Mr. H. McGrattan received word that P. S. Sullivan died in Boston, Monday, and was buried Thursday. No particulars were given.

Frauley Bros. have brought their handsome horse Jay Wilkes here from Woodstock. The horse is a beauty and is greatly admired and no doubt will be heard from when the trotting season opens.

Christmas carols may still be sung and anniversaries observed along traditional lines in the schools of New Brunswick so far as the authorities are concerned. Late Wednesday the board of education without a dissenting voice, passed a resolution which places that body on record as not opposed to these observances and leaves the matter to the judgment of individual superintendents. In fact, members of the board declared that there had never been any intention of eliminating these programs, and that the recent agitation has arisen from a misunderstanding.

A meeting of the Women's Union was held at St. Andrews Monday. Mr. Geo. E. Frauley, Secretary, reported about 480 members in good standing. It was voted to make the price of herding, both sardines and smoking, $6 per bushel for the season. A number of delegates from Deer Island favored a uniform rate of $10. A resolution was unanimously passed favoring the passage of a law prohibiting any persons, not residents of the province, from holding licenses permitting them to build and operate weirs. The minimum price of lobster bait was fixed at $4.

The following are members of the executive:

District No. 1. Henry Rankine, H. B. O'Neill, G. J. Clarke.

District No. 2. W. A. Holt, Geo. Frauley, Hugh McGregor.

District No. 3. Ira McConnell, B. Dick, Peter Cameron.

District No. 4. Geo. Ellis, Enos Justason, G. W. McKay.

District No. 6. A. H. Haney, Alva Lassie, J. Conley.

District No. 7. A. Calder, Jr., P. O. Allingham, G. M. Byron.

On motion the district of Lepreau was allowed to cut the price of sardines 50 cents, as boatmen would not go there and pay the Union price.

Levis Connors speaking on lobster protection favored a lobster hatchery, and better protection for clams. At the election of officers J. A. Belyea was unanimously elected president; Harold Lord, vice-president; Geo. E. Frauley, sec'y.

Although the weather was stormy and roads bad, a large number were present and all matters were settled satisfactorily and the meeting was successful in every way.

At a banquet in honor of J. D. Hazen, M.P., leader of the local Opposition, Wednesday in St. John, about two hundred supporters of the Opposition leader were present. It was a very successful affair and representative gathering.

During a blinding snowstorm Monday the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's big steamship Mount Temple, 6,600 tons carrying 600 passengers from Antwerp to St. John, N. B., ran on the rocks at Ironbound ledges, 70 miles west of Halifax on the Nova Scotia coast. The passengers and crew were handled safely.

St. Stephen, N. B., Dec. 4.—A telegram was received here tonight by Gansong Bros. from Dr. J. F. Teed of Dorchester, stating that Fred S. Hutchinson died there this evening about 8 o'clock, from palpitation of the heart.

News of his death was heard here with deep regret for Mr. Hutchinson was well known and highly respected by all classes in this community. Mr. Hutchinson was for a number of years a popular conductor on the Shore Line. About twenty years ago he entered the employ of Gansong Bros. and was for a short time a member of the firm. He then entered the employ of the company as salesman, in which capacity he was employed at the time of his death.

Mr. Hutchinson leaves a widow, who was Miss Elizabeth Berryman, and two sons, Sterling about 15 years of age, and a younger son about three years of age. He was a member of St. John's P. M. A. M., and of Border Lodge, K. of P.

The body will arrive tomorrow and the funeral will probably be on Sunday.

Mr. Hutchinson was well known here and had hosts of friends who deeply regret his death.

Miss Minnie May Langille and Durrell E. Gilmour were married Thanksgiving evening, Nov. 28, at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. C. H. Bell, 16 Charlotte street, Jamaica plains. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. F. C. Edwards of the First Methodist church, in the presence of a company of relatives and friends. The wedding march was played by Prof. Krumpel.

The house was attractively decorated with laurel and palms. The bride was very beautifully attired in a gown of white crepe de chine, and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. She was attended by Miss E. A. Bennett of Dorchester, Mass. who wore white lace and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Stoughton supported the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Gilmour will spend a month in Canada on a wedding trip, after which they will reside in Jamaica Plains. There were many beautiful wedding gifts, including silver and cut glass. Mr. and Mrs. Gilmour are at Second Falls the guests of Mr. Gilmour's parents.

RUN DOWN BY TRAIN

A telegram was received in this city this morning from Boston stating that Duncan N. Billings, a Bath boy, was killed there, being run over by a train. The telegram was from his brother George who resides in Malden.

Duncan N. Billings was the son of the late John J. Billings of this city and arrived by his mother, Mrs. Phoebe Billings of 22 Willow street, this city; Edmund and Frederick Billings of this city and George Billings of Malden, Mass.; a sister, Mrs. Hattie Hodgson of Somerville, Mass.; a wife and five children, Phoebe, Florence, Arthur, Marion and Henry. He was forty six years old.

For a number of years he was a popular barber in Bath, working at the Sagadahoc House and other places. He left Bath thirteen years ago and was for some time a barber at the Adams House in Boston. No particulars of the accident have been received here—Bath paper.

Deceased was a resident of this town at one time, leaving here about thirteen years ago. Later word says that in boarding a moving train he slipped, falling under the wheels and was terribly mangled.

HONEY GUIDES.

African Birds That Lead Men to the Nests of Bees.

"For many ages," says a writer, "the small birds which are known in Africa as honey guides have been in the habit of leading human beings to the nests of bees. The first notice of the kind of which I have knowledge is in 'Lobe's Travels in Abyssinia,' published by Le Grand in 1728. 'The more or honey bird,' says this author, 'is endowed with a peculiar instinct or faculty of discovering honey. When the more has discovered any honey he repairs immediately to the roadside and when he sees a traveler sing and clap his wings, making many motions to invite him to follow him, and when he perceives his coming flies before him from tree to tree till he comes to the place where the bees have stored their treasure and then begins to sing melodiously. The Abyssinians take the honey without falling to leave part of it for the bird to reward him for his information.' Sparrman, who traveled at the Cape in 1775-76, gives also a very good description of the bird as observed in the southern part of the continent.

"The honey guides lead human beings to the nests of wild bees not so much for the honey as for the grubs or larvae found within the comb. The natives are for the most part well aware of this fact, and if they reward the honey guide, which they usually do to some grading extent, break off for it a piece of the comb in which the grubs are hatching. Sparrman has a curious note upon this detail. He says, 'I was informed by my boatman (Quashman), as well as by the colonists, that a man who makes it his constant business to go after the bees should not at first be too grateful and generous to this officious bird, but leave for it only just as much as will serve to stimulate its appetite, by which means it will be induced in hopes of obtaining a more liberal reward to discover another swarm of bees.

"When it desires to feed upon some comb which it has discovered it makes its way to a human being, suttors about restlessly and hops from branch to branch or from bush to bush or from one ant hill to another until it succeeds in attracting the man's attention. During this time it utters a shrill cry of 'cherr' frequently repeated. If the man is a native who understands its habits and is willing to follow it he often gives a soft, soothing whistle and, taking with him a hatchet, accepts the restless little creature's guidance. The honey guide now goes on ahead, never keeping very far away and always jealously noting whether the man is really following. At length the honey nest is reached, the bird's object accomplished, nest and ride the comb the bird still flutters about, chirping. When the business is concluded and the man departs the honey guide descends from its perch and helps itself to as much of the larvae as it can find.

"When thus following a honey guide the natives, as a rule, very quietly, taking care not to frighten his small adviser. If the man by reason of bush or other obstacle travels, in the bird's opinion, too slowly it will repeatedly come back to him, fly closely and anxiously about him and with restless twitters and evident impatience urge upon him the necessity of hurrying up."

Roaring Wags.
Specialists modern scientists are bound to be. But they are not the skeptical specimens so often pictured by the man in the street, all cold intellect and devotion to the pursuit of an abstract idea. They know how to play. Like other men, they are gregarious and play together.

The Red Lion club was composed of great Englishmen, and Huxley was one of the members. The club used to meet during the session of the British association. To a certain meeting at Ipswich, England, which Huxley described in his "Letters," some foreigners were invited, the Prince of Canino, Bonaparte's nephew, among them, and greatly astonished they were at the exceedingly human behavior of the learned professors. The Red Lion men had a custom of wagging one coat tail—the lion's tail—when applauding. The prince was much impressed by these proceedings, and when he stood up to respond to the toast of his health instead of making a speech he gave three mighty roars and three wags.—Youth's Companion.

Lucky Edition.
When the late N. Villemessant, the proprietor of the Paris Figaro, died he left the paper to the three men who had done the most to aid him. But there were many old contributors on the paper, men with well known names, who made an outcry at this division of property. They insisted that they ought to have been consulted, and they threatened to found an opposition paper to Figaro.

This alarmed the three principals, and they made a proposition to the effect that they themselves should take each £7,000 out of the concern yearly and that the other men should each have a salary of £1,500 for the work they were to do and at the end of the year draw a like sum out of the profits, thus insuring them £3,000 a year each. For these men did not write an average of more than half a column a day each—indeed, that much so that they had a very easy time of it.

It was one of the conditions that when any one of them dies his share goes to the others, so that the last survivor will have an enormous income.—London Observer.

TWO QUEER ANIMALS

The Marabou and the Hyena of Central Africa.

BOTH VULTURES IN NATURE.

Each Gorges itself on Carrion, and the Bird and Beast Often Battle For Their Food—Fair-like Plumes That Are as Light as Air.

The ugliest stocks in the world are found in northern Asia and central Africa. Their flesh colored heads are only partially covered with stiff, wiry feathers, and hanging on the breast they bear a disgusting pouch, which answers the purpose of a crop. One of the largest of these stocks is the marabou. It stalks about the great sandy plains of central Africa with composure and a lordly grandeur, as if it were the most beautiful bird in the world. Its body feathers are of a dull metallic green color, and its wings and tail are dingy black. Looking at the awkward creature, no one would suspect that under its ungainly wings it carried the most exquisite and fairy-like little plumes, so airy that it takes basketfuls of them to weigh an ounce. They are pure white and so much desired for trimming that the bird is vigorously hunted by the natives, who sell these dainty feathers to traders for a very large price.

The marabou feeds on carrion, like the vulture. Its throat is very large, and it will greedily eat everything that comes in its way. In the swamps and plains around Khartoum, on the Nile, are immense flocks of marabous, and they are so daring as to come to the slaughter houses on the outskirts of the city in search of food, and whole ox cars and skin boxes with hoo' attached have been found in the crops of specimens which have been killed.

These birds are skillful fishers. They hunt the low marshy islands in the rivers and lakes of central Africa, with elephants, monkeys, flamingoes and many species of birds for companions, and gain their principal food from the water. They often go in companies of ten or twelve to fish. Wading in the water, the birds form a circle, which they gradually draw together, gathering the frightened fish in the center of the net, when with their long bills and quick movements they speedily provide themselves with a hearty meal.

Although marabou mammals have been seen parading around with a brood of diminutive downy young ones, so shy and retiring is this bird in its domestic habits that naturalists have been unable to determine when and how it builds its nest. The marabou is a very voracious and tree, but their statement is not confirmed.

In captivity the marabou is lord of the inclosure, and in zoological gardens, where specimens have been confined, no other birds or even small beasts dare approach the feeding trough until the hunger of this impudent bird is satisfied and it has retired to the warmest corner for a nap. The immense strength of its bill makes it a formidable enemy, and when fighting for food it will often overcome the largest vultures and wage successful battles with beasts of prey.

The hyena inhabits the same portions of Asia and Africa as the marabou, and travelers give accounts of terrible contests between these two singular members of the animal kingdom. The hyena is called the vulture among beasts, as it prefers carrion for its food, and as long as it can find dead animals to devour it leaves the flocks and herds in peace. Cowardly by nature, it rarely attacks man or beast unless driven to desperation by hunger.

The striped hyena inhabits the northern intrades of Africa, Persia and Syria, while the spotted species, which is easily tamed and is sometimes called hyena dog, is found in large numbers in the vast plains of South Africa. The hyena is a strange looking beast. It has a big head and a heavy, sluggy nose. The hind part of its body is much lower than its shoulders, and its hind legs are short. This odd formation gives it an awkward, shambling manner of walking, which is both ludicrous and hideous.

This creature rarely shows itself by day, but when the shadows of night fall on the plains and forests it comes out from its home among the rocks and caverns in search of food. African travelers are much annoyed by it. When the camp is silent and all are sleeping the hyena comes prowling round, uttering hoarse human cries, and should it fail to find sufficient camp refuse to satisfy its hunger some poor donkey is sure to be torn to pieces by its terribly strong jaws.

Few animals have been the subject of so much superstition. In ancient times it was believed that a dog went mad if a hyena turned its evil eye upon it, and the beast was believed by many to be a wicked sorcerer, who went about in human form by day and at night assumed the shape of a hyena. The poor and ignorant peasantry of Arabia even at the present day believe in the evil eye of this beast and are afraid to shoot it lest they should incur the wrath of the wicked spirit which they imagine walks the earth in this ugly form.

The poor hyena, however, far from being an evil spirit, is a real blessing to the regions it inhabits, as it is a natural scavenger, provided by the kind wisdom of nature to clear the ground of much loathsome and decaying matter, thereby rendering the air purer and more and more healthful.

Gesture Language.

Far away from the influence of civilized man gesture language is still extant in parts of Australia. Some of the tribes possess such an excellent code that it is almost as efficient as the spoken language.

Book Bindings.

Artificial heat of all kinds is damaging to book bindings. It not only cracks the leather, but the paste. A large bowl of water placed in a room containing books will moisten the air sufficiently to prevent the drying of the leather.

The Copper Age.

That copper preceded the bronze age is proved by the fact that articles unearthed at Abydos and Negadah, Egypt, have been pronounced pure copper.

Pope Adrian IV.

The only Englishman who ever ruled as pope was Nicholas Breakspear, who was born about the year 1100 at Langbeay, near St. Albans. He was unanimously elected to the papal chair in 1154 and bore the title of Adrian IV.

A Chinese Custom.

It is the Chinese custom to inaugurate a business venture with a display of fireworks.

A Clean Tip.

The dim uneven flame that is such an annoyance to most housekeepers is quite unnecessary if care is taken to run the edge of a wicking card or a coarse cotton thread through the gas burner every few days.

Ironclads.

The first ironclad warship was the Gloire of France, antedating the Monitor and Merrimack by nearly four years.

Icebergs.

The icebergs of the two hemispheres are entirely different in shape. The arctic bergs are irregular in form, with lofty pinnacles and glittering domes, while the antarctic bergs are flat topped and solid looking.

Volcanoes.

There are 270 active volcanoes in the world, many of them being comparatively small.

Hairbrushes.

Hairbrushes need a weekly cleaning. For this purpose add one tablespoonful of soda to a quart of hot water, dip the brushes—not the lacinto this and shake well until perfectly clean. Rinse and stand on edge to dry.

Licorice Root.

Licorice root grows wild in the fields of Asia Minor and until fifty years ago was practically unused. Today the annual exports to the United States alone are worth about $500,000.

Plants and Minerals.

Some minerals, such as phosphoric acid, potash, lime and magnesia, are essential to the nourishment of plants, but plants have also a general appetite for mineral substances, getting freely in addition to the quantity necessary to their proper nutrition.

Silk and Flax.

A silken thread is three times as strong as a flaxen one the same thickness.

Remains of Ancient Cities.

All around Chingchow, China, there are mounds, earthenworks, lookout towers, etc., the remains of ancient cities and fortresses, which mark the sites of capitals from the very dawn of authentic history.

Maldivic Archipelago.

The Maldivic archipelago contains 14,000 islands, which abound in coco-nut palms.

Stone Barometer.

The "Imaktur," a Finnish stone which becomes almost white before the approach of fine weather and darkens when storms are at hand, is used by the natives as a barometer in which they repose the highest confidence.

Malaria.

Malaria renders nearly a fifth of the land of the globe dangerous to white men.

Evolution.

The idea of evolution—that is to say, of the origin of existing species from pre-existing ones as against the doctrine of the special creation of each species—is as old as the fourth century B. C., when it was advanced by the Greeks.

Greek Peasant Babies.

The baby wrapped in the heart of a Greek peasant home is washed in lukewarm wine and myrtle leaves, then its complexion is carefully covered with a layer of milk.

Legal Right to Pick Cigar.

According to Connecticut law, when you go into a cigar store and ask for a cigar, the dealer must place a number of the cigars of the kind you want on the counter to enable you to select the particular one you wish to buy.

Milan's Cab Drivers.

Some of the cab drivers in Milan, the most important industrial center in Italy, remain on duty day and night eating and sleeping in their cabs, winter and summer alike.

Road Rollers.

The use of a roller in roadmaking was first suggested by Cesar in 1783 and first adopted by Polineau and Morandiere in 1833. The first steam roller was constructed by the French engineer Balle.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Mr. Thos. Lee and bride arrived at their home in Elmcroft Thursday, from ~~Brantford~~.

We are now having our first touch of winter weather. Following a disagreeable snow storm the weather has become decidedly colder.

A paper has been in circulation here for a few days asking for purity in elections. A number of signatures were obtained in town.

Mr. E. G. Sherwood, of Second Falls, will engage in lumbering quite extensively this winter. He is now making contracts, and expects to get out a million and a half.

Mr. Edw. McGrattan went to Pennfield last week and purchased a lot of cattle. There would appear to be plenty of cattle in the country, but the farmers are evidently holding back for better prices.

The stores are beginning to have a holiday appearance. The shop keepers seem to be buying in excess of any previous year, and when the goods are all opened up will show a greater variety than ever before.

Any of our able bodied young men who desire to become defenders of the country in a military way, can find an opportunity for doing so at $15.00 per month. Officers are now out looking for recruits for the Royal Canadian Regiment.

At St. John, a committee of city teachers waited on the Hon. H. A. McKenna on Saturday urging his support to the memorial in favor of teachers' pensions that will be considered by the government when it meets in Fredericton tomorrow evening. The attorney general promised to bring the matter to the government's attention.

Indications are that the I. C. R. will share to a greater extent than ever before in the winter port business. Already considerable freight has come over the government road, including large quantities of apples, and there is every prospect that the business in all lines will steadily increase. The recent decision of the Railway Commission with reference to Grand Trunk runnings by the I. C. R. is believed to be in a measure responsible for the coming of this business.

We have been receiving some interesting items from our country correspondents, for which we return our sincere thanks, and we trust we shall continue to hear frequently in the future. To make our little paper as interesting and newsworthy as possible is our aim. We shall be pleased to receive news of births, deaths and industrial items from every section of the country. Persons living in town may help us out by sending any items of interest that may come under their observation. Avoid gossip and personalities, other news is always welcome to our columns.

The following clipping from an exchange pretty nearly explains our situation:—Newspaper men have been having their own troubles during the past few years. The cost of producing a paper is constantly increasing.

Within the last few weeks paper has increased in price about thirty-five per cent. Last year the postal laws were so manipulated that the American subscribers to country newspapers had to be practically cut from the mailing list. Labor has also advanced. Yet the newspaper is supposed to sell for the same old subscription price and advertisers want the same space for the same money as they paid in former years.

We are not complaining about the patronage that we have received. We are trying from day to day to improve our paper and increase its circulation. A live paper is a necessity in any town but advertisers and persons requiring job work cannot expect old prices to be maintained when everything in the printing line has a skyward tendency. Dodgers, circulars, posters and advertising space can no more be sold at the same price, than butter, eggs and poultry. We must live and let live.

One of the highest tides seen here for some years, was on Saturday.

The bookstore in town these days is without doubt at Frauley Bros. Read their ads in this issue.

The mail closes for St. John at 8.45 a. m. For St. Stephen at 4.30 p. m. Train leaves for St. John at 9 a. m. For St. Stephen at 4.45 p. m.

For exclusive designs in Neckwear, Gloves etc, go to Frauley Bros. This firm has made preparations for the biggest Christmas trade they have ever had.

The Conservatives will hold a convention at St. Stephen, Dec. 12 to nominate candidates for the local legislature.

Santa Claus is again making his headquarters at Frauley Bros. With biggest stocks and extra help, the Old Gent's wants will be looked after in better shape this year than ever before.

C. V. Wetmore, of Sydney is at the Dufferin Hotel. Mr. Wetmore is here in connection with the business of the N. B. Iron Company, who will before a great while begin development work on their property at Lepreau. At a meeting held last Saturday it was decided to sell 5,000 shares at $25 each. This money will be used to open up the areas --Sun.

The Transform- ation.

By WILLIAM BELL.
Charles Jackson of the Cophall Crescent was a stockbroker. He was only 35 years of age, though one would have taken him to have been older. His thin hair was parted in the middle, and
and his face was wrinkled and careworn as the face of one who was subject to worry. The stockbroker, by the very nature of his calling, was a man without feeling. If he had any sentiment in him, he forbore from showing it. His general air was that of cynicism.
The presence of a lady was to him distasteful, and thus one day, when a young person came into the office of the stockbroker, proceeded to fill up the remaining chairs at that particular table
by depositing her umbrella, her coat, and her bag on them, he was exceedingly displeased. The stockbroker was not out, his lunch was not quite the same that day.
Whenever a man advanced near to the table at which she was sitting, she glanced up with a challenge which clearly told the person he was not wanted in that particular part of the ten shop. The man generally marveling at the sight of a lady in that room, surrendered. But suddenly Jackson saw the regular features of the girl radiate in a smile. Her lips opened, her dark eyes flashed, and she showed at once that some supreme moment was at hand.
A man came in and accomplished what we were told in our youth could not be done properly—two things at once.
He lifted his hat to the girl and placed it on the rack with the same action.
Then she forgot to breathe, forgot even the haughty, cynical stare of Jackson.
The Elysian Fields had been brought to this underground and well appointed cellar. The couple forgot they were within three hundred yards of the bank;
one might have imagined the scene was the towing path at Richmond.

Jackson was up set all day. But worse was to come. This was merely the beginning. Day after day the stockbroker was the unwilling witness of what he described as "rotten love making." The thing had one good result it softened the stockbroker's heart to the extent that he saw women differently.
He even, after a special joke he and the waitress had together, said to himself,
"That is a very sensible girl, even though she is a waitress," which for him, was wonderful.
As time went on, and the couple provided the customers of the depot of the City Bread Company with a daily display of fragrant love-making, so Jackson, the cynic and the hater of the fair, became more and more drawn to the waitress.

One luncheon time a thing happened
which raised the ire of the stockbroker to boiling pitch. The light, which was never steady, failed altogether. There was consternation in the tea-shop, nearly all left their tables and stumbled towards the stairs which led to the street and the sunlight. Jackson remained still; he was sitting opposite the "cooing couple," as they had become to be known, and waited a few minutes while the gas was lighted. As the first few gleams made their way in the darkness, he could discern the lovers locked in each other's arms, and he could hear them kissing. Jackson was beside himself; if he had been asked the reason of his anger he could not have given a proper reply.
Just before the stockbroker left, the waitress came up to him to give him bill and he remarked quite loudly to her: "Turn out the gas, the couple over there like the dark."
Both the waitress and the girl flushed and the man replied to Jackson:—
"Mind your own business! What has it to do with you?"
Jackson could think of no effective answer so smiling at the waitress he left, and the couple soon followed him.

The next day Lily Wilson (the waitress) was a little perturbed as she saw that Jackson was again seated opposite the couple, but this time he had his back to them. He could see what was going on behind him by the reason of the mirror, and his annoyance was not abated as the couple determined to pay back yesterday's insult. For many remarks were aimed at him. He listened patiently from an outward point of view, but inwardly he was getting frantic. At last he could control his temper no longer, and as Lily came up her tray loaded with tea and coffee and bread and ham, he accidentally leaned back in his chair and collided with her, knocking the tray and its contents from her hands on to the clothes of the lovers

at the table behind him.
Then, to quote his classic account afterwards, "the hand played."
The lady, red with rage and brown with coffee, raised herself from the wreckage and cried to Jackson:—
"Look what you have done!" Her light summer dress was marked with mingled stains of coffee and tea.
Meanwhile, the man was dislodging a piece of bread and butter that was adhering to his shirt front.
Lily looked on in horror.
Jackson's reply to the girl was a mere inclination of the head. He offered no apology for he was honest.
"You call!" was the remark of the gentlemen, made with heat.
Jackson adjusted his eyeglasses with that expiring manner which gazed at the speaker.
"I said—" went on the man, thinking Jackson did not comprehend.
"I heard what you said! Perhaps you will reserve it all for addressing your equals. Go and say your sweet nothing somewhere else."
Then, looking at the broken array, he continued: "I'll pay for all that."
"But you will not be able to pay my wages for the next year or so," continued Lily.
"I do not understand," said Jackson.
"I shall have to lose my place because of this."
"Rubbish—rubbish! I'll see the manageress."
Somewhat appeased, the girl collected the fragments that remained, and after a hasty and rather unskillful hurried the couple launched.

Jackson interviewed the manageress
and made things all right for the girl.
Days passed and the lovers never returned. They had gone to pasture new. And Jackson, fast losing all his old ideas concerning love and romance, was making much headway with his friendship with the waitress. He was undergoing a transformation. But it was only friendship, he argued, "One certain day he asked the girl to go out for the afternoon with him. Lily acquiesced, and so a fine summer afternoon saw them in the region of the Thames. After a row they took tea in the open air, with the river in all its summer beauty shimmering past them. Jackson had yielded to the sensuousness of the place, the romance of the river had found its way into his heart, and his gentle manner and his soft speeches to the girl even surprised himself. He did not think himself capable of such sentiment. In the same tone that he was wont to use when asking for his coffee he questioned:
"Is it not grand—this place?"
She nodded; the view was too splendid for words. But Jackson was impatient. "So different to the C. B. C.
in Cophall Crescent, eh?"
The girl shivered, but did not reply.
"Would you like to leave the C. B.
C.?"
Lily did not understand, and said
no.
"Well, would you like to look after a man who is not young, but who needs
—He stopped. The girl had raised her head, showing an astonishment in her eyes she could not conceal. He continued in a husky voice as he took her hands:
"Would you like to—would you—would you like to be my wife? Then the excitement departed, and he was the same old financier, and he was desirous of pressing his suit in the same way as he would drive a bargain on "Change";
but it was not necessary.
Lily comprehended. She just rested her head on his shoulder.
"We will not picture the immediate scene that followed. Suffice it to say that they decided to have a long drive to finish up this most marvellous day.
Jackson rather fancied his still with the ribbons. He was oblivious to all but his Lily. Never was a lily so fair! The horse galloped on and all was well. However a motor car came in an opposite direction as they were nearing the town, and its powerful headlights frightened the horse that he took the bit between his teeth. Jackson was an accomplished driver and pulled hard, but made no impression on the animal. The steely look in the stockbroker's eyes was manifest as he tugged at the reins, and as he never smiled, but pulled mightily the girl, from first thinking the thing a huge joke, began to get alarmed. She soon realized the position and screamed;

but Jackson, with that quiet look of his,
said:
"Trust to me, love."
She watched the superb struggle with bated breath. Man and animal tugged with all their strength, and the man was losing. Suddenly through the trees the river came in sight. The lane ran right down to it. Lily realized the danger they were in and uttered a short prayer.
"The river—we shall be drowned!"
Jackson secretly heard. He knew the situation too well. Jackson was pulling for all he was worth, and as the horse was almost on the bank, a form seemed to leap out of the very earth, and a big and a big rug was flung over the horses head. A woman's cry rent the still air.
The animal altered and in that moment Jackson regained control, and by pulling the horse almost on to its haunches, he stayed its course not six yards from the water.
Willing men held the horse, and they witnessed a strange sight. Jackson came from the trap and advanced to the man who had so skillfully hurried the rug.
He was about to shake hands, when he recognized his rescuer.
Good heavens! It's—"One of the cooing couple," responded the other, laughing, as he saw the stockbroker's face. And it looks as if it were another couple."
"I beg your pardon for my rudeness,
you have saved—"
"Oh! don't go like that. I could not let any one drown if I could help."
"But I have treated—"
"We will say no more about it."
"Look to her."
Lily was white as a sheet, and Jackson turned to her. He felt humiliated, but the "Great-hearted rescuer" was determined not to let him rest thus.
"Look here!" He linked his arm in Jackson's. "I live near. Come and have supper with my wife. I think you know her," he added smilingly. "We have not been married long, but we have learned the lessons of hospitality.
We will say no more of this. I had been out rowing, and had just disembarked when I heard shouts, and I did what I could. That is all."
"Yes and it saved the two of us," Jackson's hand clutched Lily closer to him as he remembered the awful moment.
"Now after my treatment of you—
kick me!"
"You! Nonsense; here's my hand!"
The man shook.

NORMAN McLEAN DIES. Death Comes After a Sickness Lasting Over a Year.

Norman McLean, a well-known citizen of Anoka, died Sunday morning, Nov. 24th, at 7.15 at his home on North Ferry street.

Norman McLean was at one time a most active citizen, both in business and politics. Four years ago, he suffered a stroke of apoplexy and one year ago an attack of paralysis. During the past year he had suffered much, being in a helpless condition, unable to speak and yet retaining his position. Every attention was shown him, by his wife and children to make his declining days as pleasant and comfortable as possible. Last summer was spent at the lake home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Bean, where it was hoped the change might be beneficial. He returned to town in September.

Last Wednesday there was a change for the worse and he gradually declined till death relieved him Sunday morning at the hour stated.

MR. NORMAN McLEAN.

The late Norman McLean was born in St. George, N. B., Feb. 10th, 1884, where he lived with his parents until he came west, when about 23 years of age. He came to Minnesota, settling in Anoka, where he went into the blacksmith business, which trade he had learned in the east. Since that time he had known this city as his home. He returned to St. George and married Miss Laura Epps, July 11, 1886, and brought her to this city as his bride.

There was a little of romance about this marriage, for Mr. and Mrs. McLean had grown up from childhood together in St. George, had been lovers almost from childhood.

Mr. McLean was the first constable of Anoka and also held the offices of chief of police, deputy sheriff, and sheriff. For a number of years he was employed by R. M. Mahany on his bus line. Mr. McLean has been a member of the Masonic lodge for 40 years, joining when he first came here. He is survived by his wife, three children, Mrs. Wm. Bean, Charles P. McLean and Miss Norma McLean; three brothers, T. G. McLean, Anoka; Warren, White Earth, Minn.; George, Batte, Mont. and Mrs. Edw. Knight, Brookhaven, Miss., an adopted sister.

The funeral services were held from the home, yesterday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. R. F. Leach of the Baptist church officiating. The attendance was very large. The services at the grave were in charge of the Masons, who attended in a body.

"Norm" McLean was known all over the country and his friends were many. His was a pleasing personality, an abundance of good nature, and an acquaintance soon became a warm personal friend.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the family in their affliction. Anoka Union.

Old Things Women Are Doing

Miss Bessie H. Seid, 18, of Clifford, Pa. is a tower operator on the Pennsylvania railroad.

For the second time within five months Mrs. G. V. Hepburn of St. Louis assisted in the capture of a burglar. The man was chased for blocks by Mrs. Hepburn and his mother, Mrs. John Chelarrat, and was finally captured.

Women teachers attending the Lawrence County (Pa.) Teachers' Institute are all removing their hats. The male teachers grack, demanding that the high headgear of the girls be removed so the man could see the speakers. This was done when the instructors suggested it.

A cook at the Denver sanitarium was discharged. She refused, however, to leave the premises until she was paid her wages in full and defied the police to oust her.

Women in Indianapolis formed a bucket brigade and saved a house from destruction by fire.

Custom house officials at Bellingham Wash. have discovered that women are smuggling opium across the line from Canada, concealed in their hats.

Mrs. Elvira S. Block of Chicago is suing her husband for divorce, charging that when she was sitting on his knees he spread them apart and let her fall on the floor.

HON. H. R. EMMERSON'S INTER-COLONIAL MOTION.

At the first session of the House of Commons which assembled on the 28th inst., Mr. Emmerson gave notice of a resolution concerning the extension of the I. C. R. system.

No one is in a better position than the late Minister of Railways is to know what the Intercolonial Railway has been doing in the past, what it can do at present, and what it might be made capable of doing in the future. He has given notice of a resolution on this subject that will probably be the occasion of an interesting debate. He will act wisely if he brings it up early in the session, while it is possible to secure all the time necessary for its discussion.

Mr. Emmerson suggests extension of two quite distinct sorts: an increase of branch line accommodation within the area at present tributary to the Intercolonial, and an extension of the main line westward from Montreal. As to the expediency of the former the people of the west cannot judge from local knowledge, and they will have to depend on geographical and commercial information supplied by those who wish to have such a scheme of branch lines undertaken and completed. There can be no doubt as to their opinion of the proposed trunk line extension. It will be as popular in Ontario as it will be all the way from Montreal to Halifax.

The effect of extending the original Intercolonial to Quebec, and subsequently to Montreal, has been to transform it from a comparatively insignificant line into a comparatively prominent system. Its extension to Toronto would undoubtedly have a like effect on its earning power, with a chance to lessen the ratio of working expenses to the gross revenue.

The railway companies are refusing to advertise Montreal's winter arrival, on the ground that it has a tendency to make people believe that cold weather is the chief attraction that Canada has to offer. While this move on the part of the railways is open to some criticism, it has been demonstrated that man thrives proportionately as he can combine the emerging influence of a cold temperature with power to endure it. Those parts of the Dominion which have, on the whole, a long and severe winter are comfortably habitable nowadays because the construction of railways has conveyed anthracite there. To this artificial means of defying the elements, which enables manufacturers and trade to subsist, Canada now adds the advantage afforded by the discovery that her heavy grain takes the blue ribbon in foreign markets, where merchants mix them with others to elevate the average.

"Our Lady of the Snows" does not injure the country among persons who do their geographical thinking without a map, and who imagine that Montreal is somewhere on the Arctic Ocean, but the very sign of the climate is an industrial, commercial and social asset.

BY THE WAY

Will you hang up your stockings this year?

Some newspapers are using very choice language for purity organs.

St. John has started its first delegation of the season to Ottawa. Others will follow in regular order.

Slanders do a world of mischief with their tongues. The slanderer's tongue is like a pig's tail, always wagging. If the slanderer would think more, he would say less.

Will some one in authority give us some information as to how the skating rink project is coming along. We are receiving enquiries every day from the young folks.

Every citizen can do something to help town affairs, by attending the meetings of the Council, showing by their presence that they are interested in the discussions pertaining to town affairs.

On the lower street a few days ago several dogs nearly passed out of this vale of tears. A spirited horse, a frightened woman and a very ugly man all took part in the festivities. The dogs proved the best runners and escaped, from every appearance—a horrible ending.

Gossip and comment are always on top and if the town pump is known to all, we have another "attraction" that enjoys an equally large acquaintance. It is surprising how talkative human nature can be at all seasons of the year. How some nuisances escape getting shut up is a constant wonder.

"A pack of dogs who were near starved for want of food saw some hides in a stream. They could not reach the hides and hence made up their minds to drink the stream dry and reach them in that way. But they found that they burst with so much drink ere the hides were reached." Do not try to do that which cannot be done.

We must confess that we have had our suspicions regarding some hunting exploits of our popular young men, but when presented with a photograph of the monarch of the forest "lying cold in death and our young friend playing 'Johnny on the spot' we hasten to make due apology for our suspicions and to offer congratulations. It has been said that hunters have no feeling or pity for a defeated foe, and this no doubt accounts for the sad expression depicted on the face as he gazes on his prize.

The St. John Telegraph, not only got a "scoop" but did an act of public good in publishing the statement that Collins had committed the crime for which he perished on the scaffold.

The evidence in the case being purely circumstantial combined with the fact that there was no great motive for the crime, created many sympathisers for him, who refused to be persuaded with regard to his guilt.

The statement published by the Telegraph will set at rest the other disputing tales that arose with regard to the commission of this murder.

It is no light task for a judge and jury to send a man to the gallows, and it must come as a relief to those men to know that their verdict and sentence was in accordance with the law and that the punishment fell upon the party responsible for the crime.—Rx.

Just Be Glad.

Oh, yes, the sun rose this morning, and it will rise to-morrow morning, too. The sun is always shining, if you have the power to perceive it. Let's brighten up a bit.

Gladden and the world gladden with you; mope and you mope alone. Will to be glad, and you have achieved within yourself a mastery that will help you to discount your worries to insignificance. And better than that, your gladness will have its effect on those you come in contact with. Gladness is only like small-pox in that it is infectious. Get the infectious kind of gladness.

Tell yourself this morning, "Well, I'm glad." Never mind what it is you are glad about—just be glad. Meet your banker with the glad-hand, and tell him to be glad. Perhaps he needs it. And up and down the street, in and out of the store, tell your friends, "Well, I'm glad." Children, just brighten up a bit. The sun is shining somewhere. And—let's be going to snow.

Present Day Bank Criticism.

With a Proposed Amendment to the Bank Act.

BY A. H. M. HAY, M.A.

During the past six or eight months the marked scarcity of money in proportion to the demand for it in Canada and the United States has occasioned much discussion as to the causes of the discrepancy as well as speculation as to effective remedies to relieve the situation. As the stringency in our country (to which we will confine our attention) has become more severe from month to month the discussion and speculation have become very keen until now the newspapers and financial journals are giving valuable space to contributions on the subject which indicate that the public mind is becoming much agitated. These contributions are extremely interesting in most cases, as the contributors have usually recognized the causes, at least partially; but in the remedies proposed we find much to indicate not only an ignorance of the general financial malady but also a blind prejudice against the influence our banks in general exert. As an instance of the latter there appeared the other day in one of our Canadian newspapers an interview in which a Member of Parliament expressed the belief that the Banks are not only in a position to cause a money stringency (should they wish to do so) but that they have actually been guilty of selfishly and graspingly withholding funds required by legitimate enterprise, with a view to raising their discount rates (to 18 and even 24 per cent. as he says) and so enhancing their profits. He then expressed his intention of introducing into Parliament an amendment to the Bank Act which would render a Bank liable to a penalty in the event of its accepting more than the legal rate of interest from a borrower. Even granting the Honorable gentleman's contention that excessive rates are charged in some cases under unusual circumstances (in which we believe, however, he is misinformed) it would seem to us that his proposed amendment would be about as effective in its results as would a corn-plaster in the case of a sufferer from tuberculosis. And yet we find another newspaper of this gentleman's "contribution to the public discussion is not only interesting but distinctly healthful in tendency."

Now, as I have already said, the causes of the present stringency are pretty clearly recognized by those who have studied the situation at all. But in order to establish a basis for the only amendment to the Bank Act that would appear to me at all likely to prove effective, let us state briefly what is at the root of the trouble. Clearly the demand for money is in excess of the supply. Our country has been enjoying an unprecedented period of prosperity. For several years the tide of immigration has set strongly toward Canada; our great West has passed in a day from boyhood to manhood; our railway construction in five or ten years of the present and near future is rivaling in magnitude that of a half century that is past; thousands of acres are being put under cultivation for the first time and the whole country is entering upon a new and larger life. Is it any great wonder then that our currency which circulates as the financial life blood of the nation, has been taxed to the ut-

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause also usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and he has created a little pink tablet. That little pink tablet is Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful, though safety, it is a sure equalizer of the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure. If it's painful periods with women, same cause. If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. This remedy is a certainty for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the tensional blood pressure.

Brush your finger and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain your? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

most and has run this in some of the members of the whole body? Are we not in exactly the same condition as a boy of sixteen who, as they say, has been growing too fast? And is it not as ridiculous to deny the Banks their fair share of the general prosperity as it would be to tell such boy he must eat less?

I think that my readers will agree that I have fairly stated the conditions as they exist to-day. A little thought will also convince them, I am sure, that these conditions are quite natural and in themselves healthy although the magnitude of the country's financial growth must necessarily contain some elements of danger. I am convinced that these dangers are clearly recognized by the men at the heads of our banking institutions and that their efforts to safeguard the country's financial welfare are no doubt in a measure responsible for the occasional outbreaks of short-sighted criticism made to that contained in the section I have noted. I would propose that in times of extreme money stringency an incorporated Bank be allowed to issue notes in excess of its paid-up capital (by not more than say 50 per cent. thereof) upon satisfying certain conditions, the following of which I would lay down as essential, viz:

(1) Such Banks must have a reserve fund equal to at least 100 per cent. of its paid-up capital.

(2) Must have been paying dividends less than say five years a dividend on its capital stock at the rate of not less than 10 per cent.

(3) Must submit its books and securities to an independent and external inspection.

(4) In addition to the ordinary 5 per cent. deposit in "Bank Circulation Redemption Fund" an additional deposit to the Fund amounting to 10 per cent. of excess of circulation must be made by the Bank.

In addition to the above essentials, if the opposers of the proposed amendment insist on further safeguards for the public let the present "double liability of shareholders" be increased in proportion to the excess of note circulation over paid-up capital.

Now I am sure that some will object "If the Banks wish to increase their note issue let them increase their capitals." To this I would reply that in times of greatest stringency, when relief offered by the proposed amendment is most urgent, great difficulty would be found in selling new stock. And the greater the stringency the greater this difficulty would be.

If legislation of any kind can do away with or even lessen appreciably the ex-retarded? In this connection we must not lose sight of the fact (which seems generally to be overlooked) that our immigrants, although individually far from rich, taken "en masse," introduce into the country an amount of wealth which is certainly too large to be ignored when estimating our working capital. And the fact that a large part of the wealth so introduced is undoubtedly employed productively in opening up and developing new territory is an encouraging indication for the future. But when we have taken into account all of our present resources, and when we consider the magnitude and urgency of our business requirements there seems to be no doubt that the country could well and profitably use more money than there is at its disposal. If we grant then the necessity for an increase in our money supply the question arises how to obtain it. It is just here that my proposed amendment to the Bank Act suggests itself.

Sub-section (3) of Section 51 of the Bank Act reads: "The total amount of such (the Bank's) notes in circulation at any time shall not exceed the amount of the unimpaired paid-up capital of the Bank." Now, in proposing an amendment to this Sub-section I am aware that strong opposition will at once be met. It would seem at first blush almost financial sacrilege to think of modifying this rule, unless indeed to further limit the Bank's right of issue. It has come to be regarded as one of the Golden Rules of Finance that a Bank shall not issue notes beyond the amount of its paid-up capital. But as unusual circumstances sometimes render the best of Golden Rules inapplicable, so it seems to me that we have reached a stage when exceptions must be made to that contained in the section I have noted. I would propose that in times of extreme money stringency an incorporated Bank be allowed to issue notes in excess of its paid-up capital (by not more than say 50 per cent. thereof) upon satisfying certain conditions, the following of which I would lay down as essential, viz:

SYNOPSIS OF
Canadian North-West Homestead Regulations.
Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres more or less.
Application for entry must be made in person or by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency for the district in which the land is situated. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at an Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.
The homesteader is required to perform the homestead duties under one of the following plans:
(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.
(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.
(3) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of a homesteader has permanent residence on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of the homestead, or upon a homestead entered for by him in the vicinity, such homesteader may perform his own residence duties by living with the father (or mother).
(4) The term "vicinity" in the two preceding paragraphs is defined as meaning not more than nine miles in a direct line, exclusive of the width of road allowances crossed in the measurement.
(5) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.
Six months' notice in writing must be given to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of intention to apply for patent.

LEPREAU.

(Too late for last issue.)

Mrs. Wellington Kinney who has been very sick has ~~recovered~~ and is now visiting Mrs. M. F. Boyne. Her mother, Mrs. J. Mathews of Littleton, who was called here by her daughter's illness left for home some days ago.

The train from St. John on the 29th jumped the rails a few hundred feet west of West Musquash Bridge. After some hours delay the passenger cars were got on the track and the train proceeded passing Lepreau at 7.30 next morning. A box car containing nine tons of cans for Hanson Bros. Cannery at Little Lepreau had to be abandoned for the time being but a wrecking train will likely replace it on track on Sunday.

We deeply regret to hear of the death of W. G. Galbraith's little daughter, Mabel, which took place at her home in Lorville from diphtheria. Mrs. Galbraith was a Miss Shaw of Lepreau and a great deal of sympathy will be extended to the sorrowing parents.

The New River property consisting of about 15,000 acres of wild land belonging to J. and L. B. Knight, was recently offered for sale but it is understood here, was withdrawn at something over $29,000.

Miss Bessie Stickney, M.D., who had her foot badly scalded some time ago, has recovered greatly and will be able to return to her home in Boston before long.

ROLLING DAM.

(Too late for last issue.)

Ralph McKinney left last week enroute for New Hampshire. His many friends wish him success.

Jos. Wrigley succeeded in shooting a very fine moose while away on his hunting trip.

Miss Martin who has been visiting Miss Alvena Maguire has returned to her home at Lewiston, Me.

The many friends of Mrs. Charles McCann, are delighted to see her return home, especially because she brought with her a beautiful young son.

Miss Margaret Scullin, who is to be married at Canterbury visited her mother on a recent Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Greenhaw have closed their house for the winter.

Inspector Brown visited our school recently.

Miss Lilla McKinney is visiting friends at Elmville.

NEW RIVER MILLS

(Too late for last issue.)

Our new dam factory under management by Shaw and Ellis, which has been doing a thriving business for the past few weeks, closed down on Saturday last. It is understood they intend enlarging their plant, and intend doing business on a much larger scale next season.

Miss Mary Brown of Macos Bay, who was employed here for a short time returned to her home on Saturday.

Sardine herring continue quite plentiful here. Although the season for canning is past the weirman still manage to catch a few to the Nova Scotia baiters.

Mr. John Crickard of St. George is the guest of his sister Mrs. Robt. Shaw.

On account of ill health, G. E. Mealy intends closing his store down for the winter and going south in hopes to improve his health.

Geo. Winn made a flying trip to Eastport Me. on Thursday, returning Friday.

Our school teacher Miss Jean Kelman spent Saturday and Sunday at her home in St. George.

Mr. Sandy Brown of Little Lepreau returned to his home on Saturday.

Mrs. S. R. Anderson of Eastport, Me. is visiting at her old home.

Mr. John Daley "Fishery Officer" is still on the sick list. His many friends hope for a speedy recovery.

Many people will be interested in the sale of the New River property, which takes place at Clubb's Corner on Saturday.

Mrs. Henry Taylor and son are visiting at her mother's, Mrs. John Daley.

Patrick Daley and Joseph Haggarty made a flying trip to St. John on Saturday.

Schooner Ariadne, Capt. Outhouse, was in port during the week, with apples. Quite a few residents secured their winter supply.

ST. ANDREWS.

A very interesting game of Basket Ball was played in the hall on Thursday evening between the Lobsters of Eastport and the Shamrocks of St. Andrews, in which the home team was victorious, the score being 10-6.

Mrs. Fraser of Toronto, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Richard Keny. The latter we are sorry to report is quite ill.

Rev. H. S. Rigley of Campbell, is spending a few days with his parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Maham, Eastport, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Denley.

Mrs. E. A. Cockburn is visiting friends in St. Stephen.

Keith Morant of Edmonds, Wash., is the guest of Mrs. G. F. Andrews, at the "Anchorage."

Geo. M. Ford of Campbell, spent a few days in town last week.

Word was received here on Wednesday of the sudden death of Mrs. C. Howard, who had been visiting her daughter Mrs. McGibbon in Woodstock.

Miss Madge Rigley very pleasantly entertained a few of her friends on Friday evening.

Judge Cockburn went to Frederickton on Monday and returned on Wednesday.

Miss Bessie Clarke and Miss Carrie Rigley spent a few days of last week with friends in St. Stephen.

Mr. S. P. McCall spent Sunday last in town.

Mr. James Vroom and Mr. John Black of St. Stephen, spent a few hours in town on Saturday.

"Come in."

A story of extraordinary deafness was unfolded at a recent meeting of a medical society in Philadelphia, says Harper's Weekly. An elderly woman, exceedingly hard of hearing, lived near the river. On afternoon, a warship fired a salute of ten guns. The woman, alone in her little house, waited until the booming ceased. Then she smoothed her hair back in a quaint manner and said, sweetly, "Come in."
