works Department here.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. How many of them are there ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Sixty-four.

Mr. INGRAM. After this vote is passed we will hear no more of these temporary clerks. After this they will have to comply with the Civil Service Act.

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; this is the usual vote which is taken. There are very few officers in the Public Works Department who are on the civil service list. Most of them are engaged in a temporary way.

Mr. INGRAM. In the departments generally there are many temporary clerks, some of whom have been there for eight or ten or twelve years. That is what I say should be done away with ; they should surely be made permanent, and so we would do away with necessity of coming down to parliament every year with grants 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.' Let the Civil Service Act be complied with as nearly as possible, and do away with these votes.

Mr. BRODEUR. Take the accountants. My hon. friend knows very well that we cannot get accountants for $500 or $450, but the case is the same as with the previous item ; such technical knowledge is required of most of the employees in the department that we have to provide in this way.

Mr. INGRAM. Why not change the Civil Service Act to meet this ?

Mr. BRODEUR. And get the names on the civil service list—a good suggestion.

Mr. INGRAM. A lot of fraud can be perpetrated under this scheme, and it is abused.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

On the order :

House in committee on Bill (No. 115) respecting the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. L. G. McCarthy.

Mr. HENDERSON. I notice the promoter of this Bill is not here. I do not think we can go on with these Bills without the promoter. If we are to pursue that course how will we get members to attend the House. If members wish to have legislation put through they must be present.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not think the objection is well taken because according to the rule if the member who is in charge of the Bill, or whose name appears on the back of it is not present some other member may move in his name. I do not think the point of order is well taken.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am not rising to a point of order ; I am reasoning the matter. I take the ground that members should be here. We sit here day after day almost without a quorum and members have put their names on the back of Bills as a guarantee of their genuineness. Then they go away and remain at home, they do not come here to attend to their legislation and a few members who do attend are expected to assume the responsibility of putting that legislation through. So long as we continue doing that we will find that members will absent themselves. They get their matters put through whether they are here or not, and I think it is time the House took a stand and said no Bill should be proceeded with at any stage in the House unless the member who has charge of it is present to vouch for its bona fides. This Bill is reported as amended ; we have not the printed amendments before us and we want somebody here to explain.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I can give all the explanations or they can be given by anybody who was present in the committee.

Mr. HENDERSON. The Minister of Justice is very kind, but that does not get over the difficulty that he has only half a quorum behind him. I think the minister should join with us in adopting some measure that will act as an incentive to members to be present at the sittings of the House to attend to the legislation. I raise the question not as a point of order but as something that should guide us with a view to having the affairs of the House conducted—I shall not say with propriety because we do that at all times—but in a proper way. A member in charge of a Bill asks the House to put through a certain measure and he ought to be here to explain any clauses of it and to show by his presence that he has sufficient interest in the Bill to ask the House to put it through. I appeal to the House to endorse me on this question because I think it is the proper stand to take. I do not ask you to rule, I am not aware that there is any rule to prevent the Bill going on but I think as a matter of policy the House should say : We will allow the Bill to stand until the member is present.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I think the best policy at this stage of the session is to expedite the Bills and get on so that we will get home at some time between this and December.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What do you think of the importance of a Bill when the promoter is not here ? The Minister of Justice says that this Bill was discussed in committee, but it does seem to me that when the promoter of the Bill has not enough interest in it to be present the legislation in his judgment cannot be very important. I certainly think the House should sustain the position taken by the member for Halton (Mr. Henderson).

Mr. INGRAM. It has come to this in this House now that if a few members who are in the habit of attending regularly were to vacate their seats for a few hours we would have no session, and I think the privileges accorded to members are being abused to the fullest extent. It is a disgrace and a shame and if members who are occupying seats in this House cannot attend sometimes they had better resign and let others take their seats who will attend. It is certainly going beyond all decency to say the least. There are members who would like to take an hour off but who are compelled to sit here day after day because the other members will not attend.

House went into committee on the Bill.

On the preamble,

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The blank spaces in the printed Bill are filled in with the words 'the mortgage dated the 10th day of June.'

Mr. HENDERSON. Is that the only amendment in the Bill ? It is 'reported as amended.'

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The Bill itself is very short but the schedules are very long, and perhaps if the leader of the opposition would permit me I would hand over a report sent to the government by Mr. Shepley, of Toronto, who acted for the government in connection with the preparation of these documents.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Very well.

Mr. HENDERSON. I have no desire to oppose the Bill in any shape or form. I was present at the Railway Committee when it came up and I am quite in accord with the Bill and am simply rising to make the statement so that I shall not be misunderstood. I simply hold that we have a right not to have these Bills proceeded with in the absence of the members who father them.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There are very few members behind my hon. friend; I think honours are even in that respect.

Mr. INGRAM. We are not charging the government any more than members on our own side.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think if this report, which is of some length, is to be of any service the Bill should stand over until Monday.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Of course if my hon. friend wishes it to stand it is no use proceeding, but I understand it is a matter of some importance that this Bill should be expedited.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I simply said if it was to be of any service to me.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Perhaps we might take up one or two of the other Bills and in the meantime my hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) could read the report and if after reading it thinks the Bill should stand I am quite agreeable.

Progress reported.

RELIEF OF GEORGE PEARSON.

House in committee on Bill (No. 153) for the relief of Geo. Pearson.—Mr. Calvert.

On the preamble.

Mr. BERGERON. These divorce Bills that come from the Senate are always brought in a very long time after the evidence has been sent over to this House. They should be brought down a day or two after the evidence is submitted so that we would remember the evidence. If I remember rightly the evidence in this case has been down for over a month; there are three or four of these Bills and members have these cases mixed in their minds.

Mr. BARKER. It seems to me that this has been before the House for some weeks. I was under the impression it had passed long ago until I noticed it on the order paper. I do not know where the delay occurred but the Bill was presented two weeks ago.

Mr. BERGERON. I always vote against these Bills, but I want to say, as a matter of public morality, that I believe many divorces should not be granted, for which there is no cause. In very few of these cases, from the evidence I have read, should divorces be granted, even from the point of view of those who are in favour of divorces; and by granting divorces for such trifling reasons, we are encouraging people to come and get divorces. At the same time, there is injustice in the matter, because people who have a good deal of money can get divorces, while poor people, who may have stronger reasons for getting divorces, cannot get them. That seems to be an anomaly, and I call the attention of the government to it.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed, on division.

RELIEF OF ARTHUR HOWE HERSEY.

Mr. CALVERT moved that the House go into Committee on Bill (No. 167) for the relief of Arthur Howe Hersey.—Mr. T. G. Johnston.

Mr. HENDERSON. Of course, it is no use for me to raise the objection to this Bill which I did in regard to the first Bill; but during the past week or ten days I have noticed that Bills have been allowed to stand under similar conditions. I had a conversation with the solicitor of the respondent this afternoon, and he was very anxious that this Bill should not be pressed through the committee stage to-night. He opposed the Bill in the Senate, and intended to oppose it before the Private Bills Committee of the House of Commons; but, unfortunately, the notice of the meeting failed to reach him. He desires to have another opportunity of dealing with the case before the Private Bills Committee, and he would like to have the Bill referred back for further consideration. I am not going into the merits of the case, because I do not profess to be familiar with it; I have not even read the evidence. But I am told this is a case in which there is no direct evidence of actual adultery; it is a very special case, and on that account the solicitor is anxious to be heard before the Private Bills Committee. If the House would entertain the proposition to-night to refer the Bill back to that committee, I would be glad to move it; but if the House will not entertain that proposition, I would ask hon. members to be good enough to allow it to stand at least until Monday, when the promoter will probably be here, and when my request to refer the Bill back to the committee can be considered.

Mr. CALVERT. The promoter of the Bill, Dr. Johnston, as most of the members are aware, has been ill for a week or ten days, and may not be here on Monday; but I do not know any reason why the Bill should not be allowed to stand.

Bill allowed to stand.

CONSIDERED IN COMMITTEE—THIRD READINGS.

Bill (No. 172) for the relief of Philip Vibert.—Mr. Turriff.

Bill (No. 129) to amend an Act respecting certain Patents of William A. Damen.—Mr. Campbell.

Bill (No. 166) respecting certain Patents of the Ideal Manufacturing Company.—Mr. Campbell.

Bill (No. 119) to incorporate D. R. Fraser and Company.—Mr. Talbot (Strathcona).

DOMINION ATLANTIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Consideration of amendments made by the Senate to Bill (No. 106) respecting the Dominion Atlantic Railway Company.—Mr. Black.

Mr. BELCOURT. The amendments are merely verbal. The object is to make provisions of the Railway Act of 1903 applicable to this Act.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is to authorize the Dominion Atlantic Railway Company to acquire a local company and exercise its rights and privileges to the extent they are not inconsistent with our legislation.

Amendments read the second time and agreed to.

MANITOULIN AND NORTH SHORE RAILWAY COMPANY.

Consideration of amendment made by the Senate to Bill (No. 114) respecting the Manitoulin and North Shore Railway Company.—Mr. Dyment.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is merely a verbal amendment.

Amendment read the second time, and agreed to.

THE PACIFIC BANK.

Mr. GALLIHER moved the second reading of Bill (No. 175) respecting the Pacific Bank.

Mr. HENDERSON. Has this Bill been printed ?

Mr. GALLIHER. The fees for printing have been paid, but I am not sure that it has been printed.

Mr. HENDERSON. I presume it is the standard form of Bill ?

Mr. GALLIHER. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. The Banking and Commerce Committee will not sit for three or four days any way.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

On the order :

House in committee on Bill (No. 115) respecting the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. L. G. McCarthy.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I gather from the memorandum that I find in my copy of the Bill that it was intended to have this report of Mr. Shepley printed and distributed. But, though it has been printed, apparently it has not been distributed.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I got it printed. But, on inquiry of those responsible for the distribution, I am informed that it has not been distributed.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Perhaps, in that case, we might let the Bill stand until Monday afternoon ;—unless there is some very important reason for dealing with it now.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. It was suggested to me that there were financial reasons why it should be put through ; but I am not in a position to press it, if there is any objection.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. If the matter has been considered by counsel, and if there is any important reason why it should be gone on with, I would not ask that it should be allowed to stand. But I suppose that no great interest would suffer if it were not proceeded with at once.

Mr. FIELDING. I know that the company are exceedingly anxious to have the mortgage approved and that they attach importance to the Bill being gone on with. But I cannot give the reasons. They have been pressing for some time to have this transaction completed.

Mr. BERGERON. It has to go to the Senate and the Senate has adjourned for ten days.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Its standing until Monday will not delay the action of parliament.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I stated in committee that the report would be distributed before the Bill was gone on with, and I have to stand to that.

Bill allowed to stand.

SUPPLY

House in Committee of Supply.

Public Works—chargeable to income—miscellaneous temporary clerical and other assistance, inclusive of services of all persons required who were first employed after 1st July, 1882, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $44,000.

Hon. L. P. BRODEUR (for the Minister of Public Works). I explained this item before six o'clock.

Mr. BERGERON. This is a very large sum of money.

Mr. BRODEUR. It is the usual vote.

Mr. BERGERON. Is this for all the departments ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, for the Department of Public Works. My hon. friend knows that there are a number of officers with special technical knowledge whose salaries are paid out of this vote.

Public Works—chargeable to income—miscellaneous—for the purchase of technical books of reference and other publications, $500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is the usual vote and is intended to provide for the payment for technical works for the use of engineers, architects and draughtsmen.

Mr. BERGERON. Does the department buy works to this value every year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. Where are they kept ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Many of these are periodical publications and also technical works necessary for the use of officers of the department.

Mr. BERGERON. This is over $40 a month. If every department spends as much it would make a great sum.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not know about the other departments.

Mr. BERGERON. Well, take the Department of Inland Revenue, of which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brodeur) is the head. How about that department ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We buy some books out of our general vote, but the amount we spend is small—no comparison with the expense of periodicals and books for the Public Works Department.

To provide for expenditure in connection with Transportation Commission, $15,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for the remuneration of the commissioners, travelling expenses, salaries of two secretaries, and scientific and expert professional assistance necessary in connection with the commission's investigations.

Mr. BERGERON. This does not pay the salaries of the commissioners ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes ; the commissioners are paid $25 a day.

Mr. BERGERON. When they travel ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. When they do not travel they do not get anything ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No.

Mr. BERGERON. What have these gentlemen done ?

Mr. BRODEUR. They have made a couple of reports. But I must say that we have been somewhat unfortunate in connection with this commission. Sir Wm. Van Horne, who was first offered the chairmanship, was unable to accept the position. Then Mr. John Bertram, who was made chairman, suffered a lingering illness which resulted in his death. And Mr. Reford a member of the commission met with an accident which prevented him from taking part in the work of the commission.

Mr. BRODEUR.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I think I have heard everything the minister has now said three times already this session. Before we vote more money for this Transportation Commission, I must ask that some more definite statement be made as to what they have done, what they are doing, when they are likely to complete their labour and what the result of it all is expected to be. I have already brought the matter to the attention of the House on two different occasions and have asked that we be given something more than the vague statements which we have heard three times already and which amount to just nothing at all. This commission was constituted in 1903, and from that time to the present I do not know one single matter in which it has been of the slightest assistance to parliament, although during that interval we have dealt with many important matters in transportation. We have been voting money year after year, and we do not know whether the men sitting there are constituted as a commission at the present time, who are the members of it, what it is doing, or anything at all about it. I would like the minister to make a full, definite and clear statement as to these matters, about which I have asked twice already during the present session, or else let this item stand until the government is prepared to make that statement. I think the Minister of Inland Revenue will realize that I am not asking anything unreasonable.

Mr. BRODEUR. I have no objection to let the item stand.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. And I trust the hon. gentleman will take what I have said as notice that we do expect a statement on this matter.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not know whether the leader of the opposition remembers that an interim report has been laid before the House some time ago, with regard to the port of St. John.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It was an interim report with regard to some feature of one port.

Mr. BRODEUR. But he must admit that there have been many accidents. Lately the secretary of the commission became paralyzed. Some gentlemen who were appointed did not accept the position, and most of those who were appointed have either died or retired for one reason or another.

To cover balances of expenditures for works already authorized for which the appropriations may be insufficient, provided the amount for each work does not exceed $100, amounts shown opposite appropriations affected, $6,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is the same amount as was voted last year, when the whole amount was expended. Suppose there is a public work for which the money voted was found to be insufficient, lacking $50 or $75, it may be ; and instead of coming to parliament for a special vote to meet that balance, we take it out of this $6,000. Suppose there is an appropriation for $500 and it was found that the work cost $540; instead of coming to parliament to get a special vote for that $40 it is taken out of this vote.

Mr. BERGERON. It amounts to this, that the principle prevailing in the British parliament, that not a cent of money is to be spent without being voted by parliament for the special purpose, is violated in these instances. The amounts are small, but the principle is important. I notice many cases in which large amounts are asked for in the main estimates, which we have to supplement not only once but twice. This is the third supplementary estimate, if I may so call it, that we are voting for some work or other.

Mr. BRODEUR. We cannot well do otherwise. I see in the list some cases of 3 cents, 4 cents, 9 cents; certainly the hon. gentleman would not expect us to ask for votes to pay these balances.

Collection of slide and boom dues, including salaries of clerks, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $5,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. Among the clerks whose salaries are included, is Mr. Gagné, whose salary is $1,095, and he is referred to by the Civil Service Act exemption. The item also covers two boat men and travelling expenses and contingencies.

Mr. BERGERON. How much do we get from these slides and booms?

Mr. BRODEUR. We got last year $71,331.20 from the whole Dominion.

Mr. INGRAM. What was the total cost of the slides and booms, the cost of construction and so forth?

Mr. BRODEUR. We discussed that last night. There is the cost of construction, the cost of maintenance, and then the cost of the staff. This is for the staff. It includes one clerk at Ottawa, $1,095, two boat-men, $960; travelling expenses, $1,840; contingencies, $1,105. About the same amount every year.

To provide for paying the 'Upper Ottawa Improvement Company' allowances re logs passed through Chenaux Boom, 1905-6, $1,800.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is authorized by Order in Council of December 14, 1903, and is rendered necessary by the low water at certain seasons of the year.

Mr. INGRAM. The minister spoke of the Ottawa being very low. When is it very low, and at what points?

Mr. BRODEUR. Generally in September and October; the survey would tell the points, and I shall get that again.

Gatineau river—To pay Messrs. Gilmour & Hughson for use of their slides and booms at the Cascades, $600.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to pay Messrs. Gilmour & Hughson one year rental for the use of their slides and booms at the Cascades, as recommended by the superintending engineer of the Gatineau.

Mr. BERGERON. What is the object?

Mr. BRODEUR. To obviate building slides and booms for ourselves, we pay a certain rental. We have booms below, and if we did not lease these then ours would be overcrowded.

Mr. BERGERON. Whose logs are going down in such great quantities?

Mr. BRODEUR. The logs of the lumber merchants.

Mr. BERGERON. Are we paid for the logs that go through our booms?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes; and we are paid by Messrs. Gilmour & Hughson.

Mr. BERGERON. How much did we receive for that particular one?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is all in one item; we received last year from these booms in the Ottawa district $41,756.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. As I understand, the government has a series of booms and slides in the river, and where this particular boom or slide is situated they make use of it as if they owned it, and inasmuch as they get compensation for the use of all these slides and booms they pay this amount to certain persons whose work has done a certain part of the service. Is that it?

Mr. BRODEUR. Precisely.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The whole system leads in effect to the provision of a highway for bringing logs down, the utilizing of the river as a highway for the carriage of logs from the place where they are cut to the place of manufacture. I may be permitted to say that while this seems to be the practice in Ontario and Quebec, to a great extent in other provinces of Canada provision of this kind is made very largely by the lumbermen themselves. The cases are perhaps capable of being distinguished. Here the river runs up a much greater distance and is used by a very much greater number of persons. In the instance to which I refer in my own province, the individual stream was probably used by not more than two or three lumbermen, or in some cases by not more than one. It may be that apart from this work the lumbermen have to make provision for running their logs down the streams which lead into the Ottawa. The conditions perhaps may be equalized by the circumstance I have just mentioned, that upon streams running into the Ottawa these men have to make that provision which is made by the lumbermen in the maritime provinces for bringing logs from the interior to the sea shore. I do not know how it is, unless there is some such condition as that. It seems to be a different policy in the different provinces.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed that the policy with regard to those booms on some rivers in Ontario and Quebec is a very old policy, existing long before confederation. I think it was established by the government of the country when these rivers were being settled up, when timber came to be cut off the banks of these rivers, and it has all been carried on in that way. I am under the impression that in the Confederation Act there was some provision as to the maintenance of those slides and booms. If it was possible to give them over to the lumbermen, perhaps it would be good policy; I am not sure.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There would probably be difficulty about doing that where a large number of lumbermen are using the one stream; it might lead to conflict and friction. I am not criticising the policy; I believe that in respect to a great industry such as the lumber industry of these two provinces, it is the proper thing to have a great highway, such as the Ottawa, put in such condition that it may be used to the full. I suppose that must be done; and, in addition to that, there is the circumstance that some compensation, probably not very adequate compensation, is received back from the lumbermen for the use of these slides.

Mr. BRODEUR. I have given the amount —$71,000. I was informed yesterday by the deputy minister that we get a return equal to 3 per cent on the money invested.

Mr. BERGERON. Do we pay $600 every year in this particular instance?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the minister give us the rates on each class of timber—square timber, dimension timber, cedar poles, railway ties, &c.?

Mr. BRODEUR. The rates are printed in a little book, of which I shall be glad to send a copy to my hon. friend. I have not the information before me.

Mr. HERRON. Is this the method of collecting royalty?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is simply a kind of a highway made in the river. My hon. friend will see at the Chaudière that it was necessary to build slides there to bring down the logs from the upper part of the Ottawa below the falls. These slides and booms were constructed many years ago to enable the lumbermen to carry on their business, and there is a certain amount every year for their maintenance. There is no royalty.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN.

Repairs and working expenses, harbours, docks and slides, $164,400.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is an increase of $10,300 here.

Mr. BRODEUR. The item is made up as follows: St. Maurice district, $38,000; Ottawa river, $25,000; Trent river, $2,400; Burlington channel, $2,000; River Yamaska, $900; River Le Lièvre, $800: Levis Graving Dock, $4,500; Kingston, $3,000; Esquimalt, $8,500; making a total for the staff of $85,100. The repairs and supplies amout to $79,300 and the increase of $10,300 is made up as follows: St. Maurice district repairs and improvements, $5,900; Burlington channel bridge, repairs and improvements, $1,700; River Yamaska, lock and dam, $500; Kingston Graving Dock, $500; Esquimalt Graving Dock, $700.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What was spent last year on the same works?

Mr. BRODEUR. For slides and booms, $75,362.25; for the graving docks, $33,884.53; for the bridge locks, $10,068.76.

Telegraph lines Prince Edward Island and the mainland, $7,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why do you mix up these items in the estimates in such a confused manner? You have telegraph lines in one place, and then slides and booms, and then something else and then telegraph lines again. It looks as if the items were thrown into a basket and the basket turned upside down.

Mr. BRODEUR. At one page of the estimates the items are for construction and maintenance and at the other page for collection of revenue.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why do you not say so in the estimates. I think I could make better estimates than these although I have had no practice.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Why is there such a large increase in this vote?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is because of the contract we have made with the Anglo-American Company by which we give them $5,000 for a better service for the people of the island.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I do not understand why you should give the one company this $5,000 when you might perhaps have got a better service from the Canadian Pacific Railway for instance.

Mr. BRODEUR. The Anglo-American Company have a monopoly under an old contract and we have to deal with them.

Land and cable lines, lower St. Lawrence and maritime provinces, including working expenses of vessels required for cable service, also maintenance of Marconi Wireless Telegraph at Belle Isle, $80,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This vote is called for by the general superintendent of telegraphs to provide for the expenses of the lines in the lower St. Lawrence and maritime provinces and the Marconi system.

Telegraph line, Northwest Territories, $26,000.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Why is there an increase in this vote ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is in consequence of the line being extended and the greater expense for its operation.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. How many operators are there on the line between Qu'Appelle and Edmonton ?

Mr. BRODEUR. J. S. Macdonald, Miss D. Johnston, A. Von Lindenburg, H. A. Macdonald, T. G. Clement, W. Salisbury, D. Noel, T. J. Callaghan, E. McCleneghan, H. McClenaghan, G. G. Mann, M. Therien, J. Carroll, A. K. Morrison, J. C. Gordon, E. A. Holmes, A. W. M. Campbell, T. J. McNamara.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Does part of this line run along the Canadian Northern ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed that both lines meet at a place called Humboldt.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Are you going to continue the government line to Edmonton ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. If the Canadian Northern is going to have a line to Edmonton, what is the object of the government continuing the line ?

Mr. BRODEUR. One is built for railway work. We have our line established, and I suppose it is better for us to maintain it.

Mr. INGRAM. I should judge that the government line will not pay. The railway will be able to operate its line for a commercial business, too.

Mr. BRODEUR. We expect that the line will pay.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Does the hon. minister mean that he is going into competition with a private line ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No ; the line between Qu'Appelle and Edmonton is already built.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I thought the two items of increase were due to extensions ?

Mr. BRODEUR. They are for lines which have been built outside of the Qu'Appelle and Edmonton line.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am afraid the hon. gentleman is violating one of the canons of the Postmaster General by competing with private enterprise. He was horrified with that idea with regard to railways. I suppose this opportunity has been selected to pass this item in his absence.

Mr. BRODEUR. I suppose we cannot prevent railway companies building telegraph lines over their own territory.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But the principle might require you to cease operating yours.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Does the minister know anything about Mr. Macdonald having a house built for him, and about his having taken an active part in the last elections ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I am sorry that I cannot gratify my hon. friend's desire for information on that subject.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Have you not the money there for building the house ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There is none.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the minister give us an idea of the number of messages, other than government messages, which have been sent over this line ?

Mr. BRODEUR. 12,000 in the Northwest, outside of government messages.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. How many government messages ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not think it is stated in the blue-book.

Mr. INGRAM. How does that compare with the previous year ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I am informed that it is about the same.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it not a fact that this line runs through Indian reservations, and that there is very little local patronage ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Our telegraph lines are built in certain sections of the country which are not provided with telegraphic communication, and where private companies will not provide it. They develop trade and the country generally.

Mr. INGRAM. If the hon. gentleman looks at the map, he will see that the Canadian Northern line runs from Humboldt west through Edmonton. Therefore, it seems remarkable that the government should keep up their line to the same place. The statement of the hon. gentleman might apply very well where there is no private line ; but here you have two lines in a sparsely settled country, and I see no reason why the government should continue to keep their line up.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not see why the government should take it away. The line was constructed in 1883, long before the Canadian Northern was built. If the railway company is establishing a telegraph line along its railway we cannot prevent it.

Mr. INGRAM. The point I am making is this. Everybody knows that it requires a certain expenditure every year to keep up a telegraph line. When the Canadian Northern has a line through that section of country, why should the government keep up another ? The poles and wires might very well be put where they would serve points which are not now served by any company.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not think it would pay to transfer these poles and wires 200 or 300 miles away.

Mr. INGRAM. Does the government make a practice of building houses for the operators on this telegraph line ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Where there are no houses the department builds them.

Mr. INGRAM. Have you got the buildings that we erected last year ? Take the one in township 36, range 23 near Humboldt for one Mr. Macdonald.

Mr. BRODEUR. I will inquire and bring down the information.

Mr. INGRAM. Having the government line and the Canadian Northern line, why are you going to the extra expense of building houses on a line which cannot possibly, for years to come, make sufficient to pay running expenses. I think that the government should not go to that additional expense when the Northern is able to perform all the services required at present.

Mr. BRODEUR. I am not familiar with the circumstances, but when I have the report, I shall be in a position to give all the information required. It may be necessary to build some houses in some particular places but I am not in a position to give information just now.

Mr. INGRAM. Would it not be better to let the item stand ?

Mr. BRODEUR. No, I will give the information when we are next in supply.

Telegraph lines, British Columbia, $20,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for the working expenses of the British Columbia line during next year. The small increase is due to an additional line.

Telegraph lines, Yukon (Ashcroft—Dawson line and branches), $183,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to provide for the working expenses for the fiscal year ending 30th June, 1906, namely, salary of operating staff, line repairs, travelling expenses, provisions, freight, packing charges, supplies, &c.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. This is the item on which the hon. minister promised to give the House how much more it cost the government than the return received, the cost of construction, the length of the line and so on.

Mr. BRODEUR. The length of the line is 2,252 miles. The cost of construction was about $700,000. Staff salaries, $109,169 for the main line ; $12,680 for the branch line. Rents, repairs, travelling expenses on the main line, $54,000 and on the branch line, $4,430. Revenue so far, since the 1st July, 1899, $555,019.19. Revenue during the last fiscal year, $126,991. That is for the whole of the line, 2,000 mile system, Yukon and branches. The deficit is about $40,000.

Mr. INGRAM. What number of messages in the Yukon district ?

Mr. BRODEUR. They are not divided. I can only give the number sent on the line.

Mr. INGRAM. In your report, you give the average number of messages in Ontario, Quebec, the Northwest, British Columbia and the Yukon. The average number on all the Yukon lines was 42,000 for 1903-4.

Mr. BRODEUR. The exact number during the last fiscal year was 47,982. What is referred to in the report is the yearly average of messages, and I suppose it must cover a certain number of years.

Mr. INGRAM. How do the operating expenses compare with the receipts on the telegraph lines controlled by the government ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Last year the revenue was $147,000 and the expenditure $327,000.

Mr. INGRAM. That is a big deficit.

Mr. BRODEUR. It certainly is not a paying operation.

Mr. INGRAM. That shows the importance of cutting off non-paying lines where there is competition.

Mr. BRODEUR. If a corporation puts in a line and the government gives no return, it certainly would not be fair to the country to keep it in operation.

Public Works—collection of revenue—telegraph service generally, $3,500.

Mr. BRODEUR. This covers expenses in connection with Dominion Telegraph service : Printed blanks, form and stationery ; telegraph instruments and batteries; travelling expenses of staff at headquarters, and petty cash disbursements. The amount spent last year was $3,407.31.

Mr. INGRAM. Does that include the Pelee Island service ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes, the expenditure on that under that head was $182.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. Referring again to the items for telegraph lines in the lower St. Lawrence and the maritime provinces, including the Marconi wireless, will the hon. minister please give us some explanation of what is being done with respect to the Marconi system ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We are not working that system generally. There are only two places where we have stations using the Marconi system. When the cable does not serve, the Marconi system is used.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the hon. gentleman give me the information I asked for the other night with reference to the reimbursements by the Dominion government to the government of Nova Scotia in connection with harbours ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I have here a copy of the Order in Council which I will send to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. INGRAM. All I wish to know is whether these reimbursements were for expenditures since 1867, or before that time?

Mr. BRODEUR. Since 1867.

Mr. INGRAM. So, the statement of the hon. member for Inverness (Mr. McLennan) was not correct.

Public Works—chargeable to capital—harbours and rivers—transportation facilities—Georgian bay to Montreal, survey for waterway via French and Ottawa rivers, $157,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. This is to make provision for carrying on during the present year an exhaustive survey of this proposed canal route. Last year $250,000 was voted, and that amount, I understand, has been expended up to this date. The distance to be covered is about 430 miles. The survey was begun immediately after the vote was taken last year, and no time will be lost in completing the same. As the committee is aware, this survey has been asked by all the interests affected.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. To what interests does the hon. minister refer ?

Mr. BRODEUR. All the counties bordering on the line of the proposed canal. These have urged the construction of the canal ; but, before undertaking the work ; it was found necessary to make a thorough survey.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Was the survey entered upon in pursuance of a policy to construct the work, or was it to determine whether it would be wise to adopt that policy ?

Mr. BRODEUR. We must assume that, if the cost is not too great, it will be for the government to consider whether the work should be carried on or not. It has been represented that the work could be done for a relatively small amount. The survey will let us know, whether the work is feasible and what it will cost, and also whether development caused by the work will warrant the expenditure.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When is it expected that the work will be completed ?

Mr. BRODEUR. The work is being carried on under the direction of the chief engineer of Public Works, Mr. Lafleur.

Mr. BERGERON. And who has charge under him.

Mr. BRODEUR. There is Mr. St. Laurent, engineer in charge, and Mr. Genest, engineer in charge. Then there are three district engineers, Mr. Chapleau, Mr. Rainboth, and Mr. Coutlee. We have three parties in each district.

Mr. BERGERON. When do you expect to finish ?

Mr. BRODEUR. In the month of September. The parties have been at work since August last. The total amount of $250,000 has been expended.

Mr. BERGERON. Is this the same scheme which was launched some years ago by Mr. McLeod Stewart, of Ottawa ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Mr. Stewart's scheme, I think, only contemplated a 12-foot canal ; but the surveys now going on contemplate depths ranging from 12 to 21 feet.

Mr. BERGERON. Who decided on making the change from a 12-foot proposition to a 21-foot proposition ?

Mr. BRODEUR. There has been no change made, but the government has decided to have a thorough survey. Representations have been made to the government that a 12-foot canal would be useless, and that if we want a serviceable work we had better contemplate a 21-foot channel.

Mr. BERGERON. Who proposed that ?

Mr. BRODEUR. It is not a proposition, it is only to get the necessary information to find out how much such a work will cost, whether it is feasible and whether the traffic would warrant the expenditure.

Mr. BERGERON. I do not think the hon. gentleman understands my question. The first scheme, so far as I remember, was for a 12-foot canal. The hon. minister says now that information is asked for as to the probable cost of a 21-foot channel. Now, who is the man, or who is the party, who has suggested that change from a 12 to a 21-foot canal ?

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not know that any persons have been asking for a change, but we have decided to make a survey for a 21-foot channel to see whether such a work can be done or not. The government came to this decision last year. There were petitions and delegations from all the counties interested asking the government to make the survey.

Mr. BERGERON. Why was not Mr. Stewart's scheme accepted ?

Mr. BRODEUR. Because the information was not sufficient. Moreover, it is claimed, with apparent reason, that if we decided to build a canal in that part of the country, it should be large enough to accommodate vessels drawing 21 feet of water. We already have our canal system in the southern part of the province, and what is the use of building a canal in the north only accommodating vessels of the same size ? I must say also that the surveys which have already been made were not, properly speaking, surveys, but simply examinations. Before undertaking a work of that magnitude we must have ample information, and the only way to obtain it is to send engineers to study carefully the feasibility and the probable cost, not only for a 12-foot channel, but even for a 21-foot channel, which would allow lake boats to pass through from Duluth and Chicago direct to Montreal, and even to Europe.

Mr. BERGERON. I have an object in putting my question, and it is this: Mr. Stewart's scheme, I think, contemplated a company building the canal at their own expense, they were only asking the government to guarantee so much upon their bonds. It was looked upon at the time as a very feasible scheme, as it contemplated only a 12-foot canal. There are already a great many reports in the Department of Public Works concerning the route to be traversed, reports made twenty-five or thirty years ago. They may not be as accurate as the reports we are getting now, but they were sufficient to enable Mr. Stewart to organize a company. I would like to know who changed this scheme from a 12-foot canal to a 21-foot. A 12-foot canal, or a 14-foot canal, could have been built, but the moment the government try to build a 21-foot canal they will meet with opposition, and they might as well stop all their expenditures at once, because such a canal will never be built. I know, as a matter of fact, that very strong opposition will be offered to any such expenditure. I know, as a matter of fact, that if the government seriously undertake to make a 21-foot canal, it will not be carried through, and the money we are spending now will have been wasted in so far as it contemplates a 21-foot canal. I will give one reason for saying so. If the government undertake to build a canal of 21 feet from the Georgian bay down to Montreal it will involve an immense amount of money, it will be a matter of from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, whereas Mr. McLeod Stewart's scheme could have been accomplished for $25,000,000. My hon. friend knows enough to understand that the larger scheme will meet with strong opposition; I need not tell him from what quarter it will come. But when it is known that vessels loaded with wheat can start from Fort William or Port Arthur and go straight to Liverpool, strong opposition will be offered. I need not say any more than that, the hon. gentleman understands what I mean. There will be such an opposition that the canal will never be built, and therefore we are spending money uselessly, except in so far as the information we may acquire will be useful for a 12-foot canal. A 12-foot canal may be built, but a 21-foot canal never.

Mr. BRODEUR. I do not think my hon. friend should criticise this appropriation. Suppose the canal were not built at present, or in the near future; the important information which will be obtained will be of great use to future generations. My hon. friend knows that some years ago explorations were made in relation to a proposed change in some of the canals. Our existing canals were not built until many years after they were first begun. Take, for example, the Soulanges canal, with which the hon. gentleman is very familiar; it was pending for many years, the government made surveys many years ago and spent large sums of money in preliminary work. We do not know whether this canal will be built, perhaps it will be found to be too expensive or not sufficiently profitable.

Mr. BERGERON. It would become a matter of expense and no government would ask parliament to spend $150,000,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. The only question now is whether it is desirable to spend that sum of money to collect that information. Some people will say that if they survey a 14-foot canal we will have information as to the cost and will be then in a position to discuss the advisability of building a canal.

Mr. BERGERON. Are the engineers collecting information as to how much it would cost for a 12, 14, or 21-foot canal?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes. When they were making these surveys it was just as well to have them determine the cost for a canal of the different depths. This is to collect the information and then the government will have to decide whether the work will be built or not.

Mr. BERGERON. And this will complete the expenditure in connection with the surveys?

Mr. BRODEUR. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. The surveys would cost $250,000.

Mr. BRODEUR. More than that. We have spent this year $250,000 and are asking $150,000.

Mr. BERGERON. That will be over $400,000?

Mr. BRODEUR. $400,000 in round numbers.

Mr. BERGERON. How can you spend that in a year?

Mr. BRODEUR. Salaries and supplies for the large staff required. The monthly pay list is $18,000 and then there are the supplies.

Mr. BERGERON. There is a revote of $50,000?

Mr. BRODEUR. When the estimates were made up in January, it was thought we would not spend the $250,000, but they work in the winter just as well as in summer, so they spent the whole amount. There is no revote properly speaking.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What do you take up on Monday? The Prime Minister told me that the Alberta Bill was coming up on Monday.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. As far as the Alberta Bill is concerned, if it is quite agreeable to the leader of the opposition to have it brought down on Tuesday that would be more satisfactory.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. You are not going on on Monday.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I thought we would take the Autonomy Bill, that part of it, which has reference to the distribution of seats.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I understood informally and privately from the Prime Minister that you proposed proceeding with the Autonomy Bill on Monday and he expected the House to get through with it next week.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. After the conversation with my hon. friend the leader of the opposition occurred, it was found that it would be more convenient to take it up on Tuesday.

Mr. FIELDING. In that case we will proceed on Monday with the estimates and there may be some public Bills which we will take up first.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. The report of the committee on immigration only came down yesterday and we have not had time to investigate it. It would be more convenient not to take up the immigration estimates on Monday.

Mr. FIELDING. I think perhaps it could be arranged to deal with other interior estimates, keeping that for a little later. In any case if it should be taken up in my hon. friend's absence there will be an opportunity on the suplementary estimates for him to speak.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I would prefer to speak on the main estimates.

Mr. FIELDING. If it is possible we will postpone the item.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I do not think there ought to be any difficulty whatever about postponing.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 10.05 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, June 19, 1905.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 177) respecting certain patents of David Thomas Owen.—Mr. A. Lavergne.

Bill (No. 178) respecting the Canada Central Railway Company.—Mr. A. Lavergne.

Bill (No. 179) respecting the Brandon, Saskatchewan and Hudson Bay Railway Company.—Mr. A. Lavergne.

Bill (No. 180) further to amend the Act of 1899 respecting the city of Ottawa.—Mr. Fielding.

BANK ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. FIELDING moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 181) to amend the Bank Act. He said: The purpose of this Bill has already been mentioned to the House. By our present Bank Act the number of the directors of a bank is limited to be not less than five nor more than ten. With the growth of our banking institutions, as respects both the amount of their capital and the wider field which they are constantly occupying, the limitation of ten directors has been found inconvenient, and already a Bill has been introduced into the other branch of parliament for the purpose of allowing one of the banks to enlarge the number of its directors and also to appoint an honorary president. We think it desirable that our banking legislation should, as far as possible, be general; and, as the object of the Bill is one to which no reasonable objection could be had, we prefer to deal with it by a general Bill. We therefore propose in this amendment to strike out the limit of not more than ten, leaving the bank free to have, not less than five, but otherwise as many directors as time and experience may show to be necessary. We find that both in England and the United States many banks have very large boards of directors. As a number of our banks are increasing their capital and enlarging the field of their operations, we propose to make this amendment in a general Bill rather than to make special provisions applicable to the varying conditions of different banks.

Mr. SPROULE. You do not fix any limit to the number?

Mr. FIELDING. Not otherwise than that there must be not less than five. We think there is safety to the public interest in having a large board.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

AMERICANIZATION OF CANADIAN TELEGRAPH LINES.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are procdeeded with, I wish to call the attention of the government to a matter of some urgency. I will do so as briefly as possible, and, to put myself in order, will conclude in the usual way. I desire to point out to the government what, to the mind of many, is an impending danger to the Canadian telegraph system in the Americanizing of a portion of that system in violation of the provisions of the Alien Labour Act. I refer more particularly to the Americanizing of the Great Northwestern telegraph system. Members of this House will remember that about twenty years ago that system, as it exists to-day, was composed of the Montreal Telegraph Company, the Dominion Telegraphe Company and a company called the Mutual Union Company, of less extent than the other two, but still of some importance. The systems as they existed then attracted the attention of American capitalists and the Western Union Telegraph Company, having acquired, as I am informed, complete control of the Dominion Telegraph Company, established a company called the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company ; and that company absorbed the then existing companies—the old Montreal Telegraph Company, the Dominion Telegraph Company and the Mutual Union Telegraph Company. I need not acquaint the House with the details of the arrangements that were then made. It is sufficient to say that a certain dividend satisfactory to the shareholders of these respective companies was granted to them, and the new company entered into operations of the lines of the old companies and has operated them ever since. Not much attention was paid at the time to this transformation ; but within the last two or three years the attention of American capitalists interested in the amalgamation has been directed anew to Canada, and they have undertaken to completely Americanize the system, and in so doing, as I am informed credibly, they are violating every day and intend to violate still more the provisions of the Alien Labour Act. Some notice of this was taken in the public press some time ago. In one of the papers I find this paragraph :

> Great Northwestern telegraph changes. Mr. S. B. McMichael, of Minneapolis, a son of the general manager of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company, is now located at Montreal. In connection with his presence there are said to be several changes pending as a result of his investigation and report. Already a new chief operator and chief accountant have been installed. Changes are also said to be impending in the Quebec office.

In another newspaper appears a telegram, under date of May 26, as follows :

> A Telegraphic Shake-up.
> Montreal office of the Great Northwestern loses two of its chiefs—Will Americans be imported ?
> From our own correspondent.
> Montreal, May 26.—The shake-up which has been predicted in the Great Nortwestern Telegraph Company here, owing to the Western Union, which leases the lines, becoming active in the management, has come. Mr. Thomas Rodgers, who has been an official of the company for many years and has held the post of chief operator, has been dismissed. He will be succeeded by a telegraph man from the United States, and it is stated that Mr. Rodgers, who is looked upon as a very competent man, will be taken over by the Canadian Pacific Railway Telegraph Company. The former chief accountant, W. J. S. McCormack, left the service of the Great Northwestern some weeks ago, and now occupies a berth with the Canadian Pacific Railway, and it is stated that other changes will follow, including the withdrawal of Manager Powell, of the Montreal office.

The facts, as far as they have been ascertained,—and they have been communicated to me by reliable people—are as follows : The first president and the general manager, I think, since the creation of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company, was Mr. H. P. Dwight, of Toronto—a gentleman who, I believe, initiated the telegraph system in Canada, and has always been considered a very competent man. Not long ago the American interests appointed Mr. I McMichael, of Minneapolis, general manager in place of Mr. Dwight, and Mr. McMichael came here and assumed the duties of his office. From my information, Mr. McMichael's services were secured in the city of Minneapolis as general manager here, and he came here for the purpose of carrying through the changes to which I am now adverting. Mr. L. S. Humes, of St. Paul, Minneapolis, was afterwards appointed general superintendent at Toronto. A little later on, Mr. S. B. McMichael, son of Mr. I. McMichael, general manager, of the city of Chicago, was appointed superintendent at Toronto, and entered upon the duties of his office. I believe the attention of the Department of Labour was drawn to these changes, and Mr. S. B. McMichael was for some reason or another—supposed to be on account of illness—withdrawn from the service of the company temporarily, and a report was made to the Department of Labour that Mr. McMichael, of Toronto, was the superintendent of the company there But the report failed to indicate that his services had been engaged in the city of Chicago and he had been brought to Toronto to fill that position. Another appointment of recent date is that of Mr. F. R. Carney, of Chicago, Illinois, who was appointed manager at Ottawa to replace Mr. Bethune, to whom a retiring allowance was given on account of his long services. Mr. Carney is in office here, and his services were secured at Chicago by the American interest. Mr. Callahan, of Chicago, was named cashier at Montreal to replace Mr. W. J. S. McCormick and the services of Mr. Callahan were also secured in Chicago. Several other minor appointments of the same nature as those I have just mentioned were also made, and I was informed in Montreal, where the company has a large number of minor employees, that a plan is in contemplation of importing from Boston and other points in the United States, line men and other men to replace those at present labouring for the company in Montreal and the surrounding districts. Under these circumstances, I deem it my duty to call the attention of the government to this matter. I question whether it is in our interests as Canadians that the service of that important system should be entirely placed in the hands of aliens. Here in Ottawa, I presume, the government itself has considerable relations with both telegraph systems, and I think it is important that this system should be controlled by Canadians. I think it is the duty of the government, through the Department of Labour, or by any other prompt course it may see fit to adopt, to see whether the law is being violated in the way I have indicated, and if so, to bring to this state of things a prompt remedy. According to the decision given a day or two ago, I believe, by Mr. Justice Anglin in Toronto, in the case of the Père Marquette employees, it might be necessary, if that decision be well founded, that the government should make some change in the law as it exists. Personally I regret that hostile legislation of this kind should be in force between the two countries, but it was begun in the United States; and as long as an alien labour law is in force there, and enforced very severely against Canadians, it is the duty of the government to protect labour in our own country. I beg to move that the House do now adjourn.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend stated at the beginning of his remarks that the present telegraph company, of which he complains, was incorporated by this parliament some twenty years ago. This company then absorbed two or three Canadian companies, and at the time it was understood that a large number of American capitalists were going into the organization. I forget at the moment the terms of the Act, but it was well known at the time that this incorporation of the Northwestern Telegraph Company was going to bring a large proportion of American capital into the country. We did not, I believe, then take the precaution that we have taken of late years of providing that there should be on the board of directors a certain proportion of British subjects.

Mr. MONK. I think my right hon. friend is mistaken. I think there was at that time a provision in the law that the majority of the directors should be Canadian. In fact I know of only two Americans on the board, Mr. I. McMichael himself and Mr. B. Brooks. The others are Canadians. Mr. Hugh M. Baird, Mr. Adam Brown, Mr. W. C. Matthews and Mr. James Hedley and the late Hon. Mr. McDougall were the Canadian directors. But I do not think the board has sat at all with regard to any of these changes. I am informed it was never consulted and that the changes were carried out entirely by the American interests, irrespective of what the Canadian directors might do or think.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not know. Perhaps the board may be Canadian. There is no provision in the Act of incorporation, so far as I know, providing that there should be a certain number of British subjects. That may or may not be the case. If it is the case, I am happy to say I was under a misapprehension. But in that case, the Act to which my hon. friend objects would not have been committed by a Canadian board or sheltered by their authority.

Mr. MONK. As I am informed, they are not consulted.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If they are not consulted then, it is to be presumed, that the facts are somewhat different from what my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) has understood them to be. My information—the little I have on the subject—goes to show that these men are practically transfers of Canadians from one position to another and that my hon. friend is under a misapprehension. My information just received, is that these changes have not been to the detriment of Canadians, except in one case. I am informed that Mr. Rogers, whom my hon. friend has just named was replaced, not by an American, but by a Canadian by the name of Graham. I understand that the same is true of all the others except in one case. In that case an American has superseded an old man named Bethune, who has been pensioned for life. But while this is my information, still, on the complaint of my hon. friend, we are called upon to look into the matter. I cannot say, of course, what our decision is to be. We had an Alien Labour law up to three days ago; it is a question whether we have it now. In the opinion of one judge the law is ultra vires.

Mr. FOSTER. And, there is no appeal?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am not sure as to that. All this matter has to be looked into. At present, we do not know whether we have an Alien Labour law or not. Of course, I think we have it yet: Not because I am in love with that kind of legislation; it is not a thing to be generally approved. But our action in passing it was an action in self defence. In order to reach a decision as to what we shall do, we must have the best information and advice on the subject whether the Alien Labour Law is in force or not.

Mr. MONK. I merely wish to say to my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) that there can be no doubt about the facts——

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. They are disputed.

Mr. MONK. There is no doubt about Mr. McMichael having come to this country and the position of general manager having been taken from Mr. Dwight. There is no doubt whatever about Mr. Hughes or about Mr.

S. B. McMichael, or about Mr. Carney, manager in Ottawa having replaced Mr. Bethune. The information that my right hon. friend has is the information, as I am informed, given to the Department of Labour. But that information is incorrect. So far as my information goes, there is no doubt whatever that these gentlemen were engaged in the United States and came here for the purpose of filling these positions. They are under contract; they are in violation of the Alien Labour law. And if an inquiry is made, my right hon. friend will find that my statement of the facts is absolutely correct. Before further changes are made, I think that, as the Department of Labour costs us pretty dear, and as this is essentially within its functions, the matter ought to be looked into immediately to prevent Canadians losing their positions merely because of the fact that they are Canadians.

Motion (Mr. Monk) to adjourn, negatived.

HALF BREED SCRIP.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER (North Toronto). I gave notice to the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) that I would bring up a question in connection with half-breed scrip.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). I have here a further instalment of the papers on that subject which I will lay on the table.

Mr. FOSTER. When, on a former occasion I spoke on this question of scrip, I had to do so largely from hearsay, having no papers before me except a small memorandum. Since that time the Minister of the Interior has been good enough to bring down the first instalment of the papers. And although those that I asked for are not all down, I think it would be well to make a statement to the House and for the information of the government—and I ask the attention of the government to it—on the facts as shown in the papers so far as we have had laid before us. I want to say in the first place——

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Would not my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) wait until the House is voted into Committee of Supply?

Mr. FOSTER. I think I would rather deal with it now, if my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) does not object. The whole question arises, as the House knows, on a change of policy made on the 13th of August, 1904, by an Order in Council passed on that day, the policy changed having been one thoroughly understood by parliament, and to the extent that no adverse vote was registered against it—acquiesced in by parliament. The policy was with reference to claims to scrip by half-breeds who, after 1885, had left this country and gone to the United States of America, and had, it is presumed, taken residence on Indian reservations there, availing themselves of the privileges granted by the United States to men of part Indian blood. The last commission appointed on this subject was that of Mr. McKenna. That commission reported on the 31st of May, 1901. And that report and the minister's report accompanying it, formed an Order in Council approving of the different recommendations which were made. Of these recommendations I wish to refer only to two. No. 6 of these recommendations is as follows:

> Inasmuch as those persons of mixed blood in Canada who participated in the benefits of band life on Indian reservations are excluded from receiving said scrip, I have taken the position that half-breeds who have left Canada and taken up their residence on Indian reservations in the United States and participate in the benefits of Indian life there, as well as half-breed children admitted to United States Indian schools, be likewise excluded.

And the last recommendation is:

> In order to avoid the disputes on the question which was raised, I would suggest the desirability of making it clear that it is understood that in the case of money scrip no powers of attorney are to be accepted or acted upon, and that in cases in which the half-breed asks for land scrip the commissioner has no authority to accept or act upon any assignment of power of attorney.

The matter went on from 1901 to 1904, when, on the 13th of August, an Order in Council was passed traversing the order which approved of section 6, and, in short removing that disability and making it possible for the claims of that class of half-breeds who had left the Northwest and gone to the United States to again receive consideration. In that Order in Council of the 13th of August, 1904, it was reiterated that personal attendance was a requisite of the location of the land by the half-breed who was the grantee in the case.

That brings me in short to the position in which we found it when we undertook the discussion of this question the other day, and it is with that preliminary which sets out the conditions of the controversy that I rest the case so far as the policy is concerned in that regard, and come down to what is revealed in the present papers. This matter lay in that way until January, 1904, with this exception, that there was a petition in July, 1903, from these half-breeds of Turtle Mountain who are the interested parties in the case, asking that their case should be reviewed, and complaining that their rights were withheld from them wrongly by Mr. McKenna, and against what had been the idea of the government as shown in the Orders in Council appointing the commission. That was in July, 1903. Then there was also a presentation of the case made by a barrister of Winnipeg, by the name of Chaffey, who picked out one particular case, elaborated it, thereon made his appeal to the minister and sent it into him about the latter part of 1903. That appeal was considered by the minister, was commended as an able document, but the writer of the same was informed that the government could not traverse its action and would not reverse its decision. That was in December, 1903. So that the petition of July, 1903, from the Turtle Mountain half-breeds and the presentation of the case by the barrister of Winnipeg, in December, 1903, were both considered, both refused by the government as contrary to their adopted policy. That brings us to the first of 1904. Now suddenly in August, 1904, the Order in Council to which I have referred was passed, that policy was reversed, a new policy was promulgated, and no notice was given of that new policy from the 13th of August until the latter part of October, when it appeared in the official gazette. These are not the most popular of notices, and as a matter of fact the interested parties, whether they were the half-breeds of Turtle Mountain, or whether they were barristers or brokers who had been interested in the claims of these same half-breeds, did not know that anything had taken place as a reversal of the policy until nearly the 1st of January, 1905, and some of them not fully until March 2, 1905.

What had been going on in the meantime? A party by the name of McDonald, of the city of Winnipeg, one of a firm of three, had in some way or other become acquainted with what was proposed or with what had been actually carried out. So far as these papers go, no notice was given to McDonald of the Order in Council until October 6th, although it was passed on August 13th. But McDonald's position was so different from that of all the others that though neither he, if we presume that to be a fact, received any intimation until October 6th, and none of the others received full information until the beginning of the following year. Mr. McDonald, by prescience, intuition or otherwise, knew that something was going to take place, and in July and August of the year in which the Order in Council was passed, Mr. McDonald visited the half-breeds in North Dakota and undertook a certain work amongst them which will be better detailed hereafter. He pursued that work assiduously up till the time and after the time of the passing of the Order in Council, and with such good success that before the 1st day of January, 1905, when some of his competitors and others interested in the business found out that something was going on, a large number of scrip was already in Mr. McDonald's hands. Fifty-five had been issued in the month of November, 1904, ninety-three in all had been issued before the end of 1904, of the whole number of 136 issued altogether, of which fifteen have not yet been sent to their destination. So you may practically say that before any others interested, whom the department knew well were interested, from months and years of communication, from tens and scores and hundreds of applications and assignments filed by them in the department from time to time, and up to the very end of 1903, practically all the scrip which had been allowed by Mr. Coté was in the hands of Mr. McDonald before any of his competitors or others interested in the matter found out what was going on.

Mr. SPROULE. That is a scoop.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, it was fortunate for Mr. McDonald. Mr. McDonald seemed to have worked for that end. I do not find fault with him in that respect. He commenced in January, 1904, by getting an opinion from Mr. Ewart, and later from Mr. Wilson, both barristers in the city of Winnipeg, in respect of these particular half-breeds. These letters and information he transferrerd to the department. I am not going to make a long story of this, but in the end Mr. Wilson advised him to try and get the department to reverse their policy, and above all to try and get the department to do away with the necessity of personal location. On July 2nd, Mr. McDonald preferred his request to the department asking for a reversal of the policy, and asking that the personal location attendance should be dispensed with.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Reversal as to what?

Mr. FOSTER. Reversal of the policy of the department under the Order in Council of January 6, 1901, in which they approve of Mr. McKenna's disallowance of the claims of that class of the half-breeds who had left the Northwest after 1885, and had taken up their residence and participated in Indian reservations on the south side of the line. On July 2nd, he asked for the reversal and on July 14, the government said: We will consider it, that is the department said it because I notice that the department appears largely to have been the government. Then, between July 2nd or July 14th and October 6th, from these papers we are asked to believe that no correspondence took place between Mr. McDonald, in Winnipeg, and the department here, at least none has been brought down and I assume there was none. But, if there was none, it is not presumable that there was no communication, and so, on August 13, 1904, an Order in Council was passed. On October 3rd, Mr. Sifton, at that time the minister, instructs Mr. Smart of the Order in Council which was passed and I think it is well that these instructions should be upon the records. They are in the form of a memorandum.

October 3rd, 1904.

Mr. Smart.

Attached is an Order in Council authorizing me to deal with scrip claims which for certain reasons were disallowed by Mr. McKenna. Under this order I nominate Mr. N. O. Coté to investigate. I do not desire that for the present at least, he shall hold any sittings in the west, but that he shall receive the evidence in writing as it is filed before him here and report to me.

I call attention to the phrase 'and report to me.'

You will see that the order contemplates dealing with the applications which were made before Mr. McKenna in one way or another.

That is not accurate. The Order in Council contemplated only those which were disallowed by Mr. McKenna, and for one reason and for one reason only—residence and participation in the United States.

Mr. Coté may proceed to examine the evidence as soon as the claims are filed in the department.

On the 18th October, fifteen days thereafter, Mr. Smart issued his instructions to Mr. Coté :

Ottawa, 18th October, 1904.

Memorandum, Mr. N. O. Coté.

With regard to the half-breed claims that you are about to investigate, it is desired that you should examine the evidence taken before Mr. McKenna, and in all cases where it is sufficient to prove the claims, pass them at once and issue the scrip.

The instructions to Mr. Smart from the minister were for Mr. Coté to examine them 'and report to me.' Mr. Smart varies that by saying to Mr. Coté :

Where it is sufficient to prove the claims, pass them at once and issue the scrip. In other cases you can consider the affidavit evidence presented, and, where it is sufficient, act upon it and issue the scrip.

I call attention to the fact that the deputy minister of the department absolutely varied the instructions of his minister, and varied them so that the minister, instead of receiving a report and seeing the scrip before it was issued and to know why it was issued, the scrip was issued threafter, as a matter of course, on Mr. Coté's requisition to the accountant, and signed by the deputy minister.

Now, the next correspondence I find is on November 11th, when the department writes to Mr. Macdonald, telling him that they have received his letter of 10th ultimo inclosing 114 orders for delivery of certain half-breed scrip :

I am directed to inclose herewith for your information a list of the claims which have been reconsidered up to date under the Order in Council of 13th August, 1904, with the decision arrived in each case. Where the scrip has not already been sent to the claimants in your care, it will be issued in due course and transmitted in accordance with the orders filed, provided such orders are found satisfactory. Each case will be dealt with in the usual way, but where powers of attorney were filed here, or with Mr. McKenna, prior to the orders handed in by you, the cases affected by it will have to be held in abeyance for the present.

Mr. FOSTER.

That is on November 11th. Under the minister's Order in Council it was declared that prior assignments in the case of such scrip were the assignments which would be recognized. It was then said that in such cases :

They will have to be held in abeyance for the present.

Why ? I do not know, but there is a very instructive commentary on that. On November 11th they would have to be reserved in abeyance for the present, but on December 17th, an Order in Council was passed rescinding that part of the provisions of the Order in Council about prior assignments that was to be observed and be binding on the government. Before Mr. Chaffey, who had spent thousands of dollars in arranging the preliminaries of these claims and had made his deposits and filed his assignments and powers of attorney before the department, knew what was going on that Order in Council of December 17th was passed and the ground that he had on account of his prior assignments was cut from under his feet. The order was deliberately changed.

In the future correspondence in relation to any of these claims, one claim only will be dealt with in each letter, which is the usual practice of the department, but, while this has been departed from on this occasion in order to advise you in a general way what progress has been made so far in the investigation of the claims which were disallowed by Mr. McKenna on the ground of the residence of the claimants residing in the United States.

Now, this letter from Mr. Macdonald, with its 114 orders for delivery, does not appear in the correspondence. I have made a note of that, and I would like the hon. minister to bring it down, so that we may see what Mr. Macdonald said in that regard. About this time Mr. Chaffey appears—on November 2nd—and he says in his letter o: November 2nd that he :

Noticed by the press some time ago that an Order in Council had been passed in regard to some of the Northwest half-breeds living on American reservations.

He drew up a test case, he made his plea to the minister, and he was turned down by the minister. Mr. Chaffey asks in his letter for a copy of the Order in Council and a statement as to what had really been done in the case. In reply to his letter he gets a copy of the Order in Council of 13th August, which is the first time Mr. Chaffey gets his hands upon the order of the minister passed in Council. On November 25th some other peculiar instructions were given to Mr. Coté by the deputy minister. The deputy minister of that date writes :

Memorandum, Mr. N. O. Coté.

Would you please let me know how many cases you have of names given to you by which there were former powers of attorney or assignment. I am to advise you that no cases are to be dealt with except those whose names have been given to you or which have been dealt with.

Which have been dealt with by Mr. McKenna. That was the only class of cases that was covered by the Order in Council. But it appears here that the names of cases have been given in some instances, and that therefore we have two classes of cases with which Mr. Coté was told to deal.

I am to advise you that no cases are to be dealt with except those whose names have been given to you or which have been dealt with. On consideration there appears to be no reason why documentary evidence should not be accepted quite as readily as any oral evidence, as the investigation for a few names means a very enormous expense.

Now what I want to know from the department is what were those other names, other cases than those rejected by Mr. McKenna, which were covered by the Order in Council and with which he was to deal. I want to know who gave him those names and I want a list of them. I have made a memorandum of that and I will ask the minister to be kind enough to give it to me.

On December 9, a letter goes from the department again to Macdonald, and they send to Mr. Macdonald a very urgent and I must say a very friendly letter indeed. I think it worth while to read some of it :

Ottawa, December 9, 1904.

With reference to the several orders for the delivery of half-breed scrip which you have filed in this department from persons who appeared before the half-breed commission and whose claims were rejected upon preliminary hearing, I am directed to inform you that before any of such claims may be reconsidered under the Order in Council of 13th August, 1904, it will be necessary to furnish the department with the usual evidence in support of such claims.

See the date, December 9. Before the 9th of December some fifty of the assignments had been actually put in the pocket of Mr. Macdonald himself.

A supply of 200 forms of applications is being forwarded to your address by express, and great care should be taken in getting all the questions therein accurately answered by the applicant in each case before a person duly qualified to take solemn declarations or sworn statements. . . . The same kind of evidence will also be required in respect to the claims of the brothers or sisters of persons who appeared before Mr. McKenna——

Both of these latter were actually shut out by the Order in Council.

—but in addition it should be explained in these cases why the claimants did not appear before him at the sittings of the commission for the purpose of submitting their evidence.

As it is desirable that all these claims should be finally disposed of without unnecessary delay, I am to request that the necessary evidence may be obtained and filed here as soon as possible.

To say the least that is a friendly letter ; no such letter was sent to Mr. Chaffey or any other one of the dozen others deeply involved and monetarily involved in the prosecution of these same claims on behalf of the half-breeds of whose interest the department had absolute knowledge and had had for months and in some cases for years.

On January 11, the competitors of Mr. Macdonald began to waken up. Short, Cross and Biggar sent in from Edmonton, a locality not unknown, to the present Minister of the Interior. Messrs. Short, Cross and Bigger want to know what is up. They are answered and a copy of the Order in Council is sent to them. On January 14, Chaffey again writes and up to that date he does not know who the commissioner is before whom to prosecute his claims. On January 14, 1905, Chaffey asks for the name of the acting commissioner and is given it. On March 2, Mr. Chaffey comes to the front. He has got his information, he has found out that he is far behind in the race and he goes to the commissioner, very commendably, not in a rage, but putting it just fairly before the department that he expects that they have some principle upon which they act and that they recognize fair play; his is a plea for fair-play.

On March 2nd, he sends in another letter. I shall not read it all, but shall give briefly the points in it. Mr. Chaffey states that Mr. R. C. Macdonald and himself among others were purchasing scrip in the year 1901 and bought claims from half-breeds who had been resident in the Territories but fled to the United States in 1885, after the rebellion. Both they and others were on the same track. He says :

I filed assignments of some of these claims in the early part of 1901 in the department, and received an acknowledgment of same. As the claims had not been proved they were left on file. They were not refused. Mr. R. C. Macdonald and myself exchanged lists of the half-breed scrips we had bought, so that we should not conflict or meddle with the claims each had bought.

And thereby hangs, later on, a tale.

I do not know the date, but I believe it was in the forepart of the year 1901 that Mr. Commissioner McKenna refused to accept these assignments. . . . We simply accommodated ourselves to the new practice. . . . The assignments I now refer to were obtained under the old practice.

And he claimed that the practice was that the assigments were recognized by the department and that the prior assignment was the assignment each had recourse to.

In the case of those half-breeds who had gone to the United States . . . I was the first to dispute the legality of such decision, and as far as I know the only one. In or about the end of 1903, I prepared an appeal to the minister from this decision, as I recollect in the case of J. L. Faquant as a test case on this point. I spent much time upon it, and went into the law and cases bearing on it pretty thoroughly. I informed Mr. R. C. Macdonald of what I was doing and he urged me on in the matter. I received a reply that the minister was impressed by my argument, but could not see his way to reverse the decision of Mr. McKenna. Near the time of the last Dominion election I heard that an Order in Council had been passed dealing with the matter. I wrote for a copy of same November 3rd last making some of the statements made here. . . . I received from the department a copy of the Order in Council of 13th August, 1904, reversing Mr. McKenna's decision.

The language and statements in it were so familiar that it would appear to have been drawn from the appeal presented by me, before referred to.

The letter gives the Order in Council abandoning the original practice and recognizing an assignment of half-breed claims when filed in the department.

In December last, I presented my claims to the department under assignments of half-breeds, that had been filed in the early part of 1901 and under others which I then filed. The assignments were returned as not recognized by the department, and in many cases the scrip had been issued and consigned to the care of Mr. R. C. Macdonald.

He then filed a caution and made his point skilfully. He advanced five grounds and presented the whole thing asking that the notice of the claims be made effectual in the department and added :

And that a stay in those cases be granted until I may be advised what legal proceedings are necessary.

Well, Mr. Chaffey thought that that being a moderately reasonable letter, it would open the eyes of the department and his appeal to them for fair-play would be promptly acted upon, but it does not appear to have had that effect on the department. To make matters sure Mr. Chaffey sent in a new list of all his assignments from half-breeds so that at that time they got all of them from him, as they had the most of them before. On the 21st of March comes another very important letter from the department to the same Macdonald—no copy to any one else :

Ottawa, 21st March, 1905.

Gentlemen,—I am directed to inform you that it has been decided to allow scrip granted to half-breed residents of the United States under the Order in Council of the 13th August, 1904, to be located in the name of the grantee thereof by the holder of such scrip without requiring the grantee to appear personally at the land agency to make his entry, but it will be necessary before presenting the scrip for location to have it endorsed by the department as having been issued under the said Order in Council. Such scrip should therefore be sent back to the department for endorsement, and after this has been done it will be returned to the person or persons by whom it may have been forwarded here, and the Agents of Dominion Lands will be instructed in regard to its location.

Mr. FOSTER.

The point to which I wish to draw the attention of the government and the House is that the regulation, invariable as a rule, in the department for the protection of the half-breed when he gets his land scrip, provides that he and he alone shall make the location, and that it shall not be made by any one who has or asserts that he has an assignment or power of attorney from him. That was a regulation of the department made by Order in Council, and that regulation is absolutely nullified. By another Order in Council ? No, Sir ; by a simple letter from the department issued on the 10th of March to all the land agents, telling them what ? That as a general policy they should allow the assignees to locate ? No, but telling them, so far as this ear-marked scrip was concerned which Macdonald had sent to the department and got endorsed, that they were to locate that through the assignee and without the presence of the grantee in the case. Now, I said that this was the invariable rule, I have it in numbers of Orders in Council ; and, to show that it is so, here is a case in point. In 1897, in the case of certain half-breed children's claims which had all been fixed up with the exception of may be two or three, the minister comes down with an Order in Council, and he says in effect this : Our invariable rule is, and by Order in Council, that the locator must be the half-breed who is the grantee ; but if that were insisted upon in these few cases which are now under review, it would make it almost impossible to have them arranged for and this matter cleared up. Therefore he recommends, with reference to these cases, that the assignee under certain precautions shall be allowed to locate for the original grantee. Under that recommendation—and I asked for the return—exactly two cases have been dealt with, showing that it was to clean up the fag end of a transaction, and that when the minister wanted to do that, he had to get the authority of an Order in Council, and was not allowed to do it by departmental authority. On March 29, 1905, another competitor turns up, and in an inquiring telegram wants to know if there is any change in the process of locating half-breed claims. He is told. On the 27th of March Macdonald sends in scrip notes for endorsement, according to the announcement which had been made to him, for 13,080 acres, and the department immediately endorses them and sends them back to Macdonald. On March 10 a circular to agents re this location is sent out, and I think I had better read that :

I am directed to inform you that it has been decided to allow scrip granted to half-breed residents of the United States under the Order in Council of the 13th August, 1904, to be located in the name of the grantee thereof by the holder of such scrip without requiring the grantee to appear personally at the land agency to make his entry.

This concession on the part of the department applies to the scrip issued under the said Order in Council of the 13th August, 1904, only, and care should therefore be taken by you when application is made for the location of a scrip note by any other than the grantee himself, that such note bears on the back thereof the following endorsation in red ink:

Issued under Order in Council of 13th August, 1904.

Accountant of the Department of the Interior.

The endorsation will be signed by the accountant of the department if the note itself was signed by him, or by the acting accountant if it was signed by the latter, in order to enable you to compare the signature affixed to the endorsation with that on the note.

The applicant for location should make the application over his own signature, on behalf of the person named in the scrip note and subscribe to the usual declaration as to the land applied for being unoccupied and unimproved and in all respects comply with the rules and regulations governing the location of half-breed land scrip.

As heretofore, assignments of these locations executed prior to the date on which the land was entered for in the manner above indicated, will not be recognized by the department.

Macdonald has his assignment, and on the 10th of November he goes to a land office and puts it down, and says, I have this assignment from a certain half-breed. He makes the location. Any assignment made by that half-breed up to that very date is null and void under these instructions. Some one has to get behind Macdonald the red-hot moment he makes the location and gets the assignment, or no person can get an assignment. Well, that completely barred the way to further assignment, and put the land virtually into the hands of Macdonald himself. About this time Mr. Chaffey gets on his war paint and comes to the front in a very interesting way. He now pins his faith to Mr. Cory, and on April 15 writes to him this interesting letter, to which I bespeak the attention of the government:

Winnipeg, Man. April 15th, 1905.

Sir,—With reference to a few minutes conversation with you when I pointed out to you that the statement that half-breed assignments were never recognized is unfounded, as for ten years I received half-breed scrip up to the year 1901 or 1902 on assignments forwarded by me to the department, of which letter No. 2 herewith, is a proof.

Most of such case were money scrip, but at that time there was no distinction, as land scrip could also be transferred to the assignee.

It was an instance of land scrip so assigned to him, but I am inclined to think it was an isolated occurrence, and not a general rule.

The late regulation allowing the holder to locate, is similarly made for, or is in effect in the interest of Macdonald, as the half-breeds dealing wth him relied upon his statement that he would take them to locate, and such fact was an additional security to them.

What is the charge made by Mr. Chaffey? He says that Macdonald was enabled to get these assignments because he assured the half-breeds: You will be protected; I will take you to the land agent's office and have you select your own land.

There is also the fact that I first represented that the decision by Mr. McKenna in regard to the American cases was bad in law. I stated the matter at large, as a test case upon the point, but was turned down upon it.

That was in December, 1903. Six months later the whole thing was reversed:

I wrote the secretary on the 8th April last, referring to the declaration of Maxime Marion filed in his case, to the effect that Macdonald claimed to be the government commissioner for taking applications, that the papers signed were so signed on that assumption, and that they were applications, which is evidence of sufficient fraud to make them avoid.

Why? Because the half-breeds declared these turned out, not to be applications at all, but assignments of their scrip to Macdonald, and they so state over their own signatures and with affidavits.

I also then filed in his case the declaration of Genard Lallement to the effect that he was asked by Macdonald to make application but that he refused to sign anything or have anything to do with him whatever, and that he had dealt with me in the matter of his scrip, notwithstanding which this scrip is in the possession of Macdonald. This instance is still more glearing fraud on the party than the former case.

Neither of these letters is in these files. If they are in the department, they have not been brought down.

I instance the fact that Macdonald was on the ground on the 14th and 15th August last.

This Order in Council was passed on the 13th August.

At Turtle Mountain carrying on this work before it was possible for the half-breed or the public to have any knowledge of the policy of the department. You will thus see that every move of the department in this matter, whether premeditated or not makes no difference, has been in effect playing into the hands of Macdonald and to the detriment of all other parties connected with the matter.

All other parties. Small sympathy for a lot of brokers who are after scrip and trying to get it for the least they can—small sympathy for them if one gets ahead of the other; but the 'other parties' includes the half-breeds themselves. Why in the name of fair-play, if the government had come to a decision to allow those half-breeds to be reconsidered, was not notice given the half-breeds themselves? Why was no notice given to any friends of the half-breeds? Why was notice given only to Macdonald who went down there, as alleged by Mr. Chaffey, under those conditions and get these claims?

I am, to-day, sending a further declaration in the case of Ambroise Ouellette.

That is not brought down.

I hope in the course of a day or two to send a representative half-breed from Turtle Mountain to the department to state the matter personally.

Does the minister know whether the half-breed ever turned up or will he kindly make a note of that and inquire of the department? It would be interesting to know if he is over there in one of the pigeon holes so that we may have him for examination.

I am sending, and have sent in the end of March, authorities from these various half-breeds instructing me to take such legal action as may be required to recover their scrip, copies of which have been sent to the department.

None of these has been brought down. I want to get hold of these.

I maintain this is sufficient ground on which to hold up these cases until such action be taken, or the matter be further examined by yourself.

Now follows an important sentence:

Over and above all, you are possessed with a knowledge of fraud on the part of Macdonald in reference to these and all cases, and you are the only head I know of at present of that department, and are therefore responsible for their action.

It is assumed that the department acts on principles of justice desiring to do justice to every one, and where temporary regulations stand in the way of justice, they should be put aside, by proceeding having this knowledge, the department aids a fraud.

I ask, then, that my request that nothing furthur be done in regard to the scrips or lands represented by them in question, be given effect to.

Your obedient servant,
(Signed) B. E. CHAFFEY.

This is Mr. Chaffey's letter of April 15. I do not know Mr. Chaffey, and I take his communications for what they are worth on the face of them. I presume, however, that he is a responsible man. Anyway he was ready on April 15; and he then charged absolute fraud and misrepresentation to the detriment of the half-breeds. The department have the charge. There is not a scintilla of evidence to show that they have ever concerned themselves in the least with reference to that charge on behalf of the half-breeds or gave any ear at all to the representations made by the half-breeds with reference to Macdonald's misrepresentations and alleged fraud. Mr. Chaffey says he spent thousands of dollars on these claims which he paid out to the half-breeds and that the department knew all about it. He filed his assignments there. Mr. Chaffey wanted his money as well as fair-play. He wanted to take all the profits to which he was entitled. He was determined to have them. This was on April 15. Then an intervention takes place and on April 20, an interesting telegram appears from the member from Winnipeg (Mr. Bole):

Issue no more scrip to Macdonald and hold transfer of lands to him until I return.

Mr. FOSTER.

What the department did I do not know. I imagine they issued no more; I imagine they held the transfers—but I cannot tell. Mr. Chaffey, on April 15, was determined to have his rights, and charged fraud and worse, but on the 25th Mr. Bole intervened and asked that proceedings be stayed until he could come to Ottawa, he then, being in Winnipeg. On May 22, after negotiations and correspondence, I find an assignment of all of Chaffey's rights, claims and interest to Macdonald. Some one told me when I heard that Chaffey was up in arms: No, this is off; they are settling with them. There is at least evidence that they have settled with him. Who else if any one has? However, there are the facts. Mr. Chaffey assigned all his rights, title and claim in that half-breed scrip to Macdonald and performed the vanishing act. That is not the end of it. A question arises here which I shall take up however, a little later. By this time the half-breeds themselves came to know something about it and so about the latter part of May the following petition comes in. In the meantime Mr. Macdonald went on and sent down scrip notes for endorsation for 15,000 acres more which he got, making in all 25,000 acres for which he had scrip. But about the 30th May—because the answer by the department is made on the 31st May and in it they say they have just received this—the following petition was received:

We, the undersigned half blood, Indian, formerly of the Northwest Territories, Canada, now of the county of Rolette, North Dakota, United States of America.

That one R. C. Macdonald from the year 1903 and subsequent thereto came among your petitioners and others induced your petitioners and others to believe that they had been harshly treated by Mr. McKenna's scrip commission, and that he the said Macdonald would on behalf of your petitioners and others bring suit against the Canadian government to compel the issuance by the government of the scrip to which your petitioners were entitled.

Subsequent thereto and from time to time, in person and by his agents, the said Macdonald induced the undersigned and others to believe that he had instituted such suit against the government and had been successful therein; that he, the said Macdonald, pretended that he was an officer of the Interior Department of the Dominion of Canada and that he was the only officer before whom your petitioners could appear and make application of the issuance of scrip to them, and that unless your petitioners and others appeared before the said Macdonald and executed and signed such papers as he requested they could not obtain the same. Relying upon and believing such statements and representations, and believing that we were applying for scrip to be issued and delivered to your petitioners and not otherwise, your petitioners, and others, signed all papers presented to them by the said Macdonald, which papers were represented to be only application papers, and to be used in procuring such scrip.

Further your petitioners sayeth that on or about the 26th day of April, A.D. 1905, the said

Macdonald again came among your petitioners, and others, and upon said day and subsequent thereto and for the first time informed your petitioners that said papers, believed by them as represented by him, to be only application papers, were in fact papers selling and assigning to the said Macdonald such scrip, and that your petitioners had no right, title or interest therein, that as the said Macdonald had expended thousands of dollars in such suit against the government, he was entitled to reimburse himself out of the value of such scrip, and that he would not pay your petitions and others more than about $200.

That those who refused to accept such sum for their scrip the said Macdonald threatened to have imprisoned, instituted suit in the lower courts of the said county of Rolettell, Dakota, United States of America, and threatened to deprive your petitioners of their scrip without any pay therefor, and further threatened to call upon the sheriff of said county to take those so refusing into custody, your petitioners being ignorant of the true facts and believing that the said Macdonald would do as he stated, and being placed in great fear, more particularly a great number of other half-blood Indians, surrendered their scrip to the said Macdonald, and received therefor only about $200.

Further your petitioners say that the said Macdonald has taken advantage of the uneducated condition of the undersigned and others and imposed upon them to their detriment and great irreparable loss in obtaining their signatures and getting in his possession his scrip, and that the said Macdonald refuses to pay more therefor than about $200, when your petitioners can sell the same on the open market for not less than $600.

Your petitioners further say that the said Macdonald first by pretense of affection and friendship for your petitioners and others ;

Second by deception and fraud ;

Lastly by threats and intimidating, has deceived and defrauded your petitioners and a great number of others out of their scrip, or is about to so defraud your petitioners and others out of their said scrip, as hereinbefore recited.

Wherefore, your petitioners pray that all such scrip obtained in the manner hereinbefore recited by the said Macdonald, in which your petitioners are interested may be withheld and not issued or delivered to the said Macdonald, but be sent to us to our address, and that which has been delivered, that patent may not issue thereon, until we are paid market price.

And further pray that your petitioners may be permitted to prove at such time and place as the hon. Minister of the Interior Department may fix, the allegations and statements obained in this petition, and thus we shall ever pray.

This petition was signed by fifty or more half-breeds in North Dakota. There was an answer to it, and I want to call the particular attention of the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to that answer. It was written by the secretary of the department and is dated May 31st. Remember that we have seen that in the first place, on March 10th a letter was sent out by the department to the land agents saying that with reference to that scrip it was unnecessary for the grantees to appear in person, that the assignees could locate the land. Well, on May 31st, the secretary of the department, replying to the petition I have just read, says :—

Department of the Interior,
Ottawa, 31st May, 1905.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of a petition signed by you and others, which has just been received in the department, respecting the recent issue of scrip, and to say that such scrip was delivered in accordance with the claimants' written requests which had been previously filed in this department. I am to add that half-breed land scrip can only be located in the grantees' own names, and that assignments of the land upon which the scrip has been placed, executed prior to the date of the locations, are not recognized by the department ; but after location has been entered at the office of the Dominion lands, the half-breed in whose name the location was made, may, if of the full age of twenty-one years, assign such land, and upon the assignment being filed in this department together with an abstract of title showing that the land is unencumbered, a certificate from the registrar that there are no judgments or executions against the assignor, and the usual registration fee of $2 being remitted, if found satisfactory, such assignment may be registered in the department, in which case the patent would be issued in the assignee's name, otherwise the patent for the land entered for would be issued in the name of the person to whom the scrip was issued.

Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) P. G. KEYES,
Secretary.

Mr. Michel Desmarais,
St. John, North Dakota,
United States of America.

Now, Sir, I am fairly well educated, and I am accustomed to reading the English language—I suppose I have a little advantage in that respect over the half-breeds to whom that letter was sent. To me reading it over for the first, the second, the third time, it seemed to say to these half-breeds : None of your scrip land can be located unless you are there to locate it, and after it is located, then you may assign it under certain conditions. If it does not mean that, what does it mean ? Yet, after reading it for the fourth or fifth time, I can see that an argument could be made that that is not its meaning. At the same time, I do not think that one man out of five hundred would take any other meaning out of it than the one that I have given. Then, there is the petition from the mixed blood. Indians not exactly in the same language, but of the same tenor, except that it says that they had been robbed of their scrip receiving only $200, while they would be able to get $1,000 if they had the scrip themselves. And the same answer is given to them that is given to the others. And here endeth these papers, so far.

Now I have a word or two to say concerning what I have found in these papers. It may be that I should present some deductions with which some hon. gentlemen will not agree. In the first place, I note the remarkable change made by Mr. Smart, the deputy minister, in taking away from the direct control of the minister that which the order of the minister had reserved to his direct control—that these should be examined by Mr. Coté and should be returned to him, the minister. The deputy said : Mr. Coté, examine these where you have the evidence, issue the scrip and send it at once. And the scrip, presumably, never entered the minister's office. I call the attention also to the admitted variation of the terms of the Order in Council confining it to the scrip which had been refused Mr. McKenna on account of residence and disallowed by him. The deputy minister, in the later communication I have read to the House says : You are only to look into two classes of scrip, one in which the name is given you, and the other the scrip which has been dealt with by Mr. McKenna. What does that mean ? At least it has a look of confusion ; and it does seem as if the work of the department was not in accordance with the Order in Council or the direct instructions of the minister. I will next call attention to the fact that Mr. Coté has not made any report as to how he dealt with that scrip or what evidence he took. Mr. McKenna disallowed two classes—or two kinds in one class. He disallowed all those who had gone to the United States, disallowing them partly on preliminary objection without evidence, and partly on evidence. That evidence the department might be presumed to have. But on what evidence did Mr. Coté adjudicate on the claims which had been disallowed on preliminary objections ? The widest limit is given to Mr. Coté—evidence under oath would be superior to documentary evidence ; still you need not go to the Northwest to hold an investigation, but take what you find, take what is given you.

You need not go to the Northwest to hold an investigation. Take what is given to you. What did he find ? By whom was it given ? We have no report from Mr. Coté. This country to-day has actually disposed of 25,000 acres of its choice lands to Mr. McDonald by the aid of this government, nor has the House any report from Mr. Coté as to the principle upon which he has made these issuances of scrip, neither has the government, nor the House, nor the country. Well, I say that Mr. Coté should have reported, and that report should have gone to his minister, and before the property was given away that minister should have taken that report to the Council, and his colleagues in the Council should have known what was going on, and the reason why 55 of those scrip, though the Order in Council is only issued on the 13th of August, and although it was promulgated in the 'Gazette' only on the 6th of October, 55 of this scrip were in the hands of McDonald before November, 1904, had passed away, and 93 of them were in his hands before the end of the year, and about 120 were in his hands before Mr. Chaffey, and Mr. Shortcross, and Mr. Bigger, or any one else interested had the least knowedge that the thing was going on, and before the half-breeds had the least intimation from the department whose wards they were, that there was any change made in their legal status in reference to these claims. The judgment falls, and falls rightly on the head of my right hon. friend. He invited his camp followers to loot the half-breeds. He shed tears over them in sympathy many years ago, he deified a rebel on their behalf, he condoned rebellion on their behalf ; yet he allows scrip to be issued broad and wide, giving this parliament and this country as his reason for it, when it is brought to his mind, that it is simple robbery of the rights of the half-breeds, by his go-betweens and followers, he says : We know that has taken place, but then we did our duty to the half-breeds. What invitation could be broader or more pressing to all his camp followers to camp on the trail of the half-breeds ; and when this benevolent government made what was supposed to be a payment for the rights of the half-breeds, they allowed their followers to steal it or buy it, or juggle it from them.

One thing more. Where does the member for Winnipeg (Mr. Bole) stand, if this version is correct ? Where does the government stand, if this version is correct ? The government was informed by Mr. Chaffey that the half-breeds were being robbed by fraud. Mr. Chaffey informed the member for Winnipeg that they were being robbed. Why should there be any compromise ? In the name of just dealing, if the government had a charge from a responsible man that this was being done by fraud, it should have held up the process until it had investigated the charge ; and I think the member for Winnipeg, if he busied himself, simply to get Mr. Chaffey a money consideration, with the allegation of fraud before him, was not a wise mediator. Above all things else, for a government to compromise a fraud is a wrong and unstatesmanlike thing. How much less is it than if, when they have responsible parties making a charge of fraud, they still go on and carry out the process and never investigate the charge as to whether there is fraud or not. How does the government stand with reference to fair-play ? Did Mr. Chaffey spend money in getting assignments of these claims ? Did other gentlemen, may be scores of them, of whom the department has knowledge—did they spend money in getting assignments of these claims thinking that the prior assignments should carry ? Was it a fact that five per cent, yes, three per cent of the officials thought the Order in Council was revoked, that the prior assignment stood. But that was revoked, and the whole thing was shovelled over into the lap of McDonald by virtue of the reversal, the taking away of that Order in Council as to the prior assignments. But more than that. What stood like a great rock in the way of McDonald ? The fact that the half-breed himself had to go and locate. How could he get around that ? The 13th day of August, 1904, the government was firm as a rock, the half-breed himself must locate, it was for his own protection. Six months afterwards, without any notice to any of these men interested, that was taken away by departmental letter and not by Order in Council, and it was so made that McDonald got it all, and got it without there being the personal location which all time previously had been required.

Now as to the half-breeds themselves. In all this correspondence there is not one single line or letter of sympathy or help towards the half-breeds. Nobody in the department seems to care about the half-breeds ; many in the department seem to be running their legs off to make McDonald privy to what was going on. It is to the credit of the government that when they sent these half-breed commissions throughout the Northwest they made it an invariable rule that the commissioners should, in the case of money scrip, see that nobody got that money scrip from the half-breed who was the grantee unless he got the market price. If John Jones followed a half-breed and got his scrip, which was worth $200, for $50, followed him up to the commission until the time that the commission issued the money scrip, when the commissioner held that scrip in his hand he said to John Jones : What have you given this half-breed for his scrip ?—$50—You cannot get it, Sir, the current price is $150, and before that scrip goes out of my hands, under instructions from the government, I will see that this half-breed gets the current price—and John Jones had to come up and pay the current price. That was done in scores and hundreds of cases. When these 200 or more half-breeds applied they had no case, they were bowled out of court in spite of their petitions. Then, six months after the latest declaration of the policy of the government to Chaffey, the whole thing is reversed. But from the time it was reversed until every scrip had gone into McDonald's hands the department did not busy themselves in sympathy or in action to find what the half-breed had got for his scrip. It is alleged that McDonald went there and persuaded the half-breeds that they were signing papers to authorize him to institute a suit, when they were really signing the assignment of their scrip, and it is alleged in some quarters that he really got a quit claim signed in blank. Whether that be so or not I do not know, but there is the allegation of the half-breeds and up to that time no one in this department and no one in the right hon. gentleman's government had the least sympathy with the half-breed or the least thought as to whether the half-breed should be jilted or not. For whose benefit ? I have here the list. There it is. There is the list. There are all the scrip that are issued and out of the whole of it there are 126 which have gone to Mr. McDonald. He holds them all. How many has he located ? Three up to the date of this. There is a point I want to know something about. Every land agent has received authority to locate Mr. McDonald's scrip if it is endorsed. Mr. McDonald has had the endorsed scrip for months. Is that location going on now at the land offices, or has it been forbidden by the minister ? I think I would like to ask the hon. minister a question. Is that still going on ?

Mr. OLIVER. I will answer the hon. gentleman presently.

Mr. FOSTER. If the hon. minister will answer me now and say that the department has issued orders to prevent the location——

Mr. OLIVER. I will have to make an answer to the hon. member and I will answer him in the proper time.

Mr. FOSTER. It is simply as the hon. minister says. I do not know why the answer should not be given. What in the world is the reason which would induce the hon. minister to keep it for ten minutes or half an hour ? We will get it out. It has to come. However, Mr. Macdonald has the scrip, orders have been given to the agents to locate scrip but to locate no other half-breed scrip without the endorsement. This presumably is going on now in the Territories. What does it mean ? Twenty-five thousand acres of land for which Mr. Macdonald has paid not more than 80 cents an acre located, no doubt, in the most valuable parts of the country—25,000 acres of land in Macdonald's hands, put in his hands at 80 cents an acre, worth at least from $8 to $10 an acre. How much of it does the half-breed get ? He gets 80 cents an acre. How much does Macdonald get? He gets all over the 80 cents an acre less his expenses. Why this everlasting anxiety to help Macdonald ? Who is he ? What has he done ? Does this government in its administration of half-breed scrip exist for a man like Macdonald, or does it exist for the half-breed ? In Heaven's name why should there be $150,000 or $200,000 placed in the hands of Macdonald and only 80 cents per acre of that go into the hands of the half-breed whose it was and whose rights are tremblingly described by hon. gentlemen opposite as blood rights. Blood rights are not in it except to the extent of 80 cents an acre compared with Macdonald rights and with the difference between 80 cents and what he sells the land for in the end. That is where it is. There is no need to elaborate on it. I could say more than I have but I shall not say any more. I now leave this with the government and I want the government as soon as they possibly can and within reasonable time tell the House what they intend to do. I think something ought to be done. I think something ought to have been done long ago by the department. I have alluded to the fact that correspondence is not here which should be here and which I am loth to think would be in the department and not brought down. But, if it is not there, I shall have to come back to this idea, which has been mooted more than once, that people do have access to that department to destroy papers upon facts which might be incriminating to themselves and that men who have been employees of that department have done so. Now, this matter will not rest here. After this presentment of it the government should take it into their consideration and make up their minds as to what they will do; and we on this side of the House will have to make up our minds as to what we will do. All I want is that a thorough investigation be made in the department as to this whole matter of scrip faithfully and honestly without fear of whom it may touch, and if that is done I am content whatever the outcome that results therefrom. But this that I have stated, with much more I might state, makes out a case that I think is a fairly strong one which this government, this House and, this parliament owe to themselves to probe to the very bottom and they also owe it to themselves to keep these lands from being located in Mr. Macdonald's name until the matter has been thorougly probed and examined.

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). The hon. member (Mr. Foster) has been hatching for quite a while and I think we will admit he has succeeded in bringing forth a very wobbly chicken.

Mr. FOSTER. Well that is a good way to answer it if you think it is the right way.

Mr. OLIVER. His complaint that all the papers are not before the House is a sample of the fairness with which he has approached this subject. He has asked for an immense number of papers. The department has been at work ever since he asked supplying him with these papers. When completed they come down in instalments as fast as we could get them and I submit it is absolutely unfair on his part to stand up and make the distinct complaint that the papers have not been brought down simply because we have been unable to bring them all down before this.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the hon. minister will be fair enough to allow me to nail that where it should be nailed. There is a list of papers which purport to be complete. In the very letters which are in that list there are quotations from letters together with the dates of these letters and yet these letters are not there. The department should have made that complete. I supposed that was complete. If they did not make it complete they committed a grievous error in bringing it down until they had made it complete. I am not speaking at all of other branches for which the papers have not come down. I confine myself to this part of the case.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. gentleman complains that certain papers which are alluded to in these papers which are brought down have not been brought down. I do not know how far that theory is to be carried, because on that theory, we might be required to bring down at once the whole correspondence in regard to any simple question that might be asked. There are limitations, I presume, to the possibilities of giving information. Certainly, I am speaking for myself as the minister when I say that I honestly tried to give the hon. member the information he asked for. If he calls attention to some papers which he thinks should have been there and which are not there I am prepared to bring them down if they are in the department, but I submit it is absolutely unfair and it is of a piece with his whole argument to insinuate that these papers have not been brought down because of any fear on our part of a proper presentation of the case before the House. He said there was nothing to conceal. There is nothing to conceal. In the beginning of his remarks he assumed that there had been a departure from the policy of the government in regard to the scrip covered by the Order in Council of 13th August, and he also said there had been a departure in regard to the matter of the assignment of the scrip. The policy of the government in regard to half-breeds is that the half-breed who is entitled to the scrip shall get his scrip. That is the policy of the department and because that policy had not been carried out in the scrip issued of 1891 and 1892 it was subsequently decided that it should be carried out. There was no change of policy; there was a fulfilment of policy in regard to these matters. In regard to assignments, he has himself presented to the House ample evidence to show that it has not been the policy of the department to grant assignments since 1391 and that no such assignments have been granted; yet, although he quibbles on the word 'assignments,' twists and turns it around he puts in absolute evidence of the plain fact that there was no change of policy in regard to assignments and that there have been no assignment since 1901. Up to that time there was a policy of assignment and I believe it was in response to the criticism of this very hon. gentleman himself along with other things that that policy of assignments was abandoned so that the land scrip should be absolutely located by the half-breed, or in the name of the half-breed. and that there should be no assignment of land scrip. Now there is no assignment of land scrip; there has been no assignment of land scrip. The complaint of the hon. gentleman's friend Mr. Chaffey is because Mr. Chaffey was not allowed to have his assignments dealt with; he was dealt with just as everybody else is.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to keep my hon. friend right as far as I can. I never met Mr. Chaffey, I do not know him, I never wrote to him, I never received a letter from him. The minister may call him his friend if he likes, but he has no right to call him mine.

Mr. OLIVER. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. I must confess that I was misled, for whereas in his former speech he took up the time of the House and the country in deprecating the granting of the scrip to the half-breeds as an injustice to the public, on this occasion the greater part of his speech has been occupied with a discussion of the woes of Mr. Chaffey.

Mr. FOSTER. The reason being because I knew nothing of Mr. Chaffey's transaction or connection with the transaction until the minister brought down the papers. I found his case there, and finding it there I have a right to take it up.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. member has a right and he certainly made the most of his right in regard to Mr. Chaffey.

Mr. FOSTER. Thank you.

Mr. OLIVER. I say in the first instance there has been no change in policy on the part of the department in regard to the issuing of scrip. The policy is to give the half-breed everything that is coming to him and there has been no change in the matter of assignments of scrip, so that practically all the trouble that is in the mind of my hon. friend in that regard does not exist. The right of these half-breeds to scrip was dealt with in the previous discussion. I think it is admitted that the half-breeds have a right to scrip and the demand has been made that the government should see that they get their right; the complaint that my hon. friend has made here that the government while making a pretense of giving them their rights is not going on and further protecting them and insuring that they shall get the full value of the scrip as issued is I think a complaint that comes with very ill grace from my hon. friend or his friends on that side of the House especially in view of the arguments advanced by him during the first discussion that the half-breed should not get the scrip at all, that it was gross injustice to the public at large and practically a robbery of the rights of the public that the rights of the half-breed should be recognized.

Mr. FOSTER. I have no recollection of arguing in that way. I argued that the half-breed should get what was coming to him in the way that would most benefit himself, and I pointed out to the Prime Minister that it was not given to him in the best manner if it were done in the way of scrip. I advocated the giving of the actual land to him, the gathering in of the half-breeds and teaching them to be farmers, &c., but I never argued as my hon. friend said.

Mr. OLIVER. I have some difficulty, I must admit, in following the hon. gentleman.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman should not follow me at such a distance; that is the trouble.

Mr. OLIVER. I think the suddenness with which my hon. friend rises is evidence that I am following him too closely. I would ask the hon. gentleman and the House what we are doing in this case unless it is giving the land to the half-breed. Every acre of land which my hon. friend has spoken of as belonging to Mr. Macdonald, 25,000 acres of land as he says, is located in the name of the half-breed.

Mr. FOSTER. If you are satisfied with the argument I am.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. gentleman thinks the half-breed is being defrauded by our insisting that the land shall be located as it has been in the name of the half-breed and that Mr. Macdonald or whoever he may be must get his transfer from the half-breed as the owner of the land and not from him as the owner of the scrip. I would like to know by what piece of legislation my hon. friend would provide that the half-breeds should never have the right to sell the land once he had located it. I am sure my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) understands the matter as I have stated it to the House, but I think the House at large did not gather that fact from the tenor of his remarks. In regard to Mr. Chaffey and Mr. Chaffey's plea on behalf of the half-breeds and his complaint that the government did not take action to protect the interest of the half-breeds on the representation of Mr. Chaffey let me read the last paragraph in Mr. Chaffey's letter to the department and then the House can judge what credit is due to the representations of Mr. Chaffey. He says :

> I therefore withdraw all claims whatever under and by virtue of said orders sent by me and withdraw all protests lodged by me against scrip being issued under orders filed with the department by said Macdonald to which he now has any claim or order.

He withdraws all protest against scrip being issued or orders filed by the department to Mr. Macdonald. Mr. Chaffey is certainly a very desirable man upon whose word the department and the government should base its policy, a gentleman who in his previous letters specifically alleged fraud, alleges robbery, makes all the allegations which my hon. friend has used with such effect to-day, and then withdraws them all as he does withdraw them. He is not the man upon whose representation this government or this department could carry on its administration.

Mr. FOSTER. Hear, hear.

Mr. OLIVER. We have to take the representations of others than Mr. Chaffey or others like Mr. Chaffey. The hon. gentleman has read a representation placed before the department by certain half-breeds resident in the Turtle Mountain district of the United States and these gentlemen allege fraud and misrepresentation against this man Macdonald. I may draw attention to the fact that from the day upon which this petition was received here, I would think that it is as fair to take the supposition which I take the opportunity of placing before the House as it is to accept the supposition which my hon. friend has placed before the House to-day, and that is that since the first discussion of the question in the House, when he very gingerly charged fraud and was told a specific charge would have to be made before action could be taken, that then, somebody, whether a friend or otherwise, hied himself to Turtle Mountain and got up this petition from the half-breeds and sent it in here.

Mr. FOSTER. What does my hon. friend draw from that ?

Mr. OLIVER. I draw this that my hon. friend is very much more anxious to make an attack upon the government than he is to protect the interests of anybody, even the half-breeds or Mr. Chaffey.

Mr. FOSTER. How do you prove that ?

Mr. OLIVER. I do not think we will discuss it any more. I think it is a case which only proves itself. However, I will just draw attention to this fact, that the friend of my hon. friend who gathered these names and prepared these petitions was not altogether careful in the signatures. An analysis of the signatures will show just how they stand. I find, on examination in the department, that one petition signed in the beginning by Michel Demarais, Frank Delorme and others is signed by 39 names, almost all of which are signed by a mark, and in the 39 only 4 are the names of those whose claims have been allowed. So that it comes to this, that a petition comes into the department in the terms read by the hon. member, with the names of 39 persons attached, all of whom by their signatures have stated that they are interested parties, whereas on examination it is found that only four out of the 39 are interested parties.

Mr. FOSTER. Might I draw my hon. friend's attention to the fact that you may divide those into two classes ? There is here in a memorandum the statement that a certain number of these claims have been allowed by Coté, a certain number disallowed, and a certain number reserved for further evidence. It may quite be that some of those claims are amongst those which were disallowed, which have been allowed by Côté, but which still stand as reserved cases.

Mr. OLIVER. The case is at any rate that we have received statements from half-breeds. We have not taken any notice of the representations made by Mr. Chaffee, and Mr. Chaffee's letter, I think, is a sufficient justification to the department for not doing so. But when these half-breeds, whose interests are not considered by the department, but whose interests the Prime Minister has given authority to his friends throughout the country to loot—when these gentlemen come to the department, even by the road by which they have come, and even in the small numbers in which they have come, then certainly it is necessary that action should be taken ; and I can answer the hon. member's question by stating that as soon as I returned from that little tour to which he alluded a few days ago, I found certain papers in the department, and took action upon those papers at once. Authorization has been given for the holding of a commission of inquiry into those cases on behalf of the half-breeds, and notification has been issued to the different land offices throughout the country to suspend action in regard to those cases until that investigation shall have been held. As the hon. member said, there is nothing in this to conceal. This department and this government have no interest but to see that the half-breeds get what is coming to them —that they get their blood right. Although it may cost some part of the public domain to give them their rights, we stand prepared to justify ourselves before the country, even against the very clever and I think somewhat doubtful arguments of my hon. friend, who would have us condemned in one part of the country for giving the land, and in another part of the country for not giving the half-breeds their rights. We stand prepared to give the half-breeds their rights, even at the expense of the public domain ; and we do not stand to protect any man, be his name R. C. Macdonald or anything else, in any trespass upon those rights. The action taken, the papers before the House, and further papers which will be brought down if the hon. gentleman desires them, are evidence I think sufficient on that point.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). Mr. Speaker, the statement which my hon. friend has made in reference to this transaction has had one good effect, at any rate. I called it a fraud before. The right hon. leader of the government took exception to that term, but I think it has been fully justified by the papers which have been brought down. What was the charge made by my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) ? It was this : that some time ago a commission made certain inquiries into half-breed claims in the Northwest, and reported that certain half-breeds who resided in the United States and had become wards of that country, and were receiving sums of money and land from it, were not entitled to the same benefits from this government as those who remained in Canada. The government, however, decided, on further consideration, that that policy perhaps ought not to be carried out; and an Order in Council was passed, changing it, and providing for granting to those half-breeds certain lands to which they would not otherwise be entitled. My hon. friend did not object to that change of policy; he simply stated the fact of the change. What he found fault with was that the promise of the government had not been carried out. That promise, which was made in this House, and on which the Order in Council was based, was this, that no half-breed would have the right to transfer his scrip to any other person whatever—that when he was granted the right to certain lands in the Northwest, he must locate those lands himself, after which he would have the right to transfer them or sell them to any other person. The half-breeds were not altogether in the position of wards of the government, otherwise the government might have prohibited them from transferring their lands for a certain number of years. I think perhaps that would have been a better course for the government to have taken. What my hon. friend objected to was that the change made by the Order in Council, although not known even to the half-breeds who were the beneficiaries under it, nor to others in the country, became known to a man in the Northwest of the name of Macdonald, who took advantage of it for the purpose, as is alleged by the half-breeds themselves, of obtaining by fraud their right to their locations. My hon. friend complains that there was no inquiry into that; and when the papers come down, they prove conclusively that an Order in Council was set aside by a departmental order to the different agents throughout the Northwest. In a letter to one David Phillip, Esq., Main St., Winnipeg, who asked if any change had been made in the rules regarding the locating of half-breed scrip, the secretary of the department said:

> I am directed to inform you that it has recently been decided to allow scrip granted to half-breed residents of the United States, under the Order in Council of the 13th August, 1904, to be located in the name of the grantee thereof by the holder of such scrip without requiring the grantee to appear personally before the land agent to make his entry.

What power had the department to give any such instruction? There is an Order in Council which requires the half-breed to appear personally in order to locate his claim. By what authority could the department vary that order? I am glad to hear the right hon. gentleman, upon the cases being brought before him, issued instructions not to carry out this departmental order.

Mr. OLIVER. It was suspended pending investigation.

Mr. HAGGART. I understood that a commission was to be appointed to make inquiry, and that no action would be taken with reference to the half-breed scrip until the commission had reported. What does that mean, if not that the order is reversed?

Mr. OLIVER. The order will be continued after the investigation, if no charge is found to stand. Let me just state the reason for the issuing of the order—not that I issued it or am personally responsible. The half-breeds covered by this Order in Council of August 13th are residents in the United States. Some of them, if not all of them, had become the wards of the American government, and were therefore not absolutely free agents in their movements; and in order that they might receive value for their scrip, it was necessary that they should be free to locate by agents instead of being required to locate personally. As the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Foster) has pointed out, the direction is absolutely restricted to that particular scrip. And the reason is the one I have given. To insist that these half-breeds should locate that scrip in person would simply be an additional tax on the value of their scrip which they would have to pay, even if they could make the trip into Canada to locate. And if they could not, they could not get any value at all for the scrip. That instruction was given therefore in the interests of the half-breeds.

Mr. HAGGART. Then the order is suspended until the commission of inquiry ascertains whether or not there has been fraud committed, and the Minister of the Interior says that the order will only be suspended until such time as that inquiry is made. But the objection I make is a more serious one. What authority had the department to issue any such order? None whatever. Any party who would act under such an order is liable to punishment. It is a fraud upon the people. There is an Order in Council which says you shall not do such a thing. By what power does the Minister of the Interior vest himself with authority to set aside that Order in Council without the sanction of the Governor General? My opinion is that if it were not for the action of my hon. friend beside me (Mr. Foster), all the scrip would have been issued and located. There seems to have been some authority which is not brought down in these papers, some counteracting authority to the different agencies throughout the Northwest, since that departmental order was issued. Why are we not in possession of that? I do not see in the papers brought down that the departmental order in reference to this scrip has been acted on at all. We ought to have that information. This transaction looks at the first blush like a very disgraceful one, but we shall await until all the papers are brought down and we see what the action of the department is.

Mr. OLIVER. If the hon. gentlemen will state in so many words, in a written memorandum, exactly what papers they want, we will try to procure them to the best of our ability, but it is very hard to cover all the points on a mere cursory inquiry.

Mr. FOSTER. I shall not hold the minister responsible for any papers not brought down which are not covered by the memorandum I sent to him. This memorandum calls for the missing parts of this correspondence. My hon. friend reiterated that in one part of the country I want to be understood as being opposed to the half-breeds getting their lands and that in another part of the country I take the opposite position. For his first statement he cannot find any words of mine. There is no rason why he should misrepresent the facts, and he ought to be furnished with the proof before making a statement. It is easy to make a charge of inconsistency, but it is another thing to establish it. I am not at all satisfied with the statement of the hon. minister that he proposes to send somebody to investigate the matter. That does not fill the bill. It will not be filled until we get an opportunity, before some commission or somebody competent to take evidence, of examining the parties under oath—both the parties in and those out of the department. This matter cannot be hushed up by any little device of appointing a commission and sending it out to the half-breeds. That is only a small part of the whole question raised. The question raised is as to what has taken place in the department and between the department and friends of these gentlemen, and we must have some opportunity somewhere and somehow of getting evidence under oath. I want the government to seriously consider whether or not they cannot give a sub-committee with power to examine under oath ; but if we come to the conclusion that we cannot stay here all year just for this matter, I am not unreasonable. We may leave the thing as it is now, and let the committee or commission be granted another year. We do not wish to keep the House unreasonably. But the case is not made at all by the minister saying he is going to send somebody down there to make investigations as to whether these half-breeds have told the truth or not. The matter goes far deeper than that, and I hope that the government will look at it in that way.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) should remember one point—and I am sure he will agree with me on reflection. The government must not hold an investigation simply upon hearsay or insinuation, but upon charges preferred. But the government will be bound to hold an investigation when there is substantial cause for it. My hon. friend has made different statements here ;—I had not intended to take part in the debate, but his later remarks make it necessary for me to say a word. We have in the department a direct allegation of fraud made against this man Macdonald by the half-breeds who declare that their signature to certain papers was secured by false representations, and that the papers were really of a different character from that represented to them. When this allegation was brought to the attention of the Minister of the Interior he at once took steps to have an investigation made. Now, my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) to-day made a different statement. He did not make a direct allegation, but only an insinuation. Perhaps it is premature for him to make up his mind on the matter ; perhaps, as time goes on and he gets further information he will be prepared to make a direct statement. To that statement we shall be bound to listen. He made a statement the other day which, it seems to me, he ought not to have made unless he is prepared to substantiate it. He said a moment ago, in his first remarks of to-day upon this subject that there was a rumour that papers in the Interior Department had been tampered with, and that it was said there were even ex-employees who either abstracted, or did away with, or destroyed, papers which might be compromising to them. He did not state that of his own authority, but said that there was a rumour to that effect. That is a very grave statement——

Mr. FOSTER. No doubt.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER—too grave a statement, to be made in the way my hon. friend has made it. It is not sufficient for a gentleman occupying the high position that my hon. friend does in this House merely to say that there are rumours afloat. They are always afloat ; some may be true, but many are false. When he has reason to think that these statements are true and that such acts have been committed, then I can tell him that I am as much interested as he is—more interested than anybody else—in learning the truth. The moment charges are made which necessitate an investigation, we shall have an investigation. But I think my hon. friend had better wait until he has all the facts before him, when he can make what charges he has to make. He has asked to have the papers brought down, and the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) has been most diligent in preparing them.

Mr. FOSTER. I have no fault to find in that respect.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It appears that all the papers are not yet down. It will be for the Minister of the Interior to see to it that they are brought down. If the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) finds that there are papers missing that ought to be there, he can make his statement, and we will be bound to give it our best consideration.

Mr. FOSTER. May I ask the Minister of the Interior what steps have been taken to hold the investigation? What kind of investigation does he propose to make?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We have decided to have the matter come before a judge—County Judge Myers, of Winnipeg. That gentleman will hold an investigation into this assertion of the half-breeds.

PROPOSED EXPERIMENTAL STATION, NIAGARA DISTRICT.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG (East Lambton). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I wish to ask if the government will be good enough to lay on the table the correspondence from the Niagara fruit district in southern Ontario, with reference to the establishment of an experimental station in that district?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will refer the matter to the minister in charge.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY.

The House went into committee on Bill (No. 115) respecting the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.—Mr. L. G. McCarthy.

On section 1: mortgage in schedule A confirmed.

Mr. HAGGART. Would the gentleman in charge of this Bill be good enough to explain what the effect of this change in regard to mortgage is on the mortgage already authorized?

Mr. FIELDING. So far as the mortgage is concerned to secure the government's guarantee, the matter was placed by my hon. friend the Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick) in the hands of Mr. Shepley, of Toronto, to advise, and his report has been printed and distributed. The mortgage is necessarily a very elaborate document, and we have to rely on the advice of legal gentlemen with regard to it. It was under consideration for a long time, a good many points being discussed, sometimes between Mr. Shepley and myself, sometimes the Minister of Justice and Mr. Shepley. But the sum and substance is set forth by Mr. Shepley in his report which certifies that the mortgage conforms to the Act.

Mr. HAGGART. I have only this moment received a copy of Mr. Shepley's explanations. But the explanations seem just a little more difficult to understand than the document itself. Mr. Shepley says:

> The first article gives extended definitions to certain compendious expressions made use of in the mortgage for purposes of convenience.

Mr. FIELDING. This report is on the form of the mortgage.

Hon. CHARLES FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). There are three schedules attached to this Bill. The first schedule is the trust deed which is necessary to carry out the provisions of the original contract made between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company by which the government undertake to guarantee certain bonds which are to be issued by the Grand Trunk Pacific Company to enable them to finance the undertaking so far as the portion of the line is concerned between Winnipeg and the Pacific ocean. My hon. friend (Mr. Haggart) will remember that on that portion of the line the company is authorized by its charter to issue bonds not exceeding practically $20,000 a mile with respect to the prairie section and, I think, somewhere about $50,000 a mile with respect to the mountain section. The undertaking of the government is to guarantee that issue of bonds to the extent of 75 per cent of the cost of construction with respect to the prairie section limited to $13,000 a mile, and on the mountain section bonds to the extent of 75 per cent of the cost whatever it may be.

Then my hon. friend will remember that there is an obligation on the part of the government, or rather an assumed obligation, to exempt the company from the payment of interest on these bonds for the first seven years with respect to the mountain section; and in so far as that section is concerned, if the interest on the bonds is not paid for the three years succeeding the first seven years, then that is to be a deferred payment. It is intended to give effect to that provision of the agreement. My hon. friend will notice that the only two departures from the original contract in this trust deed are, first, with respect to the prairie section, the government obligation to guarantee to the extent of $13,000 a mile remains intact; but under the provisions of the company's Act of incorporation their power to issue bonds is limited to $20,000 a mile with respect to the prairie section, and under the provisions of the trust deed, it having been ascertained that $20,000 a mile was not sufficient for the prairie section the trust deed provides that the company may issue bonds to the extent of $21,500. That is in accordance with the terms of the agreement between the government and the company, by which agreement it is provided that the company must find the money, whatever it may be. So our obligation to endorse is limited to $13,000 a mile, but the company will, under this schedule, get power to issue to the extent of $21,500.

Mr. HAGGART. It must be more, that would only be $1,500 more a mile.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. That is all, it is the provision of the agreement.

Mr. FOSTER. The company assumes no further obligation.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. No. Then I draw attention to this further provision which constitutes a departure from the agreement as contemplated at the time the Bill went through the House. My hon. friend will remember that provision was made respecting the issue of bonds, pending construction. The company was authorized to issue what we call interim bonds, and when the construction was completed it was made obligatory on the company to surrender these interim bonds which were to be endorsed by the government, so that they might be replaced by a permanent issue. It was found impossible, practically, to finance the scheme in that respect, because these bonds could not be floated; bonds of that character which were practically interim bonds issued for six or seven years could not be floated. I understand there were financial difficulties in connection with the matter, and the result is that we have made provision under this section for a present issue of permanent bonds extending over the whole period; so that instead of having an issue of bonds, as it was originally intended, of a temporary character which should be superseded by a permanent issue at the end of construction, the issue now is of a permanent character applicable to the whole period of construction, which is estimated at seven years.

Mr. FOSTER. In what part of the schedule does that appear?

Mr. FIELDING. The change respecting the bonds is set forth by Mr. Shepley in his report. He says:

> The guarantee of interim bonds during the period of construction to be compulsorily convertible into the guaranteed permanent bonds on the completion of the work of construction, which was the scheme for interim aid contemplated by the agreement of 1903. During the negotiations it was found impracticable to devise a workable scheme on the precise lines of the agreement, and there were found to be formidable market objections to bonds issued on the terms contemplated. The method adopted in the mortgage submitted is to provide for the immediate issue of permanent bonds, adding to the fifty-year period of currency of such permanent bonds, which period was under the agreement to begin on the completion of the division, the seven years limited by the agreement of 1904 for such completion, making the bonds at once fifty-seven year bonds.

The objection from a finance point of view was that making two issues of bonds, one at seven years and then another of fifty years, that is making two separate transactions, involved two separate market charges, which would amount to a very large sum on a huge transaction of this character. There was no objection from the government point of view to making the one issue of bonds for fifty-seven years rather than making one issue for seven years and another for fifty years. The net result, so far as the government is concerned, is the same, and there is a large saving of expense by having one issue instead of two.

Mr. FOSTER. What was the object of the interim bonds at first?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. To assist the company during construction. In a first draft of the agreement it was provided that the company should receive aid on the completion of the line. As the matter progressed it became clear that the road could not be built on those terms, so we had to provide for the issue of interim bonds which at the close of construction, would be compulsorily convertible into more permanent bonds. And in that conversion there were these market charges which, on a large transaction, would amount to a great deal of money.

Mr. HAGGART. These are the only two changes?

Mr. FIELDING. Yes, as respects the issue of bonds, and the liability of the government.

Mr. HAGGART. Then as regards the prairie section it is to allow them to increase their issue of bonds above $17,500.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If my hon. friend will look at the original agreement he will find that authority is given to issue bonds with respect to the prairie section to the extent of $20,000 per mile, and on that $20,000 per mile the government guarantee $13,000 per mile. But it has been ascertained that so far as this section is concerned the financing of the enterprise would entail an issue of bonds to the extent of $21,500, and under schedule 'B' they are authorized to issue to that extent. But our obligation remains unchanged.

Mr. HAGGART. $13,000 was 75 per cent of the total amount, that would be $17,500. But you increase that amount to $21,500, without any other obligation on the part of the government than exists at present.

Mr. FIELDING. That is correct.

Mr. FOSTER. So much as regards the financial part, and that is all that is referred to?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The only change, though it is not strictly a change, is with respect to the character of the undertaking instead of having the western extension as security for the bonds we take in addition the leasehold interest in the eastern section so as to cover at once the whole transaction.

On section 2,

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Section 2 confirms the mortgage in schedule b. It has reference to the transaction between the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company and the Grand Trunk Railway Company in regard to the second mortgage bonds. It is a condition of their agreement with the government that they shall get the second mortgage bonds guaranteed by the old Grand Trunk Railway Company, and schedule b provides for that mortgage.

On section 3,

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Section 3 provides for their own issue for branch lines, with which the government is not concerned.

On section 4,

Mr. FOSTER. What does Mr. Shepley mean in paragraph b, on page 4, when he says :

> There has been some amplification of detail in the definition of cost of construction given by the fifteenth paragraph of the agreement of 1903.

What is that amplification ?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The paragraph to which that refers is to be found at the end of page 10 of the Bill which we are now considering. It is the schedule, article 1, section 5. My hon. friend will see that the expression 'construction work' is practically intended to cover the work during the process of construction and is intended to enable advances to be made on materials which have been delivered in the country, which would not be covered by the original section 15 of the first agreement.

Mr. HAGGART. If they have the material for the construction of the work in the country you can make advances to them, even if it is not on the ground where the work is proceeding ?

Mr. FIELDING. It was thought that probably the words in the existing Act would permit that, but to prevent any doubt it was made clear that on goods delivered in Canada, although not actually delivered on the railway, advances may be made. For example, if a ship load of rails were landed in Montreal—that is not a very good illustration, because we expect to make the rails in Canada—these rails will have to be paid for, and the moment they are delivered the lien of the government applies to the property and we can make advances on them, so long as they are to be used in the construction of the work.

Mr. HAGGART. Does the lien of the government apply ?

Mr. FIELDING. Yes.

Mr. HAGGART. How is it made to apply ?

Mr. FIELDING. That matter was specially discussed with counsel, and it was agreed that the Act covered it. My hon. friend will see that Mr. Shepley says on page 4 of his report that :

> Upon such delivery in Canada they become at once a parcel of the property covered by the mortgage.

Mr. FOSTER. I suppose we will have to take Mr. Shepley's opinion of it.

Bill reported.

RELIEF OF ARTHUR HOWE HERSEY.

On the order,

> House in committee on Bill (No. 167) for the relief of Arthur Howe Hersey.—Mr. T. G. Johnston.

Mr. HENDERSON. On Friday last I asked that this Bill stand over until to-day. I will again state the reasons why I shall ask a postponement of the Bill at the present. It appears that when this Bill came before the Private Bills Committee of the House of Commons the promoter was not present. Neither was the respondent represented, inasmuch as the notice to her solicitor had failed to reach him. The respondent is anxious yet to be represented before the committee in this case. I have not read the evidence myself, my copy having been mislaid, but I am informed that this is a somewhat peculiar case ; not, at any rate, an ordinary case, inasmuch as there is no direct evidence of actual adultery. The respondent is anxious to be represented, and owing to the fact that the notice failed to reach her solicitor she was not represented. I think it would be a very reasonable thing on the part of the House to grant the request. A very short delay will certainly take place by meeting the views of the respondent in this case. I therefore beg to move :

> That order No. 2 be discharged, and that Bill No. 167 (letter E of the Senate) be referred back to the Committee on Private Bills for further consideration.

Mr. FIELDING. Has it been the practice for our committee to take evidence on these subjects ?

Mr. SPROULE. Yes ; we have done so.

Mr. FIELDING. It has been the practice for a committee of this House to take evidence as well as the committee of the other House ?

Mr. SPROULE. Yes ; I remember distinctly when it was done.

Mr. A. JOHNSTON. Just one word in answer to my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson). When this question was up on Friday evening last my hon. friend from Middlesex (Mr. Calvert), who is in charge of this Bill in the absence of my hon. friend from Lambton (Mr. T. G. Johnston), in whose name the Bill stands, made the statement that he would prefer that no action should be taken in regard to this Bill until such time as the promoter should be able to be here. It may well happen that my hon. friend from Lambton may be able to be here within a day or two, and it might not be unwise to defer any further action until such time as he is in the House. I therefore beg to move that the debate be adjourned.

Mr. HENDERSON. I did not so understand the request made by my hon, friend from Middlesex on that occasion. I understood him to say that the hon. member for Lambton (Mr. T. G. Johnston), who is in charge of this Bill, was absent. It appears that the hon. member for Lambton is ill. It is quite uncertain when he will be here. He may not be here for a week, or perhaps weeks. I do not see that the case would be prejudiced in any way by the fact that he is not present. I presume he has simply lent his name to those who are putting through the Bill and that he does not feel any direct interest in the matter. I fail to see that anything would be gained by throwing it over until the hon. member for Lambton shall be here. I have no desire to delay the matter further than to simply allow the Bill to go back again before the committee, and allow the Private Bills Committee to deal with it and give it such further consideration, after hearing the solicitor for the respondent, as they think advisable, and then to again report to the House, when the matter can be disposed of. I have no desire to delay the matter, and I would prefer to go back direct to the committee at as early a date as possible and have it dealt with by that committee.

Mr. SPROULE. Why not allow it to go to the committee and then allow Dr. Johnston's convenience to be suited as to when the committee should be called ?

Mr. FIELDING. I think that if the course adopted is pursued and the convenience of the hon. member for Lambton (Mr. Johnston) is consulted as to the time when the committee shall be called, all the interests would be served.

Motion agreed to, and Bill referred to Private Bills Committee.

NORTHWEST TELEPHONE COMPANY.

On the order :

Consideration of amendment made by the Senate to Bill (No. 28) An Act to incorporate the Northwest Telephone Company.—Mr. Turriff.

Hon. CHAS. FITZPATRICK (Minister of Justice). I object to proceeding with this. There must be some misunderstanding about this amendment. The amendment purports to be to clause 19 of the Bill. Clause 19 reads as follows :

No right, except as provided for in subsection 2 hereof, hereby or by the Electric Telegraph Companies Act conferred, shall be exercised——

These are the important words :

—without the consent of and upon the terms to be agreed upon with the council of a city, town, incorporated village or township, or with the municipality of a county within which it is proposed to exercise such right.

The words added are :

Or other proper authority vested for the time being within the ownership of the land.

Mr. HENDERSON.

This is nonsense ; the Bill had better stand.

Order allowed to stand.

QUESTIONS.

ABOLITION OF TRADING STAMPS.

Mr. AMES asked :

Is it the intention of the government, during the present session, to introduce legislation with a view of abolishing what are known as trading stamps ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). It is the intention of the government to introduce legislation this session dealing with trading stamps.

SALVATION ARMY AND IMMIGRATION.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Has the government had any correspondence with the Salvation Army in regard to immigration to Canada ?

2. Will said correspondence be laid upon the table of the House before the immigration estimates are further discussed ?

Rt. Hon. Sir WILFRID LAURIER (Prime Minister). The government has had correspondence not with the Salvation Army, but with Mr. Rider Haggard with regard to immigration to Canada. The correspondence will be brought down.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Immigration—salaries of agents and employees in Canada, Great Britain and foreign countries, $157,200.

Mr. MONK. It is our intention to present a motion, of which I will give notice to my hon. friend, in regard to the general policy of the government respecting immigration. I scarcely think it would meet the views of my hon. friend were we to present that motion this evening, as there are very few members in the House, and I would venture to suggest to my hon. friend that he take up some other items and keep the most important ones for that discussion at a future date.

Mr. OLIVER. I am sure it is the wish of all members to expedite the business of the House, and, without wishing to detract from the freedom of debate or to stop the presentation of any line of policy that may be thought well, I would say that if it would suit the hon. gentleman as well, it would suit us very much better, to proceed with this main estimate in regard to immigration, and take up the question of policy on a supplementary vote which will have to be asked for later on.

Mr. MONK. If this is the usual vote for immigration, we might proceed with it, and reserve the other votes for another day.

Mr. OLIVER. The information that would be elicited in the discussion of this vote will be available for the presentation of the main question on a future day.

Mr. TAYLOR. Surely my hon. friend does not intend to come down with any supplementary estimates in addition to this large sum of $767,200.

Mr. OLIVER. I am given to understand that there will be a supplementary vote of about $30,000.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. This is a very considerable vote, and I think it is presented in a very objectionable form. In the estimates of the Public Works Department, for a very much smaller amount, you will find eight or ten items. In the committee, we elicited from the superintendent of immigration a considerable amount of information in regard to the money spent and the directions in which it was spent. I think there should be special items for printing, the salaries of agents and their expenses. We ought to have a good deal more detail in the estimates than we have, and I think it is up to the minister to give a pretty full explanation of what he has done, and what he intends to do with this vote of $157,200. The next item of $610,000 shows an increase of $74,000. The vote for the present year was exceptionally large. The minister, in explaining the supplementary estimates, stated that it was due to overlapping. But it seems to me that expenditure on immigration is altogether too large for the results we are getting. Last year the report showed that the items were divided as follows : for continental Europe, $78,000 ; for Great Britain and Ireland, $236,000 ; for the United States, $205,000 ; total for these three items, $519,000, leaving to be spent in Canada for 1903-4 $225,788. I cannot understand why such a large sum of money should be required in Canada to take care of the immigrants after they arrive. The minister may be able to give some satisfactory explanation of that. I hope he will, because our only object is to have the money well spent and to get good value for it. Then, for the present year the main estimates were $672,276, with a supplemetary vote which was passed the other day of $300,150, making in all $972,426. That certainly is a very large vote for immigration. My hon. friend, while he was a private member of this House, took very serious objection to very much smaller amounts. I quite understand that he was not a minister of the Crown when these estimates were put through and while this money was spent ; at the same time, having taken office, I presume that he is prepared to take full responsibility, as he has to do, whether he is personally responsible or not. We find expended in continental Europe for the present year $133,786, in Great Britain and Ireland $239,000, in the United States $318,000 and in Canada $282,-150, making a total of $972,936. I think the minister ought to be able to give us a detailed statement of what he has done with this money and why he requires so much. It is a well known fact that the United States has never had an immigration agent abroad soliciting immigrants, and at the present time it is a criminal offence for any person to do that. They are spending, I presume, about as much money to keep undesirable people out of the country as we are spending to get all kinds of people into the country. I will not at the present time go into the general question of immigration until I hear the explanation of the minister on the first item.

Mr. OLIVER. I did not understand definitely from the hon. member for Jacques Cartier whether he was willing to go on with these estimates to-night or not ?

Mr. MONK. I am perfectly willing.

Mr. OLIVER. In regard to the general remark that the expenditure is very large, and that it is increasing, that is certainly something to be considered carefully, and to be justified by the results. The position taken by the hon. member is that inasmuch as the United States does not assist immigration, Canada should not do so.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I did not just say that, but you may put it that way if you like.

Mr. OLIVER. What I understood from the hon. gentleman was that inasmuch as the United States did not solicit immigration, it was a questionable policy for Canada to do so. But as a matter of fact immigrants have gone into the United States by the million while the population of Canada practically stood still in so far as the influx of new population was concerned. For a generation or two, while our population was increasing by thousands, theirs was increasing by the million. Not only were we not getting immigration but we were losing our own people to the United States, and this condition continued many years even after we had the Northwest opened up by railway communication. While therefore there was no necessity for the United States to solicit immigrants since they were coming in without solicitation, the reverse was the case in this country, and we had to exert ourselves to secure new population to settle our waste lands or we would be permanently left behind in the race. The reverse of the policy advocated by the hon. gentleman was therefore adopted. The policy of securing immigration was entered upon vigorously with the most happy results. True the expenditure has been large, but the results have been more than proportionate. From a material point of view, they have been eminently satisfactory. The mere fact therefore that our expenditure on immigration is increasing is not necessarily an evidence of unwise policy or administration. As long as the results of that expenditure are satisfactory, there is no particular ground for condemnation. Of course it is none the less necessary that the expenditures should be carefully looked after, money should not be wasted and every criticism that will tend towards a better direction or a reduction of the expenditures without lessening the result will certainly be welcome. With regard to the criticism as to the large amount of the vote in bulk, while a vote in bulk has its objectionable side it has also a very useful side. The immigration service is one which, in the nature of things, cannot be absolutely controlled. If for one reason or another, there should come a special stream of immigration or a special urgency should arise in a certain direction, it is absolutely necessary that the urgency should be met at once ; and when we vote the amount in bulk, the funds are available anywhere within the limits of that vote, as they would not be if the vote were confined to a number of different items. We can get a better service for less money, so long as the money is properly handled, by giving a vote in bulk than by subdividing it. So far there has not been any great objection to the handling of money in that way. I fancy that every expenditure on immigration has met with probably as little objection from the Auditor General as any expenditure in any of the other branches of the government. So long as we do not mishandle the money, it is a very great advantage to the department to have this money voted in bulk.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. What other changes are there in the policy of the department in the last three years ?

Mr. OLIVER.

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot say that I know of any. Our policy is of course to secure as many desirable immigrants as possible with as little expenditure as possible. Of course as conditions change, there will have to be changes in our system to meet them, but there has been no change in our general policy from the start to the finish. That policy has been to get as many settlers as possible with as little expenditure as possible.

Mr. MONK. I think it would be useful if my hon. friend would give us an idea of what changes he proposes to make, if any, in the policy followed by his predecessors ever since this government came into power. Did the hon. gentleman say that there is no material change in that policy ? A moment ago in reply to my hon. friend from Lennox (Mr. Uriah Wilson), he said that the fact that the United States had received a very considerable influx of immigrants without any expenditure, and that during the same period we had received but few immigrants, proved that Canada required to spend considerable money in order to equalize the conditions. I do not think that that follows as a matter of logic. In the United States they have never encouraged immigration. They have never spent a dollar for that purpose on which we are spending millions every year. The money they have expended has been spent for the purpose of guarding against strangers and undesirable immigration. And, in spite of that, they have had, during the last twenty-five years, an unprecedented flow of immigrants into that country. As my hon. friend from Lennox (Mr. Uriah Wilson) stated, the immigration law forbids any person to induce immigrants to come to that country. Shipping agents may advertise the time of departure of steamers and conditions for transportation, but anything more is forbidden. And we all know how extremely stringent the law is in the United States as to the admission of immigrants and how these conditions, stringent as they are, are enforced, one might almost say, to perfection. One reading the report of the United States Commissioner of Immigration setting forth the results obtained by the preventive officers of the immigration staff of that country can easily see that their policy is absolutely the opposite of our own. And yet, what is the result ? We know that hundreds of thousands of people go into the United States every year. We know that the best of the immigrants to be had in the old world go to the United States. Last year, I believe, over 850,000 immigrants arrived at American ports. And all this without inducements held out, without canvassing, without any single item of this immense expenditure which we make every year for immigration purposes. Far from following such a course as ours, immigrants are charged upon en-taring the American republic a tax of $2 a head. And this gives a revenue which exceeds by several hundred thousand dollars what they expend—a very large sum—for purposes of immigrant inspection. I think I am within the mark when I say that in 1896 Canada was spending about $200,000 for purposes of immigration. Of course, the system was the same as that of to-day—the promotion of immigration—but on a very much more moderate scale. I think that last year all the expenses, direct and indirect, connected with immigration would make a total of considerably more than $1,000,000—though the expenditure may not appear in the Auditor General's Report as connected with immigration. I think that the number of immigrants who came to Canada last year was about 130,000. I do not know that our system of inspection and control of that immigration is at all what it ought to be. It will be necessary to refer to that later on. But my hon. friend the Minister of the Interior, some three or four years ago, stated in the House that we must proceed with extreme caution with respect to immigration. I have often read these remarks of my hon. friend, and I have no doubt that he remembers them also. He was of opinion then, and quoted authority for his contention, that desirable immigrants should be carefully selected, and that, after they reached this country, they should be carefully followed in order to make sure that they realized the expectations formed of them, and became bona fide settlers in this country under favourable conditions. He stated also, in substance, that it was time to call a halt in regard to indiscriminate immigration at any rate, and that if we continued to import people at the rate we had done for some time past, we would be—to use his own words—laying the foundation in the Northwest, whither most of these immigrants go, of most difficult problems for the Dominion government and the local authorities to solve. Is not my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) disposed to carry out the views he expressed on that occasion ? I regret that I have not his speech here, but I would assume from what he said on that occasion that he intended to make very serious modifications in the system of indiscriminate immigration which we follow at the present time. Does he not consider that some change is necessary ? Or is he in favour of continuing, without reservation or restriction, the policy of his predecessor ?

As regards the grouping of the expenditure, I agree with my hon. friend from Lennox (Mr. Uriah Wilson), not only with regard to these items, but with regard to most of the items of the estimates, that discussion would be much shorter if more details were given. But this is particularly true in regard to the items respecting immigration. Here is a proposed expenditure of $767,000 grouped under two headings only. This arrangement obliges us to ask many questions which might be avoided were the items properly divided.

Mr. OLIVER. As to the form of the vote, I may say that these sums have been divided for purposes of statement to the House, so that, I think, we shall be able to answer any questions that may arise quite as well as if the division were made in the estimates. And this form of vote does not prevent us from increasing one expenditure and decreasing another, as the urgency of the case requires. If money is voted for a certain service, and even if a balance remains unexpended, no part of the vote can be used for another service, no matter how badly it may be needed. But this difficulty has been avoided in the past, the result being actual economy in the service.

With regard to my own view and with regard to questions of policy, I have nothing whatever to take back of what I said on the occasion referred to by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). I have always looked upon the question of immigration as one of the most important that the country had to deal with. There is no doubt that immigration brings problems of more or less difficulty to the part of the country affected ; and I think now, as I thought before, that it is not wise to shut our eyes to these problems. At the same time we all recognize the necessity of increasing the population ; we all recognize the necessity of encouraging immigration. As I said, the policy of the government has been to induce immigration, and, so far as I am concerned, the policy of the government will be to induce immigration. I think it has never been a part of the settled policy of the government to induce indiscriminate immigration, and it will not be the policy of the government to induce indiscriminate immigration or to deal with immigration indiscriminately.

As I said a few minutes ago, changed conditions will require to be met by changed methods. It is impossible for me, having only recently entered the department, and not having had an opportunity to familiarize myself with this matter, to say at the present time what may be done in one regard more than is being done, or what may be done in another regard less than is being done. I think my hon. friends will not be so unfair as to demand such a statement from me at this time. To put the case shortly, my view is, as it always has been, that the country requires a vigorous immigration policy, and that that policy should be acted upon with due regard to the ultimate effect upon our country of the people whom we induce to settle in it ; and that while no money is too much to spend to secure an immigration of the right kind of people, any money is too much to spend on an immigration of the wrong kind. I do not think there is any disagreement between the two sides of the House, or between any two members of the House on that point. We are all agreed in that respect, and it is only a question of how best to carry out that policy. On the one hand we want the people, we want them quickly, and we want as many of them as we can get ; on the other hand we want to procure as desirable a class as possible ; and the effort of the department will be to attain both objects so far as possible.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I had hoped for a change in the policy of immigration when my hon. friend the present minister took office, because we know he has made some vigorous speeches in this House upon that very question. I do not see how we can reconcile his position that there should be no change in the policy of the government with his previous utterances on this subject. Now I have a lot of quotations here of his speeches, I am not going to quote any of them to-night, because we expect another discussion ; but there is one that fits in so well here that I cannot refrain from reading it. It will be found on page 3740 of the 'Hansard' of 1902. Mr. Oliver spoke as follows :

> I am given to understand that a new system is being adopted in regard to immigration from the British Isles. I am not familiar with the details of that system, but I will say that there is no possibility of adopting any system which could be less effective than which has prevailed during the past year. I am satisfied that any system that is adopted will be an improvement.

Now I might almost say that I agree pretty well with the minister. I do not think we have got very good results from the money we have been spending on immigration. We have had many agents drawing salaries, and who have not given good value in return. There is another system to which I am even more strongly opposed than to the salaried agents, and that is the commissioned agent. It seemed to be the opinion that no matter who an agent induced to come into this country, it was all right and he could get a commission. Then there is another thing. The superintendent of immigration told us the other day that for certain immigrants we gave $5 a head commission to the steamboat agents. I believe these are continental immigrants, farmers and labourers. Well, we only pay 7 shillings per head for British immigrants. Now it seems to me that policy should be reversed. I know what the answer will be, namely, that the steamboat agents or, the parties taking charge of that kind of immigration, pay their own advertising and that sort of thing. Well, we pay for the advertisements in Great Britain and Ireland, as well as in other countries. Now the fact of the matter is that a great deal of this money, in my judgment, is wasted. Besides that, a great deal of the literature is wasted that we send out in such great quantities. I have been told by one man in particular who lectured in the old country that they had agents at the door giving away literature, and after the lecture was over you could pick up hundreds of pamphlets on the street that had been thrown away broadcast. A few years ago my hon. friend was with me in opposition to the policy of paying $5 bonus. But if we have to give bonuses let us give them to our own people. I am not at all in favour of bonuses, I want that understood ; but if we have to give a bonus to any man, let us give it to the Englishman, the Irishman or the Scotchman, then we will have one of our own people amongst us. The other day I came across a good Scotchman, a very intelligent man, and he said, I think if you dealt as well by the Scotch people as you do by the Doukhobors you would have very little trouble in getting a large number of them. We not only gave $5 per head for the Doukhobors, but we gave them assistance besides when they had hard luck in the winter time. I do not object to that, but as they are a very prosperous people I think we ought to get that money back. Now the minister has not given us one bit of information as to the first part of this vote : 'Salaries of agents and employees in Canada, Great Britain and foreign countries. That item is of a wide scope, and I think we ought to have some information about it. I do not feel disposed to be unduly severe on the minister, knowing that he has only recently taken office ; but I think he ought to give us at least some information about that vote of $157,200.

Mr. OLIVER. I shall be pleased to give all the information in my power.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. In the first place, why do you want so much money for agents in Canada ?

Mr. OLIVER. There is required $102,230 for the service in Canada ; $31,530 for the United States ; $19,700 for Great Britain ; $3,700 for the continent. There is an increase of $20,000 over last year. This is to pay the salaries of several new appointments, some increases of salaries, and to pay the salaries of several officials whose services in the past have been paid from the vote for contingencies and general expenses ; that is to say, we are meeting to a certain extent the criticism the hon. member made in the beginning that a certain amount, $7,500, which was formerly paid out of the lump sum of contingencies, is now paid out of this specific sum voted for salaries.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Give us the amounts for salaries.

Mr. OLIVER. Yes. The new appointments, salaries, amount to $12,986.25, an increase of $1,000. There was transferred from the general vote $7,500 ; that makes a total of $21,486.25 and there is a decrease of $1,500, making a net increase of $19,986. The new appointments are as follows : Dr. A. C. Hawkins, medical officer, Halifax, $1,000 ; Dr. J. C. Howe, medical officer, Quebec, $1,000 ; Dr. A. Potvin, medical officer, Quebec, $1,000, and Dr. A. T.

Stewart, medical officer, Montreal, $1,000, making $4,000 for medical inspection at ports of landing rendered necessary by the increased stringency of the efforts which are being made to prevent the landing of undesirable persons.

Mr. MONK. What would be the duty of the medical officer in Montreal ?

Mr. OLIVER. The duty of the medical officer is to inspect people, who come to Montreal through New York and Boston.

Mr. BLAIN. I brought to the attention of the hon. minister, when the immigration item was before the committee last, the case of some immigrants who had come over to Canada and who had been stopped at Prescott, Ont., on their way to the United States. I understood them to be immigrants from the old country who had crossed our border, who had come up to Prescott and then desired to cross over to Ogdensburg, but were stopped by the United States officials. I asked the hon. minister if he would be good enough to investigate the matter and be prepared to give us a statement in regard to it. Perhaps the hon. gentleman could give it now.

Mr. OLIVER. We have not the correspondence in hand but we will be prepared to place it before the committee.

Mr. TAYLOR. I would like to ask the hon. minister if he approves of and if it is his intention to carry out the policy of his predecessor in regard to the expenditure of the money of the people which is voted for the purposes of immigration ? I find by reading the Auditor General's Report that last year the great bulk of this money was paid to political friends of the government for services that I think added very little to the bringing in of immigrants. At page L—15 of the Auditor General's Report I find that the salaries at Ottawa were $17,978.06. But, that is only a bagatelle, because I find that F. C. Blair, who is a salaried officer was paid the following amounts : Board and lodging, $99.65 ; cabs, $4.55 ; fares, $16.11 ; livery, $224.10 ; pullmans, $14.50 ; street cars, $4.20 ; stage fares, $1.40 ; tips, $2 ; sundries, $2.61 ; making a total of $369.12, that this gentleman has disbursed. But, this is only a small matter. Take the case of Mr. H. Charlebois. He receives pay for services, 33 days at $5, 27 days at $4, and although he is not a permanent officer at all, the government furnish him with a uniform cap costing $5. Then, for board and lodgings he receives $123.20 and for pullmans, $88 ; making a total of $489.20. J. Edgar is paid for services 52 days at $5, and he received a uniform cap costing $6.50. board and lodging, $109.40 ; pullmans, $66 ; cabs, 1 ; street cars, $2 ; tips, $2.25 ; making a total of $447.15. He puts his hand into the chest, takes out money belonging to the people of the country, and expends it in tips although he is simply working by the day receiving $5 a day and expenses. But, that is not the worst. Take the case of J. Franklin, services, 193 days at $5, 9 days at $4, board and lodging, $425.55 ; cabs, $3.75 ; pullmans, $276.50 ; street cars, $8.45 ; tips, $6 ; sundries, $4.25 ; making a total of $1,651.80. This gentleman takes $6 of the people's money with which to tip waiters, &c. Next we have R. W. Hillyard, services 147 days at $5 ; 6 days at $4 ; 4 22-30 m. at $1,000; board and lodging, $425.50; bus, $4.40 ; coal oil, $2.24 ; fares, $44.55 ; hand basins, $8.03 ; livery, $135.55; provisions for immigrants, $5.85 ; pullmans, $235 ; street cars, $11.45 ; telegrams, $2.70 ; tips $27.70 ; transfers, $4.20; sundries, $2.03, making a total of $2,074.87. This gentleman spends $27.70 for tips, but that is not the worst Geo. A. Johnston receives pay for services 125 days at $5 ; 1 day at $4 ; 4 22-30 m. at $1,000 ; board and lodging, $481.80 ; cabs, $2.25 ; fares, $27 ; pullmans, $305.50 ; provisions for immigrants, $3.55 ; telegrams, $2.80 ; tips, $11 ; wash basins, $1.50 ; sundries, $4.04 ; making a total of $1,875.11. L. Kehoe receives pay for services 18 days at $5 ; 19 days at $4 ; board and lodging, $71 ; pullmans, $56 ; street cars, 70 cents ; uniform cap, $5 or in all $298.70. Mr. W. D. Scott receives for board and lodging, $532.50; baggage transfer, $7.75; cabs, $14.75; map, $1; pullmans, $68.75 ; street cars, $9.25 ; tips, $5.25 ; making a total of $639.25. The next is Mr. G. B. Smart. Mr. Smart is set down as a salaried officer at $1,400 looking after pauper children, and here are his expenses : Board and lodging, $465.38 ; baggage transfers, $8.50; cab and bus fares, $56.40 ; cigars, $7. The government have to furnish him with cigars. He charged them up to the government. He took the people's money bought cigars and smoked them with his heels up on the seat of a pullman because he is allowed $107.85 for pullmans. Fares, $48.78 ; livery, $264.75 ; postage, $3.76 ; printing cards, $2.60 ; pullmans, $107.85 ; street cars, $19.20 ; telegrams, $11.55 ; telephones, $4.10; tips, $23.95; sundries, $1.87 ; making a total of $1,025.69. He takes $23 of the people's money with which to tip waiters and others and this added to $7 for cigars, makes $30 of the people's money expended in this way, yet, this vote is supposed to be for immigration purposes. Of what assistance is it towards bringing immigrants into this country to pay $7 to Mr. Smart to buy cigars and $23 to give in tips to waiters ? Is it the intention of the hon. Minister of the Interior to continue this policy under his management of the department ? Is he going to allow the people's money to be frittered away in this shape ? If so, we had better say we will give up importing immigrants at all.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. COCHRANE. My friends opposite approve of it and say it is all right for a civil servant to put his hand into the treasury and take out $7 and buy cigars and give $23.50 in tips to waiters. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are frittered away in that way. Every servant in connection with this department at Halifax, Montreal or Quebec is allowed three uniform suits during the season, and two or three caps, running into $100 a year besides salary and liberal expenses. Surely the minister will reform the policy of the government unless he approves, which as an honest man he cannot do, of the conduct of the department. No wonder he is asking an increased amount, adding to the civil service list and appointing friends. I could point out agencies in the United States where some of these officials receive $6,000 and $7,000 between salary and expenses, holding office at Detroit, Milwaukee, &c. It is all detailed in the Auditor General's Report. Surely the minister can run the department and get as efficient service for one quarter the money that is spent here as is shown by the Auditor General's Report for last year. Let the minister look at the item of pullman car fares. Most members of parliament, or at least a great many of them, in travelling from Ottawa to Toronto do not occupy pullman cars, but here a civil servant if he travels must have a pullman car charged to the people of this country. I think it is time the minister would call a halt and ask these gentlemen to pay for their own cigars and tips to waiters out of their own pockets, instead of out of the pockets of the people. I trust the minister, before the vote passes, will cut down the item as it can be cut down, and still have a better service than we have had in the past for the money voted.

Mr. OLIVER. I have not had the time or opportunity to go over the actual working of the department since taking hold, but I can quite accept the criticism made, which is perfectly in order, and I shall certainly accept the duty laid on me when I have the opportunity to go into the administration of the department, and do the best I can to secure reasonable economy, accompanied of course by efficiency. I am not able to say just how it comes that these expenditures have been made and all that astonishes me is that the books show these accounts have been paid after having passed the lynx-eyed Auditor General.

Mr. TAYLOR. Because they are certified by some officer of your department and the Auditor General is obliged to pay.

Mr. COCHRANE. I expect you know well enough.

Mr. OLIVER. I only wish he would be as good with some accounts I know to be perfectly honest but which he is not willing to pass.

Mr. COCHRANE. Never mind the Auditor General. Let us know what the minister is going to do himself.

Mr. COCHRANE.

Mr. OLIVER. On inquiry of the officer of the department here in regard to one or two of those expenditures, I find that Mr. Blair is employed as an inspector of the immigrant children and this expense of inspection is paid by the imperial government. There is an arrangement whereby when children come out under official supervision they have to be officially inspected every year and for this inspection, except the first inspection, the imperial government pay, so that the expense, as I am given to understand, is a mere form ; although appearing in our report as charged upon our department it really represents a payment to us by the imperial government. The same is true in regard to a Mr. Hillyard, whose name is mentioned there in regard to the same employment. In reference to the use of pullman cars I understand that this use has mostly taken place in returning from the conduct of immigrants out west. We start the immigrants from Montreal or Ottawa in charge of a guide so to speak, who accompanies the party to Winnipeg and sees to their distribution over the branch lines there and then comes back. The trip from Winnipeg to Ottawa occupies two days and nights, and any one travelling on the train must either use a pullman or sit up, and I think it is generally considered it is necessary for even a government official to sleep ; it is upon that ground I believe that these pullman expenses are paid. As to the use of pullmans between here and Toronto we pay, as the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) has said, about $5 a day. I take it as cheaper to pay the cost of a pullman from here to Toronto and have the officer travel at night than have him lose $5 worth of daylight in making the same trip so that while I do not at all care for extra luxuries—and certainly some of these expenses will bear very careful inquiry—I think there is sometimes an appearance of economy that is not economy and an appearance of extravagance that is not extravagance.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Will the minister tell how many children these three inspectors inspected ?

Mr. OLIVER. The number on the inspection list at present is about 1,100.

Mr. COCHRANE. Where are the homes situated that these children are furnished to and distributed from ?

Mr. OLIVER. They are mostly distributed amongst the farmers.

Mr. COCHRANE. The minister must know—if he does not he ought to—that they come to homes at first in Belleville, Peterborough and so forth and then are distributed to the farmers from the homes.

Mr. OLIVER. There are 13 receiving homes in this country and they come from about 115 in the old country.

Mr. COCHRANE. Are there any in central Ontario, Belleville, Peterborough, &c., that distribute the children that these gentlemen inspect? My opinion is that that inspection is a perfect fraud on the country. The hon. gentleman says there is something to be said; there was a good deal to be said in connection with such an expenditure when the Conservative party was in power.

An hon. MEMBER. Hear, hear.

Mr. COCHRANE. The hon. gentleman says 'hear, hear,' if he would mind what he is doing and not be so quick with his 'hear, hear,' and his simple grin and pay more attention to the conduct of public affairs it would be better for him.

Mr. D. D. McKENZIE. Hear, hear.

Mr. COCHRANE. There is another gentleman with his 'hear, hear.' I did not expect to see the hon. gentleman in the House; he said he would resign, but I knew that he would not be very resigning if he could get out of it.

Mr. D. D. McKENZIE. How are you on the question of skimmed milk?

Mr. COCHRANE. How are you? I will let you know if you repeat that to me outside the House. If you had any manhood about you, you would not do it. You come outside the House and say that to me, and I will let you know. I was saying to the minister that when the administration that I used to support was making economical expenditures, there were men then on this side of the House who would keep us all night talking over a few dollars of expenditure. It is all very well for hon. gentlemen to say 'hear, hear,' and smile, but they do not realize that they are spending the people's money for tips and cigars. Last year or the year before Walker's whisky was furnished to the Minister of Agriculture. The poor people of the country are earning by the sweat of their brow the money to pay the taxes which hon. gentlemen opposite are spending. I do not object to any expenditure for the good of the country, but I object to officials travelling in special cars. When we were in power hon. gentlemen opposite talked from morning till night about the iniquity of Sir John Macdonald travelling in a special car; yet I have heard on good authority that the late Minister of the Interior travelled about the Northwest with his father and brother in a private car, for which, I suppose, the country is paying. In the section of country where I live I venture to say that not one of these gentlemen ever inspected one of the homes that the hon. Minister of the Interior speaks of. They have been inspected by ladies; but so far as these gentlemen are concerned, unless more has been done in other sections of the country than in that section, the inspection of these children is a perfect fraud on the people, and the money is worse than uselessly expended.

Mr. OLIVER. I can only say that the officers of the department reiterate that the inspection has been made every year.

Mr. COCHRANE. I emphatically contradict the statement.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Would the minister tell us when the two assistant inspectors were appointed?

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Blair is not now employed. Mr. Smart is, and has been a permanent inspector, and he is assisted at the present time by Mr. Hillyard.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Mr. Scott, the Commissioner of Immigration, told us in the committee that there were three—Mr. Smart, Mr. Hillyard and Mr. Corry.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Corry was appointed quite recently in Manitoba.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Last year, according to the report, there were 2,204 children, of whom 1,188 were in four of Dr. Barnardo's homes. This year we have only 1,142 children, yet there are one or two additional inspectors. Under these circumstances, I do not think that increase can be very well justified. Even if the inspection has to be paid for in the old country, that is no justification for wasting the money, because it gives us a bad name.

Mr. OLIVER. The difference in the number of children does not make very much difference in the work of inspection, inasmuch as they are scattered widely all over the country from ocean to ocean. It would be easy to show that it would not cost so much to inspect half a dozen children located in one school section as two separated in different counties.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. But you had twice the number last year and only one inspector.

Mr. OLIVER. No; there were two. Mr. Hillyard was acting as inspector last year.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Here is an item of some considerable importance on which I would like to have a few more details: Commissioner Smith, expenses for land guides, interpreters, temporary agents, clerks, travelling expenses, mattresses, provisions, and all expenses connected with locating immigrants on land, $130,000.

Mr. LAKE. I understand from the minister that while we spend on immigration from the United States some $30,000 on salaries we spend only $18,000 in Great Britain and Ireland.

Mr. OLIVER. In the United States $31,000 and in Great Britain and Ireland $19,000.

Mr. LAKE. Although I realize that the class of immigrants from the United States is a very good class, still I think it would be better to put forth greater efforts in the mother country. I do not think any class could equal the small tenant farmer class, the men who work their own farms in the mother country. We are not getting enough of them. If a larger amount were spent to get that particular class, we would get better results than we do from the expenditure in the United States.

Mr. OSLER. The efforts of the department in the past have been, as they will be in the future, very strongly directed towards the object the hon. gentleman mentions. But the difficulty in securing the immigration of tenant farmers from the old country is that they are wanted in the old country just as much as they are here. I can assure him that no effort will be spared, but they are a class of people very conservative in their habits, if not in their politics, and will require to be attacked apparently from as yet an undiscovered point in order to secure them.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Does the hon. minister intend to continue the payment of $5 per head to agents who bring in immigrants from the continent ?

Mr. OLIVER. I am given to understand that there is a contract for ten years. I cannot give the date at the moment, but it was entered into and the department would be bound by it.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. A very bad contract.

Mr. OLIVER. Possibly. Of course the question of policy would always have to be considered.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Will you bring down that contract ?

Mr. OLIVER. I have it here but there are reasons why it should not be generally published. I shall be glad, however, to place it at the disposal of my hon. friend, on the understanding that it will not be made public.

Mr. MONK. I think it would be well if my hon. friend would give us the different contracts by virtue of which we are bound to pay a bonus to steamship companies or other tranportation companies on the carriage of immigrants.

Mr. OLIVER. There is only the one.

Mr. MONK. I think the House is entitled to see that contact unless there be grave reasons of state why we should not. I assume that my hon. friend himself did not make that contract binding us for ten years to pay $5 a head on every immigrant from the continent. That is certainly a very condemnable policy indeed.

Mr. HENDERSON. My hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) says the country is bound for ten years. He is a lawyer and I am not, and I presume he means that we may be bound to make good a contract entered into by the government. I however, do not think that we are either morally or legally bound. The ex-Minister of Interior (Mr. Sifton) knew perfectly well that he had no authority to make any such contract. This parliament never authorized it. Beyond the period of one year for which money is voted, no minister can make a contract binding parliament. The thing would be monstrous. What is the use of parliament meeting once every twelve months if a minister, at his own whim, may appropriate the public money for ten years to come ? The present minister would be only doing his duty if he would cancel that contract and take care not to enter into any contract in the future beyond the period for which the money is voted I trust we shall have no more revelations of this kind. I trust that the present minister will have too much self-respect to enter into any other such contract. There is no use saying that we are bound by it for ten years. As a matter of fact we are not bound either legally or morally, and I trust that the hon. minister will see that the contract is cancelled at once. We can do very well without getting immigrants from the continent except from one or two special countries. The time has come when we can get all the immigrants we want without paying anything per head and we will get a better class. The poorest kind of immigrant is the one you have to pay for. The man who will make a good citizen is the one whose only inducement to settle in this country is what the government offers in the way of land and what the country offers in the way of a fertile soil and healthy climate. And I trust that there will be no more of this bonus system, but that whatever obligation has been undertaken by the previous minister will be forthwith cancelled, and let men come to this country of their own free will. I do not see the need for filling up this country so hastily. Immigration, I think, is coming in with sufficient rapidity. Perhaps, even if it were not coming in so fast, we could take better care of those who do come, and the immigration would inure more to the benefit of the country. But, by all means let us cease giving bonuses to bring in a class of immigrants that have never proved as acceptable as those that have come in without government aid.

Mr. A. A. McLEAN. Is there any law on the statute-book which authorizes the Minister of the Interior to enter into this contract, or has he entered into it by virtue of his position ?

Mr. OLIVER. I presume that the Minister of the Interior made the contract in the belief that it was sound public policy and by virtue of his authority as Minister of the Interior and as officer charged with the duty of inducing immigration.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Perhaps the minister has found the details of that expenditure of $130,000 ?

Mr. OLIVER. The amount directly expended under the authority of Mr. Smith, of the Winnipeg office, is $80,000. There are other amounts that make up this total of $130,000.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. There must be a lot of details.

Mr. OLIVER. I can give the details for the $80,000. It will be observed we have been considering one end of this service, the inducing of settlers, but this has to do with the location of settlers.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Does the explanation the minister is about to give cover the current year to the end of this month or the coming year ?

Mr. OLIVER. The particulars I have are for the year ending June 30th, 1904.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. But later on the minister will be able to give us the expenditure for the current year ?

Mr. OLIVER. I think so. The expenditure during the year ending June 30th, 1904, was $76,087, which is about equal to the estimate we have made for the coming year $80,000. But the expenditure for the current year was larger than usual because items were paid that had been carried over. That expenditure is covered by the supplementary vote for the current year, which has already passed the House. But expenditures in the ordinary way, have remained about the same. This expenditure was divided into these classes :

Miscellaneous, $333.
Interpreters—services and expenses, $2,566.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Cannot the hon. minister state the number of these ?

Mr. OLIVER. The officials whose salaries will come out of the $80,000 are those in the west who are engaged in the work of locating settlers.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I suppose their expenses also were paid ? Can the minister give the expenditure under that head ?

Mr. OLIVER. The expenses are paid out of the vote for contingencies and general expenditure, and it cannot well be given for the different individuals.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Each man would have to make a return to the department of his expenses, and I should think the figures would be there showing each man's account with all the details.

Mr. OLIVER. We have such details for the past years, but not for the coming year.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. But it is on past experience, I presume, that you have based your present estimate ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes. Travelling and living expenses of officials in the west for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, $8,401. There is another item, transportation and location of immigrants, $7,673. Some of these officials might possibly be included in some other items of expenditure in this service. The hon. member asked me for the salaries of the western officials for the coming year, but we are not able to give the item for contingencies for the coming year. I was giving the particulars of the expenses for contingencies last year, $80,000. Miscellaneous, $333 ; interpreters' services and expenses, $2,566; land guides, $11,274 ; sundry services, carpenters, clerical assistance, temporary agents, $12,202 ; delegates' expenses, $125; travelling and living expenses of officials in west, $8,401 ; uniforms, $2,099 ; advertising, $478 ; collection of exhibits, $8,309 ; equipment, bedding, utensils, &c., $5,013 ; provisions, $3,563 ; laundry, cleaning office, &c., $1,629 ; medical services, expenses, supplies, &c., $4,466 ; transportation and location of immigrants, $7,673 ; contingencies, Winnipeg agency, $4,371 ; contingencies outside service, agencies in west, $3,579 ; total, $76,087.

Mr. HERRON. How is it that some of the interpreters are getting $600 a year and other $1,200 ?

Mr. OLIVER. It depends somewhat on the length of service of the interpreter, and somewhat on the importance of the service.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Are the officers whose names the hon. gentleman read engaged the whole year round ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, on fixed salaries. The item for interpreters and land guides includes other people than the salaried officers whose names I read. The land guides are employed temporarily, by the day.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. There is another matter that seems strange, to which I wish some explanation. The Report of the Minister of Interior, page 166, gives the deportations at 270, the same report on page 169 gives the deportations at 85, in the same year ; while Mr. Scott, in his evidence before the committee the other day, gave the numbers at 157. To my question at a previous period of the session, the Prime Minister stated that there had been deported 359. There seems to be a great deal of confusion in the figures. I would like the minister to explain the discrepancies.

Mr. OLIVER. I am informed that the figures do not cover the same periods, nor do they relate to the same matters.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I will read the question and answer :

1. How many immigrants were deported from this country during the fiscal year 1904, and up to the 1st of February, 1905 ?
2. What were the nationalities ?
3. What was the cause of their being deported ?
4. How many were deported for disease, and for what disease ?
5. How many because they were liable to become paupers ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. 1. During the fiscal year, 1903-4, 359.

That is a straight answer to a straight question. Now I would like some explanation of these divergent figures. I think our public documents ought to be reliable, and a man could quote either of these three figures and say he was quoting official documents.

Mr. OLIVER. It is impossible to give an answer off-hand. I am informed that the figures do not cover the same periods.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. It covered the fiscal year 1903-4. That is what the annual report covers.

Mr. OLIVER. I understand the hon. member to say that the question was : What were the deportations for the fiscal year and up to the end of February, and that the answer was as to the number for the fiscal year.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I have the two answers here. I only read one of them, but I have the other as well :

From the 1st July, 1904, to the 1st February, 1905, 387 were deported.

I will send it over to my hon. friend.

Mr. OLIVER. What was the question which the hon. gentleman said was answered differently from this ?

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I have your report. If you will turn to page 166 you will find that in table 9 the number of persons deported is given as 270.

Mr. OLIVER. During what period ?

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I suppose during the fiscal year 1903-4, because that is the period covered by the report. Then, look at page 169. I might as well send over the evidence taken at the committee if you want it.

Mr. OLIVER. There is an evident discrepancy between the answer read by the premier and the statement in the blue-book. It is impossible at the moment to say where the error was, but we will take measures to verify the one statement or the other, and see which is correct.

Mr. HERRON. The hon. minister has given us a statement this evening about large expenditures in the way of interpreters and agents locating settlers. I cannot understand how that applies to one part of the country differently from another part. In the locality where I live the country is practically settled for a radius of twenty-five miles. I never saw one of the gentlemen that the hon. minister has spoken of locating settlers. I do not think there ever was one in that locality, and I do not see why this is necessary in one part of the country and not in another.

Mr. OLIVER. As the hon. member knows, the locality in which he lives is sufficiently attractive to bring settlers without any special advertisement or effort, but where the attractions are not so great it is necessary to employ the services of agents to bring the settler and the country together.

Mr. HERRON. I have reference to locating settlers after they come into the country. According to what I understand from the reports, these gentlemen are paid for locating settlers and for showing them around the country. They hire teams to take them out and see the land so as to get a location. I am positive that there never were any of these gentlemen in the locality where I live.

Mr. COCHRANE. I understood from one of the gentlemen who was before the committee that these locating gentlemen who are such an expensive luxury got $2 a day from the government in cash, and that if a man wanted one of them to show him the land so as to enable him to locate he would have to pay from $4 to $6 a day extra for a team. I should think these gentlemen who are paid by the government should not be receiving that much from a poor man who goes out there to locate his home, and that he would not be called upon to pay for a team to go around the country. What benefit are these agents if they have to be paid every day for their travelling expenses ? I should think that when the government paid them they would not be extorting money from people who employ them to assist them in locating land. Do they have to have tips, too ?

Mr. OLIVER. A team is necessary for the travelling of a person who is looking for land, and he gets the benefit of the transportation by means of the team as well as of the services of the land guide in finding the lines and looking them up in his location. It seems to me a very satisfactory method of dealing with the question. I have heard no complaints either as to hardship towards intending settlers or dissatisfaction on their part. Any one who has ever had occasion to go out to look for land in a new country will know that it is of the very greatest advantage to the new pioneer who does not understand the lines and stakes or the lay of the land to have an experienced and reliable man with him. They are certainly all willing, as far as I know, to pay for their services.

Mr. HERRON. There are two or three men in my locality who make a living by that sort of business. When a man is looking for land he goes and hires with these men and also hires his team. He drives them over the country, and the man who is looking for land pays him about $5 a day for the use of his team and his own services. That has been paid in every case by every settler who comes into the district where I live.

Mr. BLAIN. What amount was paid last year under the ten years' contract referred to a few moments ago ?

Mr. OLIVER. Under the arrangement during the past three years the total sum paid has been $87,000 I am informed roughly. That has been paid to the North Atlantic Trading Company, the organization with which the arrangement is made.

Mr. BLAIN. Is the amount on the increase ?

Mr. OLIVER. It was a little less last year and it is expected to be less next year; it is rather on the decrease.

Mr. MONK. Has the minister any information to give in regard to the North Atlantic Trading Company. Who are the parties interested? It owns no ships and is not a regular shipping company. At the time the Doukhobors came to this country I think $48,000 was paid to that same company. Does my hon. friend know anything about the company, who constitute it and what is its character generally ?

Mr. OLIVER. I believe that it is an organization of steamship companies and it is quite possible to place at the disposal of my hon. friend all the information in regard to it. There is no Canadian reason why it should not be entirely public, but if the company is to continue its operations there are reasons why the facts should not be published outside of Canada. If the members will be satisfied with an opportunity of examining the question for themselves individually, we will be very glad to place all information at their disposal and if they insist it will have to be made a public document and open to the world, but our policy would be, if it is intended to continue the operation of the company, that is should not at the present time be made public.

Mr. BLAIN. I think it is a strong reason why the items should be more in detail for immigration purposes as pointed out by the members for Lennox (Mr. Uriah Wilson) and Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). Here the government enters into a ten years' contract without any consultation with the House at all. If an item had been placed in the estimates for payment to steamship companies, or rather steamship agents, for inducing farmers to come to Canada, a fixed amount in a separate column, then the minister would be entitled to give the House some information as to how that money is expended, but here a contract has been entered into and the House has no opportunity of discussing that item. It seems to me to be a pretty general policy and a policy that I think ought to be looked into. I agree with the statement of the member for Lennox, that the details should be given in order that the House should be better informed on these items, as the money is being voted from time to time.

Mr. ALCORN. A good deal of the criticism which has come from this side of the House with regard to this item has been directed towards the expense, alleged to be unnecessary in many instances, of providing salaries and expenses for the numerous agents of the department; and towards the classes of immigrants being brought to this country. As bearing upon those two points and generally upon the subject of immigration of farm labour into Canada, I ask the attention of the minister for a moment in regard to a private immigration scheme which is in operation in my own county of Prince Edward, Ont., with very beneficial results. A Mr. R. J. Crothers, a farmer in my county, having had correspondence with certain British immigration agencies, I think in the first instance with one, of which Lord Aberdeen is the head, was joined by his neighbours, with a view of continuing the immigration of that class of immigrants. They formed an association amongst themselves—farmers who required farm help—and upon payment of a nominal fee each farmer becomes a member of that association. As he requires farm help he makes application to the secretary stating the class of help he requires, the wages he is prepared to pay, whether or not he will advance the passage money, and it is understood in all cases that he is hiring for one year. These particulars are sent to the old country with a statement as to whether a married man is required or not. Then the associations in the old country with whom Mr. Crothers has communication send out the man, guaranteeing that he is a decent man and of the best class. In this way, since this private scheme has been in operation in Prince Edward county and in Hastings, an adjoining county, some 350 men have been brought out, chieffy from the north of England and south of Scotland. I have met many of these men and I am quite certain they are of the very best class, especially adapted to agricultural labour because that was their calling before coming here, and they are especially selected in regard to qualification by the home associations. These men and their families amount to about 600 souls, that this private association has already brought out and placed with the farmers of those two counties. When the man is sent out he is met at the station by Mr. Crothers and immediately taken to the farm of the farmer whose employ he is to enter. He knows before he leaves the old country to whom he is going, by what route, he is met on his arrival and taken to the farmer and knows especialy exactly what he is to get, and in all cases he is engaged for at least a year. It appears to me that if the government would see fit to appoint such men as Mr. Crothers, men of substance with a reputation in their own locality and having the confidence of the people amongst whom they live, being farmers themselves and not adventurers, not people seeking a job, but people responsible to the farmers with whom these men are placed, immensely satisfactory results might be expected. If there is one difficulty facing the farmers of Ontario today it is the problem of farm labour, and I think this, one very excellent method by which that growing need may be very largely, very effectually and very satisfactorily supplied, if the government would accord to people in the position of Mr. Crothers, something in the nature of official recognition by appointing him as an agent, the proper sort of men would be obtained. Of course the success of the scheme would lie absolutely in the class of men who would act as agents and none but the best men should be employed. I bring this matter to the attention of the minister with the view of having it receive his best consideration, and that he may decide whether such a policy as that could not with good effect be adopted. Here is an instance in which to my personal knowledge it has worked excellently. I know of no other means by which that body of men could have been brought into that locality.

Mr. OLIVER. The suggestion made by the hon. member for Prince Edward is an instance of what I alluded to a little while ago, the necessity of amending the immigration policy from time to time to meet new demands and new conditions. The present immigration policy of the government was instituted for the sole purpose of filling up the Northwest, and I think it has had a fair measure of success. I do not think it was ever suggested that an effort should be made by the Dominion immigration authorities to deal with the problem of farm help in the province of Ontario, but it is generally recognized that there is now a greater requirement in that direction, and that the Dominion Immigration Department is now a proper means for attempting to meet that demand. The plan outlined strikes me as being very commendable, especially in view of the success which has been attained, and I assure the committee that I shall be very glad to consider the project laid down by the hon. member. I am looking for information, and while not promising a change of policy, yet if anything can be shown which will indicate an improvement, I shall be only too ready to accept the suggestion and act upon it.

Mr. ALCORN. I may say that the efforts of this association have been absolutely without help from any outside source. It has paid all it own expenses, and its success has been entirely due to its own efforts. I brought the matter to the attention of the ex-Minister of the Interior some time ago, and his answer was that he did not think it could be done because if it were done in one instance, he would have to appoint local agents in every county. I replied that that was exactly what we ought to do—perhaps not necessarily in every county, but in groups of counties. The man I mentioned is willing to take charge of Prince Edward and Hastings, and possibly one more county, provided he can give his time to the work. It seems to me that the class of men to whom I allude, responsible, substantial and respectable men, having the confidence of their community, if appointed agents, would be the very best means the government could adopt to bring out just the class of men of whom the farmers are in the most urgent need.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I regard this as a very important matter. The report, at page 168, gives a classification of the detained immigrants who came to this country: British immigrants detained, 1 in 1,325; Italians, 1 in 40; Russians and Russian Jews, 1 in 11·6; Syrians and allied races, 1 in 3·4. Why should any effort be used to bring to Canada a class of immigrants of whom 1 in every 3 or 4 is diseased. I think the hon. minister will agree with me that they should not be induced to come to our country at all. Last year the United States agents at Naples refused to take 10,000 people; the steamship agents would not sell tickets to them, because they were satisfied that they would not pass examination in the United States. Last year the United States practically refused admission to 8,000 people—4,800 paupers, 1,600 diseased, 1,500 under contract to labour, and 35 criminals. According to that statement 7,935 were rejected. Of these, 2,928 were rejected on our border. What became of these? As those deported are put at 359 I take for granted that the rest must be in this country. It does seem to me that a large percentage of those in this country will not make desirable settlers; and if the United States rejected them, I think we should. We certainly do not want paupers or criminals, or people liable to become paupers, or people suffering from contagious diseases. The United States last year practically refused to allow 11,000 people who came to their country to enter. I am strongly of opinion that it is to the best interest of this country to have a strict medical examination of intending emigrants in the old country before they are allowed to embark for this country. It is true, that will entail a little expense, but we could easily curtail the expense of payments to shipping agents sufficiently to cover it. If a steamship company brings an immigrant who is diseased into the United States, and the disease might have been detected by a medical examination before the immigrant embarked, the company is liable to a fine of $100, and in addition to pay all the expenses incurred by the immigrant while in the United States, and to take him back to the country from which he came. Great Britain is feeling perhaps more keenly than any other country the effects of this bad immigration; because many of the immigrants, no matter from what European country they come, go to Great Britain and are embarked at British ports; so that if they are rejected, they go back to Great Britain. There is a Bill now before the British parliament to prevent that. I am more anxious about the class of immigrants we get than about the money we spend on immigration, and I think the minister is exactly of the same opinion, and I have great hope that in the future he will exercise his good judgment in that direction.

Mr. OLIVER. It is hoped, by the increased stringency of the medical inspection at the ocean ports, to put the shipping companies dealing with Canada in the same position as those coming to the United States. When an immigrant is detained in Canada for medical reasons, the shipping company has to pay the expenses of the treatment, and, if the immigrant is deported, the expenses of the deportation. By the increased stringency of the regulations and their stricter enforcement, the burden on the companies will be increased, as it has been in the United States and they will be just as careful about bringing immigrants to Canada as they are about bringing them to the United States.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. The United States is contemplating putting a medical man in each port where the immigrants come from and having a rigid examination there.

Mr. OLIVER. Possibly we may do the same, but for the present the object which the hon. member has in view is the same as the government have in view. The means he suggests are being taken up to a certain point, and if found insufficient will be extended along the same lines.

Contingencies in Canada, British and foreign agencies and general immigration expenses, including salaries of extra clerks at head office, $610,000.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Before the committee Mr. Scott gave us a list of the publications, and they are also published in the annual report, he gave what they cost. The estimate ought to be divided, namely, so much for publication in the way of pamphlets, so much for advertising in newspapers, so much for maps, so much for salaries, so much for contingencies and so on. You ought at least to have ten items.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the hon. minister explain this item of $4,750 for the Winnipeg 'Free Press'?

Mr. OLIVER. That was to assist in the publication of the harvest number of the 'Free Press' last year. It was a special illustrated edition, giving the results of the harvest and a general write-up of the country. There could not be a more desirable or more effective advertisement.

Mr. BLAIN. How was it circulated and where?

Mr. OLIVER. Chiefly throughout the United States by means of government agents both salaried and commission.

Mr. BLAIN. Did some of the employees of the government prepare the articles?

Mr. OLIVER. No, they were written by the 'Free Press' staff.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. You published a book called Canada. How many did you publish and what did they cost? They were very beautifully done.

Mr. OLIVER. I understand the arrangement is to print 10,000. The price is not fixed, but it is to be arranged with the King's Printer.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. How will they be distributed?

Mr. OLIVER. No arrangement has yet been made. The publication, as my hon. friend has said, is a very handsome one. It is printed as a presentation book, and copies will be distributed where they will do the most good. No plan has yet been defined as the work has not yet been done, but any suggestion will be gladly received.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I understand the matter has been referred to the King's Printer to fix the price. Can the minister give the price asked?

Mr. OLIVER. There is no contract with regard to the printing. It is special work specially done, and the cost of printing is to be decided by the King's Printer.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. The publisher must have asked a price.

Mr. OLIVER. Possibly he intends doing so, but there is no contract, and he is subject to the decision of the King's Printer as to the actual value.

Mr. TAYLOR. What was the total amount spent last year on printing and advertising in connection with immigration?

Mr. URIAH WILSON. And will the minister give us at the same time the amount spent in each different country ?

Mr. OLIVER. I can give the details of the estimate we are asking the House to vote. They are as follows :

Advertising, copies of papers, pamphlets, &c., for Canada..	$ 10,000
Advertising, printing, pamphlets, &c., United States..	90,000
Advertising, printing, pamphlets, &c., Great Britain and Ireland..	75,000
Advertising, printing, pamphlets, &c., Iceland..	10,000
	185,000

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I asked for the amount spent in each country in which the printing was done.

Mr. OLIVER. I will bring that down later when we are in supplementaries.

Mr. TAYLOR. I see by the Auditor General's Report of the year before last that in that year we spent $39,628 in Canada for printing and advertising ; $112,717 in the United States for the same service, and $65,550 in England for the same service—a total of $217,895, or nearly a quarter of a million dollars. And if you go through these items, you will find them much the same as those for travelling expenses, tips and cigars for officials. For instance, 463 western newspapers were given advertisements for farm labour—little newspapers scattered throughout Manitoba and the Northwest, not one of which is seen in the country from which these labourers are to be drawn. The Winnipeg 'Nor'-Wester' was paid $4,691 for four columns and 1,000 copies of the weekly for seventeen months, and 23,000 copies of a special edition at five cents a copy. This, it seems to me, is simply throwing away money.

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. This was a special illustrated edition.

Mr. TAYLOR. It was the regular weekly edition. But my hon. friend (Mr. Derbyshire) would back it up just the same if the price was fifteen cents a copy. We are throwing away a quarter of a million dollars——

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. But we get the results—the people are coming, the very best class.

Mr. TAYLOR. Not as a result of the money spent on officials and advertising, but because that country has been opened up by railways, has yielded immense crops, and so has become known abroad.

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. Through these same papers.

Mr. TAYLOR. No ; but through the general press, which reports the facts and does not receive a cent for it. Why, T. O. Currie, the head heeler of the Patrons of Industry, who had to be bought up by this government, was sent to the United States and established in Wisconsin, and $4,017 was paid to him——

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. But see the immense number that came from there——

Mr. TAYLOR. My hon. friend (Mr. Derbyshire) can make a speech and boom this expenditure all he likes, but here is over $4,000 spent on Mr. Currie, and I defy Mr. Currie to show that he ever sent a dozen immigrants into this country. Then there is Mr. Grieve, another kicker, who used to be a member of this House—he was sent over there and $4,699 was spent on him.

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. But the people are coming in from the United States and driving their cattle with them.

Mr. TAYLOR. Not because of this expenditure, but because the Canadian Pacific Railway ran through that country and opened it up, and the country has advertised itself by its splendid crops. The government might recall every heeler it has out in the name of this immigration service, it might stop every dollar of this expenditure on printing and advertising, and still the people would come in. The government is simply throwing away the people's money. The idea of spending thousands of dollars on this 'Nor'-Wester,' with its special editions at five cents a copy. It is something like the special issue of my hon. friend's (Mr. Derbyshire's) paper at Brockville at five cents a copy.

Mr. DERBYSHIRE. But the 'Brockville' is an old established family journal. Every body reads it.

Mr. TAYLOR. But old as it is, it has to feed at the government crib. It is simply an outrage upon the people to take $217,000 of their money and distribute it amongst these papers in printing and advertising.

Mr. HENDERSON. This is certainly a very large amount to go through in one vote—$610,000. I notice that altogether we are voting for immigration for the coming year $767,200. Last year we voted in the main estimates $672,276. And, if I remember correctly, we afterwards had a vote of $300,000 in the supplementary estimates, making a total of $972,276 for immigration in the year 1904-5. The minister is now asking for $767,200 for the coming year, 1905-6. Does he contemplate adding to this by a supplementary estimate ? I think it would be as well if the minister would squarely tell the House and the country how much he intends to spend on immigration for the coming year, instead of dividing it up into two sums, one to be voted now and the other possibly a year from now, after a very considerable expenditure has been made without the authority of parliament.

Mr. OLIVER. It is expected that we shall have to ask the House this session for a supplementary vote of $30,000. As to a supplementary vote for the coming year to be asked next session, not being Providence itself, I cannot give any information on the subject. But I can assure the hon. member that there will be economy of administration so far as is consistent with efficiency. But, as I was compelled to say on a previous occasion, if the urgency of the case demands it, the Department of Immigration will have to take the responsibility, on behalf of the government, of meeting the requirements, and trusting to the judgment of the House afterwards to support us in doing so. The necessities of the immigration service must be met if immigration is to be maintained.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think I understand the hon. minister. He is asking for an appropriation of $767,200 to be expended on immigration during the coming fiscal year and says that a supplementary estimate may be brought down for $30,000, a total of about $800,000. He will ask the authority of parliament for the expenditure of this money. But he says that if the Immigration Department think fit, they are going to spend more. Now, I think the minister has been long enough in this House——

Mr. OLIVER. I did not say if the Immigration Department thinks fit; I said if circumstances compelled a larger expenditure, it would have to be made.

Mr. HENDERSON. 'If circumstances compel.' Who is to be the judge whether circumstances compel a further expenditure or not? Certainly this House is the only institution that should say what amounts should be expended. Beyond the amounts voted by this House, the minister has no right to spend one dollar, even if he thought a further expenditure might bring more immigrants into this country. This House is to be the judge, not the minister, and the sooner the minister comes to the conclusion that he is merely a servant of parliament the better it will be for this country. It is absolutely impossible for this House to control the expenditure of the country if a minister, without the assent of parliament, without parliament knowing anything of it, is going to spend money simply because he, the minister, thinks it may be desirable to do it. What right has he to think? He has no right whatever to think anything beyond the rights that parliament give him. No man making a statement like that can say for one moment that he is a constitutional administrator. I hope and trust that the minister, starting out now in his career as a minister of the Crown, will give some attention to the ordinary decencies, shall I say? —of the administration of a department, and that he will limit himself to the appropriation that parliament has authorized him to expend. Now, beyond the $610,000 and the $30,000 which he says he is going to ask for in a supplementary vote, the minister will have no power whatever to expend another dollar. Parliament has a right to control this matter. If parliament thinks $800,000 is sufficient to expend on immigration in one year, that is the limit of the minister's operations. I trust we will not have a repetition of what we have had this last year, of a minister coming down towards the end of the year and asking another supplementary vote of $300,000, after one-half of it, and possibly two-thirds of it has actually been expended without the consent of parliament. Now then I hope I have made myself clear on that point. May I ask the minister how much of this appropriation has he estimated to pay steamship companies for bringing immigrants into this country? I understand him to say that a contract exists to pay at the rate of $5 a head certain steamship companies for bringing immigrants to this country. I would like to know what amount of this $610,000 is estimated for that purpose.

Mr. OLIVER. It is estimated that $40,000 will be required to pay bonuses to agents of steamship companies for bringing immigrants from Great Britain, and $50,000 to agents of the North Atlantic Trading Company for immigrants brought from the continent of Europe.

Mr. HENDERSON. And this contract, as I understand it, has been made for ten years, and it is a contract that no minister of the Crown had any right to make.

Mr. OLIVER. Not to pay a bulk sum.

Mr. HENDERSON. Not to pay one dollar of it, because no minister has power to bind this parliament beyond twelve months, unless he comes down to parliament and gets an assent to it. The Minister of Trade and Commerce comes down annually and asks for steamship subsidies, but he does not ask for subsidy to be paid for five or ten years, or rather he does not enter into a contract himself for five years to pay a steamship company a large subsidy for carrying the mails or otherwise, and then come down and tell parliament that they have got to vote the money. Now this policy, if it can be called a policy, must at once be dropped; and so far as I am concerned, if the minister does not take the very first opportunity of cancelling this contract, and should I have the privilege of being a member of this House again when an estimate of this kind comes down, I shall move and urge in the strongest language that so much of the appropriation as is intended for that purpose be struck out of the estimate. Now I hope and trust that the minister is not going to override parliament and usurp all its functions. Leave a little for the members of parliament to do. My hon. friend at his right (Mr. Derbyshire) smiles. He is one of those men in the House who say, carried, for everything. You cannot propose a resolution but he will say, carried. It does not require any consideration from him as to whether a resolution is right or wrong so long as he gets it disposed of ; and he smiles at the idea of members of parliament controlling the expenditure of this country. Doubtless he never dreamed till he came here that he had anything to do with the expenditure of the country, he thought that was something the ministers had to attend to. But I tell him that is not what his constituents expect him to do. They sent him here to watch and criticise closely the expenditure of the country, and to take his share of the responsibility for all expenditures that are made. Now I find no fault with the minister with regard to this contract, because I admit it was not a contract of his making. But he must understand that he has a duty to perform with respect to this contract, he has the right to cancel it, and he must take the first opportunity of having this contract cancelled, no matter who is hurt, unless he comes down to parliament and gets that contract ratified before he makes any expenditure. Let the members of this House say whether that contract is to be validated or not, whether that money is to be expended. I say without hesitation that I do not think we are called upon, nor that it is in the interest of the country that we should hold out inducements of this kind to bring immigrants from European countries. There are certain European countries from which we are delighted to receive immigrants, but there are others from which we do not want to get immigrants at all.

I am afraid that the most desirable immigrants from the continent of Europe come to us in the smaller numbers. There is a larger immigration, I believe, from countries where the immigrants are less desirable. I have made my statement as plain as I possibly could make it and I am going to look for a better administration in the future of this department than we have had in the past. I am going to look for economy, I am going to look for a fair, honest administration, and I am going to hope that the department of immigration will not presume as much as they have done in the past, that they will not imagine that they are the masters of the country when they are simply doing the work that parliament pays them for doing. I say this in no disrepectful sense at all. I do not wish to reflect upon the department, but I say that members of parliament are entitled to some consideration and that they should not be ignored whilst their constituents throughout the country hold them responsible for the public expenditures. I shall not make that proposition this year but if we should be fortunate enough to meet in another year I will bring this whole matter up, and if in the future another request of this kind comes before us, and I shall be in the House, I will deem it my duty to test the House on that question.

Mr. HENDERSON.

Government of the Yukon Territory—salaries and expenses in connection with the administration of the territory, $175,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I see there is a decrease of $60,000. We will have to have an explanation of that.

Mr. OLIVER. There is a decrease of $60,000 in the sum required for the current year which is made up as follows :

Salaries	$ 85,040
Living allowances	51,000
Travelling expenses to and from Dawson	12,000
Printing and stationery	8,000
Fuel	6,000
Freight, express and cartage	5,000
Telegrams and telephone service	3,000
Commission of five per cent to the Northwest Mounted Police officers on collections, postage and miscellaneous expenses	4,960
Total	$175,000

Mr. TAYLOR. Who are living expenses allowed to now ? I understand that judges and several others were to be put on salary and that no living allowance was to be made.

Mr. OLIVER. This department has nothing to do with the judges at all. This is in regard to the administration of the mining branch and of the local government.

Mr. SPROULE. The system was changed last year considerably in the Yukon, was it not ? You have appointed a new governor in the Yukon. What changes are contemplated in the arrangements for carrying out the government there ?

Mr. OLIVER. I am not aware that there is any change contemplated in the general administration. There has been a reduction in the staff administering the mining branch. A number of officials were disposed of last fall and by that means a reduction of about $60,000 was made in the vote.

Mr. SPROULE. This reduction is on account of that ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, but I am not aware of any definite arrangement as to a change in regard to the administration. Of course the government has been administered by an acting commissioner for some time. Now, there will be a commissioner with full powers but as far as I know there is no change.

Mr. SPROULE. Who is the present commissioner ?

Mr. OLIVER. The officers dispensed with were arrived at by the process of closing up certain outside offices which it was thought are not as necessary now as they have been in former days. The creeks having been so fully located there was not nearly the same requirement for facilities for the transaction of such business.

Mr. SPROULE. Who is the gold commissioner now ?

Mr. SPROULE. E. C. Senkler, who has been the gold commissioner for seven or eight years.

Mr. SPROULE. What capacity is Mr. Congdon engaged in now ? I see by the papers that his position has been changed ?

Mr. OLIVER. He has the position of legal adviser to the local government.

Mr. SPROULE. Something like the position of Minister of Justice ?

Mr. OLIVER. Well, scarcely. He is not a member of the local government. He would be like the Minister of Justice if he were a member of the cabinet or of parliament.

Mr. SPROULE. They are expected to take his advice in all legal matters ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes, that is the idea.

Mr. SPROULE. There seems to be an opinion outside that so long as he retained that position the amendment which was anticipated from the change of governor was not likely to take place, that the hanging on of the parties who had control in the past in some official capacity would have a controlling influence and it is expected that there will not be that improvement that there might be hoped for from the change.

Mr. TAYLOR. They have to keep him living at the public crib some way or he would squeeze them.

Mr. SPROULE. Then the same system is to continue in the future as that which prevailed in the past ?

Mr. OLIVER. I do not know of any change of policy that is in view except that with the change of conditions there and the change of commissioner probably changes will take place just as a change took place last fall, loooking towards economy. I am not aware of any large or definite change of policy that is immediately in contemplation.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought the defeat the government sustained out there would likely result in radical changes in some lines.

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot say that will be done until the new commissioner takes office and undertakes his work there. It is the same commissioner you have had for some years the gold commissioner. I thought my hon friend was speaking of the commissioner or governor. He is I believe only a governor by courtesy, but there is a new governor of the Territory, a new representative of the government in the Yukon and we hope to have a satisfactory degree of efficiency in the administration of affairs there that will probably meet all requirements. The gold commissioner, Mr. Senkler, has held the position for a number of years through evil and good report, and I am not aware that there is at present any demand for a change of that official.

Mr. BLAIN. I suppose this office is not to be a training school for politicians. The governors seem to have become reform candidates in that constituency. The minister might state whether he proposes to have these governors while in office or after leaving office become reform candidates.

Mr. OLIVER. Judging from the success of the last one I would say not.

Mr. SPROULE. What was done about the Treadgold concession ?

Mr. OLIVER. That lease has been cancelled ; Mr. Treadgold relinquished the lease and has no connection with it whatever.

Mr. SPROULE. Was he paid any consideration for the money he had expended ?

Mr. OLIVER. He received no consideration from the government.

Mr. SPROULE. He did not put in a claim for it ?

Mr. OLIVER. He relinquished the claim as I understand he was unable to finance it and could not carry it on.

Grant to local Council, $125,000

Mr. SPROULE. How is that money expended ? Is it for roads, bridges and other local improvements ?

Mr. OLIVER. It is simply for carrying on the local government.

Mr. SPROULE. How was it expended last year ?

Mr. OLIVER. That sum goes into the control of the local council, an elective and appointed council and is added to by the revenues raised by the local imposts of the council and the double sum is then expended in travelling expenses of the council, maintenance and equipment of public schools, hospitals, &c., printing and stationery, fire department, Whitehorse, preventive service, grants to reading rooms, libraries, bonus to assist in quartz mining and the city of Dawson. The city was incorporated but gave up its charter and is now administered by the Yukon Council.

Mr. SPROULE. What expenditures have you for schools out there ?

Mr. OLIVER. $68,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What system of education have you in the Yukon ? I see different reports in the papers, but do not know whether they are correct.

Mr. OLIVER. I would ask the member for the Yukon to give the information.

Mr. THOMPSON. We have separate schools ; the Roman Catholics have a school of their own and there is also a public school both of which are supported by the government grant. The public school is composed of several departments and the teachers for that school are imported from all over the Dominion, but mostly from the west. The principal or superintendent of our schools is from the Territories. The Roman Catholic school is taught by the Sisters, but all the teachers there have to have a normal school certificate whether in the Roman Catholic school or in the public school. The separate school is in a separate building and is supported as I say from the public fund.

Mr. SPROULE. Under what law or authority is the system established out there ?

Mr. THOMPSON. It is by a local ordinance passed by the Yukon Council, I think, during the time that Mr. Ogilvie was commissioner.

Mr. SPROULE. Would the local council have the authority to pass an ordinance and adopt a system without getting some authority from a federal Act ? They must have done it under some Federal Act.

Mr. THOMPSON. I presume that the Act of the council could have been vetoed by the federal government ; but I presume that they have power themselves to pass the Act. I know that we make a grant yearly for the schools in the Yukon, and it is never questioned ; but I believe that any legislation we pass there has to be sanctioned by the federal government.

Construction of roads, bridle paths and other necessary works in connection with the Yoho park reserve and immediate vicinity, $12,000.

Mr. OLIVER. This is on the west side of the summit of the mountains in British Columbia. Field station on the Canadian Pacific Railway is the railway point, as Banff station is for the park on the east side of the mountains. The attractions at Yoho park are somewhat different from those at the Banff park. They offer greater opportunities for mountain climbing. The mountains are very much more rugged than those on the prairie side, and big game is more plentiful. Of late years Yoho park has attracted a proportionately larger number of tourists than Banff park, and it seems to have possibilities that are not found in the latter.

Cost of investigations and demarcations and other astronomical works of the Department of the Interior, including cost of instruments, $126,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. What is the cause of this $33,000 increase ?

Mr. OLIVER. It is largely made up of new matters, such as surveys of the 141st meridian, the boundary between Alaska and the Yukon, the eclipse expedition and the purchase of instruments for the observatory; also increased estimates for surveys on the 49th parallel and on the Alaska coast. These surveys are being made jointly with the United States. Our estimate is $82,000 for the Canadian share of the work, for which the United States has provided $200,000.

Mr. HERRON. Where is the survey to be made on the international boundary line ?

Mr. OLIVER. It is a renewal survey from Manitoba to the Rocky mountains. An arrangement for it was entered into last year.

Mr. HERRON. The old marks are plain enough.

Mr. OLIVER. The United States government is of opinion that such a survey is necessary. I presume that this will cover also the line in British Columbia.

Mr. SPROULE. Is the purchase of more instruments for the astronomical branch here or for the observation of the eclipse ?

Mr. OLIVER. It is for the observatory built on the Experimental Farm. The item for the purchase of instruments is $7,500. The chief item is for a meridian circuit, estimated to cost $5,000. The balance will provide for various optical and other instruments.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the diameter of the lens in the telescope there ?

Mr. OLIVER. I am not able to say offhand, but I am informed 15 inches.

Mr. SPROULE. It has always seemed to me that we did not show the highest wisdom in not getting a larger and better instrument when we were getting one at all.

Costs of litigation, $11,000.

Mr. OLIVER. This is the same as last year. It is to provide for miscellaneous items of litigation that will happen in the best regulated families.

Mr. TAYLOR. It was understood that when we got a Solicitor General there would be no money paid for outside lawyers. Was the whole amount spent last year ?

Mr. OLIVER. In 1901-2, $2,938 were spent ; in 1902-3, $7,336 ; in 1903-4, $11,000.

Keewatin—maintenance of lunatics, $2,000.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. Why does the Dominion government support these lunatics ?

Mr. OLIVER. Because Keewatin is not in the same position as a province, and the Dominion is responsible. These lunatics are accommodated in the asylum at Manitoba and the Dominion pays.

Maintenance of assay office, Vancouver, $11,000.

Mr. THOMPSON. What revenue does the government get ?

Mr. OLIVER. We realized from siftings and findings $1,091.02, and from special assays $7.50, making a total of $1,098.52. This made a net expenditure for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1904, of $10,582.75.

Mr. THOMPSON. How much gold did they melt ?

Mr. OLIVER. The following is the statement :

	Deposits.	Ounces.	Value.
1901-02	671	69,925	$1,153,014.50
1902-03	509	36,295	568,888.19
1903-04	389	24,516	385,152.00

During 1904-5 the business done from the 1st July to the 15th May last shows gold valued at $426,000 was assayed.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Bank of British North America in Dawson last year melted and paid for nearly $5,000,000 in gold. I point this out so that the Minister of the Interior will know that the office is costing him too much. They had one assayer and one melter. The miners came in and sold the gold, and the bank had to pay for it on the assay certificate of their own melter.

Engraving, lithographing and printing maps of the Dominion and the Northwest Territories, $21,500.

Mr. TAYLOR. Here is an increase of $5,600. Why is that ?

Mr. OLIVER. This is an expenditure entered upon a year or two ago for getting out a standard topographic map of the Dominion in sheets. The standard topographic map is intended to cover the southern portion of the Dominion, the west coast and part of the Yukon.

Mr. TAYLOR. Has there been a distribution of those already issued ?

Mr. OLIVER. The work is in progress. Some of the sheets have been completed.

Mr. SPROULE. I have seen one or two of these sheets, but I do not understand the system or design. A map is made of a section, but not divided according to ordinary requirements, as into provinces and so on. I cannot see what the usefulness of it is unless the maps are completed in some way, and I have not been able to get any information as to when the whole will be completed, or even when a province or any particular section will be ready.

Mr. OLIVER. As I understand, the plans were entered upon some time ago. The country is divided up into sections, and for each section one of these standard maps is made. By using these separate sheets the map of any district can be made up. A map of the whole country upon the scale chosen would be useless, as it would be too large to be displayed, but maps of portions of the country can be made up by using these sections.

Mr. SPROULE. But what I point out is that the work is not completed, nor are we told when it will be completed, or when any portion of it will be completed. And the maps of sections seem to be made without any relation to each other. There should be some design in the matter, and it should be known when the work will probably be completed either wholly or in certain parts.

Mr. OLIVER. There is a uniform design and the parts are being brought out in regard to such portions of the country that happen to be at the moment the most interesting. And, when complete, that part can be fitted in with the other parts whenever they are ready.

Mr. SPROULE. At what age of the world's history will it be completed ?

Mr. OLIVER. That will depend on the generosity of parliament in providing money.

Mr. SPROULE. Who is doing the work ?

Mr. OLIVER. The geographical staff of the Interior Department, and they are doing it gradually according to their capacity. To order the completion of such an immense map in a short time would involve a much larger expenditure, possibly, than parliament would feel inclined to authorize. Besides, it might not be possible to find the necessary number of men with the particular qualifications required.

Mr. TAYLOR. This seems to be simply to find employment for an unnecessarily large staff.

Mr. SPROULE. But the work should not be carried on in a merely aimless desultory fashion and with no idea when it is to be completed. This seems a merely childish arrangement from a business standpoint. For instance there is a map of part of the oil district—but only a part. When will the rest be completed ? I tried to get that information, and could not learn whether it would be completed next year, or ten years hence or ever. Yet we are asked to vote money for this service. It seems like frittering away money.

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot give the information as to when it is expected to finish the map, but I can give information which will partly answer the hon. gentleman's question. Up to a few years ago the mapping of the Dominon proceeded in a desultory fashion. For instance the peninsula of Ontario, the most densely populated part of the Dominion had not been mapped as it should have been. The section from Windsor to London has now been mapped and the sheet issued. The Hamilton sheet will be ready in a week or two and the Guelph sheet is more than half prepared. Another sheet will cover the portion of the peninsula west of the line from Oakville on Lake Ontario to Collingwood on Georgian bay. Another sheet includes nearly the whole of

New Brunswick. Another covers that portion of Ontario immediately east of the Manitoba boundary which will be traversed by the National Transcontinental Railway—this is practically finished. Another sheet covers that portion of Quebec from the Island of Orleans to Montreal, and Ontario and Quebec are well advanced.

Mr. TAYLOR. Where are they printed?

Mr. OLIVER. The drawings are made here, and the Toronto Lithographing Company prepare the copperplates and do the printing.

Mr. SPROULE. Have these been distributed to members?

Mr. OLIVER. I am not aware what arrangement has been made for distribution. But I may say that those that are published, if they have not been already distributed to members, will be distributed.

Some resolutions reported.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. SPROULE. What business will be taken up to-morrow?

Mr. FIELDING. It is understood that the Autonomy Bill will be taken up, the clause in relation to the boundaries of the constituencies.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.40 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, June 20, 1905.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

HALF-BREED SCRIP.

Mr. FOSTER. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the hon. the Minister of the Interior to be kind enough to bring down the instructions sent to Judge Myers, for the holding of an investigation into the half-breed scrip business.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The Order in Council containing the instructions will be brought down at once.

PRINTING BUREAU.

Mr. SPROULE. We have had a good deal of trouble this session with regard to getting out speeches at the Printing Bureau. Not only is there considerable delay, but in many cases it seems impossible to get the speeches printed at all. Nor are the orders given executed in their turn. Frequently, so we are informed those given later are given precedence over those given early, and on this side of the House the impression prevails that hon. members on the government side are given the advantage in this respect. A good while ago an order was sent to the Bureau to publish a speech of mine on the Autonomy Bill, accompanied by a request to state what it would cost. The reply came stating the cost and shortly after I understood the order was given. After waiting for a considerable time for the speech I had inquiry made again, but could not find out whether the order had been received or not. However, it was arranged that the speech should be published according to the prices fixed by the Bureau. After waiting some weeks they sent a speech which was not at all the one ordered, but a mere side speech, not directly on the question at all, and the publication of which would not cost one-quarter that of the other. At the time the order was sent the type was not distributed, but it has since been distributed, and to publish this speech now would require the whole thing to be set up again, and it probably could not be got out before the session is over. I think it is high time that the attention of parliament was drawn to these things. Somebody must be in fault; somebody must be responsible for this careless and unbusinesslike management.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. With whom did my hon. friend correspond?

Mr. SPROULE. With the chief whip's clerk directly to the King's Printer.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am very much surprised at this charge, because I know Mr. Dawson to be a most careful, painstaking officer.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not think it was the King's Printer himself, but some others under him. All I can say is that, after waiting for weeks, a speech was sent which was not at all the one ordered.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I know Mr. Dawson to be a very painstaking and careful officer, and if his attention be called to the matter he must have some good explanation. Something should be done to prevent a recurrence of such errors.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT IN THE NORTHWEST.

House in committee on Bill (No. 69) to establish and provide for the government of the province of Alberta.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

On section 12,—distribution of seats—

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I beg to move that the schedules which were laid on the table some time ago, and which are printed and to be found on page 7 of the last printed Bill, be now adopted. I do not know whether my hon. friends opposite want a discussion on the general arrangement of the schedule or to take them up one by one.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. The rumour is general that the government proposed to submit this to a commission of judges.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There are so many rumours to which my hon. friend, with his newspaper and otherwise, gives credit, that I take them all with a grain of salt, and that is the safest course to follow. My attention was called to this question by my hon. friend the leader of the opposition, who asked whether it would not be advisable to leave the preparation of the schedules to the judges. I expressed no opinion then, but thought that it would be far preferable that we should have them presented to the House. I think they will be found, on the whole, eminently satisfactory and that there will be no necessity to refer them to the judges. Some exception may be taken here and there, but if there be differences of opinion, I am confident they will not be such that they cannot be reconciled in this very chamber. The schedules have been gone into with very great care, and, as far as I can see, taking the geographical condition and population and the condition of things generally, they could not be much improved, if at all.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not think it would be better to take them up one by one. The House would like to know the basis upon which the schedules were arranged. It is very important probably one of the most important matters presented by the Bill. It provides for the distribution of constituencies which shall elect the first house of representatives for each of these provinces. Every one knows that the first house will have most important functions confided to it ; so that it is of the utmost importance that the basis of representation shall be fair and reasonable, and it would be very desirable to have it so arranged by the government that it would appeal to the fair mindedness and reasonable appreciation of both sides of the House. Now, the government must have come to this through a certain medium. They have made up their representative districts from data which I imagine have been very carefully compiled, and I would like to have a most thorough explanation of the basis upon which they have presumed to recommend the electoral districts which they have defined in this Bill, and representations of which they have drawn upon the map. This side of the House is willing to accept a fair arrangement, but it is not, even at this late period of the session, willing to accept any other arrangement than one which will commend itself to its good judgment after a thorough explanation. I imagine that my right hon. friend, or whatever member of the government has this matter in charge, will give us the fullest possible explanation as to the principles on which the representation is based and as to the way the government have proceeded in applying those principles, and their reasons for applying them in this way.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There were many things to be considered in the preparation of the schedule for the distribution of seats. First of all, we had to consider the existing conditions. There is a legislature to-day in the Territories which are to be covered by those two provinces, and there are thirty-five constituencies in the two provinces—twenty in Saskatchewan and fifteen in Alberta.

Mr. FOSTER. Perhaps the First Minister will confine himself now to the province of Alberta.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes. We give twenty-five constituencies to each of the two provinces. Therefore it was obvious from the first that we had to provide for ten more constituencies in Alberta. The next guiding principle was the population, the object being to equalize as much as possible the existing population among these twenty-five constituencies. However, it is not possible, in a new country like this, to consider the question of population alone. Geographical conditions also have to be considered. To illustrate, population is more thickly settled along the lines of railway than it is in the outlying districts to the north and perhaps also to the south. Therefore it was not possible to apply the same degree of geographical extension in all the constituencies. Some had to be large and some small. But the prime object was as far as possible to give equality of numbers in the different electoral districts.

Mr. FOSTER. How equality of numbers ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Taking the unit of population. My hon. friend who will speak after me will give more particulars than I can give on this point. I confine myself at present only to the more salient points. Then there are some far outlying districts which are new and in which the population may be below the unit of representation, but which must be represented. In these cases we have to chose between two things—either annexing them to other districts, or giving them separate representation. I admit at once that the suggestion that would at once occur to one's mind under some circumstances would be to join such districts to existing districts, but you have this difficulty to contend with, that the distances are so great in that country that you might make a district of such magnitude that it would be impossible for any human being to cover it within any reasonable time. It is to be expected, when an election takes place, that candidates should visit the different sections of their constituencies and put themselves into communication with their electors ; but if these sparsely settled districts in the north were joined to some of the existing districts, these constituencies would be so large that it would be physically impossible for any man to cover them, no matter what effort he applied to the task. Under such circumstances, it was necessary to form one or two districts in which the population is below the unit of representation, but which are far above the average in regard to territory. This applies chiefly to the district of Athabaska. All the other districts are, I believe, fairly well covered by the unit of representation. These are the salient principles which have actuated us—first of all, the existing condition of things. The present constituencies are the basis we have endeavoured to take. Some of them have been reproduced absolutely; others have been cut in two ; others have been differently arranged.

Mr. FOSTER. Will my right hon. friend inform me how many have been kept absolutely as they are now ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not know that I can at this moment. This information will come more regularly from those who are more familiar than I am with the country. That was the first consideration, at all events—the existing representation. The next was the population to be represented, and the next was the geographical distribution of the population. These are the three principles which we have had in mind, and I do not think it is possible to have any other guides.

Mr. FOSTER. What population was taken for each of these provinces, and what was the unit ? Was it made by dividing twenty-five into the population ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes. My hon. friend who follows me will give all this information.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. The right hon. gentleman has not told us what political considerations influenced him. He has mentioned three principles only. Then we are to gather that no political considerations entered into the matter ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The only political consideration is justice and fair-play.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. If the right hon. gentleman will realize that, I have no doubt this clause will get through in a very short time. But that is the point that is to be dealt with, and I hope that will be elucidated.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The hon. gentleman, if he comes with an open mind, will be satisfied before we get through.

Mr. FOSTER. Then I think we will have to ask somebody else. If the shortness of my right hon. friend's speech measures the amount of his information we will have to forgive him, but we must have the information. I suppose some other member of the government will be prepared to give us the information.

Mr. OLIVER. For the province of Alberta the census was taken in 1901, and therefore had become an unreliable basis of information, because there has since been a large increase of population. It was therefore thought better to take as a basis the actual vote polled on the 3rd of November last. There were practically 20,000 votes polled in the new province of Alberta, exclusive of the district of Athabaska, and that would give a unit of 800 votes to each constituency, as you take in or do not take in the part of the country in which no vote was taken, as it was not represented.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. What does the Minister of the Interior estimate the popuation of the new province to be now, roughly ?

Mr. OLIVER. The estimated population is 250,000, but there is no reliable data.

Mr. FOSTER. I cannot conceive that this is all the information we are to get. We might just as well move that this committee rise if we are not to be given more information than this. Do ministers think they are going to come down with an important thing like this, and that they are going into it without any explanation of the whole basis, and how they have arrived at the basis. The Prime Minister evidently knew nothing about it. Is the Minister of the Interior going to make the same confession ? I may tell him straight that he will not get anywhere with his Bill until he makes the most ample and full explanation of the basis, the way in which he has applied the principles, and showed to us that it is fair and reasonable.

Mr. OLIVER. The map has been before the House for four or five weeks, the schedule has been before the House for four or five weeks. I have stated to the House the basis upon which the representation was made, and if that is not satisfactory I assume it is for the hon. gentleman to say wherein it is not satisfactory. I would say to him that while there is no effort on the part of members from the west supporting the government in any way to trespass upon this House, they are here, however, in support of their rights and of their dignity as members, and do not altogether accept the arrogant manner in which hon. gentlemen opposite seek to bulldoze members from the west on this subject.

Mr. FOSTER. Now, my right hon. friend will never get anywhere by attempting to bring up an argument of bulldozing and the like of that. Have we or have we not the right to a thorough and complete explanation of the way this distribution has been arrived at ? If we have, the sooner the minister is taught to give up his small bit of politics, charging bulldozing and motives, the sooner he will become a more useful member of the cabinet than he bids fair to become by adopting this tone of debate. I have never, while I was a member of the government, attempted to bring a matter like this before parliament and do it in three or four words.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend is altogether too hasty in his conclusions. I am sorry to say that my portfolio has not come in containing my papers, as otherwise I would have been prepared to show the number of votes cast in each constituency at the last election, and how many were cast in the proposed constituencies. In the meantime I will endeavour to give some information to the committee. The hon. gentleman has asked me what are the constituencies which are to remain as they have been. Well, first of all the constituency of Medicine Hat is about the same as it was before. Medicine Hat was in the district of Saskatchewan, now the greater portion of it is in the district of Alberta. It is larger by a few miles. The constituency Cardston is just the same as it has been. Lethbridge is exactly the same as it was before. Macleod is divided into two, as it was one of the largest districts in the Northwest Territories. So we have now the constituencies of Macleod and Pincher. High River is the same as it was before, exactly the same. Banff is a little larger than it was. Calgary, the limits are now confined to the city, whereas before it comprised a portion of the country district. Then on the west of Calgary is Rosebud. The boundaries of Gleichen are not the same.

Mr. FOSTER. What was the former constituency out of which Gleichen is made ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think a new one is made out of West Calgary, by the name of Innisfail. Out of these two constituencies of East and West Calgary we have made three, Rosebud, Gleichen and the city of Calgary. I have explained to my hon. friend that Banff is a little extended. A part of West and East Calgary has been added to Banff so as to equalize the population. Innisfail remains almost the same. There is a small change which is made in Innisfail, a small portion of the constituency being added to Red Deer.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. What will be the length of Innisfail ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Innisfail will be the whole length of the province from the Rocky Mountains to the constituency of Medicine Hat. Red Deer, a new constituency, is made up of part of Lacombe and part of Innisfail. The present constituency of Lacombe is restricted and part of it goes into Ponoka.

Mr. FOSTER. That is formed from the old constituency of——

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Of Lacombe. The new constituency of Lacombe is restricted from its present territorial limits. The constituency of Ponoka is placed between Lacombe and Wetaskiwin and takes in part of Saskatchewan and Lacombe. Wetakiwin has also been restricted and part of it is given to Leduc which also forms part of Strathcona and part of which also was added to the new district of Vermilion.

Mr. FOSTER. Wetaskiwin is formed out of part of the old constituency of Wetaskiwin.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, Wetaskiwin is restricted between Ponoka on the south and Leduc on the north.

Mr. FOSTER. There was a territory——

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There was a territory called Saskatchewan. There is one yet.

Mr. FOSTER. The present Wetaskiwin is taken out of that ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, it is restricted from its former limits and part of the territory within its former limits is given to Lacombe, part to Ponoka and part to Leduc.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. It is also divided from north to south.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The new constituency of Leduc is formed of a part of Wetaskiwin and part of Strathcona. Vermilion is also a new constituency made up of part of Wetaskiwin, part of Strathcona, part of Victoria and part of the added territory which was formerly a part of the Saskatchewan district. Strathcona now is very much restricted. Strathcona, as my hon. friend knows, abuts upon the Saskatchewan river. There is a pretty large population there and the constituency is restricted.

Mr. FOSTER. Strathcona I did not get.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Strathcona is very much restricted from its former limits. It abuts upon the Saskatchewan river and it is now restricted between Sturgeon, Edmonton, Leduc and Vermilion. The city of Edmonton is made into an electoral district.

Mr. FOSTER. Where was it before ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. In the district of Edmonton. It was a very large district comprising the city of Edmonton, the large district known as Edmonton, part of Sturgeon and part of what is now called Stony Plain.

Mr. FOSTER. It takes in more than the city of Edmonton ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, it takes in the city of Edmonton alone, but as it was formerly it was a very large district. It was formed of the city of Edmonton, what is now Stony Plain and part of what is now Sturgeon and St. Albert. Stony Plain is a new constituency between the Rocky Mountains and the different constituencies which I have named, that is Red Deer, Lacombe, Ponoka, Wetaskiwin, Leduc and Strathcona. All that very large section of territory between the Rocky Mountains, the western limit of the province, and the different constituencies I have named, is now made into the constituency of Stony Plain. There is a new constituency of Sturgeon. It is confined between the city of Edmonton and the constituency of Saskatchewan, the district of Athabaska and St. Albert on the west. It comprised part of Edmonton and what is now Victoria. Saskatchewan is a new district comprised chiefly of part of Victoria and the new part of the Saskatchewan district which has been annexed to the province of Alberta. There is a new district called St. Albert. It was a constituency before, but it is not so large a constituency now. All these make a total of twenty-three constituencies.

Mr. FOSTER. Twenty-two, I have.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Twenty-three it must be. I will recapitulate—Medicine Hat, Cardston, Lethbridge, Macleod, Pincher, High River, Calgary City, Banff, Gleichen, Rosebud, Innisfail, Red River, Lacombe, Ponoka, Wetaskiwin, Leduc, Strathcona, Edmonton City, Stony Plain, Vermilion, Sturgeon, Saskatchewan, and St. Albert. That makes 23. These are the 23 constituencies in the old district of Alberta in which is included two constituencies which were formerly in Saskatchewan ; that is to say part of Vermilion, Saskatchewan, and Medicine Hat. With regard to Athabaska, we have given two constituencies to Athabaska, and the reason is this : There is now a small population, not a very large population in Athabaska. I would remind my hon. friend that there is a wide difference between the western part of Athabaska and the eastern part. The eastern part ; that is to say the part which is north of Saskatchewan has not yet been settled. There may be a few hunters and a few Indians, but there is no settled population there, whereas in the western part of Athabaska there are settlers now going up on the Peace river which is a good fertile district, in which population is increasing, in which there is agriculture, in which there are to-day two grist mills. Then you have the river Athabaska district which is the line of travel from the north to the south and in which there are several small establishments. It has been hinted, I think by my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) that these two districts were not entitled to two representatives. I grant at once that perhaps they are a little below the unit—but I invite the criticism of my hon. friend from Calgary as to the reasons why we gave two representatives. They are these. If we only gave one representative to the district of Athabaska which is comprised within the province of Alberta, it would be absolutely physically impossible for any man to cover that district within the time of the election—the distances are too great, the difficulties of communication are too serious, and therefore these people would have to remain practically unrepresented ; they could not have the advantage of seeing their member and their member could not see them, and for these reasons we have thought it would not only not be right, but it would not be just and fair that these people should not have the advantage of representation. I will give to my hon. friend the division of the different constituencies I have just named.

Mr. FOSTER. Is my right hon. friend going to give me the census population or the voting population ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Both. In the present constituency of Cardston the votes polled at the last election were 645 and the 1901 census population, 3,203.

Mr. FOSTER. My right hon. friend is now speaking of the census population ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Has any endeavour been made to get the present population ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Will that be given as well ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am not familiar with that, but it will be given by my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver). We have endeavoured to get at the present population by different data such as the number of post offices, entries of homesteads, and such data as is in our possession and which we thought would be more correct than guess work.

Mr. FOSTER. Are you giving the number of votes polled or the number of voters ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The number of votes polled.

Mr. FOSTER. Why do you give that instead of the number of names on the voters' lists ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I have the number of names on the voters' lists, but it is not in my possession at the present moment.

Mr. FOSTER. The only reason why you would take the votes at all is as an indication as to an estimate of the population. If you give the votes polled you could come to no conclusion as to the population, because various causes might prevent the registered voters polling their votes.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I propose to give both during the discussion.

Mr. FOSTER. I understood the Minister of the Interior to say that the number of voters on the lists was taken as a basis of the redistribution ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We took our information not only from one source but from several, first the census of 1901 ; next, the number of votes registered ; next, the number of votes polled ; next, the number of post offices ; next the number of entries for homesteads ; next, the number of school districts. At present I will give the number of votes polled and the census population of 1901.

Mr. FOSTER. That is all right, but I want an answer to this question. Was this distribution founded on the number of voters who are qualified to vote or the number who actually voted ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The relative number of votes cast to the total number of voters registered would be about the same in all the constituencies. If we have the number of votes polled we would know about the number of votes registered. However I will give all the information later on.

Present constituency.	Votes polled.	Census population, 1901.
Cardston	645	3,203
Lethbridge	826	2,838
Macleod	743	3,403
Pincher	1,108	1,959
Gleichen	785	2,101
Calgary (present city)	1,999	4,865
Rosebud	732	1,036
High River	1,021	2,472
Banff	720	3,634
Innisfail	828	3,379
Red Deer	843	2,009
Vermilion	763	1,795
Lacombe	881	2,565
Ponoka	764	2,775
Wetaskiwin	857	3,720
Leduc	697	3,450
Strathcona	956	4,248
Stony Plain	589	2,398
Edmonton	1,342	2,626
Saskatchewan	1,168	6,544
Sturgeon	782	3,272
St. Albert	754	3,005
Medicine Hat	1,159	3,144
Total	20,962

Mr. FOSTER. I notice that in the case of Rosebud the population was apparently only 300 more than the vote polled.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Rosebud is upon the line where immigration has gone since 1901. The population in 1901 was 1,036, and a great increase in population is shown since, in the two constituencies of the north, Peace river and Athabaska, there was no vote the last time. The districts were not organized. The population by the census of 1901 was, for the constituency of Peace River 1,724, and for the constituency of Athabaska, 1,676.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Are there special enumeration districts in Athabaska, or was the census given for the whole of the district? The Minister of the Interior may know. I was under the impression there was one census for the whole district of Athabaska.

Mr. OLIVER. I am not aware from the department here, but residing in Edmonton at the time I know that a census was taken by the census commissioner throughout the district of Athabaska and the north country. That is to say, it was not an estimate; it was an actual census taken by a visitation from the census commissioner to the people throughout the district. I think in the census of 1901, the district of Athabaska will appear in separate enumeration districts. There will be a number of districts corresponding with the polling subdivisions that were in existence at the date of the election in 1900.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. In the district of Athabaska, if my recollection is right, there is no special enumeration district. That is in the census of 1901 the numbers are given for the whole of the districts ; it is not divided up into polling subdivisions as in Alberta and the other provisional districts.

Mr. OLIVER. There certainly were no polling subdivisions in the country, but the people are in settlements here and there through the country.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Are they set out in the census?

Mr. OLIVER. I have every reason to believe so. I cannot imagine any other way of giving the census.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Where did they get this information from?

Mr. OLIVER. From the Census Department. I did not see the books myself, but my information is that this is a transcript from the records of the Census Department giving the population by localities.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Would the minister tell us how much of that population of Athabaska are Indian and how much white?

Mr. OLIVER. This population is given as white and half-breed, exclusive of the Indians.

Mr. P. TALBOT. I have here Magurn's Parliamentary Guide, which gives the population of Athabaska district in 1903 as 6,615. I suppose that includes Indians as well as the half-breeds and whites.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. That is what is given in the census of 1901 for the whole district.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. This is only for half-breeds and whites.

Mr. FOSTER. From what sources are these figures of population obtained, through the Census Department ? Was the department informed of the limits of these districts and asked to give the populations for these districts?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. And they made the calculation and gave the figures ?

Mr. OLIVER. A map was prepared showing the local constituencies and the Census Department was asked to take that map, compare it with their returns and give us the result, the number of people in each constituency.

Mr. FOSTER. And the minister has that statement from the Census Department?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the minister bring that down as one of the items?

Mr. OLIVER. I will bring it.

Mr. FOSTER. That is, I suppose where you would look for it, to make them responsible for the accuracy of it ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. The ministers between them have given us two bases upon which they make the distribution, but the first minister spoke of five or six others. We should like to have these others.

Mr. OLIVER. The definite division of the constituencies is based on the vote actually polled on the 3rd November, as we believe that was the closest and most recent date upon which we could get information we could rely upon. The information with regard to post offices, homestead entries and other matters of that kind was arrived at in order to bear, not upon the question of division of constituencies, but on the question as to whether the bulk of the population was in one end of the country or the other. That information therefore would not have any direct bearing on the propriety of the actual division made, but would be merely corroborative evidence to show whether the trend of population was in this direction or that.

Mr. HAGGART. What is the dividing line ?

Mr. OLIVER. The dividing line generally accepted is practically the Red Deer river and the question whether the population was heavier north of that river.

Mr. FOSTER. What did the homestead entries indicate ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I promised that I would give my hon. friend the number of votes registered. I got them from the clerk of the Crown of Chancery :

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

	No. of votes.

Mr. FOSTER. Why could not that name be changed ? It is a very bad name in the heart of an agricultural country.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There are two names should be changed. Saskatchewan is another. If my hon. friend can suggest a better name than Stony Plain, I have no objection to adopt it.

Sturgeon	1,088
St. Albert	965
Saskatchewan	1,382
Total,	29,950

Mr. PERLEY. I would like to understand the figures for Peace River and Athabaska. Do they include Indians ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

Mr. PERLEY. In 1901, by the census, there were only 2,637 half-breeds and whites and 262 unspecified there. Now we have the information that there is 3,400 of a population not including the half-breeds, in the half of Athabaska, whereas in the whole there were only 2,637 whites and half-breeds according to the last census.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I shall have this point looked into. The only figures for which I am responsible are the population, the registered votes, and the polled votes. These I got from the officials in charge of the different books.

Mr. FOSTER. You take the number of actual voters and you base your distribution on that. What do you multiply that by to get at the population ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That is not the way to look at it. Take the votes polled and the votes registered in each constituency, and the average is between 1,100 and 1,200.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the total number of registered votes, the total number of votes cast, and the total population since 1902?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The total number of registered votes is 29,950, the total number of polled votes 20,962, and the total population 69,441.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. And you estimate the population now at a quarter of a million?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The probable population on the 1st of July is estimated to be in the neighbourhood of 250,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Who estimates that?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The Interior Department.

Mr. FOSTER. How did the Interior Department get at that?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am sure I do not know, except from the records of the population and the immigration.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. By a divining rod.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think it will not be disputed by hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House coming from the Northwest Territories, that the estimate made by the Interior Department of the population on the 1st of July in the two provinces to be in the neighbourhood of 500,000, is fairly correct. When we introduced the Bill we mentioned this estimate, and I do not know that it has been challenged.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. That would be about 10,000 to each constituency.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Might I ask the Minister of the Interior if I understood him to make the statement that the constituencies were based on the number of the votes polled last November, not on the number of votes on the list? I would certainly consider that rather an unfair way to divide up that country.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Why?

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Take, for instance, the number of votes polled in North Oxford the other day. There were in the neighbourhood of 1,200 more polled on June 13 than in November last. If the constituencies in the Northwest are based on any such vote as that, I do not think it is reasonable.

Mr. OLIVER. If the hon. member will look over the list, he will find that the difference will not be material in the result. A proportionate number of votes were not polled in each constituency. Perhaps the hon. member is not aware that the voters' list in the Territories is not made up as it is here. It is made up by enumeration immediately before the election; and, as it is manhood suffrage, there is a good deal of latitude in the making up of the list, and it seems to us that if we want to give an unquestionable basis, the actual votes polled was the proper basis; because it might be said that one enumerator was a better figurer than another, and the fact that certain names were on the voters' list would be no evidence that the people were there, as it would be in the province of Ontario.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Why were the names placed on the list by the enumerator?

Mr. OLIVER. Different enumerators in different parts of the country would take a different view as to whether a man's name should be on the list or not. One man might be more strict in his interpretation of the law than another. It is a matter that is left entirely to the enumerator, and in the end enumeration makes no difference, because a voter may have his name put on the list at the last moment, and vote. So that the voters' list is not at all the same sure guide to actual population in the west that it is here in the east.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think the basis is as fair as it can be. Let me call the attention of my hon. friend from North Toronto to these facts. The population by the census of 1901 was 69,441, or let us say in round numbers 70,000. That would give, if you divide the population by 23 constituencies, a unit of a little over 3,000. The number of votes registered was 29,950, or let us say in round numbers 30,000. By dividing that number by 23, you would get a unit of about 1,300. The number of votes polled was 20,961, or say in round numbers 21,000. Dividing that by 23, you get a little over 900. So that on the whole I think that there is a fair correspondence between these figures, that no injustice has been done to anybody, and that the endeavour has been made to have as fair a division as was possible, especially if you consider the character of the population, which is sometimes in compact groups and sometimes very sparse.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to ask the Minister of the Interior a little more closely how they came to make the estimate of 250,000 population for each of these provinces. If it was a guess of course it would be no good at all; and if it was worth trying to find out, there must have been some methods adopted. What methods were adopted, and what did they show? On the face of it, it would seem as if they were optimistic as to their estimate of the population. November, 1904, was not long ago, and you took as a basis of the population the registered vote. That gives you, say, 30,000. That would make about eight to a family in order to bring up the population to 250,000. I doubt very much if that would be the average in the Northwest. There may be some large families there, but there are a great many bachelor establishments. It seems to me that that would tend to bring down the average rather than to raise it. I would not think that more than the general average of five to a family could be applied with fairness to the Northwest.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. More.

Mr. FOSTER. Just think about it for a moment. Go through the ranching district and through the agricultural country as well, and you will find many of what are called bachelor families—men without their wives, two brothers, a father and a son, or something of that kind. I do not know that you find, outside of the foreign population, any larger families amongst the stated families there than you find here; and I am quite sure that the foreign population, while it totes up pretty large, would not overcome that disparity. If you take five, and multiply it by the voters' list of November, that would give you 150,000, and there is a great difference between 150,000 and 250,000. I do not know that it makes any particular difference whether you estimate it at the one figure or at the other, if you base it on the voting population of last year. But it forms the basis for a disappointment hereafter, if you make an estimate of 250,000 people, and find that there are 100,000 or more less than that number. I would like to know the basis on which the government came to that conclusion.

Mr. OLIVER. I am not able to say definitely by what process of calculation the the number of 250,000 was arrived at, but I think it was something of this kind. I think the census shows approximately 170,000 in the old district of Alberta five years ago, and of course the new province of Alberta takes in a considerable strip of territory besides, for which an addition is made.

Mr. FOSTER. You have already given the population for the present Alberta as 69,441.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I may say that when the time came to draft the Bill it was necessary to make some estimate of the population, and I proceeded by taking as a basis for the whole Northwest Territories the census of 1901. I found that census gave a population of about 165,000. Then to that I added the number of settlers that came into the country during the period intervening from the time the census was taken until the 1st of February last, and I found that number to be 240,590, according to the returns of the Interior Department. The details will be found in Sessional Paper No. 97 of this session:

Years	No. of settlers.
April 1, 1901, to July 1,1901..	12,213
Fiscal year, 1901-02..	44,070
" 1902-03..	79,357
" 1903-04..	75,042
July 1, 1904, to February 1, 1905..	29,908
Total..	240,590

To which must be added the census population of 165,555, making a total estimated population on the 1st of February of 406,145, to which I added, supposing the Bill would come into effect on the 1st of July, an estimated increase from February to July 1st of 50,000, making a total population of 456,145 for the whole territory. These figures are taken from the Department of the Interior, and were certified to by the deputy minister.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not know what we could exactly understand by persons actually settled. They could get out homestead entries, but homestead entries and settlement are two different things.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I understand that. I obtained, for the purpose of the Bill, the area of lands patented for homesteads and a table showing the lands that remained and the number of settlers. It gave both the number of homestead entries and the number of settlers which were taken as actually having arrived and settled in the Northwest Territories, exclusive of Manitoba, within the area affected by our legislation. Then my own estimate of 50,000 was added on to that. I am informed by the gentleman who obtained these figures that they were given by Mr. Scott, who has charge of the administration of the immigration branch of the Interior Department.

Mr. OLIVER. The apparent discrepancy between the number of voters on the list and the estimated population may be accounted for in this way, that the names of foreign-born immigrants who have come in during the past three years, as having been read by the Minister of Justice, would not appear upon the voters' list, as they are not entitled to naturalization or to a place on the voters' list until they have been three years in the country. So for the last three years the immigration of foreign-born people is not accounted for in any degree by the number of voters on the list. I may say further that I have before me a statement of the number of homestead entries in the district of Alberta up to the 31st of March, 1905, amounting to 49,845. If it were taken for granted that each homestead represents a homesteader, and each homesteader a family, and each family the number of five, it would give a population of 250,000, not taking into account the cities.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. The government have no distribution of this 250,000 over these constituencies.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not think any information is needed so far as the representation is concerned. A large proportion of the population have voted for some time.

Mr. FOSTER. The post office data—if the minister will give us that.

Mr. OLIVER. We have not taken the information in regard to post offices for each constituency, we have taken it merely as between the two ends of the province, between the north and the south, divided on the line of township 38, as that seemed to be the question that was in contention. We find that there are 110 post offices south of that line and 118 north of that line, not including those in the district of Athabaska. There are 139 school districts south of that line and 269 north of it. Of local improvement districts, there are 22 in the Dominion electoral district of Edmonton, 50 in the Dominion electoral district of Strathcona, 25 in the Dominion electoral district of Calgary and 7 in the Dominion electoral district of Alberta.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not understand the pertinence of that local improvement section.

Mr. OLIVER. The local improvement district stands in the same position as a township municipality in Ontario.

Mr. FOSTER. How does that bear on this matter ?

Mr. OLIVER. It indicates the density of population ; that is, where there are local improvement districts there are people in considerable numbers who are paying taxes for the improvement of their roads. Where there are no local improvement districts the inference is that the people are more scattered or less numerous, and that is the reason why they are not formed into these districts.

Mr. FOSTER. On the south of the dividing line how many local improvement sections are there ? If we are going to have reference to that dividing line we want this information respecting it.

Mr. OLIVER. Forty south and 64 north.

Mr. FOSTER. You say there are 139 school districts south and 269 north ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. How many schools ?

Mr. OLIVER. The number of schools would correspond with the number of districts.

Mr. FOSTER. It might or it might not. If you have the schools let us have the school population.

Mr. OLIVER. We have not the school population.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not see that the number of school districts gives you much to go upon.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That is the very basis.

Mr. FOSTER. It is simply the absolute bare number of school districts.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I assume there is one school in each school district.

Mr. FOSTER. You might have a school district and no school.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I would not assume that there are school districts and no schools. People organize themselves into school districts because there are no schools. No districts are organized until there are people and the best evidence that there is population in a locality is that they have organized school districts.

Mr. PERLEY. There might be some schools with 5 children and some with 100. It is hardly fair to take the school districts alone. If we had the number of school children it would be something to go upon.

Mr. FOSTER. We should not only have the number of schools but the number attending the schools.

Mr. OLIVER. Hon. gentlemen are not at all bound to accept this statement as a basis of calculation. They asked for it and we gave it. The school question is not under our control here and we are not able at the moment to lay our hands on the information that hon. members think necessary. But we give them what we have.

Mr. FOSTER. The pertinence of that lies here that you are looking for something to base your action upon and it seems that you have based it simply upon the number of school districts. A fairer basis would be to get the number of schools and the number of children attending these schools in each district. Where will the number of school districts lead you unless you know whether there are 5, 10 or 50 children attending a certain school ? You do get something which is of the value if you find the number of children attending the schools in the different districts, but if this is all the information that the hon. minister has on the point, of course, we cannot cavil at him as far as making up his mind on such data is concerned ; only, the data might be broader—that is all.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Have we all the underlying principles now ?

Mr. FOSTER. We have the post office, but again I might point out that the post office does not indicate much. You might have a post office where there are ten farms and you might have a post office which would probably serve a large colony. Simply the number of post offices authorized is open to the same objection as the number of school districts and even more. I know for instance that where there is a very small colony of five, or six, or eight farmers living a long way from a town the object of the department is, if possible, to give them a post office, but the number of people that the post office accommodates is very small whilst a town of 2,000 or 3,000 population has its post office. If you choose to take simply the number of post offices the one that serves a couple of thousand people counts just as much as the one which serves five or ten people. It is quite impossible to get at the population served by the post office, but the revenue is a thing you can get at.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. These are only approximate sources of information. We have given to the House the direct information we have in the census, we have the absolute number of votes registered and we have the absolute number of votes polled. All these are accurate figures which cannot be disputed. In addition we have thought it advisable to look also for other information so as to get an idea of the actual population relatively between place and place, because, in this matter of distribution, the one principle that must guide us is that no injustice shall be done to one as compared with another. Well then, we have given the population and in confirmation of that we have given the number of post offices. That goes for what it is worth. It is not absolute; it is only approximate. The objections which my hon. friend has taken would be well founded if this was all the information we had to go upon. The same thing may be said in regard to the number of school districts.

Mr. FOSTER. I am just trying to get at what the government went upon in making up their minds, because this is the only way we can judge of their conclusions. Were there any other source of information beside the population, the votes actually polled, the registered votes, the homestead entries, the post offices, the school districts and the local improvement districts?

Mr. OLIVER. There are many others in confirmation but I think my hon. friend is in error in suggesting, as my right hon. friend the Prime Minister has already said, that reliance was placed on the number of post offices or local improvement districts or upon anything except the actual number of votes polled because this is the actual basis of distribution. All the rest is in confirmation.

Mr. FOSTER. Take the north line of township 38 as the division line of the Northwest council at the present day—what representation is there from the south and what from the north?

Mr. OLIVER. Including Medicine Hat, there are 9 from the south and 6 from the north.

Mr. FOSTER. Within this territory which is made up into 23 constituencies?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. The other two constituencies were not represented before and two representatives are proposed to be given to that district north—one to Peace river and the other to Athabaska?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. We have now heard what the government say are the underlying principles, and perhaps the Prime Minister will tell us if there was any political principle underlying the scheme. The right hon. gentleman referred to newspaper rumours, and I quote the following newspaper rumour from the Toronto 'Globe' of yesterday:

> Gossip is busy with the names of the men who will be officially identified with the new provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta from the date of their inception.

It goes on to say who are likely to be the lieutenant governors of the new provinces and then:

> It is a little more difficult to figure who will be called as premiers of the two new provinces. Mr. Rutherford, member of the Northwest assembly, is spoken of among others as premier of Alberta, while in the case of Saskatchewan the names of Mr. Bulyea, the present Commissioner of Public Works for the Territories, and Mr. Walter Scott, M.P., are frequently heard. Both these latter gentlemen would be equal in every way to the demands of the office.

Has this distribution of constituencies had any relation to the selection of the two premiers. Gossip is busy with it. Perhaps no political considerations entered into the calculation, but if they did we should have an explanation. In the old days when the constituencies were distributed, gentlemen of one political stripe sat down and carved up the country to suit themselves. Will the government tell us all the reasons that influenced them in laying out these constituencies.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend would not so lower the dignity of parliament as to intrude gossip as a basis of our deliberations. My hon. friend ought to be more solemn than that here. As to who shall be the premiers of the two new provinces; that is the business of the lieutenant governors and not of my hon. friend (Mr. W. F. Maclean) or of myself.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Mr. Chairman I shall propose an amendment that this matter be referred to the judges who now reside in the province of Alberta, but before discussing the merits of that amendment I desire to call the attention of the House to some of the figures which have been submitted by members of the government to-day. The information which we receive to-day, we on this side had asked for several months ago. When this Bill was introduced on the 21st of February it referred to 'the schedule,' thus showing the fixed determination of the government to divide the constituencies in this parliament. When the schedules were brought down a month ago, or two months after we asked for them, the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. W. J. Roche) asked for the number of voters in each local constituency and the number of votes polled, but notwithstanding that we have been waiting ever since for that information, it is only to-day that it is vouchsafed to the House. In its absence we have been obliged to make calculations for ourselves ; these calculations we have made very carefully and they are very far apart from the figures given to the House by the First Minister. When the schedules were introduced in this House the leader of the opposition stated that he had been advised by his friends from the west that the schedules were manifestly unfair, and it now devolves upon the hon. gentleman from Alberta (Mr. Herron) and upon myself, to assume the responsibility of having made this statement to the member for Carleton (Mr. R. L. Borden). I hope to be able to show, before I take my seat, that there are a considerable number of people in Southern and Central Alberta who have characterized this schedule as being unfair. The Prime Minister says that certain constituencies have been left entirely as they were while others have been divided, and in the case of the constituencies which have been left as they were the kernel of the whole thing is that they all lie in the southern part of that province ; not one constituency north of township 24 has been left as it was before, although they run up as high as township 60. That very fact should have been sufficient to put the First Minister on his guard, and to have caused him to suspect that there was some discrimination against the southern part of that country. The right hon. gentleman told us that Medicine Hat in the south had been left practically the same, but I desire to point out that at least 40 townships have been added to the old constituency of Medicine Hat. Nothwithstanding that there is an additional representation in that province of 10 members, the constituency of Medicine Hat has been enlarged by at least 40 townships of 6 miles square, indicating that instead of there being any development in that section of the country it probably has gone backwards. The right hon. gentleman told us that Cardston has been left untouched ; but is Cardston just the same to-day as it was when the Northwest assembly made it a constituency in 1902, or has there not been an influx of population into that constituency ? We are told that Lethbridge has been left just as it was ; has there been no development which required a change in Lethbridge? We are told that Macleod is divided in two, that High River is left practically the same, that Banff is added to, that Calgary is practically the same—the city of Calgary is given one representative, but it had two members in the old House, one for East Calgary and one for West Calgary. As I have said, I hope to be able to satisfy the Prime Minister that there are a considerable number of people in central and southern Alberta who are complaining bitterly of this division, and I can tell the right hon. gentleman further that those who complain include many of his own followers. I desire to refer now to an editorial which appeared in the Calgary 'Albertan,' a strong supporter of the First Minister and his administration, and a paper which has probably the largest circulation of any Liberal daily paper in the western province. I read this editorial because it sets out the objections very clearly. It says :

> The division is unfair, and cannot be defended. But the division, unjust as it is, is not as serious a matter as the method adopted by the government to arrive at the division. If the question of dividing the province had been left to an independent non-political body or even to a parliamentary committee composed of members of parliament who were personally uninterested in the division made, the people of the south would not have been aroused by the decision, even if we had only received eleven members south of the Red Deer line. We would have been disappointed, but would have felt that though beaten we had been beaten fairly and that though at a disadvantage we did not have a grievance. The present division is unfair, and the method adopted to decide upon the division is little short of iniquitous.
> Let us look at the division. The north boundary of the riding of Red Deer is some miles north of township 38 which is half-way between Edmonton and Calgary. At present we have below that line the territorial ridings of Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Cardston, Macleod, High River, Banff, East Calgary, West Calgary, Innisfail and a portion of Lacombe. That means eight and a part of another. To the north we have Edmonton, Strathcona, Wetaskiwin, Victoria, St. Albert and part of Lacombe.
> In other words the eight and a half ridings in the south are increased to twelve, and the five and a half in the north are increased to thirteen.
> Besides this the population has been increasing more rapidly in the south than in the north since the present territorial divisions were created.
> Let us take another example. In the Dominion House of Commons in the south district we have the ridings of Alberta, Calgary, a portion of West Assiniboia, and a very considerable portion of Strathcona. To the north we have Edmonton and the larger portion of Strathcona, and no more. Yet in the north we are to have thirteen ridings and in the south twelve ridings.
> The vote in the south district at the last election was very much larger than the vote in the north country, yet the greater representation is to be in the north.
> Let us take another injustice. The province of Alberta has a population of 250,000 people with a provincial representation of twenty-five, the unit of population being 10,000. Athabaska will have two representatives with a population of less than 5,000, and a white population of less than 1,000. That means that for legislative purposes one white man from Athabaska has as much to say as twenty white men in Calgary. To meet this argument the man of the north will speak of the coming of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and will dilate upon the glowing prospects of the future. But we are dealing with the present now. The Grand Trunk Pacific will not come before the second election in Alberta, and by that time there will be a second division of seats. Then the Athabaska country could get the representation that its population entitled it to, and in the meantime with one member, its interests would not suffer.

But much greater objection can be offered to the method adopted to arrive at the division. It means that the people of the south are not treated fairly, that being at a disadvantage they are punished for it, that the spirit of fair-play which has characterized the Liberal party which has in its hands the creation of these divisions, in this case is lacking. The people from the south have asked no favours in this struggle.

The article concludes by saying :

The result of the present policy will be deplorable. It means the lining up in battle array of north against the south. During the first few sessions of parliament, when the representatives should be intent upon the grave problems of legislation, they will be engaged in a local strife, and the effect of it will not be obliterated this generation.

That is from a paper supporting this administration, and to-day on the next page it will be found supporting the present educational policy of the government in so far as it affects the Northwest Territories. There are a number of papers which support the First Minister criticising this, from Lethbridge, Macleod, Medicine Hat and I venture to say that papers from every place in the southern and central part of that province irrespective of politics are criticising this decision. What was the method adopted in arriving at this division ? From the Liberal press in that country it would appear and I am speaking subject to correction, that the work of dividing that country into 25 local constituencies was handed over to the hon. gentleman who represents Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. gentleman who represents Strathcona (Mr. P. Talbot) both from the northern part of that province. Fair as these gentlemen may be, they are tied down by local prejudices, they are the advocates of that upper part of the country, and yet we find them in the month of February admittedly cutting up that country into 25 local constituencies and, three months later bringing the schedule down to the House and stamping it with the judicial decision of the Minister of the Interior. I have sufficient information to know that the schedule which was prepared in the month of February by the hon. member from Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) and by the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. P. Talbot), both from the north, is exactly the same schedule as has been annexed to clause 12 of this Bill with one or two alterations. The method, the idea is the same. The people of the south complain, and I think with some reason, that they have had no opportunity of stating their case, of being heard, and if I am stating what is not correct, if the member for Strathcona (Mr. Talbot) and the member for Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) did not prepare these schedules and submit them to the government, then of course they will correct me, I hope before I proceed any further.

Mr. FOSTER. You may proceed.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. The situation is this that we have two men from one portion of the province with a local feeling existing which has existed for some time past, to whom has been handed over the duty of dividing that province up into 25 local constituencies, and the very best evidence of the unfairness with which they discharge their duty has been pointed out by the First Minister by saying that every constituency that has been left the same is south of township 24. I may be wrong, but if they can point out a constituency north of that line, that has not been altered then they have the opportunity of doing so now, but looking at the map the only constituencies they have left unaltered are the constituencies in the southern part of this province according to this distribution carved out by two members from the northern part of the province in the month of February. Why is this division unfair ? I would ask the First Minister to look at the map. On May 1st, 1902, that country was divided up into local constituencies by the legislative assembly at Regina. As has been stated there were 15 constituencies in Alberta, and as the Minister of the Interior has stated, nine of these constituencies were south of township 38 and 6 north. There has never been any complaint as to the fairness of that division. The member for Strathcona (Mr. P. Talbot) sat in the local assembly at Regina, and I venture to state that he will not say he ever raised his voice objecting to that division at that time.

Mr. P. TALBOT. I was not there when the division was made or I would have objected to it.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. You have been there since, but you have not objected.

Mr. P. TALBOT. Why should I ? It would not be of any use.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. The hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake) sat in the House when the division was made, and I think he will bear me out when I say there has never been any objection made in reference to this division. Look at that division. In it you will find that there are only the portions of three ridings, or, to be correct, taking in Battleford and portions of four ridings going north of the city of Edmonton, a very small portion of the riding of Edmonton itself—the local riding which is shown in the blue line,—the riding of St.

Albert and part of the riding of Victoria. There is also a very small part of the riding of Battleford out of the east which also extends north. Now south of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, there were eight ridings: Medicine Hat, Cardston, Lethbridge, Macleod, High River, Banff, East Calgary and West Calgary. Grouped together you would not have three whole ridings north of the city of Edmonton, as divided by the Legislative Assembly in May 1902, while this distribution gives eight ridings north of Edmonton. As I pointed out before, there were eight ridings south of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, whereas, now there are in all nine. They proceeded upon the assumption that conditions have so changed in that country that it is necessary to add five ridings north of Edmonton and only one riding south of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The eight ridings north of Edmonton now are Athabaska, Peace River, St. Albert, Sturgeon, Saskatchewan, Edmonton, Stony Plain and Vermilion. Take another example. Township 38, which the Minister of the Interior submits as a fair line to divide that country in two—under that distribution which has never been complained of, there were, he says, six ridings north and the nine ridings south of township 38, and it is proposed by this schedule to give only eleven and a fraction south of that township, and thirteen and a fraction north. That is there have been added to the northern country seven and a fraction and to the southern country only two and a fraction. That is taking the line of township 38 and working out this scheme about 60 miles further north. It does not matter which line you take, it works out the same way, showing there must have been the grossest discrimination gainst the southern country or else the southern country has stood practically still since the 1st May, 1902. Now the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. Talbot) says he was not in the Legislative Assembly when that division was made. Perhaps we will be able to give another example of a division which was made when hon. members now in this House for that country had seats here. Let us look at the country as it is divided up for federal purposes. Let us look at the constituencies in this House. They are four in number: Edmonton, Strathcona, Calgary and Alberta. That division was made in this House, only a couple of years ago. When it was made the hon. gentlemen from the Territories at that time were all of the one shade of politics. They were all supporters of the right hon. the First Minister. Surely they would not have made a division which would have been unfair to any part of the country or have discriminated against the interests of the Liberal party. That division was made within the last two years, and I find that south of that same township 38 we have the constituency of Alberta—the whole of it—the whole of the constituency of Calgary, parts of the constituency of Strathcona and part of the constituency of West Assiniboia. That is those two whole constituencies and a considerable portion of two more only get eleven seats under this proposed redistribution, while the constituency of Edmonton and the balance of Strathcona, north of the township 38, get thirteen and a fraction. When that division was made, it is to be presumed that the hon. gentlemen then representing the Territories, and who have a seat in this House now, divided the country so that every class and interests would have equal representation. That is there is given to one and a part constituency in this House thirteen in the local house, with the addition of Athabaska and Peace River, and two entire federal ridings and a portion of two others are allowed only eleven. There is another evidence of gross discrimination against the southern country. They have turned the scheme of the Legislative Assembly of 1902 up side down and have done the same with the division made by this parliament two years ago. All that need be done to see that is to look at the map. Take another example. In the constituency of Strathcona there were 5,871 votes cast last November, and to this constituency is given seven and a fraction, or practically eight seats. In the constituency of Calgary, where 5,653 votes were cast, they only get five seats. Is that representation according to the vote? The only justification possible for that division would be to show that the influx of population has been greatly to the north. I submit they cannot snow that because every evidence shows that the influx of population has been to the south and the greater development has been south of township 38. There will be in the local house 25 seats. Out of 23 of these votes were cast last November, and we have a correct tally of those 23, leaving out Athabaska and Peace River where no votes were cast. If we take the first 11 seats south from the International boundary and the 11, leaving out the constituency of Red Deer which is in the middle, and taking the 11 next north, it will be found that in the 11 south there voted 10,833 and in the 11 north there only voted 9,356, making a difference of 1,477 discrimination against the south.

If we take the voters on the list, we find that in the 11 southern ridings there are 15,567, while in the 11 northern ridings, leaving out Red Deer, Athabaska and Peace river, there are 13,345, or a difference of 2,222 in the votes on the list. Now, I have worked out every constituency; I have taken the vote polled and the vote on the list, by polling sub-divisions; and if hon. gentlemen think that in any case the figures are not correct, all they have to do is to ask for those of a particular riding or challenge them, and either admit that we are right or show us where we are wrong, or intimate to us very quickly that no matter what we show they are prepared to go on and put this thing through roughshod over the wishes of the people of that country. Now, if we take the votes on the list, 2,222 more in the 11 southern ridings than in the 11 northern ridings, and multiply them by whatever figure you please—the figure usually taken is 5—you will observe that there is an additional population in the south of five times 2,222, which would be 11,110 more population in the south, which gets the smaller share of the representation. I want to point out another thing. The Minister of the Interior has stated that the surest guide is the vote that was polled, not the vote on the list. No doubt he considers that the surest guide, because it would result a little in his favour, and because, as I think I can point out, in the northern country in some polls a larger number of votes were cast than the number of names on the list, corroborating very strongly the suggestion that was made, that half-breeds came down from Athabaska and Saskatchewan to vote in the Edmonton riding. If any person examines the figures, he will find that in most of the northern ridings, where the foreign population predominates, a larger percentage of the vote was polled, showing the influence of the government official. If he looks at the ranching district, he will find that in some cases there was no vote polled at all, which is explained by the fact that an order issued by the Department of Agriculture last fall compelled all the ranchers south of township 34 to dip their cattle for the mange about the time of the election. The order expired on the 1st of November, but was extended for a week or ten days, and if they did not comply with the conditions their cattle would be sold or dipped and the cost charged to them. The result was that a very small vote was polled in the ranching country. The ranchers had to choose between saving their country and saving their cattle, and they preferred apparently to take the latter course. The argument that the influx of population has been to the north can, I think, be met by an examination of the homestead entries. The Minister of the Interior has intimated that township 38 is a fair line. Well, we find that north of township 38 there is the land district of Edmonton and half of the land district of Red Deer, while south of township 38 there is the other half of the Red Deer land district, the agency of Calgary, the agency at Lethbridge and a very small portion of the land agency of Battleford; but from the map issued on the 1st of January, 1905, showing the townships which are ready for settlement and those which are not, it will be seen that there is practically no settlement in that part, so that, in making up the calculation, I have left it out entirely. The thick settlement is in the Barr colony, which is east of the 104th meridian. I have the voters' list, which will demonstrate that. I find that in 1902-3 there were 6,614 homestead entries north of township 38, equalling 48 per cent; while south of township 38 there were 7,744 homestead entries, equalling 52 per cent. In 1904 there were 3,327 entries north of township 38, equalling 40 per cent, and 5,284 south of township 38, equalling 60 per cent. The total for the three years was 9,941, or 43 per cent north of township 38, and 13,028, or 56 per cent or 57 per cent, south of township 38. If you take an increase of four persons, or three, or two—it does not matter, it is no discrimination against the north to do so—and multiply that by the difference in the homestead entries, you will find a difference in favour of the south of 12,348 people in the last three years; and this is only so far as the rural population is concerned. Yet south of that township only two and a fraction seats are added, while north of it seven and a fraction are added, turning the local divisions upside down in the very teeth of the homestead entries; and this is called fair. Now, there are just two things that I want to point out while dealing with the homestead entries. The first is the point that was mentioned by the Minister of the Interior, that is, that the great majority of those people had no votes in the last election; so that when you are carving up the country on the basis of the voters' list, you are discriminating against the south. The south is suffering more thereby on his own argument. Another point I wish to emphasize is that we have a condition of affairs in the south which they have not in the north. We have two large irrigation schemes there. The Canadian Pacific Railway irrigation block near Calgary contains 3,000,000 acres, of which there have been sold, although it has only recently been put on the market, over 400,000 acres. There is half a million acres now on the market. Down in the riding of Lethbridge you have the Great Northwestern Irrigation Company, with about a million and a half acres, cut up into 40-acre holdings. None of the results from these two large irrigation blocks appear in these figures giving the homestead entries, which would make a contrast in favour of the south in the matter of population which would be startling. They talk about the northern country, about cutting up this constituency to satisfy the northern country; they will tell you that a population the grand prairie and Peace river districts will sustain. But that is only about 700,000 acres, hardly one-quarter of the Canadian Pacific Railway irrigation block at Calgary.

I want to point out that, as the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) has truly said, when you take homestead entries you do not always find actual settlers. And where would hon. gentlemen expect that the speculative homestead entries would be, in a country where two railways are being built, or down in a country which is settled? It is a matter of common knowledge that people will make homestead entries where they can get them, all along the proposed line of the Canadian Northern, and where the Grand Trunk Pacific is expected to pass. There are hon. gentlemen in this House, I know, who have made homestead entries in that country; a man can reside in the province of Ontario and have his entry made any time after the 1st of September, and it is not necessary that he should see the land at all until the beginning of the following June. Then time runs on and no steps are taken to cancel the entry unless some one complains to the homestead inspector. So you will find speculative homestead entries where it is supposed railways are going to pass. So much for homestead entries.

If we take the land sales by the government it will be found that of the even or odd-numbered sections sold to actual settlers in the last three years, 54 per cent are south of line 38 per cent and 46 north. That is another indication of the trend of settlement. If we follow up the inquiry to the land office, let us take the moneys that have been received in cash and scrip at the different land offices, always remembering that you have in the southern part of the country half of the agency of Red Deer. The figures for the year ending the 1st of June, 1904, are: Edmonton office, $38,711; Red Deer, $16,392; Calgary, $56,741; Lethbridge, $86,046. In other words, 22 per cent of that was north of 38 and 78 per cent south. Is not that a fair indication of where settlement is going in that country? Let us take another example. Look at the receipts for land, timber and registry office fees, and see if they do not tell the same story, namely, that the influx of population and the development are mostly in the south. The receipts from 1891 to 1901 from land, timber and registry office fees, were: North of 38, $253,795, or 34 per cent; south of 38, $538,516 or 66 per cent. For 1902-3, the receipts from the above sources were: North of 38, $174,417, or 34 per cent; south, $330,998, or 66 per cent. The receipts from the beginning to 1903, from all three sources were: North, $529,354, or 27 per cent; south, $1,429,182 or 73 per cent. Yet we are told that the division is fair as between the north and the south. If we adhered to the principle adopted by the legislative assembly, you would have fifteen seats south of 38 and ten north, or as nine to six—If you adhered to that principle, and as I have said, there has been no complaint made with regard to those constituencies in the local House.

Now, I have only been dealing with the rural population, but if we take the urban population from the very best sources of information we can get, we will find a greater influx of population, urban as well as rural, has been to the south. I have the figures here taken from Waghorn's Guide for the month of February for every village, hamlet and town. I have them figured out with respect to the local constituencies, but in order to save time I will not give them in detail. If any constituency is questioned, I am prepared to give the urban population in each one. The result is that south of the line there is a urban population of 42,550; whilst to the north there is only 21,300, a difference of 21,150 or 75 per cent south and 25 per cent north. I do not think that the strongest advocate of the northern country will contend that we have a larger urban population north than we have in the south. Now if you add these two together you find a total urban population of 63,750. As I understood the Minister of Justice some three or four weeks ago in this House, he said that he assumed the population of the province of Alberta was 173,000, instead of as now, 250,000. If he took the two together there were 500,000, and an estimate had been made up which will be found in the 'Hansard,' that Alberta showed a population of 173,000. Now that tallies with the percentage of urban population shown in the census of 1901, as near as any person can get at the figures. But that is one of the reasons why I would like to see this whole matter referred to an independent commission where full and complete inquiries could be made, so that every locality would have an opportunity of being represented and stating its case. Proceeding on the figures suggested by the Minister of Justice, of 173,000, that leaves a balance of about 105,000 exclusive of Indians, of a rural population. The question arises, in what part of the country is the bulk of that rural population? It is impossible to determine anything definite in regard to that. As I have pointed out, homestead entries are made up there in great numbers by people who have no idea of ever settling upon the land. But when we cannot get any accurate information, we have to do the next best thing we can. I have a map here which was prepared for the government two years ago, made up to the 1st of December, 1902.

On it are laid down in the proposed province of Alberta the townships that are largely settled and those that are sparsely settled. It would be interesting to have this map on the table of the House, and it is a marvel to me that an attempt is to be made to put this distribution through with such a lack of evidence before the House. This is a very important matter to the people of that western province. It may be considered a small or a light matter which can be put through down here by getting up and saying: We do not divide the constituencies up according to the vote but according to a combination of the vote and other sources of information furnished by our two friends from the north. The question should not be disposed of upon any such evidence as that. In the preparation of this map

I may say that information was obtained in regard to homestead entries, from the actual settlers, from the land offices, from the Hudson Bay Company, from the Manitoba government. In connection with the Manitoba and North Western Land Grant the sales of school lands, from the Canadian Pacific Railway, from the Calgary and Edmonton Railway Company and from the Manitoba and Northwestern Railway Company. It is as complete as anything of the kind could possibly be and on it are coloured in green the townships which are largely settled and in red those which are scattered. It has been brought up to date. When I say that I mean up to the first of the year, and I desire to point out to members of the House that I cannot see any object to be gained by pursuing this inquiry beyond the 1st January to any later date because an election will have to take place within six months from the date of the creation of these provinces and any foreigner coming into the country after the 1st of January would have no vote. Even a man coming from one of the older provinces would not be in these new provinces long enough to vote. On that map it will be found there are 325 thickly settled townships south of 38, and 239 sparsely settled. North of 38 there are 248 thickly settled and 159 sparsely settled townships. What I desire to point out to the House is that all the figures I have given show that the distribution made by the legislative assembly on the 1st May, 1902, was absolutely fair, that the proportion was 9 to 6 and that if there has been any change since that date the change has been in favour of the south as the influx of population there has, of course, been greater. I will take these thickly settled townships and the scattered townships and try to determine where the bulk of the rural population is. That is a much more definite way of arriving at it than by any local improvement districts, I submit. If you take it that there are eight times the number of people in a thickly settled township as in a sparsely settled township your population will work out so as to show a rural population to be 105,504. While a calculation of that kind may result in certain local inaccuracies if you take it over the whole province you will find that it will equalize or balance. The result of it is, adding rural and urban population together, that there are, 102,834 people south of 38 and 69,021 north of 38. My right hon. friend the First Minister seems inclined to doubt this calculation, but I desire to be perfectly fair and to make myself clear, and perhaps I will be able to give him some more calculations which bear out the proportions I have arrived at and which he cannot doubt because they are returns from the government. The results therefore of the vote cast last fall of homestead entries, receipts at the land offices and the increase in urban and rural population all go to show that the influx of population into that country has been to the south. All these figures prove that the distribution should be now 15 seats south to 10 north. I am going to trouble the House for a moment in giving some further figures to verify what I have said, and I submit that whatever investigation you may make will bring you to the same conclusion as that which I have arrived. But, before I proceed to discuss that let me take up the basis of calculation adopted by the government—the schools. They say that there are 130 more schools north. What does that prove? Twelve children can form a school. You will find schools more frequently in a country where the roads are bad. No person will contend for one minute that in the ridings to the north where they have a continuous agitation for better roads, they would have the same number of schools if their roads were of the class that they have in the riding of Calgary. It simply proves nothing. Then, take the post offices. I have not been able to get a post office established in my constituency. We had the same difficulty with the hon. minister of the Interior when he represented that riding. We would plead with him for a post office but we could not get it. I might mention one that we desire to have established at Carbon. We could not get it. I can point out post offices in that northern country where the revenue is $60 and where it costs the government $1,500 a year to provide for them. The people in the neighbourhood of Carbon petitioned the minister time after time and they could not get their post office. Eventually it was got by sending the wife of a member of parliament to the hon. Postmaster General and telling him that she had two sons north of the Rosebud river and she could not hear from them more than once every two weeks. The result was that the post office was granted. The only post office that has been established in the Calgary district has been one that was asked for by the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. Talbot). I have asked for several myself; one of them I might mention at Strathmore. But, the postmistress at a neighbouring post office who is running a store discouraged any attempt on the part of any person to take trade away from her store, and this was the sort of evidence that the government adopted in coming to a conclusion in regard to the request for a post office at Strathmore. I submit that places might be pointed out in the northern part of the country where there are post offices and where there is not as much need of post offices as there is at Strathmore. Therefore, I ask: What does the number of post offices prove? Then, they have told us that they have taken into consideration the local improvement districts. What does that prove? It is simply optional with the people whether they establish themselves into local improvement districts or not. Again, you have the question of roads. The people in the south for years have preferred to pay their taxes direct to the legislative assembly. It is in a ranching country. It differs largely from the north in that respect, and these taxes are paid into the legislative assembly in the hope of again being paid out for the inspection of stock and in other ways. The local improvement districts established in that country, I say, prove nothing.

Let us look at some further figures and we will discover where the bulk of population is and where the settlement is going. Take the receipts of the railway company north of township 38 and south of township 38 ; take them at Strathcona which would include Edmonton and you will see what part of the country has been increasing in the greatest ratio. At Strathcona, which includes all goods that go to Edmonton, the increase in 1904 over 1903 of goods received was 20 per cent, and of goods forwarded 10 per cent. On the McLeod branch which is in the southern part, the increase of 1904 over 1903, in goods received is 75 per cent, and in goods forwarded 30 per cent. These figures will be gone into in detail before this discussion is over. The tonnage receipts and the passenger receipts tell the same story ; south of township 38 the passenger and tonnage receipts per mile are double what they are north of township 38. This indicates where the people are and where the business is being done. When the Prime Minister was speaking about the number of post offices, I wonder if he and his friends considered the revenue from these post offices. For instance, for the year ending June, 1904, the post office revenue in Calgary was $28,638, and in Edmonton $13,104. Take similar statistics all along the line south of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and you will find the southern country has increased in far greater proportion than the north. I think it is a fair argument to say that you will usually find the most people around where you will find the most business being done, and on the 6th of February last, I moved for a return which was brought down showing the customs and inland revenue receipts at the different offices in the Territories for 10 years past. It will be necessary for me to mention only the figures for the last three or four years. At Edmonton, which includes Strathcona for this purpose, I find that the increase in customs receipts for 1903 over 1902 was about $25,000, while at Calgary the increase for the same period was over $50,000. At Medicine Hat which is in the south the increase for 1902 over 1901 in customs revenue was about $22,000. At Lethbridge which is also in the south the customs receipts were in 1901, $21,716.19 ; in 1902, $28,105.73 ; in 1903, $36,930.20. From all sources the customs figures for the south show in the last few years a larger proportionate increase than in the north. The same story is told by the Inland Revenue returns. The recapitulation at the end of this return to the House shows the following : Edmonton, (receipts) $103,034 ; Calgary, (receipts) $410,116 ; Lethbridge, (receipts) $42,162 ; McLeod, (receipts) $4,791. This shows in what part of the country the business is being done and where the people are going. Another fair argument is that in the part of the country where there are railways constructed you will usually find the greatest actual settlement. If we take township 38 as the dividing line again, it will be found that north of township 38 there are constructed only 150 miles of railway and part of that is but graded and not in operation. On the other hand south of township 38 there are 994 miles of railway in operation, so that I think it is a fair argument to say that you will find the actual settlement greatest in that part of any country where there is the largest railway mileage. You will not find a sufficient population to give 13 or 14 representatives in a country where you have less than 150 miles of railway in operation. Even if you give them the benefit of their expectations, and if you build the Canadian Northern from the longitude of Maple Creek to Edmonton for 200 miles and the Grand Trunk Pacific for 240 miles, and other proposed railways say 240 miles ; and add on the 150 miles already constructed, the total mileage in the south will be only 830 miles. A comparison of the number of chartered banks north and south of township 38 will tell the same story. All the statistics simply corroborate the statement I have made, and prove that the division of that country on the lines laid down by the legislative assembly would be absolutely fair. Let us take these 11 seats south and 11 seats north for a further comparison. I am leaving out the constituencies of Athabaska, Peace River, and Red Deer which is in the middle and which can be added to either the north or the south. But take the 11 seats south of township 38 and the 11 seats immediately north, and it will be found that there are required 1,415 names on the voters' lists for every constituency in the south, whereas in the north there are only required 1,114 names, showing a discrimination against the south of 201 voters for each constituency. I have stated to the Prime Minister that my figures do not agree with the figures he gave as to the number of votes cast and the number of voters names on the lists, and I will show where they vary. I have the figures worked out here according to the polling subdivisions, and I wish the right hon. gentleman would point to any constituency in which he thinks the vote is over estimated or under estimated. In Medicine Hat the number of votes polled was 1,168 and the number of names on the list 1,650.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We have 1,159 as having voted ; there is a difference of 9.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. You have added 10 townships to Medicine Hat.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Do you take the constituency of Medicine Hat as it was ?

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. No, as it is. I have marked the polling subdivisions in each polling constituency and gone through the matter very carefully, and I want the right hon. gentleman to point out wherein my figures are incorrect, or else to admit that they are right. I am prepared to hand over any constituency carved up into polling subdivisions with the vote cast.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. According to our figures which I got from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery in a statement of 'the number of votes registered and polled on the 23rd of November, 1904, in the following proposed constituencies,' I find.

Medicine Hat, number on voters' lists, 1,624, polled, 1,159.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. In a return to this House, three months ago, we got the voters' lists. We have been through them and have checked them as accurately as we could, and even picked out the names on each voters' list which would be in another polling subdivision, west or east of a certain range, and I propose to put my figures on 'Hansard' and I wish to be shown wherein any of them are wrong. This work was done by others besides myself who will follow me.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. What are my hon. friend's figures for Medicine Hat ?

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. On the list 1,650 and polled 1,168.

Mr. P. TALBOT. Do your figures include spoiled ballots ?

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Spoiled ballots would not come out of the list.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There is a difference of nine votes.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. The difference is probably accounted for by the fact that you have added to the old constituency of Medicine Hat 40 townships.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I had added nothing. I got these figures from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery and if they are wrong it is not my mistake.

Mr. OLIVER. It may be that in one case there have been counted only the votes that were counted and in the other case there may have been given the votes cast, including the spoiled ballots.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. There is a much larger discrepancy in the votes on the list from the figures given by the Prime Minister and the number as voted. If I am not trespassing on the patience of the House I shall call out the constituencies wherein we vary.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I have no objection.

At six o'clock the committee took recess.

After Recess.

The committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Before recess I was attempting to deal with the number of votes cast of the proposed local constituencies and the number of votes on the enumerators' lists. With regard to certain constituencies there is some difference between the figures submitted by the right hon. the First Minister and those submitted in the calculations made by hon. members on this side. I regret very much to have to trouble the House with these figures, but had this information been supplied us three weeks ago, as it should have been, I possibly then might have been able to point out where there was any error in the figures submitted by the First Minister or have been able to discover some discrepancy in our own calculations. But as a great deal of care was taken to find out the exact number of votes on the lists and the exact number polled, I propose to place upon 'Hansard' the result of these calculations :

No.	Constituencies.	Votes.	Names on the list.
1.	Medicine Hat	1,168	1,650
2.	Cardston	621	851
3.	Lethbridge	858	1,236
4.	Macleod	715	1,121
5.	Pincher	1,147	1,678
6.	Gleichen	774	1,260
7.	Calgary city	2,184	2,682
8.	Rosebud	749	1,189
9.	High River	971	1,528
10.	Banff	750	1,017
11.	Innisfail	896	1,325
12.	Red Deer	608	1,095
13.	Vermilion	632	1,068
14.	Lacombe	778	1,182
15.	Ponoka	794	1,068
16.	Wetaskiwin	834	1,416
17.	Leduc	876	1,068
18.	Strathcona	872	1,291
19.	Stony Plain	584	748
20.	Edmonton	1,340	1,689

I might say with regard to Edmonton that one of the polling divisions was missing in the list brought down as will be found in some of the other constituencies, but in that case we took a percentage of the total vote cast and allowed that much for the polling subdivision.

21.	Saskatchewan	1,237	1,757
22.	Sturgeon	717	1,098
23.	St. Albert	740	960

A calculation, I believe, will be made which will practically show that the figures as given us by the First Minister will result in proving our contention, namely, that undue representation has been given to the north and that the south has been discriminated against. As I pointed out, on the vote enumerated on the list, if you take the eleven seats from the international boundary, it will be found, totalling them up and comparing them with the eleven seats north after Red Deer, excepting Peace river and Athabaska, that there are over 200 more names on the lists for each of the eleven constituencies in the south than for the eleven in the north. As has been already pointed out, a large number of settlers who have gone in there the last three years have had no votes, the influx of settlement has been south, and the southern country suffers in comparison with the north by reason of the settlers not being there long enough to qualify and have their names put on the lists. As I have pointed out, in the calculation of homestead entries, the lands sold by the Great Northwestern Irrigation Company would not appear, and it is quite apparent to anybody who considers the matter at all that the influx of population has been largely to the south. I need only point out one instance in connection with that southern irrigation block, and that is that in the one town of Raymond—the hon. member for Alberta will bear me out in this—there was a population last fall of 2,500 people and yet less than 200 names appear on the enumerator's list. People who went in there a couple of years ago were not in the country a sufficient length of time to enable them to be placed upon the list.

Now, let us make some comparisons between the constituencies in the south and those in the north. Take, for example, the city of Calgary, with 2,184 votes polled, and compare it with the city of Edmonton, with 1,340 votes polled, or 2,682 names on the list in Calgary as compared with only 1,689 in Edmonton. The same representation is given to both. Compare the constituency of Pincher Creek, with 1,678 names on the list, with its coal mines at Frank, Blairmore and Coleman, and a ranching and farming country in the constituency, with Stony Plain, where there are only 748 names on the list. If the right hon. the First Minister will do me the honour of looking at the map published by the Department of the Interior on the 1st of January, 1905, he will find that in this proposed constituency of Stony Plain practically no townships are shown as surveyed and ready for permanent settlement. On this map I find this explanation 'Townships coloured buff are the townships for which township plans have been printed.' It will be apparent to any person who looks at that map that in this proposed constituency of Stony Plain there are practically no townships for which plans have been printed up to the 1st of January, 1905, which, I think, is very good evidence as to where the permanent settlement is. I venture to state that there is not in the constituency of Stony Plain a village or hamlet of 300 people. There is nothing there that requires special representation. If you look at the map you will observe how the constituencies of the south are permitted to run right across to the boundary of British Columbia; and when we get up to township 38, we find that an additional constituency, Stony Plain, is added in this unsurveyed country, in which there is practically no permanent settlement. There is no reason why that constituency could not be represented, as it always has been, by parties living farther east or by one of the members for Edmonton. In that connection, I may say that I observe in the local papers that two, if not three, citizens of Edmonton have already been nominated for three constituencies in the north—Messrs. Cross and Boyle and another—showing that that section of the country could be properly looked after by a member residing at or near Edmonton. Take the constituency of High River in the south, with 1,605 names on the list, and with the thriving villages of High River, Okotoks, Nanton and Cayley, and with two banks chartered at High River and at Okotoks, and compare that with St. Albert, with only 950 names on the list. What I have said with regard to the land not being surveyed in the constituency of Stony Plain applies equally to the constituency of St. Albert, showing that there is a lack of permanent settlement there. Contrast Medicine Hat, in the south, with 1,640 names on the list, with Vermilion, with only 1,092 names on the list. In comparing these two constituencies I desire to point out that the old consituency of Medicine Hat has been enlarged by the addition of at least forty townships, for no reason presumably but that it is in the south; because no person could contend that there has not been a considerable development and influx of population into that constituency since the distribution of seats by the local assembly in May, 1902. I have already pointed out that no additional representation is given in the constituencies of Cardston, Lethbridge or Medicine Hat, all of which happen to be in the southern part of the province; that no parallel case has been pointed out in the north; that then additional representation has been given all along the line, constituencies being cut in two when there has been absolutely no necessity for it. In giving the calculations which I read a few moments ago, I omitted the constituencies of Athabaska and Peace River, for no other reason than that there was no vote cast there in the last election. There has never been an election there, and it was utterly impossible for anybody to make a calculation which would be at all authentic or definite. For that reason I prefer to take for the calculation those constituencies in which votes were cast last November, and in which voters' lists have been prepared. But if we include in the calculation the two northern constituencies, the contrast in favour of the south will be even more apparent. If we assume that each of the constituencies of Athabaska and Peace River has a voting strength of 300, or 600 in all—and that, I think, is liberal, in view of the figures that have been submitted to this House, or that were annexed to the proposed schedule when it was sent to the hon. gentleman who leads this side of the House—the figures give Peace River a population of 800 and Athabaska 1,436, totalling 2,236. Divide that by five to ascertain the number of votes, or by any other figure you choose to select, and it will give a voting population for the two constituencies of 447. So, when I am allowing 300 for each constituency, I think I am within the mark when I say that it is a fair and liberal allowance. Now, take these constituencies in the south as having each a voting population of 300 and compare them with those in the north. Take all the constituencies of the north, and include Red Deer in the south. It matters not for the calculation in which part you place the constituency of Red Deer, as it is practically at township 38, the dividing line in the calculation which I have submitted. If we take the theoretical number of 100 as entitling each constituency to a seat, the figures will be as follows with regard to the number of names appearing on the list: Medicine Hat, 135; Cardston, 72; Lethbridge, 100; Macleod, 92; Pincher Creek, 137; Gleichen, 103; Calgary city, 219; Rosebud, 97; High River, 125; Banff, 83; Innisfail, 108; Red Deer, 89; Vermilion, 87; Lacombe, 96; Ponoka, 87; Wetaskiwin, 115; Leduc, 87; Strathcona, 105; Stony Plain, 61; Edmonton city, 138; Saskatchewan, 144; Sturgeon, 89; St. Albert, 78; Peace River, 35; Athabaska, 35. That is, out of the 12 southern constituencies 7 go over the 100 mark, and 10 out of the 13 north are under that figure. I work it out on that basis as catching the eye quicker than by setting out the figures as I have done with the 11 seats north and south.

Now let us deal with these two northern constituencies as they are, and perhaps answer some of the arguments advanced by the right hon. the Prime Minister this afternoon. It would be interesting to have the area of each of these constituencies so as to be able to determine if it would be at all possible to get a vote in that vast territory; it would be interesting to know how far apart settlers are in the respective constituencies, wherever there are any. As I will point out in a few minutes, the mail service of once a month costs $1,500 to this country for a single post office, which serves the whole of that district of two constituencies, producing a revenue of $66 a year. Could we form any estimate of what it would cost to have an election in either of these constituencies, or would it be possible to hold an election? There are no lines of communication. And what is it going to cost in this new province to elect these two members in each of these constituencies? I venture the statement that for each one of them an election will cost the new province ten times as much as in any of the constituencies to the south. If any one was being hurt by not having two representatives, I would not for a moment urge that they should be deprived of two representatives. But let us look at the population according to the census of 1901. It has been repeated over and over again in this House, that in the whole district of Athabaska there were only 241 white people. Now, we are not taking in the whole of Athabaska, we take in about 50 per cent; I am willing to say that it includes 70 per cent of the population. But I may point out now that for some reason or other, if I am correctly informed, representation is not given to Athabaska in the new province of Saskatchewan. That statement has been made to me, and I believe it is correct. Now if we take 70 per cent of that white population of 241 it would give us 160 people, and if we look at the census of 1901 we will find that in the whole province of Alberta there are two and a third times the number of people now, on the estimate of the Minister of Justice when he put it at 173,000, that there was when the census was taken in 1901. No man will argue in this House that there has been a greater influx of population, proportionately, into Athabaska than there has been into the other portions of Alberta. For a number of years back there has been no difficulty in getting settlement along the lines of railway construction; therefore I think we are justified in assuming that the influx into Athabaska has been no greater proportionately, than into the rest of the province of Alberta. Therefore if I multiply 160 by two and one-third it will give a population of 400. Where have the additional half-breeds, if any, come from into Athabaska? If they have gone in there from the northern part of Alberta, the northern part of Alberta would be depleted thereby. But has there been into that country the last two or three years any influx of settlement, either of white people or of half-breeds? Therefore, I say that the time is not ripe yet to give that district two representatives.

For the purpose of finding out just what population was there, as nearly as I could get at it, some days ago I placed a question on the order paper which, with the answer, will be found on page 7271 of 'Hansard':

1. When was the post office established at Lesser Slave Lake?

The one post office in the whole of Athabaska according to the Post Office Guide.

2. From what railway point are mails forwarded, what is the distance covered, and how often do these mails arrive ?

3. What other post offices have been established in the Territory of Athabaska, and when were they first opened ?

4. How many letters were received and despatched from Lesser Slave Lake during the last four years ?

5. What was the revenue collected and the expense incurred in connection with the Lesser Slave Lake post office ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (for the Postmaster General) :

1. 1st June, 1903.

2. The railway point from which mails are forwarded to this office is Edmonton, which is 318 miles from Lesser Slave Lake. The immediate point of departure for the mails for Lesser Slave Lake is Athabaska Landing, which is 105 miles from the railway at Edmonton. The service is once per month.

3. Lesser Slave Lake has been in operation for some time, and three other offices were authorized in February last, viz.: (a) Spirit river, (b) Peace river crossing, (c) Vermilion. In addition to the service thus in operation for the service of Lesser Slave Lake, there are two trips made annually to the far north, beginning at Lac la Biche, which gets its mails from Edmonton via Fort Saskatchewan, Whitford and Saddle lake, and ending at Fort Resolution, passing through the following settlements in Athabaska, viz.: Fort McMurray, Fort Chipewyan, Smith Landing and Fort Smith.

The Royal Northwest Mounted Police are also taken advantage of in their patrol trips. They carry a mail bag with them and undertake the conveyance and delivery at the first regular post office they come to of all matter handed to them.

4. As no record is kept of matter mailed at an office, this information cannot be given.

5. The revenue of Lesser Slave Lake is as follows : 1903, $20 ; 1904, $66.13. The salary of the postmaster is $30 a year.

The expense in connection with the service is as follows : For the monthly trip from Athabaska Landing to the post office at Lesser Slave Lake and to Peace river crossing, which is not a post office, $125 a trip or $1,500 a year is paid. For the service to the far north, which extends into the Mackenzie district, $525 a trip or $1,050 a year is paid.

Therefore, in 1904, there was only one post office for that whole district including that portion of Athabaska which is not taken into the province of Alberta ; and the revenue derived from that post office, in that district to which they propose to give two representatives, is $66 a year, and the mail delivery is made once a month. How do you propose to get the members down to the seat of government to meet the assembly ? If any argument was needed to satisfy the First Minister, if he desires to be fair in this matter, that that country is not ripe for representation at present, it is the fact that in the whole of the district of Athabaska there was only one post office in 1904, and the revenue derived therefrom was $66. Yet to that district you are giving two representatives—greater representation than you give to the constituencies in the south such as for example Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Pincher, Cardston, or High River. If any argument were needed to satisfy him that the time is not ripe or that their interests cannot be represented in the local house by the member for North Alberta just as well as they can be looked after in this House by the member for Edmonton it is afforded by this return which was brought down and which is to be found at page 7271 of 'Hansard.' There is no navigation in that country and no means of communication as far as the returns show. A question in regard to that matter was asked in this House a week or ten days ago. The answer is that as far as the government know they have no evience of it. I want to point out that some few years ago the Hon. James Ross, who now occupies a seat in the Senate, reported on the advisability of giving Athabaska a representative in the then local house, and he made the statement—and I do not think he will deny it—that the distances were so great, that the means of communication were so few and that settlement was so sparse that it would be absolutely impossible for any man to attempt to adequately represent that constituency, and if you divide that territory into two the argument of Mr. Ross equally applies. When I am charged across the floor of this House by the hon. Minister of the Interior with saying that the people there are not fit for representation I reply that he is placing a meaning in my words that I do not intend them to convey. I do not pretend to say that they are not fit for representation, but I do say that the time has not come and that they will be done no more injustice by giving them representation in the local house with the northern part of Alberta than you are doing to the district of Nipissing, the northern parts of the province of Ontario and the outlying parts of the constituencies in the province of Quebec. If the argument applies that they should have representation because there is no person representing them in the local house, and that, as the hon. Minister of the Interior says, they are contributing man for man their share towards the revenue of the country, then, why not give representation in this House to Athabaska, Mackenzie, Ungava, Franklin or Keewatin ? The men living in these districts are contributing equally their share man for man towards the revenue of the country. Why should an exception be made in this case? What is it that requires special representation up there ? Is it an agricultural country especially ? The returns of grain or of wheat shipped in or out of Edmonton might be interesting. They have two flour mills up there, but it is simply because they tell us of the great distance they are from where that commodity can be obtained. What particular trade is there which requires representation ? Is there any shipping, lumbering or fishing ? There is simply the fur trading industry, and experience shows that it desires to be left severely alone. There is no class or interest that requires special representation in that country any more than there is in the outlying portions of the constituencies in Ontario and Quebec to-day.

Now, in regard to the proposed schedule there are some inaccuracies in the description, but I do not propose to detain the committee by dealing with them here. In describing constituencies that are bounded by rivers neither one side or the other of the river is mentioned. If there are islands in between there is going to be confusion created. In running along road allowances why not specify the centre of the road so as to avoid confusion ? There are a number of other points of a similar character that I desire to bring to the attention of the committee, but they can be mentioned when each constituency comes to be considered specifically. But, one objection I do desire to point out now is that the boundary between the constituencies of Innisfail and Rosebud cuts the thriving town of Olds in two. Part of the town is in one constituency and part in the other. It is not necessary for me to take up the time of the committee in pointing out the many inconveniences that will result on account of it. The right hon. leader of the government has seen fit to doubt the figures that I have given in regard to where the population is in that country. No explanation has been given why the plan adopted by the legislative assembly giving 9 seats to the south of township 38 and 6 to the north has been practically turned upside down. Any person can observe that by simply looking at the map. That is beyond contradiction. The same equally applies to the representation which was given in this House three years ago when four constituencies were created out of the old district of Alberta. No criticism can be made of the argument, that, having regard to the contention which was made then, this proposed schedule discriminates against the southern country. The return showing the amount of money received for customs in the different parts of the country, bearing on the point as to where the business and population are, is a government return and cannot be contradicted. The same applies to the return as to the inland revenue receipts which was brought down. Does the right hon. leader of the government desire to contradict the figures as to railway construction when I say that only 150 miles have been built north of 38 and that 999 miles have been built south of 38, which is some indication as to where the permanent settlement is and will be. I can get the figures in detail if any person desires to criticise them. Am I right in the figures which I gave of the railway receipts showing where the bulk of the receipts is taken in from both passengers and tonnage of freight in the different parts of the country and showing that the proportion of increase has been greater to the south than to the north ? All these, I submit, have a bearing on the question as to where the population is and where the business is being done. None of these things are criticised, but as soon as I mention urban or rural population the right hon. First Minister finds fault with the figures. Figures have been handed to me showing that the population, less Indians, might be assumed to be 165,000. I do not pretend that the following figures are direct evidence of the location of settlement, but I do say that they corroborate the figures that I gave to the First Minister showing where the urban and rural population of that country was. If we assume that the population is 165,000, and work it out on the homestead entries for the last three years it would give a population of 75,500 north, and 89,000 south. Based on the customs receipts from 1894 to 1904, the population would be 52,000 north and 113,000 south. Based on the customs receipts given in the government return from 1903 to 1904 the population would be 54,000 north and 111,000 south. Based on the Inland Revenue receipts from 1903 to 1904 the population would be 40,000 north and 125,000 south. Based on the land, timber, and registration fees the population would be 53,000 north and 112,000 south. If you take the average on all these calculations the population would be 52,000 north and 113,000 south. If any gentlemen opposite wishes to work out the figures on the basis of the receipts from the different government offices he will find I think that I have been liberal in my estimation of the population in the north. The object of parliamentary representation as I take it is to give each class or interest in the community a voice in the government of the state. Looking up the precedents in this and other countries, I find that the aims of representation for electoral divisions are summarized in the instructions given to the commissioners in New South Wales a couple of years ago. These commissioners were instructed to divide up that country into local constituencies having regard to (1) the existing boundaries. (2) the community or diversity of interest ; (3) the lines of communication ; (4) the physical features ; (5) the quota to be ascertained by dividing the number of seats into the number of names upon the list. In the Transvaal which is being divided now by commission, I find that a margin of 10 per cent is allowed. As to the schedule proposed by the government in this case, let me ask what evidence has the government or what evidence have the members of this House before them to enable them to decide as to that division in an intelligent manner having regard to the above consideration which should be given effect to ? To-day for the first time we were told what was the total vote polled in these respective divisions. Are we expected to discuss that right away. To-day we are told for the first time the number of names enrolled upon the list. Are we expected to grapple with that subject and decide upon it without deliberate consideration. I submit to the First Minister that this is a most important matter to the people of the west and that the government should not go it blindly, or ask their supporters to go it blindly upon the evidence which they have submitted to-day. What the people of that country desire is that they should have an opportunity of being heard in the matter; an opportunity of representing their case to some body which will listen and give attention to it. I am not suggesting that they would not receive attention here, but I submit that the evidence is not at hand which would enable the members of this House to decide what a fair electoral division of that country would be. The people of the west desire to have some independent tribunal before which these local constituencies could place their claims, such for instance that of the town of Olds which has forwarded a resolution protesting that they are placed right upon the line of two constituencies. I would urge on the First Minister that this is not a party matter. Local politics in that country have not hitherto been fought out on party lines, and probably they will not be in the next elections. This is a matter in which the government can afford to be fair and to give to the respective portions of that country an opportunity of stating their case. If any person doubts my assertion that this is not a party question, let him read the Liberal press in southern and central Alberta, and he will soon be assured that just as strong objections come from the Liberals as from the Conservatives. The Prime Minister has expressed a desire to be fair, and he has now a grand opportunity of showing to the people of that country that his professions are something more than empty sound. If the Prime Minister does not choose to accept the figures I have given him; if he prefers to listen to the men who happen to have his ear; then it is not unfair that I should ask on behalf of, I believe, of 95 per cent of the people of southern and central Alberta, irrespective of politics, that they should have an opportunity of presenting their case to an independent tribunal. That is what they desire, and they will abide by the result knowing they must abide by it. If my suggestion is adopted by the government, it will have the effect of alleviating that sectional fight between the north and the south which this division is going to continue for many years to come. I shall therefore move Mr. Chairman that the distribution be transferred to a judicial committee. But, before I read the amendment I might point out that in it I have specified that the personnel of the committee shall be the justices of the Supreme Court in the province of Alberta. I may say that one of these gentlemen has been Assistant Attorney General in the legislative assembly for a number of years and has a thorough knowledge of existing conditions in that country. Another of the Supreme Court judges, the Chief Justice, when the distribution of 1902 was made, was Commissioner of Public Works at Regina, and the third judge has resided in that country since, I think, the year 1881, and has lived in both the northern and southern portions. I am not making this motion with any desire of obtaining any party advantage. I might remark two out of the three Supreme Court judges have been recently appointed by this government; not that I am suggesting that their political views lean that way now, for I suppose they are expected to abandon politics when they go upon the bench. However, two out of these three judges have been recently appointed by this government and the third was appointed under the Conservative administration. I think my proposition is manifestly fair, and it will I am sure satisfy the First Minister that no attempt is being made to take any advantage in a political sense. I therefore beg to move seconded by Mr. Herron :—

That section 12 be struck out and that the following be substituted therefor :

12. Until the said legislature otherwise provides the legislative assembly shall be composed of 25 members, to be elected to represent the electoral divisions hereinafter mentioned.

(a) Such division shall be made by a board of commissioners consisting of at least three persons resident in the said province and being judges of the Supreme Court of the Northwest Territories who shall for that purpose be appointed by letters patent under the great seal immediately after the coming into force of this Act, and who shall divide the said province into twenty-five electoral divisions.

(b) The letters patent appointing the commissioners shall require the commissioners, in making the divisions, to have due regard to the distribution of population, the public convenience, the existing local divisions and such other considerations as appear to them best calculated to do substantial justice.

(c) In case of the death or resignation or refusal of any one or more of such commissioners to act, a successor or successors shall in like manner be appointed, and in the event of there being no resident judge or judges available any judge or judges of the said Supreme Court may be appointed such successor or successors.

(d) Within a time to be limited by the said letters patent the commissioners shall complete such divisions and report the same to the Lieutenant Governor of the said province, setting forth in such report the boundaries of the electoral divisions to which such report refers and the ranges, townships and sections comprised therein, and shall assign an appropriate designation to each electoral division. Upon receipt by the Lieutenant Governor of the said province of the report of the commissioners completing the divisions aforesaid, the respective territories described as constituting the respective electoral divisions into which the said province shall have been divided as aforesaid shall become and be the electoral divisions of the said province as if the same had been so set apart and established as such by this Act.

(e) The commissioners shall also within the said time limited forward a duplicate of their said report to the Secretary of State.

(f) The said report and the said duplicate thereof shall be signed by the commissioners, or in case of a disagreement, by a majority of them, and the report of the majority of the commissioners shall be the report of the commissioners.

(g) The said report shall be published in the 'Canada Gazette,' and in the official gazette of the said province forthwith after the receipt thereof.

(h) The commissioners may frame rules and orders for regulating the conduct of their proceedings and generally for carrying into effect the provisions thereof.

(i) The letters patent appointing said commissioners shall confer upon them the power of summoning witnesses before them and of requiring such witnesses to give evidence on oath, orally or in writing, or on solemn affirmation (if they are persons entitled to affirm in civil matters) and to produce such documents and things as the commissioners may deem requisite to the full investigation of the matters into which they are appointed to inquire, and the commissioners shall have the same power and authority to enforce the attendance of witnesses and to compel them to give evidence as is vested in the Supreme Court of the Northwest Territories in civil cases.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. member has certainly given us a deluge of statement in support of his plea that the part of the new province of Alberta south of township 39 should have fifteen representatives in the first legislature of the province as against ten in the northern part, but I think he has given very little argument in support of his contention that this question should be referred to a commission of judges. It struck me that the whole argument we have heard in regard to this matter from the other side of the House was very strongly tinged with partisanship, that from beginning to end the argument was on partisanship, and I merely suggest that if the commission of judges were appointed and if it should be so unfortunate as to agree with the schedule placed before the House I am afraid that the commissioners would not be free from accusations of partisanship from my hon. friends on the other side. They could hardly be expected to agree with his very remarkable contention that the situation demands fifteen representatives in the south as against ten in the north. I think that admission on his part is a sufficient evidence as to his desire for a careful judicial decision and a sufficient answer to his assertion of non-partisanship.

In regard to his complaint that my hon. friend from Strathcona (Mr. P. Talbot) and myself have had more or less to do with the preparation of this map and schedule, I do not know that either my hon. friend or myself have any apologies to offer for having given such advice as we may have been able to give to the government in regard to this matter which certainly concerns the constituencies which we represent. I may say, further, that in the early part of the discussion on these Autonomy Bills there was an offer made, I think I am safe to say, on the part of my hon. friend and myself, to meet our co-members from the southern part of the province to discuss this amicably, and arrive at a joint conclusion, but we only needed to meet once to find out that our conclusions were as wide apart as the statements which my hon. friend has made in the House and the positions of my hon. friend from Strathcona and myself. In fact I am given to understand they absolutely refused to join in the discussion. However, be that as it may, we have no apologies to offer for having taken it upon ourselves in representing our constituencies——

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Does the hon. gentleman pretend to say that I myself or Mr. Herron was ever asked to discuss electoral divisions with him?

Mr. OLIVER. To the best of my belief, yes.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. By whom?

Mr. OLIVER. By myself.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Did you ever ask me to discuss electoral divisions with you?

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot be sure, but I think so.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I do not think you can. I wish to emphatically deny that I was ever asked by you or any person else on the other side of the House to discuss electoral divisions.

Mr. LAKE. I may say as far as I am personally concerned also that I was never approached on that subject by any member on the other side of the House with a suggestion to discuss this question.

Mr. HERRON. I might say that the minister did ask me something in connection with the division of my district on one occasion. That was late in the evening and the following morning the Bill was laid before us.

Mr. SCOTT. I would call to the recollection of my hon. friends on the other side of the House that we had a conference in which this matter came up in room 48, on one occasion and the proposal was made at that conference at which the members of the Northwest government as well as I think nearly all our hon. friends from the Northwest Territories who sit on that side of the House were present. The proposition was made by myself.

Mr. LAKE. I was not present on that occasion nor did I hear of it.

Mr. SCOTT. Possibly the hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake) was not present. The member for Calgary was present with Mr. Haultain and Mr. Bulyea.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Do you intend to say that I was present when any mention was made of dividing that country up into electoral divisions? I have given that statement an emphatic denial. I was at a meeting when the boundary was discussed, whether it should be the 4th meridian. We sat there until 9.30 waiting for the hon. member for Edmonton, the present Minister of the Interior. I left at 9.30 o'clock after we saw that the boundary between the two provinces could not be satisfactorily adjusted and I again desire to emphatically deny that the question of dividing that country into local constituencies was ever mentioned in my presence.

Mr. SCOTT. I do not wish to impugn the veracity of my hon. friend from Calgary at all, but I make the statement that at that conference the proposition was put forward by myself in the shape of a formal motion that for each of the proposed provinces there should be a bi-party committee appointed from the representatives there present to deal with this matter of redistribution and our Conservative friends there immediately took the position that they would not take part.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Who were the Conservative friends who took that position that they would not take part.

Mr. SCOTT. The hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) makes the emphatic statement that he was not present and heard no such suggestion at all.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I would like to have the name.

Mr. SCOTT. I distinctly recollect that Mr. Haultain was present, and I think my hon. friend from Alberta was also there.

Mr. HERRON. I state most emphatically I was not.

Mr. LAKE. And I also state most emphatically that I was not present.

Mr. OLIVER. At any rate we assume responsibility for having advised the government in this matter. We do not say that the government has taken our advice, but we take the responsibility of having advised it, and I think we would have been doing considerably less than our duty to our constituents if we had not done so. But I am not aware it was any part of our responsibility to ask members opposite to take part with us. They have their responsibility as we have ours, and perhaps they will say that we refused their offer to consult with regard to this matter. If they do not, then they must take the responsibility, just as well as we, of there having been no general discussion. We have no more responsibility in that respect than they. But what has been said here by the hon. memmer for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) makes it quite evident that a joint discussion would have been absolutely useless. The contention he put before the House made impossible that any agreement should be reached.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Why ?

Mr. OLIVER. If my hon. friend will be patient, I shall try to explain why. The first position taken by the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) is that the distribution of seats which was made by the local assembly after the election of 1902 was a proper basis of representation. He takes the ground that because the Northwest assembly made that distribution, it therefore must be right—a distribution which gave eight seats south of this township line of township 39 and six seats north.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Did you not say 9 to 6 this afternoon ?

Mr. OLIVER. I was speaking of the old district of Alberta. I am speaking now of the new province of Alberta to which we gave nine seats in the south to six in the north. But the Northwest assembly gave the old province of Alberta eight seats on the south to six in the north. In the votes that were polled on the 3rd November last, the six northern seats polled 9,817 against 9,666 polled in the eight southern seats. The hon. member takes that proportion of seats as a fair basis of representation, and I leave his argument to the House for its consideration. We say that it is not a fair basis.

Mr. BARKER. His argument was the very opposite.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. member will pardon me for using my own ears. Starting out with the supposition that the southern country was entitled to eight representatives and the northern only to six, he then builds an argument which satisfies himself but which has no basis in fact. It is the simplest thing in the world to arrive at any result by eliminating anything you do not want and adding anything you do. By following this operation, my hon. friend arrived at the absurd calculation that there are 50,000 people north of the line and 150,000 south of it, or figures to that effect.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I proceeded on the assumption of the Minister of Justice that there was a population of 173,000 there and made my calculation accordingly.

Mr. OLIVER. My understanding of my hon. friend's argument was that by this method he reached the conclusion that there are about one-third as many people north of this line as there are south. Take any standard you please which has any basis in fact, and you will see how absurd is that conclusion, and consequently must be the premises from which it was drawn.

Mr. BARKER. He said nothing of the kind.

Mr. OLIVER. Take for instance his suggestion that because customs receipts in the southern half are greater than in the northern half, its population must be greater and the southern half must be entitled to greater representation. On the same basis of calculation, the city of Montreal would be entitled to greater representation than all the rest of the province of Quebec. A similar argument he used with regard to the receipts of the land offices and the receipts from timber and other dues. Well, the amount of receipts indicate the amount of trade and the wealth of the country ; and no one disputes that in this southern country, with its nine hundred miles of railway and its investment of capital for many years, there is a greater aggregation of wealth than in the northern part with only one hundred miles of railway in operation. But it does not follow that the northern part shall be disfranchised because its people have not as much money in the bank or because the customs receipts or the land office receipts are less. It is the people who vote and not their money. Winnipeg has more customs receipts and handles, I suppose, more business than all the rest of Manitoba, yet it has only one representative. It has 100,000 of a population approximately, which I presume, is twice as many as any other constituency in that province, but still it has only one representative. The statements of the hon. gentleman may possibly be correct, but they have no bearing on the question. The question is as to the number of people who are to have representation ; and when my hon. friend leaves that question and gives us a lot of very interesting statistics to show how the country in the south has progressed, he does not thereby strengthen his case.

My hon. friend has suggested that because great irrigation works are going on in the vicinity of Calgary, there must be a large population there. But he knows that these irrigation works were undertaken because there was no population to speak of in that country, because it was not a country suitable for a large population. As a matter of fact, this great district, in which these irrigation works are situated, and which has something like 200 miles of railway, passed a vote at the last election of about 700 or 800 votes. Because a country has 900 miles of railway, he says it must contain a large aggregation of people, but here is a district with 200 miles of railway which only cast 700 or 800 votes. The extension of railways is not an evidence of population, and everybody knows that a great part of southern Alberta—while it is a most desirable country, a country in which men have become wealthy—is not suitable for a dense population. It in a ranching country, the population of which must largely be in the town—a prosperous, if you like, population but not a dense population. In regard to the considerations upon which the distribution before the House is made, it has been stated already that the vote cast at the last Dominion election was accepted as the basis of population. That was accepted because it was the most recent, definite, unquestioned and unquestionable statement that could be obtained. There was nothing more recent that would be absolutely authoritative. My hon. friend complains that the number of votes on the list was not considered instead of the number of votes cast. That might alter the conditions slightly, but not materially ; but everybody will admit that prepared as our voters' lists are in the west, there may be some question as to the reliability of the list but there is no question as to the reliability of the votes when the ballots are in the box.

Mr. SPROULE. Suppose the voters were not there ?

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. Dead men vote.

Mr. OLIVER. Not there. That is in Centre Toronto.

Some hon. MEMBERS. In South York.

Mr. OLIVER. The votes actually polled are taken as something definite, reliable, unquestioned, recent. Then we must necessarily take the areas of country affected. My hon. friend does not desire to consider area at all ; but the purpose of representation is to forward the general interests, and the general interests include the development of unoccupied country. That is the great interest which we in this Dominion parliament have to serve, and that is what the provincial legislature must serve in administering the local affairs of that country. It is the undeveloped area that is our source of wealth, and the policy or principle that would exclude area from representation is certainly detrimental to the well-being of the country. We are prepared to take issue with the hon. gentleman on that point. The third consideration is the prospective development of the province. The first legislature will sit presumably for a term of four years, and where immediate development is assured on a large scale, development which must in the nature of things eventuate before the end of the legislative term, that development should certainly be taken into consideration. And so, when my hon. friend says that there should be consideration of the 900 miles of railroad existing in Southern Alberta, so we say there should be consideration of the 700 or 800 miles to be constructed in northern Alberta within the next two years—certainly within the life of the first legislature. There is under construction during the present year some 275 miles of railroad in northern Alberta, north of township 38. The results in the way of settlement from the construction of those 275 miles through a strictly agricultural country cannot be estimated in figures less than tens of thousands, and any scheme of representation that would not give some consideration to that development, which is not merely in prospect but is assured, would certainly fall far short of meeting the fair and reasonable requirements of the country. I will not dispute with the hon. gentleman as to the figures which he read of the vote in each constituency. It matters very little whether it is a few more or a few less; the general result is about the same. The question at issue is not between several constituencies, but between northern Alberta and southern Alberta. Now, the vote cast at the Dominion election in the province of Alberta, not including the district of Athabaska, amounted to practically 21,000, giving 12 constituencies in the south, including Red Deer, although part of it is north of the line mentioned. That is, 11,406 votes in the 12 southern constituencies as against 9,553 votes in the 11 northern constituencies, a difference of 1,853 votes, exclusive of the district of Athabaska. Now, we say that the greater area of the northern part of the old district of Alberta, to which is added the area of the district of Athabaska, and the prospective increase of population resulting from the construction of 275 miles of railroad during the present year and the balance of 700 miles of railroad within the next four years, are certainly ample justification——

Mr. BARKER. Is the hon. gentleman calculating for a distribution of seats four years hence?

Mr. OLIVER. No; I am calculating for a distribution of seats this year which will stand for four years. We believe that the allowance of 1,800 votes for the difference between 69,000 square miles in the south and 211,000 square miles in the north, with the increase of railway facilities, is certainly not taking any undue advantage. On the contrary, we consider that the country to the south is receiving everything that it can reasonably claim, or that is claimed by sound argument, from the statement my hon. friend has made here to-day.

Mr. BARKER. I would ask the hon. gentleman if he is not overlooking the fact that he is providing for an election that must be held within six months, and not four years hence.

Mr. OLIVER. I am aware of that fact; but I am aware also that the representatives to be elected will in all probability be elected again four years hence, and that therefore we are entitled in all fairness to consider the conditions as they will exist four years hence, as when a distribution was made of seats in the Northwest Territories, allowance was made for a prospective increase of population. What was right then is right now. My hon. friend has found a great deal of fault with the representation of the district of Athabaska, it is going to cost money to represent it. Now this new province of Alberta lies immediately alongside the province of British Columbia. It is very little inferior to British Columbia in area, or, we believe, in value, and we believe that not the least valuable part of the district of Alberta is that part now called the western part of the district of Athabaska. The northern line of the new province of Alberta is identical with that of the province of British Columbia. But there is no part of British Columbia that is not represented in this House, and the isolated parties of miners in the northern part of British Columbia, far north of the Peace river on our side of the mountains, are secured in their right to representation both in the local house and in this parliament. There is a member representing that part of British Columbia lying immediately across the mountains from the Peace river, which is just as inaccessible, just as difficult to reach, and having very little less population if any than the proposed district of the Peace river. My hon. friend has the easiest way in the world of arriving at his conclusions; by the elimination of what he does not wish to see, and by exaggerating what he does wish to see, he can produce any result he wishes. So when he does not want to give that northern country the representation to which it is by area, and population, and possibilities and prospect entitled, he simply ignores it, and says it can either go without representation, or it can be represented by somebody who does not know any more about it than he shows he knows himself, if we are to judge from his arguments.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Does the hon. gentleman contend that whilst the northern country is going ahead the southern country will stand still?

Mr. OLIVER. Surely not. My hon. friend has rather been led into that suggestion reversed, but I have not. We admit the progress and success of the southern country. It certainly has gone ahead marvellously, and is entitled to all consideration. But that is no reason why the progress of the northern country, the greater possibilities of the northern country, because of its greater area if for no other reason, should therefore be ignored. I was rather struck by the easy way in which my hon. friend disposed of a certain constituency to which he particularly objected, the proposed constituency of Stony Plain. He spoke at some length of the population of the constituency of Cardston. Now the constituency of Cardston I know probably as well as he does and Cardston only gave 640 odd votes at the last election, while the district of Stony Plain gave a little over 600 votes. But he proceeds at once to eliminate the constituency of Stony Plain by producing a map which he says shows there are no surveyed lands within that constituency. Now the Department of the Interior may have made an error, and may not have shown the surveys that have been made there, but I can assure him that the constituency of Stony Plain, as it lies on the map, contains 10 organized school districts which are conducted year in and year out, and most of those school buildings are quite equal to any in any country locality in eastern or western Canada. There is no part of Manitoba or of the Northwest Territories that is more closely settled than the settled portion of this particular district of Stony Plain, and there is no part more successful in its farming operations. But my hon. friend, by the scratch of a pen, absolutely wipes it out of existence. He says that the district of Athabaska might be just as well represented by some one who lived somewhere else. Now if that argument of my hon. friend is to prevail, I suppose by the same reasoning some of the constituencies of Ontario and Quebec might be wiped out of existence because they are represented by non-residents, by gentlemen who live in Montreal and Quebec, or in Toronto. But the people of Stony Plain do not recognize that they are off the map, for they have been busy in selecting a resident candidate to represent them locally. My hon. friend mentioned some names as having some connection with this particular constituency. These gentlemen have no connection with it, and that only shows that my hon. friend is not careful in the arguments he puts before the House to support his contention.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I did not state that a resident of Edmonton was nominated for Stony Plain, I said for some constituency in the north, it may be Athabaska or Peace River, for aught I know.

Mr. OLIVER. I understood him to say that Mr. Boyle had been or was going to be nominated.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I said Mr. Boyle and Mr. Cross had been nominated in Edmonton to represent northern constituencies, and I thought that a third party had also been nominated—three men resident in the city of Edmonton are already nominated to represent three northern constituencies.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not know that. I do not know that any of them are nominated to represent three northern constituencies. The only constituencies I have knowledge of are those of Stony Plain and St. Albert, and in most cases I am given to understand that local men are in the field for those constituencies.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Has not Mr. Boyle been nominated ?

Mr. OLIVER. Not that I am aware of. However, when an hon. member has given the House such a deluge of information, it is not unfair that when I come to speak of a subject with which I am acquainted and he is not, I should state to the House that he has been somewhat astray in his conclusions; at any rate, that he has not shown that care in the presentation of his facts that was due to the House in dealing with so important a subject. I do not know that it is necessary to discuss in further detail the differences between the two ends of the district of Alberta. But my hon. friend has laid very much stress upon certain conditions which, he says, point to a large population in one part and small population in the other, and perhaps it may be right also to allude to some of these same matters. When he finds more post offices in the north than in the south he says that is no evidence of population ; it is only evidence that the Postmaster General has favoured that end of the country, and he proceeds to tell us of a certain town in his own constituency where the Postmaster General granted a post office simply because a lady asked him. If anything could be easier than that, I do not know what it is. I think, having regard to the action of the Postmaster General in granting post offices in his constituency, it is not fair of him to allege that the northern country has been favoured to a greater extent than the part where he says the population is, particularly when he tells us that in this great district of Athabaska, with an area greater than that of all the rest of the province of Alberta, the Postmaster General has only seen fit to grant one post office in three years. He can have his argument that way if he likes. Either the Postmaster General is stingy with post offices or he is liberal with post offices. If he is stingy with post offices, then northern Alberta has not got more than it is entitled to in proportion to the rest of the country ; and if he is liberal with post offices, then surely the south is advantaged more than the unfortunate district of Athabaska is. As a matter of fact, the question of the number of post offices has only an indirect bearing on the question. The district of Athabaska is traversed by two great rivers—the Athabaska and the Peace. I think my hon. friend said there was no travel in the country. These two rivers are navigated by lines of steamboats. There are plying on the waters of the Athabaska river within the proposed district of Athabaska four river steamers, one belonging to the Hudson Bay Company, one belonging to the firm of Cornwall & Woods, one belonging to the Roman Catholic mission and one belonging to the firm of Hislop & Nagle. On the Peace river they have three steamers, a large one and a small one belonging to the Hudson Bay Company and a small one belonging to the Roman Catholic mission. My hon. friend has undertaken to belittle the resources and people of the Peace river country. There is a purely agricultural settlement ; I will go so far as to say a more purely agricultural settlement than any existing in his constituency of Calgary, situated on the lower Peace river at Fort Vermilion, in latitude 57.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I may point out to the hon. minister that the returns show that the constituency of Calgary yields more per acre than the constituency of Edmonton, and yet he says it is not a grain country.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not wish to argue as between Calgary and Edmonton, but I merely say again, as I know his constituency, I think, certainly as well as he does, that the settlement of Vermilion, on the Peace river, is a settlement in which the people depend more entirely upon the results of the cultivation of the ground than does any settlement in the constituency which he represents. That is not saying anything as to the respective values of the two sections. I merely say that it is a strictly agricultural settlement situated on the lower Peace river, that there is a roller process flour mill run by steam, lighted by electricity, turning out flour for the northern trade equal to any that is produced in any part of the district of Alberta.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. If you will refer to your own paper of January 10th, the Edmonton 'Bulletin,' you will find the condition of the country fairly stated there. They were not looking for representation then; they were looking for an experimental farm; and you will find on page 6 of the Edmonton 'Bulletin,' which is owned and published by the hon. gentleman, I believe, the following:

T. W. Lines brought up the matter of an experimental farm and wanted the government and the sitting members for Edmonton and Strathcona memorialized on the subject. Two years out of ten the mill of the company which he represented had been forced to shut down owing to a lack of grain free from frost. The local wheat millers were occasionally in the same position and had to import wheat. Our potatoes could not be sold in the Kootenay district. These things were due to the lack of information, &c.

So that when you are looking for an experimental farm and when you are looking for representation, your stories do not tally.

Mr. OLIVER. I was speaking of the Vermilion district, on the Peace river, and not of the Edmonton district. The hon. gentleman apparently does not like the facts I have given him and is endeavouring to direct attention somewhere else. We will discuss the question in regard to Edmonton later on if the hon. gentleman wishes, but at the present moment we are discussing the question of Vermilion, and I repeat that there is a roller process flour mill operating with the product of the settlement and supplying the trade of that country, which is not second in appointments or results to any mill in the district of Alberta.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the output?

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot tell you what the output is. The capacity is about fifty barrels a day.

Mr. INGRAM. About seventy-five barrels a year, according to the statement made.

Mr. OLIVER. Well, that's all right. I think, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, that the absurdity of the statement made by the hon. member is a sufficient answer to it. The idea that a steam mill would be taken by a company such as the Hudson Bay Company to that remote part of the world, and then only have a capacity of seventy-five barrels a year is sufficiently absurd to stamp at its proper value this or any other statement that the hon. gentleman makes.

Mr. INGRAM. Does the hon. gentleman say that the mill that is referred to in this report is the mill that he is referring to now?

Mr. OLIVER. I could not say, I am sure. I am not responsible for that report.

Mr. INGRAM. There is the report issued by the government, and the government's statement is the statement I have made. If it is not correct, it is not my fault; it is the fault of the government.

Mr. OLIVER. I had occasion to challenge a great many of the statements made by the gentleman who produced that report.

Mr. INGRAM. And you got the worst of it.

Mr. OLIVER. As a matter of fact, there was no effort made to establish his statements, either in the House or in the committee.

Mr. BARKER. You answered my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) that it was the Edmonton mill and not the Vermilion one.

Mr. OLIVER. Well, I did not intend to answer him in that way. In regard to experimental farms, may I suggest to my hon. friend from Calgary that there have been applications, and very proper applications, before the Department of Agriculture to my knowledge ever since 1896 for the establishment of an experimental farm either in or contiguous to the district which he represents, and I do not think it is any discredit to the district that it should be so. The experimental farm at Indian Head is situated in a farming district, than which there is no better on this continent. And why is it any discredit to the agricultural capabilities of either the Edmonton or the Peace river district that the people there should be anxious for the establishment of an experimental farm? My hon. friend (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) is driven to hard straits in support of his contention as to representation when he sees fit to attempt to discredit the agricultural capabilities of a country that is not subject to be discredited by the source from which the attempt comes.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Your paper discredited it. I did not.

Mr. OLIVER. There is no discredit in stating facts, and there is nobody who is acquainted with agriculture in this country or in any other who would suggest that farming operations are always a success; certainly no person who is acquanted with the conditions in any part of the Northwest Territories, not excepting the Indian Head district, to say nothing of the Calgary or Alberta districts. But this is not the argument which the hon. member is putting before the House. It has the evidence of unfair intent; an intent to prejudice the mind of the House and the country against a fair and square case. The gentlemen who put forward the contention that the representation of Alberta as it was in the local assembly was a proper representation, have established their position fairly well before the House. When eight constituencies only cast the vote of six constituencies, that is sufficient evidence as to the fairness of the distribution that was made on that occasion, I see that my friend from Alberta (Mr. Herron) is becoming uneasy to get into this game.

Mr. HERRON. You are very much mistaken; I am trying to keep out of it.

Mr. OLIVER. I expect that in thunderous tones he will soon follow the argument of his friend from Calgary, and also declaim against the unfairness of this distribution, and possibly take his stand upon the fairness of the local distribution of 1902. I find, on looking at the distribution of 1902—that distribution which by the way was arrived at without a commission of judges, and of course was entirely without any partisan bias—that distribution gives the Macleod district which cast a vote of 1,700 or 1,800 at the last election, one representative, while it gives two representatives to the adjoining districts of Cardston and Lethbridge which together did not give as large a vote. Now, we may not have made a division absolutely to the line of a hair's breadth, but we certainly have made a distribution which shines by comparison with that made by our friends of the local assembly in 1902, if the case of the district of Macleod is to be considered. The district of Macleod has had to wait for this distribution in order to get justice.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Were these votes you mention, cast before the distribution of 1902.

Mr. OLIVER. No; last fall.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Do you know what was the vote before the distribution of 1902?

Mr. OLIVER. There was no vote cast at the election of 1902; it was by acclamation I believe.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. How could they tell then?

Mr. OLIVER. They had the census to go upon.

Mr. HERRON. There was an election held in 1902 in the Macleod district.

Mr. P. TALBOT. I think the hon. member is wrong.

Mr. HERRON. I am not.

Mr. P. TALBOT. I think Mr. Haultain was elected by acclamation.

Mr. HERRON. He was not. He ran against a man named Harris and that man lost his deposit.

Mr. HENDERSON. It was pretty near an acclamation.

Mr. OLIVER. The census was taken in 1901, and the distribution of 1902 was made immediately after the census. If I have been able to get the figures correctly, I find that if we take the census as a basis, the whole of the new province of Alberta south of the north line of township 8 has a population of 33,040, as against a population of 36,398 north of township 38. If we had taken the census in making this distribution, I submit we would have been justified, but we did not take the census because it was not the latest available information. We took the latest figures available and we arrived at the result now before the House. I submit that the contention as to an undue preponderance of representation to the north country which according to the census has a population of 36,398 as against a population of 33,040 in the south country, does not carry with it the imputation of unfairness. Taking the census, taking all the facts, taking the comparative areas, taking the railroad construction now in progress and the further railroad construction in prospect, there has been an eminently fair and an entirely satisfactory distribution of seats in the province of Alberta. It is too bad that the same percentage of undue advantage that was held by the southern country under the distribution of the local assembly, has not been continued. My hon. friend (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) has stated frankly to the House that he thinks it should be, and the statement of his views in that regard is sufficient to convince the House as to the fairness with which he approaches this subject.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Do my figures correspond with the local distribution?

Mr. OLIVER. I presume they do.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Where is the unfairness?

Mr. OLIVER. The unfairness is that eight districts in the south have only as many votes as six districts in the north. We have taken the votes as cast either in the south or in the north as the first basis of calculation, then we have considered the area and we have considered the railroad prospects, and we have given them representation accordingly. The assumption that the distribution made in 1902 was a good distribution bears its own condemnation on its face. As to homestead entries, when the hon. gentleman (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) thinks the homestead entries are in his favour he accepts them, but if he thinks they are against him he rejects them as a basis of calculation. I have inquired in the department and I find that in the country lying north of the district of Medicine Hat and west of the 4th principal meridian—the part principally occupied by the present district of Vermilion—in which my hon. friend suggests that there is practically no population, the records of the department show 6,000 homestead entries from the 4th meridian to range 18 and from township 38 to township 70. That is the part of the country which the hon. gentleman suggests is not entitled to representation at all.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN. What new constituency is that in ?

Mr. OLIVER. Vermilion, the greater part of it. That constituency is on the line of the Canadian Northern Railway part of which was graded last fall, the balance of which is being graded now, the iron on which will be laid this fall and any person who understands anything about the progress of settlement in that country and knows the character of that country, every foot of it a good agricultural country, will know that in the nature of things there must have been a very large entry of homesteaders along that line of railroad.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Is that all farming country ?

Mr. OLIVER. All farming country, every foot of it.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Because I have a report here of Mr. Jackson who sits in that House, which does not bear out that statement.

Mr. OLIVER. I am not particular about Mr. Jackson's report ; I am particular about the fact that people are homesteading along the line in hundreds and thousands.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Actual settlers ? How do you know that ?

Mr. OLIVER. By the reports of people who travel up and down the line in the course of their business and by the returns of the land office. My hon. friend will have to accept some facts bearing against his case even although they are unpleasant. I will leave it to this committee or to any member of the House if it is a possibility that a railway shall be under construction through a good agricultural country and that that country shall not receive a very large accession of population because of that construction. That is an actual fact and there is no gainsaying it. I do not know what Mr. Jackson has reported in regard to that country but my hon. friend must know, or he would know if he had lived in the west a little longer than he has, that there are many parts of his own district and many parts of the adjoining district of Alberta which five, six or seven years ago nobody would have reported as being suited for farming, but these are lands that are to-day cultivated and producing abundant crops so that a report made some years ago in regard to any part of the country is subject to revision. It is not a question of report, however, it is a question of actual fact, the settlement upon the land.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. The report I refer to was in 1903, not some years ago.

Mr. OLIVER. That is some years ago. Let me draw attention to a matter which was alluded to by the Prime Minister. The district of Rosebud which is a little north of Calgary and in the hon. member's district cast a vote of 732 at the last Dominion elections, and in the census that district is credited with the population of 1,036. That district at the time the census was taken was not considered by the incoming people as suitable for agriculture, but the hon. member knows and we all know that that district to-day is the home of a very large population, and that the vote actually cast is not a fair index of the total number of people. What has occurred there has occurred in other parts of the country ; because the hon. member has not seen it, because he has not been told it, it does not follow that it is not so. It is a fact that our country has been growing in all its parts and not only in this or that part. In reference to the southern part of the country I have some figures here that I think may bear upon the question. One part of the country is valuable for one reason and another part for another reason. The southern country is valuable primarily as a ranching country, and secondarily as a farming country. A ranching country, in the nature of things, is not suited to dense settlement as is a farming country; that goes without saying and I suppose my hon. friend will not contend to the contrary. Since my hon. friend has been digging into the records of the department I may also, and I notice that south of Red Deer there are under grazing lands in that country one and a half million acres of land and that there have been applied for in the department five and a half million acres of land suitable for grazing and thereby not supposedly suitable for farming.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Are you granting them ?

Mr. OLIVER. That is another question.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. That is what I would like to know.

Mr. OLIVER. I shall tell that later.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Do not postpone it too long.

Mr. OLIVER. I shall not be long; we do not keep you waiting long. The evidence that the southern country of which my hon. friend properly speaks highly has received a large accession of population in recent years is not subject, and in the nature of things cannot be subject, to that density of population which the purely agricultural Saskatchewan valley is subject to. That is something that cannot be gainsaid and when we consider this matter we are bound to consider it in the light of facts and not of imagination.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. What portion of the country do you mean by the Saskatchewan valley, the mere valley of the river or what? You can throw a cat across the river.

Mr. OLIVER. My hon. friend forgets that he is not speaking in a court just now.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I want to know.

Mr. OLIVER. He does not need to ask to know that when you speak of the valley you speak of the drainage. It is not of the river, not of the mere bed in which the river flows that you speak in that way.

In regard to the points at which there are settlements in the districts of Athabaska and Peace River, I wish to inform my hon. friend that there are settlements in the proposed district of Athabaska at Slave Lake, Whitefish Lake, Waluseau, Calling Lake, Grand Rapids, Mehumay, Red River, Cheyboyan, Fond du Lac, Smith's Landing, in Peace River at Sturgeon Lake, Grand Puine, Spirit River, Quinegan, Peace River, Crossing, Wolverine Point, Hayward, Vermilion, Little Red River.

As has already been said by the premier it is absolutely impossible for any man adequately to represent or intelligently secure the representation of these two districts. It is possible for two men to do so. The two rivers offer means of communication. They represent two diverse interests. Along the Athabaska the country is not supposed to be agricultural; it is a mineral, timber and fur-bearing and fishing country, it has a larger population at the present time. The Peace River is a country of great agricultural possibilities and of great agricultural prospects and looking to the develop- of that northern country it would be most manifestly unfair that the representation of the agricultural Peace River country should be placed at the disposal of the vote of the Athabaska river country. If we are going to do the fair and reasonable thing by this province, we must give representation according to the interests to the affected, according to the development to be secured and to ignore the possibilities and the necessities of that immense area of country on the argument put forward by my hon. friend, because there is only one post office, because it would cost some money to hold the elections there, because the representation can be made just as well by somebody who knows nothing about it as by somebody who does—I say these I think are not arguments that will appeal to this committee or to the House. I think we have made a representation that will appeal to the fair-minded people of Alberta as giving representation according to population and according to the diversity of interest and the area and progress of the province. The contention that an injustice has been done I submit has not been made out before the House. I submit it cannot be made out, and as I said in the beginning it would certainly be a very fortunate body of judges who would give a decision favourable to a proposal now before the House and escape criticism as active partisans by hon. gentlemen when their position had been ignored.

Mr. AMES. As one of those members who have been, with the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy), working out calculations from the figures which have formed the basis of this discussion, I desire to contribute my views to this debate on somewhat the same lines. I do not profess to have as intimate a knowledge of the country as has my hon. friend the Minister of the Interior, but on the other hand I am not altogether in ignorance of our great west, having on several occasions visited the provinces in question. Deeming it of the greatest importance that this House, in defining the electoral divisions for the new provinces should act with absolute fairness, and being firmly convinced that the proposition of the government is not an absolutely fair one, I wish to point out in what respects I consider it wanting.

We are about to form a new province, we are about to create a local government for that province, and it is essential that we should provide for a fair representation of the popular will in this new legislature we are about to call into being. It is for this ostensible object that the government has submitted the schedule we are now discussing; and in criticising the schedules and the method of their preparation, the opposition are acting strictly within their duty. We propose what we believe to be a much fairer method. We on this side demand that this question be left to a commission of judges, who shall arrange the boundaries of the constituencies, and we do this in the belief that thereby the people will be satisfied and the ends of justice achieved. As I have said, the opposition criticise, in the first place, the method by which this schedule was prepared and submitted to this House. We have the plan, we have the schedule, but there is no official authorization of any kind. We do not know whence it came, as far as that is indicated by anything on the face of it at least. It bears the stamp of no commission, of no official investigation ; it is simply given to us, and we are told to take it as we will. But if report be true, that schedule was prepared several months ago. If we are to believe current rumour, it was incubated in room 48 of this House, it emanated from under the hands of the hon. member for Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. Talbot) at that time, and it comes to this House—as they themselves acknowledge—the product of their ingenuity.

Mr. OLIVER. Will my hon. friend allow me to correct him ? I did not say that it comes to the House as a product of our ingenuity. I said that we gave advice to the government and were responsible for the advice we gave, but I did not say that it was followed.

Mr. AMES. Will my hon. friend point out in what respect that advice was departed from ?

Mr. OLIVER. I do not see why I should. We are here supporting the Bill and there is no need why we should go behind it.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Will you point out wherein your advice in any particular was not accepted by the government ?

Mr. OLIVER. That is not any part of my duty.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Is the Bill in any particular different from the one originally prepared ?

Mr. OLIVER. I am not here to answer questions of that nature. I am supporting the Bill as it stands, and am responsible for the advice I gave with regard to it.

Mr. AMES. I take it that the Minister of the Interior will not entirely deny the soft impeachment that he was largely, if not wholly, instrumental with his colleague from Strathcona in the preparation of this schedule, and that the government, having the greatest consideration for the knowledge and sense of justice of himself and his colleague, accepted their recommendations almost entirely. We may take that for granted. We would like also to know whether any one else was consulted in the preparation of this schedule and to what extent. We have heard that the premier of the Northwest Territories (Mr. Haultain) was present at a meeting, but we do not know that his advice was accepted to any extent. We would also like to know if the advice of the hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Herron) and the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy), which might have been given if asked for, was requested by the hon. minister. The hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Herron) seems to have been asked with regard to his own corner of the province, whether he was satisfied, the night before the schedule was submitted to the House. The hon. member for Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) seems to have been left altogether out of the deliberation, although he has shown us he has some knowledge of the conditions obtaining in the west and would therefore be one whose opinion should be of some value. It would be interesting to know also whether the local members of the constituencies—the 14 or 15 which fall within the new province—were consulted, or whether their constituencies are to be carved out without their co-operation in any way. We also should know whether any opportunity was given for interested parties to be heard, whether delegations were invited, or any opportunity given those who may have felt agrieved in the matter to make their views known. It would appear that this schedule had been prepared without that wide opportunity having been given interested parties which we might expect in such a delicate matter. In fact it is evident that the hon. the Minister of the Interior, somewhat like Moses of old, has come down with his tables of stone and asks us to accept them as though carved by divine power, and as though they were too sacred to be altered in the least jot or tittle by any profane hand. I only hope that before the debate is through, the Minister of the Interior will follow the precedent of the law giver of old and find it advisable to dash his tables of stone to the ground and get new ones.

But the opposition have been invited by the Prime Minister to point out wherein they think the government are not acting wisely in the words which he uttered at the opening of this debate. On the 8th May, 1905, the right hon. gentleman said : I believe it is the intention of the government to give substantial justice to all parties concerned. Let us then start on that basis. The First Minister has expressed, not only his own desire, but no doubt the desire also of his colleagues, to do justice in this redistribution ; and therefore in the hope that, if we show that injustice is done, he will be the first to remedy it, we shall continue the discussion.

It is not an easy task to divide a province into electoral divisions. Certainly it is not an easy task to do so justly, although we might almost imagine from the extent of the injustice in this schedule that it had been an easy task. The government, in clause 12 of the Bill, have given us two of the factors which they have evidently taken into consideration in dealing with this matter, namely, that the electoral divisions shall be defined with due regard to the distribution of population and existing local divisions, which we take to mean the divisions in the Northwest legislature at present. But there are other factors which should be taken into consideration in making distribution. There are the physical features of the country. It is inadvisable that a mountain range, for example, should separate two parts of a constituenncy, or that an unfordable river should cut it in twain, and it is equally inadvisable to divide a town so that a part falls in one constituency and a part in another, and so that the citizens shall be compelled to go many miles north for registration in one case and many miles south in the other.

It is necessary also to consider means of communication; for it is advisable that as far as possible the same line of communication should serve those who are found in the same constituency. It also follows that where there are no means of communication and where it is unlikely that there will be any for many years to come, one should think twice before endeavouring to establish constituencies, knowing the grave difficulties that must necessarily follow. Then, it is necessary to consider the representation of interests. We find many and varied interests in this rich province of Alberta—the ranching and the farming, the urban and the rural, the mining, the irrigation, the fur trading, and so on. In these interests there are large sums of money invested, and an effort should be made to see that each of these interests is represented in the new House by some one who is permitted and able to speak for it. And it must not altogether be lost sight of that there are immense amounts of capital in some of the old constituencies, which are to some extent entitled to representation; for certainly investments will form a large portion of the consideration of the new House, and a territory sparsely populated, or practically not populated at all, can hardly have the same interest in the legislation as can a constituency in which large capital is invested. Then, ethnological conditions need to be considered. It is inadvisable to submerge a portion of the population which is to some extent homogeneous. It is advisable that they should be so placed so as to have representation by one of themselves. All these are considerations that have to be taken into account when dealing with the distribution of the representation of a province. We are not inclined to place the same stress on more area that the hon. Minister of Interior does. Vacant land does not contribute to the revenue of a country nor supply votes, and we fail to see how we are justified in the present case in anticipating, in the rosy manner in which the hon. Minister of the Interior has done, the possible filling up at some future date of this northern country. The hon. minister has argued that such representation should be given in the new legislature because of the development that is about to take place in that northern country. Well, I submit that the legislature which will be elected by the people of Alberta will be thoroughly competent to deal with measures for the development of that northern country, whether it has a representative or not. Surely, if there be matters which require the attention of the local legislature, they will be dealt with in the regular way. The hon. minister has also drawn attention to the British Columbia analogy, and has spoken of that portion of British Columbia which lies north and east of the Rocky Mountains. Possibly the hon. minister does not remember that the hon. member who sits in this House for Yale-Cariboo (Mr. D. Ross) has a constituency which is bounded on the south by the American boundary line and on the north by the Yukon, and yet, when he canvasses for votes, he does not go higher than 100 or 125 miles north of the Thompson river, nor does he attempt to canvass or give representation to that part of Yale-Cariboo which lies north and east of the Rocky Mountains. The people of British Columbia take the sensible course of attaching this unorganized territory to an organized territory; and if the hon. Minister of the Interior would arrange to have the unorganized territory of Peace River attached to St. Albert and the unorganized territory of Athabaska attached to Sturgeon, the two western of these districts forming one constituency lying east of the Rocky Mountains, and the others forming one further to the east of these——

Mr. OLIVER. Does the hon. gentleman contend that northern British Columbia is not represented directly in the legislature?

Mr. AMES. I was speaking of the representative of Yale-Cariboo in this House.

Mr. OLIVER. Does the hon. gentleman include in his remarks the representation in the local legislature of British Columbia?

Mr. AMES. I would ask the hon. member whether the portion of British Columbia that lies east and north of the Rocky Mountains has a representative of its own in the provincial House?

Mr. OLIVER. It forms part, I believe, of the electoral district of Cassiar.

Mr. AMES. And I will ask another question: Is there any attempt made to organize or get any vote for that portion of British Columbia lying north and east of the Rocky Mountains?

Mr. OLIVER. I could not tell you that.

Mr. AMES. None whatever. For local purposes it may be attached to Cassiar, but no attempt is made to organize it for electoral purposes.

Now, the hon. minister has spoken of the prospective increase, and on that basis has attempted to give us reasons why there should be seven constituencies north of the North Saskatchewan river, where there were only three before. I think we shall have at the outset to say plainly that we are dealing with present conditions and not discounting the future. It may be a popular amusement in Edmonton to decide what town lots will be worth ten years from now; but at the present moment we are dealing with facts and figures as we find them, and this is the reason why: because clause 12 of this Bill reads: 'Until the said legislature otherwise provides.' Now, the hon. minister knows perfectly well that within six months after the passage of this Bill the people of Alberta will be called upon to choose their first legislature. He knows that that legislature will be chosen on the conditions as they are to-day, or rather as they were last year, because the later comers cannot vote. He knows, therefore, that the powers given by this Bill will be exhausted with that first act of the first legislature, and from that time forward will be null and void; because there is before this House a Bill which states that in the month of June, in the year 1906, there will be a census of the population of the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba taken by the Minister of Agriculture. Now, it is perfectly well known that this legislature is to be chosen upon existing conditions, and that one of the first acts of this legislature, after the census of 1906 becomes public, will be if necessary, to carry out a distribution of seats. He knows that hereafter the newly created legislature will be the sole authority to divide the province of Alberta for local electoral purposes. Six months from this time the powers given in this Bill will practically cease to exist, consequently this prospective increase is a matter we have no right to discuss. Then, the minister tells us that one railroad is coming in this year, that another is coming in two years, and another in three years. We have to deal with actual facts as they are, and hence discounting the future is not pertinent to the discussion.

Now, I think I have shown that there are a great many different considerations which have to be weighed when a province is about to be divided into constituencies, and I think we shall realize as a House that we are not adapted for dealing with questions of that character. With all due deference to the knowledge and good intentions of the members of this House, I submit that a division of that character is one that should be made by an independent judicial body which has some knowledge of local conditions. There are 215 members of this House. How many of these have ever been in Alberta or know anything about the local conditions there? Here we have a very important measure affecting the interests of probably 200,000 people. Is there any bar provided before which these people can come and be heard and make their grievances known ? This is a matter which should be given the fullest possible discussion, and the people vitally interested should be given an opportunity to be heard. But no such opportunity is now given them. Further than that, with all due deference to parliament, I do not think it can be characterized as a wholly non-partisan body. I do not think the members of this House are likely to approach this question having absolutely divested themselves of political bias. This Bill has been presented in a very simple way. One man fathers it, his views are imposed upon the cabinet, the cabinet having accepted them, force them upon the party, and the party having a majority in parliament forces it upon the country. That is one-man-rule in a matter so important as this which relates to the future of 200,000 people. Now I submit that is not the manner in which a question of this importance should be dealt with. We desire to have a commission appointed of men of wide knowledge and of legal training, men who have given their lives to weighing judicial questions, and are prepared to deal with them in an impartial way, men before whom these people interested can come and plead their cause ; and when that tribunal has been provided we of the opposition are perfetly willing to accept without a murmur the finding, whatever it may be. The minister has intimated that his finding would pass a board of judges. If it passes a board of judges, there will be nothing further said. But I am very much mistaken if there are three judges in any province of the Dominion who would accept after hearing all the evidence, the schedule which the minister has submitted.

There is another point which comes out in this discussion. We have seen statements made and challenged, figures offered and refuted. Where are we ? Who is right? Who has counted these figures correctly ? Simply the majority. They may be wrong, it is possible for a majority to be wrong. But if there were a commission of judges to weigh the statements of all parties which might be submitted to them, who would be in a position to examine witnesses and documents, and be able to obtain full information, they would then decide where the truth lay, and would act accordingly.

Now I want to submit some evidence to prove that commissions have been tried elsewhere and have proved most successful. We, as a part of the British Empire, cannot do badly in following some of our sister colonies in their manner of dealing with questions of this character. We have been accustomed especially to look to Australia for experiments relating to the ballot law, and all things electoral. We have taken our ballot system from that country. Now suppose we consult them relating to legislation of this kind. Some twenty years ago, in New Zealand, it was decided that the fairest possible way to distribute constituencies was to leave it to a commission. In 1892 New South Wales followed the example of New Zealand, and at that time the Hon. R. E. O'Connor, who introduced a government measure, thus spoke of the way in which the system had worked in New Zealand :

> The principle of the schedule of electorates is open to very great objection, and the principle which we have adopted is one that has been working very satisfactorily in New Zealand for some time. That is this : three commissioners are appointed who are members of the civil service. They are in no way under political control. They make the subdivision of the electorates. . . . These commissioners have the power of fixing the electorates in that way, and they divide the country into 125 electorates returning 125 members.

In consequence of the success of New Zealand, the government of New South Wales presented a Bill in 1892, which was duly passed, and that is the method now in operation in New South Wales. It may be worth while to indicate some of the main lines on which the distribution of New South Wales is carried out. I will make a few citations from the Act 56 Vic, 1892-3, No. 38, of the statutes of New South Wales.

Within thirty days from the passing of this Act, and thereafter when any distribution of electoral districts shall become necessary under the provisions of this Act, the government shall, by commission under the great seal, appoint three persons, each of whom shall be qualified as an elector in and for some electoral district of New South Wales, according to the law in force at the time of the appointment, to be commissioners for the purposes of this parliament and to be called 'the electoral district commissioners.' The persons so to be appointed shall be chosen by the government from persons then holding some office in the public service of New South Wales. And the names of the persons so appointed, and of all persons hereafter appointed as such commissioners, shall be published in the 'Gazette.'

It shall be the duty of the commissioners, and they are hereby directed, to distribute New South Wales into electoral districts for the purposes of this Act, within three months after the passing of this Act, and thereafter, within three months after the results of every census of the population of New South Wales shall have been ascertained and reported to the Colonial Secretary, which the government statistician is hereby required to do as early as possible after such census shall have been taken, and such distribution shall take effect when approved by resolution of the legislative assembly.

Now that is the way in which the distribution was made, and you will see upon what they base it.

The total number of members to be elected to serve in the assembly shall be 125. The quota of electors for the purposes of this Act shall be ascertained in the following manner—for the purposes of the first distribution, the quota shall be ascertained by dividing by 125 the total number of persons enrolled on the electoral rolls. . . . And the quota for every subsequent distribution shall be ascertained by dividing by 125 the total number of electors on the rolls in force for the time being.

Two very important principles therefore are carried out in this Bill. After they have found the total number of persons enrolled on the list and divided it by the total number of constituencies, and having established the quota, then they make their boundaries.

Mr. AMES.

Every such district shall have such an area that, at the time of making such distribution, the number of persons enrolled therein shall, subject to the margin of allowance hereinafter contained, reach the prescribed quota.

That certainly seems to be as fair a proposition as can possibly be offered. Now supposing that method were applied to Alberta. We have there 25 seats, the quota of electors will be ascertained by dividing the total number by 25. Assuming that Peace River and Athabaska would contain 300 qualified electors each, which we believe to be beyond the mark, there would be 30,550 electors on the list which was used on the 3rd of November, 1904, affording a quota of 1,222. If we were adopting the method prevailing in New South Wales, we would then divide our constituencies so that each one would contain as nearly as possible 1,222 of the names on the electoral lists. If, however, we take the twelve southern constituencies according to the schedule which is laid on the table, we find they have 16,662 qualified electors, they would therefore be entitled to 14 members instead of 12. On the other hand, we find the 13 northern constituencies containing 13,945 electors, and they are to receive 13 representatives, whereas they should receive but 11 representatives. If this eminently fair Australian method were adopted we would have no objection to make. If the total number of names upon the Alberta list were divided by the total number of constituencies, and the boundaries were made so as to include in each one of these constituencies the quota of electors, nothing fairer could be asked for. But unfortunately that is not done.

Now the latest constitution that has been give nto any of the self-governing British colonies is that which was a few days ago granted to the Transvaal. I read from the 'Spectator' of April 29, 1905 :

The electoral districts will be framed upon the basis of the number of voters, and a commission will be appointed to draw their boundaries. Finally the constituencies will be redistributed every four years in accordance with the fluctuations in the number of voters as established by the biennial registration lists.

Mr. Lyttleton, the colonial secretary, in his communication which appears in the London 'Times' of the 26th April, 1905, further describes the method as follows :

A commission will be appointed to create from thirty to thirty-five electoral districts upon the principle of an equal number of voters, and for the purpose of enabling voters' lists to be compiled in advance. An Order in Council has been passed, making the necessary provision for registration of voters. This commission will give due consideration to boundaries of existing administrative divisions, and will have power to adopt, in settling the boundaries of electoral districts, a margin of ten per cent of the quota of voters.

This new Transvaal constitution is considered to be the product of all the experience of the British Crown in many centuries in dealing with unorganized or sparsely populated sections, and it has been decided that the fairest possible way of making the division is to base it on the number of names on the electoral list, find the quota and afterwards make the boundaries.

I wish, in further support of this argument —that a reference to a commission is the best way in which to perform this task—to quote from American experience. A great many of those who are at the present time coming over the boundary into Alberta are accustomed to the institutions that prevail to the south of us. We do not always imitate our cousins to the south of us but in some cases possibly they might well be imitated, and I think that many Americans coming into Alberta, who have lived in north and south Dakota, on becoming acquainted with this schedule as the method under which they are to cast their first votes, will decide that the method which prevailed at home was the better one.

Whenever it is decided that a territory shall be admitted as a state it is necessary that the sanction of the two parties shall be given, the people of the state and the people of the union. The people of the state are usually already registered on the electoral list for the territory, and it becomes necessary to choose delegates to represent them at a convention. The following extract from the United States statutes at large, volume XXV., chapter 180, shows the manner of choosing these delegates :

> And the aforesaid delegates to form said conventions shall be apportioned within the limits of the proposed states in such districts as may be established as hereinafter provided in proportion to the population in each of said counties and districts, as near as may be, at the time of making said apportionment by the persons hereinafter authorized to make the same, from the best information obtainable, in each of which districts three delegates shall be elected, and so forth. . . . Said apportionment shall be made by the governor, the chief justice and the secretary of the said territories.

The Governor, representing the United States ; the Secretary of the Territories, representing the best informed local authority, and the chief justice, who will add to this commission the judicial element. That is the way in which constituencies in the Dakotas were divided, and nothing could be fairer, inasmuch as it is done by a commission which was entirely removed from any political bias.

Now, the idea of a commission is not altogether a foreign proposition even to the present government. I am sorry to say that the government have reverted from a principle which they at one time advocated. When they had come freshly into power they had many new ideas of reform which were shortly to be put into effect. Some were attempted, but were later abandoned. This is one of these. In 1899 the liberal administration, which we have now, believed it advisable that there should be a redistribution in view of the coming elections of 1900. This was to affect particularly the province of Ontario, and this is the way they proposed that it should be done. Bill 126 was presented in the House of Commons. This measure was to give the city of Hamilton two members, it was to give the city of Toronto five members, it was to give to eight of the counties of Ontario—Brant, Elgin and others—two members each, and it was to give to seven other counties of Ontario—Huron, Bruce and others—three members each. How did the government propose that the five constituencies of Toronto should be divided ? This is what they suggested :

> Where, under the foregoing provisions, any county or city is to be divided into more than one electoral district, such divisions shall be made by a board of commissioners, consisting of at least three persons, being judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario, who, for that purpose, shall be appointed by letters patent under the great seal.

What was the government's proposition ? They said we will decide that the city of Toronto shall have five members, that the city of Hamilton shall have two members ; we will not undertake to divide these cities up into constituencies, but we will leave that to a commission of judges, in whom we have every confidence. At that time the right hon. First Minister himself and the hon. Postmaster General defended this proposition. Said the right hon. Prime Minister, on the 19th May, 1899 :

> The judges, so far as the city of Toronto is concerned, as well as other constituencies, which have to be divided, will divide the municipal city of Toronto into four ridings, taking into consideration the census of 1891, and the convenience of the population, so as to do substantial justice, so far as it is possible to do it.

Again he says :

> The instructions given to the judges, as my hon. friend no doubt knows by this time, are general. It is impossible to divide counties into ridings which will have exactly the same population, but I assume, and I hope also, that it will be the duty of the judges to make the ridings as equal as possible in population.

This Bill was presented to the House by the hon. Postmaster General and supported in a speech by the right hon. First Minister. Why should not the government apply the principles then enunciated on this occasion ? We would not object if the government at this time would put in practice their own doctrine, which they supported in 1899. Let the government give the southern half of Alberta twelve members, let them give the northern half twelve members, let them give to that part of Assiniboia, which is to be taken in, one member, and then let them leave it to a commission of judges to divide these twelve constituencies in the north and these twelve constituencies in the south, and I will guarantee that there will be no trouble.

Now, the people of Alberta, (if we can judge at all from what we read in the newspapers from the west, and particularly from these proposed provinces), the people of Alberta had somewhat got the idea that they were going to have a commission which would delimit these constituencies, and it is not difficult to show by quotations from some of the papers that this is what the local desire calls for. Also we can readily prove, from the same sources, that the people of Alberta are grievously disappointed with the action of the government in this respect. I wish to submit a few of the figures which show why the people of Alberta are disappointed. I have not made my calculations in quite the same way as my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) has made his, but they are made, I think, with equal care and effort, and I may say that they are the work of many weeks on the part of the members upon this side of the House. We have not relied on any officials. We have made our own calculations we have checked and rechecked, and I think our schedule will stand the test. We have made independent calculations, which I do not think can be in any way broken down. In the first place, I want to reiterate what I have already said, that we are not discounting the future. We are dealing with things as they are; consequently, the figures which we should look for are the figures as they exist. What is the extent and character of this country that we are called upon to deal with? Here we have a stretch of territory, 360 miles of which is settled, because there is practically no settlement, as there is no survey, beyond township 60. We have this district extending from the 4th meridian to the Rocky mountains, which is populated as far north as 360 miles from the border. This section of country was by parliament, 3 Edward VII., chapter 60, divided, in 1903, into four constituencies.

Obviously the division could not have been unfair for the Liberals because at that time that section of the country was represented by four Liberals in this House. The dividing line of these four constituencies was township 34, and Calgary and Alberta are south of township 34 and Strathcona and Edmonton north. The schedule that has been submitted by the Minister of Interior gives fourteen and a half members in the local house north of 34 and ten and a half members south of 34, while we claim that the natural division would be to give the same number north and south. I want first to submit estimates that are based upon population, and I am of course compelled to resort to figures which are furnished by local authorities and which if they be challenged by the government it is the duty of the government to show are incorrect. In the 'Northern Albertan,' a Liberal paper published in Calgary, on the 11th of May, 1905, there is an attempt to give the population of the constituencies according to the so called Oliver schedule. We find that the ten constituencies which lie south of township 34, viz.: Cardston, Pincher, Macleod, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, High River, Calgary (city), Gleichen, Banff and Rosebud, have a population of 120,000. In the 14 constituencies north of line 34: Red Deer, Lacombe, Ponoka, Wetaskiwin, Leduc, Strathcona, Vermilion, Saskatchewan, Sturgeon, St. Albert, Peace River, Athabaska, and Edmonton (city), there is a population of 100,300. If we take the new constituency of Innisfail out of the calculation because it lies north and south of township 34, we would have 120,000 south and 100,300 north, and Innisfail in the middle with 10,000, would give 230,300 in all which is what the 'Northern Albertan' calculates the present population to be. If we consider Innisfail as a neutral constituency then we have 52 per cent of the population south of it and 43½ per cent of the population north, and yet it is proposed to give 14 members to the north and 10 members to the south. If you take the total population of these constituencies as estimated by the 'Northern Albertan' at 230,300 you find that the average for each constituency is 9,212. I would like to know where the fairness comes in when 120,000 pople in the south get 10 representatives and 100 000 in the north have 14 representatives?

There is another calculation of population which appears in the Medicine Hat 'Times' of the 23rd of May, 1905, which apparently has been prepared with great care because every figure is carried out to the end. Here again we have the 24 constituencies; here again we have Innisfail laid aside for the moment because it is on the boundary line, and the ten constituencies on the south are given a population of 89,834, while the 14 constituencies on the north are given a population of 75,590. It is proposed here to give 14 representatives to 75,590 people and 10 representatives to 89,834 people. Is that fair play? This calculation gives the total population including Innisfail at 172,853. I want to ask, as one searching for information, why should it require 9,000 people in the south to have a representative, when 5,400 people in the north are thought good enough to have a member. I do not know the country very well, but is there such a difference between the calibre of the people of the north and the people of the south that it takes 9,000 people in the south to have one representative while it only takes 5,400 people in the north to have a representative?

Mr. OLIVER. Does the hon. gentleman want an answer?

Mr. AMES. Yes.

Mr. OLIVER. Because such a large number of the 9,000 are imaginary people.

Mr. AMES. You will have to settle that with the Medicine Hat 'Times.' Let us take another calculation: let us take up the calculation of the number of names on the lists. I think that is admitted to be the most obviously fair method of making a division; it has been so considered in New Zealand, it has been so considered in New South Wales, it has been so considered in the Transvaal, it has been so considered in the territories of the American union. I never heard before, and I do not think any member of this House ever heard before, of an estimate based on the number of votes cast, because it can be easily seen that the number will vary greatly on account of circumstances peculiar to each constituency. We find altogether that there were about 30,000 names on the voters' lists and the quota is 1,222. Therefore the country should be so divided that each constituency would contain 1,222 names upon its voters' lists. We find that the ten southern constituencies have 14,242 names on their lists, but the 14 northern constituencies—taking it for granted that Peace River and Athabaska by a superhuman effort might produce 300 each—have 15,040 names on their voters' lists. In other words the quota being 1,222 the average of each constituency in the south is 1,424 and the average in the north is 1,074. Might I ask, why it requires 350 more names on the list of a southern constituency to have a representative, than it does in a northern constituency.

Mr. HENDERSON. Because it is not imaginary.

Mr. SPROULE. Because they want to keep the capital in the north.

Mr. AMES. This afternoon figures were brought down by the Prime Minister which did not exactly tally with ours but which were not essentially different. I have taken the government figures in order to make a calculation and I find that in the south we have 10 constituencies with a total of 14,657 voters or an average in each constituency of 1,465, while we have in the 13 northern constituencies 15,271 voters or an average in each constituency of 1,174. The quota is 1,300. Why does it require 1,465 voters in the south for one member while 1,174 is sufficient in the north? We on this side of the House found it necessary to make our own calculation, and we found it necessary for two reasons. First, because we desired to become familiar with the facts ourselves, and secondly because we felt there could not be all the possible confidence in the world placed upon the figures as given by the government. Now let me show you an instance which confirms our suspicions. On the 14th of June, I asked in the House, how many names of qualified voters appeared on each of the lists used November 3, 1904, for the electoral districts of Alberta, Calgary, Strathcona and Edmonton, and the Prime Minister replied: that in Alberta, there were 3,473. It was a little difficult to credit that statement, because in that election Mr. Herron received 1,755 votes, Mr. McKenzie, 1,677, 41 were rejected and 39 spoiled, making the total number of votes cast in the election 3,512. And yet the Prime Minister says that there were only 3,473 names upon the list. If that is the way computations are made we find it necessary to make independent calculations.

We now come to the matter of the votes cast. I find that in the same ten southern constituencies 9,796 votes were cast or an average of 979, but that in the 12 northern constituencies 9,867 were polled or an average of 822. 895 is the mean for 23 constituencies. Why should it be necessary in the south to have 157 more electors than the mean when it is permitted to have 73 less than the mean in the north? The Minister of the Interior has attempted to defend this method of division by the number of votes cast. Of all the methods, that is the one which will come nearest to justifying his proposed schedule and for that reason I suppose it has been selected, but it is so obviously unfair to the south that I think it is advisable we should make this matter also patent to the House. You have only to look at some percentages to see the difference between the number of names on the list and the number of votes cast. For example, the High River constituency which is largely devoted to ranching only polled 63 per cent, and Macleod, another ranching constituency, 64 per cent of the names on the list. Stony Plain of which we have heard, managed to get in 78 per cent, and St. Albert succeeded in polling 77 per cent of its vote. There are some very peculiar features about this which make it still more apparent why this basis of calculation was used. In the northern part they not only voted the whole list but more. In Cracow, a name which shows that it is largely inhabited by Poles who helped to swell the hon. gentleman's majority, there were 113 names on the list and 100 cast. In Sallman, 19 were cast and there are 17 on the list. In Kensington 82 were cast and 52 on the list. In Wetaskiwin there were 282 cast and 266 on the list, in Rosenthal, 52 cast and 44 on the list; at Stony Plain Schoolhouse, 50 cast and 47 on the list; East Saskatchewan, 230 cast and 221 on the list. Poll 22, St. Albert cast 206 votes, although there were only 193 on the list. I can readily see under these circumstances why it should be deemed advisable for the minister to attempt to defend his schedule by considering the number of votes cast, but unfortunately the people of the south apparently had overlooked the fact that a distribution was coming. The minister has mentioned Cardston, which had a small vote in the south. If I understand, this is a Liberal constituency surrounded by several of another character, and there might be danger in the event of Cardston being enlarged that it would no longer remain Liberal and consequently it is left untouched.

It is sometimes maintained that cities should not be entitled to the same representation as rural constituencies. We are always subjected to such treatment in Montreal and are not given representation in any way commensurate with our population, and so if in this particular case we should deduct from the figures given us in the Medicine Hat 'Times,' the figures for the cities of Calgary and Alberta which as I understand, may be overlooked for the purposes of an estimate, we find that the nine southern constituencies contained, 79,334 or an average of 8,815. We would consider Innisfail again as neutral and would deduct Edmonton from the north which would give 13 constituencies with a population of 67,590 or an average of 5,199. Might I ask why a rural constituency in the south requires an average of 8,815 in order to have a representative while a rural constituency in the north has a representation for every 5,199 ? Why require 3,616 more in the south than in the north ?

A great deal of time has been spent to-night in discussing the relative rapidity with which the north and the south are filling, and the homestead entries are taken as affording the best basis of comparison. It is not advisable to take the homestead entries of the last 20 years. We have a better test of population in the various distributions, so it is only necessary to take the homestead entries for the last two years or parts thereof. It is easy to make this calculation because the present district of Alberta is almost entirely covered by the Lethbridge, Calgary, Red Deer and Edmonton agencies. A very small portion of Battleford is west of the fourth, but on the other hand a considerable portion of Medicine Hat as we know is also west of principal meridian 4. It is very easy therefore, for us to calculate the returns of the Calgary and Lethbridge offices which are found south of township 34, and compare them with the returns of the Red Deer office which are north of 34. We find that in 1903-4 for the southern part, Lethbridge and Calgary, there were 4,386 homestead entries; in the northern part 3,815, a total of 8,261, of which 53½ per cent lie in the south and 46½ per cent in the north. In 1903-4, as judged by the homestead entries, the south increased much more rapidly than the north. The minister spoke of the homestead entries being brought down to the 31st of March, 1905. We will bring them to this date. That adds nine months to the previous calculation. That gives you for the last 21 months for the south 7,277, and for the north 6,978. Consequently the two southern agencies in the list during the last 21 months have had more entries passed through them than the two northern agencies. Reference has been made to Battleford. Some large figures have been given in connection with it, and the other day a return was brought down in this House which stated that up the 23rd of January, 1905, there had been 2,847 homestead entries for the Battleford part. If the populations all told were fairly equal when the parliamentary distribution into four constituencies was made, and when the distribution into local constituencies was made, more especially the former, and if as we see by the homestead entries the population during the last 21 months has been flowing in greater numbers into the southern than into the northern portion why do we now give 10½ members below and 14½ above township 34 ? The hon. member speaks of the prospective increase when the railways come in. Yes, but I would repeat that the first election must take place within six months of the passage of this Act, and after that first election has taken place there will be no more need of this schedule for any subsequent election. What may happen after the present year does not affect the situation in any shape or form.

When the hon. minister begins to speak of offsets, it is perfectly fair for my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) to speak of the irrigation scheme of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which is to bring 3,000,000 acres under occupation—two-thirds for ranching and one-third for farming. Surely the population that will enter upon that 1,000,000 acres will be quite an offset to anything that may come in along the Great Northern Railway ; and the fact that in the next few years there may be 700 or 800 miles of railway through that northern country has nothing to do with the case, because we must base our first distribution on things as they are and not as they may be in the future.

There is another test I would like to apply. That is the test of the local Northwest Territories constituencies of to-day. This division, which gives to the present territory of Alberta, fifteen members, was made by the local Houes in 1902. We have been taught to consider the local House of that day as a non-partisan body. It was so at that time at least. We do not know that politics entered into consideration in this case ; and although we have diligently searched, we have been unable to find that any serious exception was taken to the distribution then made. That gave nine seats south of township 38 and six north of the same. You propose to increase the nine to twelve and the six to thirteen. You add one-third to the south and more than double the representation of the north.

I think I have pointed out what reasons the people of Alberta have for being dissatisfied with the schedule before this House. Perhaps you imagine, Sir, that the people of Alberta are not giving this matter their attention. Well, you have only to read the papers from all parts of southern Alberta, and you will find plenty of evidence, that they are very much worked up over the injustice that they consider is being done them. On the 8th May the schedule was brought to this House. Within two weeks there were protests from the Liberals and Conservatives in Calgary. There were protests from Raymond on the south to Red Deer on the north, a distance of 200 miles; from Medicine Hat to Pincher Creek, east and west, a distance of 150 miles. There were protests from 30,000 miles of territory occupied by 130,000 people. For the information of the House, let me read a few of those protests because I think they are pertinent to the discussion. The Calgary 'Herald' on May 11, says:

Every citizen, north and south, understands that the only excuse for this atrocious injustice is the determination of the allied interests to place the seat of government in the centre of the European half-breed population.

That shows that the feeling in Calgary was pretty strong over the matter. Here is what is said by the Calgary 'Daily Herald' on the 13th May:

In the history of Canada no greater political outrage has been perpetrated than that of which the above map tells the story. Nobody in the south wants to harm Edmonton or any other part of the north. All we seek is fair-play, and we have grave reason to protest against the grossly unfair way in which the federal government proposes to hive a lot of small constituencies around Edmonton, and leave important, populous and prosperous communities in the south and centre with outrageously inadequate representation.

This editorial was reproduced and endorsed by the Red Deer 'News' of May 23, 1905. The 'Weekly Albertan' of May 11, 1905, published in Calgary, and a Liberal paper says:

The announcement that the Dominion government had completed the schedule of constituencies for the province of Alberta, and had decided upon thirteen seats north of Red Deer and twelve seats to the south is a bitter disappointment to the people of the south.

The division is unfair and cannot be defended. But the division, unjust as it is, is not as serious a matter as the method adopted by the government to arrive at the division. If the question of dividing the province had been left to an independent non-political body, or even to a parliamentary committee, composed of members of parliament who were personally uninterested in the division made, the people of the south would not have been aroused by the decision, even if we had only received eleven members south of the Red Deer line. We would have been disappointed, but would have felt that though beaten we had been beaten fairly, and that though at a disadvantage we did not have a grievance.

The present division is unfair, and the method adopted to decide upon the division is little short of iniquitous.

The population from the south have asked no favours in this struggle.. They first requested a non-competitive point for the temporary capital. They were unable to get that. They were willing to concede that much to their Edmonton opponents, looking upon it as a tribute from the party to party supporters, granted because it was not considered that it would very materially affect the ultimate result of the capital fight.

But much greater objections can be offered to the method adopted to arrive at the division. It means that the people of the south are not treated fairly, that being at a disadvantage they are punished for it, that the spirit of fair-play, which has characterized the Liberal party, which has in its hands the creation of these divisions, in this case is lacking.

Then the people of Calgary asked that the division of the constituencies be made by an impartial body. That was a wise, fair, just and unselfish request. Can any person point to a single defect in such a method of division? It is absolutely fair and just.

The result of the present policy will be deplorable. It means the lining up in battle array of north against the south.

That comes from one of the strongest Liberal papers in the province of Alberta. The next editorial in that paper is one in support of the government on other matters. The article I have just read was also reproduced and endorsed by the Macleod 'Gazette' on May 18, 1905, and by other papers throughout Alberta. The 'Albertan' of the 25th May, again says:

Whatever the administration at Ottawa may decide upon in connection with the division of Alberta constituencies, it will not be the fault of the local Liberals if some other method of dividing the constituencies is not adopted. The Calgary Liberals have been using every effort possible to induce the administration to have the original suggestion, that of leaving the task to an independent tribunal, adopted. The Liberals have prepared a full statement of the case, and have presented it to the administration in the most forceful manner.

Might I ask whether these representatives have been received and whether the Prime Minister will be good enough to lay this document on the table of the House?

The Raymond 'Chronicle,' far to the south, says:

This distribution of seats is felt to be unfair, as it had been tacitly agreed that the dividing would be left to an impartial commission, and taken out of the reach of a possible gerrymander.

Then follows in the same paper an editorial expression of satisfaction with the government on the educational question, thus showing it to be a paper sympathetic to the government. In the Lethbridge 'News' of Thursday, May 18th, I find the following expression of opinion:

The dividing of Alberta into electoral constituencies has been accomplished, and it amounts to nothing less than a gerrymander. The government's work in this case is certainly of a very coarse variety. It is a well-known fact that there is a keen rivalry between Calgary and Edmonton for capital honours, and that the issue largely depends upon whether or not a majority of the members of the first legislature come from constituencies north or south of the town of Red Deer. It is the general opinion that if the 'representation by population' principle were applied, the south would win hands down, and the capital would go to Calgary. That this opinion was also shared by those supporting Edmonton's claim is proven by the fact that they have been the first who tried to get the question settled at Ottawa without reference to the people's wishes. That the government should practically grant their unjust request and pursue the unprecedented course of turning the whole matter over to the Minister of the Interior seems an unwarranted proceeding even under ordinary circumstances. But when it is remembered that the head of that department is an interested party, it assumes a decidely 'raw' aspect. We believe the government should have left this whole matter to a judicial committee, to be dealt with impartially on its merits, when justice would have been done. We must confess a keen disappointment in Mr. Oliver, who though elevated to a very high position seems to narrow in the calibre to rise to the dignity of his national field, but keeps on boosting for the village of Edmonton.

The Lethbridge 'News,' of the 25th of May, 1905, says:

This is not a question of capitals, nor axes, nor pulls, but it is simply a question of justice. Every man who knows anything about Alberta, knows that an injustice has been done the south, and whether or not we resent it depends largely upon whether or not we are men.

That does not come from Calgary; that comes from Lethbridge. Again, the Macleod 'Gazette,' of the 11th of May, 1905, says:

That the division of Alberta constituencies is unfair cannot be denied, and is being protested against by both Liberals and Conservatives alike.

An analysis of the schedule is difficult until the full report comes in. It covers sixteen pages, and evidently it is a very elaborate scheme for the practical disfranchisement of a majority of the citizens of Alberta.

We can see no excuse for this division unless the desire is to disfranchise the south and place the seat of government in the midst of an anti-Protestant and foreign element.

Here is an article from the 'Rocky Mountain Echo,' of Pincher Creek, another district entirely apart from Calgary and from its influence:

In another column will be found the schedule of the local electoral districts for the province of Alberta that is to be submitted to the House at Ottawa and incorporated in the Autonomy Bill. Those who read it, whether Liberal or Conservative, will be surprised and indignant at the manner in which the divisions have been made, and will be disgusted at the gerrymander by which our new province is forced to begin its career, with its citizens unfairly and unequally represented.

It is indeed a disgraceful thing, disgraceful both to the men who made the divisions, and the country, and the people that allow such wrongs to be perpetrated.

Then the 'Echo' proceeds to read the Calgary 'Herald,' the Conservative paper, a lecture for its attitude on the school question, showing again that it is out of the mouths of the government's own friends that these strong words proceed. Here again is something from the Calgary 'Albertan,' of May 18, 1905, referring to the town of Olds:

The meeting very strongly protested against the division as at present proposed, and moved that a committee of two Liberals and two Conservatives be appointed to draw up a resolution to that effect, one copy to be sent to the Minister of the Interior and to our member at Ottawa.

So I might go on; but I think I have read enough to show the spirit in which this schedule has been received by the people of southern Alberta. I have quoted newspapers from Medicine Hat on the east to Pincher Creek on the west, distant from one another 200 miles; and from Raymond on the south to Red Deer on the north, about 150 miles apart. There is a territory 30,000 miles in extent, with a population of probably 130,000, and in that whole territory, which comprises the half of Alberta, discontent prevails to-day over the government schedule which lies on the table. I have just one more word to say. I think that I have shown that when the government put into the Bill these words, 'having due regard to the distribution of population and existing local divisions,' they put in something that was not true. There has not been due regard paid to population, and existing local divisions have been absolutely ignored. And the dangerous part of it is that the people of Alberta know and deeply feel the injustice that is being placed on the southern half of the population.

Now, I want to submit this question to this House in, as near as I can, an absolutely impartial spirit. You are about to create a new province; you are about to give to that new province a legislature which will be called upon to enact laws for the government of that province. That legislature, when it first meets, will undoubtedly have much important business which will require its immediate attention. If that legislature is elected under that schedule, do you suppose that it will be able to give to that business its closest attention? If the legislature is elected on that schedule, it will be composed of men a large majority of whom at least will be burning with resentment at the wrong done to them, and will endeavour to right that wrong. Is it wise for this House to launch the new province under such auspices as that? Is it wise to throw apples of discord into the midst of this new legislative body, and practically damn it at the commencement of its career with a quarrel which it will take years to settle? Why does the government endeavour to so juggle the cards that the north will have an advantage over the south in the selection of the capital? Why does it put a portion of the people under a sense of injustice, determined on revenge and upon getting even if they can? Are these beneficent auspices under which to launch these new provinces? It would seem as though this new parliament had already all the trouble that it would care for in connection with these Autonomy Bills. It would appear as though some of the questions in connection with them have already been settled with a great deal of difficulty. Then why do we gratuitously undertake to bring in and impose upon this new legislature a question which will certainly lead to trouble in the future? It seems to me that the government should carefully consider all the facts and figures which have been laid before them by this side of the House. I do not believe that the Prime Minister appreciates the real situation as the figures reveal it, and I have great hopes that when the government understand what is being done, they will consent to the naming of an impartial commission, which will certainly be the most satisfactory method of dealing with this matter.

Mr. HAGGART. I do not intend to take part in the debate at this late hour. I merely wish to point out that this clause is the most peculiar one that I have ever seen. I do not see the Minister of Justice here. Perhaps the First Minister will explain it :

> Until the said legislature otherwise provides, the legislative assembly shall be composed of twenty-five members, to be elected to represent the electoral divisions defined in schedule 'B' to this Act, having due regard to the distribution of population and existing local divisions.

Why is this limitation inserted, 'having due regard to the distribution of population and existing local divisions'? Do you intend to give the courts the power to say whether this is done or not? You have an enacting clause and a schedule which provides for the delimitation of the boundaries of the different constituencies, and then you add these words as if you were not sure that your schedule was all right.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not for my part see any necessity for these words. They are simply a statement of what we are doing. I look on the words as surplusage. I contend that this schedule is prepared with due regard to the distribution of population and existing local divisions.

Mr. BARKER. It is a good sentence misplaced.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Only it is not appreciated in the south, but is appreciated in the north.

QUESTIONS.

CLASSIFICATION OF DAIRY PRODUCTS FOR EXPORTATION.

Mr. DESJARDINS asked :

1. Has the government received from any dairy association a request for the classification of dairy products, for exportation ?
2. If not, is it the intention of the government to bring in, during this session or the next session, a Bill for the obligatory classification of dairy products, and of butter and cheese especially ?
3. Will the government institute a classification of three kinds instead of two ?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture) :

1. No.
2. No.
3. At a conference of the dairy instructors and experts held under the auspices of the dairying division of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, in November of 1903, the following resolution in favour of three grades of butter and cheese was passed :

> Whereas cheese and butter are now almost universally classed as 'finest' and 'under finest' when purchased from the factories, making practically only two grades, be it resolved that it would tend to improve the quality of both products if there were at least three grades recognized.

Since then Mr. Ruddick, Dairy Commissioner, has devoted a great deal of time to this matter, and quite recently has formulated a new classification and standards of quality to be observed by the official referee of butter and cheese at Montreal in giving his certificates as to the quality of cheese and creamery butter which he is asked to examine. This new classification embraces three grades for cheese and three grades for creamery butter, namely, 1st grade, 2nd grade and 3rd grade. The Dairy Commissioner has no power to enforce this new clasification, except in so far as it applies to the work of the official referee ; but it has already been adopted by a number of the cheese and butter boards ; and it is hoped that in time all the selling of cheese and butter will be done on the basis of this classification.

BONUS FOR FARMER IMMIGRANTS.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Does the government pay any bonus for farmer immigrants to this country ?
2. To whom is said bonus paid, and what is the amount paid ?
3. How much has been paid under the above head during the past year ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. Yes.

2. In the United States the department has seventy-six agents who are paid commissions on all settlers of the agricultural class who are induced by them to settle in western Canada. The commission is as follows :

(a) $3 for each man, $2 for each woman and $1 for each child.

(b) In Great Britain the bonus or commission is $1.75 for each adult of the agricultural or domestic servant class and half this amount for children of 12 and under ; this bonus is paid to the booking agents of the several steamship lines.

(c) A commission of $2 is paid on children emigrated to Canada by philanthropic societies.

(d) A commission of £1 is paid to the North Atlantic Trading Company of Amsterdam, Holland, on all emigrants of the agricultural class emigration from certain countries on the continent.

3. The amounts paid during the last fiscal year for bonuses to immigrants coming to Canada was as follows :

Bonuses on immigrants from United States	$14,428 25
Bonuses to steamship agents and sub-agents and immigration societies on British immigrants	43,220 33
Bonuses on Icelanders	2,104 81
Bonuses on domestic servants	1,088 00
Bonuses on immigrants from Great Britain at $2 each	246 00
Bonuses to philanthropic societies on children from Great Britain	2,608 01
Bonuses on immigrants from continent of Europe	35,316 66
Total	99,012 35

Mr. URIAH WILSON—by Mr. Monk—asked :

1. Does the government pay any bonus to transportation companies or booking agents or immigration agents for immigrants coming to Canada ?
2. How much does the government so pay either for men, women or children ?
3. What is the total amount so paid during the past year ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior). The answer is the same as that just given to the question of the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk).

INDIAN RESERVES AT DONCASTER, COUNTY OF TERREBONNE.

Mr. DESJARDINS—by Mr. Demers—asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to abolish the Indian reserve at Doncaster, in the county of Terrebonne ?
2. If so, will the government, before long, for the purchase of the said reserve, enter into correspondence with the different chiefs of the Indian tribes, who are the owners of those lands ?

Hon. FRANK OLIVER (Minister of the Interior) :

1. No. The government cannot abolish the reserve without the consent of the Indians, who have declined to surrender.

2. Covered by answer to first question.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. D. W. BOLE (Winnipeg). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to correct a statement made by the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) on Monday last. I regret that the hon. gentleman is not in his place ; but, as I am leaving the city to-day. I shall not have another opportunity of making my statement. I would also like to say that I was present when the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) was delivering his speech, but did not put the interpretation on his words that I find in 'Hansard.' I refer to 'Hansard,' page 7932 :

Mr. Chaffey, on April 15, was determined to have his rights, and charged fraud and worse, but on the 25th Mr. Bole intervened and asked that proceedings be stayed until he could come to Ottawa. He then, being in Winnipeg on May 22, after negotiations and correspondence, brings down an assignment of all of Chaffey's rights, claims and interest to Macdonald.

I wish to say that I brought no assignment ; I entered into no negotiations whatever with regard to a settlement between the parties, and had nothing to do with a settlement between the parties. As the minister has promised an investigation, I will not say anything with regard to the merits of the case.

CONDITION OF COMMONS CHAMBER.

Mr. GEORGE TAYLOR (Leeds). I would like to ask the Acting Minister of Public Works if it is not possible to get some more fresh air into this chamber. I see that the temperature here is about 75. In rooms 16 and 6 it is about 65 degrees or 10 degrees more here than in any other room in the House. It ought to be possible to take off sections of these windows and let them remain that way. In any event some plan should be acted upon in order to get more fresh air into this chamber for at present the heat is simply unendurable.

Mr. FIELDING. I will call the attention of the minister to my hon. friend's suggestion. He will be here in a day or two, and then everything will be right.

MONTREAL HIGHLAND CADET CORPS.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). I would like to ask my hon. friend the Minister of Militia if he intends doing anything for the Highland Cadet corps of Montreal. The matter calls for no discussion, but I shall read to the House a portion of a letter sent to me in connection with this matter :

Now the militia estimates are before the House, I think it advisable to draw your attention to the fact that that fine little corps the Highland Cadets of this city are likely to disband, through want of support and encouragement. Allow me to give you a brief outline of their career, in as few words as possible, for your information :

(a) The corps was organized in 1889 by Major Fred. Lydon—then and for some years afterwards adjutant of the 5th Royal Scots—under whom they have ever since been and are to-day.

(b) They hold the Duke of Connaught's flag, having won it on June 5th, 1897, in competition with the Mount St. Louis Cadet corps.

(c) They have never had government assistance, and their work, as you can well understand has been uphill work in every sense of the word, and I think Major Lydon deserves the highest credit for keeping the corps up to the great efficiency it is in to-day in face of strong obstacles.

(d) The corps has at various times been on a visit, at its own expense, to Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Ogdensburg, New York, Portland, Maine, and other places.

(e) I myself, representing the Montreal 'Herald' as special correspondent, accompanied them to Portland, Maine, in 1903, and can bear testimony to their great efficiency and good behaviour there and to the grand reception given them during their three days stay in that city.

(f) They have been inspected by various Governor Generals, also by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, from whom they got great praise, as well as by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, when here as Duke of Cornwall, &c., to whom they acted as a guard of honour.

In face of all this and the fact that this little corps has supplied upwards of 600 recruits in all to city corps, besides a large number—altogether out of proportion to the size of the corps—to the South African campaign a few years back, Major Lydon has expended some $2,000 out of his own pocket to keep up his corps. Is this right let me ask you ? Besides they have had private subscriptions, which alone have helped to partially sustain the corps, from Lord Strathcona, the late Colin McArthur and others. Now they contemplate a trip to New York city on 30th June to spend Dominion Day and 4th of July, and go in their shabby uniforms, and upon their return will disband at once unless they get some assistance from government or elsewhere, and as you are a Montrealer and must know the corps, that must plead for me in asking you to get a promise from the Minister of Militia in the House that something will be done—and done quickly—to keep up and help this fine little corps to keep alive. It would be a shame and disgrace should they be allowed to die through want of the necessary assistance. In a speech at the opening of the headquarters of the First Cadet Battalion of the Royal Fusiliers last week, the Prince of Wales stated :

That during his visit to the colonies he found the cadet movement further advanced than in this country (England). He favoured it, not with a view of militarizing the population, but to give training, discipline and to make those who took part in it of use should their services ever be needed.

Lord Roberts on Empire Day made a speech in which he said :

I am perfectly satisfied that it is essential for this country (England) that every able-bodied man should be able to use a rifle. If you would teach men how to shoot, you must begin with the boys. For that reason we want rifle clubs in all the schools, and assistance can be given to the schools by neighbouring rifle clubs allowing them the use of their ranges.

I am sure two such high authorities are sufficient to make the government decide to sustain this grand little corps, the Highland Cadets, and I am sure your attention having been drawn to the state of coma they are in, I can, as an old militia officer of many years standing, claim your all-powerful help in striving to get the necessary help for this corps.

It is unnecessary for me to add anything to this communication except to say that I cordially trust my hon. friend the Minister of Militia will see that the request is given his most favourable attention.

Sir FREDERICK BORDEN. In reply I may say that this matter has already been brought to my attention, and that I have had some correspondence with citizens of Montreal and particularly Major Lydon himself with regard to it. Not long ago the secretary of the department wrote a letter in which he said :

The minister regrets he is unable to consider the claims of the Highland Cadet corps for assistance, apart from the claims of other cadet corps. The whole question of assistance will be considered by the minister and the Militia Council at an early date.

In the Militia Act of last year there are these clauses referring to cadet corps :

Section 65. The minister may—

(a) Authorize boys over 12 years of age, who are attending school, to be formed into school cadet corps ;

(b) Authorize boys over 14 years of age and under 18 years of age, to be formed into senior cadet corps ;

(c) Authorize senior cadet corps, or any portion thereof, to be attached to any portion of the active militia for the purposes of drill and training.

Section 66. All cadet corps shall be subject to the authority and under the orders of the district officer commanding.

Section 67. Cadet corps shall be drilled and trained as prescribed, and may be furnished with arms, ammunition and equipment, under conditions prescribed.

So that the powers of the department are limited under the Act, and if any special treatment is to be accorded to the cadets mentioned it would be necessary to take a special vote. It would be more convenient to thresh out this question when the militia estimates are up, and I shall then have a statement to make with reference to it. I may say however that the department recognizes the very valuable work which this and other cadet corps have done for the militia in Canada.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the hon. minister give us then the amount of ammunition supplied the different cadet corps as well?

Mr. T. S. SPROULE. Having had an opportunity twice of seeing the Montreal Cadet corps when they were in Ottawa, and as most of them were stationed at the hotel where I was residing, I could not help but notice the splendid physique of the boys and the manly, dignified, courteous and intelligent way in which they conducted themselves when here, as well as the soldierly appearance they presented. I may say the same of the officers who had control over it. I thought they were the most splendid lot of boys I ever saw, and boys who will no doubt give a good account of themselves in the future. Admiring them as much as I do, I would like to have the Minister of Militia if possible make an exception in favour of this corps and give them the assistance required to prevent their being dissolved. In this he would be doing a good thing for the country, and not only reflect credit on himself but also on that splendid corps which we should take every means to keep alive.

Mr. A. ZIMMERMAN. The order passed by the Dominion government has been taken advantage of in the province of Ontario to a very great extent. In the city of Hamilton we have an exceedingly fine cadet corps which has been attached to the 13th regiment. The Ontario government have contributed $150 towards their uniforms and the Dominion government have supplied them with rifles. In so far as their drill is concerned I question whether there is a regiment in Canada that can drill any better than these boys can. They are a fine manly lot of boys and they will make first-class officers for the militia. The measure attaching these cadet corps to the regiments is one of the wisest that the department has passed. It has given great encouragement to the boys and we take great pride in them. I may say I was in Toronto some time ago——

Mr. SPEAKER. There is really no motion before the House.

Mr. A. ZIMMERMAN. I may say I was in Toronto some few days ago and I saw some 6,000 cadets turn out. They really made a magnificent showing and I believe that in the near future the measure attaching our cadet corps to the regular militia is going to improve our militia to a tremendous extent.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. One great advantage in perpetuating——

Sir F. W. BORDEN.

Mr. SPEAKER. If hon. members desire to prolong the discussion there will have to be something before the House.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I am speaking on the Orders of the Day.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Do not discuss it but call attention to it.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I was going to speak of the Highland cadet corps in Montreal and I will conclude with a motion. The Highland Cadet corps is an historic institution in Montreal and if the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence could see his way clear to encourage it in any way it would be an advantage to the force generally. I would be sorry to see that corps allowed to go down. Undoubtedly the expense of a corps of this kind is very abnormal because of the uniform. It is largely sustained by subscriptions and I think the hon. minister should take some steps to bring this senior cadet corps into a more active existence than it has at the present time by giving it the support of the department. This corps furnishes a great many men to the regiments in Montreal, especially the Royal Scots, and a very large number of the men in the Royal Scots who enlisted to go to South Africa were boys who had been trained in this Highland cadet corps. I wish to add my testimony to the value of this corps. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Motion negatived.

TRADE RELATIONS WITH JAPAN.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) if he has forgotten to bring down the treaty in connection with Japan. I noticed that in a late communication from our agent in Japan he cites special instances of where products from Canada are charged two and three times as much duty and sometimes more than those from other countries, thus making it absolutely impossible, it would seem, to carry on trade in these products with Japan. He points out very strongly how detrimental it is to Canadian trade. I spoke of the difficulty about three weeks ago and the hon. minister said that he would bring down the treaty or make a statement as to the way and in what particulars it was considered that the adoption or adherence to the treaty by Canada would be prejudicial. Here are actual prejudicial effects in commerce. What are the supposed difficulties or prospective troubles we may anticipate providing we do adhere to the treaty?

Mr. FIELDING. My hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) who has a more intimate personal acquaintance with that question has been giving the matter attention and will be able to make a statement on the subject, or he will bring down the papers at an early day. He has been looking into the matter since the former discussion.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT IN THE NORTHWEST.

House in committee on Bill (No. 69) to establish and provide for the government of the province of Alberta.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

On section 12,—distribution of seats—

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, do I understand that there is to be no reply at all to the statements which were made by members last night? Has the government concluded to keep silence?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I understood, Mr. Chairman, that we adjourned yesterday because of the request of the hon. member for Lanark (Mr. Haggart) who intimated that several hon. gentlemen intended to speak upon the question.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We waited to see what further arguments would be advanced before making a reply.

Mr. FOSTER. Does my right hon. friend think nothing has been brought up by my two hon. friends who spoke yesterday afternoon, my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) and my hon. friend from Montreal, St. Antoine (Mr. Ames), which requires an answer?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think that anything that has been brought up can be met very successfully, but we thought that more arguments were coming from the other side and that we would wait and hear these arguments.

Mr. FOSTER. With all deference to my right hon. friend, I think it would tax himself and perhaps some of his supporters to answer what has already been given, and it might make it altogether too burdensome if others were to speak on this matter before the arguments which have already been advanced have been answered.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not agree with my hon. friend on that. I do not think any argument has been advanced which will require any great effort to answer.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. It was not my privilege to hear the very eloquent explanations which appear to have been given yesterday, but I have glanced over 'Hansard' and I fail to find that very lucid explanation that one would naturally expect in relation to the establishment of Peace River and Athabaska. I cannot say that I have been convinced by anything that was brought forward in the House yesterday.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We do not expect to be able to do that.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. I cannot say that I think my right hon. friend the Prime Minister is convinced and I am sure my hon. friend the Minister of Justice is not convinced by the arguments advanced in reference to Peace River and Athabaska. I would be very pleased, if the hon. Minister of the Interior has any additional data, to hear him.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, if there is none I have other questions to ask. In the first place, there were three different statements given as to the population of Athabaska and Peace River. Although this is a small matter and in the opinion of my right hon. friend is not worth while taking notice of probably, yet I think that when two ministers of the Crown and two lay members of the House make statements in reference to the population all which differ from each other we ought to have an authoritative statement. Is the minister able to give us an authoritative statement as to the white, the half-breed and the Indian population of the Peace river?

Mr. OLIVER. I expect that information from the Census Department shortly and I will present it to the House.

Mr. FOSTER. That is an instructive comment. This Bill has been before the House for two or three months, and when we come to ask the most elementary question with reference to two constituencies, the minister tells us that up to the present time he has not the information.

Mr. OLIVER. I said no such thing. Yesterday I gave the information from the Census Bureau with regard to this matter; the hon. gentleman questioned the information I gave; I sent it to the Census Department to have it verified, and as soon as I get the benefit of the verification he will have it.

Mr. FOSTER. Is the House to be delayed now because the minister has not been diligent enough to get the information which presumably he could get in an hour's time if he asked for it?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) is trying to magnify a very simple little difficulty. Yesterday the population of Athabaska was given as follows: Peace River, 1,724; Athabaska, 1,676.

Mr. FOSTER. What are those?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. As I understood whites and half-breeds, exclusive of Indians. These figures were questioned and immediately the Minister of the Interior gave orders to have them verified, as there was a discrepancy between them and the figures quoted by the hon. member for Argenteuil (Mr. Perley). It has not been possible to have the information returned yet.

Is there anything unusual in that or is there any cause for an insinuation ? It happens often that a discrepancy in figures can be explained, and this explanation will probably be had in a few minutes.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. In the statement annexed to the schedule which was sent to the leader of the opposition there is the following foot note :

Total population of census of 1901 in the two following constituencies, part of the district of Athabaska : Peace River, 800 ; Athabaska, 1,430.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There is nothing very extraordinary in that. Probably these are the figures in 1901. I gave the figures which were furnished to me, and I assume them to be the population to-day.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the right hon. gentleman say the figures he gave are the population to-day or the population of the census ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I thought it was the population of the census but probably I am in error.

Mr. FOSTER. Then, after the quotation from the document, my right hon. friend has to come down from his high horse and to acknowledge now that what he told the House yesterday was not a fact. Yesterday he said that the figures 1,724 and 1,676 respectively, was the population at present, but now he revises himself and gives adhesion to the figures which are written down and to which, of course, he must adhere.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. What did I say yesterday ?

Mr. FOSTER. Yesterday the impression the right hon. gentleman gave was that these were the populations at the present time.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. What did I say to-day which is not according to that?

Mr. FOSTER. I understood my hon. friend (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) to say that the figures which he read were the populations as given in the foot note sent over to the leader of the opposition.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. From the census ? Is that any contradiction of what I say to-day?

Mr. FOSTER. Were the figures which the right hon. gentleman gave yesterday the actual population ? How does he know the actual population to-day, and what means were taken to get it ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I said my impression was that the figures were for the population at present. I cannot carry these things in my mind from day to day; I received the information some time ago from the Census Department, and I sent it to the hon. the leader of the opposition. Subsequently other figures were placed in my hand, which I gave yesterday, and my impression is that these figures are the population to-day. As, however, these figures have been challenged, we have taken the precaution to have them verified in the Census Bureau, and as soon as the figures come here I will give the exact information.

Mr. FOSTER. So that after three months and some days, we may possibly now get at one of the most elementary sources of information necessary for discussing the basis of redistribution. Yesterday the Minister of the Interior promised to bring down his statement of populations from the Census Department. The populations he gave yesterday were, he said, prepared in the Census Department and signed and sent to him with a map, which he promised to bring down. Is that ready ?

Mr. OLIVER. I did not understand the question in that way, and I regret that I have not given that order, but I will give it.

Mr. FOSTER. That is another sample of Ethelred the Unready. I quote from 'Hansard' :

Mr. OLIVER. A map was prepared showing the local constituencies and the census department was asked to take that map, compare it with the returns and give us the result, the number of people in each constituency.

Mr. FOSTER. And the minister has that statement from the census department ?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Would the minister bring that down as one of the items ?

Mr. OLIVER. I will bring it.

Of course, twenty-four hours is not long, but after three months and a half and nearing the end of the session, twenty-four hours might have been sufficient to get that statement into the hands of the minister.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think I understand my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) now. There is the map there on the table, and he apparently is not satisfied with the information which he received from the department, but wants to have the identical document signed by the census officer.

Mr. FOSTER. Exactly.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Exactly; I understand what he means now.

Mr. FOSTER. We should have the details.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Oh, no; there is more than that; the hon. gentleman must not take refuge in that; he wants to compare whether or not the figures are correct.

Mr. FOSTER. And there is no better reason for that than these tergiversations we have had an example of to-day and yesterday.

Mr. INGRAM. I listened very carefully to the statement made yesterday by the First Minister as well as to the statement made by the Minister of the Interior. I have also listened to the statements made by the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) and the hon. member for Montreal (Mr. Ames), and I am bound to say that no hon. gentleman can read the statements of those four hon. gentlemen and come to any other conclusion than that the figures given on the two sides are as far apart as Australia is from Canada. And yet the right hon. First Minister tells us that he wants to listen to other arguments from this side of the House before he answers the arguments advanced yesterday. If the right hon. gentleman wishes to shorten the debate on this question, the best plan he can adopt is to answer early in the debate the statements made by hon. gentlemen on this side of the House in order that other hon. gentlemen may not find it necessary to prepare themselves to prolong the debate. Surely the government ought to be ready to point out to the opposition in what respect the statements made by the hon. member for Calgary and the hon. member for St. Antoine are wrong. That can be done if the government is right; but any one reading the statements of the four hon. gentlemen who spoke cannot come to any other conclusion than that they derive their information from entirely different sources; therefore it is necessary that some explanation should be made by the government. This is an important question; and the idea of the government coming down with these two important measures, and having only the meagre statements made by the right hon. the First Minister and the hon. Minister of the Interior, is something I have not noticed in this House before on a serious question of this kind. In the case of our general distribution, we had more satisfaction than this. We are treated in a contemptible manner by the government on this question, and I am surprised at the course taken by the right hon. the First Minister on this occasion.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The surprise of my hon. friend from East Elgin (Mr. Ingram), who is generally fair, is my own surprise. I am very much astonished at the surprise he manifests. When he says that there is a serious discrepancy between the figures furnished by the government and those furnished by my hon. friend from St. Antoine, I take direct issue with him. I say there is no serious difference at all between the figures furnished to the House by myself and my colleague of the Interior and those furnished by the hon. member for Calgary and the hon. member for St. Antoine. This is a very plain statement; let us verify it. I said yesterday that we based our information upon the number of votes recorded at the last Dominion election, the number of votes registered for the same, and the figures of population in the census of 1901. These were three, not all, of the sources of information upon which we proceeded. The number of votes recorded, as I obtained it from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, was 20,962. These figures were not disputed. According to the statement given to me by my hon. friend from Calgary, for which I acknowledge his courtesy, the number of votes recorded in the last election in the different constituencies of Alberta, with the exception of Peace River and Athabaska, is put at 20,700, a difference of 262. Is there any very serious discrepancy there? With regard to the number of votes registered in those constituencies, the figure I gave was 29,950, while the figure given to me by my hon. friend from Calgary was 30,077, a difference of 127. The addition in the one case was made by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery from the books of the votation furnished to him; the same books were furnished to the hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House, and they made their own addition; yet the results correspond, with only the small discrepancies I have mentioned. Another source of information is the population according to the census of 1901. I gave the population for these various constituencies at 69,441. Up to the present moment I have not seen these figures challenged. Therefore, I say there is no difference or dispute as to the figures on which we base our division. I shall have further remarks to make on this subject, but for the moment I simply call the attention of my hon. friend from East Elgin to the fact that practically there is no difference between the figures given on one side and on the other.

Mr. INGRAM. My right hon. friend has been good enough to state the difference between the figures given by himself of the number of votes polled and the figures given by my hon. friend from Calgary. But the figures in regard to the number of post offices, the number of homestead entries and the number of school districts, have not yet been explained.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I want to keep to the discrepancy which my hon. friend alleged. He said we had given false information, which had been disputed. I said we had not. There is no discrepancy whatever. There are other sources of information. We proceeded to make up our minds also on the basis of the number of school districts, the number of post offices and the number of improvement districts. I have not seen the statements or the accuracy of the figures disputed; different conclusions have been drawn from them, that may be and I will come to discuss that directly. At the present moment I want to say—and I want this fact clearly put before the House—that so far as the figures brought down are concerned, there has been no dispute between the members on the two sides of the House. We have drawn conclusions from different sources. For instance, I said yesterday and repeat to-day one source of information which we took in order to arrive at the conclusion to which we arrived, was the number of post offices and the number of school-houses. The reliability of such information was questioned ; it was claimed that it did not give a fair, accurate statement of the population, and as another source of information the member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) quoted figures of the trade of the north and south and also the number of chartered banks which had offices in the north and south. From such sources of information he was led to his own conclusion, but I repeat again that so far as the information we have given to the House is concerned, it has not been disputed.

Mr. INGRAM. The right hon. gentleman draws his conclusions from the number of votes polled. The Minister of the Interior claimed that that is a proper source from which to make the delimitation. Evidently that view is supported by the First Minister. The statement made by the member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) is that owing to certain difficulties amongst the ranchers in the southern part of Alberta at the time of the general election of November 3, 1904, many men engaged in ranching were obliged by reason of an order issued by the government to absent themselves from the polling divisions at which they would have a right to vote and by reason of this thus absenting themselves the number of votes polled in the south was less than it ought to have been or otherwise would have been, had it not been for the order issued by the government. But, on the other hand, in the north we have the statement made that more votes were polled than were on the voters' lists. Therefore the northern part of Alberta derives a greater benefit from calculating from the number of votes polled, by reason of the fact that more ballots found their way into the boxes than there were names on the voters' lists in the north while the percentage of votes cast in relation to the number on the list in the south was less than it should be, as I have said by reason of the men having to be absent to obey the order of the government or lose their cattle. Is that a correct statement of fact? If it is then if you take the number of votes polled you are not doing a proper thing for the south as against the north. That is unfair if that statement is true and I have not heard it contradicted.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not dispute the statements which the hon. member has made ; I know nothing about it. There would be something in the argument if the source of information and the only basis which we had before us in coming to the conclusion had been the recorded vote. When my hon. friend says there have been more votes cast than were on the lists that may be but there is nothing illegal in that.

Mr. INGRAM. It is true all the same.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. These men were entitled to vote all the same ; it is perfectly lawful, and we therefore took the number of votes recorded. It may be that in the south as alleged some ranchers did not record their votes. That could not be a large number, I do not know the reason but I am prepared to look into the question from a broader point of view than that. It seems to me that is a small way of looking at it. I am willing to give to the hon. gentleman the benefit of everything there is in those figures which I have quoted. I have taken these figures and they tell against us in some instances and against the hon. gentleman in some instances ; we have to take them as they are and to come to the best conclusion with such information as we have. I stated yesterday at the opening of the discussion that we took as the basis of the distribution which we made, the condition of things existing at the present time, the number of seats assigned to the province of Alberta in the present legislature of the Territory which amounts to 16. First of all we had to increase that by 10, we had to give to Alberta 10 more seats than there are to-day in the legislature of the Northwest Territories within the limits of Alberta. How are we to come to that conclusion ? We come to that conclusion upon information derived from three sources which we submit to the House to be challenged. We take first the number of votes recorded. We do not say to the House that this is the only thing we should take into consideration ; we say that is one thing which ought to be taken into consideration but not alone. We take next the number of votes registered ; we do not say that is the only thing to be taken, that is only one of many things on which we should form our judgment. Then we take the census of 1901. That is the best thing of all. If we had a census for 1905 we would not have to consider the number of recorded votes nor the number of registered votes, nor the number of post offices, school districts or improvement districts ; we would take only the census for 1905. But we have no census of 1905 and therefore we have to make up our minds as to what is the actual population at the present time. We know that the population at the present time is double what it was in 1901, and we have to make our calculation accordingly. But though the population has doubled, I think it is only a fair suggestion that we must find a wealth of information in the census of 1901. We say moreover that we think this is something to go on, not the number of post offices, school districts and improvement districts. I will try to deal with the question as fairly as I can and give to the hon. gentlemen the benefit of these figures wherever they tell in their favour, and I shall ask them to give us the benefit whenever they tell on our side. I followed the speech of my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) with great attention yesterday. He made a very earnest speech from his point of view, but when we have simmered the underlying thought of the speech of more than two hours which he made yesterday—and if I say two hours it is not by way of reproach ; he had a task to perform on behalf of his constituents, and I do not blame him, quite the contrary—but the underlying thought which you find in every line, every word and every syllable of that speech is that this objection is taken to the distribution which we have placed upon the table of the House from one point of view only ; not because the constituencies are unfair towards each other, not because there is an unfair advantage given to one over the other, but simply because there is not in the south the number of seats which ought to go to the south. That is my hon. friend's point.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Hear, hear.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I see I have properly interpreted it. My hon. friend has taken the division of Red Deer, township 38, as the point of division between the north and south. There are 23 divisions in old Alberta according to our new plan of distribution. Eleven are north of Red Deer, and 11 are south of Red Deer, and the point my hon. friend has made was that there should be 15 south of Red Deer and 10 north of Red Deer, that is including Red Deer. Let us see whether there is anything to justify that or not. First of all I am very, very sorry that in a matter of this kind it should be reduced simply to a point of argument whether or not the seats should be put in the north or the south. For my own part I discard all that ; I do not consider whether they are to be in the north or the south ; they are to be placed wherever the population warrants it. That is the only argument, I think.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Is that accepted ? I am more than delighted to hear it is accepted, and if it is there should be no more discussion.

Mr. LAKE. I understand the minister to mean that there should be a fair distribution of population between the different seats ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That is what I mean.

Mr. LAKE. How much margin would the Prime Minister allow ? There must be always a certain margin, would he say 5 per cent or 10 per cent.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not know what my hon. friend means by 10 per cent. I am willing that he should take all the comfort he can out of the figures I am going to place before him. He wants the division between the north and the south—apparently a sort of Mason and Dixon's line, in the Northwest.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) was the first to suggest the north and south division by proposing township 38 as the dividing line.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I believe it was neither the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) nor my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) who first suggested that division. It was suggested, if I may say so, from other quarters. Some time ago, when the question of the selection of the capital was brought to my attention, I was asked to take Red Deer, as a point midway between north and south. This is an idea that is running in the minds of my hon. friend and others. He is but re-echoing that which is in other minds. But, for my part, I am sorry that any matter of so great moment should be looked at in so narrow a way. Again I repeat, the divisions should be as warranted by population.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Very good. Now, let us look at the figures. Take first the number of votes recorded in the eleven constituencies south of Red Deer and in the other constituencies north of Red Deer. On this point there is no serious discrepancy in the figures as given to me.

Mr. INGRAM. How about Athabaska and Peace River ? How do they come in ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will come to that—I am speaking now of the old constituencies. The eleven constituencies south of Red Deer are : Cardston, Lethbridge, Macleod, Pincher, Gleichen, Calgary, Rosebud, High River, Banff, Innisfail and Medicine Hat. The number of votes recorded in these constituencies in the last Dominion election numbered 10,566, or an average of about 960 votes to each electoral division. The eleven constituencies north of Red Deer are the following : Vermilion, Lacombe, Ponoka, Wetaskiwin, Leduc, Strathcona, Stony Plain, and Edmonton. In these constituencies the number of votes recorded was 9,553. This is almost 1,000 less than in the other group and makes an average of about 867 votes for each constituency, or almost 100 less. So, I give that at once to my hon. friend (Mr. Lake). Now, when we take the number of registered votes we find in the eleven divisions south of Red Deer there were 15,895 registered votes, an average of 1,444 for each constituency. In the constituency north of Red Deer, the number of votes registered was 12,863, or an average of 11,696. The total population of the eleven constituencies south of Red Deer, according to the census of 1901 was 31,034, an average of 2,821 for each constituency. The eleven constituencies north of Red Deer had a population of 36,398, an average of 3,308—in that respect a decided advantage to the north. So, it will be seen that, while on the votes polled, the advantage is, as I have stated, in favour of the south, when you come to the population which, after all, is the great test, the advantage is with the north.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Does that include Indians ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not know. But the Indians would be either included or excluded in both cases, so that, for purposes of comparison, there would be no advantage either way. Now, there are more post offices in the north than in the south. According to the figures placed in my hands there were 140 post offices in the north and 125 in the south, making a difference of 15. I may be told that this is not material to the issue. I do not pretend that it is absolutely material, but it should be given its due weight.

Mr. INGRAM. The Prime Minister's figures with regard to the post offices do not agree with those of the Minister of the Interior.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to be sure about those post offices. Do I understand that the number south of Red Deer is 140 ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will give the figures exactly as I have them. In the district of Edmonton there are 60 post offices and in Strathcona of 95—a total of 155. In the district of Calgary there are 54, in the district of Alberta 46, Medicine Hat 10—a total of 110. Taking 15 from Strathcona and adding them to the south, I get 140 for the north and 125 for the south.

Mr. FOSTER. Either the right hon. gentleman confuses the north and south or I do.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I shall not discuss that point with my hon. friend, but will leave it to the Minister of the Interior. The object we had in mind was this. Since we must have a division north and south, is there a greater population in the former than in the latter ? I say that all the facts that I have given go to show that there is more in the north, except the recorded and the registered votes. As to these, I admit the advantage is with the other side, but every other source of information goes to show that there are more people in the north. Let me give further information upon that point. I shall take the statistics which have been given here on another subject. My hon. friend yesterday took the trade of certain sections and compared the trade of the north with that of the south. Let me compare the agricultural products of the two. In 1903 the wheat produced in the north was 675,576 bushels and in the south 533,000 bushels ; oats, 3,200,000 bushels in the north and in the south 1,921,000 bushels ; barley, 746,000 bushels in the north and in the south 325,000 bushels. This shows a decided preponderance of agricultural products in the north.

Mr. COCHRANE. How does the production of cattle compare in the two ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I thought my hon. friend would put this question and that his own friends would be sorry. The number does not compare at all ; it is altogether in favour of the south, because the south is better adapted to the production of cattle and not so well adapted for the production of cereals and other agricultural products. If my hon. friend wants to give votes to cattle, let him do so ; but if he wants to give votes to men, he will have to give the preponderance to the north. Wherever you find a great many cattle, you do not find many men. The south is peculiarly a ranching and grazing country, and consequently has more cattle and less population than the north. I do not take the cattle into account, because they are not a fair indication of the population, whereas agricultural products are. All these things go to show that there are more people in the north than in the south.

Mr. HERRON. What year is the right hon. gentleman giving the statistics for ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. 1903.

Mr. HERRON. Have you the yield per acre ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am sorry to say I have not.

Mr. HERRON. I have it here.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If there is an argument in the yield per acre, my hon. friend will have all the benefit he can find in it. I now come to another point put by the hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram), the point with regard to the two constituencies in the north. There is a small population in the north, I admit ; but are they to be represented or not ? We were told yesterday to annex it to some existing constituency. But are you to annex to constituencies, which are as large as a man can serve, a territory three or four times the size of any constituency in the Northwest ? You must give these people representation. They are British citizens, and have a right to be represented. In fact, the whole thing hedges upon the selection of the capital. If it were not for that, we would not have this discussion at all. If there were in the south a preponderance of numbers so as to discredit the comparison we make between the north and the south, not a word would be said against these men having representation. It has always been the policy in this House to give representation to large districts, even though their population be small and sparse. Take the county of Gaspé, which has been given representation since confederation, even when it had but a small population of fishermen. Take Chicoutimi and Saguenay, which has been given representation since sixty years ago, when it had not a population worth speaking of. Take the very Northwest Territories, which were given representation in 1887 that they ought to have had long before. Were they given representation because of the population they had ? Why, they had a population hardly sufficient to send two representatives to this House, yet they were given four, and properly so, in order that the voice of these distant people should be heard on the floor of this House, their wants made known, and the legislation given them to which they were entitled.

Mr. AMES. The right hon. gentleman has referred to the county of Saguenay. Is it not a fact that when additional territory was annexed to the province of Quebec, that territory was united to the county of Saguenay, although it was almost double its size ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There was this difference, that in that part of the country, which was declared to be a part of the province of Quebec, there is not a soul to be represented.

Mr. AMES. Are there not people all along Hamilton inlet ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not think there are, except Hudson Bay people ; but the hon. gentleman knows that the people in Hamilton inlet are transients who come from Newfoundland, which is not a part of this Dominion.

Mr. AMES. Does the right hon. gentleman say that there is absolutely no population in the eastern half of Athabaska ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I understand there is not. If he can show that there are people in eastern Athabaska as there are in the northwestern part, they should be given representation.

Mr. AMES. According to the statistics given us, the two constituencies that are to be formed in western Athabaska do not take up the entire population of Athabaska, so that there must be some residue in eastern Athabaska. If you are to form a constituency for 300 in Peace River and another 300 in western Athabaska, when you get down to as small a number as that, does not the same reasoning apply to eastern Athabaska ? Why should this part be attached to Alberta and not to the province of Saskatchewan ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Because, according to my information, there are no people represented in eastern Athabaska.

Mr. INGRAM. Who represents Mackenzie and the other territories in this House ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Nobody.

Mr. INGRAM. How do Athabaska and Peace River compare in area with Edmonton as regards representation in this House ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I could not inform my hon. friend off-hand, but I am satisfied they are two or three times the size of the constituency of Edmonton. Does he mean the constituency of Edmonton ?

Mr. INGRAM. Yes, for Dominion purposes.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There is no constituency of Edmonton, except the city of Edmonton.

Mr. INGRAM. I am speaking of the constituency of Edmonton for Dominion purposes.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend from the west will be able to answer that better than I could.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. In regard to your estimate of post offices a considerable portion of the constituencies of Edmonton, Strathcona and Calgary is east of the 4th meridian. Are the post offices east of the 4th meridian included in your calculations ? I understand you mean the electoral districts as they are constituted in this House.

Mr. P. TALBOT. No. I think that calculation was made on the basis of the proposed province of Alberta. The district of Alberta that is represented by my hon. friend (Mr. Herron) contains 46 post offices, Medicine Hat district which is to be added to Alberta, 10, and the Calgary district, 54.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. What do you call the Calgary district ?

Mr. P. TALBOT. The district represented by you.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Calgary, Strathcona and Edmonton district are east of the 4th meridian.

Mr. P. TALBOT. These are only in the proposed province. Edmonton district contains 60 and the Strathcona district contains 95. Then, there are some 15 in the constituency of Strathcona that are south of Red Deer and will consequently have to be added to the south.

Mr. FOSTER. May I ask the right hon. gentleman how the figures which he has read to us to-day are made up ? Are they made up by any department which is responsible for them ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The figures I gave in regard to the votes recorded and in regard to the votes polled I got from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery. The figures in regard to the population are taken from the census of 1901. The other figures which I gave about the grain grown and the post offices were given to me by my hon. friend from Strathcona (Mr. Talbot).

Mr. FOSTER. If my right hon. friend will look at page 8012 of yesterday's 'Hansard' there is an explanation I would like to ask of him. What I am trying to get at is the basis upon which the distribution has been made. Yesterday, in the discussion, the hon. Minister of the Interior was speaking about the basis of this division and he made the remark that the voters' list was not so sure an index in the west as the voters' list in the east would be. There are certain reasons which make it not so good a guide. My right hon. friend said :

I think the basis is as fair as it can be.

Here is the proof of it. This is what I cannot understand and I would like my right hon. friend to explain it. He says :

The population by the census of 1901 was 69,441, or let us say in round numbers 70,000.

I agree to that.

That would give, if you divide the population by twenty-three constituencies, a unit of a little over 3,000.

I agree to that. That is the first fact stated, that 70,000, divided by 23, gives 3,000.

The number of registered votes was 29,950, or let us say in round numbers 30,000. By dividing that number by 23, you would get a unit of about 1,300.

I agree to both of those statements. Thirty thousand divided by 23 gives you 1,300 in round numbers. Then :

The number of votes polled was in round numbers 21,000. Dividing that by 23, you get a little over 900.

I agree to that. The three statements made are these : 70,000 of a population divided by 23, the number of constituencies gives you 3,000 ; 30,000, the number of votes registered, divided by 23, gives you 1,300 ; and 21,000, the number of votes polled, divided by 23, gives you 900. I grant all that, but when the right hon. gentleman draws this conclusion from it, that is what I do not understand, and I would like an explanation. The conclusion which he draws is that :

So that on the whole I think that there is a fair correspondence between these figures, that no injustice has been done to anybody, and that the endeavour has been made to have as fair a division as was possible, especially if you consider the character of the population, which is sometimes in compact groups and sometimes very sparse.

I cannot follow the deduction from the premises laid down. It may be there, but I cannot see it.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The deduction is simply this : We have proceeded upon the figures and divided them by 23 without any ultimate thought as to what would be the conclusion. We say : There are the figures, the total population, the total recorded vote, the total number of votes cast ; divide them by 23 and the result is as I have stated. But now, we go further and we have gone further. If these figures were taken by themselves and if there was nothing else than these figures the adjustment between the north and south would not be challenged by anybody. They show that we have this population, and if we give so many seats they produce such a result, but since I spoke yesterday and since my hon. friend spoke yesterday we have had the speech of my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) who says this division is absolutely unfair, because it gives more to the north than to the south. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) who, I think, was not in the House last evening, although in the afternoon he heard part of the speech of my hon. friend from Calgary, heard him say that according to the figures which I gave to the House of the registered votes, the votes polled and the population, 10 members ought to be given to the south and 5 to the north. That is the point which we have to elucidate. I say that the figures which I gave yesterday and the figures which I gave to-day do not warrant that conclusion. In so far as I can make anything out of these figures there is absolute justice done to everybody. How do I make that out ? I do not know whether my hon. friend followed my argument to-day, but I make that out by showing that if you have 11 constituencies north of Red Deer and 11 south of Red Deer there are more registered votes in the southern constituency than in the northern constituency. The difference is not great, but I grant that. If you take the population you find that there are 5,200 souls more in the north than in the south giving there the advantage to the north. Under such circumstances, can my hon. friend come to the conclusion that any injustice has been done to the south to benefit the north? I am sure that the figures which I have given do not show that conclusion.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. The statement I made yesterday was that the local distribution of 1902 was 9 in the south and 6 in the north. I said that on that basis there should be 15 in the south and 10 in the north. I did not make the statement, or if I did I did not intend to make the statement, that the division should be as 15 to 10 according to the census of 1901. But the figures show that since the distribution of the local house in May, 1902 the influx of population had been south. That was my intention ? Then, as to the census the population has more than doubled since 1901 and as I understand the right hon. leader of the government admits that there are considerably more voters—I did not catch the exact figures—and a considerably greater number of names on the list south than there are north. The census being practically five years old it would be a manifestly unfair guide to take.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If we had a census in 1905, we would rely on it and there would be no necessity to look at these other facts. But we know there is an increased population since the census, and how are we to proceed. The hon. gentleman says that upon the basis of the distribution in 1902, there ought to be ten in the south and five in the north. I say that is not a correct contention. It may be a basis but you cannot depend on it alone; you must take other things into account. Taking it together with the recorded votes, and taking it with the census, I have come to the conclusion that the distribution which has been made is fair to the south and to the north. I believe that distribution should warrant the approbation of everybody and I challenge the criticism of my hon. friend. If you take these figures which cannot be disputed, it shows that the distribution is fair.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. It would be unfair to the south if based on the vote cast and unfair if based on the votes on the list; but you prefer to adopt a census which is five years old.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. You cannot take one thing alone; you have to consider a series of things and considering these we have come to the conclusion that the distribution is fair.

Mr. FOSTER. There is not an agreement between the First Minister and the Minister of the Interior——

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. As to what?

Mr. FOSTER. As to the basis upon which the distribution has been made. Their statements are as far apart as the poles. The Minister of the Interior said that while you might look at the registered vote as a matter of curiosity and may be as a little aid; that while you might take the population of 1901 as a matter of curiosity, as a guide it was worthless, that while you might take the number of post offices you simply did it because information was asked for and it might show a certain trend of population; that while you might take the improvement districts; taking all these together when you had done that you absolutely throw them away as far as a determining factor was concerned, and you took one thing and one thing only, and that was the actual number of votes polled. The Minister of the Interior said:

> The definite division of the constituencies is based on the vote actually polled on the 3rd November, as we believe that was the closest and most recent date upon which we could get information we could rely upon. The information with regard to post offices, homestead entries and other matters of that kind was arrived at in order to bear, not upon the question of division of constituencies, but on the question as to whether the bulk of the population was in one end of the country or the other. That information therefore would not have any direct bearing on the propriety of the actual division made, but would be merely corroborative evidence to show whether the trend of population was in this direction or that.

There cannot be a more clear-cut statement than that made by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Oliver) who in conjunction with one other gentleman from the west is said to be the father of this schedule, to have brought it down ready made and fresh from the mill; to have got the imprint of the Minister of the Interior upon it and got it into the Bill. If any one ought to know the child it should be the father; if anybody has a right to speak definitely upon this it should be the Minister of the Interior. In view of that statement of the minister, all this airy talk about the number of post offices, agricultural productions, homestead entries and the like is simply stuffing and padding. According to the Minister of the Interior the basis upon which you have cut out these twenty-five constituencies is the actual vote polled in each district except two where there was no poll. That was stated not only once by the Minister of the Interior, but reiterated. At another time yesterday he said:

> There are many others in confirmation, but I think my hon. friend is in error in suggesting, as my right hon. friend the Prime Minister has already said, that reliance was placed on the number of post offices or local improvement districts or upon anything except the actual number of votes polled because this is the actual basis of distribution. All the rest is in confirmation.

There is the basis of your distribution, and the distribution was made on this basis before any attempt was made to get information to buttress it up. I venture to state, see whether it will be contradicted, that that schedule of distribution as it is now was practically finished before the government had before it any information as to improvement districts, as to the number of school-houses, as to agricultural products, and these other things about which they have been talking. The Minister of the Interior contends that that is the actual basis, that, the other is for confirmation, and when the matter came to the point of discussion and you had to sustain your position you look around for these other things. What reliance can the First Minister place upon the number of post offices in the north as compared with the number of post offices in the south to show why there should be a certain number of constituencies in the one and a certain number in the other? Will the number of post offices be any index to population? There is one post office in Calgary and there is one post office serving a district in Stony Plain; but is that very fact any indication that one place has a larger population than the other. If you took the revenue of these post offices, if you could know the letters received and sent or the number of people actually served by each post office, then you might have an index to the population, but the ministers say they have not that information and they did not attempt to prepare it in answer to questions put. I put it to the Prime Minister as a man of common sense: what reliance can be placed upon the argument which because there are so many post offices north of a certain line and so many south, that therefore these indicates the population in one as compared with the other. My right hon. friend can talk from now until doomsday about the number of post offices, but the more he talks the more he will show the weakness of his case. And as to the number of schools. Will the Prime Minister say that the number of schools north of the line and the number of schools south of the line is any indication of the population north or the population south? What are the practical facts? A district which can muster no more than ten children organizes itself into a school district and erects a school-house. Another district which is thickly populated, which has fifty children, organizes itself into a school district, and erects its school-house. According to my right hon. friend's argument, one school-house counts as much as another; but the population of the district represented by ten children would be thirty or forty, perhaps much less, while the population of the other district would be five or six times as much.

Now, what reliance can be placed on a mere recapitulation of school-houses as an index to the poulation north or south? It would have been an argument pertinent and confirmatory if my right hon. friend had given the school population north of the line and the school population south of the line, because in either case it would bear a fairly equal proportion to the adult population or the population of adults and children. In no other way is it worth a thought as an argument. Take again the improvement districts. My hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) yesterday showed very clearly the case from that point of view. In certain districts of the country, where the roads are poor, where the circumstances make it necessary that the people shall put their shoulders together and their pockets together in order to get fair roads for themselves, they are more apt to have improvement districts. But leaving aside the citation of particulars, how can you argue that because in the north there are so many improvement districts and in the south so many, therefore you have a basis from which you can deduce a greater or a less population for the one part than for the other? These are three of the considerations upon which you say you rest your distribution. The Minister of the Interior says he does not rest the division on these things. He is not driven by his assertion to argue an absurdity. The right hon. the First Minister is driven to argue an absurdity, and the absurdity is by making it appear that mere numbers of school-houses, numbers of post offices and numbers of improvement districts are any indication at all of the population. You can take anything else. My right hon. friend has cited the agricultural products. Does he think these are an index of the population? Does he think they are the same index of population in the Northwest that they are in the eastern provinces? In the eastern provinces, the grain-growing areas on the farms are restricted to a few acres comparatively, whereas in the Northwest one man may have a grain area of one square mile or two square miles or a half square mile, with all the concomitants of agricultural machinery, which takes the place of population and does the work of the naked hand. Does my right hon. friend want this House to think for a moment that there is any connection between the bare number of bushels of agricultural products raised in one section of the country and the number raised in another section as an index to the population that may be in each? The argument, if anything, is against him. But he says, when you come to the south, it is rich in cattle, and cattle require great areas. But the south is not confined to cattle entirely; my right hon. friend ought to know that. Gentlemen who come from the Northwest know that. Go down to the border, and you find large ranching interests, but you find other interests as well. Is it the one or the two kinds of products that you take as indicative of population, or is it the value of the whole mass taken together, and the value of the trade current in and out? That is the kind of figures my hon. friend gave. In that there is some force; but in the argument used by my right hon. friend, I put it to himself whether there is either logic or good sense. Let me press it home to him once more, so as if I can to make him understand what I am after. A school-house is standing in a certain place and a school-house is standing in another place. From the mere fact that a school-house is standing in each place, how can you deduce the population which supports the school-house in each place? Is it possible? Give the school population in the one case and the school population in the other, and any well instructed and informed man will give you a pretty close guess as to the total population in each. Let me go a little further. My right hon. friend talked learnedly and discursively about the three bases of this distribution. What was the first? The first he declared to be existing conditions. Does any one know what he meant by that? I followed him very closely to get at the conclusion he was going to deduce by saying that they had taken existing conditions into account. The only thing I could find was this. Under existing conditions you have fifteen local members in what is the present province of Alberta, and you must add ten more in order to make up twenty-five. I cannot see the argument in that. None of these fifteen representatives are for the new province. The moment the province is formed, these members disappear, and you will make twenty-five new constituencies. In what way does the fact that there are now fifteen constituencies for the local legislature enter into the formation of the twenty-five constituencies which you have to create ?

It evidently did not enter into it thus far that you adopted the fifteen that are there and did not change them. You did not let it enter into your considerations when you carved out ten others so as to make your number up to twenty-five. You went by the country that you had to divide and by the number of constituencies that you wanted, and you cut and carved, divided and added and subtracted to make up the distribution that you have now. How did existing circumstances find themselves as a factor, and in what way did they enter as a factor into this ? Neither gave you the basis, because you have disturbed the basis. What did it give you ? That I tried to find out from my right hon. friend from time to time, but I am quite certain I was unable to do so, and I may be uncharitable if I say I do not think he has been able to find it himself, except as a mere matter of declamation. What were the factors taken from existing circumstances that have entered into this ? The Minister of the Interior gives the answer. He says that the only thing that has entered into it was the vote that was polled. He says what entered next was population, and he says that was a guide; what they wanted to get as near as possible was equality of population in the different representative districts. That is what my right hon. friend put forth as his strongest argument, and to-day he reiterated the same thing. He said: I do not care for north or south or the dividing line, I only want to see that the population is equally divided in these constituencies, and that consequently every elector has his proportionate share in the government of the province. Who raised the point of north and south ? It was certainly not the member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy). The first mention I heard of that line of north and south in this House was by the Minister of the Interior himself. It was not mentioned as a division which should be sectional or anything of that kind, it was taken as a dividing line to show the population north and south and show if possible that the populations had been equally diyided. But does it not strike the right hon. gentleman and his supporters and all the members of this House that when you have exhausted the argument as to twenty-three constituencies you have brought it down to this agreement amongst gentlemen on the other side of the House that as far as these twenty-three constituencies are concerned there is not any very great inequalty shown. We have given fourteen to the north. You have given eleven north of Red Deer and eleven south, which makes twenty-two, and you have Red Deer in the centre. Consequently you have divided it you say pretty equally. Even in that division the hon. gentlemen took care that they would get a political advantage. They get on that division more members than the south get. After that has been done, my right hon. friend comes in gratuitously and says: Over and above that we will just chalk off two other constituencies in Peace River and Athabaska River and we will add them to the north as well. Without these two it could not be shown that there was equality between the north and the south, but when you come to shave as near as hon. gentleman can to it, then they take away from the whole of their profession of fairness by injecting the vast districts to the north with a voting population of from 300 to 500 and making them equal to a voting population in each case of 960 in the south and in other parts, and they call that equality. They appeal to the principles of fairness and justice, they call on all Canada and high heaven to witness that they are doing exactly what is right. There is no insuperable difficulty with reference to the northern district. One thing I would like to know, is as to the distribution of population in the Peace River and Athabaska River. Are the people who are living there, the voters who will be, in settlements, and if so, in what settlements ? There must be some knowledge with reference to this. I do not imagine that although the distance may be great you have a widely separated rural population up there. If you have a nomadic population that is one element that makes it very difficult to give them representation, but it may be that not so great an injustice would be perpetrated by not giving the nomadic part of the population representation as by giving them triple or quadruple representation. If you have a sedentary population residing in settlements what are those settlements ? Your Interior Department ought to give us that information, and we want that information from them if it is possible. The Prime Minister says you cannot have a Canadian in this country and not have him exercising the rights of a free-born Canadian and a British subject. We have many people in this country who cannot exercise their rights. Circumstances alter cases, and the circumstances of distance and space and sparseness of population make it so that there are hundreds and thousands of people in this country who cannot practically be represented. This is due to the circumstances of the life which they have chosen for themselves, and the only duty upon a government is to follow that class of people as far as you reasonably can, and when they get into anything like a settled condition, into stated settlements, as far as possible to give them the rights of representation. To-day we have constituencies represented in this House within the limits of which constituencies there are living hundreds of British and Canadian citizens who cannot and do not exercise their franchise. Suppose it were a little difficult for a man who wants to be a representative, within a certain space of time, to visit these settlements in Peace River and Athabaska. Suppose that we annexed it to some constituency further south, even if it were a little difficult to carry on the election, there are resources in the legislation of this country to meet the case; it is possible to accommodate the machinery of elections to that kind of circumstances. It is done to-day in our present election law, and in our constitution. It could be done there in just the same way. More time can be given and special machinery can be put into operation in order to give these more distant settlements the right to exercise their franchise and poll their votes. It is not necessary, and it is not fair to go to the opposite extreme and to argue that because there are two or three posts 300 or 400 miles distant from the nearest constituency that therefore you are to give unequal representation. No one would grumble at unequal representation to a certain extent.

But will the government give unequal representation to an unreasonable and absurd extent merly to sustain the argument that every Canadian, every British subject, who has the franchise should have equal right in the exercise of the franchise ? No, it is done because it makes uneven the due balance between north and south ; it is done in order that two men may be placed in the new parliament to exercise authority in moulding its initiatory legislation in order that party advantage may be gained. In other words, there is no doubt, I believe, that this is simply a gerrymander. This is an attempt on the part of hon. gentlemen opposite to control the legislature of Alberta in their own interest. There are reasons why they wish to do this. The very campaign we have been going through here for the last five months furnishes the reason—the necessity hon. gentlemen opposite feel of having a majority in the legislature to throw the mantle of their approval over everything that is done by this government. Now, is it well to proceed to the formation of a new province on such lines as these ? Is it well for even a powerful government to afford ground for suspicion of such a thing? Commence with a gerrymander, and with what measure ye meet it shall be measured to you again. A gerrymander perpetrated by the father and founder of the province will be measured back again—but without profit to the new province. The feeling caused by such an act rests deep in the hearts of the people and is not easily overcome. Does my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) read the newspapers from the Northwest ? Will he collate the utterances of the Liberal newspapers from the province of Alberta and try to understand what that voice is telling him ? Is it not reasonable to suppose that these newspapers have the interest of their country at heart ? Is it not reasonable to suppose that they represent as good Liberal doctrine as does the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) ? Is it out of malice, out of mere cussedness that they are giving utterance to the sentiments that they express ? Or is it because they have a feeling that they must express ? They afford my hon. friend food for reflection. The course he is pursuing must inevitably implant in that new province, at the beginning of his political life, a suspicion, a sense of injustice, a desire of revenge—feelings that do not help in maintaining the peace, order and good government of that country. Why should the government incur suspicion ? Is there not a better way ? More than that, the government's supporter from Strathcona (Mr. Peter Talbot) may be a fair and sensible gentleman ; the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) may be the same ; they are credited with being the master hands in drawing up this schedule. I have been given to understand that, if the Minister of the Interior had not been unreasonable in pushing this proposal, some better way would have been resorted to. Is it, or is it not a fact consonant with common sense that you might go to a non-partisan body in the Northwest ? I am not making any imputation against the hon gentlemen I have named. But they are partisans. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) could not live if he were not a partisan ; he could not be Minister of the Interior if he were not a partisan. And his friend beside him (Mr. Peter Talbot) could not get the good things that are going, and could not support what the Minister of the Interior wants him to support, unless he were a strong partisan—and sometimes, I dare say, he feels that he must be mighty strong to support it all. The plain common sense of it is,—here are two partisans with an interest in the complexion of this representation, a money interest, a party interest, a political interest, to go no further. Are these gentlemen presumably able to prepare for this parliament a fair and reasonable distribution of these seats, or is there some other body that could do it better ? It seems to me that the better course has been suggested by my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy). What objection can there be to having these men who have been appointed to the highest judicial position in the gift of the government in that country do this work ? They are men of trained legal minds, men who have been elevated to the bench and so live outside the atmosphere of partisanship, in a place, where, as it is popularly supposed, these old scales fall from their eyes and they can see the facts as they are and act judicially. Certainly, they are free from the trammels of politics and have nothing much more to hope for in political advantage. And they have their reputations at stake. More than that, they live in all the constituencies ; they travel through them all. The principle is declared here that these constituencies should be formed with a due regard to population. Who are the men who can most fairly and with the best knowledge of the facts apply this principle ? Who could do it better than these six men who to-day are your Supreme Court judges in the Northwest ? What possible argument can be used against their delimiting these constituencies? Leave the matter to them and you will immediately do away with oppposition so far as this clause is concerned. Is that a thing which it is worth while to consider ? High precedents can be quoted for such a course. My right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has vaunted himself a Liberal of the English school. If he were a member in authority in the British parliament, would he dare to propose a scheme for the redistribution of seats in any of the divisions of Great Britain according to a scheme framed by two partisans of his own from the extreme corner of that division ? Would he venture to force that plan, without reasonable argument, upon parliament ? No English statesman has ever tried to do such a thing ; no British government has ever been guilty of doing it. Whenever there was redistribution of seats there, the first point was agreement. We do not want Liberal or Tory, we do not want Whig or Radical, in the redistributions of seats—we want a fair redistribution.

We do not want a Whig or Radical distribution. What we want is a fair distribution; and a proper government and a proper House of parliament has always acted upon that rule, and avoided the rock of trouble which my right hon. friend is steering against. May I recall to my right hon. friend his own favourite utterances of years ago, how he stood on this side and pleaded for an equal division of the constituencies. He will answer me that he did not get his request, so far as he himself viewed it, but that does not matter here nor there against the rightness of the argument. It does matter, however, to my right hon. friend. It shows whether he was in earnest then or not. If he was in earnest, he wished that to be carried out, not for party advantage, but in justice to the electors themselves. If he was in earnest then, these great principles have not changed since, and we must presume him to be equally in earnest now. There he stands at the helm of legislation. Will he do to-day, as Prime Minister, what he held for and argued for years and years when on this side ? Why not ? I am not going any further in the argument than this, but this one thing I will say. My hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) and my hon. friend from St. Antoine (Mr. Ames)—the latter of whom I did not hear, but whose speech I have read—bestowed more blood and brain and muscle expenditure on the information that they have procured, and procured at immense toil to themselves, than has been shown by the whole of the government on the other side, and they have put information before this House which is reliable, I believe; which must be held to be reliable until it is controverted; and the whole trend of that information goes to show that an injustice is being perpetrated. They might very well say: Your distribution is wrong ; here is ours, put that on. But they did not go that far. They sense this idea that there is partisanship on both sides, and that there might be partiality even in their own proposal. They do not ask that theirs be adopted, but they present their side of the case and say : For reasonable fair-play and justice, for the stilling of bad passions, and for the setting out on a smooth sea the new sail which is to break from harbour on the 1st July, let your only impartial board in the Northwest, whom you yourselves have appointed in part, who are looked up to and trusted, against whose honour, justice and fair-play no man will breathe a single word—let them be trusted with the duty of giving to the new electors of that new province their new scheme of distribution. Why cannot that be acceded to ? What interest would suffer if it were, and what good would not be brought about if it were acceded to by my right hon. friend ?

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. gentleman saw fit to draw attention to an alleged discrepancy between the position taken by the First Minister and myself as to the basis of calculation upon which the distribution was made. I think he rather missed the point in what I said, as I think the House will bear me out, having heard him read it. The basis of the division of the constituencies was necessarily, I said, the vote cast. That was not the question that he was arguing about at all. That question has not yet arisen. I said that we took the actual vote cast, because it was the latest and most accurate information we could get for the purpose of drawing a dividing line between the constituencies. But that was not, if he followed my remarks of yesterday, the sole basis, from my point of view, of the general arrangement that was made. He speaks of my having introduced the question of the dividing line at township 38. I do not know whether it is to the purpose in this argument to shut our eyes and ears to what we have seen and heard ever since these Autonomy Bills came up for consideration; but I instanced the increase of population, the number of post offices, the number of statute labour districts, the number of school districts and other matters connected with the northern country, as evidence that there has been a large increase of population in that country such as would justify the large increase of representation that is being given to it. I gather from the remarks of the hon. gentleman that, having availed himself of all the information which was collected at so much labour and pains, most commendable, by the hon. members for Calgary and St. Antoine, and having applied his own intellect to the matter, he came to the conclusion that, so far as the new province of Alberta is concerned, as far north as the southern boundary of Athabaska, a fair, reasonable and equitable division had been made. If I did not gather that from his remarks, then I certainly missed the point.

Mr. FOSTER. Then you missed the point.

Mr. OLIVER. Certainly the hon. gentleman entertained the House for a considerable time, and I will go so far as to say that I do not think there is a member in the House besides himself who saw the point if that was not it. He has not challenged the division of the constituencies in that part of the new province of Alberta. If my memory does not fail me, he acknowledged that it was a fair division, an approximately fair division.

Mr. FOSTER. I suppose the hon. gentleman is bound to assert that over and over, and I shall have to rise in self-defence. He will have to take my assertion that I did not intend to, and, in my humble judgment, I did not ; but if I did, I take it all back, as far as that is concerned. I did not intend to, and I tried to make my words explicit enough to convey my meaning.

Mr. OLIVER. We must admit that the hon. gentleman is certainly able to make out a case if he has one, and he certainly did not spare his time in dealing with this question ; and I say again that if he had any evidence of unfairness to give the House, he certainly did not show it.

Mr. FOSTER. If it be any help to my hon. friend, I will tell him one other thing. It is a secret between himself and myself. I am going to take the liberty of making another short address on this before very long. I dealt to-day entirely with the principles of the thing. I do intend to deal later on with the details. But that is a secret between my hon. friend and myself.

Mr. OLIVER. I think my statement has been unchallenged that the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) has not indicated the point in which this division has been radically unfair. As my right hon. friend the leader of the government says, if we accept the position taken by the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) that there is a question between the north and the south and that this Red Deer district should be the dividing line, it has been shown that on that same argument by the census figures, which are now the only absolutely reliable figures we have, that the north is at a disadvantage of something like 5,000 people, that on the votes cast the south is at a disadvantage of something like 1,000 votes and that on the number of votes on the list the south is at a disadvantage of something like 2,000 votes. We submit that the difference in favour of the north, as indicated by the census, equalizes beyond question the difference in favour of the south in regard to the number of registered votes and votes cast. If there is any balance either way it must be admitted to be so small that it never before was taken into consideration in a redistribution Bill where 20,000 votes were at issue. The hon. gentlemen have come down to absolute hair splitting on this question in order to make out a grievance, and they will have to split hairs still finer before they can succeed in making out a grievance as far as Alberta is concerned up to the southern boundary of Athabaska. We will be glad to hear the argument of the hon. member for North Toronto when he comes to deal with this question in detail. So far he admits that he has not made an argument on that subject, but he says and says eloquently that there is unfairness and injustice and he threatens revenge just as some time ago he threatened disruption of the constitution in regard to another question. He is very strong in threats, but we have to get used to these things. He is going to avoid all difficulty by referring this question to a commission of judges. I will admit that if it were a question of dividing the constituencies so that no harm should be done to this or to that political party a commission of judges, or an impartial outside commission, might very well be appointed. But so far as this argument has gone that question has not arisen. Nothing has been placed before the House to show that any question has to be decided that can be decided by people outside of this House better than by people inside of this House. When we come to the actual division of the constituencies, then, I will admit, it will be time for such an argument to be made if ever. The question that is before the House at the present time is not a question of law. It is a question of policy. The question to be decided has no more right to be relegated to an outside commission than any of the responsibilities which have been placed upon us by the people of the country have a right to be relegated to an outside commission. The question is : Shall the district of Athabaska be represented or not? I submit that this is not a question of law. It is a question of policy. It is not a question for judges to decide. It is a question for this House to decide. The time for the hon. gentleman and his friends to have dealt with that question was when it was faced squarely by the hon. member for South York (Mr. Maclean). He moved a resolution in the House, or proposed to move a resolution, that the district of Athabaska should not be included in the new province of Alberta, but when it came to the time to vote on that resolution, to make a declaration of policy on the part of the party of the opposition in regard to that district, the hon. gentleman withdrew his motion, I presume, because he could not get his friends on the other side of the House to support it. I think they showed a very considerable degree of wisdom in securing the withdrawal of the hon. gentleman's motion. If they agreed then, as they did agree, to the inclusion of the district of Athabaska in the new province of Alberta, they must face the question squarely whether they are going to give that district representation or not. This is not a judicial question. They may call it a partisan question, but it is a political question, using the word in its highest sense, a question of policy on the part of this parliament and we must make a decision and be responsible for that decision. My hon. friend has spoken of principle. Does he take the ground before this House and before the country that this country containing more than half the total area of the new province shall not have representation in the new parliament? If he does we take issue with him on that point and we say that taxation shall have representation, that when we include the district of Athabaska in the province of Alberta that district shall be subject to all the responsibilities of provincial government and that it is entitled to all the advantages which will result from sharing and taking part in that government.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. May I ask the hon. gentleman a question?

Mr. OLIVER. Certainly.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Why was the hon. gentleman not very solicitous to have that district represented in the Dominion parliament? I understand that at the present time these people are not represented in the Dominion parliament.

Mr. OLIVER. Well, I think my hon. friend should not be absurd. He knows that during the two parliaments I represented the district of Alberta, which is now represented in parliament by four members. I felt, for my part, speaking of the matter personally, that I had enough on my hands without urging the addition of other territory, but as the representative of the district of Alberta adjoining this district of Athabaska and living in a locality which was in close communication with that district, it was necessary for me to spend a considerable part of my time and energy in representing the interests of the people of that district as far as I could. I certainly was under a very great disadvantage by reason of the fact that I had no authority, and I think that the people of that district should be represented from this time forward. The fact that they have not been represented, I hope, will not be urged as a reason why they shall not be represented in the future.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. No. The hon. minister took part in the enactment of certain legislation a few years ago. I do not know that he was so solicitous at that time that taxation should carry with it representation or that these people should have their rights asserted as he is now.

Mr. OLIVER. That is quite another question. The district of Athabaska was not included in the organized portions of the Territories?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Why not?

Mr. OLIVER. Because the time had not come. It is going to be included now. The Northwest government had never asked to have it included and there was no particular reason why I should at that particular time urge its inclusion.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Had not the legislative assembly at Regina the administration of affairs in Athabaska?

Mr. OLIVER. They had a certain right of administration, but they had not control over the district of Athabaska as they had over the organized Territories. They had a right of administration such as the government of Manitoba has over the district of Keewatin, but the district of Athabaska was not part of the territory over which they exercised full control and they did not ask to have it added to their territory. Probably the time had not arrived when it should be added to the territory. But an idea that hon. gentlemen opposite do not seem to be able to grasp is that there has been progress in the district of Athabaska as there has been in other parts of the Territories, that these conditions require to be met and that this legislation is for the purpose of meeting the conditions as they exist and as they are in immediate prospect. The fact that the district of Athabaska is not a part of the organized Territories and did not receive representation in the Dominion parliament is no more a cause of complaint against this government, than it is a cause of complaint against the Creator of the universe that the world had to be created at a certain period of time.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. That's pretty good.

Mr. OLIVER. That ought to settle the question. The representation of the district of Athabaska in the new provincial legislature is a question of policy, and that question of policy is : Shall a district which contains population, which contributes largely to the trade of the country, which is on the eve of being opened up to the fullest extent; shall this parliament take the responsibility of including that district in the new province and not provide it with adequate representation ? If gentlemen on the other side take that position, I can assure them that we on this side take issue with them on that point here and now. There is another consideration. The subsidies which the new provinces will receive have a nominal basis of calculation at any rate, upon the amount of ungranted land available for revenue purposes. It is because of the large areas of the new provinces that it is possible to give them the liberal subsidies we have accorded. Were it only the old districts of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Assiniboia, that were organized into two new provinces, they could not have claimed, and I believe they would not have obtained, that liberal treatment which it is proposed to give the new provinces. Is it to be said that we are to give the new provinces a large subsidy proportionate to their large area, and then cut off that very area from representation in the legislature? A few minutes ago my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) was almost threatening rebellion, or revenge anyway, in the Territories, because of this injustice that he said was about to be perpetrated.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. A musket on the Athabaska.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) should modify that language a little. I did not threaten any personal revenge. I said that action of this kind was apt to breed feelings of revenge, and there may be a slight difference in meaning between these two forms of expression.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Only a shade of difference.

Mr. OLIVER. I will accept the apology of the hon. member (Mr. Foster), and I will say that he was threatening revenge and not revolution. Last night the hon. member for Montreal (Mr. Ames) was almost eloquent in informing us of how little importance this division was because it was momentary, and immediately the legislature met it could make its own redistribution. I say that this parliament has responsibility in this matter irrespective of what action the provincial legislature may take. We propose to create these provinces with these areas, the duty is laid upon us of distributing the seats, and our responsibility is to see that that area is represented properly and adequately. It is for that reason we propose to give this representation to the district of Athabaska. It is entitled to representation as a part of the province, and this parliament would be doing less than its duty if it did not provide representation for that district. Is it to be said that the district of St. Albert, or the district of Sturgeon, or the district of Saskatchewan, which border on this district of Athabaska, and which already are two or three times the area of any of the districts in the southern part of the country; is it to be said that these districts shall also have the charge of representing the district of Athabaska? Surely that suggestion would be as unfair as the suggestion made by the hon. member (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) that south of township 38 there should be fifteen representatives and north of that township there should be only ten representatives.

Mr. AMES. Did I understand the hon. gentleman to say that the constituency of Sturgeon was two or three times the size of the constituency of Medicine Hat, for example?

Mr. OLIVER. I did not intend to say that; I meant to say it was two or three times the size of some of the southern constituencies, for example, Cardston, Lethbridge, Macleod, Pincher, Banff, Rosebud, and others.

Mr. AMES. Are any of these as small as the constituencies of Strathcona and Leduc?

Mr. OLIVER. They are not, and the population of Strathcona is quite as large as any of these I have mentioned. This province lies along British Columbia; the area of the northern part of British Columbia is just as isolated as the district of Peace River is to-day; the prospects of opening up Peace River are as good, or better, than the prospects of opening up the northern parts of British Columbia; the Cassiar district has been represented in the legislature of British Columbia for twenty years or more, and there is no reason why, on our side of the mountains, a country of very much greater agricultural and other value, should not be represented in the new legislature. If the province of British Columbia deems it proper to have its outlying districts represented, the new province of Alberta has just as much right to have its outlying districts represented in its legislature.

Mr. AMES. Suppose Peace River and St. Albert were united, would they have any greater area than the constituency of Cassiar, in British Columbia?

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot say.

Mr. AMES. Figure it out.

Mr. OLIVER. However that may be, I am satisfied that the representative of the district of St. Albert will have greater responsibility in representing that district than will the representative of Cardston, according to the population. There is no right or justice in suggesting that in addition to the present responsibility which he discharges—equal to that of the representative of one or two or three of the southern constituencies—he should have added the responsibility of representing a district which is as large as a European empire, and as valuable.

Mr. LAKE. Is there any necessity for running St. Albert within six miles of Edmonton?

Mr. OLIVER. It runs within nine miles of Edmonton, and I would say there is. These districts of Athabaska and Peace River are traversed by two great rivers; they contain possibilities of equal value to the possibilities of more than equal areas in other provinces in this Dominion; they have a present population and they have a valuable trade; it is in the interest not only of these districts but of this whole Dominion that the methods of civilized government should prevail throughout the length and breadth of these provinces; and the only means that we recognize for the application of the forms of civilized government in this country is adequate representation. That is all that we ask at the hands of this House, and we ask it, not as a matter of judicial decision, but as a question of public policy, upon which we are prepared to take issue with our friends on the other side of the House.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not understand that it is proposed to have the commission of judges decide as to what parts of the country shall or shall not be represented. Their duty is a duty of delimitation based upon the decision of this parliament as to what country shall be represented.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend is in error. The amendment moved by the hon. member for Calgary makes no such distinction. It proposes to refer everything to the judges. Here it is:

That section 12 be struck out, and that the following be substituted therefor:

Until the said legislature otherwise provides, the legislative assembly shall be composed of twenty-five members, to be elected to represent the electoral divisions hereinafter mentioned.

Such division shall be made by a board of commissioners, &c.

Mr. FOSTER. Does my right hon. friend mean to say that it proposes that the judges shall mark the boundaries of the province of Alberta?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Not the boundaries of the province, because that is done by parliament.

Mr. FOSTER. If then the boundaries of the province are marked by parliament, what the judges would have to do would be to delimit the area so bounded into twenty-five constituencies.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. And they would say whether the present district of Athabaska should be represented or not—whether it should be annexed to a neighbouring constituency or have representation of its own. I say this is not a question to be determined by the judges. It is a question to be determined by parliament.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Has any one in the House suggested that the northern regions should not be represented? I have not heard it.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I heard it not later than yesterday evening—that they should not have representation by themselves.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Ah!

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That is a question which should be determined here. It is essentially, as my hon. friend the Minister of the Interior says, a question of high politics, the highest kind of politics. The question whether these matters should be determined by parliament or by the judges is never a question in England. My hon. friend refers to the policy of the Liberal party in Great Britain. It is always pleasant to hear my hon. friend talking of Liberal principles and never applying them paying them the tribute of empty compliments and nothing more. In England the duty of delimitation is not assigned to judges, but to a board of commissioners, and they are restricted to the duty of delimitation. They have to consult old charters to ascertain the limits of towns, boroughs, and so on, which we have not to do here. What we have to determine is what should be the basis of representation and how it should be applied. I must say that I am a little disappointed at the conduct of my hon. friends on the other side of the House. When two months ago we gave them the actual numbers of the constituencies and the manner in which we intended to divide the province, I expected that if they had any objection to the division, they would offer a counter proposition. But nothing of the kind has taken place. If they had come with their list of constituencies, we might have seen how far we could agree, and then there might have been something to refer to the judges. But nothing of the kind has taken place. Our proposition has been met with a naked negative and nothing else—with the statement that our distribution as between the south and the north is not fair. That is the only point our hon. friends on the other side of the House make. Have you heard a complaint that any of these constituencies are unfair, or that there is any attempt at what is known as a gerrymander? You have not heard anything of the kind. The only point made up to the present time, after twenty-four hours of discussion, is that our distribution is not fair to the south, that it is in favour of the north. My hon. friend from North Toronto argued a moment ago that we had not any basis of representation, although we have shown that we have taken as a basis all the records that are at our disposal—the population as given by the census, the recorded vote and the registered vote, and to these we have added the number of post offices. My hon. friend says there is no argument in the number of post offices. He says that in the town of Calgary there is one post office and in Stony Plain one post office, and that the former has an urban population of some magnitude while the latter is an insignificant place with a small population. Is it fair to make such a comparison—to compare a city with a village? What tells a tale which bears on this question is a comparison of the number of post offices in two sections of the country such as the northern part and the southern part of Alberta. The number of school sections in one part as compared with the number in another part is also a fair test. Of course, it would not be fair to compare one post office with another; but it is a fair comparison to take two sections with the same areas and inhabited by the same kind of people, and compare the number of post offices in one section with the number in the other. The logical conclusion from such a comparison is that where there are more post offices there are more people. My hon. friend cannot draw any conclusion from the argument, which he made very insidiously, I will not say ingeniously, in which he compared a rural population with an urban population. Then, I instanced the production of grain in the northern district as compared with the production in the southern district. My hon. friend says that is not a fair comparison, because if we compare the east with the west, we shall find much more machinery used in the east than in the west, and therefore the production does not indicate the relative populations. Very true, but we are not comparing the east with the west. We are comparing two western populations which have similar methods of doing their work; and if you find that there is a greater production of grain in one section than in another, you have a right to conclude that there are more people to produce that grain. I have never contended that these tests were strictly accurate, to the point, peremptory and paramount; but my argument is that all these put together tell a uniform tale, and show that there are more people in the north than in the south; and that if so, there ought to be more representation there.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. If he is going by the people in the north and the south why not go by population entirely?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Will my hon. friend rest his case on that?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. On the basis of population.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Very well. I will say to my hon. friend then that by the census of 1901 there were in the 11 districts north of Red Deer 36,398 people and in the 11 districts south of Red Deer 31,034, showing a balance of population in favour of the north of 5,000 by the census of 1901.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What is the population now taken from the voters' lists, returns of homesteads and everything of that kind?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will take the voters' lists, the homestead entries and everything else of that kind and I will conclude that there are more in the north than there are in the south. Of course the figures cannot be given with absolute accuracy owing to the circumstances of the case but they tell that there is not a sufficient discrepancy between the north and the south to make it the basis of the discussion we have had up to the present time.

Mr. HAGGART. The right hon. gentleman twitted my friend here in reference to the statement that he was always professing to follow principles which were advocated by the party opposite and that he never followed them himself. The hon. gentleman says that we are following the same course as is followed in England, that in England there is left to the judges only the power of delimiting the different constituencies.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I did not say anything of the kind.

Mr. HAGGART. The question of policy was not decided by the parliament at all; the question of policy was decided by a conference of both parties. That policy was agreed upon and then the matter was submitted to the judges for the purpose of delimiting the constituencies according to that policy. What does the hon. gentleman propose? He says that the admission of Athabaska and Peace River district is a question of policy. That question would not be decided in the imperial parliament at all. That is a fair question for a conference or for the judges to decide. The principles upon which a delimitation is made is a subject for a conference, because the delimitation is made upon principles which are given to the judges for that purpose. In England it was entirely different. Mr. Gladstone meets Sir Stafford Northcote and Lord Salisbury. They agree upon principles upon which the delimitation is to be made or in other words the two parties have a conference and agree upon the policy, but the right hon. gentleman forces down the policy upon the people of this country nolens volens. He says: why not give representation to these two territories? No person in this House denies representation to them, adequate representation if necessary.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It was denied yesterday.

Mr. FOSTER. Who was it?

Mr. HAGGART. Who was it? I never heard a person in the House deny it, that these two portions of the country might be added to the other constituencies and given representation. That would be a fair representation but what we deny is, and what we think is the anomaly and the curiosity in this is, that there is a division between the north and the south; every one knows the reason of that division, each wants the capital, they want a fair show in reference to it, and they want the question left to the country. It is not left to the electorate at all because in making what he calls a fair division the Prime Minister brings in the question of policy and gives to two constituencies which by their population are not entitled to a third of a member, two members. That is the position. The hon. gentleman to be fair and to be right, should follow the principles adopted in every other English speaking country in the world: in the United States, in New Zealand, in Natal, in New South Wales. He should follow the principles adopted in Great Britain, that is to remove it from the area of pure party politics altogether. They are big enough in every other place to leave these questions to an independent tribunal.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Did the hon. gentleman follow that policy ?

Mr. HAGGART. The first to propose this policy was Mr. Gladstone——

Mr. CAMPBELL. Did you follow it ?

Mr. HAGGART. The party who proposed that policy in the House and advocated it again and again, were the leaders of the hon. gentlemen opposite in this House, Mr. Blake, and Mr. Mills. The policy was endorsed, was inscribed in an Act of parliament introduced by the present Postmaster General. It has always been the policy of the Reform party to adopt this principle, but it is like the other promises made and many of them made by the present government from end to end of the country, it was all talk and when they had the power to perform it they were led by political reasons in order to get a little political advantage, in a small manner, in one section of the country, to swallow their principles and adopt others when the opportunity offered.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Did you adopt it, when you divided the constituencies ?

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY moved the third reading of Bill (No. 115) respecting the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.

Mr. S. BARKER (Hamilton). I was present when this Bill was before the Railway Committee, but was not in my place the other evening when it was discussed in the Committee of the Whole. I believe that on the latter occasion some remarks were made by the Finance Minister (Mr. Fielding). I had hoped that he would be here to-night, because I wished to ask him some questions about the changes that have been made by the forms of agreement in the Bill, which, in effect, amend and alter the Acts passed last session. I do not know whether it is desirable to go on at the present moment, or whether we may expect that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) or the Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick) will be soon in his place. But I am prepared to state the question I raised before the Railway Committee, and perhaps the right hon. leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) will be able to tell us exactly what the effect of the change is. In the Act passed last session provision was made for the issue of interim bonds by the railway company, which bonds were to be guaranteed by the government, and, in the event of such bonds being issued, provision was made for their retirement and the substitution for them of permanent bonds. It was found—and I think very probably it was correctly found—that the interim bonds would not serve the purpose. I never thought it was a very happy expedient, and I think the company are quite right in coming to the conclusion that interim bonds would have been a mistake. But the question I raised in the Railway Committee was this : The original contract was drawn with the view to the issue of these interim bonds, which, at the conclusion of the work, would be replaced by permanent bonds ; and when that substitution should take place there would necessarily be an adjustment of the whole construction account. Therefore, the government would know, at the end, precisely the amount to which its guarantee applies. It will be evident to any person at all acquainted with such matters that there is always some risk in issuing, on progress estimates, interim bonds, as the amount may far exceed the value of the work as finally ascertained. As I say, I pointed this out in the Railway Committee to the Minister of Justice and in the presence of the counsel for the railway company. It was not disputed. I pointed out that it was almost impossible to avoid some risk in this respect, because the chief engineer of the work was absolutely dependent upon his subordinates for the progress report. A young gentleman with very little experience might have charge of ten miles of some very important portion of the work. He, of course, would send in his estimates month by month, and the chief engineer would have to make up his accounts on the basis of these reports. With every desire on the part of each person concerned to be absolutely correct and honest, errors might creep in from time to time. These, of course, would be repaired on the final adjustment. There would be no trouble in this under the Act we passed a year ago, because, whatever the interim bonds might be, the permanent bonds would not issue until the account was finally made up.

But, finding it inconvenient to issue interim bonds, the solicitors drawing these forms agreed that permanent bonds should be issued forthwith. Therefore, the bonds issued from time to time on these progress estimates become an absolute obligation upon the government of Canada; and there might be some difficulty in the final adjustment. I asked the counsel for the company, Mr. Chrysler—who was very fair and, so far as I can see, desired to give every information to the committee—what protection was provided in this contract to the public against error which might creep in in the progress estimates. I asked him also whether, under this contract, there was a reservation or drawback of a certain percentage on the estimates for which bonds would not be issued. People who are acquainted with such contracts know that this is a very common provision—that 15 or 20 per cent of the progress estimate is often reserved for final adjustment. Mr. Chrysler answered that there was no such provision. But he also said that the government had the matter in his own hands, and it would only guarantee the amount of bonds that it considered would be safe. But I asked him if there was anything in the contract that would entitle the government, if, for instance, $100,000 was certified on the progress estimates, to issue only $80,000. His answer was: No; I take it that the government will do just what it thinks necessary in that case. And he went on to say that Mr. Schreiber, Chief Engineer of Government Railways, or whoever happened to occupy his position, would take care to certify for only such an amount as would allow full protection to the government. But, as I pointed out, Mr. Schreiber, on the face of the contract, has no right to do anything of that kind. That there was no provision in this contract for the reservation of any percentage until the final adjustment of the account; and if the government did reserve part, they would be doing something that no private contractor would have a right to do.

They would be breaking the contract, but Mr. Chrysler said the government is not like an ordinary contractor for they can do as they please. But that did not seem to me a very satisfactory explanation. He went on to say that Mr. Schreiber—he only used Mr. Schreiber's name because he was there before us—the chief engineer of the government, in issuing his progress certificates, would take care to be within the mark. To that I pointed out that the chief engineer is absolutely at the mercy of his subordinates. We need not speak of any subordinate as dishonest. All of us know the young gentlemen who superintend the construction of sections of eight and ten miles of railway. These young gentlemen are very anxious to do right but they make a great many mistakes. Mistakes are frequently made for many thousands of dollars on a small section, and the chief engineer is absolutely dependent on those young gentlemen for the bulk certificates he issues as the maximum amount to cover them all. It did seem to me that some provision should have been made, either in the agreement or the mortgages or the Act, to enable the government, as a matter of legal contract—not as a matter of arbitrary conduct—to reserve 15 to 20 per cent as a safeguard, so that at the end of the contract the final adjustment would find the government on the right side of the account. My hon. friend, the Minister of Justice, took a note of the remarks that I made. Mr. Chrysler was unable to give any explanation except that he supposed the government would always take care of themselves. I would point out to the right hon. the First Minister that that is not business. What is not business for an ordinary railway company cannot possibly be business for a government, unless the government are going to assume that they will do arbitrarily what no company would be allowed to do. I do not think that would be a proper position to take. There may be ample protection in these contracts. The day we met in the Railway Committee to discuss this Bill, it was placed in our hands for the first time. We had an Act of about two or three pages and schedules of over 100 pages of a printed contract, and we were asked as a committee, taking care of the interests of the country, to act to the best of our ability in criticising that Act. I have not the slightest fault to find with the conduct of any gentleman on that occasion. I believe that Mr. Chrysler endeavoured to give the fullest and clearest explanation in his power. I am quite sure the Minister of Justice wished to have every protection, but it was patent to everybody in the committee that he was not fully advised. I do not think he could possibly have acted personally in the matter. It had been entrusted to Mr. Shepley, of Toronto, a very able legal gentleman, who gave a written report, in very general terms, that the contract was settled satisfactorily, but I do not think his report dealt with these particular questions. He was satisfied at large with the terms of the contract; but it occurred to me, in the short discussion we had in the committee, that the government, having since last year, when parliament agreed upon the terms of the contract, in effect altered its terms by providing that instead of interim bonds, which could be recalled, the company were at once to issue and put upon the market final permanent bonds, the effect of that change might not have been sufficiently considered. No gentleman on the committee could have pretended to criticise the contract in that respect. I speak for myself quite frankly when I say I do not think the Minister of Justice on that occasion at all professed to answer, of his own knowledge, that everything was satisfactory. I am quite sure he decided to have it satisfactory in every respect; but this Bill is of such vast importance, so many millions are involved in it, that unless some explanation has been given the House since the meeting of the committee, beyond what took place in that committee, I do not think, we should pass this Bill as it is. I do not mean to say that there is anything wrong in it; but in a matter involving so many millions, and especially as we are not going to close this session for a week or two, it would be well, unless the right hon. gentleman has satisfied himself on those points, not to pass this Bill too hurriedly.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. The question raised by my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) was in a measure discussed in the committee on Monday last and was answered by the Minister of Finance, who quoted from a printed report of Mr. Shepley, who acted on behalf of the government in the preparation of these documents. Mr. Shepley did not pass this over in general terms at all as the hon. gentleman suggests, but devoted a large portion of his report at page 4 to the subject of these interim bonds. He said:

(a) The guarantee of interim bonds during the period of construction to be compulsorily convertible into the guaranteed permanent bonds on the completion of the work of construction, which was the scheme for interim aid contemplated by the agreement of 1903. During the negotiations it was found impracticable to devise a workable scheme on the precise lines of the agreement, and there were found to be formidable market objections to bonds issued on the terms contemplated. The method adopted in the mortgage submitted is to provide for the immediate issue of permanent bonds, adding to the fifty-year period of currency of such permanent bonds, which period was under the agreement to begin on the completion of the division, the seven years limited by the agreement of 1904 for such completion, making the bonds at once fifty-seven year bonds. The mortgage provides that the proceeds of these bonds as they are marketed from time to time are to be placed at the credit of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General in approved banks, and paid out from time to time with certain safeguards, as they are earned by construction work.

So the hon. gentleman will see that Mr. Shepley did discuss these bonds—I refer him now particularly to page 15 of the Bill, articles 3 and 4, which I think must have escaped the hon. gentleman in considering this question, because he will there find it is provided that these bonds are to be sold but are not to be handed over to the purchasers until it is certified that they have paid to the credit of the Minister of Finance and the Receiver General the full amount of these bonds to be held by him in trust and to be paid out only on the certificate of the chief engineer that the money has been properly earned. That apparently is what Mr. Shepley referred to in the words I have just read, namely, that the mortgage proceeds, as they are marketed from time to time, are to be placed at the credit of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General in approved banks and paid out from time to time with certain safeguards, as they are earned by construction work. The safeguards are provided in articles three and four of the mortgage, whereby the engineer is protected and so is the government. The schedule goes on:

During the period of construction the interest paid upon these bonds is added to and forms part of the cost of construction. During such period of construction, therefore, being presumably the seven years limited by the agreement of 1904, the permanent bonds now provided for perform the identical functions which the interim bonds would have performed under the original scheme.

When the work of construction is completed, these bonds inherently ripen into the fifty year permanent bonds contemplated by the agreement of 1903, and from that date all the provisions of the two agreements relating to permanent bonds begin to operate upon them. The difference is in my opinion merely formal, and does not in any degree alter the substance of the rights and obligations of the parties.

Consequently, I think that the objection which the hon. gentleman makes is met by Mr. Shepley's report and is met by the articles that I have referred to on page 15 of the Bill. This question was discussed in Committee of the Whole and answered partially in the way which I have answered it. What took place before the committee, I am sorry to say, I do not know as I was not present, but if this is the only objection I would ask that the Bill be allowed to pass to-night. It was held up on Monday night simply for the purpose of allowing the hon. gentleman to discuss this point, and I am not complaining at all, but I am informed by the railway company that they are very anxious to get their Bill through owing to the necessity of completing the financial arrangements which are in contemplation.

Mr. BARKER. I certainly would be very glad to facilitate the passage of the Bill. I have no desire to obstruct it in any way whatever.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. I do not mean to suggest that the hon. gentleman desires to obstruct the Bill.

Mr. BARKER. I do not think the hon. gentleman imputes that. I repeat I would be very glad to facilitate the passing of the Bill, but there is not a word in this report and there is not a statement of the hon. gentleman who has just spoken that adds anything whatever to what appeared at the Railway Committee. This report of Mr. Shepley had been in the hands of the Minister of Justice. It had also been in the hands of Mr. Chrysler before the meeting of the Railway Committee, but neither the Minister of Justice nor Mr. Chrysler was able to give an answer to the question I put. Mr. Chrysler admitted frankly and very properly that there was nothing in the contract enabling the government to reserve any portion of the progress estimates until the final completion of the work. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company are entitled, under the contract, to call for a progess estimate of all the work they have done. There is not a word from beginning to end of any reservation of any percentage for the final adjustment. Mr. Chrysler admitted that. I do not think my hon. friend who has just spoken will say there is one word in the schedules, Mr. Shepley's report, or in the Bill before the House inconsistent with that statement. I am quite sure if there had been anything to the contrary, Mr. Chrysler, who is thoroughly informed on the subject and who is, I believe, a very able lawyer, would have at once met the point I made and told me there was every protection to the government. There is no question whatever that in the original contract the government agreed to guarantee interim bonds, which bonds would ultimately be exchanged for permanent bonds on a final settlement of account. But, from beginning to end there is not one word to show that the interim bonds were to be issued for anything less than the full amount of the progress estimates.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. I have been trying to look it up, but I have not been able to find it; perhaps the hon. gentleman could tell me from recollection or from having looked it up: Did the original contract between the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company and the government provide for the retention of any percentage before the issuing of the interim bonds?

Mr. BARKER. Mr. Chrysler says expressly not. As I said before, I do not profess, with all the other things we have here, to have read through 108 pages of contracts in addition to the two Acts we already have on the statute-books with all their schedules for the purpose of searching out all the details. But, I asked the question of Mr. Chrysler: Is there any provision in the contract whereby a certain percentage of the progress estimates is reserved until the completion of the work. He said: No. I therefore pointed out, that, while in the original contract, the government might have been willing and might safely have issued an interim bond which was subject to adjustment and would have to be taken up before it got into the hands of the public, it would be a very different thing to at once issue instead of that interim bond a permanent bond that went on the market and bore the guarantee of the government. Mr. Chrysler met that in only one way. He said: I assume that the government will not issue more than they feel safe in issuing. But, that is not the contract.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. That is not the answer. The answer is that the proceeds of the bond go into the hands of the Minister of Finance and the Receiver General when they issue it.

Mr. BARKER. The hon. gentleman may wish to deal with the proceeds of the bond; I am dealing with the liability of the government after the bond gets into the hands of the bank or somebody else.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. If the government has the proceeds of the bonds that are outstanding they have the proceeds to meet the bonds so that there is no difficulty there. If the proceeds are not paid out improperly, if the engineer does his duty and if the proceeds of the bonds are in the hands of the Receiver General or the Minister of Finance in trust no harm can come to any one.

Mr. BARKER. I think the hon. gentleman does not quite understand my point. When the chief engineer issues certificates amounting to, say, $1,000,000, the company calls upon the government to guarantee bonds for $1,000,000. These bonds go out on the market, pass into the hands of the bank or some one else who will pay for them a certain amount of money, say, $1,000,000 less the bank discount. But these bonds are in the bands of the public and the government has undertaken to pay $1,000,000.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. The money does not go into the hands of the company. It goes into the hands of the Receiver General.

Mr. BARKER. You do get the cash for the $1,000,000 worth of bonds, but you apply the cash in payment of the progress certificates.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. The government has got the cash and the bank the bonds.

Mr. BARKER. The government issues bonds for $1,000,000. It may be that you get $950,000 for these bonds. The government is liable for $1,000,000 although there may be less than $950,000 worth of work done.

Mr. L. G McCARTHY. They have not paid that out.

Mr. BARKER. They have signed the guarantee and the government are good for whatever they sign. I am not proposing to criticise this contract. It is not my business to do it. It is the business of the government of the country and if the hon. Minister of Justice or the right hon. Prime Minister says the government have considered that question and they are satisfied, I have nothing more to say. But, I consider it my duty to point out to the government that there is no safeguard here, that there is no limitation, as is usual with all contracts entered into by railway companies, reserving a percentage until the final completion of the work. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company may issue bonds for $50,000,000. The proceeds of these bonds may be $45,000,000. Of what advantage it is to the government that they are to receive and pay out theh $45,000,000 when perhaps less than that amount of work may have been done. The bank or somebody else who has advanced the money has their guarantee for $50,000,000? The government cannot say they are not responsible for it. They cannot confine their responsibility to the amount of the cash advanced on these bonds or make their responsibility conditional upon a final settlement of construction account. The moment the government put their guarantee on an issue of $1,000,000 this country is liable for the whole $1,000,000. In the ordinary course the government of Canada with $100,000,000 certified by its engineer would only advance $85,000,000, or it would not guarantee more than that sum. But, under this arrangement the government guarantees the whole $100,000,000 unless there is something in these contracts that neither Mr. Chrysler nor the Minister of Justice was able to point out.

Mr. HAGGART. The old form of agreement with the contractors was to issue interim bonds, but they found it difficult to negotiate these and they asked to exchange them for permanent bonds to which the government consented on the condition that when the bonds are issued they will get the cash for them.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. The government gets the cash.

Mr. HAGGART. The government gets the cash for the whole of the bonds before they issue one dollar, and the obligation the government enters into is to pay them out as the work proceeds. My hon. friend (Mr. Barker) asks what guarantee they have that the work is done when they issue the money, and he says that the certificate of an under engineer is all the authority there is to issue the bonds. But the fact is this: the Grand Trunk Pacific enter into a contract with contractors to build the road, and the government only advances 75 per cent——

Mr. BARKER. Where do you find that?

Mr. HAGGART. Then the government have the security of the contract which the Grand Trunk Pacific makes with the contractor, and very likely that contract is that they will advance everything upon the work done except 15 per cent. Anyway if Mr. Shepley's opinion is correct at all, the government may make the advance on such conditions as they please.

Mr. BARKER. He does not say that.

Mr. HAGGART. He does, he says:

> The mortgage provides that the proceeds of these bonds as they are marketed from time to time are to be placed at the credit of the Minister of Finance and the Receiver General, and paid out from time to time with certain safeguards as they are earned on construction work.

Mr. BARKER. It does not say what the safeguards are.

Mr. HAGGART. Mr. Shepley says there are safeguards. After all, the government guarantee 15 per cent, and they get the whole money from the bonds into their hands. Then they pay out on the contract as it advances. The probability is that the Grand Trunk Pacific will not advance more than 85 per cent of the cost of construction to the contractor, and if Mr. Shepley is right, they can even then only advance it on such conditions and safeguards as the government may think fit.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY. The fears of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Barker) as to what the contract may permit are not well founded. Section 4, at page 15 of the Bill, states:

> In proportion as the construction of the western division is proceeded with to the satisfaction of the government, according to the specifications agreed upon or to be agreed upon between the government and the Pacific Company, the government shall, out of the said proceeds and interest, pay to the Pacific Company or its nominees, in monthly payments as far as practicable, such sums as the chief engineer appointed by the government or such other officer as the government may appoint for that purpose, may certify are earned, having regard to the cost, at the date of such certificate, of construction work as hereinbefore defined, and having regard to the proportion of the cost of construction which, under the scheduled agreements, is to be met by the proceeds of bonds guaranteed by the government.

That is consistent with what Mr. Chrysler said in the committee, that the matter was entirely in the hands of the government. The suggestion of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Barker) is that there ought to be some words in the contract leaving it in the hands of the government, but in the contract are these very words: That these contracts are to proceed according to specifications to be agreed upon between the company and the government, and the money is not paid out upon the progress estimates upon the certificate of a junior engineer, but 'on certificate of the chief engineer or some other officer specially appointed by the government for that purpose.' The matter is therefore entirely in the hands of the government to make the specifications in the form which they see fit. The chief engineer has it then absolutely in his own hands to see that too much money is not paid out. He is responsible to the government and the government to the people, that more money than is earned is not paid out. I believe that this is even more safe than the retaining of 15 or 20 per cent, as is usual when interim bonds are issued. Therefore, I would ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Barker) to allow the Bill to go, if that is the only objection he has.

Mr. BARKER. Mr. Speaker——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Carried.

Mr. BARKER. The hon gentleman from York (Mr. Campbell) may call 'carried' as usual, but before it is carried I want the responsibility of the government on this question, and not the responsibility of the member for Centre York.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Spoken.

Mr. BARKER. If the First Minister is satisfied I have nothing more to say. I do not propose to accept the statement of the hon. member who introduces this Bill on behalf of the company as an answer to my question with regard to the protection of the country. I have no fault whatever to find with the hon. gentleman; he introduced this Bill on behalf of the company, not on behalf of the public. If the First Minister, or the Minister of Justice, or the Minister of Finance, says that he is perfectly satisfied, I have nothing more to say. If I am a guarantor, I want to see that there was $100 worth of work done in respect to every $100 I guarantee. If some responsible member of the government says he is satisfied, I do not raise any further question. It is not fair to the members of this House to throw into their hands on the morning that the question comes before the Railway Committee, 108 pages of agreements, and ask the members to pass upon them. I asked the question of the Minister of Justice and of Mr. Chrysler at the time, and I got no answer, but I am willing to accept the statement of the First Minister in that regard.

Mr. FIELDING. I accept the view of my hon. friend (Mr. Barker) that it is not reasonable to expect any individual member of the House to make himself familiar with all the details of this very elaborate document. All that we can do in a case of that kind is to see that the various points involved in the matter are considered as they arise, and that upon them we have the advice of competent legal authority that the rights and privileges of the country are protected in every respect. My hon. friend wants some one to say on behalf of the government that we are satisfied that the interests of Canada, as represented by the government, are properly protected. The members of the government have been advised by very careful and competent authority, and we are perfectly satisfied that at every point the interests of the government under this contract have been properly protected, and that the mortgage carries out to the fullest degree the intentions of parliament as expressed in this legislation.

Mr. BARKER. The counsel expressly said that the terms of the contract as passed by parliament were being altered.

Mr. L. G. McCARTHY.

Mr. FIELDING. Not as respects the obligations of the government. They were amplified in certain respects, but the obligations of the government have not thereby been altered at all.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the third time and passed.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT IN THE NORTHWEST.

House in committee on Bill (No. 69) to establish and provide for the government of the province of Alberta.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

On section 12—distribution of seats—

Mr. PERLEY. My right hon. friend the Prime Minister has suggested that we ought to try to go into this question with what he calls an open mind. Now, I have endeavoured, with the figures given to us by the government, to make up my mind as to whether the division proposed by the government is a fair one or not. This is a very grave and important question. We are forming two new provinces in the Northwest, which are practically the wards of this Dominion, and I am sure that my hon. friend the Prime Minister, if he had two wards of his own, would try to clear up everything before he launched them on life on their own account. He would not leave them in such a position that when they came of age they would be sure immediately to have trouble before they learned to take care of themselves. Our object should be to avoid friction—to avoid causing to any portion of the people of these provinces a feeling of injustice, which they may spend their first session, and perhaps their first years, in trying to rectify. They will have their hands full taking care of their own family affairs, trying to set their house in order and get started on the business of life; and they should not have thrust upon them any trouble of this kind. I do not see that this is a question of Dominion politics at all. It seems to me that all we ought to try to do is to have this first election in the province of Alberta conducted in as fair and equitable a way as possible, so that every man entitled to vote shall have just as much to say about forming the new government as any other man in the province. Surely a question of this kind is above party politics. Surely we can lay aside all feelings of partisanship, and try to ensure to every man in the new province fair-play. I for one do not think the Prime Minister of this country would lend himself and the strength of the great Liberal party behind him in helping any section of people in the new province of Alberta to control that province. The question of the location of the capital of the province will probably be settled by the first election; and I do not think this government should lend their influence either to help the people of the north to establish the capital permanently at Edmonton, or to help the people of the south to establish it at Calgary. Now, I have gone as carefully as I could into the figures given by the Prime Minister yesterday, and I hope to be able to convince him from his own figures that he has not given every man in the province the same right that he has given to every other man in regard to this first vote. But before coming to that, I wish to say a few words about the side issues, as I may call them. The government have laid before us certain figures with regard to post offices. I submit that the number of post offices has nothing whatever to do with this question. If the government had brought down the amount of revenue derived from the post offices north and south of township 38, I think it would have been some index of the population and of the business carried on in the different sections.

But I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the number of post offices is no index whatever to the number of people who live in the different sections of the country. A comparison was made to-day between the city of Calgary and one of the rural constituencies. Some hon. member from the other side found fault with this comparison, but I submit that a comparison between two rural constituencies would show, not as much difference, but still a vast difference. I know from my own section of the country here that we certainly have some townships eight or ten miles square which have five or six times as many post offices as will be found in another township of the same area, but that does not prove that there are not more people in the second township. That proves nothing, but I would acknowledge that the revenue would have something to do with the question. I would say the same thing in regard to the school district. The government bring down the number of school districts, but they do not bring down the number of the school population. The school population would show a good deal in regard to the population of the district but the number of schools in any given township affords no indication whatever of the number of people in the district. I therefore submit that these two sets of figures brought down are of absolutely no use on either side of this argument.

With regard to the population according to the census of 1901, I think the Minister of the Interior will agree with me that it is no index to the number of people in the country to-day or in any part of the country. In other words the stream of immigration varies. The minister himself gave us an instance the other day of a certain part of Alberta where there was an exceptionally large stream of immigration going in. I therefore cannot see that the census figures of 1901 are any more indication as to the proportionate number of people in north and south Alberta than if the census had not been taken, or had been made up by a clerk in the Agriculture Department here without going into the country at all. The reason I say that is because the difference between the votes polled and the census population in some constituencies is very startling. In Rosebud there were 733 votes polled, and in the census of 1901 only 1,036 people; evidently that township has increased very rapidly. In High River, the one next to it, the votes polled were 1,021 and the census population in 1901, 2,472, showing that it had not increased nearly as fast as Rosebud. In the same way I might go down the list and find many other discrepancies of a similar nature. It therefore seems to me that, in view of the fact that the Northwest has been growing so rapidly and that the growth in different sections has not been equal, it is absolutely impossible to form any judgment whatever from the census of 1901 as to the number of people in the different sections of the proposed province of Alberta to-day. I submit that there are only two sets of figures that are of any value to any practical man in determining the number of people in that province to-day and the chief one is the voters' list of last fall and to a certain extent the number of votes cast. Any other figures, it seems to me, are absolutely useless and only tend to confuse the minds of hon. gentlemen on the matter.

As some side matters have been brought into the discussion I propose to give to the committee some figures which I have here with reference to the receipts of the Canadian Pacific Railway during 1903-4 on their lines of railway in the proposed province of Alberta. These figures were prepared by an official of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the Northwest, and may therefore be considered as authentic. The first set of figures I have, show the percentage of passenger receipts in 1904 at the six largest places in the proposed province of Alberta. The percentages were as follows :

	Per cent.
Medicine Hat	8·08
Banff	4·87
Macleod	6·83
Calgary	53·88
Lethbridge	8·54
Strathcona	17·78

The only place in the north of Alberta is Strathcona which includes Edmonton and which had 17·78 per cent of the passenger receipts of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the proposed province of Alberta in 1904. If hon. gentlemen opposite are going to bring in outside figures in support of the distribution of constituencies which they propose, I submit that these figures with regard to the Canadian Pacific Railway are of far more value than the number of post offices, the number of school districts, or the census of 1901.

The Canadian Pacific Railway tonnage for the years 1903-4 added together, including goods forwarded and received at the different stations on the Canadian Pacific Railway in the proposed districts are as follows :

	Per cent.
In the south—
Medicine Hat section	6·5
Calgary section	1·9
Calgary	21·4
Calgary to Laggan	5·5
Bellington to Red Deer	7·0
In the north—
Blackfalds to Ellersley	7·0
Strathcona	7·5
In the south—
Calgary to Macleod	5·5
Lethbridge section	2·6
Lethbridge	26·2
Cranbrook section	8·4

Thus the north contributed 15 per cent and the south 85 per cent. In order that there may be no misunderstanding, I wish to say that about one-half of the length of the Medicine Hat section, from Swift Current to Walsh, will not be in the future province of Alberta, but all the other lines for which the figures are given will be entirely within its boundaries. I claim that the fact that 85 per cent of the tonnage of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the future province of Alberta is south of this mysterious township 38 is some indication, at all events, that there are more people in the south than in the north which provides only 15 per cent.

The present division of constituencies for the Northwest Territories in the future province of Alberta, is, as has been stated many times, nine in the south and six in the north. The hon. Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) has rather found fault with my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) because he said yesterday that if it were divided in the same way, there would be 15 in the south and 10 in the north. I do not propose to argue that there should be 15 in the south and 10 in the north. At the same time, I believe that the people in that country knew something of what they were doing when they made this division of 9 in the south and 6 in the north. I have heard no serious complaint about it, and, as I understand it, the government of the Northwest is not a party government, and never has been, but is made up of both sides of politics. I therefore feel that the present division of 9 to the south and 6 to the north must have had some merit—there must have been some reason for it. While I do not argue for it, because I have seen the figures, yet there must have been some reason for it, and I do not think the Minister of the Interior should have found fault with my hon. friend from Calgary for referring to it. The minister fights his own battles pretty hard, and I think the hon. member for Calgary should use every effort to maintain his own case. But I believe a division of 15 to the south and 10 to the north would be far nearer right than would the suggestion brought down by the government and so heartily approved by the Minister of the Interior. It would be nearer fair play to give the people of the south 15 seats out of 25 than to give them 12 out of 25, and I hope to give some figures presently to prove it. The hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) has been working on this matter for a long time to my knowledge and has got out many facts and figures about it. I think he deserves the thanks of both sides for the labour he has undertaken. I do not know how long the government have had these figures, but I think they might have brought them down and saved members of the opposition much personal work, for we are entitled to have the figures from the government. There are two parties in this country, notwithstanding that the government seen inclined to keep information to themselves to the last moment as though they were the only party.

What does the Minister of the Interior reply to the facts and arguments of my hon. friend from Calgary ? He begins by talking about partisans. He accuses the hon. member for Calgary of being a partisan merely because he has taken a lot of care—which as far as I know, nobody can find fault with—and tried to show his side of the case. It seems to me that if the minister had any real answer to these figures, he would not have spoken about partisans. This is a question that ought not to be argued on such a basis. My hon. friend from Calgary offered an amendment, that this matter should be left to the judges. I submit that, while the question of referring to the judges is one for parliament to decide, it is clear that the arrangement of the constituencies is a matter that could be readily determined by the board of judges proposed by my hon. friend from Calgary. The Minister of the Interior yesterday made a most extraordinary remark with regard to this proposition. He said :

> The contention that an injustice has been done I submit has not been made out before the House. I submit it cannot be made out, and as I said in the beginning it would certainly be a very fortunate body of judges who would give a decision favourable to a proposal now before the House and escape criticism as active partisans by hon. gentlemen when their position had been ignored.

If the hon. minister is so satisfied with this case, why does he object to leaving it to the judges ? Hon. members on this side have stated that if it were left to the judges we would be satisfied. I do not think it was a wise criticism on the part of the Minister of the Interior to say that there was no possibility of our being satisfied with any decision arrived at by the committee of judges.

In trying to arrive at a conclusion in my own mind on this matter, I have taken this line of township 38 not because I know the country—for I do not, I am going entirely on the figures—but because other hon. gentlemen have taken it. As well as I can figure it out from the population—that is the votes cast and the voters' names on the lists—the south should receive 14 members and the north 11 members, instead of the south 12 and the north 13. If the south received 14 that would be 56 per cent of the whole and the percentage of the north would be 44. The hon. minister stated yesterday that the number of votes cast taken as the basis for each constituency would figure about 800. To clear up the discussion somewhat, I may say that, after looking into the details, I am quite satisfied that the figures as provided by the government and as submitted by the hon. member for Calgary are practically the same—in working out, the percentage of difference is so small as to be of no importance. In my calculations, I have adopted the figures of the government. It makes no difference in the number of members north and south which figures are used. Yesterday, the Minister of the Interior stated there would be 11,406 votes cast in the twelve proposed southern constituencies—I think that they should be 11,410, and that 'Hansard' is mistaken —and 9,553 in the eleven northern constituencies. The trouble with the figures, and the reason why there seems to be a difference in the argument on either side, is that the two proposed constituencies in Athabaska are left out of the calculation. The minister says there are 12 constituencies in the south with 11,410 votes and 11 in the north with 9,553 votes. As a matter of fact, there are 13 in the north with 9,553 votes cast in the last election. There are a few other people in Athabaska, but they are so few—as I shall show before I get through—as to make practically no difference. That makes a total of 20,963, out of which the north has only 45 per cent.

I submit that the proper way, however, is to take the number of votes on the list. I would like to ask the right hon. gentleman whether, if he had been sick and unable to vote at the last general election, he thinks he should not have the right to vote at the next? Does he think that because, from any reason, he was unable to vote, his name should not be counted as a voter? I happened to see in one of to-night's newspapers that in North Oxford, at the general election last fall, there were cast 4,034 votes, and that at the election a few days ago the number who voted was 5,361. Would any man who was adjusting this question on a business basis claim that the votes cast last fall were the ones to be taken into account in determining the revision of that county? Would not the voters' lists in any part of the country be the only fair and proper way of determining the population in the different constituencies, if you have no census to go on? I appeal to the right hon. the First Minister if the number of votes on the voter's lists is not a fairer test of the population of a county proportionateiy than the number of votes cast? If I am in a constituency with 5,000 votes on the list, and an hon. gentleman opposite is in a constituency with an equal number of votes on the list, and if at the last election there were 3,500 votes cast in his constituency and only 3,000 in mine, surely that would be no proof that there were less people in mine than in his. If I have 5,000 on my list and the hon. gentleman has the same number on his, in default of other information, it must be conceded that these constituencies are equal in population.

The number of votes on the lists, if taken instead of the number of votes cast, would tell against the hon. gentleman. I would not care to say that that is the reason why the hon. minister takes the votes cast, but I would like to hear some good reason why the number cast should be taken in preference to the number on the lists. The twelve constituencies south of township 38 last fall had on the voters' lists for the Dominion 17,087, according to the figures of the First Minister given yesterday. North of the said township the number was 12 863. This made a total of 29,950 altogether. The number cast north was 43 per cent of the whole and the number south 57 per cent, and my idea is that the number of seats north should be 44 per cent and the number south 56 per cent.

Before passing on to another branch of the subject, I wish to refer to a few figures given to-day by the right hon. the First Minister. In his calculation to-day he left out the constituency of Red Deer. He said there was north of Red Deer eleven constituencies with 9,533 votes cast at the last election, and that south of Red Deer there were eleven with 10,566 votes cast. The figures are quite accurate as far as I am informed. But he said, surely that is near enough for anybody, and the south ought to be satisfied with eleven seats. But, according to these figures, there are 1,033 more votes in the south than north, and, taking the vote cast in some constituencies last fall—in one there was 645 and another 589—you find that this 1,033 of discrepancy is equal to one and a-half constituencies. With regard to the numbers on the voters' lists, as given this afternoon, the discrepancy is even worse. Take these figures on whatver basis you like, it will be found that the votes cast were more in favour last fall of the north than the number on the voters' lists.

A reason has been given why there was not a larger vote cast in the south last fall. But I do not think it is necessary to give any reason. I do not think any judge would say it matters whether the votes were cast or not. But the right hon. gentleman said that there were on the voters' lists in these eleven proposed constituencies south of Red Deer 15,895 and in the eleven north 12,863—a mere difference of 3,032. But if the average of each constituency on the lists is 1,200, which I understand it to be practically, there are two constituencies and a-half given to the north, even taking the figures of the First Minister, more than to the south. Therefore, the north is apparently getting an advantage which I for one would like to see somewhat rectified. In these figures Athabaska has been left out again. The right hon. gentleman says that in the north there are 12,863 votes on the lists for eleven constituencies—but they are to have thirteen constituencies. It does not seem fair to discuss this matter with regard to the old province of Alberta and leave out the proposed new constituencies which have so few people in them entitled to vote.

I propose to say a few words with regard to Athabaska. In the first place, the suggestion of some hon. members on this side that Athabaska should be added to another constituency has been taken up wrongly by hon. gentlemen opposite. There has been no suggestion on this side that these people in Athabaska should have no representation. We have gone beyond the time when we think people should be deprived of representation if that can possibly be avoided. But what hon. members on this side do say is that Athabaska should not have two constituencies given it for comparatively few voters and the constituencies on the south be deprived of their rights. By being added to another constituency the people of Athabaska would have their representation, but they would only have what is due them and not the extraordinary representation proposed by this Bill.

Now, in reference to Athabaska, first of all, I want to read the words uttered by the right hon. Prime Minister yesterday. In speaking of this subject he said:

> I admit at once that the suggestion that would at once occur to any man's mind under some circumstances would be to join such districts to existing districts.

Of course, that is the very first thing that any one would think of. Then he goes on to tell about the size of the country and how impossible it would be for anybody to visit the whole of this country in election time. I would like very much if I could get an answer from every hon. member in this House as to whether he visited every part of his constituency at the last election or not. I would like to know what percentage of the country members of parliament were able to visit the whole of their constituencies during the last election. In certain constituencies they can do it, but there are many constituencies in both Ontario and Quebec, to say nothing of British Columbia, where it is impossible to visit the whole of them. The constituency which I have the honour to represent is one of the smaller constituencies of Quebec, and still I was not in all parts of the constituency during the last election simply because there was no time to cover the whole ground. I have here a small map of the province of Quebec showing the counties of Montcalm, Joliette, Berthier, Maskinongé and St. Maurice. These counties extend from the St. Lawrence to the original boundary of the province of Quebec. The people who live at the back end of these counties are never visited in election time. Probably a member would never, during the whole of his life, be able to visit these people and still can anybody say that these people have no representation? I submit that Athabaska is exactly in the same position and that the constituencies should be carved out giving representation to the north and giving representation to these people but that they should not have any more voting power per man than any other voter in the proposed province. Further than that there is a stronger case in Quebec than this one I have cited. When the northern boundary of the province was changed a few years ago no representation whatever was given to the part taken in north of the original boundary. It has no representation now. It has no recognized constituencies and it is administered as an annex of certain of the old constituencies. These people in Athabaska have got along for many years without any representation at all, and it seems rather strange that there should be such solicitude at the present moment that they should be represented are very much overrepresented. It seems to me that if they are given proper representation by population now, they will be very well satisfied, and that is all they can possibly expect. The hon. Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) spoke in a slighting way yesterday in regard to the large business and wealth of the people in Southern Alberta. He says that money does not have votes, that it is the people who have votes. Well, that is what we want them to have. We want the people to get votes, one vote for one man and no more, but if the government give to the unoccupied part of Athabaska two constituencies to elect members it seems to me that the minister will have to register a lot of white fish and spruce trees up there to get the proper number of voters for these constituencies. The hon. minister has made a strong plea for the representation of the northern part of this new province on account of its great future. We will grant that it is going to have a great future. I do not think it was necessary for the hon. minister to set forth this argument about the future of the country because I do not think any one will say it is not going to be a great country. We all hope and expect it will and we will all be very much disappointed if we are mistaken. But, I submit that the future of the northern part of the province has nothing to do with its representation to-day. This legislation is for to-day only. An election has to be held within six months of the passing of this Bill, and I have yet to learn that it is customary or wise for any government or parliament, in dividing a province up into constituencies at a given time, to give any part of it special representation, because of what the future is going to be. When this country was divided up into Dominion constituencies, the province of Quebec was given 65 members, and the province of Ontario the number it was entitled to by population, but there was no argument made that there is going to be a great state developed next to Hudson bay some day and we should carve out a constituency up there and give them a member because they may need one in ten or twenty years. The needs of to-day are the only proper and fair basis to go upon in dividing up Alberta for a purely local election which must take place during the current year. I further submit that the hon. minister has made out no case to show that the north has increased any faster in the last year or two than the south. We have the good fortune of knowing that they have both increased, but last year the homestead entries at Lethbridge and Calgary south of this mysterious township 38 were 4,554 while the homestead entries last year north—that is at Red Deer and Edmonton—were 4,057. In other words last year there were 497 less homestead entries north of this line than there were south. Further than that my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) yesterday gave some figures taken from a map which had been prepared from government sources showing the thickly settled townships and the sparsely settled townships, which figures go to show that there has been no proportionately greater increase in the north than in the south because there were 325 thickly settled townships south of this mysterious line and 247 north ; that is to say 44 per cent north and 56 per cent south. The sparsely settled townships are even more in favour of the south. I find from my hon. friend's figures that there are 64½ per cent of the sparsely settled townships south and 35½ per cent north. I merely quote these figures to show that the northern part of this province has certainly not increased more in proportion during the last year or two than the south has. In regard to the future increase the hon. minister dilated yesterday in glowing terms.

Let us grant that the north is going to increase ; we hope so and we think so. But is the south not going to increase ? What reason is there to say that the south is going to stand still ? Are the people of the south less progressive than the people of the north; are they less business like and less industrious? It seems to me that the statement is beyond refutation, when I say that the present condition of affairs in that new province must be the true consideration in this purely local and temporary matter. It is unfair to import into the consideration of the question guesses as to the future.

How many people are there in the part of Athabaska that will be included in the province of Alberta? Yesterday the Prime Minister stated that there were 1,724 people, according to the census of 1901 in the Peace River new constituency, and 1,676 in Athabaska according to the same census, a total of 3,400. I asked the right hon. gentleman if this included the Indians and he said he did not think it did, but I am sure the right hon. gentleman was mistaken in that. The Indians must be included in those figures and for this reason. According to the census of 1901, the population of the whole of Athabaska was 6,615, including whites, Indians and half-breeds. Out of this number there were 3,716 Indians or 58·5 per cent of the whole, and these Indians would have no vote. There were 2,395 half-breeds or 37·7 per cent of the whole, and there were 242 white men, being 3·8 per cent of the total population. In addition to these there were 262 given as unspecified as to race. I have applied the same basis of percentage to these 262 unspecified, and the result would give 253 whites altogether, or 2,746 half-breeds and white men together in the whole of Athabaska in 1901. Therefore when the Prime Minister said he thought there were 3,400 people in this half of Athabaska, not counting the Indians, he made a mistake. I have made inquiries from people who know something about it, and I am told there are no more white men in Athabaska to-day than there were in 1901 ; in fact I am told there are probably less, because expeditions started out for the Yukon by way of Edmonton which were unable to get there, and a good many of these men remained in Athabaska for a time. The 2,746 half-breeds and white men in Athabaska divided by five, would give 549 voters in the whole of Athabaska. How many voters there are in this half of the territory which goes to Alberta nobody knows ; the government do not seem to know. However, if we take one-half of the whole vote in Athabaska, it will give us 275 voters in this part. For the sake of argument I will say that there are 300 voters in the part of Athabaska that will belong to Alberta. I submit, that considering there are only 2,746 half-breeds and whites in the whole of Athabaska altogether, an allowance of 300 voters for the western half is quite liberal. The Prime Minister's figures of 3,400 as the population must have included Indians, and taking the same percentages as above. I have figured out that there are 1,411 out of that total of 3,400 who would be white men and half breeds, and dividing that by five, it would give 282 votes for the western part of Athabaska which is put in Alberta. This calculation is made on the figures given by the Prime Minister himself. It seems to me that it is a fair calculation to allow 300 votes for the part of Athabaska that will be in the new province of Alberta. Before I go further I appeal to the Minister of the Interior if it is not correct to say that some of these 300 voters who live in Athabaska are on the voters' lists and vote in old Alberta, in the constituency of the hon. minister. These men are wanderers, they do not live in any particular place, they scatter about, and I have been told that many of the half-breeds that really live in Athabaska and are counted in the census there voted in the constituency of Edmonton at the last election. Now I have come to the figures which it seems to me are the only figures that any reasonable man can say ought to be the basis of the proportion of the different constituencies in this new province of Alberta. In the first place I take the number of votes cast at the last election which is the basis the Minister of the Interior relies on. I have taken the trouble to sift the figures given by the Prime Minister yesterday, and I find that out of the votes cast at the last election, the constituencies numbered No. 8 to No. 7 in this schedule :—Medicine Hat, Cardston, Lethbridge, Macleod, Pincher, Gleichen, Calgary city—these constituencies cast 7,265 votes. The eleven constituencies in the middle numbered No. 1 to No. 18 are fairly dealt with in this Bill. They are given as nearly as possible the unit of the vote cast, and the unit of 1,200 on the voters' lists. At the last election these 11 middle constituencies cast 9,063 votes or an average for each constituency of 824, so that we may dismiss them altogether from the argument.

When the first seven constituencies in the south cast 7,265 votes, how many did the last seven northern constituencies cast—Nos. 19 to 25—Stony Plain, Edmonton City, Saskatchewan, St. Albert, Sturgeon, Peace River and Athabaska ? They cast 4,635 votes. Each of the seven southern constituencies cast an average of 1,035 votes, and each of the seven northern constituencies cast an average of 662 votes. Will any man say that that is fair-play—that 7,265 voters in the south should have only as much to say as 4,635 in the north ? Now, I may say that the number of voters on the list last November is absolutely the only information before this House that is worth a button with regard to the number of people in the province. According to the figures given by the Prime Minister, which I accept, and which are practically the same as those of my hon. friend from Calgary, the eleven middle constituencies, Nos. 8 to 18, are fairly dealt with. In these eleven constituencies there were on the voters' list last November, 13,264 votes, an average of 1,206, almost exactly the proper unit for the division of these constituencies. But the first seven in the south had on the voters' list 10,784 votes, an average of 1,540, and the last seven in the north had on the list 5,902, an average of 843. In other words, 10,784 voters in the south are supposed to have only as much to say as 5,902 in the north. Surely no man can claim that that is fair-play. Adding to the north the greatest number of votes that can possibly be expected in the western half of Athabaska, even then the average in the seven constituencies in the north will be only 886, as against an average of the seven constituencies in the south of 1,540. Now, I would like to ask why one vote in Stony Plain is just as good as over two in Pincher. I would like to ask why 156 votes in the city of Calgary are only as good as 100 votes in the city of Edmonton. And, worst of all, by the proposal made in this Bill, it is intended that 300 voters in Peace River and Athabaska shall have twice as much to say as 1,701 voters in Edmonton or 2,653 in Calgary. Are the people in the north so much more intelligent, so much more powerful, so much more wealthy, so much more active, that they are entitled to undue consideration in comparison with the people of the south ? I think it is a patent fact known to everybody that the bulk of these people in the north are half-breeds, and people from the south of Europe. In fact, the figures I have read show that only about 10 per cent of the votes in Athabaska are white people, and all the others are half-breeds. Now, it is proposed to give to these half-breed voters in Peace River and Athabaska all this extraordinary and undue predominance in votes. Each of these half-breeds is to wield eighteen times as much power as a man in Calgary, and ten or twelve times as much as a man in Edmonton. It seems to me that if intelligence is to be taken into consideration, it ought to be the other way—the white man should have the greater power of voting, and not the half-breed. I understand that most of these half-breeds can neither read nor write, and that a large number of the people in that country from the south of Europe, know nothing of the sanctity of the franchise—do not understand what it means at all; and I submit that to give a greater proportion of voting power to people of that character is a course that no reasonable man would suggest or expect. My idea is that a fair way of settling this purely local and temporary matter is to give as nearly as possible the same power to every voter in the country in this election. If this new province wishes to give these northern areas undue representation after it becomes a province, that is its own business; but so far as we are concerned, surely the proper thing for us to do with these infant children of ours is to give each voter in them the same voting power If you have 30,000 voters and 25 seats, give every one of the constituencies 1,200 votes as nearly as possible. These people in the north should not get any more representation than the others, so far as we are concerned. That is a local matter. In settling their local affairs, whether the people of the province put their capital at Calgary or at Edmonton, I do not care; but I think that one man should have as much right to say where the capital should be as another man, and I do not think the half-breed in the northern country should have ten, twelve or eighteen times as much to say as a man in Edmonton or Calgary. Now, I have endeavoured to go into this matter as fairly as I know how. I know nothing about the country except from reading; I know nothing about the local disputes, except that I understand that they are largely about the location of the capital; and surely we do not care sufficiently where the capital is put to stultify ourselves by giving the people in a certain part of the province a pull over the others. It seems to me that the only fair and proper way for us to do is to give to every man who has a right to vote in that new province as nearly as possible the same powers as any other man in them, whether he is in Athabaska or Calgary, in the north or in the south.

If there is a dispute as to the capital in the province let them fight it out themselves. Why should a half-breed in Athabaska have ten or twenty times as much to say about the settlement of this first question in the new province as a good white man in Edmonton or Calgary? If there are 25 seats and 30,000 voters then as nearly as possibly every constituency should have 1,200 votes, and it is unfair to compare the 11 constituencies north of Red Deer and the 11 south, overlooking the two constituencies away in the north with practically no voters. If this were a business matter, a dispute between business men, we would get together and agree on it; even among bitter enemies in business an agreement would be reached. It is a local matter of which we should get rid. I therefore appeal to the Prime Minister for fair-play to all the people in the proposed new province of Alberta, I submit that the schedules should be so altered, if the government cannot agree to the amendment of the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy), that no voter should be at an undue disadvantage or think he was prejudiced in his rights in this first subject for consideration in the new legislature.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. As one of the representatives from the proposed new province of Alberta, and as I have studied this question to a great extent since it was decided to place the boundaries of the proposed province, I wish to give my views to the committee. When a portion of the territory of Athabaska was added to the old district of Alberta, forming the proposed new province of Alberta, we all became very much interested, or at least I did, in learning as much as could be learned about the southern portion of the whole of that portion of Athabaska. By reference to the map you will see that the portion of Athabaska added to this province is about 350 miles from east to west and somewhat more than that from north to south. The southeast portion of it you will notice is drained by the Athabaska river and the southwestern portion by the Peace River. As a resident of the Northwest Territories for a number of years I know that those two portions of that territory have been attracting a good deal of attention. I know that large numbers of people are going up to the valley of the Athabaska river and that still greater numbers are going to the valley of the Peace River. They are attracted there by the encouraging reports of people who have been there for years. I endeavoured to get all the information I could relative to those two portions of Athabaska, and I have some information that perhaps has not yet been given to the committee. The valley of the Athabaska, that is the proposed district of Athabaska in this new province, I found, after making careful inquiry and getting information from various sources has at present twenty-four stores, thirteen churches, eight schools, four sawmills, three shingle mills, two plaining mills, one flour mill, seven steamboats, and three Royal Northwest Mounted Police Posts. Those of us who live in the Northwest know that that country has been attracting a great deal of attention and there is an immense trade between Edmonton and the Athabaska valley or the proposed district of Athabaska. Any district in the new province in which so much money and energy are expended is certainly entitled to a representative. The Peace River district I found in even a more flourishing condition. I found there eighteen stores, ten churches, six schools, four sawmills, five shingle mills three plaining mills, five flour mills (one of which is a fifty barrel roller mill and four of them stone mills), three steamboats, one Royal Northwest Mounted Police Post and three steam threshers. It is well known that what is called the Grande Prairie, a portion of the Peace River valley is one of the most productive and fertile districts in the west. I maintain that that district also is entitled to one representative in the new legislature. In addition to that I found there was a considerable amount of money invested by traders in that country. The Hudson Bay Company alone have invested over $350,000; Braden & Cornwall have invested $150,000; there is another outfit with $25,000, another with $50,000 and six others with $5,000 each, making a total of over $600,000 invested in trading in that country at the present time. After coming to the conclusion that that portion of Athabaska is entitled to two representatives, as I did, I set to work to see how we would divide the remaining twenty-three constituencies in the rest of the country. Unfortunately we cannot ascertain the exact population of that country. We all believe, I know the hon. members on the other side, as well as on this believe in representation by population. Unfortunately we cannot get the exact population and there are no means by which we can get it. I contend that the nearest thing will be to take the vote that was actually polled in the late election in November and along with that any other evidence of settlement that we can find. That is what I did and I came to certain conclusions. I found south of Red Deer 10,556 votes and north of Red Deer 9,563 votes.

Now, there are five cities in the Northwest—Regina, Moosejaw, Prince Albert, Edmonton and Calgary. Some of these cities are slightly larger than others, but there is no great difference in their size. We believe that each of these cities should have a representative of its own. I have said there were 10,566 votes south of Red Deer. Take away the vote polled in the city of Calgary, which, I think, was 2,186. This leaves, for the rural part south of Red Deer, 8,380 votes. I have said that north of Red Deer there were 9,563 votes. Take out the vote polled in Edmonton—1,343, and we have 8,320 votes remaining. That will leave for the 10 rural constituencies south of Red Deer an average of 838 votes, and for the 10 rural constituencies north of Red Deer an average of 822 votes. I maintain that nobody could make a division fairer than that.

I wish to draw attention to the figures prepared by the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy). I maintain that there is not a very great difference between his and ours. At the same time, I think I can show where he has made some slight mistakes. According to the hon. gentleman's calculation there were 10,833 votes cast in the south, and 9,394 cast in the north. Take from the vote cast in the south 2,180 for the city of Calgary, and you have a remainder of 8,653. Take from the votes cast in the north 1,343 votes cast in Edmonton and you have a remainder of 8,051. So, according to the hon. member's figures, there is an average for the ten rural constituencies of the south of 865, and in the rural ten constituencies in the north, of 805. Therefore there is only a difference of 60 or, for the 10 constituencies, 600—not enough for an additional representative.

Well, I must find fault with some of the figures prepared by my hon. friend (Mr. M. S. McCarthy). From him, I learn that a portion of my constituency, Strathcona, was deprived of some of the votes that should have been left with it. In the north-eastern part of my constituency is the town of Lloydminster. There was a polling subdivision there extending for six miles, or one range of townships, west of the 4th initial meridian. That portion is thickly settled. The polling booth is practically on the 4th meridian line. The votes polled there number 170. By the hon. member's (Mr. M. S. McCarthy's) calculation, they were all handed over to the other side of the line, our constituency not getting the benefit of any of them.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. What proportion does the hon. member (Mr. Peter Talbot) put on either side of the meridian ?

Mr. PETER TALBOT. I count half on the west and half on the east. But the hon. member (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) does not give us any of them. I know that was not done intentionally—I know the hon. member for Calgary too well for that. There is another calculation of his that is somewhat faulty.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Would the hon. gentleman permit me to say that at Lloydminster poll, No. 23, there were 20 votes cast and 48 votes on the list.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. Oh, my !

Mr. AMES. I might state that we took these out, name by name, in the voters' list in the range and township in which they were described.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. The hon. gentleman has certainly taken the wrong polling subdivision. I have here a map of my whole constituency with the polling subdivision numbered. Lloydminster is poll No. 23. I got 97 votes, one of my opponents got 72, and another got 1, a total of 170 votes in that polling subdivision.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. The hon. gentleman will understand that the town of Lloydminster is east of the 4th meridian.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. But the polling booth is within one hundred yards or, at most 200 yards of the 4th meridian line.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Peter Talbot) will look at the map——

Mr. PETER TALBOT. But I have been there—I was out canvassing those people. Now the other error the hon. gentleman has made in the same way was in the local constituency of Red Deer, which he says contained only 608 votes. I have here the polling subdivisions throughout that constituency, and, according to my calculation there were 808 votes. If it is necessary, I will read over the polling subdivisions. But it should be remembered that it is somewhat difficult to get at the exact figures because the lines run through the polling subdivisions and we cannot tell how many votes belong to each side.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. If the hon. gentleman will read the polls, we will soon find out where we vary.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. They are as follows—Carrott's polling subdivision, 14 votes; Evart, 67; Merkerville (in part), 36; Pollette, 5; Martin's Place (in part), 47; Burnt Lake, 33; Poplar Ridge, 28; Penhold (in part), 46; Red Deer, 334; Brockfield, 13; Valley Centre, 22; Willow Dale, 64; Windham (in part), 30; Ross Place, 14; Mound Lake, 19; Content, 40; Leckie, 6; total, 808 votes.

Mr. AMES. Would the hon. gentleman allow me to put on 'Hansard' the way we made that same calculation? We took the names one after another following the list and located them in the townships to which they belonged and thus found whether they fell within the one constituency or another:

Poll.	Cast.	On list.
64, Evart, entire..	67	119
114, Merkerville, the southern third of township..	8	11
115, Pollette, the northern third of township 37..	1	2
111, Martin's Place, northern third of township 37..	7	11

Mr. PETER TALBOT. How many votes cast at Martin's Place?

Mr. AMES. One only. The northern third of township 37 is included.

65, Burnt Lake, entire..	33	51
66, Carrett, except part lying north of Blindman river.. ..	13	48
67, Blind Man, part lying south of Blindman river..	33	32
68, Poplar Ridge, entire..	28	52
69, Red Deer, entire..	184	406

Mr. PETER TALBOT. Those are the votes the other fellow got. I got more than that. There were 334 votes in Red Deer town.

Mr. AMES. There are 406 names on the list.

103, Penfold, except sections 13 to 24 of township 26, range 27; and except sections 24, 25, 26, 27, 33, 34, 35 and 36 of township 36, range 28..	50	76

Mr. PETER TALBOT. The principal discrepancy is in the town of Red Deer. I have 334 votes cast and the hon. gentleman only has 180.

Mr. AMES. If they are not in that constituency they will be in the next one.

79, Brookfield, entire..	13	27
80, Valley Centre, entire..	22	29
81, Ross Place, entire..	14	28
106, Willow Dale, entire..	54	65
105, Northern third of section 36, including Edmell town..	11	14
107, Windham, except southern two-thirds of township 36, range 24; and except southern two-thirds of township 36, range 25..	4	5
92, Mound Lake, entire..	19	28
109, Lackie, entire..	6	27
110, Sparks Place, sections 24 to 36 in township 36, ranges 11 to 23 inclusive..	No population.
97, Content, entire.. ..estimate	40	50
98, Baird, that portion in township 38, ranges 11 to 19 inclusive..	6	14

Mr. PETER TALBOT. The discrepancy I see in that is not only in Red Deer where the hon. gentleman gives 189 instead of 334, but there are other discrepancies. I happen to know the locality fairly well and I find the hon. gentleman has put only two or three votes in some polling subdivisions when the votes were as high as twenty or thirty. The next point I wish to draw attention to is the area of those districts north and south of Red Deer. The area south of Red Deer and including the Red Deer district, would be 55,831 square miles. The area north of Red Deer, excluding Peace river and Athabaska, is 74,592. Although I do not claim that we should have representation according to area entirely, I maintain that that should have some weight when making this division, provided there is a scattered settlement through it. I would not base a great deal on that, but I think it should be considered.

I next wish to call attention to the homestead entries. The homestead entries, up to the 31st March, 1905, throughout the whole province of Alberta were as follows: In the Edmonton land office or district, there were 18,773 entries. In Beaver Lake land office, which is closed now but was in existence for some time, there were 436 entries. In Battleford we claim one-fourth of the entries made, for about one-fourth of that land district is to the west of the fourth meridian. Our friends opposite do not allow us any of that, although all this Barr colony—or a great portion of it—is in that locality. That would make 1,243. We claim one-half of the Red Deer district, which would be 4,630, making a total in the north of 25,042 entries. Now, in the Calgary land office there were 12,278 entries, in Alberta, 3,875; in the half of Red Deer, which we allow to the south, 4,630, making a total of 24,803 in the south against 25,042 north of Red Deer.

I have not the homestead entries made for the several years. I have one year here, 1903, but I am not sure whether that is the one some of the hon. members opposite gave. But if they did and left out a portion of the Battleford district, they were certainly wrong, for there is a considerable portion of that district west of the fourth meridian.

Mr. AMES. Would the hon. gentleman tell us over what space of time he has computed the 1,243 entries in the Battleford district?

Mr. PETER TALBOT. Right from the beginning. I do not know when they started the Battleford land office, but there were four times 1,243 entries in all. I may say that quite recently, there have been about 7,000 entries in that office and a good many are in this particular part, our side of the fourth meridian.

Mr. AMES. The hon. gentleman cannot say how many of the 1,243 were made in the last two years?

Mr. PETER TALBOT. I think most of them, for we know that in that particular locality there were no settlers until the Barr colony went out there, and now we know, that every available quarter section, for many miles around Lloydminster, is homesteaded.

I made a little different calculation on the post offices to that which was furnished by the Post Office Department to the Minister of the Interior. I shall give my calculation, and I think you will agree with me that I acted very fairly. I found that in the constituency of Alberta there were forty-six post offices; in Medicine Hat district, which is to be added to Alberta, there were ten; in Calgary, fifty-four; in Edmonton district, sixty, and in Strathcona, ninety-five. A portion of the Strathcona constituency runs south of township 38. I made a careful calculation of the votes polled north and south of Red Deer in my constituency, and I concluded that one-fifth of my constituency was south of the river. Going on that conclusion, the part of Strathcona constituency south of Red Deer would have nineteen post offices. That would leave south of Red Deer 129 post offices and north of Red Deer 136 post offices. Although I am well aware that post offices are not a sure indication of population, I submit that in a farming country they do indicate whether that country is fairly thickly settled or not. If we find in a certain district ten post offices and in another of the same size only four, we would naturally conclude that there was a much larger population in the former than the latter.

I also claim that the local improvement districts that were organized north and south of Red Deer are an indication of population, although not one that can be entirely relied upon. The people are not compelled to form local improvement districts, but if they do form these local improvement districts, they spend their own taxes in their own way. If they do not form these local improvement districts they pay their taxes to the government at Regina, and their money is expended for them. But we know that the great majority of the people want to see how their taxes are going to be spent, and the result is that they have formed these local improvement districts wherever there is sufficient population in the different localities. I may mention that these local improvement districts are of a uniform size—12 square miles. We have north of Red Deer river 62 of these local improvement districts, while south of Red Deer district there are 42. Now, some hon. gentlemen argue that the presence of schools and school districts is no indication of population.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Before the hon. gentleman passes from the Battleford homestead entries, I would like to say that I have here a map published by the Department of the Interior on 1st January, 1905, showing the townships which are ready for settlement. I will pass this map over to my hon. friend, and he will see that there are very few of such townships which are included in Battleford west of the 4th meridian. I merely mention that fact because the hon. gentleman has added one-fourth of the homestead entries of Battleford to his calculation of homestead entries. I do not think he would make the statement if he would look at the map.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. I do not know anything about that map. These are the figures I got from my hon. friend the Minister of the Interior, and I know from driving through that locality and having spent several days there that the country is settled.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Could not the hon. Minister of the Interior place before the House the actual homestead entries?

Mr. PETER TALBOT. I dare say he could get them. I am sure that the Minister of the Interior has given the total as four times 1,243. I think you will find that is right. I may be mistaken in saying there are a fourth of them west of the 4th meridian, although I believe there are. On this question of schools, I maintain that if there is anything outside of an actual census that would tell the population of a district or a country, it would be the number of schools in it. People do not form schools until they have to. They do not organize schools and pay taxes for fun. They are compelled, by our laws up there, when the child population of the locality reaches a certain number, to organize schools, and school districts are of a uniform size. I find that in Edmonton constituency there are 92 schools, in the part of Strathcona north of township 38 there are 234 schools, making a total north of Red Deer of 326. South of Red Deer we have in Alberta constituency 74 schools, in Calgary district 116 schools, in part of Strathcona south of Red Deer 58 schools and in Medicine Hat district 20 schools, making a total of 268—326 schools north of Red Deer and 268 south of Red Deer. I believe I am correct in saying that that corresponds with the number of teachers for each room is called a school in the report of our Commissioner of Education. Some one sought to convey the idea that a lot of these schools might be vacant. I want to convince the committee they are not. In 1902 there was an examination of teachers in various parts of the Northwest Territories. In the town of Strathcona 29 teachers were examined and got certificates, and in the city of Edmonton 25, making a total of 54. In the city of Calgary there were 9 teachers granted certificates and in the town of Lethbridge 7, making a total of 16. At Red Deer, which I have not counted as either north or south, there were 9 teachers who received certificates. In 1903 we had examinations held in some other places. In Strathcona town there were 19 teachers examined and granted certificates, in Edmonton 22 and in the town of Lacombe 8, making a total of 49. In the south we had in Medicine Hat 9, Lethbridge 6 and Calgary 30, making a total of 45. Then again we had teachers' conventions held in several towns in the Northwest in the year 1902. There was a teachers' convention held in Calgary and 30 teachers attended. There was a teachers' convention held at Red Deer, which is located about centrally between the two, and there were 31 teachers present. There was a teachers' convention at Strathcona and there were 98 teachers present. Next year the teachers held conventions in different places. At Lethbridge, in 1903, there were 19 teachers present, Banff 23, Calgary 49, Innisfail 14, making a total of 105 teachers attending conventions south of Red Deer. In Red Deer alone there were 18. But leaving that out, as it is a central point, I will say that at the town of Lacombe there were 24 and at Edmonton 94, making a total of 118 teachers attending conventions north of Red Deer as against 105 attending south of Red Deer. There is no doubt we have more teachers north of Red Deer than to the south. Yesterday, last night and again today, I think on five or six occasions, speakers on the other side have held out to us as a model division that which was made by the local legislature of the Northwest Territories in 1902, and I want to show to the hon. members opposite especially what kind of a distribution that was, and to ask them if they think it was a fair one. In 1902, just before the election—the election was held in May, 1902, and it was in April that this distribution was made—there were 6 constituencies north of the town of Red Deer, 8 constituencies in the old district of Alberta, and since has been added the Medicine Hat district, making 9 constituencies south—6 constituencies north of Red Deer and 9 constituencies south of Red Deer.

Now, I want to give you the vote that was polled at the election immediately after that. In the districts north of Red Deer, Lacombe had 871 votes; Strathcona 645 votes; St. Albert 695 votes; Victoria 641 votes ; Edmonton 801 votes. In Wetaskiwin, one of the largest and most thickly settled districts in the Northwest, the member was elected by acclamation and there was no vote, but the vote there would certainly be larger than in any of the others. The total was 3,653 votes for the five constituencies, and remember there was one by acclamation. It would be fair to put Wetaskiwin the same as Lacombe; each constituency is six townships wide, and any one from the west will agree with me that the Wetaskiwin district is certainly more thickly settled. In the districts south of Red Deer, the district of Banff had 364 votes; East Calgary 784; West Calgary 621; Cardston 285; High River 285; Innisfail 359; Lethbridge 489; Macleod 676; Medicine Hat 671, making a total of 3,877 votes for the nine constituencies south, while the five constituencies north polled 3,653. The average vote polled for each constituency in the north was 730, while the average vote polled in each constituency in the south was 430. And that is the distribution that our friends on the other side of the House hold out as a model.

Mr. HERRON. Will you explain to the House the cause of the small vote in the south at the last election ? Do you remember the floods in southern Alberta on the day of the election ?

Mr. PETER TALBOT. Were there no floods in the north ?

Mr. HERRON. Not the same.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. Oh, my dear man, I was forced to walk the day of the election eighteen miles because the railroad was swept away.

Mr. HERRON. This government granted $500,000 to repair bridges that were swept out mostly in the southern district on the very day of the election.

Mr. LAKE. Where does my hon. friend (Mr. Talbot) get these figures ?

Mr. HERRON. From Magurn's Parliament Guide.

Mr. LAKE. I have the figures from the Northwest government, which I think are official, and they do not correspond with your figures in several particulars.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. I do not wish to make any statement that is not correct, and I will be glad to compare the figures in the guide with your figures.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman give the names on the voters' lists for the nine constituencies south and the six constituencies north ?

Mr. PETER TALBOT. I have not got that information, but I will explain how the names are put on our voters' lists. The hon. member for Calgary and another hon. member opposite tried to convey the impression that as more votes were polled in some divisions that there were on the voters' lists, and that as he alleged that occurred in the north especially, there was something crooked about the last election.

Let me point out that we do not prepare the voters' lists, as they do in other provinces.

Mr. AMES. May I be allowed one interjection? I did not claim that there was anything crooked in that election. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman not to put it in that way.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. For what other reason was the statement made at all?

Mr. AMES. Because it is true.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. Then why was it not also stated, because it is true, that three instances of that occurred in the district of Calgary, and three instances in the district of Macleod, as well as three instances in the Edmonton district, and one instance of it in Strathcona. I want to explain why a thing like that could occur. The preparation of our voters' lists is entirely different from the system in the other provinces. We are never particular in preparing our lists because we know that a man can vote whether his name was put on the list before polling day or not. Some carelessness was exhibited no doubt by the enumerators, and they omitted several names, but these men came forward on polling day and got their votes as they were entitled to do. The statement that more voted than were on the list before the day of election applies not only to the Edmonton district but also to Calgary and Macleod.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Where did that occur in Calgary?

Mr. PETER TALBOT. In the Calgary district at poll number 14 there were 59 votes polled, while there were only 53 on the list before polling day. You will bear in mind that when a man votes with us his name is put on the list and it need not necessarily be on the list until the day of polling. In the Calgary district, poll number 32, there were 81 votes polled and 64 on the list; in poll number 66 there were 11 votes polled and there were 10 on the list. The first poll I mentioned in Calgary district was in Calgary city, the second poll was at Pine Creek and the third poll was at Kamanaskis. Just one other matter and I am through. It has been stated here that the press in every portion of the Northwest Territories was condemning the government because of this legislation. I quote the following item from the Strathcona 'Plaindealer':

> The Calgary papers, particularly the 'Herald,' are in a terrible state of excitement about the distribution of constituencies in Alberta. The fact that thirteen constituencies out of twenty-five are north of Red Deer has caused the 'Herald' to fume and foam in a most extraordinary manner. They consider the arrangement the most iniquitous gerrymander ever perpetrated. They present a map to illustrate their point, and really the appearance of the map proves the utter fallacy of their argument. Calgary people seem to imagine that all the immigration of the last five years has been into the south country, whereas as a matter of fact the north country has been filling up at an equal if not greater rate. Calgary's eagerness for capital honours has got away entirely with the prudence and good judgment of the 'Herald.'

Mr. INGRAM. How far is that Strathcona paper published from Edmonton?

Mr. PETER TALBOT. It is published about 200 miles north of Calgary.

Mr. INGRAM. Across the river from Edmonton.

Mr. PETER TALBOT. Yes, it is close to Edmonton. Now, we will see what the Edmonton 'Journal,' a Tory organ has to say on this same thing. It says:

> Here is a fine sample of the arguments Calgary is using against the arrangement of the Alberta constituency: While it is possible under the proposed distribution for Edmonton with its 7,000 people to elect at least five members, Calgary with 12,500 can have but two at the outside. Another sentence explains this strange statement. 'Equally outrageous is the gerrymander of St. Albert, Sturgeon, Saskatchewan and Strathcona, all of which corner on Edmonton.' The evident purpose of these statements is to leave the impression that Edmonton is able to exert some mysterious influence over the electors of adjoining constituencies. The constituencies will resent this reflection on their independence. And the adjoining constituencies are as completely separated from this city's influence as if the Saskatchewan river marked the boundary, which it does in the case of Strathcona riding. It is by such poor arguments that the Calgary press hope to affect a change in the arrangements, favourable to the capital hopes of that city.

I do not think it is necessary for me to detain you longer. I have prepared these facts mostly independently, without consulting anybody, and in the main they agree with what has been prepared by other hon. members. I am perfectly satisfied that this division is as just and fair a one as could be made.

Mr. LAKE. Mr. Chairman, before I proceed to take up the real business part of this question, I would like to make a remark with reference to the question of more votes being polled than there were voters on the list. It struck me as a peculiar circumstance that that should have happened in certain cases, and I came across an example of it in a return which was brought down to this House giving the names on the voters' lists in the Northwest. It appeared that in one of the districts, the electoral district of Mackenzie, there were two lists for polling division No. 20. One of them is not signed at all. The other is signed by a man named Bisli J. Bildel. The former is evidently the correct list, and it contains sixty-one names. I was startled by this fact and began to look through the list, and I found that the names were duplicated pretty much all through. The name of this gentleman, who evidently drew up the list, appears twice. In one place it appears as Gisli J. Bildel, and in another place as Gisli J. Bildpett. Both names are for the same section. Then the name of John Jamieson appears, and further down the list appears the name of John Jameson—certainly the same man for the same section. Then there is the name of Stefan Olofron for section 16-32-11 and further down the name of Stephen Olopson for the same section ; and so on. This accounts for the fact that while there were twenty-nine names on the real list, a larger number voted. It is a matter of speculation how many of these men voted under different names.

Mr. CASH. That is a poll in an Icelandic settlement and in these Icelandic settlements there are a great many men of the same name.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. On the same section ?

Mr. CASH. No. I think that shows that there was nothing incorrect in the list except a repetition of names by accident. It also shows that it is not very good evidence as to population in that section of country, because it indicates that only one was on the quarter section. It would not be fair to take that as an indication of the population of that section of country.

Mr. LAKE. Or an indication that these voters' lists were drawn up in a proper manner. I just throw that out as a suggestion which may account for the fact that more men voted than those whose names appear on the list.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. How many votes were cast at that polling subdivision ?

Mr. LAKE. Twenty-nine voted, the same number as the names on the original list. With reference to the figures given by the hon. member for Strathcona as regards the developments which are taking place in the Athabaska district, I noticed that he did not give the postal statistics of that district, as he did those of the districts further south ; and I do not think the statement of the hon. member for Calgary has yet been refuted, that the whole postal revenue from the Athabaska district came from the Lesser Slave Lake post office and amounted to $66. The hon. member, in laying down the basis on which he proceeded to distribute these seats, remarked that he thought it would be advisable that each of the cities in the Northwest Territories should have a member, mentioning four or five cities. I would like to ask why it is that one of those he mentioned, the city of Moosejaw, is not given a member, although the vote cast there was greater than that cast in the city of Prince Albert which is given a member. The vote of the residents of Moosejaw, I think, was actually greater than that of the residents of the city of Regina. With reference to the argument that schools are a very good indication of the population of a country, and the fact stated that there are more schools in the northern part of Alberta than in the southern part, I think that argument may be met by this statement. It is certainly true that where you have a settlement of agriculturists living close together, they are likely to form a school district ; but where you have a ranching district, the ranchers are much more distant from each other, and it is more difficult for them to form a school district. In southern Alberta I have met the complaint that the ranchers do not form school districts, but move into the town in the winter and make use of the town schools. The trustees of these schools complain that it is rather hard on them to have to bear the expense incurred by the ranchers coming in and using their schools in this way. So I think that the figures given as regards the school districts cannot be considered reliable in this connection. This afternoon when the Minister of the Interior was dealing with the question of the huge areas in some of the northern constituencies he took exception to a statement of mine that the district of St. Albert, a very large district to which he was calling special attention, ran within 6 miles of the city of Edmonton, I was asking why, if they considered that these vast areas should be taken into consideration, it was necessary to run in a huge area of that sort within 6 miles of Edmonton. The minister stated it was 9 miles from Edmonton. I have the map here issued by his own department in which it is marked within 4 miles. Does the Minister of the Interior intend to repudiate this map along with other documents which apparently have been issued by the Department of the Interior as being incorrect ? I presume we may take that as correct, the way in which the constituencies are laid out in this map which was forwarded to the various members.

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. LAKE. This map places the district of St. Albert within 4 miles of the city of Edmonton instead of 9. It seems to me that just looking at the map should arouse suspicions as to an improper distribution of seats. Here you have four constituencies touching the city of Edmonton, the town of Edmonton and three other constituencies, and you have three other constituencies all poking their noses within 12 miles of Edmonton. That is to say that the city of Edmonton controls practically 7 seats in that legislature. I would like the Prime Minister to look at that point especially on the map ; he will see that 7 different constituencies all come up within 12 miles of Edmonton. Take that into consideration when you say that the areas should be especially considered in the formation of these constituencies.

Mr. OLIVER. Will you explain how Edmonton is going to control these 7 constituencies ?

Mr. LAKE. I think we may take it for granted that the members who are going to represent these constituencies will be living near Edmonton, in most cases at any rate. The population will be pretty close into Edmonton, and it certainly seems to me that was the idea under which that distribution of seats was made.

Mr. OLIVER. Are the people there ?

Mr. LAKE. I think that the probability is that they are. I simply say that on the face of it it looks like an attempt at gerrymander.

Mr. OLIVER. Perhaps it would relieve the hon. gentleman's mind to know that the boundary of St. Albert where it comes close to Edmonton, is the boundary fixed in the distribution of 1902 by the Northwest Assembly. There is no alteration of that boundary.

Mr. LAKE. I understand that ; I am coming to that presently. First of all, however, I wish to call attention to statements made both by the Minister of the Interior and the member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) yesterday, when they made the assertion that the Conservative members were invited to conferences a considerable time ago in regard to delimiting these constituencies. Both the member for Calgary and the member for Alberta and myself denied that this was the case. I again take this occasion to positively deny that I was ever asked to a conference for that purpose of delimiting these constituencies.

Mr. SCOTT. Last evening when I mentioned this, I did it upon the spur of the moment. Since then, I have had time to furbish up my memory, so to speak, and my own memory has been assisted by those of other gentlemen who were present. I wish to make the statement again that a conference was held several evenings before the 21st of February, several days before these Bills were introduced. The conference was called by Mr. Haultain and to that conference were invited, I understood, all the members of the House of Commons from the Northwest Territories, including the member for Qu'Appelle, all the senators from the Territories and there were also present at the conference the members then in Ottawa of the Northwest government. I make the statement that Mr. Haultain told that conference that it had been suggested to him by the Prime Minister that he should endeavour to get an agreement from the representatives from the Northwest upon the boundary line between the two provinces, secondly, with regard to the number of local constituencies which should be given to each province, and, thirdly, with regard to the divisions of these local constituencies. I repeat the statement that we were told that by Mr. Haultain. The matter of the boundary between the two provinces was discussed at great length. The matter of the number of constituencies was also discussed and the method of division of the constituencies within each province was debated at considerable length. I make the statement now deliberately that I discussed with the member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) that evening the matter of a bi-party committee for each province to make these divisions, and he gave me to understand he was not willing to go into the work with the other members for Alberta. He put it in this way : It will be two against two, myself and the member for Alberta (Mr. Herron) as against the member for Strathcona (Mr. Peter Talbot) and the member for Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) two against two, there will be certainly a deadlock as the interests of Edmonton and Calgary are so diverse and distinct that we could not hope to reach an agreement.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I have already denied in this House that I was ever asked to discuss that question of deciding the boundaries of these constituencies. I do not see why the same insinuation should be repeated, but if anything were needed to show the absurdity of the insinuation, of the member for West Assiniboia——

Mr. SCOTT. I made no insinuation. I make a direct and absolute statement.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I deny it. I deny that I was ever asked and I say that if any thing were needed to show the absurdity of the statement it is the fact that it would be impossible for us to settle the boundaries of the constituencies when the dividing line between the two provinces was not settled.

Mr. LAKE. I made my denial a few moments ago. I will go on to say that no Liberal, to the best of my recollection, ever mentioned the question of local constituencies to me before the schedule containing these constituencies was brought down and then it was mentioned by a member of the government.

Mr. SCOTT. I understand that the member for Qu'Appelle was not present at that conference ; I understood him to say that last night.

Mr. LAKE. Yes.

Mr. SCOTT. I made a formal motion at that meeting that a bi-party committee representing each province should take up this matter of the division of the provinces. I think my motion was not seconded ; at all events it was not carried. We took it for granted, from the treatment given to the motion by the conference, and I took it for granted from the statement that was made to me personally by my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy), that it was useless to proceed with the proposition, and that our hon. friends on the other side were not willing to act with us in an endeavour to reach an amicable arrangement with regard to the local divisions.

Mr. LAKE. I think the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) has already definitely denied that statement before, it should not be repeated.

Mr. OLIVER. I think the dispute between my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) and my hon. friend from Western Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) arose from something that I said yesterday. Therefore, it would hardly be fair for me to listen to the assertion and denial without saying my say on the subject. I do not know what was said to the hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Herron) or the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy), but I have a distinct remembrance of being in room 48 with the hon. member for Calgary and the hon. member for Alberta, and also Premier Haultain and other gentlemen, senators and others. My remembrance is that the purpose we were there for, was as the hon. member for Western Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) has stated. As I remember it and as he had said, we did discuss, at great length, the question of boundary between the provinces, without making any progress in regard to that question. The further questions we were expected to discuss were not gone on with. But there was a conference, and there was a request for a joint discussion, at any rate, in regard to boundaries, and such a discussion, certainly took place as to the boundary between the provinces; and I am of opinion—though I am not so clear on that point as on the point of the discussion with regard to the boundary line—that there was also a discussion on the question of the number of representatives to be given to each province.

Mr. LAKE. I was not present at that meeting, as I have stated.

Mr. LAMONT. I was present, and I distinctly recollect hearing the hon. member for Western Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) making the motion he states he did make. It was not seconded and the matter dropped.

Mr. HERRON. The motion made by the hon. member for Western Assiniboia was that we should hold out together to get our land and minerals for the Northwest. I was at the meeting and remember the proposition made with reference to the division line between the two provinces. That was all that was discussed at the meeting. And I distinctly remember that the hon. member for Western Assiniboia said we should hold together and fight for our lands and minerals.

Mr. LAKE. I spoke to Mr. Haultain this morning and asked whether he was present when the formal motion which the hon. member for Western Assiniboia has told us of was made. Mr. Haultain told me that no formal motion was made while he was present, if it were made—and no doubt it was; I accept the hon. member's (Mr. Scott's) statement—it was when no Conservatives were present. If I had been invited to a conference of this sort, I should have considered it my duty to accept. I was very anxious with regard to the distribution of seats in the new constituencies. But I felt that I had no right to assume that the government would not do justice to the people, and I did not know to whom it would be my duty to appeal to ask them to do justice; and, after all, that is all we look for.

Mr. SCOTT. Did I understand the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lake) to say that he asked Mr. Haultain a question this morning with regard to this matter?

Mr. LAKE. I asked Mr. Haultain whether he was present when the formal motion of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Scott) was made, and he stated distinctly that he was not present when that formal motion was made.

Mr. SCOTT. But he would not dispute the fact of the conference, or the fact that he called it for the purpose for which it was called. The best proof that the leader of the government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) did not wish to decide matters, and force them, as the hon. member for South Lanark (Mr. Haggart) had said, nolens volens, upon the people of the Northwest, is that he suggested that Mr. Haultain should try to get amicable arrangements as to the boundary line and the number and division of the constituencies.

Mr. LAKE. Before I came to Ottawa in December, I received a letter from Mr. Haultain similar to a letter which, I understood, had been sent to every member from the Northwest, inviting us to meet in conference in Ottawa during the discussion of the Autonomy Bill. I understood that it was in pursuance of that policy that we were invited on two or three occasions to meet together. I was present at two meetings in room 48. The only questions seriously discussed were the possession of our lands and mines, and the boundary between the two provinces. Certainly nothing whatever was said in my presence in regard to the constituencies.

Mr. LAMONT. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lake) say that at that conference in room 48, Mr. Haultain did not say, over and over again that the Prime Minister had asked him to give thirty constituencies to each province?

Mr. LAKE. I cannot deny it, because I was not present at the last meeting. But it is the first I have ever heard of the matter. I had always understood that there was a strong movement to have this question submitted to the judges.

Mr. FINLAY. I understood the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lake) to say that he had a letter from Mr. Haultain on the subject, and now he says he never heard of it.

Mr. LAKE. The letter that I received from Mr. Haultain invited me to meet other members of parliament and senators from the Northwest in conference during the progress of the Autonomy Bill discussion. That is the only letter I have had from Mr. Haultain on the subject. He did not mention the subject of constituencies—in fact, speaking from memory, he did not go into any details, but merely suggested that we should meet and discuss matters in general. I have always understood that, so far as the distribution of constituencies is concerned, it was only the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) who held out against this matter being submitted to the judges. That is the effect of rumours that I have heard from Conservatives, not from Liberals. The Northwest members, I understood, were in favour of this course, and there was simply the member for Edmonton who was opposed to it. Another matter discussed at the conference was the matter of one or two provinces. But, after all, these questions are apart from the question we ought to be discussing at the present moment. As the hon. members for Strathcona (Mr. Peter Talbot) and Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) admitted that they were responsible for the schedule for Alberta, I assume that the hon. member for Western Assiniboia and other Northwest Liberal members will take the responsibility for distribution in the new province of Saskatchewan.

Mr. OLIVER. I had occasion to correct one speaker on the other side in a statement similar to the one the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lake) has just made. I hope it will not be necessary for me to correct it again. Speaking for myself, I do not admit responsibility for the schedule for Alberta. I admit responsibility for having given advice with regard to the schedule for Alberta, but not responsibility for the schedule.

Mr. LAKE. The hon. gentleman will have to take the responsibility together with the hon. member for Strathcona. I think their speeches prove it very clearly.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Does not the minister repudiate the boundaries ?

Mr. OLIVER. The minister is supporting the Bill.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Then he accepts the whole responsibility ?

Mr. OLIVER. The government takes the whole responsibility.

Mr. LAKE. The Minister of the Interior and the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. P. Talbot) have both spoken in very disparaging terms of the redistribution which took place in 1902 in the legislative assembly, and they have given various samples of what they consider to be the gerrymander which was created by that redistribution. In the first instance, I would like to say that that redistribution was decided on by a conference of all the members of the House. I doubt whether Mr. Haultain was present even on that occasion. The lines laid down were laid with regard to population, and a certain consideration of area. The population in the three districts at that time, each of which was entitled to a certain share of representation, was taken into consideration, and the population which was to be allowed to each was figured out. It was figured out that, working on these lines, the constituency of Alberta would get one member to every 4,700 population; the district of Assiniboia one member to 4,492; the district of Saskatchewan, one to 4,279. It will be noticed that the distribution, looked at from that point of view, was a fair one. There was only a margin of less than 5 per cent as between the amounts allowed to these three districts from the average of the whole. It was decided to interfere as little as possible with existing local constituencies, and that may account for a certain discrepancy in the total votes cast, but I do not think it is necessary to go into these figures, and the figures given by the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. P. Talbot) are different in many respects from those I have, which were made out by the Northwest government. At the time of the redistribution we had a very lively opposition in the legislative assembly, who were ready to find fault on every pretext. It was just on the eve of an election; and surely if there had been any attempt at a gerrymander that would have been brought up in the House. But what do we find? Looking over the reports, I find for instance two objections were made by Mr. Patrick, of the district of Yorkton. The first was that there should be another representative up there, because he had an additional population of 5,000 Doukhobors, but he did not press that very hard. And it was shown him that his total population was a very fair one under the circumstances. He also thought there should be one more member in the House. It was found necessary to reduce the representation in the district of Saskatchewan by one. Mr. Mackay, of Prince Albert, also objected to losing one member from one of the constituencies of Prince Albert, which was cut off. Mr. Bennett simply objected to the Liberal executive having any finger in this redistribu-tion. That was all his objection. He went on to say he had no objection to a certain change which was made in his constituency. And I think there was only one division taken on the whole of that question, and that was as to whether there should be 35 or 36 members. I am not sure on this point. If there was a division at all, it was lost. I only find the record of one amendment being proposed, and I do not see whether it was pressed to a division or not. Therefore, it cannot possibly be said that there was any unfair redistribution by the legislative assembly in 1902. Not one of these members who, the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. P. Talbot) says, were so badly treated in the northern part of Alberta, raised any protest against the redistribution. We, therefore, can take it as absolutely the fact that it was a fair one, and I think it will be found to compare very favourably indeed with the redistribution we are now discussing, in which, instead of a margin of only something like 4 per cent between one district and another, we find a margin of from 10 to 100 per cent. I am very glad that the principle has been laid down that the figures of last election are the basis for the distribution of seats. These lists, upon which that election took place, were drawn up last fall, and the election took place in November. There may be considerable difference of opinion as to whether we should take the votes actually cast or those which appear on the lists. For my part, I would take the ones placed on the lists, which lists were drawn up by men employed by the present government, who certainly would not be unfair towards the members of their own party. I think most strongly that the votes on the lists should be the basis upon which this distribution should be made.

However, if the government wishes, let us take the basis of the votes cast just for the purpose of argument. As far as the province of Saskatchewan is concerned, I am perfectly willing to accept that basis. Probably my hon. friends on this side would be willing to accept even that basis also so long as it is strictly adhered to. But I find that in the case of the province of Saskatchewan, the votes cast at last election are not followed to any degree whatever. Let me point to this as an illustration The new province of Saskatchewan can easily be divided up between north and south. There are three Dominion constituencies in the north and three in the south. We have the absolute number of votes polled in all these constituencies so that we can get down to an absolute basis of fact. In the three northern constituencies, there were 7,824 votes polled. Add the number from the districts of Strathcona and Edmonton, and you would possibly have 150 votes more. In the three southern Dominion constituencies there were 17,771 votes polled. Now, we find that the actual distribution we are discussing gives to the north eight members and the south ten members, and that there are seven local constituencies which are divided up, and I think that hon. gentlemen opposite will be perfectly willing to admit that those constituencies can be divided equally between the north and the south. We find that to the 7,824 votes cast in the north they give 11½ seats, whilst to the 17,741 votes cast in the south they only give 13½ seats. It will also be found, taking the votes actually cast, when you come to the province of Saskatchewan, that it takes 100 per cent more votes to elect a member in the southern part of the province than in the northern part.

Mr. LAMONT. When my hon. friend speaks of north and south, I presume he is following the same dividing line as that which was followed in Alberta—township 38.

Mr. LAKE. No ; I have already said that I am not following the same dividing line. I am taking the three northern constituencies, about which there will be no question whatever, and in regard to which the right hon. Prime Minister himself brought down the votes cast in the last election. I will give some figures on another occasion in regard to Saskatchewan, in which I will give one of the degrees of latitude as the division. But in the three northern Dominion constituencies they are only giving half the number of voters to each local constituency that they are in the three southern Dominion constituencies.

Mr. HAGGART. That is in the new province of Saskatchewan ?

Mr. LAKE. That is in the new province of Saskatchewan. It becomes even more apparent if we take the figures which the right hon. Prime Minister laid so much stress upon to-day—the figures of the census of 1901. He used these figures as an argument in support of the distribution in the province of Alberta. If you will take these figures and apply them to the old provisional districts of Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, you will find that the population of Assiniboia amounted to 67,385 in the year 1901. You can deduct, say about 3,000 for the portion of Medicine Hat which would be included in the census. The population of Saskatchewan was only 25,679 in the census and a portion of the territory has been thrown into unorganized territory under the present administration. So that, taking that basis upon which the Prime Minister insisted so much this afternoon, there should be two and a half times the representation given to Assiniboia as to the province of Saskatchewan ; that is to say, there should be eighteen seats in the old provisional district of Assiniboia and seven in the old provisional district of Saskatchewan ; whereas, as a matter of fact, in the distribution which is proposed by the government, Saskatchewan gets ten and Assiniboia fifteen. That is roughly speaking, but the figures are close enough to make a fair test of the right hon. gentleman's argument. Taking the right hon. Prime Minister's own figures given this afternoon in reference to the votes cast and the voters on the list in Alberta, you will find, if you will calculate them up, that he has made a margin of 10 per cent, roughly speaking, between the representation of the constituencies which lie south of the dividing line at Red Deer and those which lie north; that is to say, that it takes 10 per cent more voters in the constituencies south to elect a representative to the legislative assembly than it does in the north. I noticed that in the instructions which were given for the mapping out of the constituencies of the Transvaal by the British government the other day, it was laid down that there might be a variation of 10 per cent in the populations which were to be allotted to the different constituencies, but it was never suggested that that 10 per cent should apply to a whole group of constituencies. That is what is being done in this particular case. The constituencies grouped north are receiving, taken as a whole, an exceptional amount of consideration. But if you take the number of votes on the list you will find that the right hon. Prime Minister, according to his own figures, has favoured constituencies in the north to the extent of 22 per cent; and I wish to say, Mr. Chairman, in regard to this, that I am not taking into consideration the two extra constituencies which are to be formed in Athabaska. I am taking purely and simply the constituencies in the old district of Alberta. If you take the voters' list you will see that the northern people have been favoured to the extent of 22 per cent. The figures furnished by the right hon. Prime Minister show that on the basis of the votes cast they have been favoured to the extent of 10 per cent. I would like to know how that compares with the way that the legislative assembly managed their own distribution, in which the variation amounted to about 4½ per cent throughout the whole country. We have heard a good deal about the argument that areas should be taken into consideration in discussing this question. So I consider they should to a certain extent, but a mountain has been made out of a molehill in regard to the difficulties of carrying on an election in the district of Athabaska. The legislative assembly of the Northwest have been holding elections in the district of Kinistino. I have not a map showing the district of Kinistino as at present constituted, but taking the district of Prince Albert East, which was only a portion of the district of Kinistino, I find that that district was 180 miles wide by 270 miles long. Yet no very great difficulty was found in holding an election for a member of the legislative assembly.

The only trouble was that the return of the election had to be delayed for a fortnight, because some of the returns could not be brought in during the same time as in other constituencies. While we are hearing so much talk in regard to the necessity for representation in Athabaska, I would like to say that I fully agree that every man in that country should have the franchise and should be entitled to cast his vote for a member to represent him, but we must not forget the fact that there is a large portion of the country which is being cut off and deprived of representation by the action of the present government. That portion of the district of Saskatchewan which lies north of Manitoba has a fair number of voters in it. I should not wonder if it has just as many voters as those who will cast their votes in either of these proposed districts in Athabaska. They have enjoyed the franchise for many years, they have been entitled to elect a member for the Northwest legislative assembly, and now they are to be thrown into unorganized territory and to be deprived of their franchise. I think that is a point which is worth bearing in mind in connection with this discussion. You have only to look at the map to see how very little consideration has been given to the question, because you will see that they bring in all these huge constituencies from the north and corner them in and around the city of Edmonton. We find also that this principle of area has been departed from in the most astonishing way in the new province of Saskatchewan. There is one constituency in the south that has more than five times the area of two of the constituencies in the north. It has five times the area and nearly double the voting strength of these constituencies in the north. That is one example to show that the area has not been the guiding principle in this redistribution. The smallest district in area is Rosthern, one of these northern constituencies, which is just one-sixteenth the size of Moosejaw in the south, and has only about one-half of the voting population.

Mr. LAMONT. What is the population of Rosthern?

Mr. LAKE. On the 3rd of November last there were 1,348 names on the voters' lists in Rosthern as against 2,584 names in Moosejaw. Take Prince Albert city, Humboldt, Rosthern, area 83 townships, with 2,285 names on the list and 3 members. Take Moosejaw in the south with an area of 420 townships and 2,584 names on the voters' lists with only 1 member. Take Prince Albert city and Prince Albert rural district, add to them Humboldt, Redberry and Greenwood; they have a total on the voters' lists of 2,617 and 5 members. Compare that with the district of Souris on the south which has on the voters' lists 3,346 names—more than that, because one poll was never held as the list was missing:—it has 1 member for 3,346 votes in the south while there are 5 members for 2,617 votes in the north. These are some comparisons which might well be taken into consideration in this distribution.

Mr. TAYLOR. What will the Prime Minister say to that ?

Mr. LAKE. I could compare these five members which are given in the north with the district of South Qu'Appelle——

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is not the population in the north much more accustomed to British institutions than the population of the south ?

Mr. LAKE. I am sorry I cannot agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Sam. Hughes) in that statement. As a matter of fact the original population came in chiefly along the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Of course there was a small population in the cities of Prince Albert and Battleford, but there has practically been a very small increase of population there until within the last year or two. The increase has taken place along the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway and along the southern line. These people living along the two southern lines are the men who have practically made the Northwest what it is to-day. They have stuck to farming and have made a success of farming, and yet we find that the votes of five of them are only equal to the vote of one of these men who have recently come into the north and the majority of whom know very little of our institutions and many of whom are quite illiterate.

Mr. SCOTT. I understand that some of our friends opposite have very carefully scrutinized all these lists. Can my hon. friend (Mr. Lake) inform the committee whether the Doukhobor population in that part of the country was placed on the voters' list ?

Mr. LAKE. I cannot be certain on that point. I have spent a good deal of time and labour going through the voters' lists of all these constituencies counting them name by name and in many cases distributing them to each local constituency they may belong to, because of course many of the polling divisions are broken into two or three local constituencies, but I cannot give an answer to the hon. gentleman. In fact I do not know that I should be able to recognize the names of the Doukhobors so as to distinguish them from the names of Russians, Poles, Galicians and others. I do not understand the Doukhobor language.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Your education is sadly neglected .

Mr. HAGGART. Who prepares these voters' lists ?

Mr. LAKE. An enumerator who is appointed by the government.

Mr. HAGGART. By this government ?

Mr. LAKE. By this government I presume. I believe in the great majority of cases these enumerators are strong party men, and I do not think we would find them discriminating against the Liberal party. In fact I know of cases in which they were canvassing for the Liberal party at the same time they were drawing up the lists.

Mr. SCOTT. If my hon. friend wished to be fair to the House, would he not admit that the larger part of the Doukhobor population, which is what my hon. friend from Victoria had in mind, when he put his question——

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. How do you know ?

Mr. SCOTT. Would my hon. friend (Mr. Lake) not admit that the larger part of the Doukhobor population are not yet naturalized and are not yet on the lists. It is a very odd one amongst the Doukhobors who have yet taken out naturalization papers, made their homestead entries, and were last fall in a position to be placed on the voters' list.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Scott) tell me how he knows what I had in my mind. I referred to the Galicians, who were hawked all over the country from riding to riding by the hon. gentleman in the last election in November.

Mr. SCOTT. I am perfectly willing to accept the explanation of my hon. friend (Mr. Sam. Hughes) as to that.

Mr. LAKE. I cannot say how many of these electors have been naturalized, I know that in a return brought down the other day, forty-five of them have been apparently deprived of their homesteads and sent to locate on other lands, and I think it was stated that a great majority of these had naturalized, I know that one man was spoken of as having naturalized, but the only source of information I have as to that is to be found in these papers which were brought down the other day. At any rate it is for us to deal with existing conditions. It has been admitted by the Minister of the Interior and by the Prime Minister that the fairest basis of calculation in regard to this redistribution which is to be for an election which will take place within six months, is the basis of the voters' lists and the votes cast at the recent election. Surely that should be sufficient for the members on the other side of the House as it is sufficient for us. We are quite prepared to accept that as a basis, we consider it a fair basis and if it is adhered to we will have nothing more to say in regard to this matter. For my part at any rate, I would have nothing more to say. I do not care how these are divided up so long as there is a fair distribution of the population ; they may zig-zag them in any way they please so long as they give a fair distribution of the population. Let the man who has lived in the southern part of that country and who has made that country, and who has proved that the country is of some use, let him have at least equal rights with the new comer in the north. Do not make his vote of only one-fifth the value of the vote of some of these new comers away in the northern part. I was speaking of comparing these five members which are given to five constituencies in the north with a total aggregate voting strength of 2,617, with the district of Souris with a voting strength of 3,346 and the district of South Qu'Appelle with 2,842 names on the voters' lists, each of which has only one member.

That includes the district of Indian Head, about which the Minister of the Interior made some complimentary remarks yesterday. I do not think it is any compliment to the people of Indian Head that their votes are only one-fifth of the value of the votes of the people in that northern country. Compare these five members with the number given to Moosejaw, with 2,584 voters on the list, or with the district of Cannington, another southern district with 2,455 voters on the list. Even compare it with one of the northern constituencies, that of Saskatoon, which gets one member with 2,094 votes, I think the largest vote given to any northern constituency. The two Prince Alberts, Humboldt and Greenwood, four constituencies, have a smaller aggregate vote than Saskatoon. So that there must have been some extraordinary distribution going on. With regard to the question of area, we have the district of Maple Creek, which has ten times the area of the district of Humboldt and seven times the voting population.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Does it get seven members ?

Mr. LAKE. Each gets one member.

Mr. SCOTT. That was the district the assembly fixed, was it not?

Mr. LAKE. The district of Maple Creek was formed by the legislative assembly.

Mr. SCOTT. Did my hon. friend compare it with Cardston, also formed by the assembly?

Mr. LAKE. Certainly. I find that where it has suited the present government, they have taken advantage of existing local conditions, but where it has not suited them, they have not done so. For instance it has suited them to take the constituencies in the southern part of the province of Saskatchewan as they stand, adding just one seat the city of Regina. But they have interfered with existing local conditions only in the north, where it has suited them to do so, and where they have been able to run in a considerable number of more members by doing so. Moosejaw has six times the area and fifteen times the voting population of the district of Humboldt, and each place gets one member.

Mr. LAKE.

Mr. INGRAM. Whose Italian hand is that ?

Mr. OLIVER. Sbarretti's, I guess.

Mr. LAKE. It has been suggested that this scheme of representation should provide for the prospective increase of votes in the future, and I think it was stated by the Minister of the Interior that that had been done in the case of the distribution of seats by the legislative assembly in 1902. I differ with him in regard to that. I do not remember ever hearing that point raised. At any rate, the facts stand for themselves—that they took the census of the previous year, which was not a year old, and distributed the seats exactly according to that census, with only 4½ per cent variation. So that I do not think it can be stated that in actual practice at any rate they took into consideration the prospective increase of population.

Mr. LAMONT. Did the assembly not do that in the last distribution?

Mr. LAKE. No, I do not think they did.

Mr. LAMONT. Then, how do you account for 293 votes in Batoche and 1,052 in Moosejaw in the last election?

Mr. LAKE. The special circumstances which made the vote in the southern part of Alberta so small in that election have already been referred to—the carrying away of the bridges over two of the main rivers, which made it practically impossible for a large number of the voters to go to the polls.

Mr. LAMONT. There is no river in Batoche.

Mr. LAKE. I did not understand that the hon. gentleman was referring to Batoche. As far as my memory goes, the question of the prospective increase of population was not taken into consideration at all. As little interference as possible was made with existing conditions. At that time we fully believed that the Dominion government were going to create us into a province almost immediately, and Mr. Haultain was making an appeal to the country on the autonomy question. What would have been the use of complicating that question with questions of gerrymander or anything of that sort ? The fact remains that there was no serious criticism of that Redistribution Bill in the House. I doubt if it took three hours to put it through.

Mr. LAMONT. Then on what principle was one seat in Prince Albert wiped out ?

Mr. LAKE. Because it was found that the district of Saskatchewan had altogether too large a representation.

Mr. LAMONT. It had it for years.

Mr. LAKE. Well, that indicates that it had been at a standstill for a number of years, while other districts had been increasing in population.

Mr. SCOTT. Will my hon. friend tell me what principle the assembly followed in the previous redistribution?

Mr. LAKE. I was not in the assembly at the time of the previous redistribution. I still point to the fact that the redistribution made in 1902 took into consideration the three great divisions of the country—Assiniboia, Alberta and Saskatchewan—and that the seats for these three provisional districts were distributed in such a way as to make only a variation of 4½ per cent in the number of seats given to each of these provisional districts. Further than that while Batoche, Moosejaw and Prince Albert were all represented in that House there was no serious criticism of this measure. The member for Prince Albert was the only one to introduce an amendment which was to the effect that there should be 36 seats. The question was where would the odd seat go. Provision was made for 35 seats already, and with 35 seats Saskatchewan was getting 4½ per cent the advantage of the district of Assiniboia. There was no serious objectiton to that redistribution at all or else we should have heard of it. There is no question about that. At any rate we find that those gentlemen on the other side of the House are most anxious to take it where it suits them and they are leaving it and discarding it where it does not suit them.

Mr. OLIVER. Before the hon. gentleman closes, would he tell the House what this has to do with Alberta ?

Mr. HAGGART. It has everything to do with it.

Mr. LAKE. It is all pointing to a moral. We have been told to-day that the government have proceeded with this distribution upon principle ; that they have adopted the principle of being guided by the voters' lists and the votes cast on the 3rd of November last and by justice and fair-play. I am simply making a comparison of the two districts. As a matter of fact it appears to me that the gerrymander, shall I call it, in Saskatchewan is so glaring that it must in itself call attention to the fact that there has been something wrong in the distribution of seats in Alberta. Of course when the schedules of the province of Saskatchewan come up I will be prepared to go into the figures in regard to that province at far greater length than I have done ; I have not completed my notes in regard to that matter, and I have spent a good many weary hours over it. What I ask is that the principles of fair-play which prevail throughout I think the whole British empire, as well as the English speaking people of the world, should govern in this case, that there should be a fair distribution of these seats in regard to population, that where certain existing local conditions render it absolutely necessary that there should be a variation in the numbers allotted to each seat, it should not exceed 10 per cent, but that discrimination should certainly not be allowed as against a whole district ; that it might take place up to that percentage as an extreme limit in certain individual cases. And yet we find according to the figures of the Prime Minister himself that between the northern and southern portion of the old district of Alberta, leaving out the two new constituencies, the government propose to put in the north, there is a discrimination in favour of the north on the votes actually cast of 10 per cent and on the voters' lists of about 22 per cent. All we ask is a fair distribution according to the best information we have in regard to the voting population of that country and the voting population has been given to us within a year from the time at which these new elections will have to be held.

Bill (No. 185) for the relief of Isaac Pitblado.—Mr. Barker.

Mr. FIELDING moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. HAGGART. Could any of the ministers inform us what business will be proceeded with to-morrow.

Mr. FIELDING. We will continue the same programme.

Mr. HAGGART. Nothing before ?

Mr. FIELDING. I would suggest that perhaps it would be an understanding that the general discussion which has taken place might be brought to a conclusion, and that we might then take up the schedules in their order. However that will develop to-morrow.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 12 o'clock, midnight.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, June 22, 1905.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 184) to amend the Act respecting the Naturalization of Aliens.—Mr. Brodeur.

CONTRACT WITH THE NORTH ATLANTIC TRADING COMPANY.

Mr. F. D. MONK. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would ask my hon.

friend the Minister of the Interior if he would lay on the table of the House the ten years' contract of the 28th November, 1904, between the Crown and the North Atlantic Trading Company of Amsterdam, Holland, with reference to immigration, and to which my hon. friend alluded the other day when the estimates of his department were under discussion.

Mr. OLIVER. I would prefer to let my hon. friend examine the papers himself, and then I will be willing to abide by his judgment as to whether they should be laid on the table.

Mr. URIAH WILSON. I have read this contract and made some extracts from it, and I do not think there is anything in it which the general public ought not to be made aware of. I think the contract ought to be made public. It is a contract that I think the government ought not have made. I understood the minister the other night to say that if any member of the House desired to have it laid on the table he would bring it down. I desire to have it laid on the table.

AMERICAN FISHERMEN ON NOVA SCOTIA COAST.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I desire to bring to the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries a matter which is a subject of complaint among the fishermen of Nova Scotia, particularly those dwelling in the county which I represent. The matter I refer to is well expressed in the issue of the Halifax 'Chronicle' of the 19th instant, by a correspondent resident in Lunenburg.

Mr. SPEAKER. I assume the hon. member (Mr. A. K. Maclean) intends to conclude with a motion.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN. This correspondence, after referring to the success of the fishermen in that constituency, concludes as follows :

> The most of these fish have been caught off Cape North, and the fishermen are complaining bitterly that there are no cutters in that section to protect them. In many cases Americans were fishing within two miles of the shore, and also getting bait privileges not allowed them by treaty. They also say that American vessels threw great quantities of small fish away, which are ruinous to the fishing grounds, besides being wanton waste.

This expresses the complaint of many of the fishermen of my county ; and I feel sure, from the correspondence which I have received from many persons able to speak upon this matter, that the statements made by this correspondent are practically correct, namely, that on portions of the Nova Scotia coast, near Cape North, it has been the practice, during the past month or so, for American fishermen to prosecute their business within territorial waters. I merely wish to mention this to the minister so that in future some measures may be taken to protect our interests by the presence there of some of the cutters. I also wish to say that it is the practice of American fishermen to purchase bait supplies on the Magdalen Islands. I know that under the treaty of 1818 the Americans were permitted to take fish, but whether that gave them the liberty of going ashore and purchasing bait supplies from the residents of the islands is, I think, an open question. However, I am not prepared to express an opinion upon it one way or the other ; I would simply ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to be good enough to look into this matter and ascertain whether the treaty of 1818 does give the American fishermen a right to land upon the shores of the Magdalen Islands and purchase supplies. It is a matter of great importance to my own constituency at least, and I think to Nova Scotia generally. The protection of bait supplies is as important as the protection of the fisheries. I desire that the American fishermen should have no further privileges allowed them to purchase bait supplies than the treaty absolutely gives them. I move the adjournment of the House.

Hon. H. R. PREFONTAINE (Minister of Marine and Fisheries). I thank the hon. gentleman (Mr. A. K. Maclean) for having brought this matter to the attention of the department. I may say that, with the few cruisers under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, it is impossible to cover this large territory and make the protection as effective as we would like. The work is very extensive, and from the reports that I have received in the department it has been done pretty effectively. Up to the 1st of June I think that over 600 nets have been confiscated from Americans fishing and poaching in Canadian waters. The work is done as effectively as it can be done under the circumstances, but if there is some neglect I will certainly look into it and see that a remedy is provided. As regards the Americans getting their supplies from the Magdalen Islands, this is a new question that I am not ready to answer at the present moment, but I will look into it and try to satisfy the hon. gentleman on that point.

TRADE RELATIONS WITH JAPAN.

Hon. GEORGE E. FOSTER. Has the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) anything to present to the House in reference to the Japan treaty?

Hon. SYDNEY FISHER (Minister of Agriculture). Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question raised by the hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) I have been asked to make a statement in regard to the trade relations between this country and Japan and in regard to certain differences in the tariff of that country towards Canada and other countries. I must premise with an explanation saying that in the year 1894 Great Britain made a commercial treaty with Japan to which treaty the self-governing colonies were privileged to adhere if they saw fit and these colonies were given two years in which to adhere to the treaty. The expiry of the two years occurred on the 16th July, 1896, three days after the present Prime Minister was sworn into office. When this government came into office we found a recommunication from the imperial authorities asking whether Canada would like to adhere to the Japanese treaty. It was some little time before we could take the matter up for discussion or investigation. The time had really expired, but we did consider the matter and in view of the difficulties which we were then foreseeing in regard to commercial treaties between the mother country and foreign countries which contained favoured nation clauses, clauses which might hamper Canada in her commercial dealings, and also in view of the fact that at that time our people generally classed the Japanese and Chinese together in regard to their entering into Canada and their relationships with us as a labouring class in our country, the government thought it was better for us not to adhere to the treaty. Some little time afterwards, and especially at the time that I was delegated to go to Japan in connection with the exhibition there, I made a careful study of the commercial relations between Canada and Japan, and I found what had not been, I think, thoroughly understood in this country before even by those in office, and yet is not understood by the people of the country at large. The Japanese goverment have treaties with four commercial nations, Great Britain, Germany, Austro-Hungary and France. By these treaties Japan accords to each of these countries special reduced duties on special specified articles, not a general reduction, but special specified duties on special articles. Each of these treaties contains a most favoured nation clause.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Is that the treaty of 1894?

Mr. FISHER. Yes. Each of these treaties contains most favoured nation clauses. These other treaties were negotiated within a short time of the ratification of the treaty with Great Britain. They were all concluded within a very short time of each other and we may group them so far as time and their characteristics are concerned. The consequence of the most favoured nation clause is that each of these countries obtains the greatest advantage which is given to any one of them by the specific section of each treaty. In addition to that Japan has commercial treaties of a general character with, I think, seventeen other countries, including practically all the commercial nations of the world, and in each of these treaties, while there is no specified reduction of the duty on any specified article, there is a most favoured nation clause with the result that practically Japan is giving to nearly all the commercial nations of the world, either under these special conventions or under their general treaties, the lowest duty which she gives to any country on certain specified articles and only on these certain specified articles. The list of these articles is not a very large one, and it includes chiefly manufactured articles having been made out at the instance of those great manufacturing countries, Great Britain, Germany, Austro-Hungary and France. It does, however, include some articles besides manufactured goods in which we in Canada might enjoy a trade with Japan if we had the same advantages. I may say here in a general way that the difference between the reduced duty and the general duty is as two to three; that is the reduced duties in a general way are about two-thirds of the general duties and in many instances they are 10 per cent or thereabouts ad valorem in comparison with about 15 per cent ad valorem of a general duty.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Is there not something in connection with the patent laws of the two countries? For instance, a person from the United States gets more favoured treatment for his patent and the manufacturer of his patent gets more favoured treatment for the articles which he manufactures than if they came from Canada. Is there not something of that kind?

Mr. FISHER. There is also a clause in the treaty to which I will allude later on after having dealt with the customs matter. I am speaking of the customs part of the treaty alone. As Canada has not adhered to this treaty and as the United States especially has one of the commercial treaties with Japan our goods in a general way——

Mr. FOSTER. Not one of the special treaties?

Mr. FISHER. No, but one of the general treaties containing the most favoured nation clause and consequently the United States has all the advantages for her goods going into Japan that any of the special treaties give and the best advantages which any of them give. The result is, that, comparing the treatment of our goods with American goods in the Japanese market on this particular list of articles and only on this particular list of articles, Canadian goods have to pay, roughly speaking, an average of 15 per cent while American goods only pay, roughly speaking, an average of 10 per cent, which is the duty collected on German and other goods.

Mr. FOSTER. Do I properly understand the hon. minister ? The United States is not one of the nations with which Japan has these four special treaties?

Mr. FISHER. No.

Mr. FOSTER. And yet the United States gets the advantage on the specified articles of these specified reductions?

Mr. FISHER. Yes, because she has a general commercial treaty with Japan containing a most favoured nation clause and consequently she gets any advantage which Japan has given to Great Britain, France, Germany or Austro-Hungary and the best advantage which Japan may have given to any one of these countries.

Mr. KEMP. What advantage does the United States give Japan in her markets and which we refuse to Japan ?

Mr. FISHER. None.

Mr. KEMP. Then Japan gets from us just as good terms as she gets from the United States ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes. In the treaties between Japan and these four countries and also in the general commercial treaties which Japan has made with some 17 countries, Japan has received practically no tariff advantage ; indeed I may say she has received absolutely no tariff advantage. In her relations with the outside world at that period Japan does not seem to have insisted on reciprocal treatment. She gave advantage to these nations without getting equivalent tariff reductions. At that time Japan was very eager to secure a recognition from the European countries of her own rights in her own country. Before that time Japan had given certain privileges within her own territory to European nations ; there were treaty ports and in these treaty ports the foreign consuls had certain judicial and almost administrative powers. Japan was very anxious to assert her status as a self-governing country without interference from abroad, and the chief thing which she claimed in these treaties was that foreign countries should cease entirely their consular administrative and judicial functions within the boundaries of the Japanese empire.

Mr. KEMP. That did not apply to the United States.

Mr. FISHER. It did. These treaties did away with all these rights of foreign countries and since then Japan has had entire control within her own territory. That was the special point which Japan desired to secure in these treaties. Apparently—I speak under reserve—she did not insist upon reciprocal trade advantages from foreign powers. That is the condition of affairs to-day in connection with Japan's tariff and foreign trade. These four treaties were made, I think, for a period of 16 years, and will not expire for 6 years hence. During the continuance of these treaties the Japanese government seems indisposed to open negotiations for further treaties because Japan would be hampered by the most favoured nation clause in these treaties.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Was there a time limit within which the dependencies of the British empire must accede to the treaty ?

Mr. FISHER. Yes. The time within which Canada can accede to this treaty expired on the 16th of July, 1896, two years after the signing of the treaty. There are some articles contained in that specified list in which Canada is largely interested ; first, of agricultural products, condensed milk and sterilized milk, hops, feather and leather goods, sugar, and in live stock, horses. In these articles the countries included in these treaties have a distinct advantage over Canada. There are the following manufactured goods in which Canada might reasonably expect to enter into trade with Japan : cotton goods, woollen goods, paper, enamelled kitchen goods, rubber goods, wire of all kinds, hats and caps. There is a list of 60 or 70 articles, but these I have mentioned are the chief in which Canada might fairly expect to trade in the Japanese markets if Canada had a favoured nation treaty with Japan. This matter has been before the government especially since my return from Japan, and since I have been able to explain the exact situation to my colleagues we have at various times considered it. In reference to what my hon. friend from Victoria and Haliburton (Mr. Sam Hughes) has said in regard to patents, I may say that one clause in these four special treaties entitles the respective countries mentioned to reciprocal advantages in regard to the patent laws. Japanese patentees have the same rights within each of these foreign countries that the natives of these countries have in Japan in regard to the patent law. There are also several clauses in relation to the shipping trade and coast trade ; in relation to the privileges and treatment of the subjects of these different countries in Japan and the treatment of Japanese subjects in these treaty countries. These clauses were at one time considered to be objectionable to us in view of the possibility that Canada might wish to discriminate against the Japanese in Canada. I am happy to be able to say that it is to-day the policy of this government—and I think in that we represent the whole people of Canada—that we should not discriminate against Japanese in Canada, or think or consider of any such discrimination. Therefore in regard to that matter I think I may say we are free from any idea of fear that this clause in the treaty might hamper us in that direction. As a result of discussion and consideration, just lately, the following despatch was sent to the Colonial Office in England, to be transmitted to the Foreign Office, with the object of inquiring whether the Japanese government would overlook the fact that the period within which we have the right to adhere to this treaty had expired, and allow Canada now, even at this rather late date to adhere to the British commercial treaty with Japan. The following is the despatch :

At the time of the original treaty of commerce and navigation in 1894 between Great Britain and Japan, it appears that Canada was invited to become a party thereto, but in view of certain conditions and possible complications, it was deemed best at the moment to decline participation. These obstacles have been now removed, and it is understood informally that the Japanese government would not be unwilling to allow Canada to become a party to the above treaty.

The committee advise that His Excellency be moved to ascertain whether the Japanese government would be prepared to admit Canada to a participation in the said treaty.

This obstacle in regard to the most favoured nation clause in connection with our preference within the empire is removed, because it is thoroughly understood now all over the empire, and also among foreign countries, that Canada's preference to the mother country or within the empire, does not apply to her dealings with foreign countries. As to the other matter, the treatment of the Japanese in this country, the present awakening of the Japanese to civilization and their great enlightenment, I think, have removed all feeling in favour of discriminating against them from the mind of the people of Canada—certainly from the mind of the government. I do not know that there is any other point to be explained, but if any hon. gentleman has questions to ask I shall be glad to deal further with the matter.

Mr. FOSTER. As I understand it, Canada might have adhered to the treaty and might have given no commercial advantages whatever to Japan ? She could have kept exactly the scale of duties of her present tariff ?

Mr. FISHER. So I understand it.

Mr. FOSTER. The real reason that the arrangement was not made was the fear of complications on account of nationality ?

Mr. FISHER. And also a doubt in regard to the favoured nation cause. At that time, I think the situation in regard to the details of the tariff was not thoroughly understood.

Mr. KEMP. What is the date of the letter addressed to the Colonial Office ?

Mr. FISHER. It was dated June 7th,inst.

Mr. OSLER. I gather from what the minister says that it is likely these negotiations going on now will eventually result in Canada having equal trading privileges with Japan with those now enjoyed by the United States ?

Mr. FISHER. I think so. That is our object in taking this step ; and I have confidence, from what I know of the feeling of the Japanese government, that they will meet us.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. As I understand, the period within which any colony of the empire might assent to this treaty was extended for a year. I have read that in the sessional papers of 1897.

Mr. FISHER. That had escaped my observation.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. In order to have a complete record, I will read from the sessional papers of 1897 to which I have referred :

A treaty of commerce and navigation between Great Britain and Japan was signed at London, July 16th, 1894, the ratifications whereof were exchanged at Tokio, August 25th, 1894. A supplementary convention between the two countries was signed at Tokio on the 16th July, 1895, and ratifications were exchanged at the same place November 21st, 1895. Article 19 of the treaty provides that the Dominion of Canada might come within the operations thereof, providing that notice to that effect shall have been given to the Japanese government by Her Majesty's representative at Tokio within two years from the date of the exchange of ratifications. Subsequently notes were exchanged between the two governments extending the time for one year from that date.

Upon reports of a committee of the Honourable the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor General, bearing date the 13th of October, 1896, the 22nd of December, 1896, and the 23rd of January, 1897, the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies was advised that it was not considered expedient that Canada should take advantage of the provisions of article 19, or become a party to the treaty in question.

That, as I understand from the minister, was owing to the fact that the details of the tariff were not well understood at that time. Perhaps it would be of advantage, if these communications are not already before the House, to bring them down at some convenient time. I am not sure whether I gathered correctly from the minister (Mr. Fisher) that so far as Canada is concerned we would be exactly in the same position as the United States—that is we could take advantage of this treaty without offering any special tariff concessions in return. I was absent for a moment or two while the minister was speaking and am not sure that I followed exactly what he said concerning the opportunities which might be given to Canada to take advantage of the treaty now. Will the hon. gentleman state that again ?

Mr. FISHER. First, in regard to the treaty : My hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) has mentioned the United States. Of course, if we adhere to the British treaty, we shall be bound entirely by the British treaty, and that does not involve any change except in regard to the tariff of Japan herself ; and therefore there will be no change in our tariff as respects Japanese goods. In regard to the opportunity for adhering now to the treaty, I may say that, when in Japan I discussed these matters with the government there. Of course the discussion was entirely informal, as it is a matter with which the Foreign Office of Britain must deal. But I was assured by the government in Japan that if, at any time, Canada wished to give her adherence to the treaty they would be very willing to overlook the fact that the term expressed in the treaty had expired.

Mr. FOSTER. How long ago was that ?

Mr. FISHER. A little over two years ago. I have no doubt in my own mind, owing to information from various sources, that the same feeling actuates the government there at this time.

Mr. FOSTER. I understood the minister to say there would be no objection to bring down the Order in Council to which reference has been made ?

Mr. FISHER No.

Mr. OSLER. This is one of the most important commercial questions before Canada to-day. The market of Japan, I believe, is the best market we can hope to gain—and a growing market too. We have the shipping facilities unexcelled by any country. I heard incidentally the other day that some gentlemen from Japan visiting Canada —I do not know whether for the purpose or not—purchased some high grade Jersey cattle to take over to Japan ; and are satisfied that they are the best cattle to take, and expressed surprise that they had not earlier known that Canada was raising for sale that class of cattle. This would indicate a want of enterprise on the part of Canada. If this is the case in regard to our cattle, surely the advertising that Canada has been doing in other parts of the world as to our products has not been done in Japan.

Mr. FISHER. I heartily agree with what the hon. gentleman (Mr. Osler) has said as to the value of the Japanese market to Canada. But what he said with regard to the Japanese gentlemen to whom he has referred is not quite correct. Two gentlemen came from Japan to this continent to purchase cattle. They first directed their attention to the United States ; but, in consequence of what they had seen of the Canadian exhibit at Osaka two years ago, they thought they would not return to Japan until they had visited Canada and found what could be done here. They came here, and put themselves in communication with my department, with the result that they purchased over twenty head. These gentlemen expressed regret that they had not come first to Canada instead of going first to the United States.

Mr. FOSTER. Were there any particular reasons which led the hon. minister (Mr. Fisher) to delay action in the matter from the time, two years ago, when he learned of the significance of the treaty and of the good will of Japan to our adherence thereto until now ?

Mr. FISHER. Simply that the matter was before the government and was not acted upon.

INQUIRY FOR RETURN.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to call the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Emmerson) to a promise he made when acting as Minister of Labour. He promised to lay on the table certain correspondence relating to complaints made against the Père Marquette Railway Company. I would like to know when that correspondence will be brought down.

Mr. EMMERSON. I have not received the papers from the deputy. I have not seen him within a day or two, but will communicate with him and get them.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Hon. GEO. E. FOSTER. The hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Bole) is not present and I was not here yesterday when he drew the attention of the House to a statement said to have been made by myself. It is not a very important matter, but might just as well be made clear. In the unrevised 'Hansard,' I am reported as having made the statement that the hon. member (Mr. Bole) has brought down with him from Winnipeg certain statements and correspondence and an assignment of Mr. Chaffee's claims. I did not say that, although the unrevised 'Hansard' would be sufficient warrant for the hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Bole) to think I had. The full stop was left out and also some words. What I meant to say was that Mr. Bole was in Winnipeg that time. I then preceeded to say that shortly afterwards the papers brought down show an assignment from Mr. Chaffee to McDonald & Co. That makes all the difference in the world in the statement, but the hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Bole) was fully justified in calling attention to it from what appeared in the unrevised 'Hansard.'

TRANSCONTINENTAL COMMISSION.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Have the government made any appointment to the vacancy on the board of the Transcontinental Commission ? I make the inquiry now because of the statement in the government press that a selection has been or is being made.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No appointment, Mr. Speaker, has been made.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT IN THE NORTHWEST TERRITORIES.

House in committee on Bill (No. 69) to establish and provide for the government of the province of Alberta.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

On section 12—distribution of seats.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The wording of this clause would seem to indicate that in its original drafting it was proposed to entrust the delimitation of these ridings or divisions to some other body than parliament—some independent body. I call the attention of the right hon. gentleman to the wording of the section. Those words have no office or meaning in the section as it stands at present, but they would have an office and meaning if they were part of a section which entrusted delimitation of the ridings to some independent body, as seems to have been contemplated in the first instance. I am not concerned at the moment with the question which has been considerably debated in this committee, namely, as to whether or not there is discrimination between the northern part of the province of Alberta and the southern portion. The first question to be considered is the question whether or not this parliament has before it the necessary material for the purpose of making that division. The right hon. gentleman and his colleagues in 1899, as has already been pointed out by hon. gentlemen on this side, thought that where certain counties in Ontario had to be divided into a certain number of ridings, the reasonable and proper course would be to entrust the division to an independent commission. The provisions of the Bill, which was brought down to the House at that time, have already been referred to, but it is not out of place perhaps that I should refer to them again. The Bill which was introduced into this House, by the Frst Minister, in 1899, provided that the counties of Brant, Elgin, Kent, Lambton, North Ontario, Oxford, Perth, should each be divided into two electoral districts each of which shall return one member and the counties of Huron, Bruce, Grey, Middlesex, Simcoe, Wellington and York should each be divided into three electoral districts, each of which shall return one member, and the second section was as follows:—

> Where, under the foregoing provisions, any county or city is to be divided into more than one electoral district, such division shall be made by a board of commissioners, consisting of at least three persons, being judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario, who, for that purpose, shall be appointed by letters patent under the great seal, and who shall divide each such county or city into the number of electoral districts which this Act assigned to it.

Very cogent reasons and arguments were adduced by the right hon. gentleman and his colleagues and supporters on that occasion in favour of the principle thus embodied in that Bill; and if that principle was a good one to be acted upon at that time, there is tenfold more reason for adhering to that policy and principle in the present circumstances. I am not quite sure, after having read the debate upon this clause with some considerable care, that I yet fully appreciate the principle upon which the government does profess to act. The eventual basis must, I suppose, be the basis of population, and regard must be had, in the eastern part of Canada at least, to local divisions.

So far as the west is concerned we are not very much troubled by the consideration of local divisions, because there are not in the western part of Canada municipalities, there is no division into counties, no such divisions as those to which the Prime Minister attached importance when he brought down the Bill for redistribution in 1903. With all due regard to local divisions, and to natural boundaries, wherever they exist, the basis must be a basis of population. When you attempt to proceed upon a basis of population in making this distribution what are you to look to? The conditions in this province and in the province of Saskatchewan as well are absolutely different from those which prevailed in the province of Ontario at that time, but the difference is one which forcibly accentuates, in my opinion, the necessity of having these boundaries delimited by some tribunal which can make a proper investigation for that purpose. In Ontario you had not an enormous movement of population, you had not a tremendous immigration coming into the country and disturbing that basis which was afforded by the census of 1901. I have understood from the remarks of the Prime Minister on this question that we are to some extent to proceed upon the basis of population as ascertained by the census of 1901. It must be obvious to the right hon. gentleman, as well as to every member in the House that that basis is an absolutely insufficient basis. It is a basis which is not acted upon in any other part of this Bill, it is a basis which is not acted upon, and cannot be acted upon, when we proceed to make a per capita allowance to the two provinces. The census of 1901 assigned to the province of Alberta a population in the vicinity of 70,000 souls. The basis upon which the government is proceeding to-day, in dealing with that province, assigns to it a population of not less than 250,000 souls. Looking at all available material which is before the committee as to population we must at once conclude that there are no such material as existed in the case of the province of Ontario to which I have alluded. Even in that case it was thought right by the Prime Minister and his colleagues not to interfere by delimiting the ridings in this parliament, but to entrust the duty of dividing the counties to an absolutely independent body which should proceed upon certain principles mentioned in the Bill to which I have referred. It has been said that we have the material before us; I would like to know where that material exists. It is obvious that it does not exist in the information afforded by the census of 1901. It seems to me that we can dismiss that at once. The census of 1901 is not acted upon in this Bill for any other purpose and it is absolutely clear that it does not afford us an adequate basis upon which to proceed in the delimitation at the present time. It goes without saying, that a census which showed in this province a population of only 70,000 souls is not a sufficient or safe guide when we are proposing to divide the provinces into constituencies upon the basis of a population of 25,000 souls.

It has been said by the right hon. gentleman, or some of his colleagues, that we have before us certain other information. We have before us the lists of voters upon which the general election of 1903 was conducted. We have before us the lists giving the number of persons who voted at the different polling booths on the 3rd of November last. I am still not much concerned with the question of discrimination between the north and the south, but I venture to submit to the right hon. gentleman that if he is proceeding upon either one or other of these bases the schedule which he has submitted to the House does not commend itself to us as having been very carefully prepared. We have no difficulty with these local municipal divisions about which there has been so much discussion in connection with the redistribution of Ontario. The right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) seems to base his argument largely on the list of those who have voted. If I look at that list I find the arrangement of constituencies quite as unsatisfactory as the list of electors for the different ridings now proposed to be created. Having had some acquaintance with this subject in the session of 1903, when I acted upon a committee to which was entrusted the duty of reporting the distributing of ridings in all parts of Canada, where the distribution was a matter of dispute, I never heard in the committee any suggestion that we should proceed upon the basis of those who have voted in any particular riding. We proceeded always upon the basis of population, and I think it must be apparent to the right hon. gentleman that a list of electors in the riding must be a much better guide to the actual population in the riding than a list of persons who have voted. He has only to consider that for one moment to see the force of that suggestion. The list of voters for each polling division was prepared by officers of the present administration. There cannot be any suggestion of any partisanship against the interests of the administration or against the administration of the Prime Minister's political friends. I do not suggest that there is any partisanship against the interest of those on this side of the House. I must regard these lists for the present as fair and proper lists made up for the purpose of that election. Are you to take the guide thus afforded, or are you to take the guide afforded by the persons who actually voted? The weather, the many avocations which engage the population, the thoroughness of organization, the activity or popularity of the candidates, the interest taken in the issue at any juncture, a hundred other things which one might mention interfere in the different ridings with the percentage of those who come out to vote. The list made for the purpose of the election is supposed to contain, and we must assume it does contain, the names of all persons who have the right to vote at the election, but the list of those who actually voted contains no such guide, for the very good reasons I have mentioned. The suggestion I make is very well borne out by the results, because in some ridings we find that from 75 to 80 or 85 per cent of the electors voted, while in other ridings, for reasons which have been stated, 55, 60 or 65 per cent only of the electors came forward for the purpose of depositing their ballots. But even assuming that either one or the other of these lists would afford a fair guide to the administration in delimiting the ridings which have been placed before the House in this schedule, I must confess that I cannot understand the principles upon which the government has delimited these different constituencies. Beginning with the list, look at the ridings proposed to be constituted according to the number of voters who actually deposited their ballots in November last. I will take them in their numerical order and not according to district or to area. We find the following results :

Constituency.	Votes polled in November last.
Stony Plain	584
Red Deer	608
Cardston	621
Vermilion	632
Leduc	676
Macleod	715
St. Albert	740
Rosebud	749
Banff	750
Sturgeon	772
Gleichen	774
Lacombe	778
Ponoka	794
Wetaskiwin	834
Lethbridge	858
Strathcona	872
Innisfail	896
High River	971
Medicine Hat	1,168
Pincher	1,147
Saskatchewan	1,237
Edmonton	1,340
Calgary	2,042

Well, there does not seem to have been a great deal of care taken to distribute these ridings according to population, because we begin in Stony Plain with 584 electors who voted in November last, and we end in Calgary with 2,052 electors who voted in the same election, showing a limit of 300 per cent instead of 10 per cent, which I believe has been allowed in the recent instructions from the Colonial Secretary to the commissioners for delimiting the electoral divisions in the Transvaal. If you take the number of electors on the list, you find the same extraordinary discrepancies :

Constituency.	Voters on the list.
Stony Plain	748
Cardston	851
St. Albert	960
Banff	1,017
Vermilion	1,068
Ponoka	1,068
Leduc	1,068
Red Deer	1,095
Sturgeon	1,098
Macleod	1,121
Lacombe	1,182
Rosebud	1,189
Lethbridge	1,236
Gleichen	1,260
Strathcona	1,291
Innisfail	1,325
Wetaskiwin	1,416
High River	1,528
Medicine Hat	1,650
Pincher	1,678
Edmonton	1,689
Saskatchewan	1,757
Calgary	2,682

You see practically the same discrepancy, running from Stony Plain with 748 electors on the list to Calgary with 2,682 electors on the list. There is every variation of population between the lowest and the highest, there does seem to be no principle based on population, to which you can attribute the preparation of these ridings. Perhaps the right hon. gentleman will do me the kindness to state now how it is that we have these extraordinary discrepancies upon the list which I have before me ; and as to the figures, there is not any great dispute between the hon. members on this side of the House and those on that side of the House. Now that is the situation as it strikes me at present. In dealing with these constituencies it seems to me that we ought to have regard, in the first place, as I said before, to this prime question : Can we possibly have in this committee the information which is necessary to make a fair and just distribution of the ridings in these two provinces ? I do not think so. I have read the debates with a great deal of care, and I do not think that this House possesses any such information as should be before us for that purpose. The very circumstance that hon. gentlemen on that side of the House, and hon. gentlemen on this side of the House, acting I have no doubt in both cases with the utmost good faith, arrived at such different and irreconcilable conclusions, seems to me a strong reason for suggesting to the Prime Minister that some independent tribunal, with the same means of investigation as those which he proposed to confer upon the commission in 1899 should be appointed for delimiting these constituencies. In the next place, and for the sake of argument only, for what reason is it that you are acting upon either the one or the other of these lists showing the extraordinary discrepancies in the population of the different ridings as disclosed by the lists which I have just read to the committee ?—and I will hand a copy of these to the right hon. gentleman for the purpose of information, if these discrepancies have not already impressed themselves upon his attention. We ought to conclude that this division can be much better done by an independent body having the means of investigation which I have referred to ; and if the government does not adopt that very reasonable principle, that very fair conclusion, then it seems to me that some principle should be stated which would be applicable both to the province of Alberta and to the province of Saskatchewan, and upon which the government can show that they have acted in delimiting the ridings which are contained in the schedules to both Acts. Now I understand that the principle which has been stated from the other side of the House with regard to the province of Alberta produces the most extraordinary results when applied to the province of Saskatchewan, as was set forth in the speech of my hon. friend from Qp'Appelle (Mr. Lake). It does not seem that the principle which was put forward and which was illustrated by my hon. friend from Qu'Appelle can really be the principle upon which the government has proceeded. It has been suggested that the ridings have been delimited, and that a principle is now sought for the purpose of supporting that division. I do not suggest this, but if any such course has been pursued, it is obviously not a proper and fair course. Some principle should be adopted, and a very proper principle I think is to adopt a principle and have it carried out, a commission of judges or to a commission of independent and trustworthy persons. If that principle is not adopted, then surely it lies with the government to show the principle upon which they have acted and to apply that principle without fear or favour, not only to the province of Alberta, but to the province of Saskatchewan as well.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not propose on this Bill to discuss in any way the schedules which have been submitted to my hon. friend with regard to the province of Saskatchewan.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. It is simply the principle.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The principle is the same in both cases. I will come to that presently, but I do not think it will be consistent with the rules of debate or at all conducive to any good result that we should mix the two things together. Let us stick to what we have in hand; that is to say, to the principles and the schedules in regard to the province of Alberta. My hon. friend has suggested, that, according to the language of section 12, it was not contemplated that the schedules of this Bill should be settled at this table. I have no hesitation in saying to my hon. friend that in my own mind I thought that these schedules should not be settled at this table. My hon. friend from West Assiniboia (Mr. Scott), has stated my opinion in regard to that. I have taken that position all along in the debate. The discussions which took place between myself and my colleagues and the representatives of the Northwest legislature were confidential, and I shall not disclose them, but at all events the statement has been made by my hon. friend from West Assiniboia that it was my intention to have these schedules confirmed in the same manner as the schedules were confirmed at the time of the last Dominion redistribution; that is by a conference of members from both sides of the House. This view did not commend itself to the judgment of hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House and therefore we had to proceed as we are now proceeding.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is entire news to me. I never heard of any such suggestion.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not think my hon. friend heard of it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I suppose I ought to have heard of it.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend from West Assiniboia stated that the matter was one which concerned more the members of the Northwest Territories, and he made the offer, I understand, that the schedules should be prepared by hon. members on both sides of the House from the Northwest. There was some misunderstanding with them. But, that was my intention.

Mr. LAKE. As I stated yesterday, that offer was never made to me.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I am not going to discuss what was done. My hon. friend from West Assiniboia has stated at all events what was my intention. If for one reason or the other it did not meet with approval that was my intention, but it has not been done and therefore we had to resort to the course of proceeding as we are now proceeding, or we had to resort to the course suggested by my hon. friend the leader of the opposition just now, or rather proposed in the motion of the hon. member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy), that we should refer the whole matter to a commission composed of judges.

Mr. FOSTER. Will my right hon. friend excuse me? He states to the committee that it was his intention that there should be a conference of members from both sides of the House to settle this matter. The committee has been entirely in the dark as to whether that was the intention or not up to this moment.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

Mr. FOSTER. What method did he take to apprise the opposition that in his mind the proper way to proceed was to have a conference of members from both sides of the House? The only thing that has occurred heretofore has been a statement by a member of the opposition side of the House that such a proposition was made by Northwest members supporting the government to Northwest members who were in opposition. Now we have a Northwest member rising in his place in the House and denying that any such proposition was made to him.

Mr. SCOTT. Will my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) permit me to say that we were told at the conference to which reference has been made by the premier of the Northwest Territories that he had been asked by the Prime Minister to get an agreement first about the boundary line between the provinces and next about the number of constituencies which should be apportioned to each province, and also to furnish the Prime Minister with the schedules for each province. The premier of the Territories, Mr. Haultain, came to the conference and suggested that we should help him in furnishing these schedules and help him to come to the conclusions that he might give to the government in regard to these matters.

Mr. FOSTER. That is now a new version. Now we come down to the point that the proposition was not made to the members from the Northwest on this side of the House, but that the proposition was made in some way to Mr. Haultain, but it was not in the mind of the right hon. Prime Minister, as he told us here, that there should be a conference between Mr. Haultain and somebody else to fix this up. There was to be no conference consonant with his idea between the members in this House on both sides. What had Mr. Haultain to do in so far as a conference between members representing the government and opposition in this House was concerned? Nothing at all. The statement made the other day by my hon. friend who has just spoken (Mr. Scott) and the statement he made to-day are not consistent with each other, and both of them flatly deny what the right hon. Prime Minister has said that he had in his mind, and what hon. gentlemen sitting on this side of the House declare is an absolute fact. The right hon. Prime Minister is the important man on that side of the House. If he had an idea of actually holding it, he placed himself in the position of taking no certain step to apprise the opposition of the fact that he had that idea and that he thought it would be right that it should prevail. Then, having done nothing and having brought the matter to this pass, he now gives as an excuse for the present basis and the present proceeding that there was no acceptation of what he had in his mind.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I did not intend to convey the idea that I thought that this matter should be settled between the opposition and the government sitting as we are now at this table, but I thought this was a matter which might well be settled by the members who were representing the North-west Territories. I am sorry it was not done in that way. If it were not done in that way we might have done it in one of two other ways. One way was to refer it to a commission of judges as the hon. leader of the opposition and the hon. member for Calgary have proposed. My hon. friend has referred to the precedent, as he calls it, of the Bill of 1899. The Bill of 1899 was introduced for a specific object only and for nothing else ; that is to say, to rectify certain things which the party on this side of the House thought had been done injuriously to them. It was proposed that certain counties should be divided and others united and the Bill proposed that when there was to be a division of a county into two or more ridings the work should be done by a commission, but at no time was it the policy of the party to which I belong that we should entrust the work of preparing the constituencies in this House, because we had only to deal with this House, to a commission of judges. We thought that, on the contrary, we should deal with that matter in accordance with British precedent and that we should have the work done by the House itself and not delegated to any judiciary authority. My hon. friend stated to the House that according to British precedent this work should be referred to judges, but I beg to say that in this matter he is in error. At no time in Great Britain, as far as my information goes, and I think upon this point it is absolutely accurate, and under no circumstances in Great Britain has the work of distribution of seats in the House of Commons been referred to a commission of judges. The work has been done in every instance by the House itself reserving only the mechanical work of tracing upon the ground and putting on the maps the respective divisions to which the House has agreed, not to a commission of judges, but to a special board. That was what was done in 1884 and I understand it is what has been done subsequently. Prior to 1884 this work of redistribution had always been done more or less arbitrarily, but in 1884, when the Act of Representation was introduced by Mr. Gladstone, which was largely to add to the electorate and which was to extend the franchise chiefly in cities, the opposition, led by Lord Salisbury, would not agree to the Act unless they knew beforehand what distribution should be made in consequence of it. Mr. Gladstone agreed to the suggestion. The question was one which was not without some difficulties. As the franchise was to be largely extended, chiefly in the boroughs, and as the representation would be larger in the boroughs than in the counties, the question was to have a fair distribution in consequence. I gather from the debates that the Conservative party were afraid that if the basis of the suffrage were largely extended, and if there was a large acquisition of votes upon the lists, the boroughs might go against the Conservatives to the prejudice of the representation of the counties in which their strength lay. The chief object was to have a fair distribution, before even agreeing to the principle of the extension of the suffrage. Mr. Gladstone agreed to that, and the principles were laid down and discussed at a conference between representatives of both political parties.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Were not these principles embodied in a commission issued to judges ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No. The commission was entrusted to a board of commissioners, the names of whom I will quote from the record. I read from the speech of Mr. Gladstone, English 'Hansard,' volume 294 :

> The best thing I can say is that a commission has been appointed for the purpose. The division of the boroughs and the fixing of the county districts will be under a commission which has been appointed, and perhaps I might not do ill —since, after all, confidence in the commission is a very important matter—if I ventured to read the names of the commissioners to the House. For England the names are Sir John Lambert, Mr. Pelham, barrister-at-law, Sir Francis Sanford, Mr. Joseph John Henley, the son of a former well-known member of this House, Colonel Owen Jones, and Major Hector Tulloch.

I have here the instructions that were given to the commissioners, and it will be found that the work of the commission was largely to be the mechanical laying out of the boundaries upon the ground. They had to divide counties and boroughs ; and in England, where the population is thick, where the divisions are ill-defined and where the boundaries are sometimes the result, not of law, but of custom, the difficulty was to distribute the population so as to give a fair proportion as between boroughs and counties and between boroughs and boroughs and at the same time not to interfere too radically with existing conditions. I have here the instructions which were given to the commissioners, and I have the report made by these commissioners. The report is signed by the gentlemen whose names I have given, and it is prefaced with the instruction from which I quote:

> The duties of the commissioners will be the following :
> 1. With respect to counties.
> In the first place to examine the survey maps of the Ordnance Department, and determine from them and other documents in the possession of that department and of the local government board and from other available information, the boundaries to be assigned to the several divisions of each county to be divided. In forming the divisions care must be taken in all those cases where there are populous localities of an urban character to include them in one and the same division, unless this cannot be done without producing grave inconvenience, and involving boundaries of a very irregular and objectionable character.

Subject to this important rule, each division should be as compact as possible with respect to geographical position, and should be based upon well-known existing areas, such as petty sessional divisions, or other areas consisting of an aggregate of parishes. In some instances, however, it may be found necessary to include separate parishes, but a divisional boundary should not intersect a parish.

Each division will be named from some important town or place within it, preference being given to any merged borough or boroughs, when it consists wholly or mainly of some well-known area, from that area.

When the divisions have thus been provisionally determined, public notice must be given of their contents by advertisement in one or more local newspapers, and day and place appointed for the attendance of one of the members of the commission or an assistant commissioner at some principal town in the county to hear any objections to the proposed constitution of the divisions and receive proposals for their alteration. It will be convenient that the substance of such objection and proposals should be handed in to the commissioner or assistant commissioner in writing.

2. With respect to boroughs.

The duties of the commission will be, in cases where the question of an alteration of boundary arises, to ascertain whether the present boundaries or those indicated by the Bill embrace the whole of the population which ought to be included within the borough. The commissioner will, therefore, previous to making any recommendations, take the necessary steps for satisfying themselves whether or not there are any considerable number of houses beyond the boundaries but contiguous thereto, the occupiers of which, either from community of interests with the borough or from other circumstances, form part of the town population proper. Where, however, the adjoining areas consist of large and populous urban districts it will often be found desirable, especially in those cases where otherwise it would be necessary to intersect the districts, that they should be left to form county divisions instead of being absorbed into the borough.

In every case where the boundaries of a borough are proposed to be altered, whether by extension or otherwise, the alteration should, if possible, be consistent with well established limits, such as parochial or other similar boundaries.

Where the divisions of the boroughs which are to be divided have been provisionally determined, the proceedings will be similar to those in the case of counties.

3. In dealing both with county and borough divisions, the boundaries of the divisions must be adjusted so that the population, excluding in the case of the county divisions that of the parliamentary boroughs, may be proximately equalized and in the arrangement of the divisions special regard should be had to the pursuits of the population. If the county voters having qualifications in a parliamentary borough within a county division are numerous, some regard may properly be had to their number in determining the population to be embraced in that division.

As between counties and boroughs, the boundaries must, when the divisions are formed, be in conformity with existing boundaries except so far as these are altered by schedule 5 of the Bill, and where it appears to the commission, from information obtained in the course of their inquiry, that an alteration of existing borough boundaries is desirable, a description of the alteration should be embodied in their report.

I wish to cite, not the whole of the proceedings, but the first step which was taken by the commissioners to carry out their instructions; and I read from the report of the commissioners:

Immediately upon our appointment, which was dated the 29th of November last, we entered upon our duties, and shortly afterwards, finding that without additional assistance we should be unable to complete the work entrusted to us before the re-assembling of parliament, we applied for the appointment of three assistant commissioners, and accordingly Major General Phipps Cary, R. E., Captain M. W. Skinner, R.E., and G. Pemberton Leach, Esquire, barrister-at-law, were, with the consent of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, attached to the commission in that capacity.

You see, therefore, that the work entrusted to the commissioners was simply to carry out the intentions of parliament. They were asked to look at old charts and old maps, to find out the grouping of the population and so on, in order to get the best division that could be made. They were to have so many constituencies within a certain area, and to divide so many boroughs and so many counties in order to produce so many electoral divisions. It was found that could not be done by parliament in England, because information was needed which parliament could not possibly ascertain of itself. There are no such difficulties confronting us in the present case as were experienced in England. We have a very sparse population in the Northwest Territories; there are no ranges of mountains to divide population on one side or the other; there are no large rivers, except those which are well known to us; there are not many streams, and therefore we are cognizant of all the conditions which enable us to do the mechanical work which, in England, was entrusted to commissioners. The leader of the opposition asks what principles we have followed in order to arrive at this conclusion. Well, we have endeavoured to be guided by two principles—geographical conditions and population. These are the only two principles which we think should guide us under existing circumstances, and whether we have this matter settled here and now or whether we appoint a commission of judges or of any other body, they will always have to come back in the last resort, to those two guiding principles—geographical position and distribution of population. It is true that the result will never work out mathematically either in this or in any other distribution. You will always have to depend upon that substratum of justice and fair-play, which, after all, is the best guide in matters of this kind. If you attempt to carry out your purpose by any precise mathematical rule, you must fail; you have to trust to good sense and fair-play in the end.

I wish to refer to two matters to which my hon. friend has called my attention, namely, the population of Stony Plain and the population of Calgary. The hon. gentleman asks: Why do you give a member to Stony Plain when you give only one member to Calgary? Well, Calgary is a city, while Stony Plain is a rural district. I appeal to hon. gentlemen on the other side, I appeal to my hon. friend from North Toronto (Mr. Foster), who has sat on the treasury benches when the redistribution was undertaken, that you cannot have the same unit of population for the representation of a city as for the representation of a rural community. Two years ago, when we last had a redistribution measure before this House, a strong appeal was made to us by representatives of urban populations, that they were not treated fairly because the unit of population was not the same for the city as for the rural places. Our unit of population for counties was 25,000, but for Toronto and Montreal we had a very much larger unit. If this principle were not adopted some portions of the rural populations would be left unrepresented. Calgary, for instance, had a population, according to the last census of 4,865. This is a compact population included within, perhaps, two square miles. Stony Plain had a population of 2,938; here is a population of about 3,000 scattered over a territory hundreds of miles in extent. On what principle are you to deal with these two populations if not on the principle we have adopted of considering geographical conditions as well as population?

Mr. AMES. Will the right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) allow me to ask him why he argues that Stony Plain with 589 votes cast in the last election should have one member to itself, while Saskatchewan, with about equal area and with 1,168 votes cast in the last election, should have only one member? Or will he tell us why Stony Plain, with 768 votes on the list should have one member, when High River, with 1,786 votes on the list, both rural sections, has only one member?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Because of geographical considerations as shown in the map I have before me. It is impossible to make division so as to establish mathematical equality among the voters. No matter what arrangement you make you must do apparent injustice to somebody. How, then, would my hon. friend (Mr. Ames) do it?

Mr. AMES. I would follow the principle adopted in the Transvaal, in New Zealand and in New South Wales—establish a certain quota of representation by voting population, and then leave it to the judges to define the boundaries.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. But how could the judges proceed in any other way than that in which we have proceeded? I have looked at the laws of the Transvaal on this subject. They provide that every electoral district must have the same population within 10 per cent. I do not know the population of the Transvaal or the conditions of that country, but I feel sure it would not be possible to work out any such system in this country.

Mr. AMES. Does not the Prime Minister think that the conditions of the Transvaal and of New South Wales are very much the same as our own—population very much scattered in some places, and, in others, concentrated?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. In this country, from the time of confederation, no such rule has been followed; and I do not think it is possible to follow out this fanciful new theory, but we must, to some extent, stick to the old idea, so far as it can be applied with justice. My hon. friend (Mr. Ames) contrasts the registered vote of Stony Plain 766 with the registered vote of Saskatchewan, 1,382.

Mr. AMES. Stony Plain and High River.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I understand that High River is a rather thickly peopled portion of the country. But Stony Plain is a remote section, at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, and I understand, very sparsely settled. If representation is to be given with even a semblance of justice, these people must be considered in the light of their geographical position.

Mr. AMES. Practically all the population of Stony Plain, I understand, lies in the northeastern portion of it. So far as High River is concerned, why cannot that territory be given two representatives, inasmuch as it has more than double the population and more than double the number of voters that Stony Plain has?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Well, would the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ames) suggest why High River should have two representatives and none should be given to Stony Plain? Would that be justice?

Mr. AMES. That is not necessary.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Then, what will take place if that is not necessary?

Mr. FOSTER. What will take place is that the right hon. gentleman will not have the balance in the north, as he has taken care to have it now.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. What will take place is that Stony Plain will have to be added to some other large territory, whose representative already would have too much to do, and, although this section should have a representative it would be denied that advantage.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would like to ask the right hon. gentleman a question. I am trying to follow what he says. You have no municipal divisions in Alberta, so far as I know, except the cities. You estimate a certain population based upon the number of voters on the list or on the number who voted, assuming the correctness of that estimate, why is it necessary in applying the unit of population, to have the very great discrepancy shown by the contrast of Stony Plain with 584 votes polled, and Calgary with 2,052 ? Or leave Edmonton and Calgary out for the moment—I will give reasons why I think they should not be left out—and you have Stony Plain with 584, and Saskatchewan with 1,237. Or Stony Plain with 748 on the voters' list and Pincher with 1,678 on the voters' list. In applying the unit of population,—and that was the basis we adopted in 1903—why do you have such extraordinary discrepancies ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Because in Ontario you were dealing with a compact population, whereas in these new Territories you are dealing with a moving and everchanging population, and you have an uneven population distributed over a large amount of territory. The hon. member for North Toronto (Mr. Foster) has spoken of the feeling against the proposed distribution and asked why we want to have so many members in the north. For my part I have no sympathy with this miserable—no, Mr. Chairman, I shall not use that expression because I do not want to use any offensive word—but I will say these unfortunate appeals to excite division between the north and south. Have we not already divisions enough in this country—division of race and religion?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. But it will not be my fault, if they do exist.

Mr. FOSTER. The right hon. gentleman always deplores what he himself brings about.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I shall be glad to discuss this subject before the session is over, but do not propose to do so to-day.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I understood the right hon. gentleman to say that High River was thickly-peopled because of its proximity to Calgary. But it is not as near Calgary as Stony Plain is to Edmonton at present.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Why, it is evidently a question, upon the other side, of rivalry between Calgary and Edmonton. But why not discard Calgary and Edmonton in this matter?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. That is not the case at all, as I have attempted to show by citations from newspapers published in Macleod, which is eighty miles from Calgary, in Medicine Hat which is 200 miles distant, and in Lethbridge which is 120 miles from Calgary.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend will not depart from his local prejudices. It is always with him Calgary and Edmonton, in one form or another. It is always a question with him of north or south. If we have spent the last two days or so, and if we are going to spend Heaven knows how many more on this point, it is simply because there is rivalry between Edmonton and Calgary. My hon. friend would not object to having Stony Plain represented if there were not rivalry between Edmonton and Calgary. Surely no one will object to every section of the community being represented here. Wherever there are settlements, no matter how young or how recently settled, wherever there are men who have a right to the suffrage, why should they not be represented in the legislature of the new province?

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Who is objecting ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The gentleman whom my hon. friend represents and my hon. friend himself.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I challenge the right hon. gentleman to point to any word I have spoken which raised any such objection. His statement is most unwarrantable.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If my hon. friend had not that intention, I apologize for attributing it to him.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I have not uttered a word which gives the right hon. gentleman the slightest warrant for making that imputation, and he knows it.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I thought my hon. friend spoke of Stony Plain and Calgary a moment ago.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. There is no use making suggestions which have not the slightest foundation.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I would be the last to impute anything of the kind to my hon. friend and at once accept his statement without any qualification, and absolutely withdraw the imputation. I do not want to impute motives to him. I do not want to charge him with anything of that kind ; but when he takes exception to what I have said, I simply refer him to the fact that the whole discussion we have had has been due simply to the rivalry between Calgary and Edmonton. And I repeat the only objection to Stony Plain having one member and to Athabaska having two is that being nearer Edmonton than Calgary, they will be more likely to vote for Edmonton as the capital rather than Calgary. That is what is at the bottom of the discussion.

Mr. LAKE. No.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If it be not, then I shall be glad to hear I am in error. But what has been the purport of all this discussion? Why all this discussion between north and south? Why not look at the whole question from the boundary up to the limit of Athabaska rather than to Red Deer north and Red Deer south? If we look at the question on this broad basis, no fault will be found with the divisions. That they are, or can be, mathematical nobody can pretend ; but that they are fair I assert in face of all the contradictions we have had in the last two days. My hon. friend, the leader of the opposition, said a moment ago that we could not take the census as a sufficient basis. I agree with him. We have not taken the census as the only basis, but we have taken also the recorded vote, the registered vote, the post offices, the school districts, and my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) has given us in addition the business done by the railways, banks and so on, and I think also the customs duties. I do not object to all these things. They are all fair elements for comparison and to be considered in our endeavour to give representation according to population. My hon. friend said a moment ago that in the committee on which he sat two years ago, they were guided by the census of the population. That is true, but what figures did they follow? They followed the census of 1901. in the old provinces of Canada; we can take the census as the basis of population until we have another census, because we know the population will not vary much from one census to another. There will be a small accession from immigration and the natural increase, but nothing to prevent the census being taken as a basis. In these Territories, however, the conditions are quite different. There we cannot take the census alone but have to supplement it by all the information to which I have just alluded.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The right hon. gentleman himself introduced the question of the two capitals and then charges my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) with having done so.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The hon. gentleman has not been here the last two days.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I want to point out that he was not quite fair. The question was put him with regard to High River, and he referred to its proximity to Calgary.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I did so because I concluded there must be a large population in High River on account of its being in the vicinity of Calgary.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Yes, he referred to its proximity to Calgary, but when my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) referred to the proximity of Stony Plain to Edmonton, he charged him with raising the question of rivalry. He is not applying the same principle to each case.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My hon. friend is wrong. I said there is a large population at High River because it is in the vicinity of Calgary. My hon. friend from Calgary replied : But Stony Plain is in the vicinity of Edmonton. But, Sir, there is no population in Stony Plain though it is in the vicinity of Edmonton. That has nothing to do with it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not think it has, but the right hon. gentleman introduced the illustration and thus gave warrant to my hon. friend from Calgary to refer to Stony Plain. Because if you argue that High River should have a population away above the mark because of its proximity to Calgary, it is equally good reason to say that Stony Plain should have a similar increase of population because it is in the vicinity of Edmonton. If the principle be good in the one case, it should in the other. but my hon. friend dismissed that argument with a smile and an entire disregard of logic very refreshing on a warm day like this.

The right hon. gentleman made a great deal of the point that in England judges were not selected. I was under the impression that judges were selected in Great Britain, but if judges were not selected there, men were selected who had the confidence of both parties. The important part of it is that the delimitation was entrusted to an independent commission, and that was done after an agreement as to the principle had been arrived at by both parties. My right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) says it was his own intention to have pursued that course in this case. I very much regret that although I have been pretty steadily in the House since the 1st of February I have heard nothing until to-day of any such suggestion. I have not heard any such suggestion from the right hon. gentleman himself, as he will admit. I have not heard any such suggestion from my friends on this side of the House from the Northwest Territories, and I am inclined to think if they had been cognizant of any suggestion of the kind they would have imparted it to me. The right hon. gentleman says he regrets that that course has not been carried out. Whose fault is that ? It is his own fault. These matters are arranged by private interview between the right hon. gentleman and myself or some one on this side of the House, usually between the right hon. gentleman and myself, but I have not heard one word from him or from any other person that this was to be arranged by a conference between the two sides. It seems to me that my right hon. friend cannot be very earnest in his expression of regret that a course has not been adopted which he himself could have carried out, but which he did not take the proper steps to carry out. It is idle to endeavour to throw any onus upon this side of the House when we have not even had the opportunity of considering the acceptance or rejection of any such suggestion. In Great Britain in 1884, a deadlock arose between the two Houses over the Franchise and Representation Bills. To remove this difficulty Mr. Gladstone and Lord Salisbury came to an arrangement whereby the question of redistribution should be submitted to commissioners, the principle upon which the commissioners should act, the instructions to the commissioners having first been arranged by a conference between the two sides. Five commissioners were appointed on the 29th of November 1884, and on the 5th of December they began their preliminary work. Shortly afterwards the judges called in officers of the Royal Artillery, and Royal Engineers, professional men familiar with the work of delimitation, with boundaries, and also called in a leading lawyer as assistant commissioners. After the preliminary divisions had been mapped out, notice was given of an inquiry in each division with a view to obtaining a better division if possible. As a result of that inquiry much additional valuable information was obtained, and the commissioners were able to make many improvements in the preliminary boundaries. This took place even in a country so thickly populated and so well known as Great Britain, in England, Scotland and Ireland, and the right hon. gentleman stood by that principle in 1899. Whether or not the measure which he introduced then was a measure for a complete redistribution, or whether, as he says, it was a measure to correct wrongs in the redistribution previously made, is immaterial; the right hon. gentleman then stood upon the principle and I quote his language:

> The principle which we want to lay down and which we act upon is this, that whenever a county has to be divided into ridings, whenever a county which up to that time is entitled to only one member, becomes entitled to two or three members, the division should take place by judicial decision and authority.

That is the principle upon which the right hon. gentleman stood then, and I repeat once more, it is not only a principle which is absolutely applicable to the delimitation of ridings in these new provinces, but it is one which is tenfold more necessary in those new provinces than it was in Ontario when the right hon. gentleman laid down that principle. That is obvious, I think, to any hon. gentleman who gives the matter the slightest consideration or attention, and the only excuse for not adopting that course to-day as in 1899 is that we on this side of the House did not accept an offer which was never made. That is the only excuse up to the present. Further, he has not given the slightest answer to the question I asked him a few moments ago. I asked him how it was that the voting strength in these different ridings varied so remarkably, and the only answer he has made to me is that Stony Plain is a rural constituency and Calgary a city constituency. In the first place the principle of giving less representation to a city constituency has never been applied to cities of the size of Edmonton and Calgary; certainly no such principle as that was acted upon in the redistribution of Ontario in 1903, and I challenge my right hon. friend to point to one instance in Ontario where any such principle was acted upon. It was applied to Toronto and Montreal, I do not remember that it was applied to any other cities although it may possibly have been taken into consideration with regard to Hamilton or Ottawa, but certainly in no cities of less size and importance than those to which I have just referred. Therefore it seems to me we can put aside at once any suggestion of that kind We then acted upon the basis of population; we are acting upon the basis of population to-day according to the hon. gentlemen opposite, and we have 584 who voted in Stony Plain, and 2,052 in Calgary. But we shall leave that aside. We have 608 in Red Deer and 1,168 in Medicine Hat. Are there any natural divisions? Are there any local conditions? Are there any municipal divisions which make it necessary that there should be such a discrepancy? Taking the electoral lists we find for Stony Plains, 748 and for Calgary, 2,682. Omit Calgary if you please, and we have Stony Plains with 748 and Pincher Creek with 1,678. The right hon. gentleman, when we draw this discrepancy to his attention, suggests that we desire to deprive Stony Plains of representation. We desire nothing of the kind. We desire to have some principle whereby the electors of Stony Plain will have just the same voice and representation in parliament as those in Pincher Creek and I do not know that there is any reason why they should have more. There is a reasonable allowance to be made. That allowance has been fixed at 10 per cent in the case of the Transvaal. I do not know any reason why you should depart from that principle. I do not know why you should have Stony Plain with 748 and Pincher Creek with 1,678, an allowance of more than 100 per cent instead of 10 per cent as in the Transvaal. The right hon. gentleman has no answer to this except the suggestion that a rural voter should have more voice than a city voter. The constituency of Pincher Creek is not a city constituency, yet 1,678 electors in that proposed riding have no more voice than 748 in the constituency of Stony Plain. Does not the right hon. gentleman think there is some further answer required than that which he has given ? If there are any reasons on account of natural boundaries, on account of local conditions, or on account of anything else which have led the government to make up this extraordinary schedule, let us hear what they are, but surely the hon. gentleman is not going to content himself with simply placing Stony Plain on one side and Calgary on the other and omitting the other 23 constituencies designated by the schedule. I venture to think the right hon. gentleman is altogether departing from the principle he laid down in 1899 and doing so without any good reason.

My right hon. friend must have well known that I never had the slightest knowledge or intimation of any intention on the part of the government that there should be any such conference between the two sides as that which he has referred to to-day. He has admitted frankly that it was not the intention of the government, in the first instance, to proceed along the present lines ; he has admitted that it was the intention of the government to proceed along the lines of a conference between the two sides of the House, adopting the British principle, and if he had followed out that principle to its legitimate conclusion he would have left its application to some independent tribunal. The right hon. gentleman has abandoned both; he has abandoned, in the first place, the suggestion of a conference, which was his own idea, as he admits. For what reason has that been abandoned ? My hon. friend has given no explanation of that. For what reason was the intention of a conference, admitted by the right hon. gentleman, abandoned ? Whose fault is it ? It is certainly not the fault of any one on this side of the House, because we never heard anything of it before. It was a very fair intention, it was one in which we acquiesced in 1903; although we at that time thought it should go further, and that there should be a commission of independent men to delimit the constituencies. But there was a conference of the two sides of the House by means of a committee, and our deliberations, the right hon. gentleman well remembers, were carried on informally in order that we might ascertain whether we could not, in that informal and private way, come to a conclusion as to some matters respecting which we were likely to differ in opinion. We were not altogether satisfied with the conclusion of the conference on that occasion ; some alterations were made by the right hon. gentleman after the committee had reported. But still that was an infinitely fairer method than the one which is presented to the House by the right hon. gentleman on this occasion ; and I trust he will see his way clear to revert to his first good intention and to deal with this matter somewhat differently from the method which he now seeks to impose upon this side of the House. He spoke of this question the other day as one of higher politics. A principle of higher politics should not be varied as this is being varied, simply because the right hon. gentleman concludes that there has been some misunderstanding between members on both sides of the House from the west. I was entitled, I think, if the right hon. gentleman had any intention of that kind, to know something about it. If he had brought it to my attention, probably he would have saved a good deal of debate, a good deal of delay and discussion with regard to this matter. But inasmuch as he is quite clear now that his intention has not been brought to the minds of those on this side of the House who have dealt with the matter, I ask him whether he does not think it would be fair to deal with it in that way at the present time, and to see whether we cannot come to some conclusion as to the schedules which will be a little more in consonance with what we on this side of the House believe to be justice and fair-play to all concerned?

Mr. OLIVER. The leader of the opposition is certainly doing his humble best to create dissatisfaction in the minds of the people of Alberta. I do not know that he will be successful, because, after two or three days engaged in threshing this case out in parliament, he and his friends have certainly failed to establish a case.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What part of my remarks were intended to excite dissatisfaction ?

Mr. OLIVER. The whole of them, as I understood them, by trying to create a grievance where no grievance exists, and where none has yet been shown. My hon. friend has laid some stress on the assertion he makes that there was no attempt at a conference with regard to this question. Had he been here last night, or had he read the proceedings of last night in the 'Hansard,' he would have seen that there was a direct statement made by three members on this side of the House that there was a conference held in which the question of the division between the two districts was discussed, and during which, according to the statement of the hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Herron), other questions in that connection were discussed ; and that the conference was not continued because it was evident from the results of the meeting that there was no use in continuing it. There was no refusal on the part of members of this side to go on, but there was an absence of willingness on the part of members on the other side of the House when it was desired to go on.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. What is the hon. gentleman referring to ?

Mr. OLIVER. I say there was a meeting held at which the hon. member for Alberta was present and at which I was present. Does he deny it ? Is the hon. gentleman contradicting what I say ?

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I merely wish to say, Mr. Chairman——

Mr. OLIVER. I have the floor. If the hon. gentleman wishes to make a contradiction let him make it, and I will sit down ; but I will not sit down to let him make a speech.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I simply desire to ask a question.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the Minister of the Interior take the ground that when a gentleman rises on the other side of the House and asks leave to ask him a question which has to do with an emphatic statement made by the minister, and which is denied on the other side, that he is going to stand on his rights and not allow it ?

Mr. OLIVER. I mean to say that when I make an emphatic statement, if the hon. gentleman has any denial to make, I will sit down and let him make it.

Mr. INGRAM. My hon. friend (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) asked the hon. gentleman for an explanation.

Mr. OLIVER. I asked him to deny my statement if he could. I stated that there was a meeting at which were present the hon. member for Saskatchewan (Mr. Lamont), the hon. member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) and the hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Herron), at which the question of the division between the two districts was discussed, along with other questions in that connection, as stated by the hon. member for Alberta last night. Now, does he deny that ?

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Does he mean the division between the two provinces ?

Mr. OLIVER. Between the two provinces.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Well, so far as that goes, the minister is correct.

Mr. OLIVER. Thank you. I have only to say that when the hon. leader of the opposition rung the changes on the alleged fact that there was no conference——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I was not referring to a conference about the boundaries between the two provinces, I was talking of a conference respecting the delimitation of the ridings.

Mr. OLIVER. He was denying that there was a conference.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The hon. gentleman surely knew what I was referring to, and what I expressly stated. There was no conference, so far as I am aware, certainly not with myself, respecting the delimitation of the ridings in either of the two provinces. That is what I said.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. gentleman is certainly depending upon his legal ability.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am not, I am depending upon the truth.

Mr. OLIVER. There is a question as to whether there was a conference in regard to the delimitation of the constituencies. We say that there was a conference called for that purpose, and when that conference met, the first duty was necessarily to decide as to the boundaries between the two provinces ; and we found, during the conference, that we could not come to an agreement even on that point, nor on other points that were brought up at the conference.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Was the delimitation of the boundary brought up ?

Mr. OLIVER. I believe it was brought up. The evidence on that point is the statement of my hon. friend from West Assiniboia (Mr. Scott). I did not bring it up. I was not a party to the discussion in regard to it.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Did the hon. gentleman hear it brought up ?

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot say I did, but I do say most emphatically that the conference was held with the view of discussing the delimitation of the constituencies once we had decided upon the delimitation of the boundaries of the province.

Mr. LAKE. I would like to ask the hon. minister whether the gentlemen who were invited to attend the conference were told of that. I certainly was invited to attend but I was not told that.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not know what the hon. member was told ; I only know what I was told.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. When the hon. minister uses the expression 'with the view to' he is rather ambiguous. It may have been 'with the view to' in the minds of hon. gentlemen opposite, but that is of no importance unless they communicated to hon. gentlemen on this side of the House that that was their design.

Mr. OLIVER. The main point is that we, on both sides of the House, did come together amicably in regard to the preliminary feature of this question, and if the discussion was not carried further the fault was not with those of us who believed the conference was for the purpose of securing an amicable delimitation of the boundaries of the constituencies, and who were present on future occasions expecting to meet our friends on the other side, but who, as I said, were not there. I cannot answer for the reason why they were not there, but I say that the insinuation that there was any desire on our part to avoid a conference is not borne out by the facts.

Mr. LALOR. You say you cannot understand why they were not there. Were they invited to be there ? I would like you to answer that.

Mr. OLIVER. I do not know whether they were invited to be there or not ; I know they were not there.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. OLIVER. We did not meet although they certainly had the privilege of being there if they wanted to be.

Mr. LALOR. In what way did the hon. minister give them that privilege ?

Mr. OLIVER. They were invited to the meeting we had and the business of that meeting was not concluded.

Mr. TURRIFF. This meeting was called by Mr. Haultain. I was present at it. The bulk of the discussion was over the boundary line between the two provinces and we could not agree upon that. I remember distinctly that matter of the boundaries of the divisions was discussed, but why it was not continued further or why there were not any further meetings about it I do not know. But, we met there at the call of Mr. Haultain who said that the Prime Minister had asked him to give his views and to give information in reference to the dividing line and also in reference to the number of the constituencies for the two provinces.

Mr. LAKE. Is the hon. gentleman sure it was not as to the number of the constituencies of the two provinces ? I think an hon. gentleman on the other side of the House stated last night that that was the question at issue.

Mr. TURRIFF. No.

Mr. OLIVER. Then, if that is the recollection of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lake) I think we came pretty close to the question of delimiting the boundaries, if there was a question discussed as to the number of constituencies.

Mr. LAKE. I did not say that of my own knowledge ; I merely said that the hon. member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) stated that last night.

Mr. OLIVER. The conference was certainly held for the purpose of discussing this question of the delimitation of the constituencies. The first preliminary which it was necessary to decide was what should be the boundary between the two provinces. The next point was to decide how many constituencies there should be, and certainly the question of the boundary between the provinces was discussed. There is no denial of that. There is no denial that the other question as to the future of the new provinces was discussed, as stated by my hon. friend from Alberta (Mr. Herron) last night. The discussion was not confined to the delimitation of the provinces. As stated by my hon. friend here there was also a question discussed as to the number of the constituencies. In the name of common sense how can we discuss the boundaries of the constituencies until we had decided the boundaries between the provinces and considered how many constituencies there should be ?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. OLIVER. Surely that must be evident. But, the point is that the conference was held for that purpose or else there was no purpose in holding it. If it is decided that there was a conference between the two sides of the House, there was no attempt to sidetrack hon. gentlemen opposite or to shirk giving them any information, but on the contrary every effort was made to have a unanimous presentation of the case to the House, and as far as we are concerned if it was not so put before the House the fault is not ours but the fault is that of hon. gentlemen opposite who did not see fit to take part in the discussion. If that matter is disposed of——

Mr. FOSTER. The matter is not satisfactorily disposed of.

Mr. OLIVER. Not to my hon. friend, certainly.

Mr. FOSTER. I would put it to my hon. friend again so that he will see the difficulty. What was the principle that the right hon. leader of the government said he had in the back of his head ? The idea was that representatives of the two sides of this House would come together. That is the only way in which a conference takes place between the government and opposition.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That is not what I said.

Mr. FOSTER. This was a sort of social meeting.

Mr. OLIVER. Does the hon. gentleman deny that such a meeting took place ?

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.

Mr. OLIVER. What right has he to trespass, anyway ?

Mr. FOSTER. If such a meeting took place it was a social meeting between gentlemen from the Northwest.

Mr. OLIVER. Does he assert that it was a social meeting ?

Mr. FOSTER. I hope it was not a dissocial meeting ? I do not say that there was anything round the table or anything on the board. Or, shall I say that it was an amicable meeting ? In his present temper probably the word 'amicable' grates upon the hon. minister just like drawing the breath of the southern pine across a Northwest blizzard. But an amicable meeting, we will say, took place between gentlemen from the Northwest Territories, a sort of family meeting, to discuss certain things one of which it is well known because it is agreed to by all, was the boundary line between the two provinces. The rest of it is in an interminable and unfathomable haze, denied by hon. gentlemen on this side of the House and haltingly affirmed by hon. gentlemen opposite. But the hon. gentleman has not cleared up the question as a minister and member of the government until he shows that something was done in the only way in which it could be done to bring together representatives of the government and the opposition in a conference in reference to this delimitation of the boundaries. There is no other way. If members from one section of the country meet with members from another section of the country, even though they are of different politics and belong to both sides of the House, that does not make it such a conference as the right hon. Prime Minister had in view. His idea was that the two sides of the House should confer together and that they should agree together as to what should be the basis of delimitation.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No, what I said was that the idea in my mind was that this question and other questions of a similar character should be settled by the gentlemen who represent the Northwest Territories in this House on both sides of the House. Unfortunately this idea did not prevail.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is not what the right hon. gentleman said a little while ago. The right hon. gentleman pointed to what had been done in Great Britain. There was a deadlock, representatives from each side of the House had a conference, and defined the principles, and I certainly gathered most distinctly from the words of my right hon. friend that it was his intention, as far as this Bill was concerned, that the same procedure should be followed.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That was not it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Well, my ears have played me false if that is not what the right hon. gentleman said in the earlier part of his remarks this afternoon. His reference to what took place in Great Britain was entirely irrelevant if he did not mean that, because what has been stated just now has not any relevancy at all to what took place in Great Britain. My right hon. friend, if his statement represents what was in his mind, should certainly have conferred with me or some other member on this side of the House privately and arranged for this interview. We know that no such interview took place, but he excuses himself now by saying that is not what he intended at all. The illustration he drew from British practice was in that case so absolutely irrelevant that I cannot imagine why the right hon. gentleman referred to it.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I never conferred with my hon. friend in regard to having a conference on this question, but I stated that my view was that the division of boundaries might well be settled by members on both sides of politics, and that did not carry.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Would not that involve a communication from the right hon. gentleman to myself?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No; because when it was not adopted I did not go any further.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. What was not adopted?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My suggestion.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. How can I be accused of not adopting something which I never heard.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not accuse my hon. friend.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Then, there was no intention of a conference.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I did not consult my hon. friend with regard to the boundaries; I consulted the members from the Northwest Territories. I asked them to give advice, and I wanted to have their advice as to the number of constituencies and as to the capital and other things which were purely local. My argument in regard to the precedent in England was in answer to the statement of my hon. friend that these matters were always referred to judges in England, whereas in the case mentioned they were referred to special commissioners.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not care whether they were referred to judges or not; that is not the point we are dealing with. The right hon. gentleman in answer to me certainly did say that he regretted that this had not been dealt with by a conference between the two sides of the House.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I have explained over and over again that I regretted, and I regret now, that this matter was not settled by the members from the Northwest Territories who are directly concerned in the matter.

Mr. FOSTER. Did the right hon. gentleman as leader of the government, or did the Minister of the Interior as representing that district, call that conference? Was it the right hon. gentleman or was it the Minister of the Interior who called this conference and authorized it?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. It was not I who called it. I simply understood that it had been done and that nothing effectual could result from it.

Mr. SCOTT. It may not be out of place for me to repeat exactly what I said last evening upon this question. I stated:

I wish to make the statement again that a conference was held several evenings before the 21st of February, several days before these Bills were introduced. The conference was called by Mr. Haultain and to that conference were invited, I understood, all the members of the House of Commons from the Northwest Territories, including the member for Qu'Appelle, all the senators from the Territories, and there were also present at the conference the members then in Ottawa of the Northwest government. I make the statement that Mr. Haultain told that conference that it had been suggested to him by the Prime Minister that he should endeavour to get an agreement from the representatives from the Northwest upon the boundary line between the two provinces, secondly, with regard to the number of local constituencies which should be given to each province, and, thirdly, with regard to the divisions of these local constituencies.

The hon. gentlemen from the Northwest Territories who sit on the opposite side of the House have taken the position that I was making an untrue statement when I stated what I have quoted. It was so interpreted by the reporter of the Ottawa 'Citizen,' which paper this morning had the heading 'Walter Scott's statement in regard to conference flatly contradicted.' Let us begin at the beginning. We had the statement at that conference from Mr. Haultain that he had been asked by the Prime Minister to get an agreement from all the members from the Northwest Territories with regard to these three points. Is there any hon. gentleman opposite who is prepared now to deny that statement? If so let him speak now. I make that statement now in the hearing of the Prime Minister.

Mr. LAKE. So far as I am concerned I was not present and so I am not able to contradict it.

Mr. SCOTT. We have the fact admitted then that the Prime Minister as head of this government did desire, not to perpetrate something in a hole and corner with regard to redistribution and force it upon the country, but that he did desire that the Northwest members, representing both political parties, should arrive at an amicable arrangement with regard to these points. My hon. friends opposite are not so fast in making denials now as they were last evening and the evening before. Let me tell them that when we get out into the Northwest Territories they will have some trouble in denying many of the statements they have made in this House and in certain districts in this country. My hon. friend from Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake) will have some explanations to make when we get out into the Territories on these different matters.

Mr. LAKE. I have neither admitted nor denied the statements made by the hon. member for West Assiniboia. I could not possibly do so because I was not present at the conference and therefore cannot speak from personal knowledge.

Mr. SCOTT. Then we have the fact admitted that the head of the government did ask Mr. Haultain, who is not a member of the Liberal party, to get a conference. After these schedules were brought down we had the Conservative press throughout Canada crying out that an outrage was perpetrated; we have had three days' discussion in this House now, and the cry of outrage has pretty well petered out. Gentlemen opposite are not able to bring any just argument against these schedules; they are not able to get down to figures and make comparisons to show that there is any outrage; they are practically brought down to this contention: that because the government and the members supporting the government are entirely responsible for these plans of redistribution, that therefore an outrage has been perpetrated.

Mr. LANCASTER. Did not some of the newspapers supporting the Liberal party or the so-called Liberal party say so too?

Mr. SCOTT. I understand that one or two Liberal papers in southern Alberta have made such statements, and against these we place the statements made with equal force by Conservative newspapers; the Edmonton 'Journal,' for instance, one of the rankest of the Tory organs in the Territories made a statement to the very opposite effect. We come down to this point now, that our friends opposite are unable to support their contention that an outrage has been perpetrated by any other argument than that members on this side of the House are practically wholly responsible for these plans of distribution. I made the statement that the leader of the government suggested to Mr. Haultain—who is certainly not a Liberal and who is certainly not prejudiced against the gentlemen opposite—I made the statement that Mr. Haultain was asked by the leader of the government to take the responsibility of getting an agreement, and Mr. Haultain called that meeting to get such agreement. My hon. friend from Qu'Appelle says he never heard anything about any suggestion for an agreement with regard to the constituencies. Who is responsible for that? The leader of the government is not responsible; we are not responsible; I fancy that responsibility will have to fall upon his friend Mr. Haultain, who certainly received the suggestion from the leader of the government and called a meeting for that purpose. If my hon. friends from Alberta and Calgary never heard of the suggestion, as I understand they contend, it must be their friend Mr. Haultain who neglected to follow the suggestion that was made him by the leader of the government.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend (Mr. Scott) has a good memory and will he say what questions were brought forward for discussion at what he calls 'that conference?'

Mr. SCOTT. Certainly. I will read a little more from the statement I made here last night, and it deals with that very point :

The matter of the boundary between the two provinces was discussed at great length. The matter of the number of constituencies was also discussed, and the method of division of the constituencies within each province was debated at considerable length.

I do not understand that the conference was of a confidential or private nature, and I may say that Mr. Haultain contended at great length and with some force that the number of constituencies should be thirty. He was unable to carry that point; the majority in the conference were in favour of a lesser number.

Mr. HERRON. Were the number of constituencies settled at that meeting?

Mr. SCOTT. Not absolutely. As a matter of fact we did not arrive at a perfect agreement either with regard to the boundaries or with regard to the number of constituencies. I have already told the House that my choice for a boundary line between the provinces was the present boundary of Alberta. I pressed that strongly. But I stood alone, and so I was driven to agree to the 4th meridian. A very substantial majority of those in the conference favoured the 4th meridian as against the 3rd meridian. My hon. friend the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) reminds me that he favoured the 3rd meridian ; but, the majority was in favour of the 4th, and that was finally adopted by the government. And I say that the number of constituencies was discussed at considerable length. Mr. Haultain contended, and with a good deal of force that the number of constituencies allotted to each province should be thirty, but he was unable to carry a majority of the conference with him. There was a discussion with regard to the method to be followed in the preparation of the schedules, and I repeat, though it has been emphatically denied by some hon. members opposite,—but my own memory with regard to this is supported by the memory of other hon. gentlemen present—that we did discuss the method of meeting Mr. Haultain's suggestion with regard to schedules, and I put forward a motion in favour of a bi-party committee representing each province to arrive at an agreement with regard to schedules. This was not carried. There are hon. gentlemen here who recollect distinctly that I made the motion. My hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) said that the absurdity of what I stated was proved by the fact that the boundary had not then been selected.

Mr. LALOR. Was the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Scott's) motion seconded ?

Mr. SCOTT. Although there were Conservatives there, the motion was not even seconded. They did not seem to regard it as a proper suggestion to be followed.

Mr. SCOTT.

Mr. LAKE. I would like to mention again, as I did yesterday, that Mr. Haultain stated to me yesterday that he was not present when the motion referred to was made—that he heard no formal motion.

Mr. SCOTT. That may be true, and it is undoubtedly true that the hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake) was not present. I could not swear to the personnel of the Conservatives who were there at the moment when I made my motion, but I am perfectly satisfied that all the Conservatives who had been in the conference had not left. At all events, I certainly made the motion.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I have said that I was not there when the motion was made. Perhaps I could jog the hon. gentleman's memory by asking him whether he remembers a telegram from W. R. Abbott, of Maple Creek ?

Mr. SCOTT. The telegram that I handed to my hon. friend (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) ?

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. You gave me a copy.

Mr. SCOTT. That was before the conference opened.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. No, I went down and sent the telegram to Calgary.

Mr. SCOTT. And returned to the room ?

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. No.

Mr. SCOTT. My recollection is that this telegram incident occurred while the members were gathering. I showed the telegram that I received in regard to the boundary line from the secretary of the Maple Creek Board of Trade. But my hon. friend (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) said last night that it would have been absurdity to talk about delimiting the boundaries within the province before the line between the provinces was settled. There was no attempt made at this meeting to settle the delimitation of the boundaries, but we all talked over the question of the method by which Mr. Haltain's suggestion was to be met, of furnishing the government with schedules for both these provinces.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Shall section 12 be adopted ?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Carried.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has forgotten something. Allusion was made by the leader of the opposition to the speech of the hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake) last night in which he took up the proposed province of Saskatchewan and showed that the principle of subdivision laid down by the Prime Minister would work out in the greatest absurdities. When allusion was made to that today, my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) deprecated mixing the provinces together in one discussion. But it was pointed out that the same principle applied to both, and that in case of one it resulted in absurdity. The right hon. gentleman said he would take that up later. Apparently he has forgotten it.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I did not intend to discuss Saskatchewan to-day.

Mr. FOSTER. But it certainly is pertinent to the present question. The right hon. gentleman has stated a basis upon which, as he contends, a fair distribution can be made. That basis, presumably, applies to both provinces ;—certainly a basis of general principle cannot be wrong for Saskatchewan and right for Alberta. But, when the principle is worked out in the case of Saskatchewan, it produces the most enormous disparity, as shown by my hon. friend from Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake). To that hon. gentleman's statements there has been no answer. I think there ought to be an answer.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I do not see that that answer should be given to-day. If there are discrepancies so great as to be absurd, in the case of Saskatchewan, when we come to the case of Saskatchewan, we will discuss them. And, if there are things to be rectified they must be rectified.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But, are we not entitled to know from the right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) why the unit of representation is so greatly departed from ? Whether we deal with the number of votes cast or the number of names on the list there are remarkable discrepancies. For instance, at Rosebud, there are 749 votes cast and 1,189 on the list. At High River, there were 971 votes cast and 1,528 on the list. Why does the right hon. gentleman make some constituencies so much below the unit of population and others so much above it ? We go upon the basis of population. As there are no municipal divisions, you are at liberty to make the ridings approximately the same, one would think. I have not heard or read anything in this debate which would indicate a reason for these disparities.

Mr. TURRIFF. The list of voters does not in every case represent the population now in the district.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Then, it is not a safe guide ?

Mr. TURRIFF. Not absolutely.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Then, is not that a reason to refer the matter to investigation ?

Mr. TURRIFF. This affects the north more than it does the south.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I do not care about north and south.

Mr. TURRIFF. It was pointed out that at Stony Plain there were some 700 on the list, while at High River there were 1,700 That might very easily be and yet there might be no great disparity in population, for the reason that in the northern part of the district a far larger proportion of foreign-born immigration is going in than in the southern portion. In the southern portion of Alberta the population is practically all English speaking, and in the northern portion there are a great many foreign born, who cannot become naturalized until they have been in the country three years. So that there are many districts where there may be thousands of people, who were not there when the census was taken in 1901 and who have not yet the right to vote. So that many districts, which have a small number of votes on the lists, may have a very large population and are entitled to the representation they are getting.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I might say, in answer to my hon. friend, who asked why do you make certain divisions of a lesser population than others. This is altogether dependent upon geographical conditions. It is impossible, in a matter of this kind, to come even within 10 per cent of giving the same number of voters in each riding.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would imagine that the geographical conditions in this province would offer less difficulty than in Ontario or any other of the eastern provinces, as it is nearly all prairie. Let us take the districts where there are no geographical difficulties or will my right hon. friend say that geographical difficulties have prevailed in every case?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I assume that in dealing with the conditions, you deal with them as you did with the provinces in 1903. You think that you have some evidence as to what the population is, although my hon. friend (Mr. Turriff) seems to think that these figures are not a sufficient guide, and in that I agree with him. But assuming, for the purpose of argument, that they are, you must, I suppose adopt a unit of population. When we redistributed for the Dominion we adopted a unit, I think, of about 25,000. When you are fixing the divisions of the province of Alberta, you likewise adopt a unit of population, if you are proceeding on the basis of population, as I understand you are. What is the unit of population which the right hon. gentleman has adopted and why is it you depart so largely from it ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The unit of population we have tried to get from some five or six different sources, but unfortunately we can only get an approximate figure. If we were dealing with any of the eastern provinces, we could take the census of 1901, and no one would seriously object to that. But we know that in the Northwest the conditions are not at all to-day what they were then, and we have had to take recourse to other sources of information, such as the vote recorded, the vote polled, the post offices, the school districts and so on ; and the population on each division must vary between 1,000 and 1,400, so far as I can see. My hon. friend must remember what took place in 1903 regarding the delimitation of Ontario, 25,000 was the unit we adopted, but in some instances the population went beyond 25,000 and in others under that figure.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. But my right hon. friend is putting it as if in that case we said our unit of population shall be from 25,000 to 40,000. We had a unit of 25,000 and came as near to it as possible.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. But you cannot say there is equality of population in one section and another. Here is one section which is less than 1,000 and another which is more than 1,500. When we come to discuss each case separately, we can see whether or not it is possible to make changes. Take the case of Stony Plain as an example. It is at the foot of the Rocky Mountains. The division extends to the west from the summit of the Rockies, the height of land, up to the Saskatchewan river, and it follows the Saskatchewan river. Does my hon. friend say that in order to have a larger body of population in Stony Plain, it would be advisable to cross the Saskatchewan river? Is it not preferable this river should be made the boundary ? It forms a natural boundary, and my hon. friend will agree that it is better, in a large constituency of that kind, to follow the river. We must take every case by itself. Suppose this were referred to a commission of judges, could they have proceeded any differently? They would have to observe the conditions and ascertain the best way to accommodate the population to the natural divisions. Sometimes that is easy because there are no rivers or mountains ; but when we come to section by section and division by division, we can take each by itself and see if it is possible to improve one or the other.

Mr. AMES. I understood the right hon. gentleman to say some time ago that there were no rivers in the province of Alberta sufficiently important to be considered as natural boundaries, and that it was a very simple proposition to take the map and arrange the various constituencies. For the local legislature we find four constituencies : Lacombe, Ponoka, Wetaskiwin and Leduc—which extend completely across from east to west and which take up the territory now occupied by Stony Plain. And if we look at the number of votes cast, we find that all these four constituencies are considerably below the mean average. But if we should add Stony Plain to these four and allow their boundaries to go entirely across, thus absorbing Stony Plain into these four constituencies, we should then have about the average. How is it that although these four constituencies are now perfectly satisfactory it is found necessary to create five and give Stony Plain less than its quota and also reduce the other four below the necessary number?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I think they are still above the necessary number. If my hon. friend will look at the map of the province of Quebec, he will find that there are counties in that province to-day—for instance, the counties of Ottawa, Montcalm, Joliette and Berthier—which extend almost to the North Pole. At one time the county of Ottawa was only one, but we divided it into two. Why ? Because the population extended northward, and at a certain time the county of Ottawa, which extends to-day almost to the limits, the population was sufficient for the purposes, but in 1882 it was divided into two counties—the counties of Wright and Labelle. The time will come when the county of Montcalm will have to be divided and also the county of Berthier, and we shall have another division made north of these counties. You will have the same experience here. There were no people in Stony Plain some years ago but there are now, and they have to be represented and that is the reason why we give them representation.

Mr. AMES. The Prime Minister misunderstands ; we have no intention of depriving any portion of the new province of representation. But we do not wish to see parts over-represented. We do not understand why a man in one section of the country should be considered worth double the voting power of a man in another section, that is all. We have no objection to having every man in the country represented if it is possible to bring him to the poll. As far as the county of Wright is concerned, this county was divided north and south so the distance between the extremities is the same to-day as it formerly was. If the the minister will look at the map he will see that it has been found necessary for some reason to have Red Deer extend from the Rocky Mountains in the west to Medicine Hat on the east, and yet it is a constituency of proper size so far as population is concerned, and the next four districts in order to make room for Stony Plain, have to be bounded by the river so that five constituencies may be formed where there is only population for four.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Take again the county of Ottawa. It matters not whether it was divided north and south or east and west ; it was divided because population had flowed into that county which was not there when the county was organized. That is why in a new country like ours you have to vary the constituencies from time to time, because population comes in and representation must be adjusted accordingly. In the case of Stony Plain if my hon. friend will succeed in persuading the House that it is right that the 3,000 people scattered over that plain should not have representation, well then I am ready to give in to him, but that is not his contention. His proposition is simply to absorb them elsewhere, into the adjacent constituencies. That is not my idea and I do not think it is an idea of fair-play either. I think these people who have populated that vast territory west of the Saskatchewan should have a representative by themselves, and I think when we come to discuss that we will impress the fairness of that even on the hon. gentleman himself.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. How far does the settlement extend west ?

Mr. OLIVER. There are people on the summit of the Pass, on the Rocky Mountains.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. How many are there between the summit and the Saskatchewan River ?

Mr. OLIVER. I tell the hon. member there are white people on the summit, 250 miles west.

Mr. SAM HUGHES. Two families, and the summit is in British Columbia.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Not one side of it.

Mr. AMES. I think the minister will find if he consults the record that almost the entire population of Stony Plain is found within 40 miles of Edmonton.

Mr. OLIVER. That is quite true but it does not account for the balance of the population.

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. BARKER. I understand the First Minister may be here presently, and I will proceed therefore with my remarks, as perhaps some other ministers present may be able to give the explanation I wished to obtain. I have listened with a great deal of attention to the remarks of the various speakers on the opposite side of the House with regard to this distribution of the seats in the proposed province of Alberta, and there is one point about which I have failed to see that any real explanation has been given. The proposed province contained, in last November, and no doubt contains today, and for a few years to come will contain, about 30,000 votes upon the list, in round numbers. There may be a few hundred more or a few hundred less, but about 30,000, according to all statements, is the number of voters upon the list. There are twenty-five seats, which will give an average or unit of about 1,200. Now, I observe that in the distribution the government have arbitrarily, so far as I can see, certainly without any explanation so far being given, allotted two of the twenty-five seats to a portion of the province which contains no more than 500 votes, according to every calculation that one can make from the statements that have been given as to the probable population there. So that in that portion, the most northerly portion of the proposed province, 500 voters get two seats, or 250 to the seat, the average being 1,200. Now, I would like to have some distinct and clear explanation of how that comes about. It cannot have been accidental, there must have been discussions between some of those gentlemen, who are so active in representing the Northwest, and the government. We ought to know who suggested that, and why it was suggested. If you attempt to make such a distribution on the ground of an early increase of population, I would point out that it would be necessary, within the next two, or three, or four years, for the northerly portion, that portion which is in Athabaska, to increase 500 per cent to get up to the present position of the remainder of the province ; it would have to increase 500 per cent while the remainder of the province was stationary. I think we ought to have some explanation of that anomaly. If, on the other hand, we ask, assuming it to be reasonable that 500 voters have two representatives in Athabaska, what should be the total number of seats for the province, the result would be that you would have to have 120 members in that province instead of 25. It is impossible that such a thing could have been proposed as appears upon this schedule without some discussion, and without some particular object of a selfish nature being at the bottom of it, and I say deliberately that there must have been a motive, an intention to accomplish some purpose.

I think that is a matter that deserves very serious consideration, and it is incumbent upon the government to explain that circumstance most fully. We have not heard any satisfactory explanation from the present Minister of the Interior. We all know the section he represents, and his personal interest—his political interest, rather —in creating such an anomaly, because it throws the balance of power of the whole province into the end of the province he represents. I think, therefore, for the very reason that this hon. gentleman has so recently been taken into the government, we should have a very explicit explanation upon that point. I did understand the hon. the Minister of the Interior to say : Oh, there is such an immense territory up there, and that territory requires representation apart from the very few people there. Well, it strikes me that is a very odd way of putting it. I could understand it if there were fractions to be provided for, if you were going to create one and a-half into two, or two and a-quarter into three, or something of that kind. But to go so far as to say that 250 people shall be entitled to a seat when every other part of the province, on an average, must have 1,200—it seems to me an outrage, unless the hon. gentleman can give some explanation which we have not hitherto heard.

But, let us see what there is in his statement of the area to be represented. Do individuals own this area? The 250 people who are to be represented in this area will have their own land. They do not own this immense area but who does own it? The Dominion of Canada. The government of this Dominion are deliberately retaining under their ownership the whole of this immense territory and saying, that the fact that the territory is unoccupied is a reason for having additional representatives for that part. Surely the people who have built up the lower portions of the province, built up towns of 10,000, created manufactories and developed ranching and industries and all that sort of thing are more entitled to representation than the government of Canada who own wild lands up there and hold them for settlement. I defy the hon. Minister of the Interior to show that there are on the voters' list at the present time more than 500, yet, without the slighest excuse that anybody has suggested, he is giving these 500 voters two seats, I ask an explanation and I think I am entitled to it. That is one point that I thought the right hon. Prime Minister would have been able to explain, but in his absence I do not know whether the hon. Minister of Justice will do it; if not we must accept an explanation from the recently appointed Minister of the Interior.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I very much regret the Prime Minister is not in his place to answer my hon. friend (Mr. Barker). I am sure he would give him his best attention and if I might make a suggestion it seems to me that this question has been answered by the Prime Minister as well as by other members who have spoken on this side of the House. The question that the hon. gentleman asks is: Why should a small population living in a large territory be given the same representation as a larger population living in a smaller territory. I think that is his question.

Mr. BARKER. I asked an answer to the specific case I put. There is an immense territory undeveloped remaining the property of the Dominion and occupied by a few people who represent 500 votes. I ask why the people occupying a small portion of that large territory and having only 500 votes should get two seats when it will require five times that many to get one elsewhere.

Mr. OLIVER. In regard to the specific case it has already been stated and stated again and restated that a small population is occupying a very large territory.

Mr. BARKER. It is not.

Mr. OLIVER. Of course, that is the misfortune of this discussion. We are not able to come to the same conclusion. The hon. member says that a small population is occupying a small part of a large territory.

Mr. BARKER. Yes. that is it because the government own the big territory.

Mr. OLIVER. We say that a small population is occupying a large part of a large territory and the circumstances being as they are, if this territory is to be adequately represented it must have two members. The conditions of travel, the situation of the people, the divergence of interests in different parts of this great territory are such that if it is to be represented adequately and intelligently, or in other words if it is to be represented at all in the legislature of that new province, it must be represented by two members and therefore it should be divided into two constituencies. We do not expect our hon. friends to see the matter as we see it. We have had the experience of the last three days of discussion to inform us on that point. We can only state and restate the position we have taken and hope that it will commend itself to the majority of the House. Though perhaps we are not able to bring our friends to view this matter as we view it from our statement of the case, perhaps we can induce them to view it in something the same light by comparison with other instances as for instance when the Redistribution Bill relating to the seats of this parliament was passed in 1903. In the Northwest Territories at that time, according to the census there was a matter of a little over 150,000 people, and according to the unit of population these 150,000 people were entitled to six members, but this House saw fit in its wisdom—I think properly taking into consideration all the different interests to be represented and the probable increase in population—to grant ten members to the Northwest Territories instead of only six which they would have been entitled to on the unit of population. The principle is exactly the same in regard to the district of Athabaska. The hon. member may suggest that the conditions are more strained in regard to the district of Athabaska, but on that point he has not any better information than we have, and our information is that the conditions are not strained in the district of Athabaska. We regret very much that we have not later census information than is available, but we have other information in regard to the increase of population, in regard to the increase of trade and in regard to development generally which leads us to believe that there is a comparatively large population in the western part of Athabaska to-day. The fact that the Hudson Bay Company has built a steam mill in one part, that other people have built other steam mills in other parts, that the Hudson Bay Company and other companies have built and equipped and are running on these waters five steamers since the census was taken, that saw mills and other industrial establishments mentioned by my hon. friend from Strathcona (Mr. Talbot) are in operation in that country and that schools are unquestionably in operation lead us to believe that the census of 1901 in regard to the district of Athabaska is no more correct as representing the population of to-day than it is in regard to the district of Rosebud, which, according to the census, has a population of only a very few over 1,000 people in 1901, but which, in the election of 1904, cast very nearly 1,000 votes. I think it is very unfair that our hon. friends should absolutely ignore the census as being unreliable throughout the southern part of the district of Alberta and as soon as we touch the district of Athabaska rest their case absolutely on the census. If we are to have the census for one part let us have it all over, and if we are to drop the census and take the best estimate we can of present population let us take that estimate all through.

Mr. BARKER. What estimate did the minister give the other day of the present probable population in Athabaska ?

Mr. OLIVER. My information is that there are at present about 5,000 people in the western part of the district of Athabaska exclusive of Indians. It is the best information I can get from men who are acquainted with that country, whose homes are there and in whose word I have confidence, but of course I do not say it is as reliable as the census report. However, when these gentlemen opposite ask us to accept estimates of the increase of population in certain parts of the country, they have as good a right to accept our estimates as to another part. If they come down to actual figures and take the census over all the whole province of Alberta, then they have no cause for complaint in regard to the district of Athabaska or any other district.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. How much of the population given in the census of 1901 for Athabaska, is in the portion proposed to be taken into Alberta ?

Mr. OLIVER. At the suggestion of the hon. gentleman from Toronto (Mr. Foster) I laid on the table of the House to-day the definite figures signed by the census commissioner with regard to localities and distribution of people. It may not be correct but it is authoritative. If the sole question with my hon. friends opposite is as between what lies north of township 38 and what lies south of that township, and there is no question as to the delimitation of the boundaries between the constituencies, then it is only a question as to whether there are as many people north of township 38 as there are south of township 38. We are all agreed that the dividing line should be township 38, we do not want a commission of judges to decide that, and if we take the census we find there are more people north of 38 than there are south ; we find there are enough people to entitle the district north of 38 to 13 members and the district south of 38 to 12 members. If hon. gentlemen opposite will not accept the census as the basis throughout the entire district of Alberta, they have no title to stand here hour after hour ringing the changes and asking questions based upon the census figures for the district of Athabaska. If they want us to take an estimate in one part of the country let there be an estimate all over, and if it is to be the census in one part let it be the census all through. As to the horror that has been expressed by gentlemen opposite about the disparity of population in the different constituencies of Alberta, I might point out that my hon. friend from Argenteuil (Mr. Perley) and my hon. friend from St. Antoine (Mr. Ames) rang the changes on this question. Did these gentlemen ever hear before of a disparity between the number of votes in one constituency as compared with another ? They wanted to know why it took two men in Calgary to be equal in value to one man in Stony Plain, and they seemed to think that was a poser. Well my friend from Argenteuil represents a constituency with a census population of 16,497 and my friend from St. Antoine represents a constituency with a census population of 47,650. It would appear that it takes three men in St. Antoine to equal one man in Argenteuil. In the county of Huntingdon represented by a Conservative in this House there is a census population of 13,979, and in the almost adjoining district of Maisonneuve represented by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, there is a population of 65,158, so that it takes five men in the constituency of Maisonneuve to equal one man in the constituency of Huntingdon. And yet these gentlemen opposite are amazed that there is a discrepancy between the constituencies in the district of Alberta. The constituencies of St. Antoine and Argenteuil and Huntingdon and Maisonneuve are, so to speak, within a stone throw of Ottawa ; they are old constituencies, constituencies in which the conditions have been understood from generation to generation ; the redistribution of these constituencies has been under the control of the Conservative party for years and years, and yet they never thought of regulating these discrepancies although when the constituencies in Alberta come up for consideration they are overwhelmed with amazement that there should be a discrepancy at all. Parliament after parliament, redistribution after redistribution, census after census, these discrepancies in old constituencies have been tolerated by Conservatives, but now they threaten that they will keep the House in session until the snow flies before they will submit to a discrepancy in the far off province of Alberta. They will go through these constituencies with a jack plane and a plumb line and a square and a level, and they will see that they are pared right down to a hairs' breadth of equality, or they will keep this House in session until next Christmas. Well, if these gentlemen want any credit for a sense of justice they have a noble work to do right at their doors in regard to matters they are better acquainted with than they are with those of far off Alberta. My hon. friend from Argenteuil (Mr. Perley) might show a sense of justice by resigning his seat and bunching his constituency up with one of the other small constituencies so as to remove the injustice done to his friend from St. Antoine (Mr. Ames). This would be a practical display of his sense of justice, but I have heard no mention that he has any intention of sacrificing himself on that altar.

But he is prepared to sacrifice the well-being of this country, of this very district of Alberta which he purports to protect; to sacrifice the time and energy of members of this House; but he will not sacrifice his own seat to his sense of justice. This condition which I have referred to is not confined to the province of Quebec; it prevails in Ontario as well. I see my hon. friend from Peel (Mr. Blain) sitting right alongside the hon. member for St. Antoine (Mr. Ames). My hon. friend from Peel has been a member of this House for two parliaments. He sat in the previous parliament for a constituency which according to the census, had a population of 13,687, as against 47,000 in the constituency of the hon. member for St. Antoine. But we do not need to go to the province of Quebec to show a discrepancy. While the hon. member for Peel sat here with 13,687 people at his back the hon. gentleman (Mr. W. F. Maclean) who then represented East York sat here as the representative of 40,405 people. Three of the people represented by the then member for East York had just as much right in this parliament as one of those represented by the hon. member for Peel. But my hon. friend from Peel did not offer objection to that condition of affiairs. I know that the wrong has been, to some extent, righted since that time; but I have not heard that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) manifested any great enthusiasm in supporting that change. Let me instance the province of Nova Scotia, from which the hon. leader of the oppopsition comes (Mr. R. L. Borden) and which he represented in the last parliament. Of course, the discrepancies are not quite so marked in that province as in some others, for reasons which are apparent. The county of Richmond, Nova Scotia, was represented in the last parliament, as it is in this parliament, by one member. According to the last census, its population was 13,515. The county of Cumberland, also represented by one member, had a population at the time of the last census of 36,168. This cannot be justified on the ground of difference between rural and urban constituencies, for both of these are rural constituencies. Both these cases were known about when the Redistribution Bill was going through this House in 1903, but I did not hear the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) make the walls of this chamber ring with denunciations of that condition. If he believes in the principle of equality in representation, that would have been a good time for him to assert his love of fair-play. But he was not heard on that occasion, as I understand. He waits until the case of the province of Alberta comes up for discussion and then he joins in the denunciations of unfair treatment on the ground that there is a difference, according to the calculations of his own supporters, of 10 per cent between north and south. And, according to their own statement, the fairest proposition for redistribution within their knowledge was that of the Transvaal, and in that case the very law itself allows a difference of 10 per cent.

Mr. AMES. But it does not say that all constituencies in one part shall be over 10 per cent and all the constituencies in another part shall be under 10 per cent.

Mr. OLIVER. I presume that my hon. friend (Mr. Ames) can point out the clause in the law of the Transvaal which says that the constituencies in our district shall not——

Mr. AMES. No, but the spirit of British fair-play, which is likely to prevail where that distribution is to be made, would be a sufficient guarantee against that.

Mr. OLIVER. I think the district of Alberta and this House of Commons are quite as British as is the Transvaal. When the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ames) goes to the Transvaal for his example of British fair-play he is travelling a little off the line, especially is he unfortunate in bringing in that comparison in the Canadian House of Commons. If the Transvaal is British today, the answer to the question why it is British came in considerable degree from this Dominion of Canada.

Mr. ALCORN. With the hon. minister's (Mr. Oliver's) permission, I would like to ask him a question. Are we to understand that he is arguing for inequality of representation?

Mr. OLIVER. No.

Mr. ALCORN. Then, why did he not say that these discrepancies were wrong in 1903?

Mr. OLIVER. Because I take it for granted that they are not improper discrepancies. I assume that had they been improper or unreasonable, the leader of the opposition (Mr. R. L. Borden) and hon. gentlemen behind him would have tried to do away with them. But, as these hon. gentlemen and all of us know, there are circumstances and conditions which govern in the distribution of seats besides the mere consideration of population. It is necessary that the people with common interests shall be grouped together. And this principle which prevented the absolute recognition of the equality of representation prevails in the province of Alberta as it does elsewhere. And why should it not? And, if in all other parts of the Dominion, we regard local conditions and circumstances and do not regard only the equality of population, why should we not do the same for Alberta? Although these schedules and maps have been before the people of Alberta for a month or more there has not been a complaint from any section against this distribution on the ground that one constituency was larger than another. The only complaint that has been voiced in this House or anywhere else is the complaint as between the south and the north, and not as between constituency and constituency. And when these hon. gentlemen presume to argue that injustice is proved because one constituency has 600 votes and the other has 1,000 votes they know they are not dealing fairly by the House and the country. The evidence is in the census; the evidence is within the knowledge of every man of them.

With regard to the fairness of treatment accorded members of the opposition in this matter, may I be allowed to show where the suggestion of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition and his colleague from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) leads them. Their suggestion gives ample proof of the purpose and reason which is the foundation of all their complaints. Their first charge was that there was no attempt to have a conference; and when that had to go by the board, then they say: Oh, we do not mean that kind of a conference. My hon. friend the leader of the opposition complained because the leader of the government had not approached him with a definite proposal for a discussion by a joint committee from both sides of the House—in regard to what? The distribution of constituencies for this House? No; the distribution of constituencies in a province about to be created. It seems to me that that is a question of a territorial or provincial nature rather than of a Dominion nature, and that while, in the nature of things, this parliament has to give its final decision in that matter, it was a subject chiefly for consideration with the present existing government of the Territories, with whom this government was carrying on its negotiations. And in pursuance of that idea and of the suggestion of the premier of the Dominion to the premier of the Territories, a conference was proposed to be held between the government of the Territories, as it was represented here in Ottawa at that time, and the members of this parliament representing the Territories. Such a conference would be in the nature of dealing with a provincial or local question, which was not a question of party politics or should not have been. And when my hon. friend the leader of the opposition and his colleague from North Toronto (Mr. Foster) complain that the First Minister did not approach them with a request for a joint committee between the two political parties in this House, they thereby demand that this question of the distribution of seats in the new province of Alberta shall be dealt with as a question of party politics and not of provincial interests.

Mr. AMES. If this be purely a local question, I understand that there are fifteen representatives in the local House who come from the present province of Alberta.

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. AMES. Have they been consulted in any way in this connection?

Mr. OLIVER. I regret to say they have not.

Mr. AMES. Then it is a purely local question in which the fifteen representatives who will have—probably the most of them—to come up for re-election, should have been consulted.

Mr. OLIVER. I did not say it was purely a local question. I said it was chiefly a local question. It is not purely a local question, because this House has to give a final word with regard to it. But it is purely a local question to that extent, and on that point the hon. member and myself differ. But when he says that the members of the Territorial legislature might very well have been asked, in their official capacity, regarding this redistribution, I quite agree with him. But it was not for the First Minister of the Dominion to call together the Territorial legislature for the purpose of discussion. That was the duty of the premier of the Territories. He did not choose to do it, and therefore he must be held responsible if the people of the Territories have not been consulted in the matter.

Mr. AMES. Would the hon. minister tell us what encouragement the premier of the Territories had to make any overtures of this character?

Mr. OLIVER. The premier of the Territories was not required to make overtures. It was not in the nature of an overture, but a matter of duty on his part. If he thought an injustice was being done, if he thought inequality was being meted out to the different parts of the country under his control, it was his duty as premier to have the opinion of the Territories heard in that matter. And when he did not take that stand, when he did not take that plain course which it was his duty to do, I say that, so far as he is concerned, the case is against the contention of my hon. friend that any injustice has been done. Hon. gentlemen opposite can take either horn of the dilemma they please. Either Mr. Haultain did not do his duty, or there has been a fair division. They must accept either one position or the other. There is a responsibility in this matter outside of this House. We admit our share of that responsibility, but we do not admit a responsibility which properly rests upon the shoulders of the premier of the Territories. And it is not the privilege of hon. members to cry out injustice, to claim to be fighting the battle of the people of the Territories, when they are simply agitating in the interests of their own political party, as is evidenced by the demands of the leader of the opposition and his lieutenant to-day—until they clear themselves and their party from the imputation of their having been guilty of dereliction of duty as regards the action of the Territorial legislature.

Mr. AMES. Do I understand the hon. gentleman's argument to be this, that in case there is guilt on the part of the government in bringing in an unfair schedule, that guilt does not rest upon their shoulders, but upon the shoulders of Mr. Haultain, because he did not insist upon the schedule being different ?

Mr. OLIVER. I do not know whether my hon. friend is a member of the legal profession or not. I am not ; but I think I have some little knowledge of the rules of law ; and I think my hon. friend will admit that, under the existing circumstances, if a crime has been committed, our mutual friend, the premier of the Territories, has been certainly an accessory after the fact, if not before.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. OLIVER. He had it in his power to bring into this discussion the very people of the Territories, the very constituencies affected. He has not seen fit to do so ; and I submit that if he has not done so, it is not because he had no desire to embarrass this government, it is not because he would not go out of his way to embarrass it, if he thought he had a case. We have had ample evidence of that this last few weeks. And so my hon. friends, when they assume to create a grievance amongst the people of the district of Alberta, would do well to find the ground on which they are standing before they depend upon it too much. They have insinuated and suggested that this distribution is for the purpose of giving a preponderance of representation to that end of the province which is more in accord with the Liberal party than with them. They probably do not know that in the southern end of the province there is a fair proportion of local constituencies represented by Liberals and that as far as that part of it is concerned, a Liberal vote in the south end is as good as one in the north end, and when they argue that we are trying to take votes from the south because they are Conservative votes and give them to the north because they are Liberal votes they simply are arguing against what is the plain fact.

Mr. BARKER. You are the only one who has argued on that.

Mr. OLIVER. Then if the hon. members are not arguing on that point in the name of common sense, what have they kept us here the last three days for ? There is no ground of complaint as between constituency and constituency, the only complaint that has ever been suggested is as between north and south on the part of the south as against the north as these gentlemen are championing it. If they have any reason for the championship which they have been putting forward I should say it is up to them to give their consent to a proposal which after three days discussion, they have failed to show in any particular is unfair and permit the business of the House and country to proceed.

Mr. AMES. With reference to the premier of the Northwest Territories, does the minister intimate that if the premier had protested against this schedule or should now protest against it, or should go on record in any way as considering this schedule unfair, the government would take that into consideration and would change the schedule in any way?

Mr. OLIVER. I should say certainly not.

Mr. AMES. Then how could he be particeps criminis.

Mr. OLIVER. My hon. friend seeks to get away from the point. It is not a question of the premier of the Territories but of the legislature of the Territories. We are not questioning the action or the proposed action of the hon. the premier ; we have had evidence within the past two or three weeks of his partisanship, of his readiness to prostitute his premiership to the interests of hon. gentlemen on the other side. We do not suggest that his personal view is any better than that of any other individual in the Northwest Territories, but we do suggest that as premier of the Territories it is his right, it is within his power, it is his bounden duty, if an injustice is being done to the people of those Territories by this Bill, to call the legislature and let the voice of the legislature be heard. Talk from the premier of the Territories is of no account; it is votes that count in the Territories, as it is votes that count here. Let him speak through his legislature and I will guarantee he will be heard and the voice of the legislature will be heard as well, but so far our friend the premier of the Northwest Territories has been content to be one of the party heelers of our friends on the other side, in the by-elections which did not concern him or the Territories and therefore we take the liberty of suggesting that his word in this matter is not to be considered as that of the premier of the Territories but as that of a partisan of our friends on the other side.

Mr. AMES. Let us understand this clearly. The legislature are not to blame because Mr. Haultain did not call them together. Premier Haultain is particeps criminis in this because he did not protest. The Minister of the Interior announces that if he had protested it would have made no difference. It seems to me that this is very hard on Premier Haultain, to hold him criminally responsible for something he could not possibly help. Would the minister explain how that can be?

Mr. OLIVER. It takes five of the hon. member's constituents to equal one of the members for Argenteuil; he is excused. The premier of the Territories is responsible to the people of the Territories, to the legislature of the Territories as premier. He acts by and through and with his legislature and until he does call his legislature together and give that legislature an opportunity to voice its opinions on that question he is speaking as an individual and not as premier. Does my hon. friend understand that?

Mr. AMES. I understand what you mean, yes.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. The somewhat remarkable speech to which we have just listened, from the Minister of the Interior, has concluded with a rather undignified attack on a gentleman who is not here to protect himself. That is quite in keeping with some of the characteristics of the hon. Minister of the Interior. As far as Mr. Haultain is concerned, he deserves no such language as has been applied to him by the Minister of the Interior. He was summoned here as Prime Minister of the Territories without any special session of the legislature being held, and as Prime Minister of the Territories he placed himself, as far as I know, at the service of this government and gave them every possible assistance by the furnishing of information for the purpose of preparing this Bill. He did that in good faith and I know that, so far as I am concerned, I never had any conversation with him while the proceedings were going on; he regarded them as absolutely confidential and placed himself absolutely at the disposal of this government. Further than that he brought the best man he could from the Territories, a gentleman who has been at the service of this government during the last four or five months, and in every possible way he has done what he could to facilitate the enactment of this Bill along what he regarded as right and proper lines; and because forsooth he finds himself at liberty to address two or three audiences of his fellow countrymen—and I suppose he has as good a right to be heard in those elections as the minister himself—he is to be characterized by this gentlemanly Minister of the Interior as a party heeler. Well, I do not know that the language is worth noticing, but I venture to think that the Minister of the Interior does not add anything to the respect in which he is held by this House to or the dignity of the administration when he indulges in such a tirade.

If his information as to the northern portions of the province of Alberta is not more accurate than his knowledge of the Redistribution Bill of 1903, we had better hand this Bill at once to a commission of judges and get some information that is really of value. He told us about the county of Argenteuil and the constituency of Maisonneuve. Does he not know the two principles that were laid down by his leader when he introduced that Bill into this House? One was that municipal and country boundaries must be observed; and does he not know that on account of that principle, imposed upon the committee of which I was a member, these very discrepancies to which he has referred are entirely due except so far as they are due to another principle enunciated by his leader and mentioned again to-day, namely, that rural constituencies should receive a larger voting power to the elector than city constituencies. These two principles stated by his leader on the floor of this House many times during the debate of 1903, acquiesced in by his own vote, are responsible for these very differences to which he has called attention. Now he knows well enough that no such principles apply to the province of Alberta, because there are no municipal and county boundaries there, so far as I am aware. He says that the leader of the opposition, when the county of Richmond was in question in 1903, did not raise his voice. Is he quite sure of that? Is he stating that as a fact? Does he persevere in that statement?

Mr. OLIVER. I would say that the leader of the opposition did not raise his voice loud enough for me to hear it.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That is probable, because the hon. gentleman was not in attendance in the House; in accordance with his usual practice he was probably waiting outside for the bell to ring before he came in to vote on something of which he knew nothing. I tell the hon. gentleman that I did make a motion before the committee, and referred to it again in the House and pressed it upon the attention of the House, with regard to the county of Richmond, the only instance to which he has called attention. I merely point that out to show how extremely inaccurate the hon. gentleman is in regard to all these matters. There was no principle acted upon in 1903 which affects the distribution of the ridings of this province, as the hon. gentleman claims. How does the principle of municipal and county boundaries apply? Does the hon. gentleman claim that it applies at all? I always understood there were no municipal and county boundaries in the province of Alberta, yet that is the grand principle upon which the Prime Minister and his colleagues and the hon. gentleman himself upheld the discrepancies to which he has called attention.

Now, so far as the whole question is concerned, the hon. gentleman tells us that he is acting upon an estimate of the population of the northern portion of the proposed province of Alberta. The hon. gentleman in making that statement, on the hearsay evidence of some person whom we have not before us, whom we have no chance of interrogating, a mere casual statement, I suppose, made in conversation, puts it forward as a reason for giving two members in the legislative assembly to that portion of territory which, according to the census of 1901, is entitled to about half a representative, and which does not certainly include more than three or four, or at the outside, 500 voters; in making that statement and bringing it forward as a reason, he is giving the best argument in the world for a reference of the question to some tribunal. Nothing could be more cogent.

When we ask him how it is that he gives to this part of the province two representatives, having regard to the census of 1901, having regard to the fact that we have no evidence as to what the increase of population is, how are we met by the hon. gentleman? Met by the statement that some person, on some unknown occasion, told him that he believed there are 5,000 people in there over and above Indians. And that is the way in which we are to proceed and make a division of the new province of Alberta. Let us look at the report of the census commissioner with regard to districts 24 and 25, the document to which the hon. gentleman has already called attention. 'Population of the Peace River district, No. 24.' I need not read the whole of it, but the totals are: Whites and half-breeds, 769; Indians, 955; total population, 1,724. Well, if you apply to that the proportion of electors which we obtained from the other portions of the province, we would have about 150, or at most 160 electors in the proposed district, 24, according to the census of 1901, while the unit of population entitling it to a member is at least 1,200. The hon. gentleman, upon some such hearsay, casual information as that, asks us to believe that 150 electors in 1901 have increased to 1,000 or 1,200 in 1905. Let us take the other district, No. 25. According to the same report made by the census commissioner, the total number of whites and half-breeds was 941; total number of Indians, 735; total population, 1,676. If you apply to this also the proportion of electors which we reach by referring to other portions of the province, we would have the number of electors in 1901 at 180 or 185. Now, Sir the position seems very plain. Let us look at the first seven constituencies as proposed by the government, and we will take their own figures in this regard. The constituencies numbered 1 to 7 of the Bill have, according to the statement of the government, a voting population of 10,784, or an average of 1,540. The 11 constituencies numbered from 8 to 18 have a voting population of 13,264, or an average to each constituency of 1,206 electors; and the 7 constituencies 19 to 25 inclusive have a voting population of 5,902, giving an average to each of 843. If you group the whole 25 you have an average of about 1,200. Now let us look for a moment at a comparison of the constituencies 1 to 7, having a voting population of 10,784, and constituencies 19 to 25. If you add 400 for the electors in Athabaska, you have 6,302, representing a difference in the voting population between the first 7 constituencies in the south and the 7 northern constituencies, of no less than 4,482, or equal to a population entitled to 4 members. Well, there may be some justification for that, but for my part, notwithstanding the declamation of the Minister of the Interior, I fail to find any justification for it in anything that has been said by him or by the right hon. gentleman. That is the position as outlined by the government here to-day. The Minister of the Interior himself admits, in effect, that there is nothing beyond these vague statements to which he has called attention to lead us to believe that the population in the north is as great as he claims it to be. That, I repeat once more, is the best possible argument in favour of the motion of my hon. friend from Calgary, that the government should act upon that principle which they laid down in 1899, and should leave the delimitation of these divisions to a tribunal which will have an opportunity and means of making the necessary investigation, in order that justice may be done to all parties in that province.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We stated upon introducing this Bill, and we have repeated it over and over again, that we have endeavoured to obtain some idea of what the population is at the present time in the Northwest Territories for the purposes of this distribution. We have stated that we have taken several sources of information, the vote registered, the vote polled, the census, the post offices, the school districts and the local improvement districts. My hon. friend (Mr. R. L. Borden) bases the whole of his argument upon two of these sources of information, upon the vote recorded and the vote registered. But, there is another side to that. He takes the first 11 constituencies——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. Seven.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will take 11 because that figure is according to my statement.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I am merely referring to what I said.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Exactly. In so far as the comparison goes he compared 7 with 7, but I will compare 11 with 11. The first 11 constituencies south of Red Deer recorded a vote in the last election, according to my figures which have not been controverted, of 10,566. I think the figures quoted by my hon. friend from Argenteuil (Mr. Perley) are a little different, but the difference is so minute as not to count. On the other hand, the 11 constituencies north of Red Deer only cast 9,555 votes. That is one source of information, and if we were to be guided alone by that the argument of my hon. friend would be unanswerable, he would have the best of it, and we would have to bow. But, as another source of information we take the census. The 11 constituencies to the south which recorded a larger vote than the north in the last election have a population of 31,000, whereas the 11 constituencies in the north have a population of 36,000. Therefore, if there is on one side a preponderance in favour of the south in the vote recorded, there is a preponderance in favour of the north in the number of the population in 1901.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. Yesterday I asked the right hon. gentleman if he knew the number of Indians north and south.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I answered that yesterday. I take the census population. I cannot say if it includes Indians or not. Suppose it does include Indians there will be Indians north and south. Suppose it does not include Indians then my hon. friend is answered.

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. There are a great many more north than south.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Are there 5,000 more?

Mr. M. S. McCARTHY. I would not care to say because I am not sure.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. No. These figures show that after all the difference is not very great, and as far as that goes I do not think there is much of an argument to be based upon it. Let me say to my hon. friend again that in my estimation it is absolutely impossible to do anything with these constituencies in regard to proportion of numbers. I do not think it is possible to apply the principle which it is sought to apply in the Transvaal of having the same number in every constituency, allowing a margin of only ten per cent. In order to bring about that result you will have to cut up the territory like a checker board, irrespective of villages, population, groups and all those things which we have to respect. One of the instructions, if I remember aright, which I quoted to the committee this afternoon, was that the commissioners were to group the population in reference to its character if possible. Let me call the attention of my hon. friends opposite to conditions which have existed at all times in this country. I have here the Parliamentary Companion for 1874 containing a record of the first parliament elected after British Columbia came into the confederation. There were five or six members representing four or five constituencies. The record shows a great variety of conditions prevailing in British Columbia at that time. For instance, the city of Victoria, with a population of 4,540 and 2,925 voters, was given two members. There was the constituency of Yale with a population of 1,316 and 148 votes. That is all it had. The constituency of Cariboo had a population of 1,955 and 359 voters. New Westminster had a population of 1,356 and it had 460 voters. Well, some one may tell me that Yale which had only 148 voters should have been united with some other constituency, just as it is suggested that Athabaska and Peace River should have been united with some other constituencies. But, it would not have been fair to have united it to another constituency and we say that you must give representation to these constituencies in the north and that the only way you can do it is in the way we have suggested.

Mr. PERLEY. I would like to call the right hon. gentleman's attention to the fact that in discussing the 11 constituencies above Red Deer, I do not think he is taking a fair view of the case. There are 13 constituencies above Red Deer and the 13 constituencies ought to be taken and not the 11 which are above Red Deer. To my mind the whole crux of this matter is these two constituencies of Peace River and Athabaska. The right hon. gentleman compares the north 11 with the south 11 and absolutely ignores these two sections which have so few voters. He has left out Nos. 24 and 25 which really make 13 constituencies above Red Deer with practically no more voters, or only 300 more, than there are, from his statement, in the 11 constituencies.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Yes, but the two constituencies of Athabaska and Peace River have never been organized and they have to be left out of the comparison because there never has been an election there. We have been anxious to take everything we could get in order to come to a conclusion. For these 11 constituencies north and south of Red Deer we had recourse to the recorded votes, the registered votes and the population. In Athabaska and Peace River we could not have the recorded votes or the registered votes because there were none. It is impossible to treat Athabaska and Peace River on the same basis as the other constituencies. The population is not there.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Hear, hear.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. There is only a small amount of population and because there is a small amount of population shall it go unrepresented? I do not think it is fair at all, any more than it would have been fair to have left the people of Yale in British Columbia unrepresented although they had only 148 voters and less than 1,000 of a population. That is the reason why, if you are going to give representation to these people, there can be no fault found with what we have done. Moreover, may I be permitted to say that if it were not for the fact of this imaginary division which has been introduced in this discussion there would not have been a single man on one side or the other of the House who would have begrudged giving these people representation.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. As far as I am personally concerned I am very much in favour of Edmonton being the capital of the province, and I have no hesitation in telling the right hon. gentleman that the House and the country will view it as an outrage to give Peace River and Athabaska this representation. Why is he giving representation to Stony Plain with a little bit of a village a few miles out west and an area that will never be settled within the life of any member of this House? We are not giving representation to swamps and plains and mountains; we are giving representation to men. Take Sturgeon, Stony Plain, St. Albert, Peace River and Athabaska and the five of them together have a less population than High River in the south.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Which five do you say ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Stony Plain immediately west of Edmonton ; St. Albert immediately northwest ; Sturgeon immediately northeast; Peace River and Athabaska; the five of them together have less population than has High River, or about the same population as Lethbridge, Rosebud and Calgary. I tell the First Minister that in these two northern ridings, the population such as it is is almost entirely nomadic. The right hon. gentleman may shake his head but that statement is true. More than half these people put down as residents in that country travel up there for trading purposes, but they are registered in Edmonton and vicinity and have their families there, as the Minister of the Interior knows. Many as the outrages are that are perpetrated in this Bill, I am satisfied the people of Canada will consider this one of the blackest of the lot. Take Stony Plain where there is a little settlement, very nice people no doubt, but it is a strange coincidence that the people in High River, Calgary, Lethbridge and Rosebud, who have been brought up under British institutions, with the English constitution drilled into them, the English language their language ; should be hived together and that ridings should be cut and carved up to give over representation to these northern districts where a word of English is scarcely spoken, where men cannot spell the word constitution or understand what it means, and where many of them never knew what a vote was till they came here a couple of years ago. I ask the Prime Minister to look into it and if he has that spirit of fair-play he professes to, he will make a change. I would not object to three of them having representatives, and if one extra member were given to Calgary and one to High River, making three ridings out of the five, there would not be much fault to find, although I am satisfied that if the five were made into two ridings there would be more fair-play in it. So far as there being an imaginary line north and south from Red Deer I care nothing about that. What have we to do with where the capital should be, let them fix that as they like. So far as I am personally concerned I think Edmonton is central and is the proper place for the capital, but what has this House to do tinkering about these matters. Give these people in the south fair-play, let the people of Alberta fix their own capital, and that is all that is required of us in this House.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Let me show the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sam. Hughes) how far he can be led astray by his own imagination. He proposes that we should give a second member for Calgary and a second member to High River. Now, according to the census High River has a population of 2,472, Calgary has a population of 4,862, Saskatchewan has a population of 6,544 and Strathcona a population of 4,248. If we gave a second member to any of these Saskatchewan or Strathcona would better deserve it than the others. My hon. friend had better consider before he makes such a proposal.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The First Minister is giving figures five years old ; I am giving the figures of to-day.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Where did you get them ?

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. From the returns of your own land inspectors throughout that country and from my own personal observation as well. I can tell the First Minister further that these northern constituencies are not divided properly. Why is Strathcona cut short of Beaver Hills Lake ; why are the settlers to the west side of Beaver Hills Lake not thrown in with Strathcona where they naturally belong ? However, that is a detail. I have given the latest figures obtainable and they tally fairly well with the First Minister's own figures in that respect. As to the census figures I can get them from the Minister of Agriculture, and even they are not correct. Why, down here in the county of Northumberland the census gives figures as to the shipping of apples when the actual shipments from the railway station are three times as great. The figures which I have here and which the First Minister cannot contradict show the population as I have stated it. At any rate he can make no argument in favour of having these barren northern regions represented. What representation have the people round James Bay in the Ontario legislature ? Look at his own beautiful beloved province of Quebec, and what representation have the people round the shores of James Bay above Lake St. John in the legislature of Quebec ?

Mr. BRODEUR. They are represented.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Not at all. There is not one polling subdivision upon the shores of James Bay, and yet there are more white people living there than are living in Peace River and Athabaska.

Mr. PERLEY. The Minister of the Interior thought fit to make a little merry over the county I represent, and he is welcome to all the comfort he can get from that. He appears to be unable to answer the argument of the figures I gave last night, except by introducing these extraneous matters. It is quite true that there is a discrepancy between city constituencies and rural constituencies, but that has always been the case. The province of Alberta has practically the same conditions all over its extent ; it has a few small towns but no large cities and no great urban populations as we understand it in this part of Canada. The city of Edmonton in the north and Calgary in the south are both small cities compared with the large cities of eastern Canada. But even in the eastern constituencies we have no such discrepancies as the minister would lead us to think. What constituency in this part of Canada has fifteen times as great a voting population as another constituency ? The hon. gentleman proposes to give two members to Athabaska which according to the Prime Minister's own figures has only 342 voters while the town of Calgary with 2,653 voters only gets one member. A voter in Athabaska will have fifteen and a half times as much power as a voter in Calgary. The hon. gentleman further goes on to say there is only 10 per cent difference between the south and the north. That is true according to the figures of the eleven constituencies north and south of Red Deer, but in making the estimate the Minister of the Interior has—I do not know why he did it ; I do not like to say he did it deliberately——

Mr. OLIVER. I did not make it ; I took it from one of the gentlemen on the other side of the House. I did not think it worth my while to make such a foolish argument.

Mr. PERLEY. The Prime Minister has made exactly the same difference of 10 per cent between the eleven constituencies north and south of Red Deer. This comparison cannot be made unless No. 24 and No. 25 are added. Otherwise it is impossible to calculate the average of population as between the south and the north. Now, I wish to say once more that the contention between the two sides of the House is practically with regard to Athabaska and Peace River. If these two constituencies were omitted, the difference between the two sides as to the other twenty-three constituencies would not be very great. Two seats are to be given to this district, where there are only 1,710 half-breeds and white people, which would mean only 342 votes. Why should these 342 voters, 90 per cent of whom are half-breeds, have the right to elect two members of this provincial legislature ? That is practically the whole question.

Mr. SCOTT. What difference whether they are half-breeds or white men ?

Mr. PERLEY. I am not suggesting that the half-breeds should not have equal rights with the whites, but what I want to know is why a half-breed should be given a vote fifteen and a-half times as potent as that of a white man ?

Mr. SCOTT. If there is any man in the Northwest who should be considered as having a special right it is the native. I am surprised at the hon. gentleman so often repeating that so many of these people are half-breeds.

Mr. PERLEY. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Scott) claim that the half-breed has a right to fifteen and a-half times as many votes as a white man ?

Mr. OLIVER. They are as much entitled to it as the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Perley's) constituents are entitled to three and a-half times as much representation in this House as the constituents of the hon. member for St. Antoine, Montreal (Mr. Ames).

Mr. PERLEY. The hon. minister's answer does not apply to the point under consideration. The contention on this side is that the half-breed is entitled to equal rights with the white man, but no more. Once more I wish to point out, as the leader of the opposition has done, that seven northern constituencies have one member for each 892 voters, whereas seven southern constituencies have one member for 1,540 voters. In other words, two constituencies have, in effect, been taken from the people of the south and given to 342 voters in the north.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. I know that in a matter of this kind there is great difficulty in arriving at a basis that will be satisfactory all round. I listened with pleasure to the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) outlining the policy of the government in marking out these constituencies. I understood him to say two main considerations were population and geographical position or extent. That is very well; but, as has been pointed out by the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Sam. Hughes), it is people that should count and men that should vote. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) has asked why there has been no protest against inequalities in other provinces. If he were conversant with provincial affairs in Ontario, he would know that this has been a crying evil for many years, against which there have been numberless protests. At this moment the position is far from satisfactory, especially in the case of the city of Toronto. Toronto is represented in this House and in the local legislature by one member to about 45,000 or 50,000 of population, whereas rural constituencies each represented by a member some times have a population of 15,000. The Prime Minister rises to defend that by stating that the cities cannot be allowed the same representation as a country district. I do not think he made out a very good case; certainly not a case to justify the discrepancy of 400 or 500 per cent. The principle I contend for is that, if there is to be one man one vote, then it should be one vote one value. The Minister of the Interior has spoken of Toronto and Montreal as places whose representation as it is to-day should be protested against. So far as Toronto is concerned, a protest has been made; and Mr. Whitney, I believe, is pledged to remedy the evil in the near future, and that, I think, will be one of the first acts of his administration. Montreal is not quite in the same position as Toronto is. In Montreal a man may vote in every constituency in which he has property. It is possible for a man there to put in five votes. In Ontario a man may be a multi-millionaire, and own property in a dozen constituencies, but he votes only in one. There is inequality, and that inequality is being protested against, and will be protested against until justice is done. These are inequalities that exist. But here, under this Bill, you are establishing these inequalities in a new province. We ought at least to start equal—inequalities will come with time. Some districts will increase in population, while others will not increase, or may even decrease, so that, if changes are not made in the representation, we may find that one voter in a certain district has equal power with five voters in another. This is neither justice nor common sense. If the Minister of the Interior intends to uphold this distribution on grounds of reason, he should start with some principle—population, county boundaries, geographical position or geographical extent. But none of these is laid down, but each is followed as it may suit the views of hon. gentlemen opposite. The First Minister mentioned many considerations that should govern in these matters, but he did not mention the consideration of political complexion. It would be a comfort if we could feel that this was left unconsidered as completely as it has been left unmentioned by the Prime Minister. But we cannot see on what other consideration these constituencies of very small population should appear on this map. We have heard of the fairness of hon. gentlemen opposite. We are glad to learn that they are fair. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) pointed out that there was a conference to which Mr. Haultain was summoned. Mr. Haultain is not here to say what happened. But the Minister of the Interior has told us that the question of the boundary between the provinces occupied nearly the whole time. But what we have to do with here is the boundaries between the ridings. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. member for Western Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) tell us that the conference was held, and say that that was the time to protest. The members on this side say that they did not have this before them, and had no chance to protest.

Mr. SCOTT. When the conference was held the delimitation of the boundaries had not even then commenced. One of the purposes of calling the conference by Mr. Haultain, at the suggestion of the First Minister, was to discuss a method for the delimitation of the boundaries.

Mr. HERRON. At what date was that?

Mr. SCOTT. Some time during the week previous to the day the Bills were introduced.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. The hon. gentleman says there was a conference before these schedules were drawn out. Then that conference never reached the principal business it had in hand. Who finished the business? Who made out these schedules?

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Haultain had his conference. I was agreeable to what was suggested and proposed a motion that we should have committees appointed from each of the proposed provinces to take up the matter of preparing the schedules. That motion was not agreed to. Not a single Conservative member in that conference seconded it.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. Was there a solitary Conservative member at that meeting at that time?

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Haultain was there and so was Senator Lougheed. Mr. Haultain called the conference together. He was premier of the Territories. His constituency was the whole Northwest Territories, according to hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. BARKER. He was not a member of this House.

Mr. HERRON. Cannot the hon. gentleman give us the date of that meeting?

Mr. SCOTT. As nearly as I can recollect, it was about a week prior to the 21st February.

Mr. HERRON. Were not these schedules made out by the government and submitted to that meeting?

Mr. SCOTT. No; if my hon. friend had been listening to this discussion, he would have known that the boundary lines between the provinces had not been drawn nor had the number of constituencies been settled which each province should have. The First Minister asked Mr. Haultain if he had any suggestion to make with regard to these three points and if he would furnish them to the government: First, with regard to the dividing lines; second, with regard to the number of seats in each legislature; and thirdly, the schedules in each province. Mr. Haultain called his conference, and it was held, but he failed to propose any plan to the First Minister. What then was the government to do? Mr. Haultain had failed, and the First Minister had to take some other method to procure a decision with respect to these several matters.

Mr. LAKE. After listening to all the details of this meeting which we have heard so much about to-day, it appears that this is what took place. A conference was certainly called by Mr. Haultain, but apparently, after a great deal of talk, no decision was come to. Then after all the Conservatives had withdrawn—at any rate Mr. Haultain was not present and the other Conservatives who had been at that meeting were not present—the hon. member for Western Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) moved this formal motion? By whom was that rejected? Evidently by the Liberal members from the Territories in that meeting. That conference was held in room 48, the room of the Liberal members from the Territories, and quite naturally, after a long conference, the men who did not belong to that room went out one by one. After that, the hon. member for Western Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) moved a resolution in accordance with the wishes of his chief, that there should be a conference held by the members of the Territories. That formal motion was rejected and rejected by his own friends. He did not even get a seconder.

Mr. SCOTT. It is perfectly evident from the confessions, not only the hon. member for Qu'Appelle (Mr. Lake) but of Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) and Alberta (Mr. Herron) that Mr. Haultain took no pains to get them into a conference and obtain their opinion, and consequently he is responsible if the duty fell on the representatives from this side of giving advice to the government with regard to the preparation of these plans.

Mr. COCKSHUTT. The hon. gentleman has taken a good deal of time to answer the question I put to him, but he has not touched the main part of it, and that is: Who did this carving up? Who chalked out these ridings? We have heard that a conference was held, but, to quote a great biblical authority, 'the voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hand is the hand of Esau.' This map has been carved out in a most wonderful way to suit the views of these hon. gentlemen who support the hon. minister from Edmonton. That hon. gentleman has failed to do justice to the population, because the list he has furnished shows that there are as many as three in one constituency to one in another. Surely if cities are to be considered great centres, such cities as Calgary and Edmonton, with 5,000 of a population each, cannot be called great urban centres. It is nonsense to talk of a hive being created in a district which does not contain 5,000 people. To say that those people are not as well educated or intelligent and should not have as much to say in the conduct of public affairs as those in the surrounding county is absurd. Even admitting that Montreal and Toronto should not be represented according to their population—and I am not saying that they are not entitled to more liberal representation—such small cities as Edmonton and Calgary cannot be considered great centres of population. The hon. member for Western Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) has said that these half-breeds are the best entitled to vote of any people in the district. They are, he says, natives. Let me tell him that they are only half-breeds and that the natives of the country are the Indians; and who deprived the Indians of the franchise so far as they had it? It was not this side of the House. We gave the Indians the franchise the hon. gentleman says the natives should have. The native then is the Indian and the half-breed is only a half native, according to that reasoning, and therefore you are giving to the half what you refuse to the whole. And in that respect the hon. gentleman is certainly putting himself in the hole. I see by this division that the district of Calgary had upwards of 2,000 voters at the last election who voted. There are 2,682 on the list and 2,052 voted, whereas in some of the districts named there are much less. In Stony Plain there are only 584, or a difference of nearly 375 per cent. You have four in Calgary to one in Stony Plain. Surely the hon. minister will not pretend that an inhabitant of Stony Plain is worth four times one in Calgary. I am not as conversant with the country as the hon. gentleman; but so far as I have been able to learn from various inquiries and from having done business in that country for many years, I believe that the residents about Calgary are just as intelligent as any in the western provinces, and I cannot see by what system of reasoning the hon. gentleman can claim that justice is done by this schedule when he gives one person in one district the same power he gives to four in another. If he wants to be fair, he should either proceed on the basis of territorial division or of representation by population. I contend that representation by population is the only safe course we can possibly take, and that was established as one of the fundamental principles of Liberalism in days gone by. Representation by population is the fairest way for the voice of the country to be heard. If that be the case and if hon. gentleman opposite are prepared to legislate fairly, this House should not be held in session day after day debating this matter. Schedules could be easily prepared which would do justice to these various constituencies and give the honest, intelligent voter the same right and political power in one division that he has in another. That is what this side of the House is contending for.

That is all we on this side are contending for, but I think in all fairness we should protest against this distribution as made here. I understand that the voting white population of the Athabaska district is only about 200. I am not sure that this is the correct figure but it is about that. They have only one post office with a revenue of less than $100 per annum, and still they are going to outweigh some of those districts with a large population, many of them from the older provinces, taking an intelligent view and knowing all about our political institutions, having the same aspirations as the people of the older provinces. I understand that the settlers from the older provinces are largely in the southern districts, whereas the Europeon elements are largely in the north. Without drawing any 'Red Deer' line I wish to point out that in all fairness this should be decided upon the principle of representation by population, and that if there is to be one man one vote that vote should have one value, and having decided on that I think we could very easily draw a plan that would be suitable and agreeable to both sides of the House. I trust that hon. gentlemen will not persist in pushing this matter through in its present form. Let them get both sides together and draw up a schedule that would be fairly satisfactory to all the people concerned. The Minister of the Interior finally stated that he was ready to listen to the views of the west if Mr. Haultain would do his duty, but he was not ready to listen to Mr. Haultain. He would listen to the legislature if Mr. Haultain would call it together. That seems to me a very vain boast. We have these Bills before the House disbanding these legislatures on the 1st of July, not two weeks hence. There are seven vacant seats there now, but the minister claims that Mr. Haultain could get this legislature together, have the seven members elected and obtain their view before the Bill goes into effect on the 1st of July. He knows it is impossible to call that legislature.

Mr. OLIVER. Why ?

Mr. COCKSHUTT. I question much whether, if the views of the legislature are against that division he would take this course, but he makes an impossible suggestion knowing it is impossible for the legislature to meet before this comes into force. He is prepared to ignore Mr. Haultain's views as expressed, and to ignore the views of those concerned and push this matter through, without I think due consideration and without fairness to the political party and to those who are entitled to vote on this question in the great Northwest Territories.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I would ask the Prime Minister what real sources of information he has with regard to townships 24 and 25. Peace River contains 769 whites and half-breeds, and Athabaska 941, a total of 1,710, according to the census of 1901. That would probably give about 342 or 350 votes at the present time. The Prime Minister speaks as if this district were in some way distinct from the rest of the province. It has been distinct from the rest of the Territory in the past but it will not be in the future, the imaginary boundary line is obliterated and it is part of the province. The position is that you are giving two members to a portion of the province which in 1901 had only 350 votes. What are the sources of information on which you rely in giving that particular territory two representatives ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. The only official information I have with regard to the census is the number of schools there are at present ; I speak of the official information alone. The number of schools was 14. That is the last official information I have, but I understand there are more.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. What schools are these, are they around the missions ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Probably they are around the missions. Since the commencement of the session the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. Peter Talbot) has exercised special diligence in order to collect information and he has given information as to the character of the development of that country since 1901. The member for Strathcona stated yesterday evening that in Athabaska there were found to be 24 stores, 13 churches, 7 steamboats, 4 sawmills, 2 or 3 planing mills, 1 flour mill. On the Peace River he stated there was 18 stores, I think, 20 churches, 2 flour mills, 3 or 4 saw-mills, and I think 2 planing mills ; I forget the number of steamboats plying on the river. This goes to show that there is now a nucleus of population. You have there all the primary elements of civilization, churches, schools, stores, mills, and when you have these things and steamboats plying on the rivers you have the elements of population. What the present population is I have no means of knowing.

Mr. SPROULE. I think we could find from the report of the Department of Indians Affairs how many scholars there are in attendance at each of these schools. I think that would be interesting and valuable information to have.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That information can be obtained, and I should be glad to have it at the next sitting of the House when we take up this matter clause by clause. I have a statement of the school attendance which has been prepared with some pains and is signed by Mr. Caldwell who had a right to sign it. The number of school children attending school north of township 38 in the district of Athabaska is 8,834 and south of that including Red Deer the number of school children in attendance is 8,553, or a difference of nearly 300, in favour of the north.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. That includes the mission schools and all ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. That includes the mission schools that receive the allowance.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. That does not give us much information about the schools in this district. If you can give us the attendance for the whole province, what is the objection to giving us the attendance for this particular unorganized district ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. None, except that we have not got it ; we may have it tomorrow.

Mr. INGRAM. I would like to ask the First Minister if the defeated Liberal candidates for Alberta and Calgary were asked their opinion of the division of this province ? Were they summoned in connection with it ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. They were not asked for their opinion, they gave it voluntarily.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the minister state whether they approved of the schedule as we have it before us ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. If I remember right, they thought Calgary has not sufficient representation.

Mr. INGRAM. How about Alberta ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I cannot tell.

Mr. TURRIFF. As regards the defeated candidate for Alberta, he was in town last week, and he told me that he considered the whole redistribution for the province as eminently fair, and he had no objection to make in any shape or form.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. gentleman be good enough to say what Dr. Stewart told him ?

Mr. TURRIFF. As for Dr. Stewart, the defeated candidate for Alberta, all I can say is that I understood he objected.

Mr. INGRAM. The First Minister, in closing his remarks a short time ago, stated that if there was no seat of government to be chosen in the province, we would hear no complaint about the distribution of seats. Now let us apply a little of what I call common sense to the consideration of this question in relation to the distribution for the province of Alberta. Any hon. gentleman who has visited the Northwest Territories, especially the province of Alberta, knows perfectly well that there are strong local jealousies in the several towns of that district. When you are at Calgary the people are to be credited for that spirit, and will tell you they have the finest city and country under the sun and they advocate Calgary as the seat of government. When you pass along to Red Deer they say they have got the finest country, and that Calgary or Edmonton are not in it with Red Deer. So it is when you reach Edmonton. Now they are to be credited for that spirit, and I have no fault to find with it. But knowing that to be true, and knowing that a government seat is to be chosen for the new province of Alberta, it is evident that great efforts will be put forth by the people of these three towns to obtain the government seat. That is common sense, that is perfectly true, and no man can deny it. Now at the time these schedules were to be prepared, in whose hands were they placed ? They were placed in the hands of two gentlemen, one representing Edmonton (Mr. Oliver) and the other Strathcona (Mr. Talbot).

Mr. SCOTT. Not at first, but in the hands of Mr. Haultain.

Mr. INGRAM. No. Never mind Mr. Haultain ; he has very little influence with this government. Now these two gentlemen had the preparation of these schedules. We have their own statement as evidence, and do not require any other. Now the hon. gentleman representing Edmonton and the hon. gentleman representing Strathcona knowing the great pull each of these towns would exert in order to get the seat of government, naturally were representing their constituencies and acting in their interest, and in their interest only. Why ? Because the Minister of the Interior at that time was a private member representing Edmonton, and the hon. gentleman representing Strathcona was not representing Alberta or Calgary. As a result, what did the member for Strathcona admit in this House ? Why, he said, I looked over Athabaska, I figured out all these stores, all these mills, the immense amount of capital invested in Athabaska, and I concluded that that portion of Athabaska lying north of Alberta should be cut in two and two representatives be given it. By reason of the population? Not at all, but by reason of the immense amount of wealth, as he put it, that was invested in these enterprises in that portion of Athabaska. As a result he concluded, and no doubt Edmonton approved of his conclusion, to cut Athabaska in two and give it two representatives. That is what they did, that was the starting point. Then they said: We will divide the other portions of Alberta into twenty-three districts. That is what they did. Then the next move was this: Calgary polling the largest vote of any place in Alberta, they cut that vote out. Why? Because it was the largest vote polled in Alberta. Then they come up to Edmonton where there was not so large a vote, and they cut that out. In order to do what? To divide that portion of the territory north of Red Deer, township 38 into a certain number of constituencies, according to the number of votes polled less those in Edmonton. And the same rule applied to the south. And it was by these means that the hon. gentlemen put thirteen representatives in the north and twelve in the south. Now if there was no government seat to be chosen these arrangements would have no importance. But they knew there was to be a government seat chosen, and they wished to procure a representation that would decide where the government seat should be situated. And that is what these gentlemen had in view at the time they made this schedule, there is no question about it. Now if the First Minister wanted to be fair, what would he have said? He would have said that previously to the introduction of this Bill on the 21st of February these schedules must be prepared, as the schedules are prepared in connection with every other Bill when it is introduced. But in the preparation of these schedules what course must he pursue in order to do justice to all classes in Alberta? And what would my right hon. friend have said then to the member for Edmonton and the member for Strathcona? You consult with the defeated candidates for Calgary and Alberta, and you four gentlemen between you map out what the different constituencies ought to be in Alberta, and when you do that I will embody it in this Bill and submit it to parliament, and we will have a fair representation, at least one that will be satisfactory to our friends.

But, not so. The Dixie line which my right hon. friend mentioned has been created by his own conduct or that of his friends in the preparation of these schedules and the Dixie line or the Red Deer line will be heard of for many years to come by reason of the way in which these schedules were prepared. What follows from this legislation? We are preparing schedules here for the purposes of an election which will take place within six months of the passage of this Bill. It is our duty and it ought to be the duty of our hon. friends on the other side of the House to provide for a fair representation of the different parts of the province of Alberta as created by this Bill, so that when the representatives of the people meet in the legislature of the new province they can select any place they desire to be the seat of government for all time to come or so long as they feel disposed to continue it at the place decided upon. That would have been the proper course, but that course has not been followed on this occasion and that is what the people of Alberta are complaining of. Apart from my hon. friend from Calgary (Mr. McCarthy) what interest has any member of the opposition in the question as to where the seat of government shall be? What interest is it to me whether Edmonton, Medicine Hat, Red Deer or any other place is selected as the government seat? It is of no interest to me but it is of some interest to me to know that the new province shall have no friction created by any legislation passed by this House. A good deal has been said about those newspapers from which quotations have been read. My hon. friend from Calgary quoted some statements made by the Liberal press of Calgary. I can understand that and I shall not be influenced by what the Liberal or the Conservative press says in the city of Calgary because I look upon them as prejudiced and biased witnesses as I do upon the Tory newspaper which is edited in Edmonton, and which has expressed its approval of the distribution which favours the establishment of the government's seat in Edmonton. These newspapers have no influence on me because they are prejudiced witnesses, but it is interesting to note what the press of Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and other places that have no idea of getting the government seat have to say. South of Red Deer the press complain of this division but north of Red Deer the press are satisfied. On the south side there are Liberals and Conservatives opposed to this division because they have not been treated with that spirit of fairness which the right hon. premier ought to have displayed towards them. Does the right hon. gentleman believe that we have no reason for complaint? I believe we have every reason to complain because this is not merely a question of the selection of the government seat. If we are giving these people representation it should be so carefully given to them that no man north or south of Red Deer should have any cause to find fault with the division. If instead of shutting out our Conservative friends entirely they had been given an opportunity of sitting down with the hon. gentlemen opposite we would have come to some conclusion which would have removed all this friction that is liable to continue for years to come. The hon. Minister of the Interior has found fault with Mr. Haultain. He says that Mr. Haultain should have called the assembly together for the purpose of approving or disapproving of the schedules. I would like to know from any man who would exercise the smallest common sense what he thinks of such a suggestion. The legislative assembly was short some six or seven members. It was expected that on the 1st of July this Bill would become law and that the assembly would cease to exist at that time. I ask any man of common sense if the taxpayers of the Northwest Territories would desire Mr. Haultain to have a general election which costs a large sum of money, to put the people to that inconvenience, for the purpose of determining whether in their opinion the schedules prepared by the Dominion government describing the limits of the constituencies in Alberta are fair or unfair. I know that if I were a large taxpayer in the Northwest Territories and if any man came to me and asked me to cast my vote for the purpose of determining a question of this kind, putting the Territories to a large expense, I would not vote either for that man or any party that sustained him in any such proposition as that. It is an absurd idea. If the government had exercised sufficient care and caution to get their own friends to declare that this division was a proper one and one that meets the views of their own party, if they did not want to give fair-play to this party, the government could have treated the Conservative party with perfect indifference so long as they satisfied their own friends. I am bound to say after all I have heard of this question in this House that it will be many a long year before Alberta will have this friction removed that has been created by this measure. If, after the first six months they had an election and if in Alberta the legislative assembly saw fit to divide up Athabaska and give that small population two seats we could find no fault with them, but I think they are the proper parties to determine a question of that kind and that fair representation should be given to all classes there now in order that this very friction we are complaining of will not occur in that particular section of the country.

I have heard a great deal about the Athabaska and Peace River districts. That is a subject which has been before this House on many occasions. There is a committee of the House of Commons known as the Agriculture Committee, and at no time in the experience of the Committee on Agriculture, at all events, for the last 17 years to my knowledge, has the committee been so disturbed as it was over the question which was raised in regard to the character of the Peace River district. This disturbance was brought about by this very report that has been referred to since this discussion began. A government officer, Mr. Macoun, reported to the Geological Survey in a report dated 1904 the results of the work done by him in the Peace River country in 1903, and there is nothing in the report to justify the extravagant statements made by the hon. member for Strathcona and approved evidently by the right hon. leader of the government itself. There is nothing in that official document to show the statements made by the hon. member for Strathcona to be anything like true statements. The hon. Minister of the Interior admitted himself that there are portions of this country that he had never passed through, that he had no personal knowledge of, but yet he took the opportunity on that occasion to dispute the statements made in this document. So, I say that instead of taking coloured statements, because I believe they are coloured statements that have been made by the hon. member for Strathcona and by the Calgary and Edmonton newspapers, let us take the authority of some person who is not interested, as the hon. member for Strathcona is and as these newspapers are, and if we do that I think we will be able to prepare a fairer schedule than we have before us to-day.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the hon. member for East Assiniboia to say that the pople there were perfectly satisfied with the redistribution.

Mr. TURRIFF. What I said was that the defeated Liberal candidate for the district of Alberta was in the city last week and in conversation he mentioned to me that he considered the whole redistribution of the province of Alberta was eminently fair and satisfactory.

Mr. SPROULE. It would be interesting to read what is said by a genteman who has been travelling through that country on business since last summer, and who has no interest in this question one way or the other. He writes

> I have been talking to hundreds of Liberals regarding the Autonomy Bills and I have not found half a dozen who are satisfied with them. The people in Alberta are dissatisfied with the dividing line of the two provinces, they also want control of their own public lands. Then last but not least there is a big kick about the way the constituencies have been carved up by Frank Oliver so as it will be a sure thing that Edmonton will be made the capital.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Who wrote that?

Mr. SPROULE. Mr. W. J. Whitley, who is now in the Territories and from whom I received this letter the day before yesterday. He has no interest but speaks in a casual way of what he sees from day to day. It is the third letter I have received from him unsolicited. He speaks of the feeling of the people in regard to the educational clauses, the fact that the provinces want their own lands, and other features of the measure. There is apparently widespread discontent in that country because scarcely a letter you get from a resident there does not speak of it. What my correspondent's politics are I do not know;

he does not write from a party point of view, but he speaks of the general discontent among the people and he says that the Reformers are just as much dissatisfied as the Conservatives.

Mr. CAMPBELL. They did not show it in the Edmonton election.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. member had better keep quite on that; that is too much comedy.

Mr. HERRON. Before the debate closes I wish to say a few words in connection with the proposed schedules. Although I had something to do in assisting the hon. member for Calgary in preparing the figures, I shall not follow him in his argument, because he, and the hon. members for Montreal and Argenteuil, have placed the results before the House in so convincing a way that it is not necessary for me to speak of them in detail. The figures presented by these gentlemen ought to be sufficient to show this parliament that an injustice is being done to the southern portion of Alberta. I do not believe that the Prime Minister and the Minister of the Interior have any solid foundation for their contention, that the geographical conditions of the north should be taken into consideration as against the greater population of the south. As the Minister of the Interior knows, from 1887 up to last November, almost the whole of the new province of Alberta was represented by one member in this parliament, and the hon. gentleman himself has represented it for the last eight years. If there is a good reason why we should have two members for that northern country to-day, there must be very good reason to say that we have been very badly represented for the last eighteen years. Alberta, which has been represented by one member was certainly far greater in area than the Peace River and Athabaska districts to which it is proposed to give two members in the local assembly. The district of Alberta was something like 450 miles in length and over 300 in width, while the new district is in or about 300 miles square. The industries were just as varied in the old district of Alberta as they can possibly be in the two northern constituencies. One hundred miles north of Edmonton in a district which the Minister of the Interior represents, is chiefly a fur-producing district, Edmonton is an agricultural district and the south was a stock-raising district for a great number of years. If the varied industries afford a good reason why this district should now have two members, it affords the same reason why we were badly represented for the last eighteen years all over Alberta. I was interested last evening to hear the member for Strathcona refer to the industries of Athabaska and Peace River districts. I shall not dispute his figures because I have no statistics to enable me to do so, but at the same time I do think they were very much exaggerated. I am quite satisfied, from the conditions in that country in the early days and judging by the conditions which prevail in mountain and foot-hill countries generally, that the stores to which he referred are in a great many cases not what people down here would consider ordinary places of business. A store in the general acceptance of the word in such a country simply means a settler living by the wayside who may be tweny-five miles from a neighbour and who only keeps articles for trading purposes with travellers who frequent that northern country. It would perhaps be more correct to call these stores trading post. I know also the Hudson bay have posts in that country. I think the hon. gentleman stated last evening that one of these stores represented something like $300,000 of commerce. I suppose it does at certain times of the year, when the furs are coming in. But it is a trading post just the same, and I do not think it indicates much permanent settlement in that country. I do not think the stock interests are very great—in fact, I know they are not. I have not been there for a number of years, but I have information from men who travelled that country and that information is quite as reliable as that of my hon. friend from Edmonton (Mr. Oliver.) It is a moving population. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Oliver) has said that, according to the present regulations of the department, squatters' rights are not protected in unsurveyed territory. The surveyed territory, I believe, extends only about 50 miles from Edmonton. Therefore, the population outside of that limit is not of a permanent characer.

Mr. OLIVER. The hon. member (Mr. Herron) will pardon me, but, while there is no regulation of the department protecting squatters' rights in this country, squatters' rights are and always have been held to be the best rights a man could have.

Mr. HERRON. That is not borne out by experience in my country. Previous to about 1889, squatters' rights were recognized, but about that time notices were scattered broadcast that they would not be longer protected. I know many cases of people having been removed, and denied redress because of the notice having been given that they were no longer protected.

Mr. OLIVER. Squatters before survey? I think not.

Mr. HERRON. Yes; they are not protected now as they were before 1889. Therefore, I say population in that country is not of a very permanent character. A fair estimate of the number of voters in that northern country would be 250 for each constituency. Compare that with some of the districts in the south. Take, for instance, Cardston, with its great irrigation scheme, in which probably more than $1,000,000 has been invested. We know that that irrigation system is attracting immigrants from the south. It will be seen that neither the voters' list nor the number of votes cast is a fair criterion by which to estimate the population of that section to-day. A large portion of the voters there are on 40-acre plots along the line of the ditch. Then take the district of Lethbridge, in the south, and compare it with Stony Plain, near Edmonton. Lethbridge is a very prosperous town—city, you may say—with a population, probably, of 5,000, and the centre of very large business interests of all kinds. From the coal mines there they have been sending out 2,000 tons of coal daily for years past. The town of Raymond is also in the Lethbridge district. Four years ago there was not a soul where that town now stands with a population of nearly 3,000. It has a sugar refinery that cost over $400,000, and has about it a very large rural and agricultural population. To show that the number of votes cast is not a criterion of poulation in that country, I may say that in the town of Raymond, with a population 2,800, only 113 votes were cast in the last election. It surely is unreasonable to give to Lethbridge and Raymond, with their great agricultural population, only the same representation as is given to Stony Plain, near Edmonton, or to give this district in the south only one member when two members are given to Athabaska. Or take the district of Pincher Creek, in which I live. We have the Crow's Nest pass there, with the town of Frank and its coal mine that sold for over $3,000,000 the other day. That mine is in operation, and has probably $500,000 invested in plant and sends out a large quantity of coal daily. The French camp of Lille is in the pass also. It is another mine, in which probably half a million dollars is invested. The town of Coleman is also in the pass with another great mine, with a plant in which is invested $300,000 or $400,000. Belleview is the name, I believe of another new town with a mine and plant in operation. Besides these there are several smaller mining villages. In addition to all this, there is the agricultural portion of Pincher Creek that will ship this year 500,000 bushels of wheat from the station where I live. There is a population of 10,000 people in the district in which I live, including the Crow's Nest Pass and Pincher Creek. I do not think it fair to say that one member should be sent from that district to the assembly to vote on equal terms with a member from the sparsely settled northern district. I do not think we could give a much better representation to that country than that given by the legislative assembly in 1902. That was immediately after the census. As has been stated here, nine members were given south of Red Deer and six north of Red Deer. And there never were any complaints from the north, so far as I know. That would indicate that that representation was a fairly good one. Then take the redistribution of Dominion seats in 1903, south of the Red Deer there were given two seats and two north. The hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. Peter Talbot) said last night that one-fifth of his district was also south of Red Deer, so that in Dominion representation for one and four-fifths to a district in the north they have two and one-fifth in the south. I think that would be another fair way to estimate the seats in that country. Why, in this distribution, do they give thirteen seats north of Red Deer and only twelve south. I cannot see any good reason why that is done. I cannot see any good reason why Athabaska with only 250 votes should have the same representation as Calgary which has over 10,000 souls. I do not think that any hon. gentleman would say that that is a fair way to represent that large district in the new parliament. Then take the Banff district and look at the interests there, for instance, the Anthracite coal mines. In Canmore, $250,000 are invested in coal mines and in Bank head $800,000. These districts are growing just as rapidly as the northern country. We have been told by some members that we are providing for an increase of population and by others that we are not; but no matter which way you take it, these places are developing as rapidly as that northern country and will develop more rapidly in the future. Therefore, I have yet to see any fair reason why north of Red Deer should have thirteen seats and south of Red Deer only twelve. As regards the grain producing capabilities of the two countries, I see that in the Edmonton district spring wheat averages 16·53 bushels per acre, fall wheat 11·60, oats, 29·70 and barley 24·73. Take Calgary and I find that spring wheat averages 19·04 per acre compared with 16·03 in the Edmonton district; fall wheat 23·40 compared with 11·60; oats 37·41 compared with 29·71 per acre in Edmonton district. In the Macleod district there is still a greater difference. Fall wheat there compares 25·97 bushel with 11·60 in the north, and oats, 34·57 against 29·71 in the north. I take these figures from the geography published recently by the Department of Agriculture. They show that even from an agricultural standpoint, the southern country will rank above the north; and for that reason I do not see why it should not continue to progress in the same proportion. For many years the southern country was supposed to be nothing but a stock country, but in almost every part of it where agriculture has been tried to any extent, it has proved a success. In the district where I live, at one time we thought it would be impossible for a farmer to make a living from his farm, yet to-day we find it the most prosperous farming country probably in the Dominion. For the last five or six years, we have raised the best crops grown anywhere in the country, either wheat, oats, barley or potatoes or in fact vegetables of almost any kind. So that I do not see any reason why our southern country should not be considered a first-class country, likely to go ahead in the future even more rapidly than any part of the northern country referred to. As regards schools, it is well known that in a stock country, the stock men evade the school tax in every way possible. That is easily understood by any one who understands the conditions under which these men live. There would be a large area covered by one of the stockmen, and the odd settlers who would go in there would naturally try to establish a school district. Eight children are sufficient to form a school district, but the stockmen would have to pay the bulk of the taxes and naturally would oppose the establishment of schools, and therefore they did their best to keep out small farmers who would settle on 160 acres each. They discouraged the schools and drove the small settlers into the town where their children could get schooling. That is one reason why there are not so many schools in the southern country as in the north. The local improvement districts are practically in the same position. A lot of farmers living together would rather turn out and do their own work with their own teams in their spare time in the month of June, than contribute $2.50 to the general treasury. Whereas on the other hand the stockmen, who do not use teams very much, would naturally prefer to contribute to the general assembly at Regina, and every one in the Northwest has the option of either paying to the local improvement district at Regina or forming a local district. I think eight men, or about that number, can form a local district and do their own work if they see fit to do so. You can see from what I have said that the local improvement districts are not a very good ground for saying that there is more population in the north than in the south; neither do the post offices form a good index of population. The Minister of the Interior represented our district for the last eight years and I think he was more kind to the people of the north than to the south and for that reason there are more post offices in the north than in the south, although there is not so large a population. Many of our people have to go from ten to twenty miles for their mail. I have been asking this session for post offices in districts where there are a dozen families in a settlement who have to travel seven or eight miles for their mail, but my applications have been refused with the statement that it was impossible to establish post offices for that number of people. That I say is a good reason why post offices are not a good guide in which to estimate a basis of representation. The minister said it was men who voted and not money or cattle. I claim that we have both men and the money in the south; we have a larger population and more invested, proportionately, than they have in the north country. That is not a reason why the northern people should not have an equitable proportion of representation, but under these conditions they should not have more representation in the north; it should be equal. The Minister of the Interior and the member for Assiniboia have said that the Northwest Territories assembly should have been called together and have the feeling of the people of the Northwest put on record with reference to these new constituencies. The reasons for not calling that legislature have been made clear to this House. There were seven vacant seats in the assembly, and the assembly held its annual session a year ago. The Northwest assembly received money from here as a sort of gift annually in the form of estimates, each item assigned to a special service. I suppose the estimate of last year was taken in the usual form and was used by the ordinary session last year. As soon as the session was over these men resigned. In the first place there was no money to hold the by-elections and I do not suppose there was anything provided wherewith to hold a session of parliament. That I think is a good reason why the assembly was not called. Then it was well known or anticipated from the time parliament met and the Bill was introduced that the powers of the legislative assembly would cease on July 1st. We in the Territories, including Mr. Haultain, were expecting that we would eventually get justice in that country, and I have no doubt he was fighting and living in hope that we would get the same justice in the south. I was surprised to hear the hon. member for East Assiniboia (Mr. Turriff) say that my opponent was in favour of this distribution of the seats. The Board of Trade of Lethbridge has condemned it in the strongest terms possible, and I believe they have sent a protest to the First Minister. More than that the gentleman in the Lethbridge district who was looking for the nomination there and who I believe was nominated, received the nomination strictly on condition that he would oppose these Bills. He had to give that promise before he could get the nomination, and he is a Liberal supporting this government.

Mr. OLIVER. Has the hon. gentleman heard any objection from Macleod or Pincher Creek?

Mr. HERRON. I have had protests made to me personally and I think I can produce resolutions of the Board of Trade of Macleod.

Mr. OLIVER. And this Bill gives Macleod two members when it only had one by the redistribution of two years ago!

Mr. HERRON. I acknowledge we have two, but I think you will admit we were entitled to them.

Mr. OLIVER. So you were before but you did not get them.

Mr. HERRON. We were trusting and we were entitled to it five years ago.

Mr. OLIVER. You had to wait for this Bill to get justice.

Mr. HERRON. We are getting partial justice now.

Mr. AMES. Has the minister read the Macleod 'Gazette' of May 18 and the Pincher Creek 'Rocky Mountain Echo' on this question ?

Mr. OLIVER. I have not.

Mr. AMES. He will there find all the protest he wants.

Mr. OLIVER. What I have already said to the House will show how reasonable those protests are, when they are getting twice the representation under this that they had before.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES. The population is increasing.

Mr. LAKE. I wish to ask the Prime Minister whether he has acted on exactly the same basis in the distribution of seats in Saskatchewan as in the distribution of seats in Alberta ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I may say to my hon. friend that the object is to have regard to geographical distribution of population.

Mr. LAKE. I understood the Prime Minister yesterday to say that the policy was to employ as the greatest test the census of 1901 and to use the population of 1901. Would that be the main principle guiding that distribution in Saskatchewan ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Oh, I think not ; all the sources of information that were used in Alberta would be used also for Saskatchewan.

Mr. LAKE. The strongest reason given for the distribution in Saskatchewan was the number of votes cast in the election of November, 1903, that number having preference over the number of voters on the list. That was the main principle applied in Alberta, and I presume exactly the same principle has been applied in Saskatchewan. I suppose there can be no question about that. Two seats are given to that portion of Athabaska which has been added to the province of Alberta. I understood the Prime Minister to say that the principal reason in his mind for giving two seats to that district was the great distances between the settlements which made it physically impossible for one man to cover the whole district and to properly represent it. Could I have an answer to that question ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. My information was that the information in each district was confined to the river shores, and the population was on the river. The chief centres of population in both districts are on the river.

Mr. LAKE. How far were the rivers apart ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I could not say.

Mr. OLIVER. Between the settlement at Lesser Slave lake and the settlement at Peace River, which is the nearest point at which they approach until they finally join, the distance is between 90 and 100 miles, and from that they diverge to a distance of about 200 miles apart, and finally they come together after a considerable distance.

Mr. LAKE. I ask this question to call attention to the fact among the electoral districts of the legislative assembly we have had one district electing a single member which I think would comprise a greater area than the settlements in the district of Athabaska, to which it is proposed now to give two members. I speak of the district of Kinistino, which, roughly speaking, is over 300 miles from east to west and about 210 miles from north to south. But there has been no difficulty in holding an election for that district. It had 682 votes cast at the last election, a larger number than I think will be cast in these two constituencies in Athabaska at the first election for the new legislature, probably twice as many. I do not know what map the Prime Minister has before him, but I notice that in most of the maps which have been supplied by this government the old distribution of seats was given, which does not contain the district of Kinistino as it exists at present. The old maps give the old distribution which was in force before 1902, when a redistribution was made by the legislative assembly. I have one of the new maps, and I can assure him that the figures I have given as to the distance are practically correct. There has been no practical difficulty in that large district. The polls were held at very extreme distances, and the proclamation, I think, had to be delayed for a fortnight before all the returns could be obtained.

Mr. LAMONT. Would the hon. gentleman wish us to understand that in Kinistino the election was held at the same time in all the polling divisions ?

Mr. LAKE. I have no doubt the election was held on the same day in all of them.

Mr. LAMONT. They were not. The distances are so great in the Kinistino district that in some of the polling divisions the elections were held two weeks after the elections in some of the others.

Mr. LAKE. Still that does not alter the fact that we had a very large district, as large no doubt as the new district which it is now proposed to divide into two. The Prime Minister has stated that the whole dispute over the distribution of seats in the province of Alberta was due to the rivalry btween the cities of Edmonton and Calgary.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. LAKE. Hon. members who endorse that statement, I presume, mean to convey their opinion that Edmonton is the proper place for the capital of the new province. More than that I take their endorsation to mean an endorsation of the attempt that is being made to force that opinion upon the people of the new province, who should be free to make the choice for themselves. But I may say that is not the reason which causes me to offer strong opposition to this distribution. The figures given by the Prime Minister himself are sufficient to convince me, and I think will be sufficient to convince any man who looks at this question from an independent point of view, that there is an unfair distribution of seats, even taking the votes cast as a basis, which I do not consider is a fair basis at all. But even taking that basis, which the Prime Minister considers the fairest, we find he is giving to the northern seats 10 per cent more representation than to the southern seats. And taking the basis of the names on the voters' list, he is giving to the northern portion of Alberta an advantage of 22 per cent over the seats in the southern portion, dividing the line near Red Deer.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. What if you take the population according to the census of 1901 ?

Mr. LAKE. If the hon. gentleman will pin his faith to the census of 1901 all through, well and good ; let him apply it to Saskatchewan as well, and he will find where it will lead him.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. We will see about that at the proper time.

Mr. LAKE. Will the Prime Minister say now that he will make the distribution in Saskatchewan on the basis of the census of 1901 ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I will take that along with the registered vote of 1901 and the school districts, all will be taken into consideration, as in the case of Alberta.

Mr. LAKE. That would mean giving the strongest weight to the points which are in his favour.

Mr. OLIVER. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would like to make a test of the matter. Would he offer to distribute Alberta on the basis of the census ?

Mr. LAKE. I do not accept the position for one moment that the census of 1901 is a fair basis for the distribution of seats at the present time.

Mr. OLIVER. Then don't ask that it shall be applied to Saskatchewan.

Mr. LAKE. I did not ask for it. I said that if the Prime Minister wished to take that as a basis in Alberta, he should be consistent and apply it to Saskatchewan. But I say it is an absolutely unfair basis, and you might as well distribute the seats for the Yukon elections on the basis of the population of 1894.

Mr. OLIVER. Because the hon. gentleman thinks this is unfair he refuses to take it in the old part of Alberta and accepts it unreservedly in the new part of Athabaska.

Mr. LAKE. I did not accept it unreservedly in any case. I have not stated that I have accepted it unreservedly in Athabaska. In the speeches that I have made on this subject I have never made an estimate of the population of Athabaska except to state my belief that the votes cast in these two districts will be less than the votes which were cast in the district of Kinistino in the last territorial election. The right hon. Prime Minister has stated that it is almost impossible to distribute the populaton between these different seats within a 10 per cent margin. I cannot see that impossibility at all. I think there is no difficulty in the matter. At any rate I say it is unfair to have the balance always on one side. If there is any difficulty in distributing the population within 10 or 20 per cent we ought to see that general average is evened up. There may be constituencies in the south that are higher than the average and constituencies in the south that are lower than the average. Then, there may be constituencies in the north which will work out in the same way, some higher and some lower. Let there be give and take on both sides so as to make a distribution as between north and south that is fairer than this distribution. Do not give the advantage all to one side. I consider that the only fair basis at which we can arrive. Do not give the advantage to the north of a representation 22 per cent over the representation which you are giving to the south, and in addition to giving to the north an advantage of 22 per cent add two seats in the district of Athabaska which, in my opinion, can be very well added to existing districts in the northern part of Alberta.

Mr. OLIVER. Does the hon. gentleman complain that the rural districts in the northern part of Alberta are smaller in population than those in the south?

Mr. LAKE. I am quite willing to take the right hon. Prime Minister's own figures which show that there is a smaller voting population in the northern part of Alberta than there is in the southern part.

Mr. OLIVER. The vote cast in the whole province of Alberta outside of the cities south of the new district of Saskatchewan, partly south and partly north of the Saskatchewan river, was 1,168.

Mr. LAKE. The hon. gentleman is taking an isolated case again. If you average it up you will see the unfairness of this distribution. It is well known there are variations and I have stated that if you will take these variations and average them fairly between the north and the south it is a different question altogether. On the very face of this question and in view of the figures which have been presented to the committee I say this it an unfair distribution and that is why I am opposed to it. It is not because I think Calgary would make a better capital than Edmonton. I have not expressed my views upon that point because I do not think I have any right as a member of this House, nor do I think that any member of this House has the right to dictate to the people of Alberta where their capital shall be.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the hon. Minister of the Interior tell me how the area of Edmonton that he now represents compares with the area of the two constituencies in Athabaska and Peace River ?

Mr. OLIVER. I should say that the area of the Edmonton district would be approximately one-fourth of the area of the district of Athabaska, or the area of the Dominion electoral district would be about one-half of the area of the district of Athabaska.

Mr. INGRAM. Do the polling subdivisions that are located in Edmonton cover a greater area than the polling subdivisions there would be in Athabaska and Peace River ?

Mr. OLIVER. In one way they do not, and in another way they do. In Athabaska the polling divisions in each proposed district would be in a continuous line along the river. The distance between the extreme east and the extreme west polling division in the Edmonton district is about 250 miles, roughly speaking, whereas the distance between the polling subdivisions at Lesser Slave Lake and at Smith Portage, which would be the most northerly part of the proposed Athabaska division, in a direct line would be about 350 or 400 miles but by river, which is the only means of communication, it would be 150 miles more.

Mr. INGRAM. So that the polling divisions in Athabaska and Peace River would be more convenient than in Edmonton, because in Edmonton they are more scattered?

Mr. OLIVER. If the distance were not greater they would be more convenient, but the distance is greater.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the hon. gentleman give us the shortest period of time within which an election could be held by the Northwest government in this area ?

Mr. OLIVER. My hon. friend will remember that the hon. member for Saskatchewan has already stated that there are polling divisions in the local district of Kinistino where the polls cannot be held at the same time as the general polls throughout the territory. These polls have to be postponed from ten days to two weeks beyond the ordinary time, but the time between nomination and election is ten days. Three weeks would be the shortest possible time, leaving out the extreme polls in Kinistino.

House divided on amendment (Mr. M. S. McCarthy).

Amendment negatived—Nays 70. Yeas 32.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Shall the section carry ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. I presume it will be discussed item by item. I move that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I may say to the right hon. gentleman that I have another amendment to move, and it is very desirable we should adjourn now after working nine hours. I shall hand my right hon. friend a copy of the amendment this evening or to-morrow morning in order that he may have notice.

Progress reported.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN. I suppose we will continue with this same matter to-morrow.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER. Certainly.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.30 p.m.
